Gag order could not have applied to Attorney General where he never made an appearance in the circuit court, did not assist in the prosecution of the case, and was not notified about the gag order when he was arguing the petition before the Supreme Court. State v. Culp, 823 So. 2d 510 (Miss. 2002).

Any violation of this rule caused by improper pretrial statements made by law enforcement officials to the media was waived where the defendant's motion for a change of venue was granted and the defendant later moved to remand the trial back to the county in which it was originally brought. McGilberry v. State, 741 So. 2d 894 (Miss. 1999), cert. denied, 529 U.S. 1006, 120 S. Ct. 1273, 146 L. Ed. 2d 222 (2000).

Rule 9.02. Trial docket.

A docket of cases ready for trial shall be maintained by the clerk or the court administrator. Cases set by the judge for hearing must be ready at the appointed time.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Application.

Although the court had set a trial date in anticipation of the State confessing defendant's motion, that action did not prevent the court from holding a hearing on the merits of defendant's post-conviction relief motion to determine if a trial would be warranted; there was nothing defendant's attorney could have done to force the court to proceed to trial in lieu of a hearing to determine if defendant would be allowed to withdraw his previously entered guilty plea. Jones v. State, 970 So. 2d 1316 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Rule 9.03. Severance.

The granting or refusing of severance of defendants in cases not involving the death penalty shall be in the discretion of the trial judge.

The court may, on motion of the state or defendant, grant a severance of offenses whenever:

1. If before trial, it is deemed appropriate to promote a fair determination of the defendant's guilt or innocence of each offense; or

2. If during trial, upon the consent of the defendant, it is deemed necessary to achieve a fair determination of the defendant's guilt or innocence of each offense.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Severance not granted.
Timing of decision.

Severance not granted.

On appeal from his convictions for two counts of sexual battery, there was no error in overruling defendant's motion to sever the two counts because, although Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.03 permitted a trial judge to sever offenses during trial, it was not reversible error for a trial judge to deny an untimely motion to sever, except under circumstances where the reasons supporting severance became apparent late in the process. In the current case, nothing suggested new developments or revelations during the two-year period between the date of arraignment and the morning of trial that would have given defendant additional cause for severance. Williams v. State, 35 So. 3d 480 (Miss. 2010).

Denial of defendants' motion to sever was appropriate because a forensic pathology expert's testimony implicated all defendants, not just one of the defendants, as possibly having delivered the fatal injury to the victim. There was no imbalance in the evidence presented and neither Duckworth factor weighed in favor of a severance; there was no showing of prejudice. Sneed v. State, 31 So. 3d 33 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 2010 Miss. LEXIS 150 (Miss. Mar. 25, 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 29 So. 3d 774, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 152 (Miss. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 131 S. Ct. 931, 178 L. Ed. 2d 775, 2011 U.S. LEXIS 350, 79 U.S.L.W. 3400 (U.S. 2011).

In a joint trial for the sale of cocaine, the trial court did not err in denying defendant one's motion to sever because while defendant two basically confessed to the crime, defendant two never implicated defendant one in the sale. Thus, defendant one was not prejudiced by a joint trial. Miller v. State, 17 So. 3d 1109 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 17 So. 3d 99, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 456 (Miss. 2009).

In a case in which defendant and his wife were charged with felony child abuse for injuries sustained by their nine-week-old son, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for severance because defendant was not prejudiced by the joint trial where defendant testified that neither he nor his wife injured their child and where defendant's wife testified that she did not know who injured the child. The wife did not explicitly or impliedly implicate defendant as the abuser, nor did she shift the blame to him; because her testimony only sought to lesser her own responsibility for the crime and not to accuse defendant, no severance of defendants was necessary. Hill v. State, 17 So. 3d 1092 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 17 So. 3d 99, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 458 (Miss. 2009).

Appellate court found no record of a ruling by the trial court on defendant's motion for severance nor any evidence that the motion was noticed for hearing by defendant; by failing to pursue a hearing or ruling on the motion from the trial court, defendant effectively abandoned the motion and waived this issue for appeal. Smith v. State, 986 So. 2d 290 (Miss. 2008).

Trial judge did not err in denying defendants' motion to sever the trial because use of the term "we" in redactions did not facially incriminate any of the other defendants; additionally, each defendant revealed that they admitted to a role in the events that resulted in the victim's death. Anderson v. State, 5 So. 3d 1088 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 11 So. 3d 1250, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 171 (Miss. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 11 So. 3d 1250, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 184 (Miss. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 11 So. 3d 1250, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 177 (Miss. 2009).

Court properly denied severance of defendants in a murder case because both testified as to their own guilt as well as to the guilt of the other, and neither of them denied shoplifting, fleeing the police afterwards, or crashing into the victims' car; thus, neither defendant was prevented from raising a defense based on the joint trial, their defenses were not inconsistent with one another, and they both received the same sentence. Sanders v. State, 942 So. 2d 156 (Miss. 2006).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in failing to sever the trials of two brothers for murder where the trial curt found that no evidence admissible against the first brother would be inadmissible against the second, and the court further found that neither brother would exculpate himself at the expense of his brother. Jenkins v. State, 912 So. 2d 165 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005). .

To warrant reversal after the trial court denied defendant father's motion to sever his trial from that of defendant son, defendant father had to demonstrate that (1) defendant son attempted to exculpate himself at the expense of defendant father, i.e., there was a conflict of interest between the two; and (2) that the balance of the evidence introduced at trial went more to the guilt of defendant son than to the guilt of defendant father, such that the jury might have found defendant father guilty by association, but defendant father failed to make that showing because the bulk of the evidence was aimed at defendant father and defendant father was in no way prejudiced by being tried jointly with defendant son; thus, there were no grounds to hold that the trial court had abused its discretion in overruling defendant father's motion for severance under Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.03. King v. State, 857 So. 2d 702 (Miss. 2003).

Defendants' convictions for armed robbery were proper where the decision to grant a severance was within the discretion of the trial court and there did not appear to have been any conflict of interest between the defendants; neither put on any type of defense and the evidence introduced at trial supported the guilt of both. Broomfield v. State, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 914 (Miss. Ct. App. Oct. 7, 2003), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion en banc at 878 So. 2d 207, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 1182 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court's refusal to sever defendants was not an abuse of discretion as there was no showing that either defendant was prejudiced by the denial of the severance: neither tried to exculpate herself at the expense of the other; the evidence, except as to a bite mark that implicated the first defendant, went to the guilt of both defendants; and other evidence did not exclude the second defendant from causing any of the victim's other injuries. Stubbs v. State, 845 So. 2d 656 (Miss. 2003).

In a murder case involving defendant and codefendant, defendant's brother, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in failing to grant a severance motion, because codefendant's testimony did not attempt to exculpate self at the expense of defendant, there was no conflict of interest between them, and the balance of the evidence did not go more to the guilt of one than the other. Adams v. State, 851 So. 2d 366 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002), cert. denied, 849 So. 2d 899 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

One defendant's statement did not exculpate him at the expense of the other defendant, there did not appear to be any conflict of interest between the two defendants, and neither defendant implied that the other had committed the crime; thus, the circuit court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to grant a severance. Collins v. State, 817 So. 2d 644 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

In a non-capital murder case, the trial court chose, in its discretion, not to sever the co-defendants where neither defendant's testimony exculpated himself at the expense of the other and there was no conflict of interest between the co-defendants. Buggs v. State, 754 So. 2d 569 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

The defendant was not entitled to a severance on the basis that the district attorney offered him the opportunity to plead guilty to manslaughter if his codefendant pleaded guilty to manslaughter, and that later his plea was rejected because his codefendant would not plead guilty. Jones v. State, 710 So. 2d 870 (Miss. 1998).

Timing of decision.

In a murder case, a trial court did not err by failing to grant defendant's motion to sever one weapons charge until the end of the prosecution's case-in-chief, and it was possible that the evidence would have shown that all three charges in the indictment occurred simultaneously; moreover, the trial court had the discretion to wait until the end of the prosecution's evidence, and defendant never requested a mistrial. Page v. State, 989 So. 2d 887 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 993 So. 2d 832, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 439 (Miss. 2008).

Rule 9.04. Discovery.

A. Subject to the exceptions of subsection "B," below, the prosecution must disclose to each defendant or to defendant's attorney, and permit the defendant or defendant's attorney to inspect, copy, test, and photograph upon written request and without the necessity of court order the following which is in the possession, custody, or control of the State, the existence of which is known or by the exercise of due diligence may become known to the prosecution:

1. Names and addresses of all witnesses in chief proposed to be offered by the prosecution at trial, together with a copy of the contents of any statement, written, recorded or otherwise preserved of each such witness and the substance of any oral statement made by any such witness;

2. Copy of any written or recorded statement of the defendant and the substance of any oral statement made by the defendant;

3. Copy of the criminal record of the defendant, if proposed to be used to impeach;

4. Any reports, statements, or opinions of experts, written, recorded or otherwise preserved, made in connection with the particular case and the substance of any oral statement made by any such expert;

5. Any physical evidence and photographs relevant to the case or which may be offered in evidence; and

6. Any exculpatory material concerning the defendant.

Upon a showing of materiality to the preparation of the defense, the court may require such other discovery to the defense attorney as justice may require.

B. The court may limit or deny disclosure authorized by subsection "A" if it finds that there is a substantial risk to any person of physical harm, intimidation, bribery, economic reprisals, or unnecessary annoyance or embarrassment, resulting from such disclosure, which outweighs any usefulness of the disclosure to the defense attorneys.

The following is not subject to disclosure:

1. Work product. Disclosure shall not be required of legal research or of records, correspondence, reports, or memoranda to the extent that they contain the opinions, theories, or conclusions of the prosecuting or defense attorney or members of legal staff.

2. Informants. Disclosure of an informant's identity shall not be required unless the confidential informant is to be produced at a hearing or trial or a failure to disclose his/her identity will infringe the constitutional rights of the accused or unless the informant was or depicts himself/herself as an eyewitness to the event or events constituting the charge against the defendant.

C. If the defendant requests discovery under this rule, the defendant shall, subject to constitutional limitations, promptly disclose to the prosecutor and permit the prosecutor to inspect, copy, test, and photograph the following information and material which corresponds to that which the defendant sought and which is in the possession, custody, or control of the defendant or the defendant's attorney, or the existence of which is known, or by the exercise of due diligence may become known, to the defendant or defendant's counsel:

1. Names and addresses of all witnesses in chief which the defendant may offer at trial, together with a copy of the contents of any statement, written, recorded or otherwise preserved of each such witness and the substance of any oral statements made by any such witness;

2. Any physical evidence and photographs which the defendant may offer in evidence;

3. Any reports, statements, or opinions of experts, which the defendant may offer in evidence.

D. Except as is otherwise provided or in cases where the witness would be forced to reveal self-incriminating evidence, neither the attorney for the parties nor other prosecution or defense personnel shall advise persons having relevant material or information, except the accused, to refrain from discussing the case with the opposing attorneys or showing the opposing attorneys any relevant material, nor shall they otherwise impede the opposing attorney's investigation of the case.

E. Both the state and the defendant have a duty to timely supplement discovery. If, subsequent to compliance with these rules or orders pursuant thereto, a party discovers additional material or information which is subject to disclosure, that party shall promptly notify the other party or the other party's attorney of the existence of such additional material, and if the additional material or information is discovered during trial, the court shall also be notified.

F. The attorney receiving materials on discovery is responsible for those materials and shall not distribute them to third parties.

G. Upon a showing of cause, the court may at any time order that specified disclosures be restricted or deferred, or make such other order as is appropriate, provided that all material and information to which a party is entitled must be disclosed in time to permit the party's attorney to make beneficial use thereof.

When some parts of certain material are discoverable under these rules, and other parts are not discoverable, as much of the material should be disclosed as is consistent with the rules.

Material excised pursuant to judicial order shall be sealed and preserved in the records of the court, to be made available to the appellate court in the event of an appeal.

In the event there are matters arguably within the scope of a party's discovery request or an order for discovery, and the opposing party is of the opinion that the requesting party is not entitled to discovery of same, the opposing party shall, as soon as is reasonably practicable, file with the clerk of the court a written statement describing the nature of the information or the materials at issue as fully as is reasonably possible without disclosure of same and stating the grounds for objection to disclosure. Subject to the limitations otherwise provided in these rules, determinations such as whether the matters requested in discovery are relevant to the case, exculpatory, possible instruments of impeachment, and the like, may be made only by the party requesting or to receive the discovery.

H. Upon request of any person, the court may permit any showing of cause for denial or regulation of disclosures, or portion of such showing, to be made in camera. A record shall be made of such proceedings. If the court enters an order granting relief following a hearing in camera, the entire record of such hearing shall be sealed and preserved in the records of the court, to be made available to the appellate court in the event of an appeal.

I. If at any time prior to trial it is brought to the attention of the court that a party has failed to comply with an applicable discovery rule or an order issued pursuant thereto, the court may order such party to permit the discovery of material and information not previously disclosed, grant a continuance, or enter such other order as it deems just under the circumstances.

If during the course of trial, the prosecution attempts to introduce evidence which has not been timely disclosed to the defense as required by these rules, and the defense objects to the introduction for that reason, the court shall act as follows:

1. Grant the defense a reasonable opportunity to interview the newly discovered witness, to examine the newly produced documents, photographs or other evidence; and

2. If, after such opportunity, the defense claims unfair surprise or undue prejudice and seeks a continuance or mistrial, the court shall, in the interest of justice and absent unusual circumstances, exclude the evidence or grant a continuance for a period of time reasonably necessary for the defense to meet the non-disclosed evidence or grant a mistrial.

3. The court shall not be required to grant either a continuance or mistrial for such a discovery violation if the prosecution withdraws its efforts to introduce such evidence.

The court shall follow the same procedure for violation of discovery by the defense.

Discovery material shall not be filed with the clerk unless authorized by the court.

Willful violation by an attorney of an applicable discovery rule or an order issued pursuant thereto may subject the attorney to appropriate sanctions by the court.

In general.

Defendant claimed that the testimony of the accident reconstructionist and the forensic toxicologist should have been excluded because the defense was not allowed to voir dire those witnesses about the principles and methods used in arriving at their opinions. However, the defense extensively cross-examined the witnesses at issue regarding the methods used to arrive at their opinions on speed determination and the qualifications to calibrate the machine used to determine the blood alcohol level of defendant; the trial court did not err in its handling of those matters and discovery was not improperly restricted as to Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.04(A), where the defense claimed that the reports from the various expert witnesses of the State were insufficient, but where said cross-examination of experts and voir dire of other experts was allowed. Lawrence v. State, 931 So. 2d 600 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 933 So. 2d 303, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 345 (Miss. 2006).

State did not violate the discovery rules by failing to disclose the report of the informant's criminal record until the day of the trial because the State was not required to discover the report at all under Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.04. And, the report was outside the scope of defendant's discovery requests, which requested only information on prior convictions of the State's witnesses, not "prior charges." Fuller v. State, 910 So. 2d 674 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.05 made no cross-reference to Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.04, and if the Mississippi Supreme Court had intended the Box v. State procedures to apply to matters of alibi, it could have so provided; the appellate court interpreted the Supreme Court's failure to do so as an indication that the Supreme Court intended for proceedings relating to alibi defenses to continue to be handled differently from other discovery matters. Ford v. State, 862 So. 2d 554 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Although a witness had somewhat varying claims as to just when the witness realized that the witness recognized defendant as a robber, and there was some evidence of a discovery violation under Miss. Unif. Crim. R. Cir. Ct. Prac. 9.04(E), defendant was not prejudiced, given that other witnesses placed defendant at the scene of the crime, defendant made incriminating statements, and defense counsel knew before trial that the witness was going to identify defendant and counsel made no objection at trial as required. Harper v. State, 853 So. 2d 1286 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Trial judge was not mandated to provide a Box hearing for all evidence in violation of reciprocal discovery rules; defendant's medical billing statements were not relevant as they contained nothing more than general medical information and were merely cumulative of defendant's testimony that he had been shot and had received treatment and therapy. Scott v. State, 831 So. 2d 576 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Although the rule contemplates voluntary compliance, it provides for court-enforced discovery, either before or during trial, should voluntary compliance fail. Kendall v. State, 772 So. 2d 1089 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Failure to provide pretrial disclosure does not require per se reversal; nondiscovered evidence may be admitted at trial if the party against whom that evidence is offered is given a reasonable opportunity to make adequate accommodation. Minnick v. State, 551 So. 2d 77 (Miss. 1988).

With respect to evidence to be used at trial, conflicting interests of prosecution and accused are best accommodated and justice is more nearly achieved when, well in advance of trial, each side has reasonable access to evidence of the other. Box v. State, 437 So. 2d 19 (Miss. 1983).

Destruction of evidence.

The defendant was entitled to reversal of his conviction for murder where (1) the only evidence which placed the defendant near the victim's home at the time of the murder was a set of bite marks in a bologna sandwich found at the scene, (2) the state's expert opined that the defendant's teeth were consistent with the bite marks and that the victim's were not, and (3) the expert took photographs of the sandwich and then destroyed it, ostensibly on the basis that it was perishable and that freezing would have destroyed the sandwich as well through dehydration and shriveling, but the state failed to address the fact that the sandwich had been frozen before it was examined by the expert. Banks v. State, 725 So. 2d 711 (Miss. 1998).

Due process considerations.

Where outcome of drug prosecution was substantially dependent upon identification of alleged substance as contraband, due process required that trial court allow defendant to have access to substance prior to trial for inspection and analysis. Love v. State, 441 So. 2d 1353 (Miss. 1983).

Evidence.

Trial court did not err when it refused the continuance because of the State's discovery violation under Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04(A)(6) because: (1) the State's apparent untimely disclosure of the results of its fingerprint analysis was unrelated to defendant's ability to pursue his own independent analysis since he could have sought his own fingerprint tests notwithstanding the alleged discovery violation; and (2) although defendant argued that a manifest injustice may have resulted had he conducted his own fingerprint analysis, defendant failed to demonstrate that an injustice did occur. Pilgrim v. State, 19 So. 3d 148 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Although defendant argued that the trial court erred in denying his motion for a continuance following a violation of Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04 because his attorney was unprepared for the trial, the appellate court found that defendant failed to identify any manifest injustice that resulted from the attorney's lack of preparation, and the appellate court's review of the record indicated that the attorney, who represented defendant for at least two weeks prior to the trial, provided able representation and manifested no lack of familiarity with the facts of the case. Pilgrim v. State, 19 So. 3d 148 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

There was no abuse of discretion pertaining to alleged discovery violations under Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04(A)(1) because a police report was sufficient to put the defense on notice as to testimony of the uncle of the mother of a five-year-old sexual assault victim even though the report did not give specific details of his testimony. Murray v. State, 20 So. 3d 739 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 27 So. 3d 404, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 64 (Miss. 2010).

Where appellant was arrested for the sale of cocaine after an undercover officer purchased the cocaine from him, appellant requested the videotape of the transaction during discovery; the State complied with Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04 by giving the tape to defense counsel who viewed it. The fact that appellant did not view the videotape before entering his guilty plea did not affect the voluntariness of his guilty plea to the sale of cocaine under Miss. Code Ann. § 41-29-139. Gray v. State, 29 So. 3d 791 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 2010 Miss. LEXIS 139 (Miss. Mar. 11, 2010).

Defendant's former attorney's testimony that he received a fraudulent certificate of title and a bill of sale from defendant for the stolen vehicle did not violate the attorney-client privilege because when defendant provided the documents to his attorney, there was no expectation of confidentiality or privilege concerning the documents or the fact that defendant provided them. The documents defendant provided were to be presented to the State as discovery under Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.04(c)(2), the trial court, and the jurors in his defense, and therefore no privilege existed under Miss. R. Evid. 502. In addition, because the documents were counterfeit, defendant committed a crime under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-9-125 (Rev. 2006); by involving his attorney, and any privilege or confidentiality was destroyed. Hayden v. State, 972 So. 2d 525 (Miss. 2007).

In a capital murder trial, the trial court committed reversible error in excluding a state witness's statement from evidence without conducting a box hearing and thereby failing to consider the admission of the statement in accordance with Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04(I); the trial court's failure to adhere to Rule 9.04(I) prejudiced defendant since the witness's statement was the only direct evidence linking defendant to the crime, and her credibility was the crucial issue in the case. Ross v. State, 954 So. 2d 968 (Miss. 2007).

Defendant's conviction for burglary of a business was appropriate under Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04(I) because his claim that the circuit court erred when it did not continue his trial until counsel for defendant had an opportunity to review a surveillance videotape was waived; additionally, the record was silent as to whether defendant's counsel had an opportunity to review the videotape before the prosecution submitted it during the assistant manager's direct testimony. Turner v. State, 962 So. 2d 691 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari dismissed by 997 So. 2d 924, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 506 (Miss. 2008).

Record revealed conflicting testimony as to when the State informed defendant's counsel of the oral confession, and the trial judge overruled defendant's motion to suppress, and admitted the confession into evidence; as sufficient evidence existed in the record to support the ruling of the trial judge as to this issue, he did not commit an abuse of discretion in admitting the oral confession into evidence, and defendant's counsel did not subsequently request a continuance, which reinforced that he was not likely surprised by the introduction of the confession into evidence. Mitchell v. State, 931 So. 2d 639 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Even though defendant allegedly received a copy of an autopsy report that did not contain information regarding a victim's pain suffered during a fatal beating, there was no reversible error in a capital murder case since no discovery violation was clearly shown, and the evidence was otherwise admissible at trial. Booker v. State, — So. 2d —, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 635 (Miss. Ct. App. Aug. 29, 2006), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 5 So. 3d 411, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 77 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.04, governing discovery, dictated what evidence the State had to disclose during discovery. The State did not withhold any evidence from defendant; therefore, Rule 9.04 provided no ground for any possible error. Sullinger v. State, 935 So. 2d 1067 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 936 So. 2d 367, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 423 (Miss. 2006).

— Cumulative evidence.

Although the State failed to submit an oral confession upon defendant's discovery request, the admission of the oral confession at trial was not reversible error, as a written confession, which had been disclosed, was essentially the same as the oral confession; further, it was strange that he would claim surprise or prejudice about the late disclosure of a confession that he surely knew he had given. Wimberly v. State, 839 So. 2d 553 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Defendant's convictions of fondling and contributing to the delinquency of a minor were supported by the overwhelming weight of the evidence such that defendant failed to sustain his burden and demonstrate that the admission of his and the victim's testimony worked a miscarriage of justice. Lofton v. State, 818 So. 2d 1229 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

A violation of this discovery rule is considered harmless where it results in the admission of evidence that is merely cumulative and, when considering the entire record, the violation did not cause a miscarriage of justice. Prewitt v. State, 755 So. 2d 537 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

— Documents.

In a capital murder case, the trial court did not err in ordering defense counsel to turn over the psychiatric reports to the State as the reports were not used at the guilt phase of the trial, making any assertion that their disclosure compromised defendant's constitutional privilege against self-incrimination moot, and the trial court deferred disclosure of the reports until less than one month before the actual trial date and disclosed them then only because he was concerned about the State "being hamstrung" at the impending trial by not being able to intelligently meet this evidence when presented by the defense. Byrom v. State, 863 So. 2d 836 (Miss. 2003), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 125 S. Ct. 71, 160 L. Ed. 2d 40 (2004).

Trial court did not err in refusing to permit defendant from introducing into evidence a newspaper that denoted the time of day when the sun rose on the day of a murder when defendant failed to produce the newspaper in discovery. Gray v. State, 799 So. 2d 53 (Miss. 2001).

The state improperly failed to disclosed documents pertaining to the sale of the car that the defendant was driving when he was stopped and in which large quantities of marijuana was found in false compartments. Ramos v. State, 710 So. 2d 380 (Miss. 1998).

Informants.

There was no abuse of discretion in a trial court's implicit decision withholding discovery of an informant's name and address under Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04(B) where there was a concern for the witness's safety, and the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a continuance following revelation of the witness's name because the trial court allowed defense counsel to question the witness before testimony began the next day and it was unlikely that a continuance would have resulted in a different verdict. Harris v. State, 37 So. 3d 1237 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

In a case involving the sale of cocaine, a violation of Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. Court R. 9.04 relating to the disclosure of an informant's name one day prior to trial was considered harmless because there was no miscarriage of justice; therefore, a continuance was properly denied. Defense counsel had the opportunity to interview the informant outside the presence of the jury, and the informant admitted in front of the jury that he was manipulative, a drug addict, a liar, and a thief. Mosely v. State, 4 So. 3d 1069 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Trial court's failure to reveal the identity of a confidential informant did not violate defendant's rights of confrontation and cross-examination because: (1) the trial court determined that the informant was not a material witness, as he was not an eyewitness to the crime; and (2) neither the State nor defendant indicated they intended on calling the confidential informant at trial. Peters v. State, 971 So. 2d 1289 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

In defendant's criminal trial, because the confidential informant was not an eyewitness to the crime, disclosure of his identity was not warranted under Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04(B)(2). Roach v. State, 7 So. 3d 932 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), reversed by 7 So. 3d 911, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 199 (Miss. 2009).

Trial court did not err in failing to have the testimony of a confidential informant heard where the appellant did not present any evidence that the state deliberately withheld information about the informant's whereabouts and although the name of the informant proved to be insufficient to locate him, there was no proof that the state had deliberately withheld the informant's whereabouts or acted in bad faith. Turner v. State, 950 So. 2d 243 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Defendant's conviction for murdering her husband was proper where an informant's identity was not relevant to any issues regarding whether defendant had committed the crime charged. Thus, the trial court was correct in refusing to disclose the identity of the informant. Stephens v. State, 911 So. 2d 424 (Miss. 2005).

Defendant's argument that informant would have admitted to planting drugs in the defendant's home was entirely too speculative to permit the court to find that the trial court erroneously refused to reveal the informant's identity. Jenkins v. State, 757 So. 2d 1005 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Ordinarily, disclosure of the identity of an informer who is not a material witness to the guilt or innocence of the accused, is within the sound discretion of the trial court; on the other hand, where the informer is an actual participant in the alleged crime, the accused is entitled to know his identity. Corry v. State, 710 So. 2d 853 (Miss. 1998).

District attorney was not required to disclose identity of defendant's wife as a confidential informant, where she was not an eyewitness to the crime and was not called as a witness at trial. Dowbak v. State, 666 So. 2d 1377 (Miss. 1996).

Trial court erred in refusing to grant a continuance of defendants' trial, where prosecution failed to disclose whereabouts of confidential informant after being ordered to do so. Gowdy v. State, 592 So. 2d 29 (Miss. 1991).

Testimony improperly excluded.

Trial court abused its discretion in excluding the testimony of a witness because his story that a victim possessed a gun was not discovered until after the trial began, and there was no evidence that defendant's discovery violation was willful. As the testimony corroborated defendant's testimony that he acted in self-defense, the error was not harmless. Williams v. State, 54 So. 3d 212 (Miss. 2011).

— Letters.

The defendant in a voter fraud prosecution was properly denied a continuance on the basis that the state allegedly failed to produce various letters written to state officials by citizens concerned the alleged voter fraud where (1) the state disclosed and made available to the defendant the letters she requested, (2) the defendant filed her discovery motion just two weeks before trial, even though she was aware of the letters at an earlier date, (3) the defendant did not press her discovery motion until the day of trial, and (4) the defendant did not inform the court of one such letter written by the husband of one juror until her motion for a new trial. Sewell v. State, 721 So. 2d 129 (Miss. 1998).

Trial court did not err in admitting letter written by defendant to aggravated assault victim a month before trial; although letter had not been produced in discovery, defendant's counsel was allowed reasonable period of time in which to review letter, and there was no indication that it would have made any difference if he had known of letter sooner. Robinson v. State, 662 So. 2d 1100 (Miss. 1995).

— Miscellaneous.

There was no reversible error when a shooting victim testified that she was one week pregnant at the time of the shooting, even though such fact had not been disclosed to the defense, where (1) the testimony was inadvertent, uninvited, and unresponsive to the prosecution's inquiry, and (2) the judge ordered an overnight recess in order to give the defendant additional time to prepare his cross-examination of the victim. Williams v. State, 784 So. 2d 230 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying capital rape defendant one additional day of continuance, where investigating social worker revealed anatomical drawing immediately prior to taking the stand as a witness for the State. Young v. State, 679 So. 2d 198 (Miss. 1996).

— Photographs.

Defendant's convictions for rape and aggravated assault were proper where photographs taken as part of the administration of the rape kit were properly admitted pursuant to Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.04(I) because they depicted injuries that were described in documents and medical records produced by the State and which, therefore, were known to defendant. There was no discovery violation. Coleman v. State, 915 So. 2d 468 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 921 So. 2d 1279, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 778 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court did not err when it admitted the victim's photograph of the alleged crime scene on the day before trial because: (1) the State was not aware of the photograph's existence until it interviewed the victim in preparation for trial, and when it became aware of the existence of a photograph of the alleged crime scene, it immediately contacted defendant's counsel regarding the photograph; and (2) the trial court judge allowed adequate time for defendant to interview the victim before she testified. Strohm v. State, 845 So. 2d 691 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Although a photo which the state intended to use to obtain an in-court identification from a witness of the defendant's truck was relevant and should have been given to the defense prior to the day it was used in court, the defendant was properly denied a mistrial since no question was raised by as to whether the picture accurately portrayed his truck, he had access to the photograph prior to the witness taking the stand, and he used the photo in questioning her. Hughes v. State, 735 So. 2d 238 (Miss. 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1083, 120 S. Ct. 807, 145 L. Ed. 2d 680, (2000).

Trial court erred in admitting photographs and testimony of witness into evidence, where both were within scope of discovery order but had not been furnished to defense counsel; identity of witness was not disclosed until evening before trial, and photographs were not disclosed until a few moments before they were produced at trial. Box v. State, 437 So. 2d 19 (Miss. 1983).

— Polygraph tests.

There was no discovery violation where the state failed to disclose the results of a polygraph examination of a witness since neither the fact of the taking of a polygraph examination nor the results of such an examination are admissible into evidence and, further, the results of a polygraph exam may not be used even for impeachment. McClendon v. State, 748 So. 2d 814 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999), cert. denied, 530 U.S. 1246, 120 S. Ct. 2695, 147 L. Ed. 966 (2000).

— Statement.

In a criminal prosecution for aggravated assault, where the State failed to timely disclose a potential witness who said there was a second shooter, the court was not required to analyze the discovery violation under the Box guidelines. The State never attempted to introduce the witness' testimony into evidence. Bankston v. State, 907 So. 2d 966 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

In a criminal prosecution for aggravated assault, where the State failed to timely disclose a potential witness who said there was a second shooter, the court was not required to analyze the discovery violation under the Box guidelines. The State never attempted to introduce the witness' testimony into evidence. Bankston v. State, 907 So. 2d 966 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Any error from failure of prosecution to produce recorded statement of witness until evening before trial was harmless, where defendant failed to show prejudice from the late discovery. Jones v. State, 669 So. 2d 1383 (Miss. 1995).

Fact that defendant's statement was made not to a law enforcement officer but to victim during course of crime did not except the statement from discovery, where victim relayed statement to district attorney and others told law enforcement officers of it; prosecution had an obligation to disclose what any member of its team knew. Nixon v. State, 533 So. 2d 1078 (Miss. 1987), cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1102, 109 S. Ct. 2458, 104 L. Ed. 2d 1012 (1989).

Disclosure of every word spoken to officer is not required, so long as State fairly gives notice to defendant of the content of defendant's statement. Nixon v. State, 533 So. 2d 1078 (Miss. 1987), cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1102, 109 S. Ct. 2458, 104 L. Ed. 2d 1012 (1989).

— Tape recording.

In a capital murder case, when defendant asserted, on post-conviction relief, that the prosecution failed to disclose tape recordings and transcripts of conversations between defendant and a prosecution witness, defendant, whose conviction was vacated for other reasons, was entitled to further discovery as to whether such material was withheld from him. Manning v. State, 903 So. 2d 29 (Miss. 2004).

Trial judge erred in refusing to direct jury to disregard tape recording which State failed to provide in its entirety to defendant during discovery. McCaine v. State, 591 So. 2d 833 (Miss. 1991).

This rule did not require State to furnish defense with tape, made by State, of recorded interview with witness whom defense had also interviewed. Whittington v. State, 523 So. 2d 966 (Miss. 1988), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 923, 109 S. Ct. 304, 102 L. Ed. 2d 323 (1988).

— Weapon.

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a new trial based on discovery misconduct relating to blood found on a gun because the evidence was in the possession of the sheriff's department, and it could have been obtained by defendant during the trial for blood testing. Crosby v. State, 856 So. 2d 523 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 860 So. 2d 1223 (Miss. 2003).

The defendant in a manslaughter prosecution was not prejudiced by the failure of the prosecution to disclose a knife found at the victim's feet until one week before trial since (1) the prosecution did not know of the knife and there was no deliberate design to deliberately conceal the knife from the defense and, in fact, the defense discovered the knife before the prosecution, and (2) there was no prejudice as the knife was bagged and sealed the day of the incident or the next day and placed in the evidence room where no one had any reason to handle it. Swindle v. State, 755 So. 2d 1158 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Exculpatory evidence.

Defendant's conviction for aggravated assault was appropriate even though a DNA report itself was not admitted into evidence because the substance of its conclusion was before the jury; the supreme court found that defendant failed to show that he was prejudiced by not possessing the report until the first day of his fourth trial, Curry v. State, 939 So. 2d 785 (Miss. 2006).

In defendant's trial on charges of telephone harassment, a violation of Miss. Code Ann. § 97-29-45(1)(a), the trial court did not err in admitting the sheriff's rebuttal testimony in which the sheriff relied on his notes because defendant failed to establish that the prosecution violated Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.04(A) by failing to tender the sheriff's notes during discovery. The sheriff's testimony was not exculpatory; the notes were used during rebuttal and not in the State's case-in-chief; and the testimony did not consist of a statement by defendant. Therefore, the notes did notconstitute a written statement required to be provided to the defense during discovery under Rule 9.04(A). Yates v. State, 919 So. 2d 1122 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 926 So. 2d 922, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 71 (Miss. 2006).

In her embezzlement prosecution, defendant failed to satisfy the first and third prongs of the four-prong Brady test as she failed to show that the evidence was favorable or that the State even possessed the subject bank records (several banks were involved). Furthermore, there was no proof in the record that would have allowed the appellate court to decide whether the evidence allegedly suppressed was favorable or unfavorable and defendant also failed to satisfy the second prong under the Brady test, as she failed to prove that she did not possess the evidence nor could she obtain it herself with any reasonable diligence. Montgomery v. State, 891 So. 2d 179 (Miss. 2004).

The court rejected the defendant's argument that the state's failure to produce and test DNA samples for exculpatory review was a clear failure to comply with rule where the evidence at issue was preserved and the defendant was given express permission by the trial court to test the evidence. Brewer v. State, 819 So. 2d 1165 (Miss. 2000).

The trial court did not err when it refused to grant a continuance to the defendant on the basis of a discovery violation by the state where the evidence at issue was exculpatory, rather than inculpatory, and the court allowed a copy of the report to be placed into evidence. Johnson v. State, 760 So. 2d 33 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

The defendant was entitled to a new trial on a charge of embezzlement where the state failed to produce the cash receipts journal of the defendant's employer (the victim) prior to trial. Little v. State, 736 So. 2d 486 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

The trial court did not err when it denied the defendant's motion for a mistrial after it was revealed on cross-examination that a prosecution witness had been shown what she recalled as two drawings by the police since the drawings were not exculpatory. Hughes v. State, 735 So. 2d 238 (Miss. 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1083, 120 S. Ct. 807, 145 L. Ed. 2d 680, (2000).

In a prosecution for murder, the State did not fail to disclose certain allegedly exculpatory evidence listed by the defendant since such items either did not exist or were not exculpatory. Duplantis v. State, 708 So. 2d 1327 (Miss. 1998).

Expert witness.

In a capital murder trial, the trial court properly refused to allow defendant to impeach a key state witness with prior inconsistent statements made in her statement to a defense expert and properly refused to admit the expert's statement into evidence; although elements of the statement taken by the expert might have been used to impeach the witness's testimony, introduction of the entire statement as impeachment testimony would have been inappropriate since a crucial element of the defense was undermining the witness's credibility. Ross v. State, 954 So. 2d 968 (Miss. 2007).

Defendant's conviction for sexual battery was appropriate because nothing in Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.04(A)(1)-(6) granted defendant a right to discovery of familial relationships between an expert witness and a victim's stepmother. Larson v. State, 957 So. 2d 1005 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 958 So. 2d 1232, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 318 (Miss. 2007).

Where defense counsel had received a letter from the state prior to trial indicating the expert witness would testify as to the existence of defensive wounds on the victim's body and had interviewed the witness on at least two occasions, once prior to trial and once on the morning of the trial, the trial judge did not abuse his discretion in finding that there had been no discovery violation. Ward v. State, 935 So. 2d 1047 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 936 So. 2d 367, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 414 (Miss. 2006).

Even if the prosecution did not disclose proposed expert testimony regarding the fact that victims of a homicide died from blunt force trauma to the head and defendant apparently tried to conceal the crime with a cleaning solution, defendant failed to show that any prejudice resulted therefrom because the evidence was merely cumulative of other evidence properly admitted into evidence. Le v. State, 913 So. 2d 913 (Miss. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 546 U.S. 1004, 126 S. Ct. 622, 163 L. Ed. 2d 508, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 8254, 74 U.S.L.W. 3288 (2005).

Court did not err under Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.04(I) in allowing expert testimony on the issue of toxicology during defendant's trial for DUI manslaughter because defense counsel clearly had the opportunity to question the witness and determine that the defense would be prejudiced by such testimony. Comby v. State, 901 So. 2d 1282 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 901 So. 2d 1273 (Miss. 2005).

Defendant did not object on the basis of a discovery violation during the expert witness's testimony; objection on the grounds asserted on appeal had to be made during trial or else the issue was waived. Palmer v. State, 878 So. 2d 1009 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 67 (Miss. 2004).

In defendant's capital murder case, a court did not err in allowing an expert to testify that a weapon matched the injury on the victim where defense counsel was given the opportunity to interview the expert about what his testimony would be, the expert said that he would testify that the mallet in the photograph was consistent with the injuries to the victim's head, but it would be impossible to say the mallet was the murder weapon, and defense counsel offered a general objection but did not ask for a continuance and did not specify a discovery violation. McGowen v. State, 859 So. 2d 320 (Miss. 2003).

Prosecution did not have a duty to produce a written report of its mental health expert, which did not exist, so long as the substance of any oral statements were furnished; further, the petitioner was not surprised by the expert's testimony, as he testified during the first trial, and the petitioner had the transcript of that testimony. Woodward v. State, 843 So. 2d 1 (Miss. 2003).

Based on defendant's contention that defendant was not given the names of certain witnesses, the trial judge, consistent with Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.04(I), allowed defense counsel time to interview the witnesses, who were physicians, prior to their taking the stand; thus, because of this and the fact that defendant was already aware that the medical evidence existed, defendant was not unfairly surprised by the witnesses, and the trial court did not err by allowing them to testify. Evans v. State, 844 So. 2d 470 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002), cert. denied, 846 So. 2d 229 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

The presentation of expert opinion testimony concerning photographs showing blood splatters did not require reversal of the defendant's murder conviction notwithstanding that such testimony was not disclosed to the defendant prior to trial, since the defendant failed to request a continuance and failed to show how she was prejudiced or in any way incriminated by the admission of the testimony. Wooten v. State, 811 So. 2d 355 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

The state was required to disclose an expert witness, notwithstanding that his testimony was offered only in rebuttal to the testimony of a defense expert. McGilberry v. State, 741 So. 2d 894 (Miss. 1999), cert. denied, 529 U.S. 1006, 120 S. Ct. 1273, 146 L. Ed. 2d 222 (2000).

The court improperly allowed the testimony of the state's handwriting expert without proper notice where the State disclosed the expert witness with his report two working days prior to trial and five weeks after the deadline for the prosecution to submit their witnesses had passed without receiving a continuance. Logan v. State, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 182 (Miss. Ct. App. Apr. 20, 1999), subst. op., 773 So. 2d 338 (Miss. 2000).

Failure to object.

Trial court followed the procedure set forth in Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.04(I), by granting defendant a 25-minute continuance when the State provided copies of his victim's medical records for the first time on the morning of trial. Defendant did not object to the amount of time given by the trial court, and he did not show any prejudice resulting from the trial court's failure to sua sponte grant him additional time to review the records; as such, the trial court did not err for failing to sua sponte grant defendant an additional continuance. West v. State, 969 So. 2d 147 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Defendant appealed the introduction of disputed evidence about a statement that a police officer had written regarding comments made by defendant at the scene of the arrest and had testified to at trial, but because defendant's objection to the evidence was not contemporaneous, and it was only after the officer was excused that defendant alleged a discovery violation, the objection was untimely. Willis v. State, 911 So. 2d 947 (Miss. 2005).

Although defendant's attorney noted a discovery violation under Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. 9.04 because the State allegedly failed to provide a report until the day of trial, the attorney never asked for a continuance and thus the issue was waived on appeal. Porter v. State, 869 So. 2d 414 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Although defendant argued that the gun holster was outside the chain of custody or irrelevant, defendant did not claim unfair surprise at trial, did not ask for a continuance, and did not explain how he had been prejudiced; defendant was required to have sought a continuance or mistrial, which he had not done. Barnes v. State, 854 So. 2d 1 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 859 So. 2d 392 (Miss. 2003).

Because the testimony of a forensic pathologist during the sentencing phase was substantially similar to that which he offered, without objection, during the guilt phase, his testimony was properly admitted, notwithstanding the assertion by the defendant that there were discovery violations that should have resulted in his not being able to testify. Mitchell v. State, 792 So. 2d 192 (Miss. 2001), cert. denied, 535 U.S. 933, 122 S. Ct. 1308, 152 L. Ed. 2d 218 (2002).

Failure to supplement.

Failure by State to supplement discovery was reversible error; State's subpoena of victim and her mother to attend another trial of same defendant on an identical charge, after they stated they were unsure of his identity, led to improper bolstering and suggestive identification, and thus defense was "ambushed" at later trial by prosecution's failure to supplement discovery. Hickson v. State, 697 So. 2d 391 (Miss. 1997).

Incriminating evidence.

Defendant should have been granted a continuance to discover past criminal charges against the confidential informant; however, any error was harmless as the jury was informed of illegal activity by the informant (cocaine use), and was sufficiently apprised of her questionable trustworthiness. Further, under Miss. R. Evid. 609, the charges were inadmissible for impeachment because there was no showing the charges resulted in convictions and because, even assuming the charges had resulted in conviction, the age and limited probative value of the charges rendered them inadmissible. Fuller v. State, 910 So. 2d 674 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Violation of Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.04 is considered harmless error unless it affirmatively appears from the entire record that the violation caused a miscarriage of justice. Hence, in defendant's trial for sexual battery of a child under the age of 14 years, an attempt by the State to introduce testimony from the victim about an apology that defendant purportedly made to the victim's father was harmless. Reese v. State, 879 So. 2d 505 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Where alleged inculpatory statements by the defendant were not disclosed by the state, it was reversible error. Ramos v. State, 710 So. 2d 380 (Miss. 1998).

Sanctions.

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in deciding to exclude two of defendant's witnesses from trial because defendant failed to timely supplement discovery, and the trial court believed that this was done to gain a tactical advantage. McGregory v. State, 979 So. 2d 12 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

While the trial court erred in excluding testimony without conducting the three-part test of Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04(I), the court found no miscarriage of justice, as the testimony of drug use was irrelevant due to the remoteness in time between the witness's observation and the arrest. Davis v. State, 995 So. 2d 767 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 999 So. 2d 374, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 678 (Miss. 2008).

Trial court excluded testimony from witnesses that were not disclosed by defendant, but the trial court did this without performing the three-part test of Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04(I); however, this error was harmless as to certain witnesses because had they been allowed to testify, the substance of such would have amounted to impermissible hearsay under Miss. R. Evid. 801(c), 802, as the witness's intended testimonies would have provided a statement made by another in an attempt to prove the truth of the matter asserted and this hearsay did not fall into any exception. Davis v. State, 995 So. 2d 767 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 999 So. 2d 374, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 678 (Miss. 2008).

In a prosecution for sale of a controlled substance within 1500 feet of a church, the defendant was not entitled to a mistrial when an officer testified that he found a plastic wrapper in the defendant's car, notwithstanding that such plastic wrapper was not disclosed prior to trial, where defense counsel made a timely objection, the trial court sustained the objection, and the prosecution proceeded without any further reference to a plastic wrapper; the mere mention of the plastic wrapper did not warrant a mistrial. Anderson v. State, 749 So. 2d 234 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

In a prosecution for sale of a controlled substance within 1500 feet of a church, the defendant was not entitled to a mistrial on the basis of the admission into evidence of the testimony of a crime lab technician, notwithstanding that the state had failed to provide the defense with a copy of the technician's one-page report, where the defendant did not contend or demonstrate that the evidence introduced by the state affected a substantial right and also did not contend that the substance tested by the technician was something other than crack cocaine. Anderson v. State, 749 So. 2d 234 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

The trial court had the authority to impose monetary sanctions against the state in a criminal proceeding for discovery violations. State v. Blenden, 748 So. 2d 77 (Miss. 1999).

Supplementary evidence.

Where forensic expert's report stated that no conclusions could be drawn from evidence, but expert testified at trial that two conclusions could be drawn, trial court should have excluded expert's trial testimony, since State violated its continuing duty to supplement discoverable matters with newly discovered material. Acevedo v. State, 467 So. 2d 220 (Miss. 1985).

Unfair surprise or undue prejudice.

Where, despite a timely request for discovery from the defense, a motion to compel discovery, and a motion to continue the case, the State did not release requested information on a confidential informant who was to be the key prosecution witness less than twenty-four hours before the start of the trial, defendant was entitled to a new trial. The trial court's reluctance to enforce the applicable rules of discovery, including Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04(A) and Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 4.04(A), was reversible error. Patterson v. State, — So. 3d —, 2011 Miss. App. LEXIS 262 (Miss. Ct. App. May 10, 2011), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 2011 Miss. App. LEXIS 752 (Miss. Ct. App. Dec. 6, 2011).

Trial court's decision not to grant a continuance when the State disclosed inculpatory evidence on the eve of trial in violation of Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04(A) was error that prejudiced defendant's ability to put on his case, culminating in manifest injustice. Reversal of defendant's armed robbery conviction was required. Fulks v. State, 18 So. 3d 803 (Miss. 2009).

In defendant's assault trial, where the investigating officer, after testifying, inquired about the absence of an off-duty police officer who had witnessed the assault, where the State had been unaware of this witness, where the State immediately notified the trial court and defense counsel, and where the prosecutor arranged for the witness to appear at the courthouse that afternoon to be interviewed by both the prosecutor and defense counsel, although a discovery violation occurred under Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04, no undue prejudice resulted to defendant because trial court acted properly in adjourning for the day; this adjournment afforded defense counsel an opportunity to interview the witness and to prepare his for his cross-examination of the witness the next day. Although a defendant might be entitled to a continuance when presented with newly discovered evidence, this did not mean a continuance until the next term of court; depending upon the evidence, a postponement of a day or two, or even of an hour or two, would suffice. Williamson v. State, 999 So. 2d 1281 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Trial court did not err in suppressing defendant's alibi witness's testimony because defendant failed to give written notice of his intent to offer an alibi defense upon the written demand of the State as required under Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.05. However, the trial court and the State failed to follow the mandated procedure applicable when a party fails to timely produce trial evidence as required by Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.04, but any error was harmless because the trial court had the discretion to suppress alibi testimony under Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.05. Moore v. State, 909 So. 2d 77 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

By failing to request a continuance, defendant waived any discovery violation under Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.04; however, notwithstanding the waiver, the trial judge did not err in allowing the photos into evidence because (1) the record reflected that the State immediately turned the photographs over to defendant for review as soon as it received them; and (2) defendant could not claim prejudice or unfair surprise by the images depicted in the photograph because he was fully aware that there was a motorcycle chase and that a gun was found at the scene of the wreck. Jackson v. State, 910 So. 2d 658 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 904 So. 2d 184, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 402 (Miss. 2005).

In a capital murder case, the prosecution did not commit a discovery violation by not informing defense counsel that defendant had orally confirmed his writing of a statement; defense counsel was aware of that information, and there was no surprise or undue prejudice. Dycus v. State, 875 So. 2d 140 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court erred in excluding alibi witnesses offered by defendant charged with strong-arm robbery based on the prosecution's objection that defendant's attorney had not filed a witness list until the morning of the trial and that the prosecution would suffer unfair surprise and undue prejudice if the witnesses were allowed to testify; error was, however, harmless because the evidence against defendant was very strong and the testimony of defendant's girlfriend and his sister and mother in support of his alibi would not have changed the outcome of the trial. Ransom v. State, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 459 (Miss. Ct. App. May 20, 2003), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 918 So. 2d 710, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 972 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court did not err in failing to grant a continuance and admitting the testimony of certain police officers, even though their status as witnesses was not disclosed to defendant until three days before trial; although the State might have violated Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.04(I), the trial court took corrective action and determined that the officers' information was not prejudicial to defendant. Mooneyham v. State, 842 So. 2d 579 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002), cert. denied, 837 So. 2d 771 (Miss. 2003).

Trial court did not err in denying continuance to defendant charged with possession of a weapon by a felon, which continuance would to allow defendant time to prepare to rebut the testimony of defendant's wife; the wife's testimony was offered to rebut defendant's claim that he possessed the firearm in self defense, and the State was not required under Miss. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.04(A)(1) to give notice of its intention to produce prospective rebuttal witnesses. Lenard v. State, 828 So. 2d 232 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

In a murder prosecution, the court committed reversible error where (1) a witness testified to undisclosed information regarding her encounter with the defendant shortly before the crime at issue, and (2) the trial court refused the allow the defendant to interview the witness outside the presence of the jury. Russell v. State, 789 So. 2d 779 (Miss. 2001).

This rule reveals that once an opportunity to examine the new evidence has been given, a defendant must claim that more time is still needed and request a continuance. Failure to make that request waives the issue. The trial judge allowed defense counsel the opportunity to interview Resse during the noon recess on the first day of trial. After concluding the interview, defense counsel did not claim undue surprise or prejudice, nor did she seek a continuance or a mistrial. No error occurred. Kelly v. State, 778 So. 2d 149 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

In a prosecution for simple assault, the trial court committed reversible error when it refused to allow a defense expert to testify that the defendant could not distinguish right from wrong on the day of the incident on the ground that the expert did not include such language in his report. Although the report did not use the magic words for the M'Naghten test, there was no unfair surprise or undue prejudice as it clearly notified the state that it was the defendant's basis for his insanity defense and, in addition, the state was fully prepared and presented its own expert witness who extensively discussed M'Naghten and testified unequivocally that the defendant knew right from wrong at the time of the incident and did not qualify under the test. Ballard v. State, 768 So. 2d 924 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Where the court allowed defense time to examine the photographic evidence and the defense did not ask for a continuance, the defense could not claim that the undiscovered evidence caused unfair surprise or undue prejudice. Robinson v. State, 749 So. 2d 1054 (Miss. 1999).

Where the defendant only asked that the witness be prohibited from testifying and did not request a recess or a continuance, defendant was procedurally barred from raising unfair surprise. Cockerham v. State, 752 So. 2d 431 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Trial court committed reversible error in denying a continuance in a prosecution for aggravated assault where, on the day of the trial, the prosecution informed the defendant that it intended to impeach his testimony using evidence of a prior shooting that occurred when the defendant was a minor and that was never prosecuted and the defendant objected to the introduction of this evidence on the basis of unfair surprise. McCullough v. State, 750 So. 2d 1212 (Miss. 1999).

Violation of rule harmless error.

Allowing testimony regarding a surveillance video of burglary was not a violation of Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04 because the testimony constituted invited error. The defense opened the door to testimony about the video by asking a store employee how she was sure her memory about defendant committing the burglary was accurate, and she answered. Smith v. State, 28 So. 3d 678 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

During a murder trial, the court did not err in overruling defendant's objection to the introduction of the post-shoulder-surgery apparatus worn by the victim even though he was not made aware of the existence of the apparatus until the day before the trial; the State's discovery violation of Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04 was harmless error. Defendant admitted to stabbing the victim multiple times and there was significant other evidence presented contradicting his claim of self-defense; therefore, the admission of the shoulder apparatus did not result in a miscarriage of justice. Flaggs v. State, 999 So. 2d 393 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari dismissed, dismissed without prejudice by, writ of certiorari denied by 2009 Miss. LEXIS 37 (Miss. Jan. 22, 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 999 So. 2d 852, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 53 (Miss. 2009).

In defendant's statutory rape case, although the State should have disclosed a witness's grand jury testimony because the statement that she had sex with defendant not only impeached her credibility, but also bolstered the State's substantive case against defendant, the error was harmless. Defendant knew the basics of the witness's grand jury testimony and thus could not have been surprised by its contents. Woods v. State, 973 So. 2d 1022 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Even though the state did not provide affidavits from prior charges filed by the girlfriend against defendant to defendant as required by Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04(A)(3), defendant was not prejudiced by their admission into evidence because he was fully aware that the prior domestic violence charges would be presented at trial and could have easily discovered the contents of the affidavits. Taylor v. State, 954 So. 2d 944 (Miss. 2007).

While the State violated Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R.9.04(A)(3) during defendant's burglary trial by failing to provide defendant or his attorneys with copies of his prior false pretenses convictions, no miscarriage of justice occurred because even without the introduction of the prior convictions, defendant's conflicting statements severely impaired his credibility with the jury. Gray v. State, 931 So. 2d 627 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Defendant did not suffer prejudice by the state's failure to provide notice of a witness as required by Miss. Unif. Crim. R. Cir. Ct. Prac. 9.04 because combined with defendant's failure to complain about the witness in his pretrial motion in limine, the fact that defendant was obviously aware of the witness's potential testimony in that his investigator attempted to contact her at least one day before she testified, and the repeated subpoenas to the witness, it was clear that defendant could not have been surprised when the prosecution called her as a witness. Bailey v. State, — So. 2d —, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 508 (Miss. Ct. App. June 27, 2006), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at, modified by 956 So. 2d 1016, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 112 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Mississippi Supreme Court has held that a violation of Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.04 is considered harmless error unless it affirmatively appears from the entire record that the violation caused a miscarriage of justice. Gray v. State, 931 So. 2d 627 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Where defendant was convicted of burglary of a building, although the prosecution violated Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.04 for failing to provide defendant with a copy of his false pretense conviction, the error did not require reversal. Although defendant argued that the State's use of his false pretense conviction to impeach him was devastating to his credibility, the instant case was not a circumstantial one and defendant was caught in the criminal act of which he was convicted. Powell v. State, 925 So. 2d 878 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 927 So. 2d 750, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 183 (Miss. 2006).

Court affirmed the circuit court's decision that affirmed defendant's conviction under Miss. Code Ann. § 63-11-30(1)(c); while the prosecution violated Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.04 by not providing the documents defendant requested, including the breath test instrument manuals, or instead filing an objection with the trial court, the manuals requested would not have changed the outcome of the case, and thus the discovery error harmless. Wyatt v. City of Pearl, 876 So. 2d 281 (Miss. 2004).

Waiver.

Despite the State's discovery violation under Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04(E), defendant neither requested a continuance nor asked for a mistrial and thus was procedurally barred from raising the issue on appeal. Edmond v. State, 35 So. 3d 536 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari dismissed by 34 So. 3d 1176, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 265 (Miss. 2010).

Because defense counsel requested a recess but not a continuance when the prosecutor admitted evidence that had not been produced during discovery, defendant waived the evidentiary challenge on appeal. Williams v. State, 991 So. 2d 593 (Miss. 2008).

Even though there was an error when the State was allowed to introduce a broken necklace in an aggravated assault trial without giving proper notice to defendant, it was waived because defendant failed to request a continuance under Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.04(I); notwithstanding the procedural bar, the error was harmless since the evidence was merely cumulative due to the testimony from defendant's girlfriend about a violent attack where she was forcibly removed from her car, thrown to a garage floor, stomped, and kicked by defendant. O'Neal v. State, 977 So. 2d 1252 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Though the State failed to inform defendant that it had a knife, shirt, bandanna, and cap allegedly used by him during an attempted armed robbery, the trial court gave counsel time to examine this evidence, and, after having done so, he never requested an additional continuance or mistrial; admission of this evidence was thus not reversible error. Wimberly v. State, 839 So. 2d 553 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Defendant's voluntary plea of guilty to a charge of possession of cocaine waived any allegation of discovery misconduct by the State. [Note — this case was decided under former Miss. Criminal Rules of Circuit Court Practice Rule 4.06.] Swift v. State, 815 So. 2d 1230 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

In absence of timely objection from defendant, there was no error in State's use of police officer's notes which had never been provided to defendant in discovery. Lanier v. State, 533 So. 2d 473 (Miss. 1988).

Witnesses.

Defendant's motion for a continuance was properly denied as the State did not violate the discovery requirements of Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04 when defendant's co-defendant changed his plea to guilty and agreed to testify for the State on the second day of trial. Defendant was not ambushed by this, and he had ample opportunity to confront the co-defendant's testimony. Sanders v. State, 38 So. 3d 639 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

In a case involving the sale of cocaine, defendant's argument that the State should not have been allowed to introduce the testimony of a witness based on a violation of Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04 was rejected because the testimony was offered in the form of rebuttal; the circuit court judge limited the testimony to the subject of defendant's different addresses, the defense actually raised the issue and was given a full day's notice by the State that the witness could have possibly been called as a rebuttal witness, and the defense requested and was granted the opportunity to cross-examine the witness. Mosely v. State, 4 So. 3d 1069 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Where the state presented the testimony of an undisclosed witness, defendant objected based on an alleged discovery violation under Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04 and the trial court granted a continuance as the remedy; the resumption of the bench trial before the same judge did not constitute double jeopardy. Loveless v. City of Booneville, 972 So. 2d 723 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari dismissed by 973 So. 2d 244, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 2 (Miss. 2008).

Defendant's murder conviction was proper under Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04(A)(1) because it was clear that defendant could not have been surprised when the prosecution called a particular witness; defendant was obviously aware of the witness's potential testimony in that his investigator attempted to contact her at least one day before she testified. Bailey v. State, 956 So. 2d 1016 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 957 So. 2d 1004, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 301 (Miss. 2007).

Where a defense witness was only revealed to the state late on the second day of defendant's burglary trial, the trial court erred by refusing to allow the witness to testify as defendant only learned of the witness's existense shortly before it was disclosed to the court; the procedure for the untimely presentation of witnesses set forth in Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04 was not followed in this case. Sandefer v. State, 952 So. 2d 281 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Defendant's convictions for murder and aggravated assault were proper where Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.04 did not support defendant's claim that he should have been provided a witness's criminal record. The rule required only that the prosecution disclose the criminal record of the defendant, not that of victims or other witnesses. McGee v. State, 929 So. 2d 353 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

In a statutory rape case, the trial court did not abuse its discretion when it overruled defendant's ore tenus motion in limine to exclude the testimony of the investigator that was present when defendant gave his written statement because: (1) the state asked the investigator to visit with defendant's attorney the day before the trial; (2) the investigator did attempt to visit defendant's attorney the day before trial; (3) defendant's attorney briefly spoke with the investigator; and (4) the investigator merely testified to matters within defendant's written statement, which defendant was aware of and possessed a copy. Terrell v. State, 952 So. 2d 998 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Defendant's conviction for manslaughter was proper pursuant to Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.04 A.1 where defendant did not claim that the State withheld a witness's name and address prior to trial. In the absence of any explanation from defendant as to why he could not have obtained the evidence of drug use from the witness himself with reasonable diligence, the court concluded that defendant failed to satisfy the second prong of the King test. Miller v. State, 919 So. 2d 1137 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

State did not violate its discovery obligations and the trial court did not err in refusing to grant defendant's request for a continuance due to an undisclosed prosecution witness because Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.04(A.)(1.) required the disclosure of all witnesses in chief proposed to be offered by the prosecution at trial, but the State had no duty to provide the defense with the names of possible rebuttal witnesses, unless the State has requested notice of an alibi defense. Although the State's witness was only disclosed as a witness on the morning of trial, the State offered the witness's testimony to rebut defendant's entrapment defense and the Mississippi Supreme Court has referred to evidence offered to overcome an entrapment defense as "rebuttal" evidence. Burnside v. State, 912 So. 2d 1018 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 921 So. 2d 344, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 679 (Miss. 2005).

Only things provided to the State were the proposed witness's name (defendant's husband), address and telephone number. Defendant chose not to provide anything else to the State and thus violated the discovery process by not disclosing what the witness would have testified about at trial; in any event, the record showed the proffered testimony was cumulative of other testimony on defendant's character, and the trial judge did not abuse his discretion in excluding same. Montgomery v. State, 891 So. 2d 179 (Miss. 2004).

Defendant's convictions for armed robbery and arson were proper where the failure to grant a continuation was not an abuse of discretion because defendant was advised about the substance of a witness's statement during the argument on his motion for a continuance and through the notes from the State's interview with that witness; the testimony that defendant claimed to need in order to investigate concerned trivial matters and thus, defendant failed to demonstrate that granting the continuance would have affected the outcome of his trial. Payton v. State, 897 So. 2d 921 (Miss. 2003).

In a prosecution for uttering a forgery arising from an incident in which the defendant took a check belonging to the victim and cashed it at a store, the defendant was not entitled to reversal of his conviction based on the state's technical error in failing to list the victim and the store clerk as witnesses as (1) the defense received the victim's full statement in discovery, (2) the store clerk was listed on the indictment as having received the check, and (3) the defendant neither requested an opportunity to interview the witnesses nor showed unfair surprise or undue prejudice. Dillard v. State, 811 So. 2d 389 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

The defendant in a prosecution for a transfer of cocaine within 1500 feet of a church was prejudiced when the trial court failed to require the state to disclose the identity of a confidential informant as the confidential informant was an actual participant in the drug buy at issue. Graves v. State, 767 So. 2d 1049 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

The trial court did not err by allowing the testimony of a witness who claimed that the defendant told him that he killed the victim of the murder at issue where the defendant was notified of the witness at least 10 days prior to his testimony and, although there was some dispute regarding whether the state later told the defendant that the witness would not testify, the defendant was still given an extra day to gather the information he had yet to receive. Tanner v. State, 764 So. 2d 385 (Miss. 2000).

In a prosecution for possession of cocaine with intent to sell and the conspiracy to sell cocaine, the state sufficiently disclosed that a coperpetrator would testify to events occurring prior to the day of the arrest where the state disclosed that the coperpetrator was a likely witness and provided copies of his statements. Fikes v. State, 749 So. 2d 1107 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

There was no abuse of discretion in the trial court's acknowledgment of the protective motivation behind the state's exclusion of the address for a witness from discovery in a prosecution for the sale of cocaine where the witness was involved in a number of drug cases in an undercover capacity and the state requested that his address be kept secret to maintain his safety. Blanton v. State, 727 So. 2d 748 (Ct. App. 1998).

The state has no duty to provide the defense with the names of possible rebuttal witnesses, unless the state has requested notice of alibi defense. Smith v. State, 724 So. 2d 280 (Miss. 1998).

The rule does not require that a party disclose witnesses it anticipates calling at a suppression hearing. Richardson v. State, 722 So. 2d 481 (Miss. 1998).

Witnesses violations.

Defendant's conviction for manslaughter was appropriate because defendant was guilty of a willful discovery violation under Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04(A)(1); defendant offered no reason whatsoever for not disclosing the statements at issue, even though the case had been pending for approximately four years. Lindsey v. State, 965 So. 2d 712 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Appellate court reversed defendant's conviction and remanded for a new trial as the trial court abused its discretion in excluding a key defense witness due to a late disclosure; under Miss. Unif. Crim. R. Cir. Ct. Prac. 9.04 (I), the trial court could have granted the State a continuance instead and not infringed on defendant's right to present a defense. Morris v. State, 927 So. 2d 751 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), reversed by 927 So. 2d 744, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 113 (Miss. 2006).

Although State failed to give proper notice of witness to defendant, there was no prejudice and error did not merit reversal, where defendant refused trial court's offer to interview the newly discovered witness and did not move for continuance or mistrial. Willie v. State, 585 So. 2d 660 (Miss. 1991).

Work product.

In a capital murder trial, the trial court properly rejected the notion that the statement made by the state's key witness to a defense expert was work product and therefore exempted from discovery pursuant to Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.04 because the statement, while indicative of the defense's approach, did not contain opinions, theories, or conclusions, and was therefore not work product for the purposes of discovery; because the statement was not introduced solely for impeachment and did not constitute work product, defense counsel's failure to disclose the statement to the state was a violation of the discovery rule. Ross v. State, 954 So. 2d 968 (Miss. 2007).

The defense is not entitled to discover a prosecutor's notes made about jurors during the voir dire since such notes constitute work product. Thorson v. State, 721 So. 2d 590 (Miss. 1998).

Written request required.

Trial court did not err in allowing the use of evidence not disclosed under Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.04 because defendant was not entitled to discovery. The record contained no mention of defendant's written discovery request to the state and the state was only obligated to provide discovery upon a defendant's written request. Foster v. State, 928 So. 2d 873 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 929 So. 2d 923, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 309 (Miss. 2006).

Rule 9.05. Alibi defense discovery.

Upon the written demand of the prosecuting attorney stating the time, date, and place at which the alleged offense was committed, the defendant shall serve within ten days, or at such other time as the court may direct, upon the prosecuting attorney a written notice of the intention to offer a defense of alibi, which notice shall state the specific place or places at which the defendant claims to have been at the time of the alleged offense and the names and addresses of the witnesses upon which the defendant intends to rely to establish such alibi.

Within ten days thereafter, but in no event less than ten days before the trial, unless the court otherwise directs, the prosecuting attorney shall serve upon the defendant or the defendant's attorney a written notice stating the names and addresses of the witnesses upon whom the state intends to rely to establish the defendant's presence at the scene of the alleged offense and any other witnesses to be relied on to rebut testimony of any of the defendant's alibi witnesses.

If, prior to or during trial, a party learns of an additional witness whose identity, if known, should have been included in the information previously furnished, the party shall promptly notify the other party or the party's attorney of the name and address of such additional witness.

Upon the failure of either party to comply with the requirements of this rule, the court may use such sanctions as it deems proper, including:

1. Granting a continuance;
2. Limiting further discovery of the party failing to comply;
3. Finding the attorney failing to comply in contempt; or
4. Excluding the testimony of the undisclosed witness.

This rule shall not limit the right of the defendant to testify in his/her own behalf.

For good cause shown, the court may grant an exception to any of the requirements of this rule.

Construction.

In the appellate court's analysis of Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.05, the requirement to disclose alibi witnesses must be triggered by the prosecution; because the record showed no such demand by the prosecution, the trial court erred in denying defendant the opportunity to present defendant's alibi witnesses, and defendant was entitled to a new trial. Ford v. State, 862 So. 2d 554 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.05 made no cross-reference to Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.04, and if the Mississippi Supreme Court had intended the Box v. State procedures to apply to matters of alibi, it could have so provided; the appellate court interpreted the Supreme Court's failure to do so as an indication that the Supreme Court intended for proceedings relating to alibi defenses to continue to be handled differently from other discovery matters. Ford v. State, 862 So. 2d 554 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

This rule does not require that a defendant giving notice of alibi go forward with the alibi; as a matter of trial strategy, defendant and his attorney are free to change their minds regarding defense to be offered. Ray v. State, 503 So. 2d 222 (Miss. 1986).

Continuance.

The defendant did not suffer injustice by not being granted a continuance so he could produce his theretofore undisclosed alibi witnesses where (1) the record did not establish that a different case was tried than the one set for trial, (2) the defendant did not notify his own attorneys or the state of alibi witnesses until the day of trial, (3) the trial judge told the defendant that he would enter an order to bring the witnesses to court if the defendant would give him the names, then issued a subpoena for the two witnesses, and (4) at the end of the state's case, the defendant moved for a directed verdict, which was denied, and then rested without presenting any witnesses and without additional mention of the two alibi witnesses. Dillard v. State, 811 So. 2d 389 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in excluding defendant's alibi witness from tesfigying in defendant's trial for capital murder because the witness was not disclosed to the State until the morning of trial; the trial court found that the failure to timely disclose the witness was intentional. Prater v. State, 18 So. 3d 884 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 19 So. 3d 82, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 477 (Miss. 2009).

Defendant's convictions for murder and aggravated assault were proper where the record indicated that the prosecution complied with the first part of Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.05. The defense admitted that it did not give the prosecution any written notice of an alibi defense and having failed to fulfill its obligations under the rule, the defense could not claimun fair surprise and prejudice to its case. McGee v. State, 929 So. 2d 353 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Trial court did not err in suppressing defendant's alibi witness's testimony because defendant failed to give written notice of his intent to offer an alibi defense upon the written demand of the State as required under Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.05. However, the trial court and the State failed to follow the mandated procedure applicable when a party fails to timely produce trial evidence as required by Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.04, but any error was harmless because the trial court had the discretion to suppress alibi testimony under Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.05. Moore v. State, 909 So. 2d 77 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

The procedure for handling a disclosure violation in a criminal trial as outlined in the special concurrence to a prior Supreme Court opinion need not be followed before an undisclosed alibi witness can be excluded from testifying. Houston v. State, 752 So. 2d 1044 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Notice.

Defendant's convictions for murder and kidnapping were proper because he had over one year to inform his counsel about an alibi witness and decided the day before trial commenced, to do so. Defendant's identification of the alibi witness, and notification to the State, was not timely or proper under Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.05. Lipsey v. State, 50 So. 3d 341 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 50 So. 3d 1003, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 13 (Miss. 2011).

Appellate court reversed defendant's conviction as the trial court erred in denying defendant the opportunity to present his alibi witness where the state failed to prove that it had made a written demand upon defendant to provide notice of an alibi witness as required by Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.05. Hall v. State, 925 So. 2d 856 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 927 So. 2d 750, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 182 (Miss. 2006).

The defendant was properly precluded from introducing alibi testimony where a written demand for notice of an alibi witness was made by the state in April 1995, but notification to the state of the defense's intent to present alibi testimony was not delivered until May 1997, (one week before trial) because the defendant withheld such information from his attorney. Coleman v. State, 749 So. 2d 1003 (Miss. 1999).

The court properly refused to allow the defendant to present an alibi defense where his "notice of alibi" was a request for the prosecutor to disclose the names of witnesses he expected to use to rebut his alibi, but no alibi and no witnesses to support such an alibi were given. Taylor v. State, 744 So. 2d 306 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Rebuttal witnesses.

The state has no duty to provide the defense with the names of possible rebuttal witnesses unless the State has requested notice of alibi defense. Smith v. State, 729 So. 2d 1191 (Miss. 1998), cert. denied, 527 U.S. 1043, 119 S. Ct. 2410, 144 L. Ed. 2d 808 (1999).

Rule 9.06. Competence to stand trial.

If before or during trial the court, of its own motion or upon motion of an attorney, has reasonable ground to believe that the defendant is incompetent to stand trial, the court shall order the defendant to submit to a mental examination by some competent psychiatrist selected by the court in accordance with § 99-13-11 of the Mississippi Code Annotated of 1972.

After the examination the court shall conduct a hearing to determine if the defendant is competent to stand trial. After hearing all the evidence, the court shall weigh the evidence and make a determination of whether the defendant is competent to stand trial. If the court finds that the defendant is competent to stand trial, then the court shall make the finding a matter of record and the case will then proceed to trial. If the court finds that the defendant is incompetent to stand trial, then the court shall commit the defendant to the Mississippi State Hospital or other appropriate mental health facility. The order of commitment shall require that the defendant be examined and a written report be furnished to the court every four calendar months, stating:

A. Whether there is a substantial probability that the defendant will become mentally competent to stand trial within the foreseeable future; and

B. Whether progress toward that goal is being made.

The defendant's attorney, as the defendant's representative, shall not waive any hearing authorized by this rule, but is authorized to consent, on behalf of the defendant, to necessary surgical or medical treatment and procedures.

If at any time during such commitment, the court decides, after a hearing, that the defendant is competent to stand trial, it shall enter its order so finding and declaring the defendant competent to stand trial, after which the court shall proceed to trial.

If at any time during such commitment, the proper official at the Mississippi State Hospital or other appropriate mental health facility shall consider that the defendant is competent to stand trial, such official shall promptly notify the court of that effect in writing, and place the defendant in the custody of the sheriff. The court shall then proceed to conduct a hearing on the competency of the defendant to stand trial. If the court finds the defendant is not competent to stand trial, it shall order the defendant committed as provided above. If the court finds the defendant is competent to stand trial, then the case shall proceed to trial.

If within a reasonable period of time after commitment under the provisions of this rule, there is neither a determination that there is substantial probability that the defendant will become mentally competent to stand trial nor progress toward that goal, the judge shall order that civil proceedings as provided in §§ 41-21-61 to 41-21-107 of the Mississippi Code of 1972 be instituted. Said proceedings shall proceed notwithstanding that the defendant has criminal charges pending against him/her. The defendant shall remain in custody until determination of the civil proceedings.

Abandoned motion.
Death penalty cases.
Effectiveness of counsel.
Grounds for mental examination.
Hearing.

Abandoned motion.

Because the motion for appointment of a psychiatrist to conduct a psychiatric evaluation was never pursued to a decision, the matter was procedurally barred. Trammell v. State, 62 So. 3d 424 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Death penalty cases.

In defendant's capital murder case, court properly conducted a hearing to determine defendant's competency to stand trial where it gave an extensive order concerning defendant's competency before trial. The trial judge considered such things as expert testimony, defendant's behavior, and medical reports. Scott v. State, 878 So. 2d 933 (Miss. 2004).

Counsel was not deficient for failing to allege that defendant was incompetent to stand trial for aggravated assault where defendant admitted that before trial he had started to take his medicine again and could now think straight. Furthermore, defendant participated in his defense, made a closing argument, and discussed his case and the insanity defense with his cellmate. Epps v. State, 984 So. 2d 1042 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

At the evidentiary hearing on defendant's motion for a psychiatric evaluation, the trial judge found that defendant had not presented sufficient evidence to warrant a granting of defendant's motion, and because the trial judge did not find that a reasonable ground existed to suspect that defendant was mentally incompetent to stand trial, the trial court was not required to order a competency hearing pursuant to Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.06; thus, the trial court did not err in failing to grant defendant's motion for a hearing to determine competency. Evans v. State, 984 So. 2d 308 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 984 So. 2d 277, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 289 (Miss. 2008).

Grounds for mental examination.

There was no abuse in the trial court's determination that defendant, who suffered from mental deficiencies, was incompetent to stand trial where the trial court believed that defendant was exaggerating his mental deficiencies during the plea colloquy and determined from defendant's demeanor and conduct during several court appearances and based on a tape-recorded confession that no ground existed to order a mental evaluation of defendant to determine his competency to stand trial. Harden v. State, 59 So. 3d 594 (Miss. 2011).

Trial court was not required by Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.06 to sua sponte conduct a competency hearing to determine whether defendant was capable of providing a knowing and intelligent waiver of his right to counsel: (1) defendant precisely stated the State's burden of proof in defendant's opening statement and included the elements of the crime; (2) defendant's withdrawal of a self-defense instruction did not indicate that he did not understand the nature of the proceedings because there was no basis in the evidence for the instruction; (3) defendant did not explain how his brain surgery for an aneurysm affected his competency; and (4) although defendant did not possess the skill and competency of an attorney he, with the assistance of a court-appointed attorney, performed reasonably. Hairston v. State, 4 So. 3d 403 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari dismissed by 12 So. 3d 531, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 242 (Miss. 2009).

Trial court was not required by Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.06 to sua sponte conduct a competency hearing to determine whether defendant was capable of providing a knowing and intelligent waiver of his right to counsel. Whatever may have been defendant's initial understanding of the application of Miss. Code Ann. § 99-19-81, the enhanced sentencing statute, defendant was able to understand what was communicated to him by the court regarding how it applied to him. Hairston v. State, 4 So. 3d 403 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari dismissed by 12 So. 3d 531, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 242 (Miss. 2009).

In an aggravated assault case, a trial court did not err by denying the motion for a mental examination under Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.06 and Miss. Code Ann. § 99-13-11; even though defendant's mother testified that he suffered from psychosis, there were no medical records or documentation submitted. Further, despite his suffering from psychological ailments, defendant was competent enough to assist counsel in his previous cases, and he was receiving medication at the time of the hearing. Epps v. State, 984 So. 2d 1042 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Trial court did not err by denying defendant's motion for a mental evaluation to determine his competence to stand trial under Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.06 because (1) his mother, his former human resource manager, and a co-worker testified that defendant had no history or did not exhibit any mental problems; (2) a deputy testified that, while defendant was upset on the night of the crime, he was able to understand and answer questions normally; (3) a corrections officer testified that from her observations at the jail, defendant was communicative and did not exhibit any signs of mental problems; and (4) defendant exhibited reluctance, rather than an inability, to assist in his own defense. Staten v. State, 989 So. 2d 938 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 993 So. 2d 832, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 400 (Miss. 2008).

In a manslaughter case, there was no showing that defendant was incompetent based on the fact that she was pregnant, and allegedly had been mistreated in custody, and was experiencing stomach pains; defendant did not raise the issue until the fifth day of trial, and she was able to give rational testimony when she took the stand. Brown v. State, 970 So. 2d 1300 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Where only one mention was made of defendant's prior mental illness, a trial court did not err by failing to provide a competency hearing during sentencing since one was not required; defendant stated he was able to understand his plea given during sentencing, defendant's attorney stated that defendant was able to proceed, and the trial court had an opportunity to observe defendant during a two-day trial. Nichols v. State, 955 So. 2d 962 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Though geared towards competency to stand trial, Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.06 may be applied to a defendant's entry of a guilty plea. The standard of competency necessary to enter a plea of guilty is the same as that for determining competency to stand trial. Smith v. State, 831 So. 2d 590 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Where defendant offered no evidence at plea hearing to demonstrate his incompetence due to the taking of his medications, and defendant was questioned regarding his understanding of the charged crime, there was no reason to reopen the incompetence issue. Smith v. State, 831 So. 2d 590 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

The trial judge did not err in failing on his own motion to order a hearing to determine the defendant's competence to stand trial notwithstanding the assertion that the defendant exhibited bizarre behavior that included failing to cooperate with attorneys, admitting guilt to the jury, and calling a witness who incriminated him, and that one of his lawyers filed a motion alleging that the defendant was delusional, where the court responded to the attorney's motion by stating that the defendant appeared to be rational, testified logically from the witness stand and was not delusional. Taylor v. State, 812 So. 2d 1056 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

The trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a psychiatric evaluation where, (1) the initial hearing on the motion occurred just one day after counsel was appointed, and the defendant's counsel presented by affidavit evidence that the defendant was uncooperative and even was in a "complete rampage" during their meeting, (2) the court denied the motion on the evidence presented, but invited the defense to present additional evidence in a week's time, and (3) the defendant failed to produce further evidence or testimony of incapacity. Ficklin v. State, 758 So. 2d 457 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

The trial court justly concluded that a mental examination was unnecessary in spite of the defendant's assertion that he suffered from periodic loss of memory and occasional blackouts, where the record indicated that the trial judge directed a series of questions to the defense to ensure that the defendant was capable to stand trial and that, after addressing these questions, the judge concluded that the circumstance indicated that the defendant was fully competent to stand trial. Benish v. State, 733 So. 2d 855 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

The court did not err in failing to order, sua sponte, a competency hearing, even though two medical reports before the court raised serious competency concerns; there was nothing in the record which led to the conclusion that the defendant could not understand the proceedings, appreciate their significance or rationally aid his attorney in his defense. Richardson v. State, 722 So. 2d 481 (Miss. 1998).

Hearing.

Trial court's failure to hold a competency hearing violated Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.06 and defendant's constitutional rights and, thus, required reversal of his multiple drug convictions. Whether his absence at trial was the result of willful, voluntary, and deliberate actions could not be answered because the question turned on his competency at the time of trial. Jay v. State, 25 So. 3d 257 (Miss. 2009).

Although the circuit court granted defendant's motion for a psychiatric evaluation before trial, his murder conviction was reversed and remanded for a new trial because the trial court erred in failing to conduct a competency hearing pursuant to Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 9.06, and the doctor's report did not address defendant's competency. Sanders v. State, 9 So. 3d 1132 (Miss. 2009).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant a competency hearing where a clinical psychologist reflected that defendant appeared to have the mental faculties to work with his attorney and the trial judge indicated that defendant had been fully examined by the court at the time of his guilty plea. Smith v. State, 910 So. 2d 635 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Defendant's murder conviction was proper even though a second competency hearing was not held pursuant to Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.06 because there was sufficient evidence, from the doctors' letter and from defendant's testimony, from which the trial court could have determined that defendant was competent to stand trial. Tutor v. State, 933 So. 2d 1003 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Trial court did not err in failing to conduct a mental competency hearing pursuant to Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 9.06 after ordering defendant to undergo a competency examination at the Mississippi State Hospital because it was within the trial court's discretion to decide whether to hold a competency hearing and the trial judge was in the best position to make the determination whether there existed a reasonable ground for the trial court to order a competency hearing on its own initiative. The hospital filed its mental evaluation report on defendant, finding him to be mentally competent to stand trial, and after observing defendant's actions and demeanor both before and during the trial, the trial judge did not find it necessary to order a competency hearing. Jones v. State, 902 So. 2d 593 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 901 So. 2d 1273 (Miss. 2005).

Court did not abuse its discretion in not holding a competency hearing where defendant, who claimed to be a paranoid schizophrenic, said he understood what was going on at trial and was aware of the consequences of a conviction, showed no overt physical symptoms, and produced no statements from the doctors who treated him for his condition. Cox v. State, 793 So. 2d 591 (Miss. 2001).

Trial court was not unreasonable in not holding a competency hearing prior to the trial where the defendant failed to assert that he was in fact unable to stand trial or assist his counsel with a defense due to any mental incapacity, he failed to make the findings of the psychiatrist who examined him part of the appellate record, and the trial judge was present to observe his demeanor. Coleman v. State, — So. 2d —, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 488 (Miss. Ct. App. July 27, 1999), affirmed by 786 So. 2d 397, 2001 Miss. LEXIS 149 (Miss. 2001).

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

This rule gives the circuit court the authority to order civil proceedings as provided in §§ 41-21-61 to 41-21-107 be instituted in chancery court for a criminal defendant who has been determined to be incompetent to stand trial. The rule, coupled with an order from the circuit court, gives the chancery court the legal jurisdiction and the obligation to proceed with the involuntary commitment of a criminal defendant. Peterson, Apr. 23, 2004, A.G. Op. 04-0133.

The state (or the defendant) has the right to appeal to the Supreme Court an order refusing (or granting) a motion for continued, involuntary commitment. Peterson, Apr. 23, 2004, A.G. Op. 04-0133.

The standard for finding a person to be mentally ill or mentally retarded under § 41-21-83 is different than finding someone incompetent to stand trial under this rule. Peterson, Apr. 23, 2004, A.G. Op. 04-0133.

Rule 9.07. Insanity defense.

If a defendant intends to rely upon the defense of insanity at the time of the alleged crime, the defendant shall, within the time provided for filing pretrial motions or at such later time as the court may direct, serve upon the prosecuting attorney and the clerk of the court a written notice of the intention to offer a defense of insanity. If there is a failure to comply with the requirements of this subsection, the court may use such sanctions as it deems proper, including:

1. Granting a continuance, and, in its discretion, assessing costs against the appropriate attorney or party;
2. Limiting further discovery of the party failing to comply;
3. Finding the attorney failing to comply in contempt; or
4. Excluding the testimony of appropriate witnesses.

The court may for cause shown allow late filing of the notice or grant additional time to the parties to prepare for trial or make such other order as may be appropriate.

Within ten days thereafter, but in no event less than ten days before the trial unless the court otherwise directs, the defendant shall serve upon the prosecuting attorney the names and addresses of the witnesses upon whom the defendant intends to rely to establish the defense of insanity.

If a defendant intends to introduce expert testimony relating to a mental disease, defect, or other condition bearing upon the issue of whether the defendant had the mental state required for the offense charged, the defendant shall, within the time provided for the filing of pretrial motions or at such time as the court may direct, serve upon the prosecuting attorney and the clerk of the court notice of such intention, with the names and addresses of such expert witnesses upon whom the defendant intends to rely.

The court may for cause shown allow late filing of the notice or grant additional time to the parties to prepare for trial or make such other order as may be appropriate.

The court may, upon motion of the prosecuting attorney, require the defendant to be examined by a competent psychiatrist selected by the court. No statement made by the accused in the course of any examination provided for by this rule shall be admitted in evidence against the defendant on the issue of guilt in any criminal proceeding.

The prosecuting attorney shall serve notice on the defendant promptly, but in no event less than ten days prior to trial, stating the names and addresses of any witnesses upon whom the state intends to rely relating to the issue of the defendant's mental condition at the time of the alleged offense or the defendant's mental state required for the offense charged.

If, prior to or during trial, either party learns of an additional witness whose identity should have been included in the notice under this rule, the party shall promptly notify the other party of the name and address of such additional witness.

Upon the failure of either party to comply with the requirements of this rule, or failure by the defendant to submit to an examination when ordered under this rule, the court may use such sanctions as it deems proper, including:

1. Granting a continuance, and, in its discretion, assessing costs against the appropriate attorney or party;
2. Limiting further discovery of the party failing to comply;
3. Finding the attorney failing to comply in contempt; or
4. Excluding the testimony of appropriate witnesses.

For good reason shown, the court may grant an exception to the requirements of this rule.

Rule 9.08. Omnibus hearing.

An omnibus hearing may be held at request of an attorney or on the court's own initiative if the defendant has entered a plea of not guilty. The hearing shall be set at least three days prior to trial; however, the court should allow the attorneys sufficient time to conduct further investigation, complete discovery and continue plea discussions.

At the omnibus hearing the trial court, on its own initiative, and utilizing an appropriate check list form which the court may direct the attorneys to sign, should:

1. Ensure that rules regarding provision of an attorney have been complied with;

2. Ascertain whether the parties have completed discovery, and if not make orders appropriate to expedite completion;

3. Ascertain whether there are requests for additional disclosures such as medical and scientific reports or other discretionary disclosures;

4. Make rulings on any motions then pending and ascertain whether any additional motions will be made at the hearing or continued portions thereof;

5. Ascertain whether there are any procedural or constitutional issues which should be considered;

6. Upon agreement of the attorneys, or upon a finding that the trial is likely to be protracted or otherwise unusually complicated, continue the omnibus hearing; and

7. Upon the accused's request, permit the accused to change his/her plea.

All motions prior to trial should ordinarily be reserved for and presented at the omnibus hearing unless the court otherwise directs. Check list forms should be utilized at the omnibus hearing to ensure that all requests, errors and issues are considered. A sample check list is attached in the appendix.

Any and all issues should be raised either by the attorneys or by the court without prior notice and, if appropriate, informally disposed of. If additional discovery, investigation or formal presentation is necessary for a fair and orderly determination of any issue, the omnibus hearing should be continued until all matters raised are properly disposed of.

A verbatim record should be made of all proceedings at the hearing. In addition, at the conclusion of the hearing a summary memorandum may be made indicating disclosures made, rulings and orders of the court, stipulations and other matters determined or pending.

Stipulations by any party shall be binding upon that party at trial unless set aside or modified by the court in the interests of justice. The defendant and the defendant's attorney shall sign any stipulation made by the defense.

Entitlement to a hearing.

Defendant failed to show that he was entitled to an omnibus hearing where the record did not indicate that either defendant's attorney or the trial judge requested such a hearing. McDonald v. State, 807 So. 2d 447 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

Rule 10.01. Jury selection.

In jury selection challenges for cause shall be stated to the court.

In cases wherein the punishment may be death or life imprisonment, the defendant and the prosecution shall have twelve (12) peremptory challenges for the selection of the regular twelve jurors. These challenges may not be used in the selection of an alternate juror or jurors.

In felony cases not involving the possible sentence of death or life imprisonment, the defendant and the prosecution shall have six (6) peremptory challenges for the selection of the twelve regular jurors. These challenges may not be used in the selection of an alternate juror or jurors.

In all criminal misdemeanor actions tried in county court a six (6) person jury shall be used whether the case originated in county court or was appealed from lower court. The defendant and the prosecution shall each have three (3) peremptory challenges in a trial with a six person jury. These challenges shall not be used in the selection of an alternate juror or jurors.

In all cases, in the discretion of the court, the court may direct the selection of a sufficient number of alternate jurors and when the court has elected to so impanel an alternate or alternates, the defendant and the prosecution shall each have peremptory challenges as follows:

a. In death penalty cases the peremptory challenges shall equal the number of alternate jurors the court has ordered to be selected.

b. In all other cases the peremptory challenges shall be one challenge for each two alternate jurors, or part thereof, ordered by the court to be selected.

These challenges for alternate jurors may not be used in the selection of regular jurors. The selection process of alternate jurors will be the same as for regular jurors.

Juries shall be selected in the same manner, and peremptory challenges exercised in the same manner as provided in these rules for civil cases. The prosecution shall exercise its challenges first.

In all cases defendants tried jointly shall be entitled to only the number of challenges to which one defendant would otherwise be entitled. (Amended April 18, 1995.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. Noncapital offenses.

Trial court did not err in refusing to allow defendant twelve peremptory challenges because robbery was a noncapital offense as provided in Miss. Code Ann. § 1-3-4 and Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-73, therefore, Miss. Code Ann. § 99-17-3 and Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 10.01, the statutory and rules provisions which provide extra peremptory challenges to the venire in capital cases, were inapplicable. The jury was required to determine defendant's guilt on the principal offense and not to consider the prior convictions which brought into consideration his life sentence under the habitual offender statute, Miss. Code Ann. § 99-19-83(3). Jones v. State, 902 So. 2d 593 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 901 So. 2d 1273 (Miss. 2005).

Use of the word "shall" in Miss. Code Ann. 99-17-3 and Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 10.01 implies that the trial court has no discretion in the number of peremptory strikes given to each side; therefore, a trial court did not err by refusing to allow defendant additional peremptory strikes under § 99-17-3 and Rule 10.01 after five were denied due to an improper attempt to exclude Caucasian males from the jury in a statutory rape and sexual battery case. Jones v. State, 951 So. 2d 568 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Because defendant's offenses were noncapital, the statutory provision of Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 10.01 which provided extra peremptory challenges to the venire in capital cases were inapplicable and defendant was entitled only to the regular number of six peremp-tory challenges. Miles v. State, 864 So. 2d 963 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Rule 10.02. Jury sequestration.

In any case where the state seeks to impose the death penalty, the jury shall be sequestered during the entire trial.

In all other criminal cases, the jury may be sequestered upon request of either the defendant or the state made at least 48 hours in advance of the trial. The court may, in the exercise of sound judicial discretion, either grant or refuse the request to sequester the jury. In the absence of a request, the court may, on its own initiative, sequester a jury at any stage of a trial.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Admonishment to jury.
Denial of motion to sequester.
Waiver.

Admonishment to jury.

Defendant's capital murder conviction was proper pursuant to Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 10.02 because jurors were presumed to have followed the instruction of the court to not deliberate among themselves or with others during the course of the trial, overnight, or at any other time. Davis v. State, 914 So. 2d 200 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 921 So. 2d 344, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 746 (Miss. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 549 U.S. 856, 127 S. Ct. 133, 166 L. Ed. 2d 98, 2006 U.S. LEXIS 6743, 75 U.S.L.W. 3167 (2006).

In a capital murder prosecution, the fact that the trial court forgot to admonish the jurors not to watch TV or read newspaper accounts of the trial during an overnight recess did not require striking the entire panel. Moody v. State, 841 So. 2d 1067 (Miss. 2003).

Denial of motion to sequester.

The court did not abuse its discretion when it denied the defendant's motion to sequester the jury where the motion was not made until well into the trial and there was no evidence to conclude that the jury was influenced by any outside sources. Shelton v. State, 728 So. 2d 105 (Miss. Ct. App. 1998).

Waiver.

Allowing the jurors, with the consent of both parties, to go home and quickly pack their bags after they were sworn in but before they were sequestered for the actual trial and the introduction of any evidence, did not warrant reversal of the entire case for a new trial; the potential for jury prejudice against the defendant upon which the rule against allowing any waiver of sequestration even with the defendant's consent is premised was eliminated when consent was obtained by both parties outside of the presence of the jury. Watts v. State, 733 So. 2d 214 (Miss. 1999).

Defendant waived his right to have jury sequestered where his motion to sequester was filed the day before trial. Whittington v. State, 523 So. 2d 966 (Miss. 1988), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 923, 109 S. Ct. 304, 102 L. Ed. 2d 323 (1988).

Rule 10.03. Open and closing statement.

The prosecuting attorney may make an opening statement to the jury, confining the statement to the facts the prosecutor expects to prove. The defense may make an opening statement to the jury at the conclusion of the state's opening statement or prior to the defendant's case in chief. The statement shall be confined to a statement of the defense and the facts the defendant expects to prove in support thereof.

At the conclusion of the evidence, the prosecution may make an argument to the jury. The defendant may then make an argument to the jury. Failure of the state to argue shall not deprive the defendant of the defendant's right to argue. The state may then make a rebuttal argument, but not to exceed one-half of the allotted time.

Rule 10.04. Bifurcated trials.

A. In any case where the state seeks to impose the death penalty, the trial shall be conducted in accordance with §§ 99-19-101 and 99-19-103, of the Mississippi Code of 1972 as amended and applicable court decisions.

B. In all cases not involving the death penalty, wherein the jury may impose life sentence, the court may conduct a bifurcated trial. If the defendant is found guilty of an offense for which life imprisonment may be imposed, a sentencing trial shall be held before the same jury, if possible, or before the court if jury waiver is allowed by the court.

At the sentencing hearing:

1. The state may introduce evidence of aggravation of the offense of which the defendant has been adjudged guilty.

2. The defendant may introduce any evidence of extenuation or mitigation.

3. The state may introduce evidence in rebuttal of the evidence of the defendant.

4. A record shall be made of the above proceeding and shall be maintained in the office of the clerk of the trial court as a part of the record in that court.

C. Upon conviction, or after a plea of guilty, in cases where the court has sentencing authority, there may be a hearing before the trial judge as follows:

1. A presentence investigation may be conducted and a report thereof shall be made as required for cases where the court has discretion in imposition of sentence. Contents of this report shall be disclosed only to the parties. A copy of said report shall be delivered to both the prosecutor and the defendant or the defense attorney within a reasonable time prior to sentencing so as to afford a reasonable opportunity for verification of the material. Prior to the sentencing proceeding each party is required to notify the opposing party and the court of any part of the report which the party intends to controvert by the production of evidence.

2. The state may introduce evidence of aggravation of the offense of which the defendant has been adjudged guilty.

3. The defendant may introduce evidence to contradict or supplement any information contained in the presentence investigation report.

4. The defendant may introduce any evidence of extenuation or mitigation.

5. The state may introduce evidence in rebuttal of the evidence of the defendant.

6. A record shall be made of the above proceedings and shall be maintained in the office of the clerk of the trial court as a part of the record in that court.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Presentence report.

In general.

Trial court did not abuse its discretion by admitting into evidence during sentencing defendant's prior Texas conviction of second-degree robbery because it was relevant for the sentencing jury, consistent with Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 10.04(B)(1), to consider; in addition, the documentation of the prior conviction and sentence was properly certified and authenticated according to the Acts of Congress, and therefore was admissible under Miss. R. Evid. 803(8) as an exception to the hearsay rule. Taggart v. State, 957 So. 2d 981 (Miss. 2007).

In defendant's capital murder case, a court did not err by not ordering a bifurcated sentencing hearing on the armed robbery because the decision whether or not to order a bifurcated trial rested within the trial court's discretion. Duncan v. State, 939 So. 2d 772 (Miss. 2006).

The rule requires a sentencing hearing only where a life imprisonment sentence is optional; a sentencing hearing is not required where a life imprisonment sentence is mandatory. Lewis v. State, 765 So. 2d 493 (Miss. 2000).

Presentence report.

Defendant's convictions for armed robbery and arson were proper where the failure to grant a sentencing hearing was not in error because the trial judge was already privy to the facts of the case and the aggravating and mitigating circumstances prior to sentencing; further, like the presentence investigation, Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 10.04(C)(1) clearly left whether to have a sentencing hearing to the sound discretion of the trial judge. Payton v. State, 897 So. 2d 921 (Miss. 2003).

Failure to provide a defendant with a copy of a presentence investigative report as required by Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Court Prac. R. 10.04(C)(1) constitutes reversible error only if defendant can show prejudice as a result of failure to comply with the rule. Griffin v. State, 824 So. 2d 632 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Rule 10.05. New trials.

The court on written motion of the defendant may grant a new trial on any of the following grounds:

1. If required in the interests of justice;

2. If the verdict is contrary to law or the weight of the evidence;

3. Where new and material evidence is recently discovered which would probably produce a different result at a new trial, and such evidence could not have been discovered sooner, by reasonable diligence of the attorney;

4. If the jury has received any evidence, papers or documents, not authorized by the court, or the court has admitted illegal testimony, or excluded competent and legal testimony;

5. If the jurors, after retiring to deliberate upon the verdict, separated without leave of court; and

6. If the court has misdirected the jury in a material matter of law, or has failed to instruct the jury upon all questions of law necessary for their guidance.

A motion for a new trial must be made within ten days of the entry of judgment. The trial judge may hear and determine a motion for new trial at any time and in any county or judicial district within the trial judge's jurisdiction.

The court may, with the consent of the defendant, order a new trial of its own initiative before the entry of judgment and imposition of sentence.

The court, on motion of a defendant, may vacate judgment and dismiss the case without prejudice if the indictment or complaint did not charge an offense, or if the court was without jurisdiction, and bind the defendant over to the action of the grand jury, or take other proper steps regarding the defendant.

In general.

Defendant's appeal was timely where he filed his motion for a new trial within the time prescribed by Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 10.5, the trial judge waited more than three years to hear the motion, after which, a notice of appeal was timely filed pursuant to Miss. R. App. P. 4. Neither Rule 4(e) nor Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 10.5 required the motion for new trial to be timely presented by defendant to the trial court. Jay v. State, 25 So. 3d 257 (Miss. 2009).

Issue relating to a new trial was procedurally barred in a murder case because defendant simply incorporated by reference all facts, arguments, and authorities as set out in his issues concerning the failure to grant a directed verdict, the failure to submit the issue of manslaughter to the jury, and the denial of his peremptory instruction. These all related to the legal sufficiency of the evidence, but did not support a determination of whether the verdict should have been overturned and a new trial granted. Green v. State, 982 So. 2d 471 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying a new trial to the estate administrator where testimony at trial presented evidence of the decedent's medical bills along with generalized estimations regarding the cost to repair the vehicle which the jury found did not belong to the decedent; no other evidence of damages was presented. In re Estate of Guillory v. McGee, 922 So. 2d 823 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Worker's motion for a new trial after the jury granted judgment in favor of the company on the worker's personal injury/product liability claim should not have been granted where the verdict was not contrary to the overwhelming weight of the evidence; the verdict should not have been disturbed. Lift-All Co. v. Warner, 943 So. 2d 12 (Miss. 2006).

Defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied where the evidence was sufficient to support a rape conviction given the victim's uncontradicted testimony; defendant's act of opening the porch door was clearly sufficient to constitute a breaking, and entry through the porch was required to gain entrance into the victim's home. Davis v. State, 910 So. 2d 1228 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Defendant's motion for new trial was untimely as it was not filed within ten days of the entry of the final judgment. Tran v. State, 915 So. 2d 1129 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Testimony at trial clearly showed who the confidential informant named in the indictment was and defendant's defense counsel failed to specify the grounds for his motion for a directed verdict. The specificity of the alleged error (that the State, during its case-in-chief, failed to specifically identify the confidential informant by his actual name), was raised for the first time on appeal and the issue was waived, as was the denial of defendant's motions for a directed verdict and a new trial that were based on said issue. Jerninghan v. State, 910 So. 2d 748 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari dismissed by 933 So. 2d 303, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 306 (Miss. 2006).

Only motions defendant made at trial were a motion for a mistrial and a motion to dismiss based on the State's failure to disclose the past criminal history of a confidential informant. As such, the appellate court would consider only defendant's post-trial motion for a new trial, but not his assertion that his motion for a directed verdict was improperly denied. Dunlap v. State, 883 So. 2d 145 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. dismissed, 893 So. 2d 1061 (Miss. 2005).

Circuit court properly denied defendant's motion for a new trial where there was substantial evidence which indicated that if a degree of relationship existed between a juror and the victim, the juror was not aware of any such relationship, and his decision was unaffected; the verdict of the jury was supported by the record, and a reasonable fair-minded juror could find for the prosecution given the evidence. Smith v. State, 904 So. 2d 1217 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court's allowing admission of transcript of videotape into evidence after both the State and the defense had rested and the jury was in deliberations was harmless error, as defendant had not objected that the transcript was inaccurate when it was initially shown to the jury, and it was not shown that defendant's rights were infringed; thus, defendant's motion for new trial was properly denied. Johnson v. State, 872 So. 2d 733 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Where defendant sought to admit letter purportedly written by the child victim recanting the charges, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in disregarding the testimony of defendant's handwriting expert, particularly in light of concerns about the expert's qualifications, nor did the trial court abuse its discretion in disregarding the testimony of a witness who asserted the writing was that of the victim, but admitted not having seen the victim's handwriting in two years. The victim had testified that the victim had not written the letter, and the Mississippi Crime Lab examiner's report indicated that the letter showed tracings and simulations, the record reflected that no one knew where the letter originated, and therefore, defendant was not entitled to a new trial. Todd v. State, 873 So. 2d 1040 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied where the evidence was sufficient to find defendant guilty of conspiracy to commit and committing felony shoplifting; the evidence presented by the State included testimony from several officers regarding the events after the shoplifting at one of the stores, including an in-court identification of defendant as the driver of the maroon car, and any conflicts in the testimony by witness was resolved by the jury. Richardson v. State, 868 So. 2d 389 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a new trial where a party who failed to object to the jury's composition before it was empaneled waived any right to complain thereafter; defendant stood mute and never told his lawyer or the trial court that the jurors in question had failed to respond to questions to which he knew they should have responded, such that his failure to object waived his right to complain on appeal. Carter v. State, 869 So. 2d 1083 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In a wrongful death case, a trial court erred in awarding a new trial on the issue of damages because it should not have reallocated fault from an immune employer to an electric company. Entergy Miss., Inc. v. Hayes, 874 So. 2d 952 (Miss. 2004).

Testimony of the 15-year-old victim that she and defendant had an ongoing sexual relationship with the 38-year-old defendant, coupled with evidence that the victim had been sexually active and had been absent from school during the time of the alleged sexual contacts, was sufficient to support defendant's conviction for statutory rape, and the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motions for judgment n.o.v. or, in the alternative, a new trial. Farrish v. State, 840 So. 2d 820 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied in an arson case because there was sufficient circumstantial evidence to support the conviction; the evidence showed that defendant, the sole occupant of a residence, was at home shortly before a fire started, an accelerant was used on a couch, and a vehicle left the residence immediately before the fire was reported. Miller v. State, 856 So. 2d 420 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Where various witnesses testified to undercover operation, including testimony that defendant directed assistant to deliver cocaine to informant, defendant's controlled substance convictions were not against the weight of the evidence and trial court properly denied defendant's motion for a new trial. Jones v. State, 841 So. 2d 213 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's new trial motion on the contention that the verdict for aggravated assault was against the weight of the evidence where the victim presented testimony that went to all of the essential elements of aggravated assault — she was attacked by defendant, who was wielding a knife, and she received lacerations while attempting to defend herself from his attack; the victim's testimony was not impeached during cross-examination nor did the defense present evidence that would make her version of events so improbable as to be unworthy of belief. Page v. State, 843 So. 2d 96 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Trial judge did not err in denying defendant's motion for new trial where the State proved that defendant intentionally possessed, received, retained or disposed of stolen property knowing that it had been stolen where defendant's having the stolen property in his personal automobile, his selling it far below market price, and the secretive way in which he secured a buyer provided the jurors reason to find defendant had guilty knowledge sufficient to support guilt; since defendant provided no explanation of his possession of the recently stolen goods, this would lead a reasonable person to believe the property was stolen. Russell v. State, 844 So. 2d 506 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Challenges to a denial of a motion for a directed verdict, and to a denial of a motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict (JNOV) are reviewed under the same standard, although a motion for a new trial asks to vacate the judgment on grounds related to the weight, not sufficiency, of the evidence. Boose v. State, 851 So. 2d 391 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

The rule governs motions for new trials, but does not govern motions for reconsideration of the sentence imposed following conviction or following a guilty plea. Dickerson v. State, 731 So. 2d 1082 (Miss. 1999).

Assistance of counsel.

Where defendant was convicted of robbery, the trial court complied with Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 8.05 in allowing defendant to represent himself because defendant was informed of every provision of the rule, and the trial judge also met with defendant in chambers and confirmed his understanding of the charges and the consequences of a conviction; defendant was not entitled to a new trial based on his claim that he had no lawyer to help him, as his appointed counsel was ordered to serve as a standby and interceded for defendant during the trial. Wallace v. State, 957 So. 2d 1047 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Trial counsel's failure to meet appellate counsel at a hearing on post-trial motions was not prejudicial, and therefore was not ineffective assistance of counsel, because defendant was not entitled to judgment notwithstanding the verdict or a new trial. Triplett v. State, 840 So. 2d 727 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Continuance.

In a case involving defendant's sexual battery and fondling of his stepdaughters, an issue relating to the denial of his second motion for a continuance was not heard on review because defendant failed to raise this alleged error in a post-trial motion for a new trial. Palmer v. State, 986 So. 2d 328 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 987 So. 2d 451, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 567 (Miss. 2008).

Hearings.

On a motion for new trial, a hearing is discretionary, and there is no requirement that a criminal defendant be afforded a hearing on such a motion. Jordan v. State, 786 So. 2d 987 (Miss. 2001), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1085, 122 S. Ct. 823, 151 L. Ed. 2d 705 (2002).

Interlocutory appeals.

In a slip and fall case where the trial court granted a JNOV and ordered a new trial, the appellate court lacked jurisdiction to disturb the trial court's conditional order granting a new trial because it was an interlocutory determination that was not the proper subject of an appeal. Coleman v. Jitney Jungle Stores of Am., Inc., 894 So. 2d 610 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Motion allowed.

Defendant was entitled to a new trial as to an aggravated assault count because a retroactive misjoinder occurred as the admission into evidence by stipulation of defendant's prior felony conviction regarding a felon in possession of a knife count, when the evidence was insufficient to sustain the felon in possession count, prejudiced defendant's defense on the aggravated assault count. Williams v. State, 37 So. 3d 717 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

In a case involving aggravated assault and robbery, post-conviction relief was properly granted and a new trial was ordered based on newly discovered evidence under Miss. Code Ann. § 99-39-5(2) where a witness, who identified appellee inmate as a person running from a convenience store after the crimes, later recanted and was shown to have serious mental problems. All of the newly discovered evidence together required a new trial. State v. Bass, 4 So. 3d 353 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari dismissed by 2009 Miss. LEXIS 113 (Miss. Mar. 12, 2009).

Several citizens who were joined by the state filed what the court described as an amicus request for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict, pursuant to Miss. Unif. Crim. R. Cir. Ct. Prac. 10.05, in order to exonerate an innocent defendant who in 1960 was convicted of burglary on false testimony in order to prevent him from being the first African-American to enroll in a state university and who died in jail; although the request was not made within the 10 days of the entry of judgment, rules were made to secure justice, not to defeat it, and thus the appeal of applicants who were denied the opportunity to intervene so that they could oppose the exoneration was dismissed for lack of standing. Gill v. State, 962 So. 2d 552 (Miss. 2007).

Supreme Court of Mississippi reversed defendant's conviction for murder and granted him a new trial; circuit court denied defendant a fair trial by allowing the victim's wife to invoke the Fifth Amendment, admitting unreliable expert testimony, and denying defendant's right to present evidence concerning the victim's tumultous relationship with his wife. Edmonds v. State, — So. 2d —, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 7 (Miss. Jan. 4, 2007), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 955 So. 2d 787, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 349 (Miss. 2007).

If a judgment is entered on the last day of the term of court, a defendant still has 10 days in which to file a motion for a new trial. Presley v. State, 792 So. 2d 950 (Miss. 2001).

Motion improperly denied.

Weight of the evidence supported the State's claim that defendant was in possession of the marijuana found in the vehicle driven by him, as well as in possession of the cocaine before the package was thrown from the vehicle, and the jury was free to evaluate the credibility of this evidence, such that a new trial was not warranted in this case. Davis v. State, 995 So. 2d 767 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 999 So. 2d 374, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 678 (Miss. 2008).

Trial court erred when it told the jury to disregard a couple's counsel's statement that the individual would not be personally liable for any judgment against her as the judge had previously allowed the individual's counsel to state that the individual would be personally responsible for paying whatever amount the jury determined that she owed. Thus, the trial court erred in denying the couple's motion for new trial because the trial judge's error allowed the individual's intimation that she possessed no liability insurance to stand before the jury alone without any response from the couple. Smith v. Crawford, 937 So. 2d 451 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), reversed by 937 So. 2d 446, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 364 (Miss. 2006).

Motion properly denied.

Where defendant admitted to deputies and investigator that he had shot the victim, but claimed the death was an accident, following a minor argument, and that he and the victim were playing with the gun when it discharged, the verdict of manslaughter was not so contrary to the overwhelming weight of the evidence that to allow the conviction to stand would sanction an unconscionable injustice. Barfield v. State, 22 So. 3d 1175 (Miss. 2009).

Circuit court properly denied defendant's motion for a new trial based on defendant's argument that the guilty versicts were based on insufficient evidence and/or were contrary to law or the weight of the evidence because: (1) allowing the conviction for convicted-felon-in-possession-of-firearm charge in violation of Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-5(1) (Rev. 2006) to stand would not have been prejudicial to defendant since all of the evidence pointed to defendant, a prior convicted felon, being in possession of a firearm while not under duress, a conclusion that could have been reached by any rational juror; and (2) since there was conflicting testimony in the case, reasonable and fairminded jurors in the exercise of impartial judgment could have reached different conclusions as to the verdict, thus resulting in the appellate court's finding that there was legally sufficient evidence to convict defendant of motor-vehicle theft under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-17-42(1) (Rev. 2006). Davis v. State, 18 So. 3d 842 (Miss. 2009).

Defendant's argument that the circuit court erred by denying his motion for a new trial because the verdict was against the overwhelming weight of the evidence was without merit because the evidence presented at trial was sufficient to allow a jury to conclude that: (1) the principal murdered the victim; (2) defendant knew that the principal had committed the murder; and (3) defendant knowingly assisted the principal in his attempt to evade the law. Considering the evidence and the testimony given during the trial in the light most favorable to the verdict, the appellate court did not find that the verdict that defendant was guilty of being an accessory after the fact to murder was against the overwhelming weight of the evidence or that the verdict resulted in an unconscionable injustice. Miller v. State, 18 So. 3d 898 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

After defendant was convicted of DUI, first offense, the circuit court properly denied defendant's motion for a new trial because the conviction was supported by substantial evidence; defendant's action of "jumping" through a highway intersection without regard for traffic signs clearly showed a serious lack of judgment and disregard for the safety of defendant and others, which, when coupled with the other evidence, was sufficient to show driving under the influence. Knight v. State, 14 So. 3d 76 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Trial court properly denied defendant's motion for a new trial after defendant was convicted of burglary of a business because the evidence showed that defendant entered a meat processing business with the unlawful intent to steal meat; even though the back door of the business was left open during deer hunting season so that customers could leave their field-dressed deer in the cooler, defendant entered with a purpose outside of the owner's consent. Fulgham v. State, 12 So. 3d 558 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Where law enforcement officers obtained a search warrant to search a camper, where they entered the camper and found three individuals—the camper's owner, defendant, and a third party, where drugs were in plain view on a table in close proximity to defendant upon the law enforcement officers' entry into the camper, and where defendant subsequently confessed that the drugs belonged to her and that she manufactured methamphetamine, the weight of the evidence supported the jury's finding of constructive possession, even though defendant recanted her confession and the camper's owner testified that the drugs did not belong to defendant; because the jury's verdict was not contrary to the weight of the evidence, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a new trial. Cheatham v. State, 12 So. 3d 598 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

In an armed robbery case, a trial court did not err by denying defendant's motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict or a motion for a new trial based on a juror's failure to disclose information regarding his acquaintance with a detective, his being a prior victim of a crime, or his arrest for drug possession because (1) there was nothing to show that the juror recognized the detective who had interviewed the juror about 2 years earlier; (2) although there were general discussions about being fair and impartial, no juror was asked directly if they had been the victim of a crime; and (3) by fighting to keep the juror on the jury after the State challenged him for cause, defendant waived the issue relating to the juror's alleged failure to disclose an arrest for cocaine possession. Eley v. State, 19 So. 3d 124 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 19 So. 3d 82, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 491 (Miss. 2009).

Defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied because jury's verdict did not amount to an unconscionable injustice and because the evidence did not preponderate heavily against the jury's verdict finding defendant guilty of sexual battery involving an eight-year-old boy where the evidence included testimony of the victim, the victim's mother, the nurse who examined the victim on the night of the attack, a serologist who determined that the dried secretions found on the buttocks of the victim were seminal fluid, and members of the police department who participated in the investigation. The victim maintained a largely consistent story from his first reports to his testimony on the stand, and all of the State's witnesses presented testimony that implicated defendant; even though there was some conflicting evidence presented by the defense and the defense presented an alibi, the evidence presented by the State was of such a level that the guilty verdict was not against the overwhelming weight of the evidence. Bolden v. State, 23 So. 3d 491 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 22 So. 3d 1193, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 614 (Miss. 2009).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a JNOV or defendant's motion for a new trial because the evidence was sufficient to support the jury verdict finding defendant guilty of murder under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-19(1)(a) and because the verdict was not contrary to the weight of the evidence where the evidence showed that the half-sister of defendant's ex-wife showed defendant where the ex-wife's boyfriend—the victim—lived, that defendant told his ex-wife's sister not to tell anyone that she showed him where the victim lived, that defendant was furious when he saw that his ex-wife as at the victim's house, that the ex-wife noticed a van similar to that driven by defendant drive by the victim's house, that defendant dropped his ex-wife's half-sister off at home at 1:00 a.m., that the victim was last week alive at 2:00 a.m., that the half-sister tried to call defendant at 3:00 a.m. but he was not at home, that the victim's neighbor noticed a van similar to that belonging to defendant parked in the victim's driveway in the early morning hours, and that defendant threatened his wife that he would kill her and any man with whom he caught her. Parker v. State, 20 So. 3d 702 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 20 So. 3d 680, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 544 (Miss. 2009).

Following defendant's conviction of the sale of a Schedule II controlled substance (cocaine) and the sale of a Schedule I controlled substance (marijuana), the appellate court rejected defendant's argument that the informant who allegedly made the controlled buys obtained the cocaine elsewhere and was attempting to frame him in order to escape prosecution on pending charges. The jury had the responsibility to assess the credibility of the witnesses and to resolve any conflicts in the evidence, and because the narcotics agents' testimony corroborated the informant's testimony regarding the cocaine purchase and because the jury was able to view the video evidence of the transactions, the appellate court found that the evidence supported the verdict and that the trial court committed no abuse of discretion in denying defendant's motion for a new trial. Ricks v. State, 1 So. 3d 943 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Despite contradictory evidence, a motion for a new trial was properly denied in a burglary of a dwelling case because the jury's verdict was not against the overwhelming weight of the evidence and did not result in an unconscionable injustice. The evidence showed that a victim's apartment was entered by force, defendant also entered a bedroom by force, and the victim was punched in the face and suffered injuries inflicted by defendant. Jenkins v. State, 995 So. 2d 839 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

In a case involving sexual battery of a child under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-95, a trial court did not err by denying defendant's request for a new trial or a directed verdict because, although there was no physical evidence against defendant, the victim's testimony was corroborated by a doctor, who found signs of sexual abuse during an examination. Moreover, the verdict did not sanction an unconscionable result. Steadham v. State, 995 So. 2d 835 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Motion for a new trial was properly denied in an armed robbery case under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-79 because the verdict was not so contrary to the overwhelming weight of the evidence that it amounted to an unconscionable injustice where a victim identified defendant as the man who approached her in a store parking lot, demanded money, and tried to stab her. The victim testified that the parking lot was well lit, the victim had a lengthy encounter with defendant, she positively identified him from a photo lineup and later at trial, and a car matching the description given by the victim and registered to defendant's sister was located nearby; moreover, the conviction was still proper, even if the State was unable to prove that defendant obtained money from the victim. Lafont v. State, 9 So. 3d 1143 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 12 So. 3d 531, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 236 (Miss. 2009).

Trial court did to err in denying a motion for a directed verdict, for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or for a new trial because while defendant may have offered evidence and testimony tending to show that the shooting was accidental, the State clearly presented evidence demonstrating that the shooting amounted to aggravated assault under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-7(2)(b). The State presented a 911 transcript showing that defendant was the aggressor and testimony showing that the victim was injured by a gunshot wound to the head. Christian v. State, 998 So. 2d 1019 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

As the trier of fact, the jury found that the overwhelming weight of the evidence showed that defendant deliberately and knowingly shot the husband without authority of law and not in necessary self-defense and thus was guilty of aggravated assault under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-7(2) (Rev. 2006). The court found no error with such finding, as the evidence included that defendant and her husband were fighting, that she shot him, and that he hit her after being shot in an effort to obtain the gun; thus, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's motion for a new trial. Lawrence v. State, 3 So. 3d 754 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 11 So. 3d 1250, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 101 (Miss. 2009).

Defendant was not entitled to a new trial because the verdict finding defendant guilty of murder was not against the overwhelming weight of the evidence since (1) the victim's son, who witnessed the shooting, made consistent statements in court and to other individuals after the shooting about what defendant did and said right before he shot the victim; and (2) the attempted impeachment of the son involved insignificant details that happened prior to the shooting. Mask v. State, 996 So. 2d 106 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 999 So. 2d 374, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 631 (Miss. 2008).

In a child sexual abuse case where a six-year-old victim stated that defendant had taken her into his trailer, told her about sex, and licked her bottom, no new trial was required because the verdict was not against the overwhelming weight of the evidence; the child's statement was admissible into evidence, a neighbor observed the child go into defendant's trailer, and defendant was shown to live near he child. Pierce v. State, 2 So. 3d 641 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 999 So. 2d 1280, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 93 (Miss. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 130 S. Ct. 113, 175 L. Ed. 2d 74, 2009 U.S. LEXIS 5318, 78 U.S.L.W. 3173 (U.S. 2009).

Motion to suppress was properly denied because defendant's Fourth Amendment rights were not violated in a case involving aggravated driving under the influence because there was probable cause for a blood sample taken from defendant based on his behavior after an accident, the fact that he smelled of alcohol and marijuana, and the fact that such items were observed in his car; the blood draw also fell under the exceptions of a search incident to arrest and exigent circumstances. Therefore, the denial of defendant's motion for a new trial or motion for a directed verdict was proper. Vaughn v. State, 972 So. 2d 56 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

In an aggravated driving under the influence case, a denial of defendant's motion for a new trial or motion for a directed verdict was proper because the chain of custody for a blood sample was properly shown from the testimony of those individuals who handled the samples; moreover, defendant offered no evidence of tampering or substitution of the evidence. Vaughn v. State, 972 So. 2d 56 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Motion for a new trial was denied in a case where defendant was identified as the perpetrator in an armed robbery by the victim and another witness; defendant was picked from a photo lineup after a description was given to police of a robber, the victim had observed the robber's face for four minutes, and the victim testified that he would not forget the face of the robber. Brownlee v. State, 972 So. 2d 31 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a new trial after defendant was convicted of possession of a controlled substance with intent to sell as a habitual offender where the verdict was not against the overwhelming weight of the evidence; officers testified that they observed defendant throw a bag out of a car that contained 450.6 grams of marijuana. Baskin v. State, 986 So. 2d 338 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 987 So. 2d 451, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 562 (Miss. 2008).

Circuit court did not err by failing to conduct a post-trial hearing based on an affidavit and sworn testimony of a juror that the jury was pressured to deliver a guilty verdict and that a juror did not disclose that she had been molested as a child because there was no evidence of jury tampering, and the question of whether some jurors coerced others was prohibited under Miss. R. Evid. 606(b); there was no indication or allegation that anyone tampered with the jury or interfered in the deliberation process. The allegation that some unnamed juror was the victim of sexual abuse or molestation was insufficient upon which to base a motion for a new trial because defendant did not ask the jurors during voir dire whether anyone had been the victim of a crime. Foxworth v. State, 982 So. 2d 453 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 981 So. 2d 298, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 241 (Miss. 2008).

Circuit court did not err by admitting an investigator's statement that he had contacted the mother, who told him that the victim had been molested, and therefore defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied, because the investigator's statement was not hearsay under Miss. R. Evid. 801, as he was merely recounting the facts of his investigation and was not offering the testimony as truth of the matter asserted. Foxworth v. State, 982 So. 2d 453 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 981 So. 2d 298, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 241 (Miss. 2008).

Circuit court did not err by admitting the victim's mother's testimony that the victim told her that defendant tried to rape her under the hearsay exception of Miss. R. Evid. 803(25), and therefore defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied, because the circuit court did not err when it weighed the reliability factors, as: (1) no witness testified that the victim had a boyfriend and therefore a motive to lie; (2) the fact that the victim made her statement to her mother did not render the statement, without more, unreliable; (3) the victim's statement came after her mother asked her what was wrong; and (4) there was no indication that the mother provoked the statement or that it was the product of suggestion. Foxworth v. State, 982 So. 2d 453 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 981 So. 2d 298, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 241 (Miss. 2008).

Sufficient evidence supported defendant's conviction for aggravated assault, in violation of Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-7(2)(a), where defendant admitted to discharging a weapon with the intent to scare the victim, and aggravated the conditions of the crime by employing a deadly weapon. Hence, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a new trial. Harris v. State, 970 So. 2d 151 (Miss. 2007).

In a case involving sexual abuse of children, defendant's Sixth Amendment claim was rejected because he failed to show that he was prejudiced by the denial of the right to view the demeanor of the children as they testified via closed circuit television, pursuant to Miss. R. Evid. 617. Therefore, defendant's motions for a mistrial and a new trial were properly denied. Rollins v. State, 970 So. 2d 716 (Miss. 2007).

Trial court did not err in failing to grant defendant's motion for JNOV or, in the alternative, a new trial after defendant was convicted of aggravated assault where it was inescapable that defendant admitted that defendant and a companion had been consuming alcohol and that defendant returned to the car to retrieve a pocket knife, rather than leave, when defendant saw the victim armed with a baseball bat. Lewis v. State, 970 So. 2d 251 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Motion for a new trial was properly denied where defendant was convicted of possession of a controlled substance because he failed to rebut the presumption that he was in constructive possession of drugs found in the trunk of his car; allowing the verdict to stand would not have sanctioned an unconscionable injustice because it was not so contrary to the overwhelming weight of the evidence presented. This was not an exceptional case where the evidence presented weighed heavily against the verdict. Robinson v. State, 967 So. 2d 695 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Evidence was more than adequate to support defendant's sale of a Scheduled II controlled substance conviction in weight and sufficiency because both an officer and a confidential informant identified defendant as the perpetrator on a audio/video recording of the drug sale transaction, and test results introduced at trial confirmed that the substance exchanged was rock cocaine; therefore, defendant's motion for JNOV/new trial was properly denied. Williams v. State, 963 So. 2d 1262 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Trial court did not err by denying defendant's motion for a new trial because the state proved all of the elements of a carjacking; the legislature did not intend Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-117 to be construed so literally as to mean that a person committed a carjacking only when an individual was physically inside the vehicle, and the evidence showed that the victim had just retrieved some money from the vehicle and had her keys in her hand when defendant approached her, defendant demanded the keys from her, snatched them out of her hand, and drove off. Young v. State, 962 So. 2d 110 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Trial court did not err by denying defendant's motions for judgment notwithstanding the verdict and for a new trial after he was convicted of rape, kidnapping, and armed robbery because the evidence, viewed in the light most favorable to the prosecution, showed that: (1) defendant bound the victim and forcibly raped her, threatening her with a knife; (2) DNA testing from the rape kit showed the presence of semen but no sperm in the victim's vagina, consistent with a male donor not reaching ejaculation; (3) defendant forced the victim into her car; and (4) defendant forced the victim to make an ATM withdrawal and give him the cash. Taggart v. State, 957 So. 2d 981 (Miss. 2007).

Conviction for aggravated assault under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-7(2)(b) was supported by the weight of the evidence because witnesses testified that defendant was actively engaged in a drunken fight, a friend of defendant's testified that deadly force was not necessary, defendant admitted wielding a knife, no evidence was presented that the injuries were from another source, and someone observed defendant stab a victim after blinding him with a shirt; therefore, a new trial was not warranted. Lackie v. State, 971 So. 2d 601 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 973 So. 2d 244, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 683 (Miss. 2007).

In a capital murder case, defendant's motion for a new trial/judgment notwithstanding the verdict was properly denied because three victims testified they witnessed an assault on a victim, defendant was observed removing the victim from a trunk of a car and leading him into a cornfield, defendant was observed firing a gun six times at the victim, and defendant made incriminating statements about his role in the murder. Strahan v. State, 955 So. 2d 968 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Where defendant admitted to firing a shot while near or at a victim's front door, witnesses saw him at the scene, he threatened to shoot everyone inside the residence, and there were no bullet holes there earlier in the day, there was sufficient evidence to support a conviction under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-29; therefore, a trial court did not err by refusing to grant a peremptory instruction or by denying defendant's motions for a directed verdict and judgment notwithstanding the verdict and/or a new trial. Miles v. State, 956 So. 2d 349 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Despite serious concerns regarding the weight of the evidence considered by the jury in reaching a decision to convict defendant defendant of capital murder, particularly the lack of substantial direct evidence against defendant, given the inconsistencies in the testimony of the state's key witness, the appellate court could not conclude that the trial court erred in denying defendant's motion for a new trial; therefore, the court declined to find that defendant's conviction was against the overwhelming weight of the evidence. Ross v. State, 954 So. 2d 968 (Miss. 2007).

Defendant convicted of murder was not entitled to a new trial based on allegations that a juror willfully violated the trial court's sequestration instructions by talking to her boyfriend on a cell phone; the communication did not alter the verdict. Lattimore v. State, 958 So. 2d 192 (Miss. 2007).

In a statutory rape case under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-65(1)(b), a motion for a new trial was properly denied because the guilty verdict was not against the overwhelming weight of the evidence; the victim testified regarding penetration by defendant's penis, defendant admitted to having sex with the victim, and the victim's story was corroborated by her friends, and defendant's denials at trial were the only evidence supporting his claim that the two did not have sex. Roles v. State, 952 So. 2d 1043 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Where defendant was convicted of murdering a neighbor in violation of Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-19(1)(a), defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied because the jury decided which evidence and testimony was credible and returned a reasonable verdict. Saucier v. State, 950 So. 2d 262 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Defendant's brief, generalized, and conclusory argument failed to distinguish any particular deficiency in the proof, or to assert how the verdict was contrary to the overwhelming weight of the evidence; accordingly, this issue was procedurally barred. Moore v. State, 958 So. 2d 824 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari dismissed en banc by 966 So. 2d 172, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 552 (Miss. 2007).

Trial court did not err by denying defendant's motion for a new trial because the evidence weighed in the light most favorable to the verdict supported the jury's resolution of the conflicting testimony; the evidence presented in defendant's trial for sexual battery and fondling included: (1) the victim's testimony in graphic detail as to the licking and touching that she endured from defendant; (2) defendant exercised his right to testify and testified that he did nothing wrong to the victim, his stepdaughter, but that the victim just wanted him out of the house; and (3) an investigator testified regarding what defendant stated in his written statement as well as statements defendant made that he did not want in the written statement. Ivy v. State, 949 So. 2d 748 (Miss. 2007).

Where the evidence consisted of an audio and video of defendant participating in a drug transaction, and a confidential informant testified regarding such, there was sufficient evidence to support a conviction under Miss. Code Ann. § 41-29-139(a)(1), despite defendant's assertion that he was out of state at the time and his argument that the informant was not credible due to a prior felony conviction; therefore, his motion for a directed verdict/judgment notwithstanding the verdict was properly denied and a new trial was not warranted since the verdict was not contrary to the overwhelming weight of the evidence. Magee v. State, 951 So. 2d 589 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Evidence was sufficient to support a conviction for being a felon in possession of a firearm where defendant admitted to being the owner of a gun used in a robbery, and he admitted to several prior felony convictions from the state of Kentucky; therefore, a motion for a new trial or judgment notwithstanding the verdict were properly denied. Black v. State, 949 So. 2d 105 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of selling a schedule II controlled substance within 1,500 feet of a church and was not against the overwhelming weight of the evidence because, inter alia: (1) it was clear from the record that an informant did not have drugs on his person when he entered the home of defendant's mother; (2) it was clear that the informant did have drugs when he left her house; (3) a tape indicated that he purchased drugs from a male individual in the mother's home; and (4) the informant specifically identified defendant in court as the dealer; therefore, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motions for a directed verdict, for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict, and for a new trial. Singleton v. State, 948 So. 2d 465 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In an attorney disciplinary matter, a judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or in the alternative a new trial, was properly denied because the attorney was given the opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses when a private reprimand was vacated in favor of a formal hearing, a telephone conference dealt only with a client's failure to appear, prior sanctions against the attorney were properly considered, the evidence was sufficient to support a finding that the attorney violated several ethical rules, and there were no discovery violations shown. Shah v. Miss. Bar, 962 So. 2d 514 (Miss. 2007).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a new trial following her conviction for felony shoplifting, as the uncontroverted evidence was that defendant and a friend entered the store, took items of clothing from the racks, and defendant's friend left the store without paying for the items that defendant had given her. Watson v. State, 939 So. 2d 806 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 939 So. 2d 805, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 592 (Miss. 2006).

In a case where defendant was convicted of possession of marijuana and possession of cocaine, there was no reason for a trial court to grant a peremptory instruction since the evidence was sufficient to show that defendant, a passenger in the vehicle, was in constructive possession of drugs found under the seat where an officer saw him attempting to conceal a package, the driver testified that defendant had the bag containing the drugs when he entered the vehicle, and defendant stated that the items did not belong to him when the officer located them, even though he was unable to see inside the vehicle. Walker v. State, 962 So. 2d 39 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 962 So. 2d 38, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 419 (Miss. 2007).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a new trial after he was convicted of third offense felony driving under the influence, in violation of Miss. Code Ann. § 63-11-30(1)(a)(c), where a reasonable juror could have found defendant guilty based on the evidence presented; the arresting officers testified that they observed defendant unsteady on his feet, with red, watery eyes, a dazed stare, and slurred speech. Starkey v. State, 941 So. 2d 899 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Jury's verdict finding defendant guilty of statutory rape was not against the overwhelming weight of the evidence and the evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of statutory rape because, inter alia: (1) the victim testified that she was younger than 14 when defendant had sex with her on several occasions; (2) defendant was 44 years old when the rapes occurred and the victim was 12 so there was more than 24 months age difference between the victim and defendant; and (3) the victim's mother testified that she saw defendant have sex with the victim several times; thus, the trial court did not abuse its discretion when it overruled defendant's motion for a new trial or for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Terrell v. State, 952 So. 2d 998 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for JNOV or, in the alternative, a new trial where the state presented sufficient evidence linking defendant to cocaine; an officer testified that he found no contraband in his patrol car when he performed a routine inspection before beginning his shift on the day defendant was arrested. Tatum v. State, 955 So. 2d 377 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 956 So. 2d 228, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 219 (Miss. 2007).

Defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied where the state presented sufficient evidence from which a jury could reasonably conclude that he was under the influence of intoxicating liquor to the degree that his motor skills necessary to properly operate a vehicle were impaired; under Miss. Code Ann. § 63-11-30(1)(a) and (b), the state was not required to prove that he had a certain blood-alcohol content. Bates v. State, 950 So. 2d 220 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

There was sufficient evidence to sustain a conviction for possession of a firearm by a felon under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-5(1) based on the fact that defendant was found with a gun in his waistband; it was irrelevant that he was not seen shooting the gun, and the jury could have disbelieved his self-defense claim or found that he retained the weapon for a significant period after the danger had passed. Hatten v. State, 938 So. 2d 365 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

In a murder case, a motion for a new trial was properly denied because the verdict was not so contrary to the overwhelming weight of the evidence as to constitute an unconscionable injustice; there was conflicting testimony that defendant intended to hurt his grandfather, and he admitted to killing his grandfather, though he, the only witness to the actual crime, claimed self-defense. Jones v. State, 938 So. 2d 312 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Defendant's motions for a directed verdict and a new trial were properly denied in a murder case because the evidence of defendant's guilt was overwhelming, as bullets retrieved from the victim's body were fired from a gun with the same serial number as the gun defendant had retrieved from a pawn shop two days prior to the shooting, a witness identified defendant as the man he saw running from the direction of the shooting and toss an object into a pond, and a palm print from the hood of the victim's car matched defendant's left hand print. Cotton v. State, 933 So. 2d 1048 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

In a manslaughter case, defendant was not entitled to a new trial based on an assertion that the verdict was against the overwhelming weight of the evidence; the evidence actually suggested very strongly that defendant did not shoot a victim at close range in self-defense. Speagle v. State, 956 So. 2d 237 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 957 So. 2d 1004, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 296 (Miss. 2007).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict or a motion for a new trial as sufficient evidence existed to convict defendant of murder in violation of Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-19 as defendant wrote goodbye notes to his daughters asking for forgiveness and the two daughters testified that defendant stabbed the victim and then stabbed himself. Wash v. State, 931 So. 2d 672 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari dismissed by 937 So. 2d 450, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 544 (Miss. 2006).

Appellate court affirmed the trial court and deferred to its assessment of the credibility of the witnesses and held that the trial court did not err by denying defendant's motion for a directed verdict or motion for a new trial because despite defendant's testimony to the contrary, many witnesses testified that he was the shooter. Smith v. State, 946 So. 2d 785 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 947 So. 2d 960, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 55 (Miss. 2007).

In an aggravated assault case, a motion for a new trial was not warranted because the guilty verdict was not against the overwhelming weight of the evidence where the jury heard the two versions of events relating to a shooting, including witnesses who helped the victim and defendant's alibi witness. Parks v. State, 950 So. 2d 184 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Appellate court affirmed the denial of defendant's motion for a new trial because the verdict was not so contrary to the overwhelming weight of the evidence; two 10-year-old children testified that defendant killed the victim with a baseball bat, and even if the assault was in self-defense or defense of others, defendant acted unreasonably when he struck the victim in the head with the bat more than once. Cooper v. State, 911 So. 2d 665 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Appellate court affirmed the trial court's verdict and the denial of plaintiffs' motion for a new trial; under the doctrine of res ipsa loquitor,the jury was not bound to make an inference of negligence. Since the employee testified to the procedures he took before the trailer broke free, the jury's finding was not so contrary to the overwhelming weight of the evidence that to allow it to stand would be to sanction an unconscionable in justice. Cooper v. State, 911 So. 2d 665 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Trial court did not err in denying a defendant's motion for new trial as two witnesses testified to defendant shooting the victim and it was the jury's exclusive role to weigh the credibility of witnesses and to resolve conflicts in the evidence. Keys v. State, 909 So. 2d 757 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), remanded by 930 So. 2d 1263, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 1034 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Appellate court affirmed the denial of defendant's motion for new trial as his conviction for criminal trespass was not against the overwhelming weight of the evidence where the evidence was uncontroverted that defendant did not have permission to enter the victim's shed, the victim knew the defendant prior to the night in question, she saw him twice during the evening in question, and she had an opportunity to observe his car several times that night; the jury could give great weight to her testimony when she said it was the defendant who stole the tools. Hill v. State, 929 So. 2d 338 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Defendant's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict or, alternatively, a new trial, was properly denied, as his argument that he did not "knowingly" receive the stolen property, just after the subject burglary, was controverted by the testimony of the three men who did commit the burglary, and the jury verdict was not against the overwhelming weight of the evidence given the identity of the stolen items and the testimony of said three men, who stated that the stolen items were traded to defendant for marijuana. In sum, the jury was presented with two versions of what happened, and found the State's version more credible, and accordingly, allowing the verdict to stand did not constitute an unconscionable injustice. Primas v. State, 915 So. 2d 1095 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Defendant's motion for a new trial was denied where, even though the minor victims' testimony slightly differed regarding the events of the sexual abuse, the word of the victim of a sex crime, even if unsupported, was sufficient to support a guilty verdict when that testimony had not been discredited or contradicted by credible evidence; based on the evidence presented, the jury decided which testimony to accept and which to reject and returned a reasonable verdict. Bradley v. State, 921 So. 2d 385 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

After the victim's partially burned and decomposing body was found in a dump, defendant admitted that he shot a man in the head and burned him; a reasonable inference could be made that defendant shot the victim. The State met its burden to prove the elements of simple murder, and the trial court did not abuse its discretion by denying defendant's motion for a new trial. Anderson v. State, 914 So. 2d 1239 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari dismissed by 927 So. 2d 750, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 163 (Miss. 2006).

Appellate court affirmed defendant's convictions for capital murder and aggravated assault in violation of Miss. Code Ann. §§ 97-3-19(2)(e), 97-3-7(2)(a) and the denial of his for JNOV or in the alternative, a new trial, as the surviving victim testified that he saw defendant set the house on fire and spray him with lighter fluid after he knocked the other victim unconscious, who later died from smoke inhalation. McIntosh v. State, 917 So. 2d 78 (Miss. 2005).

Appellate court dismissed defendant's appeal because defendant failed to file his motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or in the alternative, a new trial within 10 days of the judgment as required by Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 10.05, and the time to file an appeal was only tolled if the motion was timely filed. Moore v. State, — So. 2d —, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 777 (Miss. Ct. App. Oct. 25, 2005), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 942 So. 2d 251, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 588 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Although defendant argued that his motion for a new trial should have been sustained because a witness's testimony was not sufficiently corroborated to sustain a guilty verdict, defendant was obligated to fully place the issue before the trial court as opposed to seeking to develop it in his brief to the appellate court; the failure of defendant to properly present the issue to the trial court for its consideration meant that it was not properly preserved for appellate review. Grimes v. State, 909 So. 2d 1184 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 901 So. 2d 1273, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 338 (Miss. 2005).

Court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's motion for a new trial after he was convicted of murdering his ex-wife and daughter because the facts placed him at the murder scene and the testimony of his six-year-old son placed him in the house at the time. Richardson v. State, 918 So. 2d 760 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Although defendant argued that his motion for a new trial should have been sustained because a witness's testimony was not sufficiently corroborated to sustain a guilty verdict, defendant was obligated to fully place the issue before the trial court as opposed to seeking to develop it in his brief to the appellate court; the failure of defendant to properly present the issue to the trial court for its consideration meant that it was not properly preserved for appellate review. Grimes v. State, 909 So. 2d 1184 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 901 So. 2d 1273, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 338 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court properly denied defendant's motion for a new trial where the victim's identification of defendant coupled with other quality identification evidence was ample to support all three verdicts; the jury's verdict was not contrary to the overwhelming weight of the evidence and allowing it to stand would not sanction an unconscionable injustice. Alexander v. State, 910 So. 2d 704 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Fair minded jurors could have accepted defendant's assertion that there was no common plan to commit a carjacking in Mississippi, and that he was merely a bystander. They also could have inferred from his actions of stealing a car earlier, on the same date, with his companions that did conduct the carjacking, that he was an active participant; thus, his admission to the earlier theft was admissible under Miss. R. Evid. 404(b), and in conjunction with the other evidence of his presence at the scene, his motions for a directed verdict and for a new trial were properly denied. Washington v. State, 912 So. 2d 996 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

In defendant's murder trial, the evidence showed that the victim, who had struck defendant two days earlier in a bar fight, was struck by gunshots in a manner that indicated he was facing away from the person who shot him and was possibly running or bent over while working on his car when struck by four gunshots. It was reasonable for the jury to make the determination that defendant was seeking revenge, the evidence indicated defendant instructed his companion to stop upon observing the victim, and the jury could have reasonably concluded that defendant did not fear for his safety as he initially approached the victim; thus, the jury's verdict was not against the overwhelming weight of the evidence and defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied. Knox v. State, 912 So. 2d 1004 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 921 So. 2d 344, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 686 (Miss. 2005).

Record reflected that three individuals, the victim and two eyewitnesses, testified regarding defendant's participation in the parking lot robbery. The victim and one of said witnesses positively identified defendant from a pretrial photo array and in court, while the third witness could only say that be believed defendant was the assailant; thus, where each witness was subjected to cross-examination by two separate defense counsels and gave similar accounts of the robbery, defendant's motion for a new trial or judgment notwithstanding the verdict, based on insufficient evidence, was properly denied. Bynum v. State, 929 So. 2d 324 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), affirmed by 929 So. 2d 312, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 261 (Miss. 2006).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a new trial where he was convicted of the sale or transfer of cocaine. It was clear that after receiving the testimony from both a confidential informant (CI), who purchased the drugs, and defendant, that the jury found the CIs testimony more credible; further, an audio tape of the transaction and the testimony of a police office who prepared the informant, and listened to the transaction, also provided sufficient evidence to sustain defendant's conviction. Kelly v. State, 910 So. 2d 535 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to grant a new trial because (1) defendant admitted that at least some of the marijuana found at the scene of the arrest belonged to him; and (2) an informant and law enforcement officers established that defendant was in possession of marijuana and participating in what defendant believed to be a sale of marijuana. Tate v. State, 912 So. 2d 919 (Miss. 2005).

Where during a difficult birth, the child incurred a condition called shoulder dystocia, and later suffered from Erb's Palsy, the physician's testimony, as well as his expert's testimony was that the physician was not negligent. Moreover, portions of the child's testimony suggested that the physician was not negligent in electing not to perform a cesarean section; accordingly, a reasonable hypothetical juror heard sufficient evidence to determine that the physician was not negligent and the trial court did not err by denying the child's motion for new trial. Brumfield v. Langston, 906 So. 2d 48 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Defendant maintained that the State failed to offer any credible evidence that he committed the murder of his wife with deliberate design or malice aforethought. However, defendant's sister's finance testified that the next day, defendant told him that he had "killed his wife," and that he had done it at the old house, and defendant's sister also testified that defendant admitted having killed his wife; thus, there was no abuse of the trial court's discretion in denying defendant's motion for a new trial based on an alleged faulty jury instruction, or a juror's alleged failure to have disclosed her status as a past crime victim during voir dire. Gibson v. State, 895 So. 2d 185 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

At the hearing on defendant's motion for a new trial, the juror testified that she did not know why she did not respond when asked if anyone knew defendant, adding that she did not know defendant, only that she knew of him from seeing him around the community and was aware he had dated her daughter some 10 years earlier. The juror testified that she held no bias or hard feelings towards defendant, and the trial court properly found incredible, defendant's testimony that he was unaware of the juror's presence on the jury until after trial, and found it more likely that defendant believed the juror would have been a favorable juror, and therefore he did not challenge her; thus, the denial of defendant's motion for a new trial on the alleged basis the juror withheld information and precluded defendant from having an impartial jury was not an abuse of discretion. Doss v. State, 906 So. 2d 836 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In a case involving the destruction of trees, a trial court did not err in denying a motion for a new trial based on a failure to allow expert testimony because such testimony was not admissible to determine whether punitive damages were appropriate. Smith v. Parkerson Lumber, Inc., 888 So. 2d 1197 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In a case involving the destruction of trees, a trial court did not err in failing to grant a new trial based on a failure to allow a challenge for cause for a juror that knew one of the parties; the right to an impartial jury was not violated, and there was no prejudice shown since a peremptory challenge was ultimately used. Smith v. Parkerson Lumber, Inc., 888 So. 2d 1197 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Appellate court upheld a jury verdict in favor of a doctor sued for medical malpractice in connection with the death of a patient who was treated for a stabbing wound. In light of conflicting evidence, the jury found that plaintiffs had failed to prove that the doctor had breached the applicable standard of care; plaintiffs were not entitled to a new trial. Perkins v. Dauterive, 882 So. 2d 773 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Evidence proved beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant murdered the victim because (1) the victim had various bruises upon her body when she was admitted to the hospital; (2) the victim's blood and urine alcohol content were zero when she was admitted to the hospital; (3) defendant had two prior convictions for domestic abuse upon the victim; (4) the doctor performing the autopsy determined the cause of the victim's death to be blunt force trauma to the abdomen, leading to necrosis of the bowel; and (5) defendant's evidence contradicting the State's version of events that the victim was murdered and did not die from alcohol or acetaminophen toxicity was not so strong that reasonable and fair-minded jurors could only have found defendant not guilty; thus, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a directed verdict, or his motion for a judgment notwithstanding a verdict or a new trial. Moses v. State, 893 So. 2d 258 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

When the evidence presented by the State was taken together with all reasonable inferences, there was more than sufficient credible evidence in support of the court's denial of defendant's motions for judgment notwithstanding the verdict (JNOV) and a new trial; confidential informant identified defendant as the person who sold marijuana to a special agent. In addition, the special agent who purchased the marijuana also identified defendant as the individual who sold the marijuana to him. Anderson v. State, 904 So. 2d 973 (Miss. 2004).

Even if the jury had believed defendant's story that the gun went off by accident, they could have found him responsible for his wife's murder using a deadly weapon in a manner likely to kill or seriously injure his victim. Hitting a person in the head with a loaded gun was enough to indicate an intent to act in an extremely dangerous manner and the use of a pistol, a deadly weapon, in such a manner could have produced injury or even death without it's necessarily being fired; thus, defendant's motions for directed verdict and for a new trial were properly denied. Marbra v. State, 904 So. 2d 1169 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In a medical malpractice trial, where a juror submitted an affidavit indicating that a nurse on the jury had told members of the jury that the doctor could lose his medical license if they did not vote for him, the court found that the information in the affidavit did not go to the material issue in the case concerning breach of the applicable standard of care. A new trial was not warranted, because there was no reasonable possibility that the nurse's information swayed the other eight majority jurors to ignore the copious evidence legitimately presented in the case and to vote for the doctor. Perkins v. Dauterive, 882 So. 2d 773 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Both defendant and the confidential informant (CI) testified that defendant asked the CI if he worked for law enforcement, and that the CI replied that he did not. Based on Mississippi precedent, the CIs actions were not improper and defendant's attempt to attack the CIs credibility on that basis failed. Defendant's other arguments as to the credibility of the CI, relating to the CI's past record and his payment from law enforcement for making the controlled buys was for the jury to determine, and given the videotape and other evidence, defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied. Dunlap v. State, 883 So. 2d 145 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. dismissed, 893 So. 2d 1061 (Miss. 2005).

Where defendant pulled out a gun and fired a shot at his live-in girlfriend, the evidence was sufficient to uphold his conviction for aggravated assault and possession of a firearm by a convicted felon; an officer recovered the handgun directly behind defendant's house and three witnesses testified that defendant shot the gun at least three times. The trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's motion for a new trial as the jury's verdict was not against the overwhelming weight of the evidence. Griffin

v. State, 883 So. 2d 1201 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Where the child-victim told her mother that defendant had sexually abused her and the medical evidence showed that she suffered a vaginal tear indicative of forced penetration by an adult male, the evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of sexual battery. The trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for JNOV, in the alternative for a new trial. Perry v. State, 904 So. 2d 1122 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court properly denied defendant's motion for new trial where, although the appellate court's instructions to the circuit court did not specify in detail how the hearing was to be conducted, the circuit court, did follow the mandate of the appellate court as far as it went and did an admirable job of reassembling and polling the jury; the trial judge inspected the docket sheet and verified that the word "children" was not included, and the passage of time did not unfairly prejudice defendant. James v. State, 912 So. 2d 982 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Where the child-victims testified as to several incidents of sexual abuse spanning the course of several years and police found items in defendant's home that the victims alleged were used during their sexual encounters, including a pornographic tape, condoms, and some lubricant, the evidence was sufficient to support defendant's conviction for five counts of statutory rape, one count of sexual battery, and three counts of fondling. Defendant was not entitled to a new trial. Moses v. State, 885 So. 2d 730 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for new trial or judgment notwithstanding the verdict, as a drug dealer purchased drugs from defendant, and the money's marked funds and cocaine were found in defendant's possession at the time of his arrest. Nobles v. State, 879 So. 2d 1067 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for new trial as based on the employee's opinion that defendant was the man seen in a videotape stealing cartons of cigarettes, and the videotape was shown to the jury; thus, the verdict was not against the overwhelming weight of the evidence Ratliff v. State, 879 So. 2d 1062 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Defendant was properly denied a new trial where there was no evidence that defendant ever made a motion for a new trial; it was clear that he did not orally request a new trial after the jury verdict was delivered, and the matter of evidentiary weight was waived by the failure to move for a new trial. Stewart v. State, 879 So. 2d 1089 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

There was substantial evidence in the record to support defendant's conviction for murder (1) there was DNA evidence on defendant's clothing; (2) a witness testified that defendant confessed to killing the victim; and (3) another witness, the hotel manager, placed defendant at the hotel in the time period that the victim was killed. Because there was substantial evidence to support defendant's conviction, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's motion for a new trial. Young v. State, — So. 2d —, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 588 (Miss. May 27, 2004), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 891 So. 2d 813, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 40 (Miss. 2005).

In defendant's trial for resisting arrest and possession of a firearm by a convicted felon, defendant's motion for new trial was properly denied where the arresting officers both testified that defendant pointed a chrome-colored pistol at them during the initial struggle, a third officer testified to finding a chrome-colored pistol in residents' yard near the scene of the altercation, and the resident testified to having heard an object hit the roof about the time of the incident. Harvey v. State, 875 So. 2d 1133 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Given the corroborated testimony of defendant's daughter and the results of the sexual abuse examination, there was more than sufficient evidence in the record to support the guilty verdict of sexual battery against defendant; therefore, the findings of the trial judge, sitting as the jury, were neither manifestly wrong nor clearly erroneous, and the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a new trial. Wilson v. State, 891 So. 2d 237 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 892 So. 2d 824 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for new trial as the evidence at trial indicated that the child died from blunt force trauma, was sexually assaulted, was alive when her mother left the home, and that defendant was the only adult with the child when the child died. Gilmore v. State, 872 So. 2d 744 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a new trial as given the victim's statements, and the corroborating testimony from the victim's doctor and school counselor, the verdict was not so contrary to the overwhelming weight of the evidence that to allow it to stand would sanction an "unconscionable injustice." Davis v. State, 878 So. 2d 1020 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 67 (Miss. 2004), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 125 S. Ct. 880, 160 L. Ed. 2d 773 (2005).

New trial was properly denied to defendant where defendant was seen stooped over, peering into a window, after which he ran and was caught with his zipper down and underwear exposed; the jury's verdict reflected the State's version of the events, such that the appellate court could not find that an unconscionable injustice had resulted. Ledford v. State, 874 So. 2d 995 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 882 So. 2d 772 (Miss. 2004).

Where nine-year-old victim testified that defendant kissed the victim on her lips, touched the victim's breasts, asked the victim if it felt good, and told her not to tell anyone, while defendant asserted the touching was not sexually motivated, credibility was a jury issue, the evidence was sufficient to sustain defendant's conviction for unlawful touching of a child for lustful purposes, and defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied. Smith v. State, 867 So. 2d 276 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Confidential informant's testimony was not the sole testimony relied upon in identifying defendant as the person who sold the substance to the first agent, as the first agent testified that defendant was the person who sold the cocaine, a second agent testified to recognizing the voices of the first agent and the informant over the transmitter, and a local officer testified to recognizing defendant's voice over the transmitter; thus, defendant's argument that anyone present at defendant's business premises at the time was rejected, and a new trial was properly denied. Price v. State, 865 So. 2d 408 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Defendant's motion for a mistrial was denied in a case involving receiving stolen property because a guilty verdict was not so contrary to the overwhelming weight of the evidence that allowing it to stand would have sanctioned an unconscionable injustice; several witnesses testified that defendant tried to sell a large amount of irregular money orders over the course of several days. Massey v. State, 863 So. 2d 1019 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's motion for a new trial where, considering the evidence presented by the State in support of defendant's conviction, and its substantial weight against defendant, the verdict was not so contrary to the overwhelming weight of the evidence that allowing it to stand would sanction an unconscionable injustice. Purnell v. State, 878 So. 2d 124 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 67 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court did not err in granting defendant's motion for a new trial where the evidence was sufficient for the jury to find defendant guilty of grand larceny; defendant's explanation for possessing the stolen tank was neither reasonable nor credible, and the verdict was not against the overwhelming weight of the evidence. Ray v. State, 864 So. 2d 1031 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In a homicide case, defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied because the guilty verdict was not against the overwhelming weight of the evidence; the evidence showed that defendant was the only person with a child who suffocated, experts testified that the child could not have died in the manner described by defendant, and defendant became angry when told that an autopsy of the child was performed. Starns v. State, 867 So. 2d 227 (Miss. 2003).

Each of the minor victims testified to being fondled by defendant and the testimony of the minor victims was corroborated and given credence by defendant's statements to the police that defendant had homosexual tendencies and defendant's admissions to touching the genital area of each of the minor victims; thus, the evidence was sufficient to sustain defendant's convictions for fondling, and a new trial was not warranted. Poe v. State, 872 So. 2d 686 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 873 So. 2d 1032 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court properly denied defendant's motion for a directed verdict, judgment notwithstanding the verdict, and motion for a new trial because the State offered evidence on each element of burglary, where a neighbor saw defendant entering and exiting the victim's home, a deputy testified that defendant admitted to being in the victim's home, and the victim testified that she was unable to identify any particular items as having been stolen but noticed that the drawers to her chest had been rifled and were in disarray. Cortez v. State, 876 So. 2d 1026 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 66 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court was correct in denying a motion for a new trial where viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to the construction company, it would appear that the "mystery" third flagman seen by the officer was actually a flagman warning him to stop; this appeared to be the same conclusion the jury reached by coming to the verdict it returned. Estate of Carter v. Phillips & Phillips Constr. Co., 860 So. 2d 332 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Evidence presented at trial was sufficient to permit the verdict of murder found by the jury and deny defendant's motion for a new trial where the facts indicated that when the victim and defendant began to argue, defendant retrieved a gun, which discharged and struck the victim in the head, fatally wounding her; defendant stopped the vehicle and shoved the victim out of the car onto the road where she was struck by another vehicle. Fairley v. State, 871 So. 2d 1282 (Miss. 2003).

Defendant's right to a fair trial was not violated when a trial judge rephrased a question posed by the prosecution for purposes of clarity because the act did not show bias or a deliberate attempt to influence the jury; therefore, there was no reason to grant a motion for a new trial. Quinn v. State, 873 So. 2d 1033 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 873 So. 2d 1032 (Miss. 2004).

Defendant's motion for a new trial after a conviction for sexual battery without consent was properly denied because the verdict was not against the great weight of the evidence; a victim's testimony was adequately corroborated by another person present in the room, and the question of whether the victim's inaction constituted consent (the minor victim was intoxicated and was afraid to object) was a question for the jury. Seigfried v. State, 869 So. 2d 1040 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 870 So. 2d 666 (Miss. 2004).

In a murder case, defendant's motion for new trial was properly denied, because there was no showing that the verdict constituted an unconscionable injustice, as the State presented evidence that the victim had been shot with a .38 caliber gun and that defendant owned such a gun which compared favorably to the bullet by means of a ballistics test, and defendant failed to present any evidence that would warrant a new trial. Rinehart v. State, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 558 (Miss. Oct. 23, 2003), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 883 So. 2d 573, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1228 (Miss. 2004).

Defendant's motions for a directed verdict and for a new trial were properly denied and the evidence was sufficient to support defendant's conviction for murder where defendant admitted killing the victim, and his accomplice's testimony evidenced the conspirators' premeditated design. Roy v. State, 878 So. 2d 84 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 67 (Miss. 2004).

Newly discovered evidence.

Mere fact that the confidential informant (CI) had one conviction and one criminal charge on her record was inadequate for a prima facie showing that the CI exchanged her testimony against defendant for a favorable disposition of said charges. Defendant did ask the CI about her motivations for acting as a CI and she stated that she did it for the money and to help alleviate the area's drug problem; defendant was not entitled to a new trial.

Fuller v. State, 910 So. 2d 674 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

In a postconviction petition involving a rape conviction, newly discovered evidence that a victim left a bar with a man fitting an inmate's description several days before an alleged rape, was admissible because it was evidence of prior relations between the parties; therefore, a trial court should have granted the inmate's petition for relief. Hunt v. State, 877 So. 2d 503 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 66 (Miss. 2004).

In a rape case, a trial court should have granted an inmate's petition for postconviction relief based on newly discovered evidence because the testimony of a witness corroborated the inmate's allegation that the parties engaged in consensual sex after meeting in a bar, the testimony of other witnesses would have cast a doubt regarding whether or not the victim was raped, the new evidence was material and not merely impeaching, and the fact that one witness was named during trial did not mean that defense counsel failed to exercise due diligence. Hunt v. State, 877 So. 2d 503 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 66 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's motion for a new trial where the trial court had the benefit of viewing the witnesses during their testimony and concluded that the evidence was not sufficient to warrant a new trial. Williams v. State, 854 So. 2d 1077 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

The trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for new trial on the ground that his codefendant admitted to the defendant that he had testified falsely about the defendant's participation in the crime at the issue since disregarding the codefendant's allegedly false testimony, there was sufficient evidence to support the defendant's conviction. Hammonds v. State, 734 So. 2d 295 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Preservation for review.

Because defendant never filed a motion for a new trial or a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, defendant did not bring the issue that the verdict might have been against the overwhelming weight of the evidence to the attention of the trial court, and thus it could not be raised for the first time on appeal; however, procedural bar aside, the State showed that defendant possessed the drugs in question for purposes of Miss. Code Ann. § 41-29-139 and defendant did not bring forward any contradictory evidence and rested after the State's case, and thus the verdict was not so contrary to the overwhelming weight of the evidence. Harris v. State, 977 So. 2d 1248 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Sufficiency of evidence.

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a new trial because the evidence was sufficient to support defendant's conviction for robbery when defendant pointed a gun at the victim and demanded money, which he ultimately got; the verdict was not against the overwhelming weight of the evidence because the victim consistently identified defendant as her attacker. Williams v. State, 40 So. 3d 630 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a new trial because the jury was properly instructed on circumstantial evidence, and its verdict was supported by the overwhelming weight of the evidence; two doctors testified that the child's injury could have only been caused by a high-energy impact and that defendant's explanations of how the injuries occurred were not plausible, and one of the doctors testified that he saw multiple red flags indicating child abuse. Rutland v. State, 60 So. 3d 187 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), affirmed by 60 So. 3d 137, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 152 (Miss. 2011).

Defendant was properly denied a motion for a new trial because the evidence was sufficient to convict him of aggravated assault since witnesses testified that defendant had threatened to kill the victim for taking his drugs, and that, after following the victim in a car, defendant approached the car, asked the victim as to the whereabouts of his drugs, and then shot the victim. Drummond v. State, 33 So. 3d 507 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Defendant was properly denied a motion for a new trial because the evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of simple robbery since a sandwich shop clerk identified defendant from a photographic lineup, and defendant's wife corroborated the clerk's identification testimony that defendant had rough-looking hands, a gap in his teeth, and spoke with a stutter. Sanders v. State, 32 So. 3d 1214 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 42 So. 3d 24, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 433 (Miss. 2010).

Where an officer saw a vehicle speeding with an expired tag, he activated his blue lights and defendant led him on high speed chase until he crashed; the officer identified defendant as a former classmate. Defendant's conviction for fleeing a law enforcement officer in a motor vehicle, in violation of Miss. Code Ann. § 97-9-72, was not against the weight of the evidence; therefore, the trial court did not err by denying his motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict or a new trial. Cole v. State, 8 So. 3d 250 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Defendant confessed to police that he choked the victim, duct taped a plastic bag around his head to suffocate the victim, placed the victim's body in the trunk of his car, and dumped the body in the woods; a doctor testified that the victim's death was caused by strangulation and suffocation. The Supreme Court of Mississippi held that the evidence was sufficient to support defendant's conviction for murder and kidnapping; therefore, the trial court did not err by denying defendant's motion for a new trial. Nelson v. State, 10 So. 3d 898 (Miss. 2009).

For purposes of a new trial, a guilty verdict in a sexual battery case was not against the overwhelming weight of the evidence because it was up to a jury to assess the reliability of a victim's sister, who testified on the issue of penetration; moreover, even though defendant's seminal fluid on the victim's body did not prove penetration, the testimony of the sister and of police detectives regarding defendant's admission of other instances of oral sex established that element of the crime. Singleton v. State, 16 So. 3d 742 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

In a joint trial for the sale of cocaine, the trial court did not err in denying defendant one's motion for a new trial because despite an informant's criminal record and history of substance abuse, the jury determined that the informant was a credible witness. Thus, the State's evidence was sufficient to support the conviction. Miller v. State, 17 So. 3d 1109 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 17 So. 3d 99, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 456 (Miss. 2009).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a new trial because the evidence supported defendant's convictions for touching a child for lustful purposes and kidnapping; the victim testified as to what transpired and identified both defendant and defendant's vehicle. Nix v. State, 8 So. 3d 141 (Miss. 2009).

Trial court did not err when it denied defendant's motion for a new trial where the jury's verdict was not against the overwhelming weight of the evidence; the victim's testimony regarding the incidents of sexual battery was never discredited, and all other witness testimony was consistent with the victim's account, and the fact that the jury did not believe defendant's theory of the case did not render the verdict untenable. Caldwell v. State, 6 So. 3d 1076 (Miss. 2009).

Defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied where the evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of aggravated assault where defendant attempted to purposely or knowingly cause bodily injury to the law enforcement officers; defendant was described as agitated, irate, and hostile, and he made slashing motions at the deputies with a knife, and he was holding his son in front of him as a shield. Babb v. State, 17 So. 3d 100 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 17 So. 3d 99, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 440 (Miss. 2009).

Taking as true the evidence which supported the verdict, including the statements of the victim, her mother, the Department of Human Services social worker, the doctor who examined the victim, and the nurse who completed the rape kit, the jury's finding that defendant was guilty of the statutory rape of the victim was not so contrary to the overwhelming weight of the evidence that to allow it to stand would sanction unconscionable injustice. Stevenson v. State, 13 So. 3d 314 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 14 So. 3d 731, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 360 (Miss. 2009).

Defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied where defendant possessed the stolen items before the items were discovered stolen, and the temporal proximity supported an inference of guilt; there was undisputed evidence that defendant possessed some of the stolen items two days before the burglary was discovered and the State produced evidence that showed that defendant possessed all of the larger items which had been stolen, plus the various tools, which were on the list of stolen items; testimony placed defendant at the scene of the crime during the time period in which the burglary occurred. Jones v. State, 995 So. 2d 146 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Where the fourteen-year-old victim testified that she was visiting her grandparent's house when defendant inappropriately touched her, the evidence was sufficient to support the jury's verdict convicting defendant of lustful touching of a child pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 97-5-23; the victim never returned to her grandparent's home after the alleged incident occurred. While the victim delayed three weeks in reporting the alleged incident, her actions were consistent with the conduct of a person victimized by a sex crime; therefore, the trial court did not err by denying defendant's motion for a new trial. Massey v. State, 992 So. 2d 1161 (Miss. 2008).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a new trial because defendant's assertion that there was no positive identification of him as the shooter was patently without merit where six witnesses identified defendant as the shooter in court during his murder trial. Jordan v. State, 995 So. 2d 94 (Miss. 2008).

Defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied where the evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of armed robbery, Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-79; witness testimony identified defendant as one of the co-participants in the armed robbery and the accomplice testimony was reasonable and not improbable or self-contradictory. Dorsey v. State, 986 So. 2d 1080 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Defendant's argument, in his motion for new trial and on appeal, that the verdict convicting him of felony driving under the influence was against the overwhelming weight of the evidence was without merit, because the appellate court had to accept the evidence which supported the verdict as true; the evidence included the testimony of one officer that defendant's speech was slurred and that he had poor balance, and the testimony of two other officers that his eyes were red and that he smelled of alcohol. Brooks v. State, 999 So. 2d 408 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 999 So. 2d 852, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 48 (Miss. 2009).

Defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied where, given the evidence produced at trial, upholding the guilty verdict would not sanction an unconscionable injustice. Lamar v. State, 983 So. 2d 364 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

In a challenge to the weight of the evidence, regarding defendant's motion for a new trial, her argument centered around her contention that there was no evidence that she caused the fire, thereby causing the death of the victim; also, she maintained that the evidence showed she was not at home before the fire was noticed and reported. Because of the many inconsistencies in the various statements of what happened the night of the fire, not to mention defendant's confessions, allowing the verdict finding her guilty of simple murder under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-19(1)(a) to stand did not sanction an unconscionable injustice; therefore, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's motion for a new trial. Colburn v. State, 990 So. 2d 206 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 994 So. 2d 186, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 472 (Miss. 2008).

Issue relating to a new trial was procedurally barred in a murder case because defendant simply incorporated by reference all facts, arguments, and authorities as set out in his issues concerning the failure to grant a directed verdict, the failure to submit the issue of manslaughter to the jury, and the denial of his peremptory instruction. These all related to the legal sufficiency of the evidence, but did not support a determination of whether the verdict should have been overturned and a new trial granted. Green v. State, 982 So. 2d 471 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

While defendant was spending the evening at the house, the eleven-year-old victim testified that someone came into her bedroom and rubbed her breasts and buttocks and rubbed his penis against her legs, with his legs wrapped around her; the victim's sister testified that she saw defendant in the bedroom. The evidence was sufficient to support defendant's conviction for gratification of lust with a child under the age of sixteen in violation of Miss. Code Ann. § 97-5-23(1); the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for directed verdict or his motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or in the alternative motion for new trial. Boone v. State, 973 So. 2d 237 (Miss. 2008).

Defendant's motion for a new trial was denied where the evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of sexual battery where although he stated that the evidence was insufficient to sustain his conviction, he did not elaborate as to why he considered the evidence insufficient; the victim testified that defendant placed his finger in her vagina against her will, and the jury believed the victim over defendant. Leonard v. State, 972 So. 2d 24 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Trial court did not err in refusing to grant defendant a new trial where the evidence was presented to the jury, who resolved any conflicts and determined that defendant was in fact the person shown in the video footage of the buy; allowing defendant's conviction to stand did not sanction an unconscionable injustice. Moore v. State, 969 So. 2d 153 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Circuit court correctly denied the patient's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or in the alternative, a new trial, where the record reflected sufficient evidence to sustain the jury verdict, a verdict that was not against the overwhelming weight of the evidence. Johnson v. St. Dominics - Jackson Mem'l Hosp., 967 So. 2d 20 (Miss. 2007).

Evidence did not so heavily preponderate against the verdict finding defendant guilty of murder that a new trial was warranted because: (1) defendant admitted to shooting the victim and stated that he did not see the victim with a weapon; (2) three eyewitnesses testified that they saw defendant standing over the victim's body, shooting him repeatedly; (3) no one saw the victim with a weapon and no weapon was seen or found in his car; and (4) the state pathologist confirmed that the victim's wounds were consistent with the victim lying on the ground and being shot from above. Scott v. State, 965 So. 2d 758 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

When we take the evidence in the light most favorable to the verdict, the weight of the evidence supported the guilty verdict where defendant was convicted of possession of cocaine after a police officer found cocaine in his patrol car after transporting defendant and another man to jail; testimony revealed that the patrol car was clean of any drugs when defendant was arrested, he offered no evidence to the contrary, and immediately after he was removed from the car, the officer discovered the bag of cocaine directly under the seat where defendant had been sitting. Jefferson v. State, 964 So. 2d 615 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Evidence showed that defendant sold cocaine to an informer in the second transaction, and all but conclusively suggested that he also sold defendant cocaine in the first transaction; therefore, the jury's decision was not contrary to the weight of the evidence and the trial court committed no error in overruling defendant's motion for a new trial. Wynn v. State, 964 So. 2d 1196 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied where the jury heard ample evidence to convict defendant; the jury heard the victim's testimony in which she described the various inappropriate ways defendant touched her, and the jury also heard defendant's recorded phone conversations with the victim. Williams v. State, 970 So. 2d 727 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied where his conviction for armed carjacking was not against the overwhelming weight of the evidence; all the victims picked out defendant from a photo lineup and all three identified defendant in court as the black-shirted carjacker. Jackson v. State, 969 So. 2d 124 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Motion for a new trial was properly denied in a case involving the possession of methamphetamine because the evidence was sufficient to support the conviction; defendant's dominion and control over the drugs was established by a girlfriend's testimony about their respective roles in selling methamphetamine. Bailey v. State, 981 So. 2d 972 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In an armed robbery case, where defendant challenged the weight of the evidence in his motion for a new trial, the evidence showed that: (1) there was detailed evidence from several sources establishing that three masked men effectuated a robbery of a store by threatening the cashier with a gun; (2) defendant was identified as the gunman by his two accomplices; and (3) defendant's general description was consistent with the description of the gunman given by the cashier; thus, the evidence did not preponderate so heavily against the verdict that an unconscionable injustice would result without a new trial and defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied. Evans v. State, 957 So. 2d 430 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In a simple assault on a law enforcement officer case, the trial court properly denied defendant's motion for a new trial because the weight of the evidence supported the verdict because: (1) the deputy testified that defendant intentionally struck him in the temple and the mouth; (2) although defendant denied drinking alcohol, 13 beer cans were found in the toolbox in the back of his truck; (3) an empty beer can was found on the floor of his truck; (4) defendant admitted that he resisted arrest because the deputy was trying to charge him for a crime for which he claimed he did not commit; and (5) although defendant claimed that he might have accidentally hit the deputy, the deputy testified that he was struck intentionally. Keys v. State, 963 So. 2d 1193 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 973 So. 2d 245, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 703 (Miss. 2007).

Defendant's motion for a new trial was properly overruled where, given the evidence in the record, a reasonable juror could find defendant guilty of aggravated assault beyond a reasonable doubt under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-7; the evidence showed that defendant initiated the altercation, struck the first blow, and repeatedly stabbed the victim, and therefore allowing the verdict to stand would not amount to an unconscionable injustice. Bobo v. State, 953 So. 2d 282 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of manslaughter because defendant had the willful intent necessary for manslaughter because: (1) several witnesses testified that defendant was angry that his $100 wager had not been returned after he quit playing a pick-up basketball game; (2) even if his purchase of a gun that day was coincidental, it contributed to defendant's willful intent; and (3) many witnesses saw defendant and the victim arguing before the shooting; thus, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a judgment for acquittal notwithstanding the verdict or a new trial. Sacus v. State, 956 So. 2d 329 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Where defendant and his accomplice entered a food market with a gun, ordered the employee to lay down, and took money out of the safe, ample evidence supported the verdict convicting defendant of conspiracy to commit armed robbery. The trial court did not err by denying his motion for a new trial. Herring v. State, 938 So. 2d 1251 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 939 So. 2d 805, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 752 (Miss. 2006).

Trial court did not commit reversible error in not granting defendant's motion for new trial where the evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of conspiracy, Miss. Code Ann. § 97-1-1(a)(h), and that he sold cocaine, Miss. Code Ann. § 41-29-139(a)(1), given witness testimony. Dear v. State, 960 So. 2d 542 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 959 So. 2d 1051, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 396 (Miss. 2007).

Defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied where the evidence was sufficient to convict defendant where the evidence presented against defendant at trial included direct evidence by way of an audio-visual recording and testimony that defendant received money and handed the undercover officer cocaine in exchange for that money. Hudderson v. State, 941 So. 2d 221 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Appellate court affirmed the denial of defendant's motion for a new trial as sufficient evidence existed to convict defendant of sexual battery because the victim, an eight-year-old girl, testified that defendant took her into another room where he pulled down his pants and made her commit an oral act on his penis. Curry v. State, 943 So. 2d 78 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in not granting defendant a new trial where the victim testified to her injuries and the act itself, and defendant presented no evidence to contradict this; reasonable minds could have found beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant was guilty. Brown v. State, 934 So. 2d 1039 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Where defendant approached three bank tellers who emptied their drawers and placed the money in defendant's bag, the tellers testified that they saw defendant's knife and the counter and they were afraid; the evidence was sufficient to support defendant's conviction of robbery, and the trial court did not err by denying his motion for a new trial. Wilson v. State, 935 So. 2d 945 (Miss. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 549 U.S. 1348, 127 S. Ct. 2047, 167 L. Ed. 2d 780, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 4088, 75 U.S.L.W. 3554 (2007).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict or new trial where the evidence was overwhelmingly in favor of the guilty verdict convicting defendant of armed robbery; defendant was positively identified by two eyewitnesses, concealed money was found in his bed, and his alibi witness was inconsistent. Williams v. State, 923 So. 2d 990 (Miss. 2006).

Where a fifteen-year-old victim claimed that defendant had sexual relations with her and DNA testing showed that defendant was the father of her aborted child, the evidence was sufficient to support his conviction of statutory rape. The trial court did not err by denying defendant's motion for a new trial. Carr v. State, 911 So. 2d 589 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Where defendant was charged with murder, the State's witnesses all testified that defendant approached the victim from behind and began shooting at him. The evidence was sufficient to enable a reasonable juror to reject defendant's self-defense theory and find him guilty of murder. Amos v. State, 911 So. 2d 644 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Where defendant repeatedly hit the victim with a barstool and her blows were so forceful that they caused the barstool to break, the evidence was sufficient to sustain her murder conviction. The trial court did not err by denying her motion for JNOV or a new trial. Shields v. State, 920 So. 2d 1033 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Defendant's motion for new trial was properly denied because defendant was properly convicted under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-17-33(1) where the jury could conclude that defendant broke the lock on the owner's storage shed, entered without permission, and stole her furniture; the jury could believe State's evidence that defendant was in possession of stolen goods, in close proximity to the house, just after the burglary occurred. Bowie v. State, 921 So. 2d 378 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 926 So. 2d 922, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 158 (Miss. 2006).

While there was conflicting testimony on whether defendant or the second man fired the gun at the victim (who had taken defendant's cocaine without paying for it), that was of no effect since there was more than enough undisputed evidence that defendant had aided and abetted in the commission of the murder, making him as guilty as the principal. Witnesses for the State and defense testified that defendant drove the car used in the murder and was therefore present during the commission of the crime, and even if he was not the one who pulled the trigger, he deliberately chased the victim in the car and parked it close enough for the other man to fire the pistol at the victim and end his life; thus, the evidence sufficed for defendant's conviction, and his motion for new trial was properly denied. Dilworth v. State, 909 So. 2d 731 (Miss. 2005).

Defendant's stepson, who was sitting in the back seat of the car when the victim was shot, testified that he saw his stepfather walk out of the house, pull out a gun and shoot the victim, and that he did not see defendant slip and fall before he shot the victim. Defendant's stepson and defendant's own son both testified that after the shooting, defendant walked to the front of the car and took a few drags on the cigarette he was smoking, and the pathologist who performed the autopsy testified that the gun left an imprint below the victim's ear and that the gun left soot on the victim's skin, indicating close, hard contact between the gun and the victim's skin; thus, the evidence was sufficient to support defendant's murder conviction and defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied. Smith v. State, 911 So. 2d 541 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 920 So. 2d 1008, 2005 Miss. Lexis 634 (Miss. 2005).

In both instances, the State presented testimony from witnesses who identified defendant as the person who committed the crimes charged. The first victim testified that while working at the convenience store, an individual later identified as defendant, held a box cutter near her neck, and took money out of the cash register, and a nearby officer had observed defendant fleeing the scene, and in the burglary case, the victim testified that she was awakened by her cousin screaming and directly confronted defendant; thus, defendant's motions for a directed verdict, judgment notwithstanding the verdict, and for a new trial, were properly denied. Hill v. State, 912 So. 2d 991 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 921 So. 2d 344 (Miss. 2005).

Where the victim testified that defendant cut her on the neck with a box cutter, requiring ten stitches, her uncorroborated testimony was sufficient evidence to sustain defendant's conviction for aggravated assault. The denial of defendant's motion for a new trial was not an abuse of discretion. Wilks v. State, 909 So. 2d 1252 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Denial of defendant's motion for a new trial was proper where the verdict was not against the overwhelming weight of the evidence; there was sufficient credible evidence of defendant's guilt under Miss. Code Ann. § 63-11-30(1)(a) and (b), such that the jury's returning a verdict of guilty was a reasonable conclusion. Turner v. State, 910 So. 2d 598 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Where defendant and a conspirator attempted to remove tires from a vehicle in a car lot, the evidence was sufficient to convict defendant for conspiracy to commit grand larceny possession of larceny tools. The State was not required to present evidence that he lacked consent from the owner to remove the tires; therefore, the trial court properly denied defendant's motion judgment notwithstanding the verdict or, alternatively, for a new trial. Brownlee v. State, 912 So. 2d 1000 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Circuit court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a new trial where the police officers testified that they witnessed defendant throwing bags out of the window of a truck while attempting to elude them, and these bags were recovered and found to contain cocaine. Sweet v. State, 910 So. 2d 735 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a new trial after he was convicted of aggravated assault because the verdict of conviction was consistent with the weight of the evidence. In a tape-recorded statement to the police following the shooting, defendant admitted firing a gun two times; he claimed that he tried to shoot into the air the first time and then he felt the victim was daring him, so he shot a second time and heard the bullet hit metal on the victim's truck. Dunn v. State, 891 So. 2d 822 (Miss. 2005).

Judge did not err in granting a trucking company's motion for a new trial, pursuant to Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 10.05(2), in a wrongful death suit because the verdict in favor of the deceased's heirs was against the overwhelming weight of the evidence; there was no evidence of damage to the truck as there would have been if it had struck the deceased. White v. Yellow Freight Sys., 905 So. 2d 506 (Miss. 2004).

Jury heard all the testimony and adjudged that of the victims and eyewitnesses to be the most credible; considering the evidence in its totality, the evidence was not so lacking that a reasonable fair-minded juror could not have found defendant guilty as charged; therefore, the trial court properly denied his requested relief. Price v. State, 892 So. 2d 294 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict or in the alternative, a new trial where the evidence preponderated against defendant; the narcotics agent and the confidential informant gave the jury an eyewitness account of the drug transaction and identified defendant as the person who sold the drugs, and a videotape and audiotape of the transaction were admitted into evidence. Cox v. State, 887 So. 2d 190 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a new trial as sufficient evidence existed to convict defendant of capital murder; defendant confessed to the murder after twice waiving his Miranda rights, defendant was seen leaving the murder scene, and the victim's blood was on defendant's clothing. Carr v. State, 880 So. 2d 1079 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Where casino employees testified that defendant began his shift with $ 150,000 in his drawer, left his station with six or seven bundles of one hundred dollar bills, entered the restroom near his station with the money in a plastic bag, and a shortage of $ 80,000 was discovered when his cash drawer was subsequently opened, the evidence was sufficient to convict defendant for embezzlement. Defendant was not entitled to a new trial. Bright v. State, 894 So. 2d 590 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 893 So. 2d 1061 (Miss. 2005).

In a robbery and assault case, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for new trial, because the verdict was not against the weight of the credible evidence, as there was ample evidence of guilt from the testimony of two witnesses having substantially different postures in the case — one being an alleged accomplice and the other being the victim, — and the only counterbalancing weight was the testimony of defendant himself. Woods v. State, 883 So. 2d 583 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a new trial based on the sufficiency of the evidence where the evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of sale of cocaine where the jury resolved any conflicts in favor of the verdict and there was no reason to disturb the jury's verdict; the verdict was not so contrary to the overwhelming weight of the evidence that allowing it to stand would have sanctioned an unconscionable injustice. Carter v. State, 869 So. 2d 1083 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Record sent up with the appeal indicated that defendant might have been twice convicted and sentenced for the same crime; therefore, the trial court inadvertently failed to enter an order granting the motion for a new trial and setting aside defendant's earlier conviction and sentence. Haley v. State, 864 So. 2d 1022 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court properly denied defendant's motion for a new trial where the State proved that the victim identified defendant from a photo line-up and in the courtroom, and recognized him when he returned to the store on another occasion; the victim was in fear of immediate injury to her person and the trial transcript demonstrated that she testified that defendant had told her to open the cash register or he would kill her. Armstead v. State, 869 So. 2d 1052 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court erred in failing to grant defendant a circumstantial evidence jury instruction where DNA evidence was treated as a type of circumstantial evidence; although the DNA overwhelmingly implicated defendant as the culprit in the crime, defendant was entitled to a circumstantial jury instruction in Mississippi. Trower v. State, 867 So. 2d 1043 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Defendant's argument that the trial court had erred in denying his motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict or, in the alternative, for a new trial, was without merit where acceptance as true of the credible evidence brought that was consistent with defendant's guilt did not mean that this evidence was such that reasonable and fair-minded jurors could only find the accused not guilty; the jury was free to believe the State's witnesses' testimony that defendant had not shot the victim in self-defense. Williams v. State, 863 So. 2d 63 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Defendant's motion for a peremptory instruction and judgment notwithstanding the verdict was properly denied by the trial court where, considering the strength of all inferences and circumstances of possession by defendant of the victim's check, together with his attempt to negotiate the check at the bank, the jury was fully warranted in concluding that defendant was guilty of uttering a forged instrument and petit larceny. Miles v. State, 864 So. 2d 963 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Defendant's motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict or in the alternative for a new trial was properly denied where although the county in which the accident occurred contained two judicial districts, the evidence at trial, both direct and circumstantial, was sufficient to establish the requisite venue; it was not necessary for the State to prove that an intoxicating liquor was a proximate cause or a proximate contributing cause of a death, and the jury was entitled to find that defendant had committed an act of negligence when he chose to driving while intoxicated and caused the death of another. Campbell v. State, 858 So. 2d 177 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Circuit court correctly denied defendant's motions for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict and a new trial where the victim's statement, contradicting defendant's version of the facts, sustained the verdict; defendant's initial unrecorded statement was an admission of guilt and defendant had twice changed his story, such that the evidence was sufficient to convict defendant. Moore v. State, 858 So. 2d 190 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Trial court did not err in failing to grant defendant a new trial based on prosecutorial misconduct where there was no harm or prejudice to defendant who was permitted to attack the State's witness's credibility during closing arguments by referring to the witness as a burglar and a thief and a dope seller and a dope user; the district attorney was not guilty of egregious misconduct in suggesting that a first year law student would know that lawyers were entitled to object to both evidence and argument. Berry v. State, 859 So. 2d 399 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's motion for a new trial where there was evidence that, shortly after the incident, the victim was able to give a description of her assailant and the get-away vehicle that was of such detail and clarity that it enabled investigating officers to immediately identify defendant as a suspect, which suspect was then identified by the victim. Garner v. State, 856 So. 2d 729 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Defendant was entitled to a new trial where an alternate juror was present during jury deliberations; although the trial judge attempted to assess and rectify the damage done by the alternate juror, it was apparent that there may have been a contaminated verdict and defendant was prejudiced by the presence of the alternate juror. Archie v. State, 844 So. 2d 1173 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict or a new trial where the victim testified that defendant had forced her to have sexual intercourse; the jury as trier of fact, was charged with resolving the conflict in the evidence, and resolved it in favor of the victim; there existed in the record substantive credible evidence to support that finding. Price v. State, 847 So. 2d 290 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Defendant did not renew his motion for directed verdict at the conclusion of the evidence or by a motion for a peremptory instruction, as such, any objection he had to the sufficiency of the evidence was waived; it did not appear on the record that the motion for a new trial was ever ruled upon by the trial court, and it was the responsibility of defendant to obtain a ruling on all motions filed by him, as the movant; the failure to obtain a ruling constituted a waiver. Dupuis v. State, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 590 (Miss. Ct. App. June 24, 2003), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 872 So. 2d 724, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 705 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for new trial where the evidence was sufficient to convict defendant where the jury could have reasonably found defendant to be in constructive possession of cocaine because there were sufficient facts to warrant a finding that defendant was aware of the presence of cocaine and was intentionally and consciously in possession of it; the State's expert's testimony was admissible as it would be based on the machine's reading and the notes of the analyst. Lenoir v. State, 853 So. 2d 845 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a new trial on a kidnapping charge based on defendant's allegation that a prospective juror failed to divulge the fact that the juror and defendant were friends; trial court was entitled to disbelieve defendant's claim that he did not recognize the juror until the verdict was returned but chose to conceal the information in the hope that the juror would vote to acquit defendant.

Evidence was sufficient to convict defendant for selling cocaine, and he was not entitled to judgment notwithstanding the verdict or a new trial because it was the role of the jury to determine whether a paid informant was unreliable, whether she was insufficiently searched by the police, and whether the poor quality of a videotape rendered it unreliable. Triplett v. State, 840 So. 2d 727 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Rule 11.01. Sentencing.

Where the defendant is adjudged guilty of the offense charged, sentence must be imposed without unreasonable delay. A defendant is adjudged guilty when the defendant has been found guilty by a verdict of the jury, found guilty by the court sitting as the trier of fact, on the acceptance of a plea of guilty, or on acceptance of a plea of nolo contendere.

The sentence shall be pronounced in open court at any time after conviction, in the presence of the defendant (except when the offense of which the defendant has been adjudged guilty is a misdemeanor), and recorded in the minutes of the court.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Acceptance of plea.
Announcement in open court.
Sentence hearing.

Acceptance of plea.

Although appellant argued his guilty plea was invalid, pursuant to Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 11.01, the post-conviction court did not err in finding the circuit court, in its sentencing order, had accepted appellant's guilty plea and adjudicated him guilty. Williams v. State, 64 So. 3d 1037 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Announcement in open court.

The defendant was not entitled to reversal of his conviction on the basis that his sentence was not announced in open court where he failed to point out this perceived procedural defect at the trial level. Beckum v. State, — So. 2d —, 2000 Miss. App. LEXIS 568 (Miss. Ct. App. Dec. 5, 2000), reversed by, remanded by 786 So. 2d 1060, 2001 Miss. LEXIS 155 (Miss. 2001).

Sentence hearing.

Defendant's convictions for armed robbery and arson were proper where the failure to grant a sentencing hearing was not in error because the trial judge was already privy to the facts of the case and the aggravating and mitigating circumstances prior to sentencing. Payton v. State, 897 So. 2d 921 (Miss. 2003).

Rule 11.02. Presentence investigation and report.

Upon acceptance of a plea of guilty, or upon a finding of guilt, and where the court has discretion as to the sentence to be imposed, the court may direct that a presentence investigation and report be made.

The report of the presentence investigation may contain, but is not limited to, the following information:

1. A description of the offense and the circumstances surrounding it, not limited to aspects developed for the record as part of the determination of guilt;
2. Any prior criminal convictions of the defendant, or juvenile adjudications of delinquency;
3. The defendant's financial condition;
4. The defendant's educational background;
5. A description of the employment background of the offender, including any military record and including present employment status and capabilities;
6. The social history of the defendant, including family relationships, marital status and residence history;
7. Information about environments to which the offender might return or to which the offender could be sent should probation be granted;
8. Information about special resources which might be available to assist the defendant such as treatment centers, rehabilitative programs or vocational training centers; and
9. A physical and mental examination of the defendant if it is ordered by the court.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Right to investigation or hearing.
Sentence recommendations.

Right to investigation or hearing.

Defendant's convictions for armed robbery and arson were proper where the failure to grant a sentencing hearing was not in error because the trial judge was already privy to the facts of the case and the aggravating and mitigating circumstances prior to sentencing. Payton v. State, 897 So. 2d 921 (Miss. 2003).

In a prosecution on two counts of distribution of crack cocaine within 1,500 feet of a public park, the defendant was not improperly denied a presentence investigation and hearing as courts are not required to grant a presentence investigation or hearing; further, in light of the sentence given to the defendant, it was obvious that the circuit court took into consideration many of the factors enumerated in the rule, including the youth of the offender, his background, and that this was his first offense. Lawrence v. State, 780 So. 2d 652 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

Sentence recommendations.

Trial court did not err in receiving a presentence report that contained sentencing recommendations even though the inmate's plea agreement indicated that the State would not be making any sentencing recommendations. Dennis v. State, 873 So. 2d 1045 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Rule 11.03. Enhancement of punishment.

In cases involving enhanced punishment for subsequent offenses under state statutes:

1. The indictment must include both the principal charge and a charge of previous convictions. The indictment must allege with particularity the nature or description of the offense constituting the previous convictions, the state or federal jurisdiction of any previous conviction, and the date of judgment.

The indictment shall not be read to the jury.

2. Separate trials shall be held on the principal charge and on the charge of previous convictions. In the trial on the principal charge, the previous convictions will not be mentioned by the state or the court except as provided by the Mississippi Rules of Evidence.

3. If the defendant is convicted or enters a plea of guilty on the principal charge, a hearing before the court without a jury will then be conducted on the previous convictions.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Bifurcated hearing not required.
Drug case.
Felony DUI cases.
Habitual offender sentence vacated.
Proof of prior conviction or sentence.

In general.

Indictment was in compliance with Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 11.03(1) and sufficiently charged defendant as a habitual offender because there was no requirement that the indictment include the dates of sentencing. Johnson v. State, 50 So. 3d 335 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 50 So. 3d 1003, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 7 (Miss. 2011), dismissed by 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 120192 (N.D. Miss. Aug. 24, 2012).

Indictment properly charged defendant as a habitual offender under Miss. Code Ann. § 99-19-81 (Rev. 2007) as it specifically alleged two prior convictions, including where they occurred, the cause numbers, the crimes committed, the conviction dates, and the sentences. Not only did the indictment sufficiently charge defendant as a habitual offender but defendant admitted previous conviction thereby satisfying Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 11.03(1). Evans v. State, 988 So. 2d 404 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

For purposes of Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 11.03, the indictment listed each of the inmate's alleged prior convictions with particularity and the inmate offered no law that supported his claim that it was improper for the state to list the convictions in an exhibit attached to its motion and the court did not know of such a rule; the inmate provided no support for his claim and thus the court found the issue had no merit. Sneed v. State, 990 So. 2d 226 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 994 So. 2d 186, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 468 (Miss. 2008).

Defendant contended that the trial court had erred in sentencing him as an habitual offender, because a bifurcated hearing was not held as required by the case law and Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 11.03(2)(3). However, the trial court's post-trial order of dismissal (weeks after the original trial), on two counts for which the jury could not reach a verdict, noted that defendant was in fact given a bifurcated hearing, and since defendant did not provide in the record on appeal, a transcript of the trial or the bifurcated hearing, defendant's argument was without merit. Lyons v. State, 881 So. 2d 373 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

The judgment date of a prior conviction is not an essential element that must be listed in an indictment in order to exercise enhanced sentencing. Franklin v. State, 766 So. 2d 16 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

There is no inconsistency between Rule 7.09 and this rule; this rule states that an indictment must include certain habitual offender information, and Rule 7.06 merely allows the state to comply with this rule. Hawthorne v. State, 751 So. 2d 1090 (Miss. Ct. App. 1998); Hawthorne v. State, 751 So. 2d 1090 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Bifurcated hearing not required.

Post-conviction relief was denied in a case where defendant entered a guilty plea to the sale of cocaine because he failed to request a bifurcated hearing on his habitual offender status; even if the error had been preserved, a hearing was not required because he entered a guilty plea to the principal charge. Rucker v. State, 955 So. 2d 958 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Defendant's due process rights were not violated in a drug case where he was not provided a separate recidivism hearing since he was not entitled to such, defendant acknowledged that he was indicted as a habitual offender and the maximum punishment for such, and he also admitted that he was previously convicted of several felonies; defendant was unable to complain about the sentence since he was the beneficiary of a lenient sentence where he was given 17-years, despite being a habitual offender. Minchew v. State, 967 So. 2d 1244 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Defendant was not illegally sentenced as a habitual offender on the ground that he was not given a separate trial because after the jury was excused, the trial court conducted a separate hearing for the State to present evidence of the two prior felony convictions necessary to sentence defendant as a habitual offender. The State produced the evidence, defendant failed to object, and the trial court pronounced his sentence. Roach v. State, 938 So. 2d 863 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 937 So. 2d 450, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 600 (Miss. 2006).

Denial of the inmate's petition for post-conviction relief was proper pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 99-39-5(2) where the petition was time barred and where the inmate failed to show that he was denied a fundamental right or that his sentence was illegal because he was sentenced as an habitual offender without receiving the mandatory bifurcated hearing required by Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 11.03. Hudson v. State, 891 So. 2d 260 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Drug case.

Defendant's indictment for selling cocaine included all of the information required under Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 11.03(1), as the indictment listed defendant's prior convictions, including each cause number, the courts of conviction, the dates of the convictions, what crime defendant had been convicted of for each conviction, the dates of the offenses, and the length of sentences that defendant received. Grim v. State, — So. 3d —, 2010 Miss. App. LEXIS 312 (Miss. Ct. App. June 15, 2010), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 50 So. 3d 1003, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 139 (Miss. 2011), remanded by 2012 Miss. LEXIS 212 (Miss. Apr. 26, 2012).

Defendant's sentence as an habitual offender was improper where Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 11.03 required that sentencing as an habitual offender must occur at a separate hearing outside the presence of the jury; defendant was not given such a hearing and his sentence was given in the presence of the jury just after the guilty verdict was returned. Wilburn v. State, 856 So. 2d 686 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Felony DUI cases.

There is no requirement that the prosecution of a felony DUI comply with the guidelines for bifurcation found in URCCC 11.03. Williams v. State, 708 So. 2d 1358 (Miss. 1998).

Habitual offender sentence vacated.

Plain error was found in defendant's enhanced sentencing as a habitual offender, where the criminal history report upon which the State and trial court relied did not appear in the record, and where there were no certified copies of any judgments of conviction, which were the best evidence of a conviction; in addition, the form of the amended indictment, insofar as the indictment purported to charge defendant as a habitual offender, was deficient, under Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 11.03.1, as the indictment did not fully acquaint defendant with the nature of the accusations. Vince v. State, 844 So. 2d 510 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Proof of prior conviction or sentence.

Trial court did not err in sentencing defendant as a habitual offender after defendant was convicted of business burglary because the indictment included the principal charge and previous charges, as required by Miss. Unif. Cir. & Cty. R. 11.03(1). McMillan v. State, 6 So. 3d 444 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Appellant was not denied due process where the trial court sentenced him as a habitual offender without presenting the issue to the jury, case law held that determination of whether a defendant was a habitual offender was a non-jury issue, and Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 11.03(3) called for a hearing without a jury. McNickles v. State, 979 So. 2d 693 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 979 So. 2d 691, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 176 (Miss. 2008).

Plain error was found in defendant's enhanced sentencing as a habitual offender, where the criminal history report upon which the State and trial court relied did not appear in the record, and where there were no certified copies of any judgments of conviction, which were the best evidence of a conviction; in addition, the form of the amended indictment, insofar as the indictment purported to charge defendant as a habitual offender, was deficient, under Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 11.03.1, as the indictment did not fully acquaint defendant with the nature of the accusations. Vince v. State, 844 So. 2d 510 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Rule 11.04. Post-conviction fines, payment of fines, and indigents.

Matters concerning post-conviction fines, payment of fines, indigents and imprisonment for nonpayment of fines shall be governed by § 99-19-20 of the Mississippi Code of 1972.

Rule 11.05. Entry of order and duty of clerk.

Immediately upon entry of an order or judgment of the court, the clerk of court shall make a diligent effort to assure that all attorneys of record have received notice of the entry of the order.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Defendant was not permitted to file an untimely appeal of the order affirming his conviction for driving under the influence of intoxicating liquor. Defendant failed to prove his claim that the court failed to notify the parties that his conviction was upheld. Havard v. State, 911 So. 2d 991 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Rule 12.01. Post-conviction bail.

A convicted defendant shall be entitled to bail, pending an appeal as prescribed by § 99-35-115 of the Mississippi Code of 1972.

The condition of the appeal bond shall be that the defendant will render himself or herself in execution and will obey every order and judgment of the Supreme Court or every order and judgment of the trial court affirmed by the Supreme Court. The sheriff shall not accept the appeal bond unless the appeal has been perfected.

If a defendant is admitted to bail pending appeal, the trial court clerk shall so notify the clerk of the Supreme Court.

Rule 12.02. Appeals from justice or municipal court.

A. Notice and filing:

1. Mandatory Bonds or Cash Deposits. Any person adjudged guilty of a criminal offense by a justice or municipal court may appeal to county court or, if there is no county court having jurisdiction, then to circuit court by filing simultaneously a written notice of appeal, and both a cost bond and an appearance bond (or cash deposit) as provided herein within 30 days of such judgment with the clerk of the circuit court having jurisdiction. This written notice of appeal and posting of the cost bond and the appearance bond or cash deposit perfects the appeal. The failure to post any bond or cash deposit required by this rule shall be grounds for the court, on its own motion or by motion of another, to dismiss the appeal with prejudice and with costs. The clerk of the court shall not accept, file and docket the written notice of appeal without the accompanying cost bond and appearance bond or cash deposit, unless the court has allowed the defendant to proceed in forma pauperis. After the filing of the written notice of appeal and the cost bond and the appearance bond or cash deposit, all further correspondence concerning the case by parties of either side shall be mailed directly to the circuit clerk for inclusion in the file.

2. Contents of Notice of Appeal. The written notice of appeal shall specify the party or parties taking the appeal; shall specify the current residence address and the current mailing address, if different, of each party taking the appeal; shall designate the judgment or order from which the appeal is taken; shall be addressed to county or circuit court, whichever appropriate; and shall state that the appeal is taken for a trial de novo. Upon a failure of the defendant to comply with the requirement of this rule as to content of the written notice of appeal, the court, in its discretion, may order the notice amended or the case dismissed with prejudice and with costs. If the defendant fails to amend the notice as required by the court, the court shall dismiss the appeal with prejudice and with costs.

3. Record. The circuit clerk, upon receiving written notice of appeal, shall notify the lower court and the appropriate prosecuting attorney.

It shall be the duty of the judge from whose judgment the appeal is taken to deliver to the clerk of the circuit court, within 10 days after the filing of the appearance bond and the cost bond or cash deposit, as required herein, are given and approved, a certified copy of the record in the case with all the original papers in the case. The judge of the lower court may direct the clerk of the lower court to certify and transmit the copy of the record in the case and all the original papers in the case within the time allowed by this rule.

B. Bonds.

1. Appearance Bond. Unless excused by the making of an affidavit as specified in § 99-35-7 of the Mississippi Code of 1972, a cash deposit, or bond with sufficient resident sureties (or licensed guaranty companies), to be approved by the circuit clerk, shall be given and conditioned on appearance before the county or circuit court from day to day and term to term until the appeal is finally determined or dismissed. The amount of such cash deposit or appearance bond shall be determined by the judge of the lower court. If the defendant fails to appear at the time and place set by the court, the court may dismiss the appeal with prejudice and with costs and order forfeiture of the appearance bond or cash deposit.

2. Cost Bond. Unless excused by the making of an affidavit of poverty as specified above, every defendant who appeals under this rule shall post a cash deposit, or bond with sufficient resident sureties (or licensed guaranty companies) to be approved by the circuit clerk for all estimated court costs, incurred both in the appellate and lower courts (including, but not limited to fees, court costs, and amounts imposed pursuant to statute). The amount of such cash deposit or bond shall be determined by the judge of the lower court payable to the state in an amount of not less than One Hundred Dollars ($100) nor more than Twenty-Five Hundred Dollars ($2,500). Upon a bond forfeiture, the costs of lower court shall be recovered after the costs of the appellate court.

3. Time in Custody Credited. All time the defendant is in custody pending an appeal shall be credited against any sentence imposed by the court.

C. Proceedings. Upon the filing with the circuit clerk of the notice of appeal and bonds or cash deposits required by this rule, unless excused therefrom with the clerk, the prior judgment of conviction shall be stayed.

The appeal shall be a trial de novo. In appeals from justice or municipal court when the maximum possible sentence is six months or less, the case may be tried without a jury at the court's discretion. The record certified to the court on appeal from the lower court is competent evidence. However, no motions may be allowed which deprive the accused of the right to a trial on the merits. Amendments will be liberally allowed so as to bring the merits of a case fairly to trial. (Amended May 13, 1996; amended November 26, 1996; amended June 28, 2007.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Bonds.

Bonds.

Because defendant did not post the necessary bond pursuant to Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 12.02(A) and he did not file a motion seeking to cure his deficient appeal, his appeal from a municipal court's judgment accepting his guilty plea to driving under the influence was properly dismissed. Hill v. City of Wiggins, 984 So. 2d 1086 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Circuit Court did not err in dismissing DUI defendant's appeal and remanding the matter to the Justice Court for execution of the sentence where defendant failed to timely post a bond to perfect his appeal. Spencer v. State, 880 So. 2d 1044 (Miss. 2004).

Appeal was not perfected until a written notice of appeal and a cost bond were filed within 30 days of the judgment appealed; both a cost and appearance bond were required in appeals from municipal courts and there was a legitimate basis for dismissing defendant's appeal. Riley v. Town of Lambert, 856 So. 2d 721 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Although a county circuit court clerk had no authority under § 25-7-13 to require a $100 filing fee for an appeal from the municipal court, the fee could be recast as the bond required by URCCC 12.02(B); however, it was nevertheless improper for the circuit clerk to set $100 as the unchanging estimate of court costs and it was improper for payment to be demanded in cash. Mitchell v. Parker, — So. 2d —, 2001 Miss. App. LEXIS 161 (Miss. Ct. App. Apr. 24, 2001), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 804 So. 2d 1066, 2001 Miss. App. LEXIS 369 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

Jurisdiction.

Where defendant filed his notice of appeal on February 24, 2005, and a copy of the record was not filed with the circuit court until October 20, 2005, the filing was not in compliance with Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 12.02; however, the purely ministerial act of transmission of the record was not jurisdictional. Pulido v. City of Oxford, 991 So. 2d 1223 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 997 So. 2d 924, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 511 (Miss. 2008).

Circuit court lacked jurisdiction over defendant's appeal of his municipal court convictions because defendant failed to appear for his circuit court date despite receiving proper notice and did not file a timely motion to restore his cases to the docket. Raspberry v. City of Aberdeen, 964 So. 2d 1211 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Circuit court erred in issuing a writ of mandamus under Miss. R. App. P. 21 because the justice court judge's decisions to deny any further continuance and to proceed to trial on the misdemeanor DUI charge in petitioner's absence pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 99-17-9 were discretionary and appeals from the justice court to the circuit court required a trial de novo, Miss. Code Ann. § 99-35-1 and Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 12.02; thus, the writ of mandamus was the improper procedural tool to remedy petitioner's grievances regarding the denial of a continuance and proceeding to trial in petitioner's absence and, therefore, the grant of the writ of mandamus was in error pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 11-41-1. In re Chisolm, 837 So. 2d 183 (Miss. 2003).

Fact that the record from the municipal court failed to show a separate sentence for each of defendant's three convictions did not rob the circuit court of appellate jurisdiction. Griffith v. City of Bay St. Louis, 797 So. 2d 1037 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

Circuit court order directing defendants to vacate foreclosed property was upheld because defendants were provided a trial de novo in the circuit court after judgment was rendered in a justice court, as required by Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 12.02(C); both parties called witnesses, and the circuit judge listened to arguments from both parties. Sorey v. Crosby, 989 So. 2d 485 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Because the offense of stalking under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-107(1) (Rev. 2006), with which defendant was being charged, was punishable by up to one year in jail, defendant had a right to a jury trial, a circuit court had no discretion to deny him that right and the circuit court erred in refusing defendant's request for a jury trial. Ude v. State, 992 So. 2d 1213 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), remanded by 2012 Miss. App. LEXIS 189 (Miss. Ct. App. Apr. 3, 2012).

Trial court violated defendant's U.S. Const. amend. VI right to a jury trial where a driving under the influence, second offense, conviction carried a potential penalty of a fine between $ 600 and $ 1500 and possible imprisonment greater than six months in jail. Skinner v. State, 809 So. 2d 782 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Timeliness.

Circuit court did not err in dismissing defendant's appeal as untimely where, although Miss. Code Ann. § 99-35-1 allowed a person adjudged guilty of a criminal offense by a justice court to appeal to circuit court within forty days of such judgment of conviction, Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 12.02A allowed only thirty days for an appeal; any statute that conflicted with a rule established by the supreme court was void, such that Rule 12.02A took precedence. Murray v. State, 870 So. 2d 1182 (Miss. 2004).

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

An appeal should be filed within 30 days of the judgment of the lower court; however, the county court has some discretion to grant an extension of time for the perfecting of such appeal or accept the appeal on a writ of certiorari. Miller, August 28, 1998, A.G. Op. #98-0521.

A cost bond is to cover all estimated court costs, incurred both in the appellate and lower courts, and includes the circuit clerk's filing fee. Sweat, January 8, 1999, A.G. Op. #98-0798.

An appeal from a municipal court conviction should be filed in the county court (or circuit court, if no county court exists) even if the original charge was a felony that was reduced to a misdemeanor. Prewitt, July 7, 2003, A.G. Op. 03-0324.

A city may use the quick take provisions of this section to acquire easements for the municipal sewer system in addition to the eminent domain authority of §§ 21-37-47 et seq. Tallant, Sept. 26, 2003, A.G. Op. 03-0485.

The cost bond filed by a defendant perfecting a criminal appeal constitutes the estimated court costs, including the filing fees, incurred in the appellate court and the lower court. The appeal bond constitutes the appearance bond. Allen, Oct. 24, 2003, A.G. Op. 03-0555.

An appearance bond filed in the lower court would not serve as the appeal bond for the Circuit Court. The appeal bond should be made returnable to the Circuit Court, whereas the appearance bond in the lower court should have been returnable to the lower court. Allen, Oct. 24, 2003, A.G. Op. 03-0555.

Rule 12.03. Appeals from county court.

A. Notice and filing. Any person adjudged guilty of a criminal offense by a county court, where the case was not a felony action transferred to that court from circuit court, may appeal to the circuit court having jurisdiction by filing written notice with the clerk of the county court within 30 days of the entry of the final judgment. Extensions may be granted as proscribed in Miss.Sup.Ct.R. 4(g).

Appeals may be heard in any county within the jurisdiction of the circuit court and shall be considered solely on the record made in county court. If no prejudicial error be found, the circuit court shall affirm and enter judgment in like manner as affirmances in the Supreme Court. If prejudicial error be found, the circuit court shall reverse as is provided for reversals in the Supreme Court. If a new trial is granted, the cause shall be remanded to the docket of the circuit court and a new trial held therein de novo.

The notice of appeal shall specify the party or parties taking the appeal; shall designate the judgment or order from which the appeal is taken; state that the appeal is to circuit court; and state that the appeal is taken on the record. The clerk, upon receiving written notice of appeal, shall immediately send notice to the prosecuting attorney.

B. Bond. Unless otherwise excused by law, a sufficient bond shall be given within the time prescribed for taking of the appeal. The amount of the bond shall be set by the judge or clerk of the county court in which the judgment was rendered. The bond shall be conditioned on appearance before the circuit court during the term to which appeal is taken, and if the defendant fails to so appear, the circuit court shall dismiss the appeal, remand the case for execution of judgment, and order forfeiture of the bond.

The giving of bond or a sufficient affidavit that appellant is unable to give an appeal bond shall act as supersedeas. All time that the appellant is in custody pending an appeal shall be automatically deducted from the sentence imposed by the court.

C. Record on appeal. The practices and procedures with respect to the trial transcript and the record on appeal shall be the same as if the appeal had been taken from the circuit court to the Supreme Court.

D. Briefs on appeal. The briefs filed in the cause shall be in conformity with the practice in the Supreme Court, and the time of filing and service of the briefs shall be in conformity with the practice in the Supreme Court, except the parties should file only an original and one copy of each brief. The consequences of failure to timely file a brief shall be the same as in the Supreme Court.

E. Felony transfers. Final judgments in felony cases transferred from circuit court to county court shall be appealed to the Supreme Court in the same manner as if the judgment were rendered in the circuit court.

F. Oral argument. The court may, in its discretion, decide the case on the briefs or may hear oral arguments on the issues. A party desiring oral argument must request the same in writing by motion within 10 days of the time the last brief is due. The court may designate the issues on which it will hear oral argument. The court may direct oral argument in cases where no party has requested oral argument.

APPENDIX

SAMPLE CHARGE TO GRAND JURY

You have been summoned and sworn as a grand juror of the Circuit Court for _____ County (_____ Judicial District) of the _____ Judicial Circuit of the State of Mississippi. As members of the Grand Jury, you are a part of the judicial branch of state government, an arm of this circuit court. The law of this state provides that grand juries are empaneled and charged concerning their duties only by the circuit judge. In compliance with this law, the court, before you begin your work, instructs you concerning your duties as members of the grand jury. It is mandatory that you follow these instructions and should you deem, during your service, need of additional instructions, you should present this request to the court. The law of this state specifies the express powers of grand juries. The grand jury has the power of indictment or presentment in a crime and the additional authority to issue reports.

The Grand Jury is an ancient and honored institution. Its existence is firmly imbedded in the system of Anglo-Saxon justice which we inherited from England. It is guaranteed in the constitution, which provides that no person may be placed on trial for a felony unless he or she has been indicted by a grand jury. This provision stands as a barrier against unjust prosecution by persons in authority. The grand jury is the means, not only of bringing to trial persons accused of crime, but also to protect persons from unfounded accusations whether presented by legal officers or by others who may be motivated by public clamor or private malice. Your duty is to allow or to deny issuance of an indictment. There are from 15 to 20 members of a grand jury and 12 members must agree before you can approve an indictment. The words "true bill" are used to indicate an indictment that you have approved. Each indictment must be signed by the foreman and one of the prosecuting attorneys.

You will hear only one side of a case. It is not your duty to decide the guilt or innocence of the accused. It is your duty to determine whether there is sufficient evidence or probable cause to require an accused to stand trial. If the evidence establishes a probability that a crime was committed and that the defendant committed the crime, then you should return a "true bill." If you do not have an indictment before the grand jury, you may return a presentment, which is an instruction for an indictment to be drawn. If the evidence fails to establish a probability that a crime was committed and that the defendant is guilty of that crime, then you must refuse to return a "true bill." You should prepare a list of the cases upon which you have refused to return a "true bill" and return that list to the court.

No public purpose would be served by indicting a person when it appears to you that the evidence is not sufficient to sustain a conviction. Unjust or unfounded indictments should not be returned against anyone. On the other hand, it is equally important that indictments be returned against those who, upon the evidence, appear to be probably guilty of the commission of a crime. Anyone you indict shall receive a speedy public trial to determine their guilt or innocence.

You must be fair and just in your deliberations to the best of your ability and understanding. Your oath requires that you do not indict any person through malice, hatred or ill will; nor will you fail to indict any person through fear, favor, regard, reward, or hope of reward. You must be guided by an impartial spirit free from personal, social, racial, religious or political bias or feeling.

You are cautioned that rumor and hearsay testimony are unreliable. Also, that no person may be compelled to be a witness against himself/herself. A witness who testifies about his/her own participation in crime must first be advised in your presence of his/her constitutional rights by the prosecuting attorney(s) before you may accept such evidence. You determine what witnesses you will permit to appear and testify before you.

The district attorney, county attorney and attorney general are by law the representatives of the State of Mississippi in all criminal prosecutions. It is the duty of the district attorney and county attorney to be present with the grand jury in the room to present the evidence, to examine the witnesses and to give advice on any matter of law which may be raised. You are entitled to the legal advice of the prosecuting attorney(s) on matters of law unless you are instructed to the contrary by the court. You are, however, the sole judges of the facts and the prosecuting attorney(s) may not influence you as to whether an indictment will be approved. After the testimony is taken and you are discussing what action you will take, the prosecuting attorney(s) will withdraw from your jury room. They are not permitted to be present during your deliberations nor when a ballot is taken and they may not influence your decision on any question of fact. You may request the advice and assistance of the attorney general of the state. You are also at liberty at any time to call for further instructions from the court, although the instruction which the prosecuting attorney(s) give you will usually be sufficient.

You are an independent body. You, as well as the prosecuting attorney(s), have the right to require the clerk of this court to issue subpoenas for witnesses to be brought before you to testify. Your foreman shall keep a record of the names of all witnesses sworn before the grand jury. This list of witnesses, certified and signed by the foreman, shall be returned to the court.

The grand jury has the important duty of making certain mandatory investigations and inspections. The grand jury must:

1. You must make a personal inspection of the county jail, its condition, sufficiency for the safekeeping of prisoners, and their accommodation and health, and make a report on the same to the court.

2. You must examine the tax collector's books and his/her reports and settlements, and make a report on the same to the court.

3. You must examine the status of forest protection in the county, and in doing so, you are charged in particular of the crimes of setting fires as set forth in § 95-5-25 and § 97-17-13 of the Mississippi Code of 1972.

In addition, you, the grand jury, may make additional investigations and make reports on the same on your own initiative. Thus, you may investigate how officials are conducting their public trust, and make investigations as to the proper conduct of public institutions. This gives you the power to inspect such institutions, and if you decide, to call before you those in charge of their operations, and such other persons who can testify in that regard. If, as a result of such an investigation, it is determined that an improper condition exists, you may recommend a remedy. You shall have free access at all proper hours to papers, records, accounts and books of all county officers, including written reports of prior grand juries, for all examinations which in your discretion you may see fit to make, and may report to the court in relation thereto. While you may indict any person, you should not accuse any person by name of an offense, malfeasance, or misfeasance unless an indictment is returned. It is not your duty or responsibility to make reports praising performance of public duty by certain or all public officials. This is their duty under the law and their oath of office requires their diligent performance of lawful duties, and any such report by you could serve no purpose other than that of partisan politics.

The law requires that the circuit court shall charge you particularly concerning enforcement of the following laws:

1. Those against unlawful gambling and handling of intoxicating liquors;

2. Those relating to gambling with minors and the giving or selling to them tobacco, narcotics, or liquors;

3. Those providing for the assessment, collection and disbursement of the public revenues, state and county;

4. Those defining the duties of public officers;

5. Those relating to the collection and paying over of fines and forfeitures;

6. Those relating to providing fire escapes in hotels, theaters and other buildings;

7. Those relating to the management of 16th section school trust lands;

8. The law in relation to the illegal possession and sale of barbiturate acid and narcotics, and all other substances under the Controlled Substances Act, § 49-29-101 and following sections;

9. Section 47-1-31, prisoners, records, treatment and condition;

10. Section 47-1-27, responsibility of custodian of county prisoners;

11. Section 45-11-1, fire protection and safety;

12. Schools;

13. Motels, hotels, lodging houses, public buildings;

14. Handling of juveniles (In Harrison County only - The purposes and provisions of Chapter 23 of Title 43, "Family Court.");

15. Ambulance service;

16. Pollution of streams;

17. Hospitals;

18. Nursing homes;

19. Elections, corrupt practices, Section 23-3-27, et seq.;

20. The condition of the county roads and the performance of the duties of contractors, overseers and supervisors under § 65-7-119; and

21. Such other statutes as the circuit judge deems proper.

The oath which you have taken contains essential principles which govern you in your deliberations. The oath is your promise that you will keep secret what takes place in the grand jury room. A grand juror, except when called as a witness in court, shall not disclose any proceedings or action in relation to offenses brought before it for six months after the adjournment of the grand jury upon which the juror served. A grand juror shall not disclose the name or testimony of any witness who has been before the grand jury. Any disclosure of secrets within the six month period is punishable by fine or imprisonment for contempt of court.

The purpose of the secretary requirement is two-fold:

1. Accusations may be brought before you which you find unfounded. If publicity were given to the fact that the grand jury investigated a person, that person's reputation might be ruined even though the person is entirely innocent; and

2. If anyone charged with a crime learns of your investigation, that person would be given an opportunity to escape and defeat the process of criminal justice.

This requirement of secrecy demands that you do not communicate to anyone what has been said or done in the grand jury room unless you are ordered by a judge in open court to reveal it. You should report any person asking you, or attempting to ask you, what has occurred in the grand jury room. It does not matter if the attempt was in person, by phone, letter or otherwise; you should report such a question or attempt to the court and to the prosecuting attorney(s).

I want to thank each one of you for taking time out of your busy lives to perform this important civic duty. You are making a personal sacrifice, but I believe you will find this experience one of the most interesting in your lives. Furthermore, at the end of your service, you will have the satisfaction of having helped render justice among your neighbors.

1.00 GENERAL RULES

Rule 1.01. Proceedings must be orderly and dignified.

All proceedings in the Chancery Court, whether in term time or in vacation, shall be conducted with due formality and in an orderly and dignified manner. No drinks, food, gum or smoking shall be permitted. The counsel, parties, and witnesses, must be respectful to the court and to each other. Bickering or wrangling between counsel or between counsel and witness will not be tolerated. Applause or demonstration or approval or disapproval, and the use of profane or indecent language are prohibited. Counsel, in examining witnesses, in reading from brief or opinion and in all presentations, to the Court, shall stand unless specifically excused from doing so by the Court. Counsel shall in formal hearings address the Court in the historic manner of "Your Honor" and/or "May it please the Court." The dignity and the respect of the Court shall be preserved at all times.

In the interest of security, all persons entering the courtroom may be searched for weapons.

Expulsion from courtroom proper.

Where an executor was warned that his remarks, gestures and laughter during testimony were improper but he deliberately ignored the chancellor's directives, the chancellor did not abuse his discretion in removing him from the courtroom, and the executor was not thereby prejudiced as the chancellor allowed him to consult his attorney before cross-examination of opposing witnesses. Volmer v. Volmer, 832 So. 2d 615 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Rule 1.02. Officers must be present in court.

When the Court is in session the Sheriff and Clerk, in person or by competent deputies, must be present in the courtroom to perform such duties as may be required of them by law or the direction of the Chancellor unless excused by the Chancellor. The Court Reporter shall be present as the Chancellor may direct, to perform the duties of Court Reporter.

Rule 1.03. Sheriff must keep courtroom clean and comfortable.

The sheriff must see that the courtroom, library, Judge's chamber, witness rooms and rest rooms are kept clean and in comfortable condition.

Rule 1.04. Clerk must have papers and dockets in courtroom.

Unless the Chancellor directs otherwise, the Clerk shall, while the court is in session, have and keep in the courtroom, or in an office adjoining, the court file of each action pending for that day in the Court, and all dockets he is required to keep.

Rule 1.05. Officers, witnesses and solicitors must be prompt.

When any civil action has been set for, or adjourned to, a particular day or hour, all officers, parties, witnesses and solicitors whose presence is necessary for the trial shall be present promptly at the time set. Any negligent or willful failure to obey this rule shall be punished by contempt.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Contempt proper.

Chancellor did not err finding the attorney in contempt for failing to appear at the January 9 hearing where since there was no requirement that the attorney's conduct be willful under Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 1.05, there was no merit to her argument that the contempt judgment had to be set aside for lack of willfulness on her part; it was not a violation of the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to hold contempt hearings in youth court abuse proceedings out of the public eye and the chancellor did not become substantially involved with the prosecution of the contempt charge. In re Spencer, 985 So. 2d 330 (Miss. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 555 U.S. 1046, 129 S. Ct. 629, 172 L. Ed. 2d 610, 2008 U.S. LEXIS 8600, 77 U.S.L.W. 3324 (2008).

Attorney waived her right to notice and specification of the charge against her; pursuant to Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 1.05, an attorney need only be negligent in failing to appear for the chancellor to give grounds for holding her in contempt; since there was no requirement that the attorney's conduct be willful under this rule, there was no merit to her argument that the contempt judgment should be set aside for lack of willfulness on her part. In re Spencer, — So. 2d —, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 126 (Miss. Feb. 28, 2008), substituted opinion at, opinion withdrawn by 985 So. 2d 330, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 327 (Miss. 2008).

Rule 1.06. Assignment of cases.

(A) In multi-judge districts and courts, all civil cases shall be assigned immediately on the filing of the complaint by such method which shall insure that the assignment shall be random, that no discernable pattern of assignment exists, and that no person shall know to whom the case will be assigned until it has been assigned. If an attorney or party shall attempt to manipulate or defeat the purpose of this rule, the case shall be reassigned to the judge who would have otherwise received the assignment. If the judge who would have received the case under an assignment in compliance with this rule cannot be determined, a new assignment in compliance with the rule shall be made, excluding the judge to whom it was incorrectly assigned. Sanctions, including costs and attorney's fees, may be imposed by that judge on reassignment. Such sanctions may also include suspension from practice in the court imposing them for not more than 30 days and referral to the Bar for further discipline.

(B) Decisions regarding this rule shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court under M.R.A.P. 21, and appropriate stays shall be entered by the trial court to allow such review.

(C) In districts where motion days are set in advance with judges specifically assigned, preliminary procedural matters and those matters enumerated under M.R.C.P. 81(d)(1) and (2) may be submitted to the judge assigned such duties, notwithstanding the fact that the case has been assigned to another judge. Furthermore, by local rule approved by the Supreme Court, the trial court may make special provisions accommodating local needs of economy and efficiency which might otherwise be at variance with this rule. (Adopted effective May 29, 2003.)

COMMENT

In 2002 the Legislature adopted Miss. Code Ann. § 11-1-56, which required civil case assignments to be delayed until one defendant has filed responsive pleadings. By the adoption of this rule, the Supreme Court has superceded Section 11-1-56, exercising its inherent authority to adopt rules of practice, procedure and evidence to promote justice, uniformity, and the efficiency of the courts, as articulated in Newell v. State, 308 So. 2d 71 (Miss. 1975) and Hall v. State, 539 So. 2d 1338 (Miss. 1989).

The purpose of this rule is to prevent "judge shopping" within a district or a court. Although voluntary dismissal is allowed under M.R.C.P. 41 at any time prior to service by the adverse party of an answer or summary judgment, when a civil case is so dismissed and then refiled immediately thereafter with no substantial change in the parties or claims, such practice, as an example, may be taken as a wilful violation of this rule. Wilful violation of this rule may constitute an offense subject to suspension and other discipline under Rule 3.4(c) of the Rules of Professional Conduct. Sanctions authorized by this rule are cumulative to discipline under the Rules of Professional Conduct.

The assignment of cases by regular rotation among the judges of the district is not a random assignment as contemplated by this rule since a regular rotation will allow those attentive to the docket to predict the judge who will receive a particular assignment.

A party who believes that a case has been assigned in violation of this rule will first submit the issue to the judge before whom the case is pending; thereafter, either party aggrieved by the judge's decision on the issue may seek review of that decision by this Court under the provisions of M.R.A.P. 21.

In some districts, local modifications, which to some degree are at variance with the strict provisions of this rule, may be made while fulfilling the policy of the rule. These modifications are to be made by local rule, on petition of the local district under M.R.C.P 83 to the Supreme Court. The order by which this Rule 1.06 was adopted provides:

It is further ordered that this new rule shall be effective upon issuance of this order; however, local practices adopted for the purpose of accommodating the needs of economy and efficiency may be continued for a period of forty-five days from the issuance of this order, and in districts wherein the judges of the district have within such period petitioned the Court under M.R.C.P. 83 for local rules seeking approval of such practices or of other practices which might otherwise be in variance to this rule, the practices may continue to be used until the Supreme Court has considered the petition.

[Comment adopted effective May 29, 2003.]

In general.

New Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 1.06 was adopted and made effective May 29, 2003 to promote the fair and efficient administration of justice in the assignment of cases in the trial courts of the State in multi-judge districts, effective upon the issuance of the order; however, local practices adopted for the purpose of accommodating the needs of economy and efficiency could be continued for a period of 45 days from the issuance of the order, and in districts wherein the judges of the district within such period petitioned the Supreme Court under Miss. R. Civ. P. 83 for local rules seeking approval of such practices or of other practices which might otherwise be at variance with the rule, the practices could continue to be used until the Supreme Court had considered the petition. In re Unif. Ch. Ct. Rules, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 252 (Miss. May 29, 2003).

Rule 1.07. Presentation to other chancellor of matter when relief is denied prohibited.

When any matter been presented to one of the Chancellors and the relief denied, the attorney shall not go to one of the other Chancellors and present the same matter.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Illustrative cases.

There was no violation of this rule where (1) two defendants filed motions to dismiss or, in the alternative, for summary judgment as to their liability for attorney's fees, (2) the chancellor denied both motions, (3) after the denial of a petition for interlocutory appeal, the case was referred to another chancellor, who awarded attorneys' fees and expenses to the plaintiff, but found that the two defendants were not liable for such fees and expenses. Mauck v. Columbus Hotel Co., 741 So. 2d 259 (Miss. 1999).

There was no violation of this rule where, at trial before a chancellor, a different decision was rendered on an issue than was rendered before a different chancellor on a pretrial motion for summary judgment. Mauck v. Columbus Hotel Co., — So. 2d —, 1999 Miss. LEXIS 203 (Miss. June 17, 1999), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at, remanded by 741 So. 2d 259, 1999 Miss. LEXIS 266 (Miss. 1999).

Rule 1.08. Withdrawal of counsel.

When an attorney makes an appearance for any party in an action, the attorney will not be allowed to withdraw as counsel for the party except upon written motion and after reasonable notice to the client and opposing counsel.

Rule 1.09. Notification of relevant pending cases.

When counsel in a cause is aware of a case pending in another court of this or any other state or federal jurisdiction, which likely may affect the subject matter or jurisdiction of the cause pending in the Chancery Court, such counsel shall immediately notify the Chancery Court by written notice docketed for such other cause.

Rule 1.10. Discovery deadlines and practice.

(A) All discovery must be completed within ninety days from service of an answer by the applicable defendant. Additional discovery time may be allowed with leave of court upon written motion setting forth good cause for the extension. Absent special circumstances the court will not allow testimony at trial of an expert witness who was not designated as an expert witness to all attorneys of record at least sixty days before trial.

(B) When responding to discovery requests, interrogatories, requests for production, and requests for admission, the responding party shall, as part of the responses, set forth immediately preceding the response the question or request to which such response is given. Responses shall not be deemed to have been served without compliance to this subdivision.

(C) No motion to compel shall be heard unless the moving party shall incorporate in the motion a certificate that movant has conferred in good faith with the opposing attorney in an effort to resolve the dispute and has been unable to do so. Motions to compel shall quote verbatim each contested request, the specific objection to the request, the grounds for the objection and the reasons supporting the motion.

Failure to timely designate expert witness.

In divorce proceeding, the husband's expert witness was properly excluded for the husband's failure to timely disclose under Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 1.10 because the litigation was pending for approximately two years prior to trial, yet the husband failed to designate his expert witness until one week before the trial date, which would have resulted in prejudice to the wife. The husband knew that his wife planned to hire an expert to appraise the husband's business and that she had designated her expert witness and submitted the report during the discovery period. Hammers v. Hammers, 890 So. 2d 944 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 892 So. 2d 824 (Miss. 2005).

Rule 1.11. Motions for recusal of judges.

Any party may move for the recusal of a judge of the chancery court if it appears that the judge's impartially might be questioned by a reasonable person knowing all the circumstances, or for other grounds provided in the Code of Judicial Conduct or otherwise as provided by law. A motion seeking recusal shall be filed with an affidavit of the party or the party's attorney setting forth the factual basis underlying the asserted grounds for recusal and declaring that the motion is filed in good faith and that the affiant truly believes the facts underlying the grounds stated to be true. Such motion shall, in the first instance, be filed with the judge who is the subject of the motion within 30 days following notification to the parties of the name of the judge assigned to the case; or, if it is based upon facts which could not reasonably have been known to the filing party within such time, it shall be filed within 30 days after the filing party could reasonably discover the facts underlying the grounds asserted. The subject judge shall consider and rule on the motion within 30 days of the filing of the motion, with hearing if necessary. If a hearing is held, it shall be on the record in open court. The denial of a motion to recuse is subject to review by the Supreme Court on motion of the party filing the motion as provided in M.R.A.P. 48B. (Adopted April 4, 2002.)

Rule 1.12. Electronic media coverage.

Electronic media coverage of judicial proceedings by means of cameras, television and other electronic devises is governed by the Rules for Electronic and Photographic Coverage of Judicial Proceedings. (Adopted effective April 17, 2003 for proceedings conducted from and after July 1, 2003.)

COMMENT

Section 3B(12) of the Code of Judicial Conduct prohibits broadcasting, televising, recording, or taking photographs in the courtroom and areas immediately adjacent thereto except as authorized by rule or order of the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court has now adopted the Rules for Electronic and Photographic Coverage of Judicial Proceedings which provides detailed guidance for such coverage.

Adopted effective April 17, 2003.

Rule 1.13. Electronic filing and service procedures.

A court may, by local rule, allow pleadings and other papers to be served, filed, signed, or verified by electronic means in conformity with the Mississippi Electronic Court System procedures. Pleadings and other papers filed electronically in compliance with the procedures are written papers for purposes of these rules. Please refer to the Administrative Procedures for Mississippi Electronic Court System on the Supreme Court's website at www.mssc.state.ms.us. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009, for purposes of a pilot program for the Mississippi Electronic Court System.)

2.00 RULES CONCERNING PROCEEDINGS

Rule 2.02. Pleadings must be filed before presented.

All pleadings, accounts and other papers in any action shall be filed with the Clerk of the proper Court before being presented to the Chancellor. If to do so would inflict undue hardship on the attorney, or in emergency matters, the papers may be presented to the Chancellor and marked filed by him as provided in M.R.C.P. 5(e). Thereafter, the said papers shall be forthwith transmitted by the attorney to the proper Clerk.

Rule 2.03. No blanks in pleadings.

No blanks shall be contained in any pleading.

Rules 2.04 and 2.05. [Deleted].

[Deleted September 19, 1979.]

Rule 2.06. Blanks in pleadings must be filled in.

All blanks contained in any pleading must be properly filled in according to the fact or facts before being filed with the clerk or presented for consideration by the Court or Chancellor. If the pleader does not know, and is unable to learn, the necessary fact or facts to enable him to fill in such blanks accurately, he must so state in his pleading.

Rule 2.07. Pleadings must be paragraphed.

Each of the several facts on which a complainant may rely for relief shall be set forth in his bill of complaint in a separate paragraph, so far as can be conveniently done, and each paragraph shall be numbered consecutively. The defendant shall answer the bill in like numerical order, and may plead to the fact or facts stated in each such paragraph of the bill, any proper affirmative defense thereto. Or the defendant may answer the bill paragraphically and then plead such affirmative matters of defense to the bill as a whole as he may deem advisable or proper. But in such case, each of the several facts relied on as an affirmative defense shall be stated in a separate paragraph, so far as to distinguish the matters therein pleaded from those previously admitted or denied in response to the bill. And the same rule shall be observed in regard to cross-bills and answers thereto. Any failure to comply with this rule may be taken advantage of by motion to strike such defective pleading.

Rule 2.08. Delay in answering.

If after a cause is otherwise triable by law the defendant shall obtain leave to answer the bill and thereby delay the trial beyond the term, he shall, on motion of the complainant, be taxed with all costs accrued to the time of granting such leave, unless good cause be shown why it would be inequitable so to do.

Rule 2.09. Amendments during trial term.

Where either party during the term at which a cause is triable, or during the trial thereof, shall obtain leave to amend his pleadings concerning any material matter, which the opposite party is not prepared to meet, shall, if he so requests be entitled to a continuance, and the party so making such amendment shall, on motion of the opposite party, be taxed with all costs accrued to the time of granting such leave, unless special circumstances of the case make it inequitable so to do.

Rule 2.10. Trial not delayed because demurrer is overruled.

The complainant shall not be delayed of a trial in any case because a demurrer is overruled. If, in such a case, the defendant has failed to file his answer with his demurrer he shall, if the complainant so insists, be required to answer within such time as will not delay the trial beyond the term.

Rule 2.11. Motions for security for costs.

All motions for security for costs must be filed and presented not later than the second day of the term next after process has been served on the movant. Otherwise such motion will be overruled unless good cause is shown why this rule was not complied with.

3.00 RULES CONCERNING TRIALS

Rule 3.01. Vacation business rules of precedence.

Where the Chancellor has, by order or custom, set apart time for hearing vacation actions, all vacation matters coming before him at such time and place shall have precedence over all the business of any term of Court that may be then in session and not finally adjourned. At all other times during any term of Court, the business of the term shall have precedence over all vacation matters presented to the Chancellor.

Rule 3.02. Cloud of witness — What done.

The practice of summoning numerous witnesses to prove the same fact or set of facts often serves merely to increase the costs and consume the time of the Court. In such cases the Chancellor may, in his discretion, tax the per diem and mileage of all such unnecessary witnesses against the party causing them to be summoned whether they be called to testify or not. In all cases the mileage and per diem of all witnesses who are not called to testify shall be taxed against the party causing them to be summoned, unless good cause to the contrary be shown.

Rule 3.03. Examination of witnesses.

The examination of witnesses shall be limited to the direct examination, the cross-examination, and the redirect examination concerning matters brought out on cross-examination. Counsel for either party may be permitted, on request, to inquire about new matters pertinent to the issues which may have been inadvertently omitted. Opposing counsel may also inquire concerning the same matter. In all cases the examination must be conducted in an orderly and decorous manner without interruption from opposing counsel except for the purpose of interposing objections.

Rule 3.04. Objections to testimony — Rulings thereon.

All objections to testimony must be made to the Chancellor, not to opposing counsel. The objection must be specific rather than general. If requested by the Chancellor, counsel offering the testimony must state the purpose for which it is offered, and counsel objecting thereto must state the reasons for his objection. If the Chancellor shall reserve his ruling, counsel interposing the objection shall make a note thereof and renew his objection at the conclusion of the testimony; otherwise, he shall be deemed to have waived his objection.

Rule 3.05. Copy of exhibits.

Unless excused by the Court, it shall be the duty of an attorney to distribute copies of any exhibits to the Court and opposing counsel when offered. If a party is to make a substitution of a copy for any exhibit introduced into evidence, the copy shall be presented at the time the original is presented unless it could not be reasonably anticipated that the exhibit was to be offered.

Rule 3.06. Only one attorney for each party may examine witness.

Only one attorney for each party to the action may examine a witness, interpose objections, or respond to objections except by permission of the Chancellor.

Rule 3.07. Conference with witnesses.

Counsel for each party shall confer with his witness before beginning the taking of testimony in behalf of his client. This rule shall not apply to witnesses who are inaccessible before that time.

Rule 3.08. Firearms prohibited on the witness stand or in courtroom.

No person other than law enforcement officers shall take or carry firearms or other weapons into the courtroom. When law enforcement officers take the stand as litigants or witnesses, such officers shall remove their firearms and place same in the possession of the bailiff until the witness or litigant has left the witness stand.

Rule 3.09. Agreements of counsel.

Oral agreements of counsel made in the presence of the Court must be recorded by the Court Reporter, or an order entered in accordance therewith approved by counsel. All other agreements should be reduced to writing and filed among the papers in the case.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Application.

In a child custody and support modification action, the issue was whether the lower court committed reversible error by approving and signing a consent judgment which was not approved or signed by the father or his attorney. Further, no terms were ever announced in open court, recorded by a court reporter, and approved by counsel as required by Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 3.09 and 5.03,; the appellate court held that given those facts, it was without proof of substantial credible evidence to support the chancellor's order, and the order was vacated and the matter remanded for proper compliance with the aforementioned rules. Samples v. Davis, 904 So. 2d 1061 (Miss. 2004).

Rule 3.10. Earwigging the chancellor prohibited.

No person shall undertake to discuss with or in the presence or hearing of the Chancellor the law or the facts or alleged facts of any litigated action then pending in the Court or likely to be instituted therein, except in the orderly progress of the trial, and arguments or briefs connected therewith. No attempt in any manner, except as above stated, to influence the Chancellor's decision shall be made. No person shall send any written communication to the Chancellor concerning a pending action in the Court without delivering or mailing a copy of that communication to the opposing party. The Chancellor shall file in the court file all such written communications received by him. Any person who shall violate this rule, knowing that such conduct is prohibited, shall be guilty of a contempt.

In general.

In a contempt action, the wife asserted the husband received preferential treatment due to "earwigging," by means of letter to the chancellor, which was prohibited under Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 3.10. However, said letter was sent to chancellor two years before orders appealed from in the instant action, and it concerned a matter not at issue on appeal; thus, her claim was without merit. Jacobs v. Jacobs, 918 So. 2d 795 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 920 So. 2d 1008, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 596 (Miss. 2005).

Rule 3.11. Argument of counsel.

The Chancellor may dispense with argument in any action. He may require counsel to argue or brief the law and facts, either or both, in any action, and shall not be bound to decide the same until that duty has been performed to his satisfaction. In all cases counsel must be prepared to argue the case as soon as the taking of the testimony is concluded. The Chancellor may specify the points of law or fact on which he desires argument and regulate the order and limit the length of oral arguments. In all cases where briefs are requested by the Chancellor, copies thereof must be delivered in person or by mail to opposing counsel. Any negligent or willful failure on the part of counsel to fully argue or brief any question when requested by the Chancellor will be considered a grave discourtesy.

Rule 3.12. Notification of settlement or possible continuance.

Where a case has been set for trial on a day certain (placed on trial docket) and the parties have settled or agreed to settle the case before the trial date, then plaintiffs attorney shall immediately upon such agreement being reached so notify the Court. Where parties agree before the day set for trial to continue their case, then plaintiffs attorney shall likewise be obligated to immediately notify the Court that the parties desire to mutually seek a continuance.

4.00 RULES CONCERNING OPINIONS

Rule 4.01. Findings by the court.

In all actions where it is required or requested, pursuant to M.R.C.P. 52, the Chancellor shall find the facts specially and state separately his conclusions of law thereon. The request must be made either in writing, filed among the papers in the action, or dictated to the Court Reporter for record and called to the attention of the Chancellor.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Applicability.
Arbitration award.
Divorce.
Harmless error.

In general.

On a mother's counterclaim against a father for contempt concerning child support, medical insurance, and medical bills, a chancellor did not err by failing to provide specific findings of fact and conclusions of law because there was no record of any request by either counsel for specific findings of fact and conclusions of law. Farrior v. Kittrell, 12 So. 3d 20 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Chancery court's original and amended judgments that denied a father's request for a contempt order against the mother and a change in custody of their child were sufficiently detailed in the court's findings and conclusions of law where each included a list of facts supporting the court's decision. Balius v. Gaines, 958 So. 2d 213 (Miss. Ct. App. Nov. 1, 2005).

Trial court complied with Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 4.01 in both its original ruling and its amended ruling because both judgments consisted of six pages, including eight numbered paragraphs that detailed the findings of fact pronounced from the bench, and both judgments included a list of facts supporting the court's decision to deny the father's contempt motions and to grant the mother's motion for sanctions. Balius v. Gaines, 914 So. 2d 300 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 936 So. 2d 367, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 475 (Miss. 2006).

Because the appellate court was unable to determine the basis of a chancellor's decision, as the record contained neither a transcript of the proceedings in the trial court, nor any factual or legal foundation for the chancellor's decision to modify a decree, the case was remanded to the trial court for the chancellor to create a record of his factual findings as well as the legal basis for his decision. Yates v. State, 919 So. 2d 1122 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 926 So. 2d 922, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 71 (Miss. 2006).

Chancellor is not required to make a finding of fact and conclusion of law in absence of a request therefor, timely made. Bowser v. Tootle, 556 So. 2d 1373 (Miss. 1990).

Applicability.

Chancellor erred in awarding a father custody of his children as the chancellor did not refer to the factors in the best interests of the children or identify what Albright factors were considered, which was important as several of the factors that might have been in the father's favor were altered within a month of the court's ruling when the father and the children moved to California; specific findings were mandated due to the nature of the case, and Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 4.01 and Miss. R. Civ. P. 52(a) did not apply. Parra v. Parra, 65 So. 3d 872 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Arbitration award.

A chancellor, upon timely request, must render findings of fact and conclusions of law when affirming or denying an arbitration award, based upon an agreed order for arbitration. Americrete, Inc. v. West Ala. Lime Co., 758 So. 2d 415 (Miss. 2000).

Divorce.

Trial court erred in failing to provide findings of fact and conclusions of law when requested to do so by party to divorce. West v. West, 881 So. 2d 188 (Miss. 2004).

Trial court erred in failing to provide findings of fact and conclusions of law when requested to do so by party to divorce. Lowery v. Lowery, 657 So. 2d 817 (Miss. 1995).

Harmless error.

Where chancery court was requested to make particularized findings of fact and conclusions of law but declined to do so, making general findings of fact and conclusions of law instead, chancellor technically complied with requirements of this rule, and although particularized findings would have aided court on appeal, reversal was not warranted. Century 21 Deep S. Properties, Ltd. v. Corson, 612 So. 2d 359 (Miss. 1992); Hartwell Handle Co. v. Jack, 149 Miss. 465, 115 So. 586 (1928); Lott v. Windham, 191 Miss. 849, 4 So. 2d 342 (1941); Vicksburg, S. & P. Ry. v. Williams, 102 Miss. 735, 59 So. 883 (1912).

Rule 4.02. Opinion a part of record.

The Chancellor shall not be bound to render a formal opinion in deciding any action except as required by the preceding rule. He may at his election render an opinion either orally or in writing. If he shall render an oral opinion, it shall be taken down by the Court Reporter who shall, when directed by the Court, transcribe the same and submit it to the Chancellor for correction and approval. In either event the opinion so rendered shall be filed among the papers and become a part of the record in the cause without any order or direction to that effect.

In general.

Because the appellate court was unable to determine the basis of a chancellor's decision, as the record contained neither a transcript of the proceedings in the trial court, nor any factual or legal foundation for the chancellor's decision to modify a decree, the case was remanded to the trial court for the chancellor to create a record of his factual findings as well as the legal basis for his decision. Daley v. Daley, 909 So. 2d 106 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Rule 4.03. No interruption while rendering opinion.

While the Chancellor is rendering an oral opinion in any action he shall not be interrupted by anyone. After he has concluded, counsel for either party may make such suggestions or request such further findings of law or fact as may be deemed proper. The right to make suggestions or requests shall not be construed as the right to reargue the case or any part thereof. If the Chancellor desires reargument in whole or in part he will request it.

5.00 JUDGMENTS

Rule 5.01. Judgments — Form of caption.

Every Judgment shall show the number and style of the action at the top and have a caption showing the nature thereof.

Rule 5.02. Judgments — Contents and form.

Every Judgment shall adjudicate such facts as to show that the Court has lawful authority to render it. In every action where relief is granted the several items or elements thereof shall be stated in a separate paragraph which shall be numbered consecutively. Every Judgment shall be so drawn as to be definite and certain in all its terms and provisions. In all litigated cases the final Judgment shall tax the costs as the Chancellor may require and direct the issuance of appropriate process for its enforcement. No exception to the action of the Court may be embraced in any Judgment, but the party adversely affected thereby shall be deemed to have duly excepted thereto.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.

Because the appellate court was unable to determine the basis of a chancellor's decision, as the record contained neither a transcript of the proceedings in the trial court, nor any factual or legal foundation for the chancellor's decision to modify a decree, the case was remanded to the trial court for the chancellor to create a record of his factual findings as well as the legal basis for his decision. Daley v. Daley, 909 So. 2d 106 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Rule 5.03. Consent judgments must be approved and signed by both counsel.

Every consent Judgment must be approved and signed by counsel for all parties to the suit who may be represented by counsel and interested in or affected thereby before being presented to the Chancellor for his signature. The Court may also require the parties to sign.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Application.

In a child custody and support modification action, the issue was whether the lower court committed reversible error by approving and signing a consent judgment which was not approved or signed by the father or his attorney. Further, no terms were ever announced in open court, recorded by a court reporter, and approved by counsel as required by Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 3.09 and 5.03,; the appellate court held that given those facts, it was without proof of substantial credible evidence to support the chancellor's order, and the order was vacated and the matter remanded for proper compliance with the aforementioned rules. Samples v. Davis, 904 So. 2d 1061 (Miss. 2004).

Rule 5.04. Judgment must be submitted to opposing counsel and chancellor — When.

In all litigated actions, the attorney who shall be directed to draw the Judgment shall submit the same to opposing counsel for criticism as to form only, and shall present the same to the Chancellor within ten (10) calendar days after being directed to draw the judgment unless otherwise permitted.

Simultaneous submission.

This rule was complied with where counsel advised opposing counsel by letter to the chancellor that he was enclosing the proposed judgment and was forwarding opposing counsel a copy of the same for his criticism pursuant to the rule since opposing counsel was thereby afforded an opportunity to scrutinize the proposed order as to its form and the chancellor had an opportunity to examine any objections as to the form of the judgment. McCord v. Spradling, — So. 2d —, 2000 Miss. App. LEXIS 591 (Miss. Ct. App. Dec. 12, 2000), affirmed in part and reversed in part by, remanded in part by 830 So. 2d 1188, 2002 Miss. LEXIS 356 (Miss. 2002).

Counsel properly submitted a proposed judgment to opposing counsel for criticism where he advised opposing attorney by letter to the chancellor that he was enclosing the proposed judgment and was forwarding opposing counsel a copy of same for his criticism; although counsel did not submit the proposed judgment to opposing counsel prior to sending it to the chancellor, opposing counsel still had an opportunity to scrutinize the proposed order as to its form. McCord v. Spradling, — So. 2d —, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 349 (Miss. Ct. App. June 22, 1999), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 2000 Miss. App. LEXIS 591 (Miss. Ct. App. Dec. 12, 2000).

Rule 5.05. Presentation of court file.

Unless excused by the Court, when attorneys personally present to the Court any proposed order, they shall also present the court file for the convenience of the Court.

Rule 5.06. Judgment must be delivered to clerk.

As soon as a Judgment has been signed by the Chancellor, it shall be promptly delivered to the Clerk of the proper Court for record in the minute book. Any person to whom any Judgment may be entrusted by the Chancellor for delivery to the Clerk who shall either willfully or negligently fail to promptly deliver it to the Clerk, shall be guilty of a contempt.

6.00 RULES CONCERNING PROBATE MATTERS

Rule 6.01. Attorney must be retained.

Every fiduciary must, unless he is licensed to practice law, retain an attorney or firm of attorneys to represent, advise and assist him during the whole term of his office, whose compensation will be fixed or approved by the Chancellor. When an attorney has once appeared for such a fiduciary, in any respect, he may withdraw only with the consent of the Chancellor, after notice to the client. However, if he shall be or become negligent or unfaithful, in any respect, he may, with the consent of the Chancellor, be discharged. The practice of employing different attorneys, at the will of the fiduciary will not be tolerated.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Attorney's fees.

Chancellor was manifestly in error in approving $90,360 in attorney's fees which executor paid himself, where executor, during a seven and a half year period, withdrew his own fees at will in complete disregard for statutory obligations and chancery court rules. McCaffrey v. Fortenberry, 592 So. 2d 52 (Miss. 1991).

Rule 6.02. Fiduciaries and attorney must be diligent.

Every fiduciary and his attorney must be diligent in the performance of his duties. They must see to it that publication for creditors is promptly made, that inventories, appraisements, accounts and all other reports and proceedings are made, done, filed and presented within the time required by law, and that the estates of decedents are completed and assets distributed as speedily as may be reasonably possible. In guardianships and conservatorships an attorney must be faithful to both fiduciary and the ward and if it appears to the attorney that the fiduciary is not properly performing duties required by the law then he shall promptly notify the Court in which the estate is being administered. Failure to observe this rule without just cause shall constitute contempt for which the Chancellor will impose appropriate penalties.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Mismanagement.

Finding against the executrix was appropriate because she mismanaged the decedent's estate and was thus accountable for her actions. She further failed to provide any substantiation for her expenditure of a substantial portion of the estate's assets and failed to fulfill her required duties under Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 6.02. Frazier v. Shackelford (In re Estate of Carter), 912 So. 2d 138 (Miss. 2005).

Rule 6.03. Statement appended to annual accounts.

Every fiduciary shall append to each annual account, as a part thereof, a list or statement of all assets, real and personal, of the estate then in his hands or under his control. If any part thereof shall consist of money, bonds or other securities negotiable by delivery, then such statement shall also show the name of the bank where the same is deposited or kept. A certificate signed under oath by an officer of the bank that such money and bond or other securities are then on deposit or kept in such bank shall be attached. In case any of such assets shall consist of loans made by him or his predecessor in office, then such statement shall show to whom and when such loan was made, the amount remaining unpaid, how secured, whether all taxes have been paid on the property mortgaged or pledged as security for loan, and whether or not in his opinion the security is sufficient.

Rule 6.04. What vouchers must show.

Every disbursement shown by an account of fiduciary must be supported by proper vouchers, which shall conform to the requirements of Miss. Code Ann. (1972) Section 91-7-279 and Miss. Code Ann. Section 93-13-71. Every such voucher shall consist of a receipt or canceled bank check showing to whom and for what purpose the money was paid. All vouchers for claims paid which arose during the lifetime of a decedent or the sanity of a person of unsound mind shall show that the claim was properly probated, allowed and registered. This rule is modified as to banks or trust companies which are subject to the supervision of the Department of Bank Supervision of the State of Mississippi, or The Comptroller of the Currency of the United States to the extent they are covered by Miss. Code Ann. (1972) Section 91-7-277.

Rule 6.05. Disbursements and receipts annual and final accounts.

Where disbursements are shown on an annual or final account there shall be included therewith the voucher number, the date of the disbursement, the name of the payee, the purpose of the disbursement and the date of any court order authorizing such disbursement.

Where receipts are shown on such accounts there shall be included the date of the receipt, the name of the payor and on what account payment is made.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. Incomplete accounting.

There was no error with a chancery court's determination that an accounting submitted by an executor was incomplete because the accounting generally failed to disclose the purpose of the various expenses. Further, there was no merit to the claim that the chancery court penalized the executor for failing to file vouchers as the chancery court made it clear that it did not for the fact that the purposes of the expenditures were not disclosed. In re Estate of Thomas v. Thoms, 28 So. 3d 627 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 27 So. 3d 404, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 91 (Miss. 2010).

Rule 6.06. Lost vouchers-how substituted.

In case of the lost or destruction of any original voucher, the fiduciary may procure and present for allowance a duplicate or a receipt from the person or corporation to whom the money was paid or the property was delivered, which shall show on its face that it is a duplicate of the original voucher so lost or destroyed. The Chancellor may, if the proof be sufficient, allow the same as though the original had been produced.

Rule 6.07. Claims arising after death of decedent.

Claims arising after the death of a decedent, such as funeral bills, expenditures for monuments, attorney's fees, and the like must be approved by the Chancellor before payment. Otherwise, payment thereof will be at the risk of subsequent disapproval by the Chancellor as to the propriety or reasonableness thereof.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Attorney's fees.

In general.

An executor or executrix who acts without prior court approval does so at his or her peril; that is not to say, however, that a fiduciary who makes good faith expenditures is not entitled to reimbursement based solely on the fact that they were made prior to court approval. Pallatin v. Jones, 638 So. 2d 493 (Miss. 1994).

Attorney's fees.

Chancellor was manifestly in error in approving $90,360 in attorney's fees which executor paid himself, where executor, during a seven and a half year period, withdrew his own fees at will in complete disregard for statutory obligations and chancery court rules. McCaffrey v. Fortenberry, 592 So. 2d 52 (Miss. 1991).

Amount allowable as attorney's fees for services rendered in administration of an estate rests within sound discretion of chancery court. Harper v. Harper, 491 So. 2d 189 (Miss. 1986).

Chancellor did not abuse his discretion in allowing payment of attorney's fees for services rendered prior to date on which estate could and should have been closed, and surcharging balance of legal fees incurred after that date. Harper v. Harper, 491 So. 2d 189 (Miss. 1986).

Rule 6.08. Allowance for support of ward.

Every petition for an allowance for the support of a ward shall show the amount of his current estate, the estimated amount of his monthly or yearly income, and the amount of the previous allowance. Where the ward is a minor, any request of a guardian to expend funds of the ward for necessities which are the responsibility of the parent shall not be considered unless the guardian, under oath, justifies the reason for such proposed expenditures.

Rule 6.09. Petitions for authority to make loans or investments.

Every petition for authority to loan or invest the funds of a ward shall show the amount to be loaned or invested, the kind and description of the security offered or investment proposed and the value thereof. In case of a loan, to whom and the time for which it is to be made, and the rate of interest it is to bear. In all cases where a loan is proposed, the affidavits of two or more credible persons touching the value of the security offered must be attached to the petition filed with the papers in the action, or witnesses produced before the Chancellor.

Rule 6.10. Petitions for authority to compromise claims for wrongful death or injury.

Every petition for authority to compromise and settle a claim for wrongful death or injury shall set forth the facts in relation thereto and the reason for such compromise and settlement and the amount thereof. The material witnesses concerning the injury or death and the damages resulting therefrom shall be produced before the Chancellor for examination. Where counsel representing the petition has investigated the matter and advised settlement, he shall so appear and give testimony touching the result of his investigation.

On "future payment" or "structured settlement" cases, a certified copy of any insurance policy or other security guaranteeing payment shall be made a part of the court file within ninety (90) days from the date of the entry of the judgment or decree authorizing the settlement, unless good cause is shown.

Rule 6.11. Petitions for commissions.

Every petition by a fiduciary for the allowance of commissions, or for compensation for extra services and expenses, shall show the total amount of the estate coming into his hands, the total amount disbursed, the balance on hand, the nature and extent of the service rendered and expense incurred by him, and the total amount previously allowed to him on account thereof. Fees for fiduciaries and attorneys shall not be based on the value of any real property.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Timeliness of inventory.

Former conservator violated Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 6.11 by applying to receive fees from the ward's estate before he had filed an inventory of the estate. Bardwell v. Bardwell (In re Bardwell), 849 So. 2d 1240 (Miss. 2003).

Rule 6.12. Petitions for allowance of attorney's fees.

Every petition by a fiduciary or attorney for the allowance of attorney's fees for services rendered shall set forth the same facts as required in Rule 6.11, touching his compensation, and if so, the nature and effect thereof. If the petition be for the allowance of fees for recovering damages for wrongful death or injury, or other claim due the estate, the petition shall show the total amount recovered, the nature and extent of the service rendered and expense incurred by the attorney, and the amount if any, offered in compromise before the attorney was employed in the matter. In such cases, the amount allowed as attorney's fees will be fixed by the Chancellor at such sum as will be reasonable compensation for the service rendered and expense incurred without being bound by any contract made with any unauthorized persons. If the parties make an agreement for a contingent fee the contract or agreement of the fiduciary with the attorney must be approved by the Chancellor. Fees on structured settlements shall be based on the "present cash value" of the claim.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Contigency fee not subject to rule.
Excessive fees.
Fee found appropriate.
Lack of prior approval.

Contigency fee not subject to rule.

Where the attorneys in fact entered into a contract of employment with an attorney to pursue a personal injury claim on the ward's behalf, and the attorney, primarily out of caution, later submitted a proposed settlement to the chancery court for approval, the chancery court abused its discretion in reducing the lawyer's fee from a 40 percent contingency fee as provided in the contract to a 33 1/3 percent contingency fee. The contract was not one entered into pursuant to a traditional probate matter and it was not a contract within the parameters of Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 6.12; the practical effect of the chancellor's decision, upheld by the court of appeals, was a judicial abrogation of the provisions of the Uniform Durable Power of Attorney Act found in Miss. Code Ann. §§ 87-3-101 through 87-3-113 and it also constituted a failure to uphold Miss. Const. art. 3, § 16 and U.S. Const. Art. 1, § 10, cl. 1, which prohibited the impairment of obligations of contracts. In re Savell v. Renfroe, 876 So. 2d 308 (Miss. 2004).

Excessive fees.

Chancellor was manifestly in error in approving $90,360 in attorney's fees which executor paid himself, where executor, during a seven and a half year period, withdrew his own fees at will in complete disregard for statutory obligations and chancery court rules. McCaffrey v. Fortenberry, 592 So. 2d 52 (Miss. 1991).

Fee found appropriate.

Allowance of attorney's fee of $1500 was not an abuse of discretion, where lower court knew whole situation, manner in which will was probated, necessary advice to executor in management of estate, final account, and preparation thereof. Scott v. Hollingsworth, 487 So. 2d 811 (Miss. 1986).

Lack of prior approval.

Reasonableness of contingent fee would be examined on remand, where contingent fee agreement had not been approved by chancellor or signed by most of the beneficiaries of the estate. Pannell v. Guess, 671 So. 2d 1310 (Miss. 1996).

Rule 6.13. Pleading must be sworn to.

All pleadings, including accounts and reports, filed by a fiduciary shall be personally signed and sworn to by him. If required by the Chancellor he must produce proof touching the truth of the facts therein stated.

Rule 6.14. Court costs must be paid annually.

Every fiduciary shall at least annually pay all accrued court costs and present the clerk's receipt therefor as a voucher on his next accounting.

Rule 6.15. Copy of will filed with original.

Every petition to probate a Will must have a copy of the Will attached thereto.

Rule 6.17. Failure to file accountings.

If, without just cause, an attorney fails to file accountings or other matters in probate cases (estates, guardianships and conservatorships) after being so directed in writing by the Court, the Court may consider such misconduct as contempt.

7.00 RULES CONCERNING VACATION MATTERS

Rule 7.02. Return envelope must be enclosed.

When any attorney or Clerk shall forward papers to the Chancellor requesting a response or the return of a judgment, order or paper, a self-addressed, stamped envelope shall be enclosed for the return thereof to the Clerk by the Chancellor. If the attorney shall desire a copy of a judgment or order returned to him, he shall furnish such copy and self-addressed stamped envelope for the return thereof. All mail to the Chancellor should be fully prepaid.

Rule 7.03. Removal of disability.

In all cases for the removal of disability of a resident minor, the minor must be produced before the Chancellor for observation and examination unless specially excused from so doing. Except in extraordinary and exceptional cases, the Chancellor will decline to remove generally the disability of any minor who is under eighteen years of age. In all such cases, oral proof or affidavits must be produced.

8.00 RULES CONCERNING DIVORCE

Rules 8.01 and 8.02. [Deleted].

Rule 8.03. Corroboration.

In all uncontested divorce cases, except irreconcilable differences, the testimony of the Plaintiff must be substantially corroborated.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Sufficient corroboration.

In general.

It was clear from the transcript of a hearing in an uncontested divorce case that the husband corroborated his wife's testimony that she had experienced habitual, cruel and inhuman treatment by the husband, because the transcript revealed the husband's testimony indicating that there were physical altercations and admitting to hitting his wife with an open hand. Shavers v. Shavers, 982 So. 2d 397 (Miss. 2008).

Grant of divorce in favor of the husband on the grounds of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment was inappropriate pursuant to Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 8.03 because there was no corroborating testimony. Heatherly v. Heatherly, 914 So. 2d 754 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Evidence was insufficient to support the trial court's granting of a divorce on the ground of habitual, cruel, and inhuman treatment because (1) in the course of the 19-year marriage, the wife cited to one isolated physical attack and verbal threat, and the other accusations of the husband's mean tricks, name-calling, and refusal to sleep with her, fell more in the categories of mere unkindness, rudeness, and incompatibility then cruelty and (2) the corroborative evidence required by Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 8.03 and provided by the daughter was inconsistent with the wife's testimony that the physical abuse was limited to the one choking incident; thus, the appellate court reversed and vacated the trial court's judgment granting the wife a divorce based upon the statutory ground of habitual, cruel, and inhuman treatment pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-1. Reed v. Reed, 839 So. 2d 565 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Even where a divorce on grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment is uncontested, there must be corroboration of plaintiff's testimony. Peterson v. Peterson, 648 So. 2d 54 (Miss. 1994).

Sufficient corroboration.

Where a wife alleged that the husband committed adultery and physically and verbally abused the wife by hitting, punching, trying to strangle, and using a belt to whip the wife, it was error to deny a divorce based on the grounds of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment because (1) the wife offered testimony of physical and verbal abuse, (2) the wife provided sufficient corroboration to support the claim, and (3) the wife did not condone the abuse. Kumar v. Kumar, 976 So. 2d 957 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Rule 8.04. Irreconcilable differences divorce.

In all irreconcilable differences divorce actions (no-fault), the attorney is required to appear before the Court with the file to request approval of the Agreement and to obtain the signature of the Chancellor to the Judgment for Divorce-Irreconcilable Differences.

The attorney must be prepared to answer all inquiries that may be raised by the Court.

Rule 8.05. Financial statement required.

Unless excused by Order of the Court for good cause shown, each party in every domestic case involving economic issues and/or property division shall provide the opposite party or counsel, if known, the following disclosures:

(a) A detailed written statement of actual income and expenses and assets and liabilities, such statement to be on the forms attached hereto as Exhibit "A", copies of the preceding year's Federal and State Income Tax returns, in full form as filed, or copies of W-2s if the return has not yet been filed; and, a general statement of the providing party describing employment history and earnings from the inception of the marriage or from the date of divorce, whichever is applicable; or,

(b) By agreement of the parties, or on motion and by order of the Court, or on the Court's own motion, a more detailed statement on the form attached hereto as Exhibit "B".

The party providing the required written statement shall immediately file a Certificate of Compliance with the Chancery Clerk for filing in the court file.

A party filing a document containing personal identifiers and/or sensitive information and data may (1) file an unredacted document under seal; this document shall be retained by the court as part of the record; or, (2) file a reference list under seal. The reference list shall contain the complete personal data identifiers and/or the complete sensitive information and data required by this Rule.

The disclosures shall be made by the plaintiff not later than the time that the defendant's Answer is due, and by the defendant at the time that the defendant's Answer is due, but not later than 45 days from the date of the filing of the commencing pleading. The Court may extend or shorten the required time for disclosure upon written motion of one of the parties and upon good cause shown.

The disclosures shall include any and all assets and liabilities, whether marital or non-marital. A party is under a duty to supplement prior disclosures if that party knows that the disclosure, though correct when made, no longer accurately reflects any and all actual income and expenses and assets and liabilities, as required by this Rule.

When offered in a trial or a conference, the party offering the disclosure statement shall provide a copy of the disclosure statement to the Court, the witness and opposing counsel.

This rule shall not preclude any litigant from exercising the right of discovery, but duplicate effort shall be avoided.

The failure to observe this rule, without just cause, shall constitute contempt of Court for which the Court shall impose appropriate sanctions and penalties. (Amended effective July 1, 1996; amended effective January 8, 2009, to provide procedures for filing documents containing sensitive personal information: amended effective July 1, 2011, to incorporate an optional long form financial statement; amended effective July 1, 2012, to provide a duty to supplement disclosures.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Adjusted gross income.
Change in circumstances not shown.
Failure to disclose.
Judicial discretion proper.
Lack of statement excused.
Submission of false statement.

Adjusted gross income.

In a divorce case, a chancellor did not err in determining a husband's adjusted gross income by using evidence from his financial statement, a tax return, and the testimony of witnesses; moreover, the chancellor correctly applied Miss. Code Ann. § 43-19-103 in determining the amount of child support. Spahn v. Spahn, 959 So. 2d 8 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 958 So. 2d 1232, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 361 (Miss. 2007).

Change in circumstances not shown.

Mother was not entitled to an increase in child support because, based on the evidence, including the parties' Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 8.05 financial statements, she failed to show a material change in circumstances; the fact that the parties' children had aged was not determinative absent a showing that a corresponding increase in expenses was not foreseeable when the parties' first stipulated to child support, and there was no showing of a material change based on one child's medical issues as it was not shown that those issues would persist. McNair v. Clark, 961 So. 2d 73 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Failure to disclose.

There was no manifest error in basing the amount of a husband's child support obligation on his earning capacity because the husband was not truthful in the representations that he made in his financial statement, under Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 8.05. Swiderski v. Swiderski, 18 So. 3d 280 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 19 So. 3d 82, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 465 (Miss. 2009).

There was no showing that the chancery court failed to enforce compliance with Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 8.05, which required the parties to submit financial statements detailing income, expenses, assets, and liabilities. While the father argued on appeal that the mother's financial statement did not adequately distinguish between her expenses and the children's expenses, the financial statement was accepted by the father at the modification hearing without objection, and he acknowledged that the expenses reflected in the financial statement were reasonable. Reid v. Reid, 998 So. 2d 1032 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Chancery court properly dismissed a wife's motion for contempt and modification of a property settlement in a divorce proceeding where the husband did not commit fraud by failing to disclose a 401(k) account; the existence of the 401(k) account was mentioned in the financial statement provided to the wife, even though it was not in the manner preferred. Shaw v. Shaw, 985 So. 2d 346 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 977 So. 2d 1144, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 135 (Miss. 2008).

Appellate court declined to reverse the findings of the chancellor in favor of the mother because the father and daughter failed to provide any estimate regarding the value of the marital estate; although testimony indicated that there was additional personal property that had not been taken into account in the mother's Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 8.05 disclosure, no effort was made by either party to illuminate the value of that additional property. King v. King, 946 So. 2d 395 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 947 So. 2d 960, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 52 (Miss. 2007).

Where the parties were separated several years and the husband won $ 2,600,000 in a lottery shortly before the divorce but did not disclose same, as to the wife's modification action, a remand was required for a determination under the applicable case law as to whether the lottery ticket constituted marital property under Hemsley, and if so, for an equitable division pursuant to Ferguson; in light of the husband's failure to have disclosed said winnings, and in light of Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 8.05, the chancery court also erred in denying the wife's motion for contempt. Kalman v. Kalman, 905 So. 2d 760 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Judicial discretion proper.

In their divorce case, the parties' Miss. R. Civ. P. 8.05 declarations were "very unspecific," and they presented conflicting testimony as to the value of their property. Since neither party offered expert testimony as to the value of said property, and because there was no ongoing business or unusual or unique asset in the marital estate that might have required expert testimony, the chancellor properly derived a value for the property based primarily upon the Rule 8.05 declarations of the parties. Studdard v. Studdard, 894 So. 2d 615 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Lack of statement excused.

In a divorce action, the chancery court did not err in not requiring the parties to file a financial statement as child support and alimony were not an issue. Luse v. Luse, 992 So. 2d 659 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Chancery court did not err in granting a divorce without requiring Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 8.05 financial declarations where the wife failed to allege any concealment. In re Dissolution of the Marriage of De St. Germain, 977 So. 2d 412 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Chancellor properly weighed each Armstrong factor in determining alimony award, discussing the parties' earning capacities, standards of living, and their respective tax obligations; the husband failed to provide a financial disclosure statement pursuant to Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 8.05; thus, the trial court's failure to order the wife's disclosure was of no consequence. Ghoston v. Ghoston, 979 So. 2d 719 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Where chancellor made award of lump sum alimony and did not mention on record the lack of financial statements, it could be assumed that the requirement of such financial statements was properly excused. Bland v. Bland, 629 So. 2d 582 (Miss. 1993).

Submission of false statement.

Court was within its authority to modify a divorce judgment almost four years later when the wife presented evidence that the husband intentionally submitted a substantially false Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 8.05 financial disclosure statement; such intentional filing constituted a fraud, for which there was no limitation of time restricting a remedy under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b). Trim v. Trim, 33 So. 3d 471 (Miss. 2010).

Rule 8.06. Change of address of children.

(a) In all domestic cases involving custody or visitation of minors and even though no order for custody or visitation may have been entered, each party shall keep the other informed of his/her full address, including state, city, street, house number, and telephone number, if available, unless excused in writing by the Court.

(b) Within five days of a party subject to this rule changing his/her address, he/she shall, so long as the child or children remain minors, notify in writing the Clerk of the Court which has entered the order providing for custody and visitation, of his/her full new address and shall furnish the other party a copy of such notice. The notice shall include the Court file number. The Clerk shall docket and file such notice in the cause.

(c) In the event of a threat, disaster, or other emergency, such as a hurricane, which causes an emergency evacuation, any party who has custody of a minor child (physical custody or while exercising visitation) has a duty to notify the other parent of the location and well being of the minor(s) as soon as reasonably possible.

(d) Every order respecting custody or visitation should contain a provision incorporating the terms and requirements of sub-paragraphs (a), (b) and (c) above.

(e) The purpose of this rule is to prevent a parent from concealing from others the address and whereabouts of children. Willful failure to comply with this rule may be treated as a contempt. Failure to file with the Clerk the notice required by this rule shall create a rebuttable presumption that written notice was not given to the other party. (Adopted effective February 18, 1991; amended effective July 17, 2008 to provide notification of parent in case of emergency evacuation.)

9.00 RULES CONCERNING DUTIES OF THE CLERK

Rule 9.01. Costs of court.

Court cost deposits to pay the fees due the Chancery Clerk shall be made with the filing of any complaint or petition as follows:

(1) No fault divorce: a deposit of $30.00.

(2) Complaints other than ex parte matters: a deposit of $75.00.

(3) All ex parte matters: a deposit of $25.00.

(4) Upon filing a counterclaim or crossclaim by a Cross-Plaintiff: a deposit of $25.00.

(5) The Clerk may, pursuant to M.R.C.P. 3(b), require an additional deposit. (Amended effective June 24, 1992.)

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

Section 25-7-9 must be read along with Uniform Chancery Court Rule 9.01. Reeves, Apr. 21, 2006, A.G. Op. 06-0129.

Where the plaintiff files a complaint against the defendant, and the defendant files an answer containing one or more counterclaims, there is no basis to charge the $25.00 fee. But when one of the defendants of the original cause of action files a complaint against another of the original defendants, then the clerk may charge the original defendant filing this new complaint with a co-defendant in the original cause of action the $25.00 fee. Likewise, where one of the plaintiffs in the original cause of action files a complaint against another of the original plaintiffs, then the Clerk may charge the original plaintiffs filing this new complaint against a co-plaintiff in the original cause of action the $25.00 fee. Reeves, Apr. 21, 2006, A.G. Op. 06-0129.

Rule 9.02. All papers must be kept in proper files.

The Clerk shall place and keep all papers pertaining to each action in a separate file and all papers pertaining to the same case shall be kept in the same file. The Clerk shall place and keep the files containing the papers in a filing case in the Clerk's office, or vault, in numerical order. In addition, files may be maintained electronically or on microfilm or microfiche provided a "reader" is available in the Clerk's office.

Papers pertaining to same case.

With respect to a separate maintenance suit and a subsequently filed divorce action, although the filing of the pleadings in two different cause numbers did not result in a reversible injustice, the papers ought to have been kept in the same file because the two cases originated from the same set off acts and involved the same parties. Hampton v. Hampton, 977 So. 2d 1181 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 977 So. 2d 1144, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 129 (Miss. 2008).

Rule 9.03. [Deleted].

Rule 9.04. Original wills and bonds how kept.

The Clerk shall keep all original Wills, all bonds and receipts from banks and all disputed documents filed with him safely and securely locked in a safe or vault in his office. He shall not permit the same to be taken from his custody for any purpose, except on an order of the Chancellor entered on the minutes.

Rule 9.05. [Deleted].

10.00 ABORTION

Rule 10.01. Waiver of consent to abortion.

Any request by a minor to the Chancery Court or the Chancellor in vacation for waiver of consent to an abortion shall be by petition, filed with the Clerk of said Court by the minor or by a next friend. The petition shall be made under oath and shall include all of the following:

(1) A statement that the complainant is pregnant;

(2) A statement that the complainant is unmarried, under eighteen years of age, and unemancipated;

(3) A statement that the complainant wishes to have an abortion without the notification of her parents or legal guardian;

(4) An allegation of one or more of the following:

(a) That the complainant is sufficiently mature and well informed to intelligently decide whether to have an abortion without the notification of her parents or legal guardian;

(b) That one or both of her parents or her legal guardian was engaged in a pattern of physical, sexual, or emotional abuse against her, or that the notification of her parents or legal guardian otherwise is not in her best interest;

(c) That performance of the abortion would be in the best interest of the minor.

(5) A statement as to whether the complainant has retained an attorney, the name, address, and telephone number of her attorney. A minor may represent herself or be represented by counsel. The Court shall advise each minor petitioner of her right to court-appointed counsel, and shall appoint counsel to represent her if the minor so requests, and if the minor appears not to be represented.

If the minor chooses to represent herself such pleadings, documents, or evidence which she may file with the Clerk shall be liberally construed by the Court so as to do substantial justice. No fee shall be required by the Clerk for filing any papers or pleadings.

Upon the filing of any petition under this section, the Clerk shall immediately notify the Court or the Chancellor in vacation that such petition has been filed. The Court, or the Chancellor in vacation shall immediately exercise all due diligence in granting a setting within the time required by law. If a Chancellor in the District is not available, the Clerk shall immediately refer the petition to another Chancellor, Circuit Judge, County Judge, or a special master in Chancery to hear the petition as provided by law.

If the Court cannot hear the matter or the Court fails to make findings of fact and conclusions of law within 72 hours of the time of the filing of the petition, the Clerk shall immediately issue or cause to issue a statement under seal of the Court, that the Court has not ruled within 72 hours of the time of the filing of the petition and that the minor may proceed as if the consent requirement of Miss. Code Ann. 41-41-53 has been waived.

All proceedings, files, documents, and records reasonably connected with proceedings herein shall be kept strictly confidential and anonymous. Reference to said minor's identity shall be made by use of her initials only. Docket entries and decrees or orders spread upon the minutes of the Court shall in no way refer to the name of the minor, but shall be by reference to initials only.

The Court or the Chancellor in vacation shall conduct closed hearings regarding any such petition filed, and the Clerk, Reporter, and other officers of the Court shall take such steps as are reasonably necessary to maintain the confidentiality and anonymity of both litigants and documents.

If the Court or Chancellor in vacation shall rule against the petition or petitioner, or not grant a waiver of necessity for parental consent, a confidential, expedited appeal may be had by the minor pursuant to Mississippi Rule of Appellate Procedure 48.

If no appeal is taken during the appropriate period, but in no event later than seven (7) days following the filing of the disposition of said petition, all records except the Court's docket shall be securely sealed and deposited under lock and key in the Clerk's office and shall remain sealed and not available for inspection without further order of the Court. (Adopted effective February 18, 1991; amended March 22, 2001.)

11.00 CONFLICTING RULES

Rule 11.01. Priority.

If there be any conflict between these Rules and Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure, Rules of Evidence, Mississippi Constitution and any applicable Mississippi statutes, the latter shall be followed. (Former Rules 10.00 and 10.01 renumbered 11.00 and 11.01, respectively, effective February 18, 1991..)

ADMINISTRATIVE ORDER IN REGARD TO THE USE OF COURT MEDIATORS IN DOMESTIC RELATIONS ACTIONS

As Amended February 17, 1987

WHEREAS the voluntary use of court-appointed mediators to help parties to civil litigation in the District and Superior Courts of the State of Maine to settle their disputes has proven useful to both the parties and the courts and is now mandatory; and

WHEREAS mediation has helped to settle many disputes in Mississippi Courts since it was authorized by administrative Order on December 1, 1986; and

WHEREAS mediation has often proved to be particularly valuable in helping parties to resolve through their own efforts many issues of custody, visitation, support, disposition of property, alimony, and the like that arise in divorce and other domestic relations actions; and

WHEREAS some Chancery Courts in Mississippi may desire mediation services to resolve cases without trial and the parties to domestic relations actions may be encouraged or required to use mediation to attempt to resolve their controversies; and

WHEREAS it appears appropriate to obtain the results of experimentation with the use of mediation in domestic relations actions; and

WHEREAS for the purpose of this Administrative Order, the term "domestic relations actions" shall include, without limitations, any actions for divorce, judicial separation, disposition of marital property or child custody proceedings.

NOW THEREFORE, it is ordered that:

1. In any domestic relations action, a court mediator may be made available by the Court, upon the joint request of the parties or their attorneys made to the clerk or the court administrator. The Court may also require mediation in any domestic relation action.

2. In any domestic relations action in those Chancery Districts that may use mediators, counsel is expected to inform his client and opposing counsel on the advisability of using the services of a court mediator on all or certain issues. If mediation is requested by the parties, counsel shall notify the clerk of court administrator. If the Court requires mediation the parties or their attorney shall be notified by the clerk or the court administrator.

3. In any domestic relations action, those courts using mediators may, before conducting a contested hearing, determine what efforts the parties have made to settle their controversy, and may, as the Court deems appropriate, require that the parties meet with a court mediator to attempt to resolve all or certain of the disputed issues.

4. Every settlement reached through mediation shall be submitted to the court for approval within five days of the mediation, and, if approved, shall be reflected in the judgment of the Court.

5. This administrative order applies to any domestic relations action that is pending on this date, as well as to any hereafter commenced.
6. The mediators shall be selected by the trial Judge, who may assess each party a reasonable sum, as cost, to cover the services of the mediator.
7. A copy of this amended administrative order shall be displayed on the public bulletin board at each clerk's office in those Courts using mediators.
SO ORDERED this the 17th day of February 1987.

ADMINISTRATIVE ORDER IN REGARD TO STANDARDIZED FINANCIAL STATEMENTS IN DOMESTIC RELATIONS ACTIONS

As Amended June 12, 1996

IN RE: UNIFORM CHANCERY COURT RULES - RULE 8.05

ORDER

This matter came before the Court, sitting en banc, on the petition of the Chancery Conference, filed March 11, 1996, seeking amendment of Rule 8.05 of the Uniform Chancery Court Rules which would provide a standardized financial statement for use in domestic matters. The Court having examined the petition finds that the proposal will contribute to the fair and efficient administration of justice and that it should be granted.

IT IS, THEREFORE, ORDERED that the petition of the Chancery Conference, filed March 11, 1996, seeking amendment of Rule 8.05 of the Uniform Chancery Court Rules be and the same is hereby granted, and that effective July 1, 1996 the Uniform Chancery Court Rules shall stand amended, Rule 8.05 to read as set forth in Exhibit "I" hereto, and Exhibits "A," "B," and "C" to Exhibit "I" shall be appended as exhibits to the Uniform Chancery Court Rules.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that a certified copy of this order shall be forwarded by the Clerk of this Court to West Publishing Company for publication as promptly as reasonably possible in the advance sheets of the Southern Reporter, Second Series, the official reporter of cases decided in this Court, and in the Mississippi Rules of Court.

SO ORDERED, this, the 12th day of April, 1997.

1.00 GENERAL RULES

Rule 1.01. Scope of rules.

These rules govern procedures in justice court and, except where specified, apply to all actions, civil and criminal.

Rule 1.02. Courtroom decorum and security.

The court shall be opened formally and conducted with dignity and decorum at all times. The judge shall wear a judicial robe at all times when presiding in open court. Each officer of the court shall be responsible for promotion of respect for the court.

No one shall wear or bear firearms or weapons of any description in the courtroom, except bailiffs and any necessary guards of a prisoner, unless authorized by the court.

Rule 1.03. Failure to conform to these rules.

Any person embraced within these rules who violates the provisions hereof may be subject to sanctions, contempt proceedings or other disciplinary actions imposed or initiated by the court.

Rule 1.04. Use of cameras, recording and broadcasting equipment.

The use of cameras, recording or broadcasting equipment, or such shall be governed by the Code of Judicial Conduct.

Rule 1.05. Earwigging the judge prohibited.

No person shall undertake to discuss with, or in the presence of, or hearing of the judge, the law or facts or alleged facts of any case then pending in the court, or likely to be instituted therein, except in the orderly progress of the trial, and arguments or briefs connected therewith; nor attempt in any manner, except as stated above, to influence the decision of the judge in any manner.

Rule 1.06. Clerk's duty to keep papers.

No original record, or any part of a file, record or court papers shall be taken from the clerk's custody without the permission of the clerk of the court. The docket of the court shall at all times remain in the office of the justice court clerk. The clerk shall retain custody of the docket, make all entries thereon, keep it safe and provide it to the court for examination in the office. The docket may be maintained by computer. Failure of a judge to sign the docket shall not invalidate the actions of the court contained therein.

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

A justice court clerk has the authority to ask any individual, including an auditor, who is seeking to remove records from the justice court clerk's office to sign a receipt to account for those records. Erby, July 16, 2004, A.G. Op. 04-0320.

Rule 1.07. Correction of clerical errors.

Clerical mistakes in judgments, orders, or other parts of the record, and errors therein arising from oversight of omission, may be corrected by the court at any time on its own initiative or on motion of any party and, after such notice, if any, as the court orders, up until the time the record is transmitted by the clerk of the justice court to the higher court. Notices of clerical errors corrected shall be given to the parties of the action.

Rule 1.08. Officer of the court must not sign bonds.

No officer of the court shall sign any bond of any kind in or to any court of this state.

Rule 1.09. Withdrawal of counsel.

When an attorney makes an appearance for a party in a case, that attorney will not be allowed to withdraw as attorney for the party without the permission of the court. The attorney making the request shall give notice to his client and to all attorneys in the cause and certify the same to the court in writing. The court shall not permit withdrawal without prior notice to his client and all attorneys of record.

Rule 1.10. Recusal of judges.

If a justice court judge recuses himself or is otherwise unable to serve in a case, the case shall be rotated to another justice court judge of the county. If no justice is able to serve because of recusals, or is otherwise unable to serve, then a circuit court judge of the district, in consultation with the recused judge(s), may appoint another justice court judge from a surrounding county to hear the case.

Rule 1.11. Additional rules.

No rule of procedure, local or otherwise, shall be adopted without the approval of the Mississippi Supreme Court.

Rule 1.12. Pleadings and motions submitted to the court.

All pleadings, motions or any other application to the court shall bear the name, address and phone number of the party filing the same, and, if any attorney is representing the party, the name, office address and phone number of the attorney.

Rule 1.13. Requests of subpoenas.

Requests for subpoenas must be made in writing and delivered to the clerk in a reasonable time before the trial date. The written request to the clerk shall give the address of the witnesses and other information, so as to furnish sure guides to the person serving the subpoena. These requests must be preserved by the clerk.

Rule 1.14. Service of subpoenas.

(a) Every subpoena shall be issued by the clerk under seal of the court, shall state the name and address of the court and the title of the action, and shall command each person to whom it is directed to attend and give testimony at a time and place therein specified.

(b) A subpoena may be served by the sheriff, his deputy, a constable, or by any other person who is not a party and is not less than 18 years of age, and his return endorsed thereon shall be prima facie proof of service, or the witness may be acknowledge service in writing on the subpoena. Service of the subpoena shall be executed upon the witness personally.

(c) At the request of any party, subpoenas for attendance at a hearing or trial shall be issued by the clerk of the court in which the hearing or trial is held. A subpoena requiring the attendance of a witness at a hearing or trial may be served at any place within the state.

(d) Failure of any person, without adequate excuse, to obey a subpoena served upon him may be subject to the penalties provided in Miss. Code Ann. § 11-9-115.

Rule 1.15. Appointment of interpreter.

The court may appoint an interpreter pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. §§ 13-1-301 through 13-1-315.

Rule 1.16. Summons of jurors.

When a jury is needed in justice court, the justice court clerk shall notify the circuit court clerk who shall issue summonses for a jury in the same manner as for circuit court. The summonses shall be returnable to justice court.

Rule 1.17. Participants must be prompt.

Every person whose presence is required for the conduct of the business of the court shall be in prompt attendance.

Rule 1.18. Conduct of counsel and parties.

(a) Each party or its representative shall manifest an attitude of professional respect toward the judge, the opposing attorney, witnesses, defendants, jurors, and others in the courtroom. In the courtroom, attorneys shall not engage in behavior or tactics purposely calculated to irritate or annoy the opposing attorney and shall address the court, not the opposing attorney, on all matters relating to the case.

(b) All objections to testimony must be made to the judge and not to the opposing attorney. The objection must be specific and not general. The attorneys will not be permitted to argue between themselves. Attorneys must stand when addressing the court, examining witnesses, and addressing the jury, except when excused for good cause by the court. Attorneys may directly address the jury panel only during voir dire, opening and closing statements.

(c) Attorneys and/or parties must limit themselves to asking questions and must refrain from making statements, quips, or side remarks in an examination of a witness. The examination of witnesses will be conducted fairly and objectively, with the attorneys and witnesses displaying respect and courtesy to each other. The attorneys may not ask questions merely to embarrass or humiliate the witness.

(d) In opening statements, and in closing arguments, an attorney may not attack the opposing attorney. The attorneys may not call any juror by name, or have any personal contact with the jury whatsoever, nor attempts to converse with or solicit audible answers from the jurors individually. In the argument to the jury, the attorneys will be required to keep within proper bounds, and any attempt to inject improper matter may be stopped by the court without the necessity of an objection. The attorneys will refrain from thanking the jury for acting as jurors and, after return of a verdict by the jury, neither the attorneys, parties, or spectators shall offer their congratulations, thanks, or condemnation to the jury for the verdict returned.

Rule 1.19. Composition of jury.

Juries shall consist of six (6) persons and, in the discretion of the court, an alternate juror. Both sides may challenge any juror for cause. Each side shall have two (2) peremptory challenges. These challenges shall not be used in the selection of the alternate juror. Each side shall be allowed one peremptory challenge for the selection of an alternate juror; and this selection shall not be used for regular jurors. Peremptory jury challenges shall be exercised as follows:

(1) The court shall consider all challenges for cause before the parties are required to exercise peremptory challenges.

(2) Next, the plaintiff shall tender to the defendant a full panel of accepted jurors having considered the jury in the order in which they appeared, having exercised any peremptory challenges desired.

(3) Next, the defendant shall go down the juror list accepted by the plaintiff and exercise any peremptory challenges to that panel.

(4) Once the defendant exercises peremptory challenges to the panel tendered, the plaintiff shall then be required to again tender to the defendant a full panel of accepted jurors.

(5) The above procedure shall be repeated until a full panel of jurors has been accepted by both sides.

(6) Once the jury panel is selected, alternate jurors shall be selected following the procedure set forth above for picking the jury panel.

(7) Constitutional challenges for the use of peremptory challenges shall be made at the time each panel is tendered.

Rule 1.20. Voir dire of jurors.

In the voir dire examination of jurors, the attorney will question the entire venire only on matters not required into by the court. Individual jurors may be examined only when proper to inquire as to answers given or for other good cause allowed by the court. No hypothetical questions requiring any juror to pledge particular verdict will be asked. Attorneys will not offer an opinion on the law. The court may set a reasonable time limit for voir dire.

Rule 1.21. Alternate jurors.

The alternate juror shall take the oath of a juror and hear all evidence and arguments, but shall not retire to deliberate the case unless a juror is excused by the court or becomes unable to serve.

Rule 1.22. Communications with jurors.

Jurors are not permitted to mix and mingle with the attorneys, parties, witnesses, and spectators in the courtroom, corridors, or restrooms in the courthouse. The court must instruct jurors that they are to avoid all contacts with the attorneys, parties, witnesses or spectators.

Except as provide by these rules, no person or attorney for the person involved in any case may communicate with or offer any favor, however slight, to any person on the jury venire.

Rule 1.23. Jury instructions.

The judge shall instruct the jury on the law applicable to the case.

Rule 1.24. Jury deliberations.

(a) The court may direct the jury to select one of its members to preside over the deliberations and to write out and return any verdict agreed upon, and admonish the jurors that, until they are discharged as jurors in the cause, they may communicate upon subjects connected with the trail only while the jury is convened in the jury room for the purpose of reaching a verdict.

(b) The jurors shall be kept together for deliberations as the court reasonable directs.

(c) After the jurors have retired to consider their verdict, the court shall not recall the jurors to hear additional evidence.

(d) The jury shall reduce its verdict to writing and present the same to the court.

Rule 1.25. Appeals from justice court.

Appeals from justice court shall be governed by the rules approved by the Supreme Court for the governance of appeals to the county or circuit courts.

2.00 CIVIL RULES

Rule 2.01. Applicability rules.

All rules designated as civil rules are applicable only in civil cases. General rules are also applicable in civil cases.

Rule 2.02. Form of action.

There shall be one form of action known as "civil action."

Rule 2.03. Commencement of civil action.

A civil action shall commenced in accordance with provisions of Miss. Code Ann § 11-9-105.

Rule 2.04. Issuance of summons.

Summons shall be issued and served pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-9-107, 11-9-109 and 13-3-5(2).

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

There is no statutory provision allowing for private process servers within the state of Mississippi other than the emergency situation. Process in criminal matters must be served by a constable or sheriff or sheriff's deputy. Subpoenas may be served by private process servers. Huckaby, Aug. 25, 2006, A.G. Op. 06-0378.

The procedure for service of process on out-of-state defendants under Section 13-3-57 may be used to serve a limited class of out-of-state defendants in justice courts. Carmean, Nov. 10, 2006, A.G. Op. 06-0567.

Rule 2.05. Computation of time.

In computing any period of time prescribed or allowed by these rules, by order of court, or by any applicable statute, the date of the act, event or default from which the designated period of time begins to run shall not be included. The last day of the period so computed shall be included, unless it is a Saturday, a Sunday, or a legal holiday, or any other day that the courthouse or the clerk's office is in fact closed, whether with or without legal authority, in which event the period runs until the end of the next day which is not a Saturday, a Sunday, a legal holiday, or any other day when the courthouse or clerk's office is closed. When the period of time prescribed or allowed is less than seven (7) days, intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays shall be excluded in the computation. The Court, in its discretion, may grant an extension of time.

Rule 2.06. Failure to appear on trial date.

If the defendant fails to appear on the trial date, and the plaintiff appears, then the court may enter a default judgment as under Rule 2.12. If the plaintiff fails to appeal on the trial date, and the defendant appears, the court shall dismiss the case with prejudice. If neither the plaintiff nor the defendant appears on the trial date, the court shall dismiss the case with prejudice.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. Judicial misconduct.

Judge engaged in willful judicial misconduct prejudicial to the administration of justice when, in two separate cases in which all parties failed to appear, he continued one and dismissed the other without prejudice, absent a request for such relief by either party in either case. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Bradford, 18 So. 3d 251 (Miss. 2009).

Recommendation for a public reprimand was not adopted since it was too lenient for a judge who committed willful misconduct under Miss. Const. Art. 6, § 177A by violating Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2A, 3B(2), 3B(7), 3B(8), and 3C(1) when he engaged in improper ex parte communications; moreover, he ignored Miss. Code Ann. § 9-11-33 and Miss. Unif. R. P. J. Ct. 2.06 when he set aside a final judgment and interfered with orders handed down by another judge. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Britton, 936 So. 2d 898 (Miss. 2006).

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

A case remains on the civil docket until such time as it is dismissed or a judgment is rendered. Wood, Oct. 7, 2005, A.G. Op. 05-0454.

Rule 2.07. Counterclaims and setoffs.

Assertions of counterclaims and setoffs shall be liberally allowed when claimed by the defendant. The failure to assert any counterclaim or setoff shall not bar subsequent action upon such claims. Upon the assertion of any counterclaim which exceeds the jurisdictional limits of justice court, the court shall dismiss the case without prejudice.

Rule 2.08. Representation by guardian ad litem.

Whenever a party to an action is an infant, or under legal disability, a representative may sue or defend on behalf of such party. A party defendant who is an infant, or under legal disability and is not represented, may be represented by a guardian ad litem appointed by the court. Cost and reasonable fees of a guardian ad litem may be taxed as cost in the action.

Rule 2.09. Substitution of parties.

(a) Death. If a party dies and the claim is not thereby extinguished, the court shall, upon motion, order substitution of the proper parties. The motion for substitution may be made by any party or by the successors or representatives of the deceased party and, together with the notice of the hearing, shall be served on the parties by written notice with certificate of service attached as provided by the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure, and upon persons not parties in the manner provided in Rule 4 for service of summons. The action shall be dismissed without prejudice as to the deceased party if the motion for substitution is not made within ninety (90) days after the death is suggested upon the record by service of a statement of the fact of the death as herein provided for the service of the motion.

In the event of the death of one or more of the plaintiffs of one or more of the defendants in an action in which the right sought to be enforced survives only to the surviving plaintiffs or only against the surviving defendants, the action does not abate. The death shall be suggested upon the record and the action shall proceed in favor of or against the surviving parties.

(b) Legal disability. If a party comes under a legal disability, the court, upon motion served as provided in subdivision (a) of this rule, may allow the action to be continued by or against the surviving parties.

(c) Transfer of interest. In the case of any transfer of interest, the action may be continued by or against the original party, unless the court, upon motion, directs the person to whom the interest is transferred to be substituted in the action or join with the original party. Service of the motion shall be made as provided in subdivision (a) of this rule.

(d) Public officers; death or separation of office. When a public officer is a party to an action in his official capacity and during its pendency dies, resigns, or otherwise ceases to hold office, the action does not abate and his successor is automatically substituted as a party. Proceedings following the substitution shall be in the name of the party, but any misnomer not affecting the substantial rights of the party shall be disregarded. An order of substitution may be entered at any time, but the omission to enter such an order shall not affect the substitution.

Rule 2.10. Dismissal of an action by written motion.

A plaintiff may dismiss its action at any time before trial by written notice. Plaintiff's costs shall not be assessed against any other party. Such dismissal is without prejudice.

Rule 2.11. Consolidation and separation of trials.

(a) Consolidation. When actions involving a common question of law or fact are pending before the court, it my order a joint hearing or trial of any or all of the matters in issue in the actions; it may order all the actions consolidated; and it may make such orders concerning proceedings therein as may tend to avoid unnecessary cost of delay.

(b) Separate trials. The court, in furtherance of convenience or to avoid prejudice, or when separate trials will be conducive to expedition and economy, may order a separate trial of any claim.

Rule 2.12. Default judgment.

A judgment by default shall not be different in kind from or exceed an amount which was demanded in the complaint. For good cause shown, the court may set aside a default judgment.

Rule 2.13. Mistrial.

(a) Upon motion of any party, the court may declare a mistrial if there occurs during the trial, either inside or outside the courtroom, misconduct by the party, the party's attorneys, from any other source, or someone acting at the behest of the party or the party's attorney, resulting in substantial and irreparable prejudice to the movant's case.

(b) Upon motion of a party or its own motion, the court may declare a mistrial if:

1) The trial cannot proceed in conformity with law; or

2) It appears there is no reasonable probability of the jury's agreement upon a verdict.

Rule 2.14. Post-judgment actions.

Unless authorized by law, no post-judgment action shall be instituted upon a judgment until expiration of ten (10) days after its entry.

Rule 2.15. Enforcement of judgments.

Process to enforce a judgment for the payment of money shall be by such procedures as are provided by statute. The procedure on execution, in proceedings supplementary to an in aid of judgment, and in proceedings on and in aid of execution, shall be provided by statute. To aid in the satisfaction of a judgment, the judgment creditor may examine the judgment debtor, his books, papers or documents, upon any matter relating to his property as provided in Miss. Code Ann. §§ 13-1-261 through 13-1-271; except that no single judgment creditor may cause a judgment debtor to submit to examination under this section more than once in a period of six (6) months.

3.00 CRIMINAL RULES

Rule 3.01. Applicability of rules.

All rules designated as criminal rules are applicable only in criminal cases. General rules are also applicable in criminal cases.

Rule 3.02. Representation by counsel.

Initial appearance, preliminary hearings, and representation by counsel shall be conducted according to the Uniform Rules of Circuit and County Courts approved by the Mississippi Supreme Court.

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

If, after holding an initial appearance, a justice court judge makes a determination that the evidence presented does not amount to probable cause for the felony offense charged, the judge should either allow the prosecutor to amend the charges to a misdemeanor or dismiss the charges and release the defendant; if the charge is amended and reduced to a misdemeanor, the justice court has the authority to remand or pass the case to the file in appropriate cases. Helfrich, Dec. 10, 1999, A.G. Op. #99-0655.

Rule 3.03. Issuance of warrants.

Arrest warrants or search warrants shall be issued only by the judge after a judicial determination that probable cause exist based upon the affidavit or other evidence before the court.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Probable cause.

In general.

Issuance of warrants is a judicial act. Thus, in the context of governmental immunity, the issuance or failure to issue a warrant falls squarely within Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-9(1)(a), wherein immunity is to be granted for claims arising out of judicial actions and inactions as well as administrative actions or inactions which are of a judicial nature. . Collins v. Tallahatchie County, 876 So. 2d 284 (Miss. 2004).

Probable cause.

Where appellate court held that motion to suppress should have been granted, it did not find fault due to the lack of the word "reliable" in the affidavit or underlying facts and circumstances but, because nothing in the record suggested that the officers presented the justice with any basis of reliability on the informer's statement. Roebuck v. State, — So. 2d —, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 167 (Miss. Ct. App. Mar. 8, 2005), substituted opinion at, opinion withdrawn by 915 So. 2d 1132, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 1006 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Although defendant's motion to suppress items found in his house should have been granted because the issuing justice had not been presented with a basis of reliability for the informer's statement on which the officers relied, the Miss. Code Ann. § 41-29-313(1)(a)(i) conviction was not reversed because the evidence that ended in defendant's conviction did not come from defendant's house but from the search other property on which a clandestine meth lab was found and the search of that property was not dependent on the search warrant issued for defendant's house. Roebuck v. State, — So. 2d —, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 167 (Miss. Ct. App. Mar. 8, 2005), substituted opinion at, opinion withdrawn by 915 So. 2d 1132, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 1006 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Suspect in murder gave a videotaped statement indicating that the couple were present during the victim's murder, robbery having been the motive, and based on that information, the sheriff obtained an arrest warrant for the couple. When the aforementioned suspect recanted his allegation, and the sheriff realized there was no longer probable cause to hold the couple, sovereign immunity applied in the couple's suit against the sheriff and the county for false arrest and malicious prosecution, under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-9(1)(c), as the sheriff did act with probable cause in obtaining and executing the arrest warrants. Keen v. Simpson County, 904 So. 2d 1157 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Probable cause under Mississippi Constitution art. 3, § 23 did not exist for the issuance of a search warrant because the information given to police by a confidential informant (CI) was not independently corroborated; she was unknown to the police, and no indicia of reliability were either included in the affidavit or presented orally to the issuing judge. State v. Woods, 866 So. 2d 422 (Miss. 2003).

Affidavit in support of the warrant to search defendant's apartment lacked veracity or reliability as it was completely devoid of corroborating information to support confidential informant's claims that she had seen crack cocaine in the apartment; the trial court properly granted defendant's motion to suppress his confession and the seized cocaine as fruit of the poisonous tree. State v. Woods, — So. 2d —, 2002 Miss. LEXIS 402 (Miss. Dec. 5, 2002), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 866 So. 2d 422, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 531 (Miss. 2003).

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

Only a judge may decide whether or not to issue a felony warrant. King, May 8, 1998, A.G. Op. #98-0253.

Rule 3.04. Bail bonds.

Bail bonds must be approved by the justice court judge. The judge shall have the authority to require bond on a defendant, to require a certain type of bond, and to set the amount of the bond using his own discretion.

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

If the justice court judges of the county have predetermined the type and amount of bond for certain offenses, the sheriff may not release a defendant unless the defendant meets the bond requirements as set by the judge. Ross, September 4, 1998, A.G. Op. #98-0531.

This rule has no effect on the authority of a sheriff to approve the surety on a bail bond except for a case wherein the justice court judge has already done so or has issued an order that bail bonds from a particular bondsman will not be accepted by the court. Tolar, Oct. 31, 2003, A.G. Op. 03-0571.

Under this rule, a justice court judge has the authority to require that a defendant post a cash bond and the rule does not provide any offenses for which it would not be permissible to require a cash bond. Kohnke, Jan. 6, 2005, A.G. Op. 05-0639.

Rule 3.05. Multiple offenses.

(1) Two (2) or more offenses which are triable in the same court may be charged in the same affidavit with a separate count for each offense if: (a) the offenses are based on the same act or transaction; or (b) the offenses are based on two (2) or more acts or transactions connected together or constituting parts of a common scheme or plan.

(2) Where two (2) or more offenses are properly charged in separate counts, all such charges may be tried in a single proceeding.

(3) The trier of fact shall return a separate verdict for each count drawn under subsection 1 of this rule.

(4) When a defendant is convicted of two (2) or more offenses charged in separate counts, the court shall impose separate sentences for each such conviction.

(5) Nothing contained in this rule shall be construed to prohibit the court from exercising its authority to suspend either the imposition or the execution of any sentence or sentences imposed, not to prohibit the court from exercising its discretion to impose such sentences to run either concurrently with or consecutively to each other or to any other sentence or sentences previously imposed upon the defendant.

Rule 3.06. Joinder.

Two or more defendants may be charged in the same affidavit upon which they are to be tried when:

(1) each defendant is charged with accountability for each offense charges; or

(2) each defendant is charged with conspiracy and some of the defendants are also charged with on or more offenses alleged to have been committed in furtherance of the conspiracy; or

(3) even if conspiracy is not charged and all defendants are not charged in each count, but it is alleged that the several offenses charged were part of a common scheme or plan.

Rule 3.07. Amendments of affidavits.

All affidavits may be amended, including amendments to charge a defendant as a habitual offender or amendment to charge an offense, the proof of which requires proof of earlier convictions, as long as the defendant is not unfairly surprised or not afforded a fair opportunity to prepare a defense in the fact of the amendment. Technical amendments shall be liberally allowed and may be allowed until the case is given to the trier of fact.

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

Amendments that do not unfairly prejudice the defendant's rights may be allowed in criminal cases until the prosecution rests. Beshears, May 28, 2004, A.G. Op. 04-0219.

Rule 3.08. Pleas.

A defendant may plead not guilty, or guilty, or, with the permission of the court, nolo contendere.

(a) Entry of a guilty plea. A person who is charged with the commission of a criminal offense and is represented by an attorney may appear before the court at any time the judge may fix, and enter a plea of guilty to the offense charged and be sentenced by the court.

(b) Voluntariness. Before the court may accept a plea of guilty, the court must determine that a plea is voluntarily and intelligently made and that there is a factual basis for the plea. A plea of guilty is not voluntarily if induced by fear, violence, deception, or improper inducements. A showing that the plea of guilty was voluntary and intelligently made must appear in the record.

(c) Advice of the defendant. When the defendant wishes to plead guilty to an offense charged, it is the duty of the court to address the defendant personally and to inquire and determine:

(1) that the accused is competent to understand the nature of the charge against him;

(2) the accused understands the nature and consequences of his plea, and the maximum and minimum penalties provided by law;

(3) that the accused understands that by pleading guilty he waives his constitutional right of a trial by jury, the right to confront and cross-examine adverse witnesses, and the right against self-incrimination; and

(4) if the accused is not represented by an attorney, that he is aware of his right to an attorney at every stage of the proceedings and that one will be appointed to represent him if he is indigent.

Rule 3.09. Mistrial.

(a) Upon motion of the defendant, the court may declare a mistrial at any time during the trial. The court shall declare a mistrial upon the defendant's motion if there occurs during the trial an error or legal defect in the proceedings, or conduct inside or outside the courtroom, resulting in substantial and irreparable prejudice to the defendant's case. If there are two or more defendants, the mistrial shall not be declared as to a defendant who does not make or join in the motion.

(b) Upon motion of the state, the court may declare a mistrial if there occurs during the trial, either inside or outside the courtroom, misconduct by the defendant, his lawyers, or someone acting at his behest of the defendants or his lawyers, resulting in substantial and irreparable prejudice to the state's case is not substantially and irreparable prejudiced as to him.

(c) Upon motion of a party or its own motion, the court may declare a mistrial if:

(1) The trial cannot precede in conformity with law;

(2) It appears there is no reasonable probability of the jury's agreement upon a verdict; or

(3) Upon a poll of the jury, there is not unanimous concurrence with the verdict reached.

Rule 3.10. Sentencing.

Where the defendant is adjudged guilty of the offense charged, sentence must be imposed without unreasonable delay. A defendant is adjudged guilty when the defendant has been found guilty by a verdict of the jury, found guilty by the court sitting as trier of fact, on the acceptance of a plea of guilty, or on acceptance of a plea of nolo contendere.

Rule 1. Title.

These rules shall be known as the Uniform Rules of Youth Court Practice and may be cited as U.R.Y.C.P.: e.g., U.R.Y.C.P. 1. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

Rule 2. Scope of rules.

(a) Proceedings subject to these rules. The following proceedings are subject to these rules:

(1) any youth court proceeding;

(2) any chancery court proceeding when hearing, pursuant to Section 93-11-65 of the Mississippi Code, an allegation of abuse or neglect of a child that first arises in the course of a custody or maintenance action;

(3) any proceeding conducted by a referee appointed pursuant to Section 43-21-111 of the Mississippi Code;

(4) any proceeding conducted by a designee appointed pursuant to the Mississippi Youth Court Law when acting in a judicial capacity.

(b) Commencement of proceedings. Proceedings commence when a report or complaint of a child within the jurisdiction of the youth court requires an action by the youth court or by the chancery court or by a referee appointed pursuant to Section 43-21-111 of the Mississippi Code or by a designee appointed pursuant to the Mississippi Youth Court Law when acting in a judicial capacity. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

Rule 2(a)(1). — The Mississippi Youth Court Law provides for the creation of youth courts throughout the state. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-107 (2008); see also In re T.L.C., 566 So. 2d 691, 696 (Miss. 1990) ("In a sense our youth courts are neither superior, equal to, or inferior to other 'inferior' courts - they are special courts due to the special nature of their function.").

Rule 2(a)(2). — Chancery court may hear an allegation of abuse or neglect of a child that first arises in the course of a custody or maintenance action. See Miss. Code Ann. § 99-11-65(4) (2008). All proceedings on the abuse and neglect charge shall be conducted in accordance with these rules.

Rule 2(a)(4). — "Designee" means any person that the judge appoints to perform a duty which the Mississippi Youth Court Law requires to be done by the judge or the judge's designee. The judge may not appoint a person who is involved in law enforcement to be a designee. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-105(c) (2008). A designee, when acting in a judicial capacity, is subject to these rules. See, e.g., Miss. Code Ann. §§ 43-21-301, 43-21-307, 43-21-311, and 43-21-451 (2008). Designees appointed by the youth court judge are subject to the Code of Judicial Conduct. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-201(5) (2008).

Rule 3. Construction of rules.

(a) These rules are intended to provide a just, reasonably prompt, and efficient determination of every action within the jurisdiction of the youth court.

(b) These rules shall not be construed to extend or limit the jurisdiction of the courts of Mississippi.

(c) These rules shall be interpreted and applied in keeping with the philosophy expressed in Section 43-21-103 of the Mississippi Code. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

Rule 3(a). — Rule 3(a) limits the scope of these rules to every action within the jurisdiction of the youth court. Actions not within the jurisdiction of the youth court include:

(1) any offense, unless there is a transfer to youth court pursuant to Section 43-21-159 of the Mississippi Code, committed by a child 13 years or older which is:

(a) punishable under state or federal law by life imprisonment or death. See Miss. Code Ann. §§ 43-21-105(j), 43-21-151(a) (2008); Holly v. State, 671 So. 2d 32 (Miss. 1996); Winters v. State, 473 So. 2d 452 (Miss. 1985). Cf. Williams v. State, 459 So. 2d 777, 779 (Miss. 1984) (holding that once jurisdiction is acquired by the circuit court, it is not lost by accepting a plea to a lesser-included offense or conviction for a lesser-included offense);

(b) a felony and involves the use of a deadly weapon, the carrying of which concealed is prohibited by Section 97-37-1, or a shotgun or a rifle. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-151(b) (2008);

(c) committed on or after the child's eighteenth birthday. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-151(2) (2008);

(d) committed on or after the child's seventeenth birthday where such would be a felony if committed by an adult. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-151(2) (2008);

(e) committed after the circuit court has had original jurisdiction and the child was convicted by the circuit court. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-157 (2008);

(f) transferred by the youth court to a criminal court. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-157 (2008);

(g) a hunting or fishing violation, a state or federal traffic violation, a violation under the Mississippi Implied Consent Law, a violation of a municipal ordinance or county resolution, or a violation of Section 67-3-70 of the Mississippi Code. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-159 (2008); White v. Walker, 950 F.2d 972 (5th Cir. 1991);

(2) adoption proceedings. See Miss. Code Ann. § 93-17-3 (2008); In re Beggiani, 519 So. 2d 1208 (Miss. 1988);

(3) paternity actions. See Miss. Code Ann. 93-9-15 (2008); Davis v. Washington, 453 So. 2d 712 (Miss. 1984);

(4) cases involving exclusively child support, contempt, and modification issues. See Dep't of Human Servs.v. Blount, 913 So. 2d 326 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Rule 3(b). — This provision reaffirms that nothing in these rules shall be construed as extending or limiting the jurisdiction of any state court. Thus, any previous appellate rulings on jurisdictional matters are unaffected by these rules. See, e.g., Helmert v. Biffany, 842 So. 2d 1287 (Miss. 2003); K.M.K. v. S.L.M., 775 So. 2d 115 (Miss. 2000); Thomas v. Byars, 947 So. 2d 375 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Rule 4. Definitions.

All words and phrases shall have the meaning ascribed in the Mississippi Youth Court Law or, if the context clearly requires otherwise, the appropriate sections of the Mississippi Code applicable to the particular issue before the court, provided such are not inconsistent with these rules. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

See Miss. Code Ann. § 37-13-91 (2008).

Rule 5. Confidentiality of records and proceedings.

(a) Delinquency and child in need of supervision proceedings.

(1) Confidential records. Records involving children, as defined under Section 43-21-105 of the Mississippi Code, shall not be disclosed except as authorized by Mississippi's Youth Court Law or as otherwise provided by law.

(2) Disclosure of records involving children by court order. The court may order the disclosure of records involving children pursuant to Section 43-21-261(1) of the Mississippi Code. Any records so disclosed shall be subject to the confidentiality requirements of Section 43-21-261(2) of the Mississippi Code.

(3) Disclosure of records involving children not requiring a court order. Certain records involving children may be disclosed without an order of the court pursuant to Sections 43-21-261(1) through (18) and 43-21-623 of the Mississippi Code. Any records so disclosed shall be subject to the confidentiality requirements of Section 43-21-261(2) of the Mississippi Code.

(4) Media and electronic media access to proceedings. Media and electronic media coverage, as such terms are defined under Rule 2 of the Rules for Electronic and Photographic Coverage of Judicial Proceedings, in delinquency or child in need of supervision proceedings is strictly prohibited except upon findings of facts and conclusions of law by the court of extraordinary and compelling circumstances.

(b) Child protection proceedings.

(1) Confidential records. Records involving children, as defined under Section 43-21-105 of the Mississippi Code, shall not be disclosed except as authorized by Mississippi's Youth Court Law or as otherwise provided by law.

(2) Disclosure of records involving children pursuant to a court order. The court may order the disclosure of records involving children pursuant to Section 43-21-261(1) of the Mississippi Code. Any records so disclosed shall be subject to the confidentiality requirements of Section 43-21-261(2) of the Mississippi Code.

(3) Disclosure of records involving children not requiring a court order. Certain records involving children may be disclosed without an order of the court pursuant to Section 43-21-261(1) through (18) of the Mississippi Code. Any records so disclosed shall be subject to the confidentiality requirements of Section 43-21-261(2) of the Mississippi Code.

(4) Media and electronic media access to proceedings. Media or electronic media coverage, as such terms are defined under Rule 2 of the Rules for Electronic and Photographic Coverage of Judicial Proceedings, is strictly prohibited except upon findings of facts and conclusions of law by the court of extraordinary and compelling circumstances. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

Rule 5(a)(1), -(b)(1). — Records involving children shall be kept confidential except as authorized by Mississippi's Youth Court Law or as otherwise provided by law. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-259 (2008). This confidentiality requirement is conducive to the protective and rehabilitative purposes of the court. See, e.g., Smith v. Daily Mail Pub. Co.,443 U.S. 97, 107 (1979) (Rehnquist, J., concurring) ("The prohibition of publication of a juvenile's name is designed to protect the young person from the stigma of his misconduct and is rooted in the principle that a court concerned with juvenile affairs serves as a rehabilitative and protective agency of the State."). It is not, however, absolute. See Windham v. State, 800 So. 2d 1257, 1260 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001) ("[Section 43-21-261] itself provides that the confidentiality requirement may be overridden by a determination that disclosure would advance the child's best interests or the public safety.").

A court order for the disclosure of records involving children must specify the person or persons to whom the records may be disclosed, the extent of the records which may be disclosed and the purpose of the disclosure. Additionally, the order must be limited to those persons listed in Section 43-21-261(1)(a) through (g) of the Mississippi Code and must contain a finding that the particular disclosure is in the best interests of the child, the public safety or the functioning of the youth court. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-261 (2008).

Rule 5(a)(3), -(b)(3). — Statutory provisions allowing for limited disclosure of records involving children restrict the persons to whom the records may be disclosed, the extent of the records which may be disclosed, and the purpose of the disclosure. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-261(2) (2008); see also Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-267 (2008) (providing sanctions for disclosing or encouraging the disclosure of any records involving children without proper authorization).

Rule 5(a)(4), -(b)(4). — Media and electronic media access to youth court proceedings is seldom consistent with the philosophy expressed in Section 43-21-103 of the Mississippi Code.

Rule 6. Subpoena duces tecum.

(a) Procedures for issuing a subpoena duces tecum. Every subpoena duces tecum for records involving children, as such records are defined under Section 43-21-105 of the Mississippi Code, and which originates from any issuing court shall be in compliance with the following procedures:

(1) the party shall make an application to the court specifying which records are sought;

(2) the court shall issue a subpoena duces tecum to the youth court for these records;

(3) the youth court, unless a hearing is conducted pursuant to Rule 6(b) of these rules, shall transfer copies of the records to the court;

(4) the court shall conduct an in camera inspection of the records, in accordance with the procedures set forth in Pennsylvania v. Ritchie, 480 U.S. 39 (1987), to determine which records should be disclosed to the party;

(5) the court shall, at all times, protect the confidentiality of the records to the extent required of the youth court under Mississippi's Youth Court Law.

(b) Hearing on access to confidential files. The youth court may require a hearing to determine whether the court or parties have a legitimate interest to be allowed access to the confidential files. In determining whether a person has a legitimate interest, the youth court shall consider the nature of the proceedings, the welfare and safety of the public, and the interest of the child. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

Rule 6. — The child's right of confidentiality of youth records is a qualified privilege, not an absolute one. See Daniels v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 634 So.2d 88, 93 (Miss. 1993). Mississippi has adopted the procedures advanced in Ritchie when there is a request for disclosure of confidential youth court records. See In re J.E., 726 So. 2d 547, 553 (Miss. 1998). These procedures require the trial judge to: (1) conduct an in camera review of the requested records and (2) release any information contained therein material to the fairness of the trial. Such is an ongoing duty. See Pennsylvania v. Ritchie, 480 U.S. 39, 60 (1987).

Rule 7. Federal laws and regulations.

(a) Federal laws requiring compliance. These rules require compliance with federal laws which impact funding for cases within the jurisdiction of the youth court, including:

(2) Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Amendments of 1988, Pub. L. No. 100-690, 102 Stat. 4434 (1988) (codified as amended in scattered sections of 42 U.S.C.);

(4) Adoption and Safe Families Act of 1997, Pub. L. No. 105-89, 111 Stat. 2115 (1997) (codified as amended in scattered sections of 42 U.S.C.);

(5) Title IV-E of the Social Security Act. 42 U.S.C. §§ 670-79(b) (2008).

(b) Federal regulations requiring compliance. These rules require compliance with federal regulations which impact funding for cases within the jurisdiction of the youth court, including:

(1) 28 C.F.R. § 31.303 (2008);

(2) 28 C.F.R. § 31.304 (2008);

(3) 45 C.F.R. §§ 1355,-1356 (2008). (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

Rule 7. — These rules require compliance with federal laws and regulations which impact funding for cases within the jurisdiction of the youth court. Failure to comply results in the loss of federal monies crucial in achieving the best interests of the child and the interest of justice.

Rule 7(a)(1)-(3). — The purposes of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act are to: "(1) to support State and local programs that prevent juvenile involvement in delinquent behavior; (2) to assist State and local governments in promoting public safety by encouraging accountability for acts of juvenile delinquency; (3) to assist State and local governments in addressing juvenile crime through the provision of technical assistance, research, training, evaluation, and the dissemination of information on effective programs for combating juvenile delinquency." 42 U.S.C. § 5602 (2008).

Rule 7(a)(4). — Sections of Title IV-E of the Social Security Act affected by the Adoption and Safe Families Act include: 42 U.S.C. §§ 671, -672, -673, -673b; -674, -675, -677, -678, -679b (2008).

Rule 7(a)(5). — Title IV-E of the Social Security Act authorizes payments for foster care and transitional independent living programs for children pursuant to the eligibility criteria contained therein. See 42 U.S.C. § 670 (2008).

Rule 8. Intake.

(a) Delinquency and child in need of supervision proceedings. Whenever an intake screening process has been conducted pursuant to Section 43-21-357(1) of the Mississippi Code and it appears that the child is a delinquent child or a child in need of supervision, the youth court intake unit shall recommend to the court:

(1) that the youth court take no action;

(2) that an informal adjustment process be made;

(3) that the child be warned or counseled informally; or

(4) that a petition be filed.

The youth court shall then, without a hearing, order the appropriate action to be taken. If the intake screening process discloses that a child needs emergency medical treatment, the judge may order the necessary treatment.

(b) Child protection proceedings. Whenever an intake screening process has been conducted pursuant to Section 43-21-357(1) of the Mississippi Code and it appears that the child is an abused or neglected child, the youth court intake unit shall recommend to the court:

(1) that the youth court take no action;

(2) that an informal adjustment process be made;

(3) that the Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services, or other appointed intake unit, monitor the child, family and other children in the same environment;

(4) that the parents be warned or counseled informally; or

(5) that a petition be filed.

The youth court shall then, without a hearing, order the appropriate action to be taken. If the intake screening process discloses that a child needs emergency medical treatment, the judge may order the necessary treatment.

(c) Chancery court proceedings. When a chancery court orders the Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services, or other appointed intake unit, to investigate a charge of abuse and neglect that first arises in the course of a custody or maintenance action, the assigned caseworker shall conduct an intake screening process in the same manner as required in child protection proceedings and thereupon recommend to the court:

(1) that the chancery court take no action;

(2) that an informal adjustment process be made;

(3) that the Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services, or other appointed intake unit, monitor the child, family and other children in the same environment;

(4) that the parents be warned or counseled informally; or

(5) that a petition be filed.

The chancery court shall then, without a hearing, order the appropriate action to be taken or transfer the case and recommendation to youth court. If the intake screening process discloses that a child needs emergency medical treatment, the chancellor may order the necessary treatment.

(d) Appointment of intake unit. In every youth court division the judge shall appoint one or more persons to function as an intake unit pursuant to Sections 43-21-115 and 43-21-123 of the Mississippi Code. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

Rule 8(a). — When the intake unit receives a report of a delinquent child or a child in need of supervision it may request, or the youth court may order, the Department of Human Services, Division of Youth Services, or other appointed intake unit, to make an investigation concerning the child, and any other children in the same environment, and present the findings to the intake unit. If it appears from the intake screening process that the child is a delinquent child or a child in need a supervision, the intake unit must make a recommendation to the youth court pursuant to Rule 8(a) of this rule — even if the recommendation is that no action be taken. The youth court shall then, without a hearing, order the appropriate action to be taken. This procedure assures that the youth court is made aware of every valid report received by the intake unit. The youth court, and not the intake unit, determines how each case proceeds. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-357(2).

Rule 8(b). — When the intake unit receives a report of an abused or neglected child it must immediately forward the complaint to the Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services, or other appointed intake unit, to make an investigation concerning the child, and any other children in the same environment, and promptly present the findings to the intake unit. If it appears from the intake screening process that the child is an abused or neglected child, the intake unit must make a recommendation to the youth court pursuant to Rule 8(b) of this rule — even if the recommendation is that no action be taken. The youth shall then, without a hearing, order the appropriate action to be taken. This procedure assures that the youth court is made aware of every valid report received by the intake unit. The youth court, and not the intake unit, determines how each case proceeds. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-357(2).

Rule 8(c). — Rule 8(c) is to assure, consistent with Rule 2 of these rules, that chancery court procedures for investigating charges of abuse or neglect are consistent with those applicable to youth court. When a chancellor orders the investigation of abuse or neglect, the Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services follows normal intake procedures. Upon receiving the intake recommendation, the chancery court must decide whether to hear the case or transfer it to youth court. If the chancery court decides to hear the case, then it must follow all procedures required of a youth court under these rules.

Rule 8(a), -(b), -(c). — Uniform Youth Court Case Identification and Docket Numbering System. — Upon the intake officer recommending that a petition be filed, and the court ordering that a petition be filed, the prosecutor must file the petition or request the court to dismiss the proceedings or to handle the cause informally.

Uniform Youth Court Case Tracking System and Form. — The Mississippi Supreme Court has adopted a Uniform Youth Court Case Tracking System and Form to be implemented by intake as a data collection procedure for every matter coming before the youth courts of the state of Mississippi. See Special Order No. 47 (Miss. Dec. 16, 1996).

Rule 9. Court orders upon intake recommendations.

(a) Delinquency and child in need of supervision proceedings.

(1) No action to be taken. The court may order that no action be taken if such is in the best interest of the child and in the interest of justice.

(2) Informal adjustment process to be made. The court may order the Department of Human Services, Division of Youth Services, or other appointed intake unit, to conduct an informal adjustment process pursuant to Sections 43-21-401 through 43-21-407 of the Mississippi Code. No informal adjustment process may commence except upon an order of the court. Every informal adjustment process shall include:

(i) the giving of counsel and advice to the child and the child's parent, guardian, or custodian;

(ii) referrals to public and private agencies which may provide benefits, guidance or services to the child or the child's parent, guardian or custodian; and

(iii) temporary placement of the child or supervision by the youth court counselor with the consent of the child and the child's parent, guardian or custodian, subject to review by the court.

If the child and the child's parent, guardian or custodian agree to participate in an informal adjustment process, the defense of a failure to provide a speedy trial is waived and a petition may be filed if the informal adjustment process is unsuccessfully terminated under Section 43-21-407 of the Mississippi Code. If authorized by the court, the informal adjustment process may be commenced after the filing of a petition.

(3) The child be warned or counseled informally. The court may order the child to be warned or counseled informally in accordance with the policies of the Department of Human Services, Division of Youth Services.

(4) A petition be filed. The court may order that a petition be filed.

(b) Child protection proceedings.

(1) No action to be taken. The court may order that no action be taken if such is in the best interest of the child and in the interest of justice.

(2) Informal adjustment process to be made. The court may order the Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services to conduct an informal adjustment process pursuant to Sections 43-21-401 through 43-21-407 of the Mississippi Code. No informal adjustment process may commence except upon an order of the court. Every informal adjustment process shall include:

(i) the giving of counsel and advice to the child and the child's parent, guardian, or custodian;

(ii) referrals to public and private agencies which may provide benefits, guidance or services to the child or the child's parent, guardian or custodian; and

(iii) temporary placement of the child or supervision by the Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services with the consent of the child and the child's parent, guardian or custodian, subject to review by the court.

If the child and the child's parent, guardian or custodian agree to participate in an informal adjustment process, the defense of a failure to provide a speedy trial is waived and a petition may be filed if the informal adjustment process is unsuccessfully terminated under Section 43-21-407 of the Mississippi Code. If authorized by the court, an informal adjustment process may be commenced after the filing of a petition.

(3) Monitor the child, family and other children in the same environment. The court may order the department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services to monitor the child, family and other children in the same environment.

(4) The parent(s) to be warned or counseled informally. The court may order the parent(s) to be warned or counseled informally in accordance with the policies of the Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services.

(5) A petition to be filed. The court may order a petition to be filed. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

An instance where an informal adjustment process might be appropriate in child protection proceedings, even after the filing of the petition, is where the parent is temporarily unable to care for the child (e.g., inpatient drug and alcohol treatment), but a suitable relative is willing to do so for the short-term period. In any event, an informal adjustment process does not circumvent the authority of the Department of Human Services to remove the child from the home or any placement if there is a reasonable concern for the child's safety or welfare.

Rule 9(b)(2)(iii). — The Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services should conduct a background check and home study prior to making a temporary placement of a child within its custody.

Rule 9(a)(4), -(b)(5). — Procedures for filing a petition are set out in Rule 20 of these rules.

Rule 10. Valid court order.

(a) Valid court order for a child in need of supervision who has committed a status offense.

A child in need of supervision who has committed a status offense shall not be held in secure juvenile detention longer than twenty-four (24) hours prior to and twenty-four (24) hours after an initial appearance, with the exception of a child who is an out-of-state runaway pending return to the child's home state, unless:

(1) the court has issued a valid court order which contains:

(i) an advisement of rights, including:

the right to have the petition served on the child in a reasonable time before the hearing;

the right to a hearing on the petition before the court;

the right to an explanation of the nature and consequences of the proceedings;

the right to remain silent;

the right to legal counsel and, if indigent, the right to appointed legal counsel;

the right to present and confront witnesses;

the right to a transcript of the proceedings; and the right to appeal; and

(ii) a warning that a violation of the valid court order is contempt of court and may result in the child being ordered to a secure juvenile detention facility;

(2) reasonable oral or written notice of the time, place and purpose of the contempt hearing for the violation of the valid court order is given to the child, the child's parent, guardian or custodian, the child's guardian ad litem, if any, and the child's counsel.

Notice shall be satisfied if the following notice is placed in capital letters at the bottom of the valid court order and is acknowledged on the record by the child, the child's parent, guardian or custodian, the child's guardian ad litem, if any, and the child's counsel:

A VIOLATION OF THIS VALID COURT ORDER IS CONTEMPT OF COURT AND MAY RESULT IN YOU BEING ORDERED TO SECURE

JUVENILE DETENTION. IF A REPORT OR COMPLAINT OF A VIOLATION OF THIS VALID COURT ORDER IS RECEIVED BY THIS COURT, YOU ARE HEREBY COMMANDED TO APPEAR BEFORE THIS COURT WITHIN 72 HOURS OF YOUR ORIGINAL SECURE JUVENILE DETENTION PERTAINING TO THE VIOLATION OF THE VALID COURT ORDER, EXCLUDING SATURDAYS, SUNDAYS, AND STATUTORY STATE HOLIDAYS FOR A CONTEMPT HEARING ON THE VIOLATION OF THE VALID COURT ORDER. YOU HAVE A RIGHT TO BE REPRESENTED BY AN ATTORNEY. YOU ARE REQUESTED TO IMMEDIATELY NOTIFY THIS COURT OF THE NAME OF YOUR ATTORNEY. IF INDIGENT, YOU HAVE THE RIGHT TO HAVE AN ATTORNEY APPOINTED FREE OF CHARGE, AND YOU SHOULD IMMEDIATELY APPLY TO THIS COURT FOR SUCH APPOINTED COUNSEL. YOU HAVE A RIGHT TO SUBPOENA WITNESSES IN YOUR BEHALF. THIS NOTICE SHALL BE LEGAL AND SUFFICIENT NOTICE TO YOU, YOUR PARENT(S), GUARDIAN, OR CUSTODIAN, YOUR GUARDIAN AD LITEM, IF ANY, AND YOUR COUNSEL WITH RESPECT TO SUCH HEARING; but in any event, if the child's parent, guardian or custodian cannot be found, the court may hold the hearing in the absence of the child's parent, guardian or custodian;

(3) the court conducts a probable cause hearing within twenty-four (24) hours of the child being ordered to secure juvenile detention, excluding Saturdays, Sundays, and statutory state holidays, for the violation of the valid court order;

(4) the court conducts an adjudication hearing within seventy-two (72) hours of the original secure juvenile detention for the violation of the valid court order, excluding Saturdays, Sundays, and statutory state holidays; and

(5) the court conducts a separate and distinct disposition hearing within seventy-two (72) hours of the original secure juvenile detention for the violation of the valid court order, excluding Saturdays, Sundays, and statutory state holidays, and in which:

(i) the Department of Human Services, Division of Youth Services submits to the court a written report that contains: a review of the child's behavior; a determination of the reasons for that behavior; and a determination that all other dispositions other than secure juvenile detention are inappropriate;

(ii) the court makes the determination, based upon the written report and other evidence before the court,that all other dispositions other than secure juvenile detention are inappropriate; and

(iii) the court specifies in the disposition order: the number of days the child is to be held in secure juvenile detention, that the secure juvenile detention complies with federal and state laws; and that the court may, within its discretion, suspend the secure juvenile detention should a less restrictive alternative become available.

(b) Valid Court Order Exception Form. If a child is taken into custody upon an order of the court for a violation of a valid court order, and such custody is prior to the child being adjudicated in contempt for the violation, the court shall complete and sign a Valid Court Order Exception Form and send a copy thereof to the secure juvenile detention facility. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

Rule 10. — This rule comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-301(6) (2008). It also satisfies the federal laws and regulations in holding status offenders in secure juvenile detention. Contempt for a violation of a valid court order requires proof beyond a reasonable doubt.

"Valid court order", in the context of Rule 10 of these rules, is a distinct term that identifies any order holding a status offender in secure juvenile detention. Its usage originated when Congress, in response to the problem of status offenders disobeying court orders, amended the Juvenile Justice Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974 by passing a "valid court order exception." See Claire Shubik & Jessica Kendall, Rethinking Juvenile Status offense Laws: Considerations for Congressional Review of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act, 45 Fam. Ct. Rev. 384, 388-89 (2007) (discussing the rationale for the passage of the "valid court order exception"). Federal agencies closely scrutinize all valid court orders to ensure compliance with the statutory exception.

Four core protections requiring State compliance. — The JJDP Act, through the 2002 reauthorization, establishes four core protections with which participating States and territories must comply to receive grants under the JJDP Act:

-Deinstitutionalization of status offenders (DSO).

-Separation of juveniles from adults in institutions (separation).

-Removal of juveniles from adult jails and lockups (jail removal).

-Reduction of disproportionate minority contact (DMC), where it exists.

Meeting the core protections is essential to creating a fair, consistent, and effective juvenile justice system that advances the important goals of the JJDP Act. OFFICE OF JUVENILE JUSTICE AND DELINQUENCY PREVENTION, U.S. DEP'T OF JUSTICE, GUIDANCE MANUAL FOR MONITORING FACILITIES UNDER THE JUVENILE JUSTICE AND DELINQUENCY PREVENTION ACT OF 2002 1 (SEPTEMBER 2003).

Rule 10(a)(2) — This provision comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. §§ 43-21-309(2), -503 (2008).

Rule 10(b). — Within twenty-four (24) hours of the time the child is taken into custody for a violation of a valid court order, if such is prior to the child being adjudicated in contempt for the violation, the appropriate public agency must: be notified that the child is being held in custody; interview the child in person; and submit an assessment on the needs of the child to the court that issued the order. See 28 C.F.R. § 31.303 (2008).

The Valid Court Order Assessment Report. — The Valid Court Order Assessment Report requires the appropriate public agency worker to:

state the name of the juvenile facility in which the child was placed;

state the date of the placement;

state the name of the person conducting the interview;

describe the circumstances, events, and/or behaviors relevant to the incident;

describe the immediate needs of the child;

describe the most appropriate placement alternatives available for the child pending a disposition on the alleged violation; and sign and date the assessment report.

FEDERAL REQUIREMENTS

These rules require compliance with federal laws and regulations which impact funding for cases within the jurisdiction of the youth court. See U.R.Y.C.P. 7. Failure to comply results in the loss of federal monies crucial in achieving the best interests of the child and the interest of justice. Federal laws and regulations applicable to valid court orders include:

Valid court order means. — 42 U.S.C. § 5603 (2008) provides in part:

(16) the term "valid court order" means a court order given by a juvenile court judge to a juvenile —

(A) who was brought before the court and made subject to such order; and

(B) who received, before the issuance of such order, the full due process rights guaranteed to such juvenile by the Constitution of the United States; . . .

Status offender means. — 28 C.F.R. § 31.304 (2008) provides in part:

(h) Status offender. A juvenile offender who has been charged with or adjudicated for conduct which would not, under the law of the jurisdiction in which the offense was committed, be a crime if committed by an adult.

Secure detention facility means. — 42 U.S.C. § 5603 (2008) provides in part:

(12) the term "secure detention facility" means any public or private residential facility which —

(A) includes construction fixtures designed to physically restrict the movements and activities of juveniles or other individuals held in lawful custody in such facility; and

(B) is used for the temporary placement of any juvenile who is accused of having committed an offense, any nonoffender, or of any other individual accused of having committed a criminal offense; . . .

Status offenders who commit violation of valid court order excluded from prohibition of secure detention. — 42 U.S.C. 5633 (2008) provides in part:

[A State plan to receive formula grants] . . .

(11) shall, in accordance with rules issued by the Administrator, provide that —

(A) juveniles who are charged with or who have committed an offense that would not be criminal if committed by an adult, excluding — . . .

(ii) juveniles who are charged with or who have committed a violation of a valid court order; . . . shall not be placed in secure detention facilities or secure correctional facilities; . . .

Monitoring of detention facilities. — 28 C.F.R. § 31.303 (2008) provides in part:

(3) Valid court order. For the purpose of determining whether a valid court order exists and a juvenile has been found to be in violation of that valid order all of the following conditions must be present prior to secure incarceration:

(i) The juvenile must have been brought into a court of competent jurisdiction and made subject to an order issued pursuant to proper authority. The order must be one which regulates future conduct of the juvenile. Prior to issuance of the order, the juvenile must have received the full due process rights guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States.

(ii) The court must have entered a judgment and/or remedy in accord with established legal principles based on the facts after a hearing which observes proper procedures.

(iii) The juvenile in question must have received adequate and fair warning of the consequences of violation of the order at the time it was issued and such warning must be provided to the juvenile and to the juvenile's attorney and/or legal guardian in writing and be reflected in the court record and proceedings.

(iv) All judicial proceedings related to an alleged violation of a valid court order must be held before a court of competent jurisdiction. A juvenile accused of violating a valid court order may be held in secure detention beyond the 24-hour grace period permitted for a noncriminal juvenile offender under OJJDP monitoring policy, for protective purposes as prescribed by State law, or to assure the juvenile's appearance at the violation hearing, as provided by State law, if there has been a judicial determination based on a hearing during the 24-hour grace period that there is probable cause to believe the juvenile violated the court order. In such case the juveniles may be held pending a violation hearing for such period of time as is provided by State law, but in no event should detention prior to a violation hearing exceed 72 hours exclusive of nonjudicial days. A juvenile alleged or found in a violation hearing to have violated a Valid Court Order may be held only in a secure juvenile detention or correctional facility, and not in an adult jail or lockup.

(v) Prior to and during the violation hearing the following full due process rights must be provided:

(A) The right to have the charges against the juvenile in writing served upon him a reasonable time before the hearing;

(B) The right to a hearing before a court;

(C) The right to an explanation of the nature and consequences of the proceeding;

(D) The right to legal counsel, and the right to have such counsel appointed by the court if indigent;

(E) The right to confront witnesses;

(F) The right to present witnesses;

(G) The right to have a transcript or record of the proceedings; and

(H) The right of appeal to an appropriate court.

(vi) In entering any order that directs or authorizes the placement of a status offender in a secure facility, the judge presiding over an initial probable cause hearing or violation hearing must determine that all the elements of a valid court order (paragraphs (f)(3)(i), (ii) and (iii) of this section) and the applicable due process rights (paragraph (f)(3)(v) of this section) were afforded the juvenile and, in the case of a violation hearing, the judge must obtain and review a written report that: reviews the behavior of the juvenile and the circumstances under which the juvenile was brought before the court and made subject to such order; determines the reasons for the juvenile's behavior; and determines whether all dispositions other than secure confinement have been exhausted or are clearly inappropriate. This report must be prepared and submitted by an appropriate public agency (other than a court or law enforcement agency).

(vii) A non-offender such as a dependent or neglected child cannot be placed in secure detention or correctional facilities for violating a valid court order.

Forms

Editor's Note —

All orders of the court shall be in substantial compliance with these rules. Courts which do not utilize the Mississippi Youth Court Information Delivery System (MYCIDS) or other network database of Mississippi youth courts, such as SWORD, may access at http://www.mssc.state.ms.us the following form(s):

ORDER OF DISPOSITION OF CHILD IN NEED OF SUPERVISION AND VALID COURT ORDER;

ORDER ADJUDICATING CHILD IN CONTEMPT OF COURT FOR VIOLATION OF VALID COURT ORDER;

ORDER OF DISPOSITION FOR CHILD IN CONTEMPT OF COURT FOR VIOLATION OF VALID COURT ORDER;

VALID COURT ORDER EXCEPTION FORM (VIOLATION OF VALID COURT ORDER FORM).

Rule 11. Temporary custody orders/custody orders.

(a) Delinquency and child in need of supervision proceedings.

(1) When a custody order may be issued. The youth court judge or referee, a chancellor sitting as a youth court judge, or the judge's designee, and no other judge of another court, may issue an order to take into temporary custody or custody a child within the original exclusive jurisdiction of the youth court, for a period not to exceed forty-eight (48) hours, excluding Saturdays, Sundays, and statutory state holidays, if the court finds and the temporary custody order or custody order recites that:

(i) that there is probable cause the child is within the jurisdiction of the youth court; and

(ii) that there is probable cause that custody is necessary.

Custody shall be deemed necessary: (1) when a child is endangered or any person would be endangered by the child; or to insure the child's attendance in court at such time as required; or when a parent, guardian or custodian is not available to provide for the care and supervision of the child; and (2) there is no reasonable alternative to custody. Unless there is substantial compliance with these procedures, the court shall order the child to be released to the custody of the child's parent, guardian, or custodian. Any order placing a child into custody shall comply with the requirements provided in Section 43-21-301 of the Mississippi Code.

(2) Order requirements. The temporary custody order or custody order may be written or oral, but, if oral, reduced to writing as soon as practicable. The written order shall:

(i) specify the name and address of the child, or, if unknown, designate the child by any name or description by which the same can be identified with reasonable certainty;

(ii) specify the age of the child, or, if unknown, that the child is believed to be of an age subject to the jurisdiction of the youth court;

(iii) state that the child be brought immediately before the youth court or be taken to a place designated by the order to be held pending review of the order;

(iv) state the date issued and the youth court by which the order is issued; and

(v) be signed by the youth court judge or referee, or the judge's designee, with the title of his/her office.

(3) Custody requirements. The court shall comply with the following custodial requirements:

(i) No child who has been accused or adjudicated of any status offense shall be placed in an adult jail or lockup. An accused status offender shall not be held in secure juvenile detention longer than twenty-four (24) hours prior to and twenty-four (24) hours after an initial court appearance, excluding Saturdays, Sundays and statutory state holidays, except under the following circumstances: a status offender may be held in secure juvenile detention for violating a valid court order as set forth in Rule 10 of these rules and pursuant to the criteria as established by the federal Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 2002, and any subsequent amendments thereto, and out-of-state runaways may be detained pending return to their home state.

(ii) No accused or adjudicated juvenile offender, except for an accused or adjudicated juvenile offender in cases where jurisdiction is waived to the adult criminal court, shall be detained or placed into custody of any adult jail or lockup for a period in excess of six (6) hours.

(iii) The custody of any child taken into custody shall comply with the detention requirements of Section 43- 21-315 of the Mississippi Code.

(4) Additional orders. After a child is ordered into custody, the court may:

(i) arrange for the custody of the child with any private institution or agency caring for children;

(ii) may commit the child to the Department of Mental Health pursuant to Section 41-21-61 et seq.; or

(iii) may order the Department of Human Services or any other public agency to provide for the custody, care and maintenance of the child.

(b) Child protection proceedings.

(1) When a custody order may be issued. The youth court judge or referee, or the judge's designee, or a chancellor when hearing, pursuant to Section 93-11-65 of the Mississippi Code, an allegation of abuse or neglect of a child that first arises in the course of a custody or maintenance action, and no other judge of another court, may issue an order to take into custody a child within the exclusive original jurisdiction of the youth court, for a period not to exceed forty-eight (48) hours, excluding Saturdays, Sundays, and statutory state holidays, if the court finds and the custody order recites that:

(i) that there is probable cause the child is within the jurisdiction of the court; and

(ii) that there is probable cause that custody is necessary.

Custody shall be deemed necessary: (1) when a child is endangered or any person would be endangered by the child; or to insure the child's attendance in court at such time as required; or when a parent, guardian or custodian is not available to provide for the care and supervision of the child; and (2) there is no reasonable alternative to custody. Unless there is substantial compliance with these procedures, the court shall order the child to be released to the custody of the child's parent, guardian, or custodian. Any order placing a child into custody shall comply with the requirements provided in Section 43-21-301 of the Mississippi Code.

(2) Order requirements. The custody order may be written or oral, but, if oral, reduced to writing as soon as practicable. The written order shall:

(i) specify the name and address of the child, or, if unknown, designate the child by any name or description by which the same can be identified with reasonable certainty;

(ii) specify the age of the child, or, if unknown, that the child is believed to be of an age subject to the jurisdiction of the youth court;

(iii) state that the effect of the continuation of the child's residing within the child's own home would be contrary to the welfare of the child, that the placement of the child in foster care or relative care is in the best interest of the child;

(iv) state and specify, unless the reasonable efforts requirement is bypassed under Section 43-21-603(7)(c) of the Mississippi Code, that:

(a) reasonable efforts have been made to maintain the child within the child's own home, but that the circumstances warrant the child's removal and there is no reasonable alternative to custody; or

(b) the circumstances are of such an emergency nature that no reasonable efforts have been made to maintain the child within the child's own home, there is no reasonable alternative to custody, and reasonable efforts be made towards the reunification of the child with the child's family;

(v) state that the child be brought immediately before the youth court or be taken to a place designated by the order to be held pending review of the order;

(vi) state the date issued and the youth court by which the order is issued; and

(vii) be signed by the youth court judge or referee, the judge's designee, or chancellor, with the title of his/her office.

No child in the custody of the Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services shall be placed in a foster care setting that has not been licensed or approved as meeting the Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services licensure standards, except that a child may be placed with a relative if there is: (1) an emergency process, as developed by the Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services in conjunction with the Council on Accreditation, that enables, after an initial screening of the relative's home in accordance with Mississippi's Settlement Agreement and Reform Plan, the child to be placed with the relative as soon as the child enters placement, and (2) a full licensing process, which shall be completed no later than sixty (60) calendar days after the child has entered placement. The Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services may waive non-safety licensing requirements for relative foster placements in individual cases pursuant to federal regulations.

(3) Reasonable efforts, judicial determination required. Within sixty (60) days from the date of the child being removed from the child's home pursuant to the court's temporary custody order or custody order, the court shall conduct a hearing to determine whether the Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services has made reasonable efforts to prevent the removal of the child from the child's home or, pursuant to Section 43-21-603(7) of the Mississippi Code, whether reasonable efforts were not required to prevent the removal.

(i) If the court determines that the Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services has made reasonable efforts to prevent the removal of the child from the child's home but that removal remains in the best interest of the child, the court shall adopt a permanency plan and a concurrent plan and order that the Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services make reasonable efforts to timely finalize the permanency plan and concurrent plan for the child. Thereafter, until the permanency plan or concurrent plan is achieved, the court shall conduct a permanency hearing and permanency review hearings pursuant to these rules.

(ii) If the court determines that, pursuant to Section 43-21-603(7) of the Mississippi Code, reasonable efforts were not required to prevent the removal of the child from the child's home, it shall adopt a permanency plan and concurrent plan and order that the Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services make reasonable efforts to timely finalize the adopted permanency plan and concurrent plan for the child. Thereafter, until the permanency plan or concurrent permanency plan is achieved, the court shall conduct a permanency hearing and permanency review hearings pursuant to these rules.

Additional orders. After a child is ordered into custody, the court may:

(i) arrange for the custody of the child with any private institution or agency caring for children;

(ii) may commit the child to the Department of Mental Health pursuant to Section 41-21-61 et seq.; or

(iii) may order the Department of Human Services or any other public agency to provide for the custody, care and maintenance of the child. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

Rule 11(a), -(b) — These provisions comport with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. §§ 43-21-301, -307, -315 (2008).

Rule 11(a)(1) — Factors the court may consider in determining whether custody is necessary include: the child's family ties and relationships; the child's prior delinquency record; the violent nature of the alleged offense; the child's prior history of committing acts that resulted in bodily injury to others; the child's character and mental condition; the court's ability to supervise the child if placed with a parent or relative; the child's ties to the community; the risk of nonappearance; the danger to the child or public if the child is released; another petition is pending against the child; the home conditions of the child; and a violation of a valid court order. Accord Michigan Court Rule 3.935(C). The court must include its findings in the temporary custody or custody order.

Justice and municipal courts may not issue an order to take a child into custody, or an arrest warrant, for any child within the exclusive original jurisdiction of the youth court. Such is not applicable to offenses outside the exclusive original jurisdiction of the youth court, e.g., hunting, fishing or traffic violations. See White v. Walker, 950 F.2d 972, 979 (5th Cir. 1991). However, in those instances, the custody of the child must comply with all state and federal laws pertaining to the detention of juveniles. See U.R.Y.C.P. 19(c). When a child convicted of a misdemeanor offense by a criminal court having original jurisdiction of the misdemeanor charge and the sentence includes that the child is to be committed to, incarcerated in or imprisoned in a jail or other place of detention, the commencement of such commitment, incarceration or imprisonment in a jail or other place of detention is stayed until the criminal court has notified the youth court judge or the judge's designee of the conviction and sentence.

Rule 11(b)(2). — The foster child relative licensing process consists of: (1) an emergency process and (2) a full licensing process. The emergency process requires, in accordance with Mississippi Department of Human Services policies, that background checks and Central Registry checks be completed on all persons residing in the home who are fourteen (14) years of age or older and the completion of an emergency placement safety checklist of the home. The full licensing process requires, in accordance with Mississippi Department of Human Services policies, that the relative completes, within 60 calendar days after the child has been placed in the home, the full home study, fifteen hours of training, and all other licensure requirements. See RESOURCE FAMILY LICENSURE POLICY, MDHS POLICY MANUAL 4500-43 (2008); see also Olivia Y., 351 F. Supp. 2d 543 (S.D. Miss. 2004) (regarding the placement of children in DCFS custody with available relatives).

Emergency Placement Safety Checklist. — The Emergency Placement Safety Checklist requires the family protection specialist or caseworker to: conduct a local law enforcement background check; conduct a MACWIS background check;

conduct a gun safety check (all weapons shall be safely stored away);

check that all utilities are working;

check that there is access to an operable telephone;

check that there is clear access to exits;

check that hazardous substances are safeguarded;

check that premises are free of rodents and insects;

check that the refrigerator, stove and oven are operable;

check that there is a functional sewage system; and check that the interior plumbing has running warm and cold water.

For purposes of eligibility of foster care maintenance payments under Title IV-E of the Social Security Act, the "reasonable efforts" determination must be made no later than 60 days from the date the child is removed from the home. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 672(a)(2)(A), -671(a)(15) (2008); 45 C.F.R. § 1356.21(b)(1) (2008).

For purposes of eligibility of foster care maintenance payments under Title IV-E of the Social Security Act, the "contrary to the welfare" determination must be made in the first court ruling that sanctions (even temporarily) the removal of a child from the home. See 42 U.S.C. § 672(a)(2)(A) (2008); 45 C.F.R. § 1356.21(c) (2008).

Rule 11(a)(4), -(b)(4). — These provisions comport with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-315(4) (2008).

FEDERAL REQUIREMENTS

These rules require compliance with federal laws and regulations which impact funding for cases within the jurisdiction of the youth court. See U.R.Y.C.P. 7. Failure to comply results in the loss of federal monies crucial in achieving the best interests of the child and the interest of justice. Federal laws and regulations applicable to custody orders include:

Removal and foster care placement requirements. — 42 U.S.C. § 672(a)(2)(A); 671(a)(15) (2008) (requiring "contrary to the welfare of the child" and "reasonable efforts" determinations as set forth therein for eligibility of Title IV-E foster care maintenance payments).

Reasonable efforts determination. — 45 C.F.R. § 1356.21 (2008) provides in part:

(b) Reasonable efforts determination. . . .

(1) Judicial determination of reasonable efforts to prevent a child's removal from the home.

(i) When a child is removed from his/her home, the judicial determination as to whether reasonable efforts were made, or were not required to prevent the removal, in accordance with paragraph (b)(3) of this section, must be made no later than 60 days from the date the child is removed from the home pursuant to paragraph (k)(1)(ii) of this section.

(ii) If the determination concerning reasonable efforts to prevent the removal is not made as specified in paragraph (b)(1)(i) of this section, the child is not eligible under the Title IV-E foster care maintenance payments program for the duration of that stay in foster care.

Judicial determination of reasonable efforts to finalize a permanency plan.

45 C.F.R. § 1356.21 (2008) provides in part:

(b) Reasonable efforts. . . .

(2) Judicial determination of reasonable efforts to finalize a permanency plan.

(i) The State agency must obtain a judicial determination that it has made reasonable efforts to finalize the permanency plan that is in effect (whether the plan is reunification, adoption, legal guardianship, placement with a fit and willing relative, or placement in another planned permanent living arrangement) within twelve months of the date the child is considered to have entered foster care in accordance with the definition at § 1355.20 of this part, and at least once every twelve months thereafter while the child is in foster care.

(ii) If such a judicial determination regarding reasonable efforts to finalize a permanency plan is not made in accordance with the schedule prescribed in paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this section, the child becomes ineligible under Title IV-E at the end of the month in which the judicial determination was required to have been made, and remains ineligible until such a determination is made.

Contrary to the welfare determination. — 45 C.F.R. § 1356.21 (2008) provides in part:

(c) Contrary to the welfare determination. Under section 472(a)(1) of the Act, a child's removal from the home must have been the result of a judicial determination (unless the child was removed pursuant to a voluntary placement agreement) to the effect that continuation of residence in the home would be contrary to the welfare, or that placement would be in the best interest, of the child. The contrary to the welfare determination must be made in the first court ruling that sanctions (even temporarily) the removal of a child from home. If the determination regarding contrary to the welfare is not made in the first court ruling pertaining to removal from the home, the child is not eligible for Title IV-E foster care maintenance payments for the duration of that stay in foster care.

Concurrent planning. — 45 C.F.R. § 1356.21 (2008) provides in part:

(b) Reasonable efforts. . . .

(4) Concurrent planning. Reasonable efforts to finalize an alternative permanency plan may be made concurrently with reasonable efforts to reunify the child and family.

Detention of juveniles. — 42 U.S.C. § 5633 (2008); 28 C.F.R. 31.301 (2008) (setting forth requirements for placing juveniles in secure juvenile detention).

Editor's Note — All orders of the court shall be in substantial compliance with these rules. Courts which do not utilize the Mississippi Youth Court Information Delivery System (MYCIDS) or other network database of Mississippi youth courts, such as SWORD, may access at http://www.mssc.state.ms.us the following form(s):

PETITION TO TAKE CHILD INTO CUSTODY (DELINQUENT CHILD/ CHILD IN NEED OF SUPERVISION);

ORDER TO TAKE CHILD INTO CUSTODY (DELINQUENT CHILD /CHILD IN NEED OF SUPERVISION);

PETITION TO TAKE CHILD INTO CUSTODY (ABUSE AND NEGLECT);

ORDER TO TAKE CHILD INTO CUSTODY (ABUSE AND NEGLECT).

Rule 12. Taking into custody without custody order.

Procedures for taking into custody without a custody order a child in a matter in which the youth court has exclusive original jurisdiction shall be pursuant to Section 43-21-303 of the Mississippi Code. The custody of any child taken into custody shall comply with the detention requirements of Sections 43-21-301(6) and 43-21- 315 of the Mississippi Code. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

Rule 12. — For purposes of eligibility of foster care maintenance payments under Title IV-E of the Social Security Act, the "reasonable efforts" determination must be made no later than 60 days from the date the child is removed from the home. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 672(a)(2)(A), -671(a)(15) (2008); 45 C.F.R. § 1356.21(b)(1) (2008).

For purposes of eligibility of foster care maintenance payments under Title IV-E of the Social Security Act, the "contrary to the welfare" determination must be made in the first court ruling that sanctions (even temporarily) the removal of a child from the home. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 672(a)(2)(A) (2008); 45 C.F.R. § 1356.21(c) (2008).

FEDERAL REQUIREMENTS

These rules require compliance with federal laws and regulations which impact funding for cases within the jurisdiction of the youth court. See U.R.Y.C.P. 7. Reasonable efforts determination. — 45 C.F.R. § 1356.21 (2008) provides in part:

(b) Reasonable efforts determination. ...

(1) Judicial determination of reasonable efforts to prevent a child's removal from the home.

(i) When a child is removed from his/her home, the judicial determination as to whether reasonable efforts were made, or were not required to prevent the removal, in accordance with paragraph (b)(3) of this section, must be made no later than 60 days from the date the child is removed from the home pursuant to paragraph (k)(1)(ii) of this section.

(ii) If the determination concerning reasonable efforts to prevent the removal is not made as specified in paragraph (b)(1)(i) of this section, the child is not eligible under the Title IV-E foster care maintenance payments program for the duration of that stay in foster care.

Contrary to the welfare determination. — 45 C.F.R. § 1356.21 (2008) provides in part:

(c) Contrary to the welfare determination. Under section 472(a)(1) of the Act, a child's removal from the home must have been the result of a judicial determination (unless the child was removed pursuant to a voluntary placement agreement) to the effect that continuation of residence in the home would be contrary to the welfare, or that placement would be in the best interest, of the child. Detention of juveniles. — 42 U.S.C. § 5633 (2008); 28 C.F.R. § 31.301 (2008) (setting forth requirements for placing juveniles in secure juvenile detention).

Rule 13. Appointment of guardian ad litem.

(a) Appointment of guardian ad litem. The court shall appoint a guardian ad litem for the child when custody is ordered or at the first judicial hearing regarding the case, whichever occurs first,

(1) when a child has no parent, guardian or custodian;

(2) when the court cannot acquire personal jurisdiction over a parent, a guardian or a custodian;

(3) when the parent is a minor or a person of unsound mind;

(4) when the parent is indifferent to the interest of the child or if the interests of the child and the parent, considered in the context of the cause, appear to conflict;

(5) in every case involving an abused or neglected child which results in a judicial proceeding; or

(6) in any other instance where the court finds appointment of a guardian ad litem to be in the best interest of the child.

In cases where the court appoints a layperson as guardian ad litem, the court shall also appoint an attorney to represent the child. Upon appointment of a guardian ad litem, the court shall continue any pending proceedings for a reasonable time to allow the guardian ad litem to become familiar with the matter, consult with counsel and prepare for the cause.

(b) Qualifications of guardian ad litem. The court shall only appoint as guardian ad litem a competent person who has no adverse interest to the minor and who has received, in accordance with Section 43-21-121(4) of the Mississippi Code, the requisite child protection and juvenile justice training provided by or approved by the Mississippi Judicial College within the year immediately preceding such appointment.

(c) Duties of guardian ad litem. The guardian ad litem, in addition to all other duties required by law, shall:

(1) protect the interest of a child for whom he/she has been appointed guardian ad litem; and

(2) investigate, make recommendations to the court or enter reports as necessary to hold paramount the child's best interest.

The court shall insure that guardians ad litem perform their duties properly and in the best interest of their wards.

(d) Reasonable fees. The guardian ad litem shall be paid a fee in the performance of duties pursuant to Section 43-21-121(6) of the Mississippi Code. The court may order financially able parents to pay for the reasonable fees of the guardian ad litem, or a portion thereof, pursuant to Section 43-21-619 of the Mississippi Code.

(e) Appointment of volunteer trained layperson to assist children. The court may appoint a volunteer trained layperson to assist children, in addition to the appointment of a guardian ad litem, pursuant to Section 43-21-121(7) of the Mississippi Code.

(f) Appointment of an attorney if conflict exists. If there is a conflict between the child's preferences and the guardian ad litem's recommendation, the court shall retain the guardian ad litem to represent the best interest of the child and appoint an attorney to represent the child's preferences. The court shall then continue the proceedings for a reasonable time to allow the newly appointed attorney to prepare for the cause.

(g) Appointment of attorney in delinquency matters. In delinquency matters, if a guardian ad litem is appointed, the guardian ad litem and the legal defense counsel for the child cannot be the same person. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

Rule 13(a). — This provision comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-121(1), (4), (5) (2008).

The appointment of a guardian ad litem pursuant to this rule is a mandatory obligation. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-121(1), -(2) (2008); In re R.D., 658 So. 2d 1378, 1385 (Miss. 1995) ("Whether requested or not, judges have the obligation to appoint a guardian ad litem to represent every minor alleged to be abused or neglected as the statute requires.").

Rule 13(b). — This provision comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-121(3), -(4) (2008).

The Mississippi Judicial College presently requires six (6) hours of child protection and guardian ad litem training through an educational program approved by the Director of the Mississippi Judicial College for any appointment within 365 days thereof.

Rule 13(c). — This provision comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-121(3) (2008).

The guardian ad litem has the responsibility to fully represent the interests of the child. See In re D.K.L., 652 So. 2d 184, 191 (Miss. 1995). Such requires being prepared to testify as to the present health, education, estate and general welfare of the child, which, of necessity, requires interviewing the minor children, their current custodians, and prospective parents, if any. See M.J.S.H.S. v. Yalobusha County Dep't of Human Servs., 782 So. 2d 737, 741 (Miss. 2001). Additionally, the guardian ad litem must submit a written report to the court during the hearing, or testify and thereby become available for cross-examination by the natural parent. See D.J.L. v. Bolivar County Dep't of Human Servs., 824 So. 2d 617, 623 (Miss. 2002). The court should include in its findings of facts and conclusions of law a summary of the guardian ad litem's recommendations, whether it agrees or disagrees with the guardian ad litem, and why. In re L.D.M., 848 So. 2d 181, 183 (Miss. 2003); S.N.C. v. J.R.D., 755 So. 2d 1077, 1082 (Miss. 2000).

Rule 13(d). — This provision comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-121(6) (2008). It also allows the court, pursuant to Section 43-21-619 of the Mississippi Code, to order financially able parents to pay for the reasonable fees awarded the guardian ad litem or a portion thereof. Such is consistent with the philosophy expressed in Section 43-21-103 of the Mississippi Code. Parental accountability is a key element in achieving a child's productive citizenry.

Factors to be weighed when considering the proper amount of guardian ad litem fees to be awarded include: (1) the relative ability of the parties; (2) the skill and standing of the attorney employed; (3) the nature of the case and novelty and difficulty of the questions at issue; (4) the degree of responsibility involved in the management of the case; (5) the time and labor required; (6) the usual and customary charge in the community; and (7) preclusion of other employment by the attorney due to the acceptance of the case. See In re L.D.M., 872 So. 2d 655, 657 (Miss. 2004).

Rule 13(e). — This provision comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-121(7) (2008).

Rule 13(f). — This provision addresses the situation where the child opposes the recommendation of the guardian ad litem who is also an attorney. Since a guardian ad litem may not simultaneously represent the best interest of the child and advocate the child's preferences, the court must appoint an attorney to represent the child's preferences while retaining the appointed guardian ad litem to represent the best interest of the child.

Rule 13(g). — This provision comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-201(1) (2008).

ORDER APPOINTING CERTIFIED GUARDIAN AD LITEM.

Rule 14. Attorney of record/withdrawal of counsel.

(a) Appointment of counsel in delinquency and children in need of supervision matters. In delinquency and children in need of supervision matters, the youth court shall appoint legal counsel to represent indigent children at all critical stages, which include, but are not limited to, detention, adjudicatory, and disposition hearings and parole and probation revocation proceedings.

(b) Entry of appearance. An attorney shall be deemed of record when the attorney appears personally before the court, files a written entry of appearance, or has been appointed by the court. Once an attorney is deemed of record that attorney shall continue to represent the party in all proceedings pertaining to the case except upon a withdrawal of counsel as set forth in Rule 14(c). After an entry of appearance, counsel shall be served with copies of all subsequent pleadings, motions and notices required to be served on the party which counsel represents.

(c) Withdrawal of counsel. An attorney who has made an entry of appearance shall not be permitted to withdraw from the case until a timely appeal if any has been decided, except by leave of the court after a notice of withdrawal has been served on the party which counsel represents. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

Rule 14. — This rule comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-201(4) (2008). It is not to be construed to extend or limit the right to counsel under the Mississippi Youth Court Law.

Qualifications for attorneys appointed to delinquency cases. — Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-201(3) provides:

An attorney appointed to represent a delinquent child shall be required to complete annual juvenile justice training that is approved by the Mississippi Judicial College or the Mississippi Commission on Continuing Legal Education. The Mississippi Judicial College and the Mississippi Commission on Continuing Legal Education shall determine the amount of juvenile justice training and continuing education required to fulfill the requirements of this subsection. The Administrative Office of Courts shall maintain a roll of attorneys who have complied with the training requirements and shall enforce the provisions of this subsection. Should an attorney fail to complete the annual training requirement or fail to attend the required training within six (6) months of being appointed to a youth court case, the attorney shall be disqualified to serve and the youth court shall immediately terminate the representation and appoint another attorney. Attorneys appointed by a youth court to five (5) or fewer cases a year are exempt from the requirements of this subsection.

Rule 15. Prehearing procedures.

(1) Request for discovery. The child or other party to an adjudicatory hearing, or any proceeding thereafter, may make a written request for discovery to any other party consistent with the United States Constitution and the Mississippi Constitution and to the extent that such does not require the disclosure of confidential or privileged information prohibited from disclosure pursuant to Rule 5 of these rules or otherwise by law. A written request for discovery shall be made, if possible, no later than seven (7) days preceding the date set for the adjudicatory hearing or other applicable proceeding. The child or other party making a written request for discovery shall promptly provide reciprocal discovery to the party upon whom the discovery request was made. Recipients of discovery who disclose or encourage the disclosure of any records involving children or the contents thereof, except as authorized under the Mississippi Youth Court Law, shall be subject to the sanctions set forth in Section 43-21-267 of the Mississippi Code. No request for discovery shall be made until after a petition has been filed.

(2) Application for a discovery order. If a request for discovery is refused, application may be made to the court for a written order granting the discovery. Motions for discovery shall certify that a request for discovery has been made and refused. An order granting discovery may make such discovery reciprocal for all parties to the proceeding, including the party requesting discovery. The court may deny, in whole or part, or otherwise limit or set conditions for discovery, upon its own motion, or upon a showing by a party upon whom a request for discovery is made that granting discovery may jeopardize the safety of a party, witness, or confidential informant, result in the production of perjured testimony or evidence, endanger the existence of physical evidence, violate a privileged communication, disclose confidential information, or impede the criminal prosecution of a minor as an adult or of an adult charged with an offense arising from the same transaction or occurrence. An application for a discovery order shall be made, if possible, no later than seven (7) days preceding the date set for the adjudicatory hearing or other applicable proceeding. Any hearing on an application for a discovery order shall be conducted in a way that protects the best interests of the child and the interest of justice.

(3) Depositions. Depositions may only be taken as authorized by the court.

(4) Failure to comply. If at any time prior to the adjudicatory hearing, or other applicable proceeding, it is brought to the attention of the court that a person has failed to comply with a discovery order issued pursuant to this rule, the court may grant a continuance, prohibit the person from introducing in evidence the material not disclosed, or enter such other order as it deems just under the circumstances. In no event shall a continuance be granted pursuant to this rules provision if the child or other party has failed to make an application to the court for a discovery order.

(b) Notice of alibi or insanity defense.

(1) Time. No later than seven (7) days before the date of the adjudication hearing, the child or the child's attorney must file a written notice with the court and prosecuting attorney of the intent to rely on a defense of alibi or insanity. The notice shall include a list of names and addresses of defense witnesses.

(2) Notice of rebuttal witnesses. Within seven (7) days after the receipt of notice, but no later than two (2) days before the adjudication hearing date, the prosecutor shall provide written notice to the court and defense of an intent to offer rebuttal to the above listed defenses. The notice shall include names and addresses of rebuttal witnesses.

(3) Furnishing notification of additional witnesses. If, prior to or during the adjudication hearing, a party learns of an additional witness whose identity, if known, should have been included in the information previously furnished, the party shall promptly notify the other party or the party's attorney of the name and address of such additional witness.

(4) Sanctions. Upon the failure of either party to comply with the requirements of this rule, the court may use such sanctions as it deems just and proper under the circumstances, including: granting a continuance; limiting further discovery of the party failing to comply; finding the attorney failing to comply in contempt; or excluding the testimony of the undisclosed witness. In no event shall the court limit the right of the defendant to testify in his/her own behalf. For good cause shown, the court may grant an exception to any of the requirements of this rules provision.

(c) Motion practice. The following provisions shall apply to all written motions in proceedings subject to these rules.

(1) Filing. The original of each motion, and all affidavits and other supporting evidentiary documents, shall be filed within five (5) days of the applicable judicial hearing with the clerk of the youth court in the county where the action is docketed. The moving party at the same time shall serve a copy of the motion(s) upon each of the parties, with proof of service being upon certificate of the person executing the same, and mail a copy thereof to the youth court judge or referee at the judge's or referee's mailing address. Responses and supporting evidentiary documents shall be filed in the same manner.

(2) Memoranda and briefs. Accompanying memoranda or briefs in support of motions are encouraged but not required. Where the movant has served a memorandum or brief, respondent may serve a reply within five (5) days after service of the movant's memorandum or brief. A rebuttal memorandum or brief may be served within five (5) days of service of the reply memorandum. No memorandum or brief required or permitted herein shall be filed with the clerk. Memoranda or briefs shall not exceed twenty-five (25) pages in length.

At any time after the filing of the petition, the court may, on its own motion or the motion of any party, direct the attorneys for the parties to appear before it for a prehearing conference to consider and determine:

(1) the simplification of issues;

(2) the necessity or desirability of amendments to the petition;

(3) the amount of time necessary to complete discovery;

(4) whether the child intends to raise an alibi or insanity defense;

(5) the limitation of the number of expert witnesses;

(6) the exchange of reports of expert witnesses expected to be called by each party, but only to the extent that such does not require the disclosure of confidential or privileged information prohibited from disclosure pursuant to Rule 5 of these rules or otherwise by law;

(7) the possibility of obtaining admissions of facts and of documents and other exhibits which will avoid unnecessary proof;

(8) the imposition of sanctions as authorized by these rules;

(9) such other matters as may aid in the disposition of the action.

The court may enter an order reciting the action taken at the conference, the amendments allowed to the petition, and the agreements made by the parties as to any other matters considered, and limiting issues for the hearing to those not disposed of by admissions or agreements of counsel; and such order shall control the subsequent course of the proceedings, unless modified at the hearing to prevent manifest injustice. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

Rule 16. Detention hearings/shelter hearings.

(a) Delinquency and child in need of supervision proceedings. A child who has been ordered or taken into custody may be held in custody for longer than temporary custody if:

(1) A written report, complaint, or petition has been filed.

(2) Reasonable oral or written notice of the time, place and purpose of the hearing has been given to the child; to the child's parent, guardian or custodian; to the child's guardian ad litem, if any; and to the child's counsel. If the parent, guardian or custodian cannot be found, the youth court may hold the hearing in the absence of the child's parent, guardian or custodian.

(3) All parties present are afforded the opportunity to present evidence and cross-examine witnesses produced by others. The youth court may, in its discretion, limit the extent but not the right or presentation of evidence and cross-examination of witnesses. The youth court may receive any testimony and other evidence relevant to the necessity for the continued custody of the child without regard to the formal rules of evidence, including hearsay and opinion evidence. All testimony shall be made under oath and may be in narrative form.

(4) At the conclusion of the detention hearing, the court finds and the detention order recites that:

(i) that there is probable cause the child is within the jurisdiction of the court; and

(ii) that there is probable cause that custody is necessary.

Custody shall be deemed necessary: (1) when a child is endangered or any person would be endangered by the child; or to insure the child's attendance in court at such time as required; or when a parent, guardian or custodian is not available to provide for the care and supervision of the child; and (2) there is no reasonable alternative to custody.

Unless there is substantial compliance with these procedures, the court shall order the child to be released to the custody of the child's parent, guardian, or custodian. Any order placing a child into custody shall comply with the requirements provided in Section 43-21-301 of the Mississippi Code.

(5) The court orders custody of the child and that a petition be filed if one has not been filed.

The child with advice of counsel may waive in writing the time of the detention hearing or the detention hearing itself.

(b) Child protection proceedings. A child who has been ordered or taken into custody may be held in custody for longer than temporary custody if:

(1) A written report, complaint, or petition has been filed.

(2) Reasonable oral or written notice of the time, place and purpose of the hearing has been given to the child; to the child's parent, guardian or custodian; to the child's guardian ad litem, if any; and to the child's counsel. If the parent, guardian or custodian cannot be found, the youth court may hold the hearing in the absence of the child's parent, guardian or custodian.

(3) All parties present are afforded the opportunity to present evidence and cross-examine witnesses produced by others. The youth court may, in its discretion, limit the extent but not the right or presentation of evidence and cross-examination of witnesses. The youth court may receive any testimony and other evidence relevant to the necessity for the continued custody of the child without regard to the formal rules of evidence, including hearsay and opinion evidence. All testimony shall be made under oath and may be in narrative form.

(4) At the conclusion of the shelter hearing, the court finds and the shelter order recites that:

(i) there is probable cause the child is within the jurisdiction of the court;

(ii) there is probable cause that custody is necessary as described in Rule 16(a)(4)(ii) of these rules; and

(iii) the effect of the continuation of the child's residing within the child's own home would be contrary to the welfare of the child; that the placement of the child in foster care is in the best interest of the child; and, unless the reasonable efforts requirement is bypassed under Section 43-21-603(7)(c) of the Mississippi Code: (1) reasonable efforts have been made to maintain the child within the child's own home, but that the circumstances warrant the child's removal and there is no reasonable alternative to custody; or (2) the circumstances are of such an emergency nature that no reasonable efforts have been made to maintain the child within the child's own home, and there is no reasonable alternative to custody. The court shall order that reasonable efforts be made towards the reunification of the child with the child's family if it finds and the shelter order recites that the circumstances are of such an emergency nature that no reasonable efforts have been made to maintain the child within the child's own home, and there is no reasonable alternative to custody.

Unless there is substantial compliance with these procedures, the court shall order the child to be released to the custody of the child's parent, guardian, or custodian. Any order placing a child into custody shall comply with the requirements provided in Section 43-21-301 of the Mississippi Code.

(5) The court orders custody of the child and that a petition be filed if one has not been filed.

The child's guardian ad litem, and parent, guardian or custodian, and child may waive in writing the time of the shelter hearing or the shelter hearing itself. The child's consent is not required if the child has not reached ten (10) years of age. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

Rule 16(a), -(b). — These provisions comport with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-309 (2008).

Factors the court may consider in determining whether custody is necessary include: the child's family ties and relationships; the child's prior delinquency record; the violent nature of the alleged offense; the child's prior history of committing acts that resulted in bodily injury to others; the child's character and mental condition; the court's ability to supervise the child if placed with a parent or relative; the child's ties to the community; the risk of nonappearance; the danger to the child or public if the child is released; another petition is pending against the child; the home conditions of the child; and a violation of a valid court order. Accord Michigan Court Rule 3.935(C). The court must include its findings in the detention or shelter order.

Rule 16(b)(iv). — For purposes of eligibility of foster care maintenance payments under Title IV-E of the Social Security Act, the "reasonable efforts" determination must be made no later than 60 days from the date the child is removed from the home. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 672(a)(2)(A), -671(a)(15) (2008); 45 C.F.R. § 1356.21(b)(1) (2008).

For purposes of eligibility of foster care maintenance payments under Title IV-E of the Social Security Act, the "contrary to the welfare" determination must be made in the first court ruling that sanctions (even temporarily) the removal of a child from the home. See 42 U.S.C. § 672(a)(2)(A) (2008); 45 C.F.R. § 1356.21(c) (2008).

FEDERAL REQUIREMENTS

These rules require compliance with federal laws and regulations which impact funding for cases within the jurisdiction of the youth court. See U.R.Y.C.P. 7. Failure to comply results in the loss of federal monies crucial in achieving the best interests of the child and the interest of justice. Federal laws and regulations applicable to detention/shelter hearings include:

Reasonable efforts determination. — 45 C.F.R. § 1356.21 (2008) provides in part:

(b) Reasonable efforts determination. ...

(1) Judicial determination of reasonable efforts to prevent a child's removal from the home.

(i) When a child is removed from his/her home, the judicial determination as to whether reasonable efforts were made, or were not required to prevent the removal, in accordance with paragraph (b)(3) of this section, must be made no later than 60 days from the date the child is removed from the home pursuant to paragraph (k)(1)(ii) of this section.

(ii) If the determination concerning reasonable efforts to prevent the removal is not made as specified in paragraph (b)(1)(i) of this section, the child is not eligible under the Title IV-E foster care maintenance payments program for the duration of that stay in foster care.

Contrary to the welfare determination. — 45 C.F.R. § 1356.21 (2008) provides in part:

(c) Contrary to the welfare determination. Under section 472(a)(1) of the Act, a child's removal from the home must have been the result of a judicial determination (unless the child was removed pursuant to a voluntary placement agreement) to the effect that continuation of residence in the home would be contrary to the welfare, or that placement would be in the best interest, of the child. The contrary to the welfare determination must be made in the first court ruling that sanctions (even temporarily) the removal of a child from home. If the determination regarding contrary to the welfare is not made in the first court ruling pertaining to removal from the home, the child is not eligible for Title IV-E foster care maintenance payments for the duration of that stay in foster care.

Rule 17. Rights of child in custody for delinquency and child in need of supervision proceedings.

Procedures governing the rights of a child taken into custody for delinquency or as a child in need of supervision shall be in compliance with Section 43-21-311 of the Mississippi Code. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

The rights set forth in Section 43-21-311 of the Mississippi Code attach whenever the child is taken into custody for an offense which is within the jurisdiction of the youth court. See Smith v. State, 534 So. 2d 194, 196 (Miss. 1988) ("At the time [the child] gave his confession he had not been charged with any crime that would remove him from the Youth Court's jurisdiction . . . Therefore, the circumstances surrounding [his] confession must satisfy the Youth Court Act."). However, these rights do not necessarily apply to a minor who is a suspect in a crime carrying a potential life or death sentence. See Moody v. State, 838 So. 2d 324, 334 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002) ("Once a minor becomes a suspect in a crime carrying a potential life sentence or death, to the extent that it becomes necessary to detain that person and inform him of his Miranda rights prior to an attempt to interrogate him, we conclude that Section 43-21-151(1)(a) is sufficiently invoked so as to remove that youthful suspect from the protections otherwise afforded him under the Youth Court Act."). If the rights are applicable then failure to abide by them may constitute a violation of due process. See Gallegos v. Colorado, 370 U.S. 49, 55 (1962) ("The youth of the petitioner, the long detention, the failure to send for his parents, the failure immediately to bring him before the judge of the Juvenile Court, the failure to see to it that he had the advice of a lawyer or a friend — all of these combine to make us conclude that the formal confession . . . was obtained in violation of due process."); Edmonds v. State, 955 So. 2d 787, 804 (Miss. 2007) ("[The] absence of a parent or guardian during the interrogation of a [child who was under the jurisdiction of the youth court] goes directly to the issue of voluntariness; such a violation renders the statement inadmissible as a violation of basic constitutional guarantees.").

Rule 18. Release from custody upon change of circumstances.

Procedures governing the release of a child from custody upon a change in circumstances shall be conducted pursuant to Section 43-21-313 of the Mississippi Code. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

Rule 19. Proper facilities.

(a) Designating detention or shelter facilities. The youth court shall, by general order or rule of court, designate the available detention or shelter facilities to which children shall be delivered when taken into custody. Copies of the order or rule shall be made available to the Department of Human Services and all law enforcement agencies within the territorial jurisdiction of the youth court.

(b) Detention prohibitions. Except as otherwise provided in the Mississippi Youth Court Law, unless jurisdiction is transferred, no child shall be placed in any adult jail or place of detention of adults by any person or court. This rules provision shall not be construed to apply to commitments to the training school under Section 43-21-605(1)(g)(iii) of the Mississippi Code.

(c) Detention of children charged with certain misdemeanor offenses. Any child who is charged with a hunting or fishing violation, a traffic violation, or any other criminal offense for which the youth court shall have power on its own motion to remove jurisdiction from any criminal court, may be detained only in the same juvenile facilities designated by the youth court for children within the jurisdiction of the youth court.

(d) Arranging for the custody, care and maintenance of a child ordered into custody. After a child is ordered into custody, the court may:

(i) arrange for the custody of the child with any private institution or agency caring for children;

(ii) may commit the child to the Department of Mental Health pursuant to Section 41-21-61 et seq.; or

(iii) may order the Department of Human Services or any other public agency to provide for the custody, care and maintenance of the child. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

Rule 19(a). — This provision comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-315(1) (2008). Federal law prohibits placing juveniles alleged to be dependent, neglected, or abused in secure juvenile detention. See 42 U.S.C. § 5633(a)(11)(B) (2008). Unless there is a valid court order, a child in need of supervision (other than an out-of-state runaway pending return to the child's home state) shall not be held in secure juvenile detention longer than twenty-four (24) hours prior to and twenty-four (24) hours after an initial appearance.

Four core protections requiring State compliance. — The JJDP Act, through the 2002 reauthorization, establishes four core protections with which participating States and territories must comply to receive grants under the JJDP Act:

-Deinstitutionalization of status offenders (DSO).

-Separation of juveniles from adults in institutions (separation).

-Removal of juveniles from adult jails and lockups (jail removal).

-Reduction of disproportionate minority contact (DMC), where it

Meeting the core protections is essential to creating a fair, consistent, and effective juvenile justice system that advances the important goals of the JJDP Act. Rule 19(b). — This provision comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-315(2) (2008); accord 42 U.S.C. §§ 5603, -5633 (2008); 28 C.F.R. § 31.303(e)(3)(i)(C) (2008)

Rule 19(c). — This provision comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-315(3) (2008).

Rule 19(d). — This provision is congruent with Mississippi's constitutional mandates. See Miss. Const. Art. IV, § 86 ("It shall be the duty of the legislature to provide by law for the treatment and care of the insane; and the legislature may provide for the care of the indigent sick in the hospitals in the state."); In re B.C.M., 744 So. 2d 299, 303 (Miss. 1999) ("The Constitution requires that the State assume responsibility for [the child], and reasonable statutory interpretation requires the director to provide temporary housing, treatment and care, which should become permanent when adequate "services and facilities are available" in the facility. The only role of the trial judge regarding this minor was to determine whether the minor needed the treatment and care provided by the state facility, and if so, to order [the child's] commitment."); see also Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-315(4) (2008).

FEDERAL REQUIREMENTS

These rules require compliance with federal laws and regulations which impact funding for cases within the jurisdiction of the youth court. See U.R.Y.C.P. 7. Failure to comply results in the loss of federal monies crucial in achieving the best interests of the child and the interest of justice. Federal laws and regulations applicable to proper facilities include:

Secure detention facility means. — 42 U.S.C. § 5603 (2008) provides in part:

(12) the term "secure detention facility" means any public or private residential facility which —

(A) includes construction fixtures designed to physically restrict the movements and activities of juveniles or other individuals held in lawful custody in such facility; and

(B) is used for the temporary placement of any juvenile who is accused of having committed an offense, any nonoffender, or of any other individual accused of having committed a criminal offense; . . .

Secure correction facility means. — 42 U.S.C. § 5603 (2008) provides in part:

(13) the term "secure correctional facility" means any public or private residential facility which —

(A) includes construction fixtures designed to physically restrict the movements and activities of juveniles or other individuals held in lawful custody in such facility; and

(B) is used for the placement, after adjudication and disposition, of any juvenile who has been adjudicated as having committed an offense or any other individual convicted of a criminal offense; . . .

Contact with adult inmates prohibited. — 42 U.S.C. § 5633 (2008) provides in part:

[A State plan to receive formula grants shall] ...

(12) provide that —

(A) juveniles alleged to be or found to be delinquent or juveniles within the purview of paragraph (11) will not be detained or confined in any institution in which they have contact with adult inmates; and

(B) there is in effect in the State a policy that requires individuals who work with both such juveniles and such adult inmates, including in collocated facilities, have been trained and certified to work with juveniles; . . .

Contact means. — 42 U.S.C. § 5603 (2008) provides in part:

(25) the term "contact" means the degree of interaction allowed between juvenile offenders in a secure custody status and incarcerated adults under Section 31.303(d)(1)(i) of Title 28, Code of Federal Regulations, as in effect on December 10, 1996; . . .

Collated facilities means. — 42 U.S.C. § 5603 (2008) provides in part:

(28) the term "collocated facilities" means facilities that are located in the same building, or are part of a related complex of buildings located on the same grounds; . . .

Criteria for juvenile facilities if collated with an adult jail or lockup. — See 28 C.F.R. § 31.303(e)(3)(i)(C) (2008) (setting forth four criteria to be met to ensure the requisite separateness of a juvenile detention facility that is collocated with an adult jail or lockup).

Status offenders who commit violation of valid court order. — 42 U.S.C. § 5633 (2008) provides in part:

[A State plan to receive formula grants] . . .

(11) shall, in accordance with rules issued by the Administrator, provide that —

(A) juveniles who are charged with or who have committed an offense that would not be criminal if committed by an adult, excluding — . . .

(ii) juveniles who are charged with or who have committed a violation of a valid court order; shall not be placed in secure detention facilities or secure correctional facilities; . . .

Alleged dependent, neglected, or abused children not be placed in secure detention. — 42 U.S.C. § 5633 (2008) provides in part:

[A State plan to receive formula grants] . . .

(11) shall, in accordance with rules issued by the Administrator, provide that — . . .

(B) juveniles —

(i) who are not charged with any offense; and

(ii) who are —

(I) aliens; or

(II) alleged to be dependent, neglected, or abused; shall not be placed in secure detention facilities or secure correctional facilities; . . .

Six hour jail or lockup limitation. — 42 U.S.C. § 5633 (2008) provides in part:

[A State plan to receive formula grants shall] . . .

(13) provide that no juvenile will be detained or confined in any jail or lockup for adults except —

(A) juveniles who are accused of nonstatus offenses and who are detained in such jail or lockup for a period not to exceed 6 hours —

(i) for processing or release;

(ii) while awaiting transfer to a juvenile facility; or

(iii) in which period such juveniles make a court appearance; and only if such juveniles do not have contact with adult inmates and only if there is in effect in the State a policy that requires individuals who work with both such juveniles and adult inmates in collocated facilities have been trained and certified to work with juveniles; . .

Forty-eight hour jail or lockup limitation if awaiting initial court appearance. — See 42 U.S.C. § 5633 (2008) provides in part:

[A State plan to receive formula grants shall] . ..

(13) provide that no juvenile will be detained or confined in any jail or lockup for adults except — . . .

(B) juveniles who are accused of nonstatus offenses, who are awaiting an initial court appearance that will occur within 48 hours after being taken into custody (excluding Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays), and who are detained in a jail or lockup —

(i) in which —

(I) such juveniles do not have contact with adult inmates; and

(II) there is in effect in the State a policy that requires individuals who work with both such juveniles and adults inmates in collocated facilities have been trained and certified to work with juveniles; and

(ii) that —

(I) is located outside a metropolitan statistical area (as defined by the Office of Management and Budget) and has no existing acceptable alternative placement available;

(II) is located where conditions of distance to be traveled or the lack of highway, road, or transportation do not allow for court appearances within 48 hours (excluding Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays) so that a brief (not to exceed an additional 48 hours) delay is excusable; or

(III) is located where conditions of safety exist (such as severe adverse, life-threatening weather conditions that do not allow for reasonably safe travel), in which case the time for an appearance may be delayed until 24 hours after the time that such conditions allow for reasonable safe travel; . . .

Rule 20. Petition.

(a) Delinquency proceedings.

(1) Filing. All proceedings seeking an adjudication that a child is a delinquent child shall be initiated by the filing of a petition. Upon authorization of the youth court, the petition shall be drafted and filed by the youth court prosecutor unless the youth court has designated some other person to draft and file the petition.

(2) Time. The petition shall be filed within five (5) days from the date of a detention hearing continuing custody. Unless another period of time is authorized by the court, in noncustody cases the petition shall be filed within ten (10) days of the court order authorizing the filing of a petition. The court may, in its discretion, dismiss the petition for failure to comply with the time schedule contained herein.

(3) Form. The petition shall be entitled "IN THE INTEREST OF _____."

(4) Contents. The petition shall set forth plainly and concisely with particularity:

(i) identification of the child, including the child's full name, birth date, age, sex and residence;

(ii) identification of the parent, guardian or custodian including the name and residence of the child's parents, the name and residence of the child's legal guardian, if there be one, any person or agency in whose custody the child may be and the child's nearest relative if no parent or guardian be known;

(iii) a statement of the facts, including the facts which bring the child within the jurisdiction of the youth court and which show the child is a delinquent child;

(iv) a citation of the statute or ordinance which the child is alleged to have violated;

(v) a prayer for the type of adjudicatory relief sought; and

(vi) if any of the facts herein required are not known by the petitioner.

The petition must recite factual allegations with the same particularity required in a criminal indictment but need not have the technical form of a criminal indictment. Error in or omission of the citation shall not be grounds for dismissing the petition or for a reversal of the adjudication based thereon if the error or omission did not mislead the child to the child's prejudice.

On each petition alleging a delinquent child, the following notice shall be placed in capital letters at the bottom of the petition:

A PARENT, GUARDIAN, OR CUSTODIAN OF A CHILD SHALL BE A PARTY TO THIS CASE PURSUANT TO THE MISSISSIPPI YOUTH COURT LAW. A PERSON MADE A PARTY TO THIS CASE MAY BE REQUIRED: TO PAY FOR THE SUPPORT OF THE CHILD PLACED IN CUSTODY OF ANY PERSON OR AGENCY INCLUDING ANY NECESSARY MEDICAL TREATMENT PURSUANT TO SECTION 43-21-615 OF THE MISSISSIPPI CODE; TO PAY FOR COURT ORDERED MEDICAL AND OTHER EXAMINATIONS AND TREATMENT OF A CHILD, FOR REASONABLE ATTORNEY'S FEES AND COURT COSTS, AND FOR OTHER EXPENSES FOUND NECESSARY OR APPROPRIATE IN THE BEST INTEREST OF THE CHILD PURSUANT TO SECTION 43-21-619 OF THE MISSISSIPPI CODE; TO PAY DAMAGES OR RESTITUTION AND TO PARTICIPATE IN A COUNSELING PROGRAM OR OTHER SUITABLE FAMILY TREATMENT PROGRAM PURSUANT TO SECTION 43-21-619 OF THE MISSISSIPPI CODE; TO RECEIVE COUNSELING AND PARENTING CLASSES PURSUANT TO SECTION 43-21-605 OF THE MISSISSIPPI CODE; TO DO OR OMIT TO DO ANY ACT DEEMED REASONABLE AND NECESSARY FOR THE WELFARE OF THE CHILD PURSUANT TO SECTION 43-21-617 OF THE MISSISSIPPI CODE.

(5) Two or more offenses alleged in same petition. The youth court may order that two (2) or more offenses be alleged in the same petition in a separate count for each offense if each particular offense is one in which a child could be adjudicated either as a delinquent child or as a child in need of supervision. On each count admitted or proved in accordance with these rules, the court shall enter a separate adjudication on that count within its adjudicatory order and, after the disposition hearing, a separate disposition on that count within its disposition order. The court may order the disposition of any count to run concurrent or consecutive to any other count(s) or current dispositions, as it deems in the best interest of the child and in the interest of justice.

(6) Motion to transfer to a criminal court. The petition may contain a motion to transfer.

(7) Amendments. A petition may be amended at any time on order of the youth court for good cause shown so long as there is no prejudice to the parties.

(8) Responsive pleadings not required. No party shall be required to file a responsive pleading.

(b) Child in need of supervision proceedings.

(1) Filing. All proceedings seeking an adjudication that a child is a child in need of supervision shall be initiated by the filing of a petition. Upon authorization of the youth court, the petition shall be drafted and filed by the youth court prosecutor unless the youth court has designated some other person to draft and file the petition.

(2) Time. The petition shall be filed within five (5) days from the date of a detention hearing continuing nonsecure placement custody. Unless another period of time is authorized by the court, in noncustody cases the petition shall be filed within ten (10) days of the court order authorizing the filing of a petition. The court may, in its discretion, dismiss the petition for failure to comply with the time schedule contained herein.

(3) Form. The petition shall be entitled "IN THE INTEREST OF _____."

(4) Contents. The petition shall set forth plainly and concisely with particularity:

(i) identification of the child, including the child's full name, birth date, age, sex and residence;

(ii) identification of the parent, guardian or custodian including the name and residence of the child's parents, the name and residence of the child's legal guardian, if there be one, any person or agency in whose custody the child may be and the child's nearest relative if no parent or guardian be known;

(iii) a statement of the facts, including the facts which bring the child within the jurisdiction of the youth court and which show the child is a child in need of supervision;

(iv) a prayer for the type of adjudicatory relief sought; and

(v) if any of the facts herein required are not known by the petitioner.

On each petition alleging a child in need of supervision, the following notice shall be placed in capital letters at the bottom of the petition:

A PARENT, GUARDIAN, OR CUSTODIAN OF A CHILD SHALL BE A PARTY TO THIS CASE PURSUANT TO THE MISSISSIPPI YOUTH COURT LAW. A PERSON MADE A PARTY TO THIS CASE MAY BE REQUIRED: TO PAY FOR THE SUPPORT OF THE CHILD PLACED IN CUSTODY OF ANY PERSON OR AGENCY INCLUDING ANY NECESSARY MEDICAL TREATMENT PURSUANT TO SECTION 43-21-615 OF THE MISSISSIPPI CODE; TO PAY FOR COURT ORDERED MEDICAL AND OTHER EXAMINATIONS AND TREATMENT OF A CHILD, FOR REASONABLE ATTORNEY'S FEES AND COURT COSTS, AND FOR OTHER EXPENSES FOUND NECESSARY OR APPROPRIATE IN THE BEST INTEREST OF THE CHILD PURSUANT TO SECTION 43-21-619 OF THE MISSISSIPPI CODE; TO PAY DAMAGES OR RESTITUTION AND TO PARTICIPATE IN A COUNSELING PROGRAM OR OTHER SUITABLE FAMILY TREATMENT PROGRAM PURSUANT TO SECTION 43-21-619 OF THE MISSISSIPPI CODE; TO RECEIVE COUNSELING AND PARENTING CLASSES PURSUANT TO SECTION 43-21-605 OF THE MISSISSIPPI CODE; TO DO OR OMIT TO DO ANY ACT DEEMED REASONABLE AND NECESSARY FOR THE WELFARE OF THE CHILD PURSUANT TO SECTION 43-21-617 OF THE MISSISSIPPI CODE.

(5) Two or more offenses alleged in same petition. The youth court may order that two (2) or more offenses be alleged in the same petition in a separate count for each offense if each particular offense is one in which a child could be adjudicated either as a delinquent child or as a child in need of supervision. On each count admitted or proved in accordance with these rules, the court shall enter a separate adjudication on that count within its adjudicatory order and, after the disposition hearing, a separate disposition on that count within its disposition order. The court may order the disposition of any count to run concurrent or consecutive to any other count(s) or current dispositions, as it deems in the best interest of the child and in the interest of justice.

(6) Amendments. A petition may be amended at any time on order of the youth court for good cause shown so long as there is no prejudice to the parties.

(7) Responsive pleadings not required. No party shall be required to file a responsive pleading.

(c) Child protection proceedings.

(1) Filing. All proceedings seeking an adjudication that a child is a neglected child or an abused child shall be initiated by the filing of a petition. Upon authorization of the youth court, the petition shall be drafted and filed by the youth court prosecutor unless the youth court has designated some other person to draft and file the petition.

(2) Time. The petition shall be filed within five (5) days from the date of a shelter hearing continuing custody. In noncustody cases, unless another period of time is authorized by the court, the petition shall be filed within ten (10) days of the court order authorizing the filing of a petition. The court may, in its discretion, dismiss the petition for failure to comply with the time schedule contained herein.

(3) Form. The petition shall be entitled "IN THE INTEREST OF _____."

(4) Contents. The petition shall set forth plainly and concisely with particularity:

(i) identification of the child, including the child's full name, birth date, age, sex and residence;

(ii) identification of the parent, guardian or custodian including the name and residence of the child's parents, the name and residence of the child's legal guardian, if there be one, any person or agency in whose custody the child may be and the child's nearest relative if no parent or guardian be known;

(iii) a statement of the facts, including the facts which bring the child within the jurisdiction of the youth court and which show the child is a neglected child or an abused child;

(iv) a prayer for the type of adjudicatory relief sought; and

(v) if any of the facts herein required are not known by the petitioner.

On each petition alleging an abused or neglected child, the following notice shall be placed in capital letters at the bottom of the petition:

A PARENT, GUARDIAN, OR CUSTODIAN OF A CHILD SHALL BE A PARTY TO THIS CASE PURSUANT TO THE MISSISSIPPI YOUTH COURT LAW. A PERSON MADE A PARTY TO THIS CASE MAY BE REQUIRED: TO PAY FOR THE SUPPORT OF THE CHILD PLACED IN CUSTODY OF ANY PERSON OR AGENCY INCLUDING ANY NECESSARY MEDICAL TREATMENT PURSUANT TO SECTION 43-21-615 OF THE MISSISSIPPI CODE; TO PAY FOR COURT ORDERED MEDICAL AND OTHER EXAMINATIONS AND TREATMENT OF A CHILD, FOR REASONABLE ATTORNEY'S FEES AND COURT COSTS, AND FOR OTHER EXPENSES FOUND NECESSARY OR APPROPRIATE IN THE BEST INTEREST OF THE CHILD PURSUANT TO SECTION 43-21-619 OF THE MISSISSIPPI CODE; TO PAY DAMAGES OR RESTITUTION AND TO PARTICIPATE IN A COUNSELING PROGRAM OR OTHER SUITABLE FAMILY TREATMENT PROGRAM PURSUANT TO SECTION 43-21-619 OF THE MISSISSIPPI CODE; TO RECEIVE COUNSELING AND PARENTING CLASSES PURSUANT TO SECTION 43-21-605 OF THE MISSISSIPPI CODE; TO DO OR OMIT TO DO ANY ACT DEEMED REASONABLE AND NECESSARY FOR THE WELFARE OF THE CHILD PURSUANT TO SECTION 43-21-617 OF THE MISSISSIPPI CODE.

(5) Two or more children subject of the same petition. Two (2) or more children may be the subject of the same petition if: (i) they are siblings and (ii) they are alleged to be neglected or abused from a common source of mistreatment or neglect. On each charge of abuse and neglect in the same petition admitted or proved in accordance with these rules, the court shall enter a separate adjudication on that charge within its adjudicatory order and, after the disposition hearing, a separate disposition on that charge in its disposition order.

(6) Amendments. A petition may be amended at any time on order of the youth court for good cause shown so long as there is no prejudice to the parties.

(7) Responsive pleadings not required. No party shall be required to file a responsive pleading. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

Rule 20(a)(4), -(b)(4), -(c)(4). — These provisions comport with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-455 (2008).

A petition which institutes a youth court proceeding must recite factual allegations specific and definite enough to fairly apprise the child, the child's parents, custodians or guardians of the particular act or acts of misconduct or the particular circumstances which will be inquired into at the adjudicatory proceedings. See In re Dennis, 291 So. 2d 731, 733 (Miss. 1974); see also In re M.R.L., 488 So. 2d 788, 792-93 (Miss. 1986) (holding that children expressly charged as children in need of supervision could not be found, absent an amendment to the petition, neglected children). The youth court is a court of statutory and limited jurisdiction, and the facts vesting jurisdiction should be shown affirmatively. See Monk v. State, 116 So. 2d 810, 811 (Miss. 1960). A petition charging delinquency is to include the statute or ordinance which the child is alleged to have violated. See In re R.T., 520 So. 2d 136, 137 (Miss. 1988).

PETITION OF DELINQUENCY / CHILD IN NEED OF SUPERVISION;

PETITION OF ABUSE OR NEGLECT.

Rule 21. Proper venue.

(a) Delinquency and child in need of supervision proceedings. If a child is alleged to be a delinquent child or a child in need of supervision, the proceedings shall be commenced in any county where any of the alleged acts are said to have occurred. After adjudication, the youth court may, in the best interest of the child, transfer the case at any stage of the proceeding for disposition to the county where the child resides or to a county where a youth court has previously acquired jurisdiction.

(b) Child protection proceedings. If a child is alleged to be an abused or neglected child, the proceedings shall be commenced in the county where the child's custodian resides or in the county where the child is present when the report is made to the intake unit. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

Rule 22. Summons.

(1) Persons summoned. When a petition has been filed and the date of hearing has been set by the youth court, the judge or the judge's designee shall order the clerk of the youth court to issue a summons to the following to appear personally at such hearing: the child named in the petition; the person or persons who have custody or control of the child; the parent or guardian of the child if such parent or guardian does not have custody of the child; and any other person whom the court deems necessary. The clerk does not need to issue summons to:

(i) any person who has already been served with process or who has already appeared in court proceedings in the cause; and

(ii) who has received sufficient notice of the time, date, place and purpose of the adjudication hearing.

(2) Form. The form of the summons shall be pursuant to Section 43-21-503 of the Mississippi Code.

Additionally, the following notice shall be placed in capital letters at the bottom of the summons:

A PARENT, GUARDIAN, OR CUSTODIAN OF A CHILD SHALL BE A PARTY TO THIS CASE PURSUANT TO THE MISSISSIPPI YOUTH COURT LAW. A PERSON MADE A PARTY TO THIS CASE MAY BE REQUIRED: TO PAY FOR THE SUPPORT OF THE CHILD PLACED IN CUSTODY OF ANY PERSON OR AGENCY INCLUDING ANY NECESSARY MEDICAL TREATMENT PURSUANT TO SECTION 43-21-615 OF THE MISSISSIPPI CODE; TO PAY FOR COURT ORDERED MEDICAL AND OTHER EXAMINATIONS AND TREATMENT OF A CHILD, FOR REASONABLE ATTORNEY'S FEES AND COURT COSTS, AND FOR OTHER EXPENSES FOUND NECESSARY OR APPROPRIATE IN THE BEST INTEREST OF THE CHILD PURSUANT TO SECTION 43-21-619 OF THE MISSISSIPPI CODE; TO PAY DAMAGES OR RESTITUTION AND TO PARTICIPATE IN A COUNSELING PROGRAM OR OTHER SUITABLE FAMILY TREATMENT PROGRAM PURSUANT TO SECTION 43-21-619 OF THE MISSISSIPPI CODE; TO RECEIVE COUNSELING AND PARENTING CLASSES PURSUANT TO SECTION 43-21-605 OF THE MISSISSIPPI CODE; TO DO OR OMIT TO DO ANY ACT DEEMED REASONABLE AND NECESSARY FOR THE WELFARE OF THE CHILD PURSUANT TO SECTION 43-21-617 OF THE MISSISSIPPI CODE.

(3) Manner of service.

(i) Who may serve summons. Service of summons shall be made by a sheriff, deputy sheriff, or any other person appointed by the youth court judge. Any person appointed to serve summons shall, for such purpose, be an officer of the youth court.

(ii) Notice of time, date, and place. Notice of the time, date, place and purpose of any hearing other than adjudicatory and transfer hearings shall be given to all parties in person in court or by mail, or in any other manner as the youth court may direct.

(iii) If parent, guardian, or custodian exercising parental responsibilities resides and can be located within the state. Service of summons shall be made personally by delivery of a copy of the summons with a copy of the petition in a sealed envelope attached to the summons. A child may be served in the same manner as an adult. Service of the summons and petition, motions, notices and all other papers upon a child who has not reached his/her fourteenth birthday shall be effectuated by making service upon the child's parent, guardian or custodian and guardian ad litem, if any.

(iv) If parent, guardian, or custodian exercising parental responsibilities does not reside or cannot be located within the state. If the parent, guardian, or custodian exercising parental responsibilities does not reside within the state or cannot be located therein, the clerk shall issue summons to the guardian ad litem. If the name and post office address of the parent or guardian who does not reside within the state or cannot be located therein can be ascertained, the clerk shall mail by "certified mail" ten (10) days before the date set for the hearing a copy of the summons with a copy of the petition attached to the summons to such parent or guardian. The clerk shall note the fact of such mailing upon the court docket. Ten (10) days after the summons has been mailed, the court may take jurisdiction as if summons had been personally served as herein provided.

(4) Time. Summons shall be served not less than three (3) days before the date set for the adjudicatory hearing of proceedings concerning the child.

(5) Waiver of summons by a party other than the child. Service of summons on a party other than the child may be waived by that party by written stipulation or by voluntary appearance at the hearing. In the case of written stipulation or voluntary appearance, the youth court may, in its discretion, proceed to a hearing regardless of the date set for the hearing if all other parties are properly before the youth court. At the time of the waiver, a copy of the petition shall be given to the party.

(6) Waiver of three (3) days' time before hearing by a child served with process. If a child is served with process, the child may waive the three (3) days' time before the hearing, and the youth court may, in its discretion, proceed to a hearing regardless of the date set for the hearing if all other parties are properly before the youth court and the youth court finds all of the following: the child fully understands his/her rights and fully understands the potential consequences of the hearing; the child voluntarily, intelligently, and knowingly waives his/her rights to three (3) days' time before the hearing; the child is effectively represented by counsel; and the child has had in fact sufficient time to prepare.

(7) Enforcement. Any person summoned who fails to appear without reasonable cause may be proceeded against for contempt of court. In case the summons cannot be served or the parties served with summons fail to obey the same, or in any case when it shall be made to appear to the youth court that the service of summons will be ineffectual or the welfare of a child requires that the child be brought forthwith into the custody of the youth court, a warrant or custody order may be issued against the parent, parents, guardian or custodian or against the child.

(b) Disposition hearings. Service of summons for disposition hearings shall be made pursuant to Rule 22(a) of these rules. The clerk does not need to issue summons to:

(i) any person who has already been served with process or who has already appeared in court proceedings in the cause; and

(ii) who has received sufficient notice of the time, date, place and purpose of the disposition hearing.

(c) Modification of disposition hearings. Service of summons for modification of disposition hearings shall be made pursuant to Rule 22(a) of these rules. The clerk does not need to issue summons to:

(i) any person who has already been served with process or who has already appeared in court proceedings in the cause; and

(ii) who has received sufficient notice of the time, date, place and purpose of the modification hearing.

(d) Permanency hearings. Service of summons for permanency hearings shall be made pursuant to Rule 29(b) of these rules.

(e) Permanency review hearings. Service of summons for permanency review hearings shall be made pursuant to Rule 31(b) of these rules. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

Rule 23. Transfer of cases.

(a) Transfers from youth court. Procedures for transferring cases from youth court to criminal court shall be conducted pursuant to Section 43-21-157 of the Mississippi Code.

(b) Transfers to youth court. Procedures for transferring cases from other courts to youth court shall be conducted pursuant to Section 43-21-159 of the Mississippi Code.

(c) Removal by the youth court of certain criminal misdemeanor offenses. Unless the cause has been transferred, or unless the child has previously been the subject of a transfer from the youth court to the circuit court for trial as an adult, except for violations under the Implied Consent Law, and was convicted, the youth court shall have power on its own motion to remove jurisdiction from any criminal court of any offense including a hunting or fishing violation, a traffic violation, or a violation of Section 67-3-70 of the Mississippi Code, committed by a child in a matter under the jurisdiction of the youth court and proceed therewith in accordance with the provisions of the Mississippi Youth Court Law. Such does not apply to a youth who has a pending charge or a conviction for any crime over which circuit court has original jurisdiction.

(d) Stay of execution by the youth court of certain criminal misdemeanor offenses. After conviction and sentence of any child by any court having original jurisdiction on a misdemeanor charge, and within the time allowed for an appeal of such conviction and sentence, the youth court of the county shall have the full power to stay the execution of the sentence and to release the child on good behavior or on other order as the youth court may see fit to make unless the child has previously been the subject of a transfer from the youth court to the circuit court for trial as an adult and was convicted. When a child is convicted of a misdemeanor and is committed to, incarcerated in or imprisoned in a jail or other place of detention by a criminal court having proper jurisdiction of such charge, such court shall notify the youth court judge or the judge's designee of the conviction and sentence prior to the commencement of such incarceration.

(e) Youth court may order the destruction of certain records maintained by a criminal court. The youth court shall have the power to order and supervise the destruction of any records involving children maintained by a criminal court in accordance with Section 43-21-265 of the Mississippi Code.

(f) Expungement of certain records in other courts. The youth court shall have the power to set aside a judgment of any other court rendered in any matter over which the youth court has exclusive original jurisdiction, to expunge or destroy the records thereof in accordance with Section 43-21-265 of the Mississippi Code, and to order a refund of fines and costs. Such does not apply to a youth who has a pending charge or a conviction for any crime over which circuit court has original jurisdiction. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

Rule 23(a). — This provision adopts the statutory procedures for transferring cases from youth court to criminal courts. Such procedures require conducting a bifurcated hearing and making specific statutory findings. See Buck v. State, 838 So. 2d 256, 261 (Miss. 2003) ("[T]he statutory youth court transfer procedure is comprehensive and must be followed."); Hicks v. State, 870 So. 2d 1238, 1240 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004) ("The [transfer] order entered in this matter fully complied with the statutes. . . . Accordingly, [the] claim that the youth court did not have the necessary jurisdiction to transfer the case to circuit court is without merit."); Biggs v. State, 741 So. 2d 318, 331 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999) ("[B]efore transferring a juvenile for trial in the circuit courts, the youth court must first conduct a bifurcated hearing and (1) determine . . . [that] probable cause exists to believe that the child committed the alleged offense; and (2) find by clear and convincing evidence that there are no reasonable prospects of rehabilitation within the juvenile system.").

This provision adopts the statutory procedures for transferring cases from other courts to youth court. These procedures require that the circuit court determine whether the transfer is in the best interest of the child and in the interest of justice. See State v. U.G., 726 So. 2d 151, 155 (Miss. 1998) ("Neither the best interest of the child nor 'the interest of justice' overrides the other, but they can be separate interests and must be given full review by the circuit court."). But cf. Horne v. State, 825 So. 2d 627, 634 (Miss. 2002) ("The acts of the perpetrators demonstrate a clear lack of conscience. . . . We find that, even though the circuit court erred by not considering the two factors under State v. U.G., this error was harmless."). A transfer to youth court may be made at any stage of the proceedings prior to the attachment of jeopardy. Hoops v. State, 681 So. 2d 521, 536 (Miss. 1996). By statute, "[n]o offense involving the use or possession of a firearm by a child who has reached his fifteenth birthday and which, if committed by an adult would be a felony, shall be transferred to the youth court." Miss. Code Ann. 43-21-159(7) (2008); see also Cockrell v. State, 811 So. 2d 305, 307-08 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001) (holding that Section 43-21-159(7) prohibited transfer of a firearm offense committed by sixteen-year-old to youth court); Wash v. State, 807 So. 2d 452, 459 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001) (holding that the issue of the child's age at the time of the event is critical in determining whether a transfer is prohibited under Section 43-21-159(7)).

Rule 23(c). — This provision comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. 43-21-159(1) (2008).

Rule 23(d) through (f). — These provisions comport with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. 43-21-159(2) (2008).

Rule 24. Adjudication hearings.

(i) If child is not in detention. Unless the hearing is continued upon a showing of good cause or the person who is a subject to the cause has admitted the allegations of the petition, an adjudicatory hearing shall be held within ninety (90) days after the filing of the petition to determine whether there is legally sufficient evidence to find that the child is a delinquent child or a child in need of supervision. If the adjudicatory hearing is not held within the ninety (90) days, the petition shall be dismissed with prejudice.

(ii) If child is in detention. If the child is in detention, the hearing shall be held as soon as possible but not later than twenty-one (21) days after the child is first detained by the court unless the hearing be postponed: upon motion of the child; where process cannot be completed; or upon a judicial finding that a material witness is not presently available. If the adjudicatory hearing is not held or postponed for the aforesaid reasons, the child may be released from detention.

(2) Acceptance of admissions. At any time after the petition has been filed, all parties to the cause may appear before the judge and admit the allegations of the petition. The judge may accept this admission as proof of the allegations if the judge finds that: the parties making the admission fully understand their rights and fully understand the potential consequences of their admission to the allegations; the parties making the admission voluntarily, intelligently and knowingly admit to all facts necessary to constitute a basis for court action under Mississippi's Youth Court Law; the parties making the admission have not in the reported admission to the allegation set forth facts that, if found to be true, constitute a defense to the allegation; and the child making the admission is effectively represented by counsel.

(3) Plea bargaining. Under no circumstances shall the party or the prosecutor engage in discussion for the purpose of agreeing to exchange concessions by the prosecutor for the party's admission to the petition.

(4) Conduct of hearing. All cases involving children shall be heard at any place the judge deems suitable but separately from the trial of cases involving adults. Adjudication hearings shall be conducted:

(i) without a jury and may be recessed from time to time;

(ii) under the rules of evidence and rules of court as may comply with applicable constitutional standards;

(iii) by excluding the general public and admitting only those persons found by the court to have a direct interest in the cause or work of the court; and

(iv) with a complete record of all evidence taken by stenographic reporting, by mechanical or electronic device or by some combination thereof.

Any person found by the court to have a direct interest in the cause shall have the right to appear and be represented by legal counsel.

(5) Verifying information and explaining procedures and rights. At the beginning of each adjudicatory hearing, the court shall: verify the name, age and residence of the child who is the subject of the cause and ascertain the relationship of the parties, each to the other; ascertain whether all necessary parties are present and identify all persons participating in the hearing; ascertain whether the notice requirements have been complied with and, if not, whether the affected parties intelligently waived compliance of the notice requirements in accordance with Section 43-21-507 of the Mississippi Code; explain to the parties the purpose of the hearing and the possible dispositional alternatives thereof; and explain to the parties:

(i) the right to counsel;

(ii) the right to remain silent;

(iii) the right to subpoena witnesses;

(iv) the right to confront and cross-examine witnesses; and

(v) the right to appeal, including the right to a transcript of the proceedings.

Additionally, if the child is an alleged child in need of supervision, the court shall explain the procedures set forth in Rule 10 of these rules for holding the child in secure juvenile detention for a violation of a valid court order.

The court should then ascertain whether the parties before the court are represented by counsel. If the party wishes to retain counsel, the court shall continue the hearing for a reasonable time to allow the party to obtain and consult with counsel of the party's own choosing. If an indigent child does not have counsel, the court shall appoint counsel to represent the child and shall continue the hearing for a reasonable time to allow the child to consult with the appointed counsel.

(6) Evidence. In arriving at its adjudicatory decision, the court shall consider only evidence which has been formally admitted at the adjudicatory hearing. The following evidentiary procedures apply to these hearings:

(i) All testimony shall be under oath and may be in narrative form.

(ii) The court shall admit any evidence that would be admissible in a criminal proceeding.

(iii) An out-of-court admission or confession by the child, even if otherwise admissible, shall be insufficient to support an adjudication that the child is a delinquent child unless the admission or confession is corroborated in whole or in part by other competent evidence.

(iv) Members of the youth court staff may appear as witnesses except that no admission or confession made to a member of the youth court staff may be testified to at a youth court hearing.

(v) All parties to a youth court cause shall have the right at any hearing in which an investigation, record or report is admitted in evidence to subpoena, confront and examine the person who prepared or furnished data for the report and to introduce evidence controverting the contents of the report.

(7) Opportunity to present a closing argument. At the conclusion of the evidence, the court shall give the parties an opportunity to present closing argument pursuant to Section 43-21-559(4) of the Mississippi Code.

(8) Standard of proof. If the court finds on proof beyond a reasonable doubt that a child is a delinquent child or a child in need of supervision, the youth court shall enter an order adjudicating the child to be a delinquent child or a child in need of supervision. Where the petition alleges that the child is a delinquent child, the youth court may, as an alternative, enter an order that the child is a child in need of supervision on proof beyond a reasonable doubt that the child is a child in need of supervision.

(9) Terminating proceedings. The court may at any time terminate the proceedings and dismiss the petition if the court finds such action to be conducive to the welfare of the child and in the best interests of the state.

(i) If child is not in shelter. Unless continued upon a showing of good cause or the person who is a subject to the cause has admitted the allegations of the petition, the adjudicatory hearing of a child who is not in shelter shall be held within ninety (90) days after the filing of the petition to determine whether there is legally sufficient evidence to find that the child is a neglected or an abused child. If the adjudicatory hearing is not held within the ninety (90) days, the petition shall be dismissed with prejudice.

(ii) If child is in shelter. The adjudicatory hearing of a child who is in shelter shall be held as soon as possible but not later than thirty (30) days after the child is first taken into custody unless the hearing is postponed: upon motion of the child; where process cannot be completed; or upon a judicial finding that a material witness is not presently available. If the adjudicatory hearing is not held or postponed for the aforesaid reasons, the child may be released from shelter.

(2) Where parties do not contest the allegations in the petition. At any time after the petition has been filed, all parties to the cause may appear before the judge and voluntarily choose not to contest the allegations in the petition. In such instances, the court may adjudicate the child as a neglected child or an abused child or a sexually abused child or a dependent child, as applicable, if there is a sufficient factual basis to sustain the charge(s) and the court has verified the information and explained the rights and procedures required pursuant to Rule 24(b)(4) of this rule.

(3) Conduct of hearing. All cases involving children shall be heard at any place the judge deems suitable but separately from the trial of cases involving adults. Adjudication hearings shall be conducted:

(i) without a jury and may be recessed from time to time;

(ii) under the rules of evidence and rules of court as may comply with applicable constitutional standards;

(iii) by excluding the general public and admitting only those persons found by the court to have a direct interest in the cause or work of the court; and

(iv) with a complete record of all evidence taken by stenographic reporting, by mechanical or electronic device or by some combination thereof.

Any person found by the youth court to have a direct interest in the cause shall have the right to appear and be represented by legal counsel, which shall include the foster parent(s) and the residential child caring agency providing care for the child. The court may exclude the attendance of a child from an adjudication hearing in neglect and abuse cases with consent of the child's counsel.

(4) Verifying information and explaining procedures and rights. At the beginning of each adjudicatory hearing, the court shall: verify the name, age and residence of the child who is the subject of the cause and ascertain the relationship of the parties, each to the other; ascertain whether all necessary parties are present and identify all persons participating in the hearing; ascertain whether the notice requirements have been complied with and, if not, whether the affected parties intelligently waived compliance of the notice requirements in accordance with Section 43-21-507 of the Mississippi Code; explain to the parties the purpose of the hearing and the possible dispositional alternatives thereof; and explain to the parties:

(i) the right to counsel;

(ii) the right to remain silent;

(iii) the right to subpoena witnesses;

(iv) the right to confront and cross-examine witnesses; and

(v) the right to appeal, including the right to a transcript of the proceedings.

The court should then ascertain whether the parties before the court are represented by counsel. If the party wishes to retain counsel, the court shall continue the hearing for a reasonable time to allow the party to obtain and consult with counsel of the party's own choosing. If an indigent child does not have counsel, the court shall appoint counsel to represent the child and shall continue the hearing for a reasonable time to allow the child to consult with the appointed counsel.

(5) Evidence. In arriving at its adjudicatory decision, the court shall consider only evidence which has been formally admitted at the adjudicatory hearing. The following evidentiary procedures apply to these hearings:

(i) All testimony shall be under oath and may be in narrative form.

(ii) The court shall admit any evidence that would be admissible in a civil proceeding.

(iii) Members of the youth court staff may appear as witnesses except that no admission or confession made to a member of the youth court staff may be testified to at a youth court hearing.

(iv) All parties to a youth court cause shall have the right at any hearing in which an investigation, record or report is admitted in evidence to subpoena, confront and examine the person who prepared or furnished data for the report and to introduce evidence controverting the contents of the report.

(6) Opportunity to present closing argument. At the conclusion of the evidence, the court shall give the parties an opportunity to present closing argument.

(7) Standard of proof. If the court finds from a preponderance of the evidence that the child is a neglected child or an abused child, the youth court shall enter an order adjudicating the child to be a neglected child or an abused child.

(8) Terminating proceedings. The court may at any time terminate the proceedings and dismiss the petition if the court finds such action to be conducive to the welfare of the child and in the best interests of the state. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

Rule 24(a)(1), -(b)(1). — These provisions comport with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-551 (2008).

Our court has strictly construed Section 43-21-551 of the Mississippi Code, the basis for Rule 24(a)(1) and (b)(1). See, e.g., D.D.B. v. Jackson County Youth Court, 816 So. 2d 380, 383 (Miss. 2002) ("[Section 43-21-551(1)] does not say that an order must be entered within the ninety (90) day period. The statute only says that an adjudicatory hearing shall be held within ninety (90) days or it shall be dismissed, unless the hearing is continued upon a showing of good cause."); In re C.R., 604 So. 2d 1079, 1081 (Miss. 1992) ("The [adjudicatory] proceeding's postponement . . . is without consequence since § 43-21-551 provides that a hearing may be continued upon a showing of good cause.").

Rule 24(a)(2), -(b)(2). — These provisions comport with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-553 (2008)

Rule 24(a)(3). — These provisions comport with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-555 (2008).

Rule 24(a)(4), -(b)(3). — These provisions comport with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-203 (2008).

All cases involving children must be heard separately from the trial of cases involving adults. This is consistent with the confidential and rehabilitative nature of youth court proceedings. An effective method to assure compliance is for the court to schedule its adult cases and youth court proceedings on separate days.

In child protection proceedings, the foster parent(s) and the residential child caring agency providing care for the child are entitled to appear at the adjudication hearing. See also Miss. Code Ann. 43-15-13(11) (providing rights to be extended to foster parents). If a party invokes Rule 615 of the Mississippi Rules of Evidence, the court should take the testimony of the foster parent(s) and the representative of the residential child caring agency prior to taking the testimony of other witnesses.

Rule 24(a)(4)(i), -(b)(3)(i). — Adjudicatory hearings are conducted without a jury. See McKeiver v. Pennsylvania, 403 U.S. 528, 545 (1971) ("[T]rial by jury in the juvenile court's adjudicative stage is not a constitutional requirement."); Hopkins v. Youth Court, 227 So. 2d 282, 285 (Miss. 1969) ("[W]e hold that the [youth] court did not err in denying a jury trial.").

Rule 24(a)(4)(ii), -(b)(3)(ii). — Adjudication hearings are conducted under the rules of evidence and rules of court as may comply with constitutional standards. See M.R.E. 101 ("These rules govern proceedings in the courts of the State of Mississippi to the extent and with the exceptions stated in rule 1101."). See generally Application of Gault, 387 U.S. 1 (1967); Patterson v. Hopkins, 350 F. Supp. 676, 683 (N.D. Miss. 1972) ("Gault decided that, although the Fourteenth Amendment does not require that the hearing at this stage conform with all the requirements of a criminal trial or even of the usual administrative proceeding, the Due Process Clause does require application during the adjudicatory hearing of 'the essentials of due process and fair treatment'.").

Rule 24(a)(5), -(b)(4). — These provisions comport with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-557 (2008).

At the beginning of each adjudicatory hearing, the court is required to verify certain information and to explain certain procedures and rights. See In re J.N., 915 So. 2d 1076, 1079-80 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005) ("A child in youth court proceedings is entitled to certain due process rights that cannot be ignored. At the beginning of an adjudicatory hearing, the youth court must explain to the parties the purpose of the hearing, the possible disposition alternatives, the right to counsel, the right to remain silent, the right to subpoena witnesses, the right to cross-examine witnesses testifying against him, and the right to appeal.").

Rule 24(a)(6), -(b)(5). — These provisions comport with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-559 (2008).

M.R.E. 101 provides: — These rules govern proceedings in the courts of the State of Mississippi to the extent and with the exceptions stated in rule 1101.

M.R.E. 1101(b) provides in part: — Rules Inapplicable. Except for the rules pertaining to privileges, these rules do not apply in the following situations:

(1) Preliminary Questions of Fact. The determination of questions of fact preliminary to admissibility of evidence when the issue is to be determined by the court under rule 104(a).

(3) Miscellaneous Proceedings. . . . probable cause hearings in . . . youth court cases; . . . disposition hearings; granting or revoking probation; issuance of warrants for arrest, . . . and search warrants; and proceedings with respect to release on bail or otherwise.

(4) Contempt Proceedings. Contempt proceedings in which the court may act summarily.

Rule 24(a)(7), -(b)(6). — These provisions comport with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-559(4) (2008).

Rule 24(a)(8), -(b)(7). — These provisions comport with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-561 (2008).

The burden of proof in delinquency and children in need of supervision proceedings is proof beyond a reasonable doubt. See In re Winship, 397 U.S. 358, 368 (1970); L.M. v. State, 600 So. 2d 967, 969 (Miss. 1992); In re Dennis, 291 So. 2d 731, 733 (Miss. 1974). The burden of proof in child protection proceedings is proof by a preponderance of the evidence. See E.S. v. State, 567 So. 2d 848, 850 (Miss. 1990).

Rule 24(a)(9), -(b)(8). — These provisions comport with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-557(4) (2008).

Rule 25. Adjudication orders.

(a) Delinquency and child in need of supervision proceedings.

(1) Content. An adjudication order shall recite that the child has been adjudicated a delinquent child or a child in need of supervision, as applicable, but in no event shall it recite that the child has been found guilty. No order of adjudication concerning any child shall recite that a child has been found guilty; but it shall recite that a child is found to be a delinquent child or a child in need of supervision. Upon a written motion by a party, the youth court shall make written findings of fact and conclusions of law upon which it relies for the adjudication that the child is a delinquent child or a child in need of supervision. Any order of adjudication shall be confidential as provided by Section 43-21-561(5) of the Mississippi Code and as otherwise provided by law.

(2) Two or more offenses alleged in same petition. On each count admitted or proved in accordance with these rules, the court shall enter a separate adjudication on that count within its adjudicatory order.

(b) Child protection proceedings.

(1) Content. An adjudication order shall recite that the child has been adjudicated a neglected child or an abused child or a sexually abused child or a dependent child, as applicable, but in no event shall it recite that the child has been found guilty. Upon a written motion by a party, the youth court shall make written findings of fact and conclusions of law upon which it relies for the adjudication that the child is a neglected child or an abused child or a sexually abused child or a dependent child. Any order of adjudication shall be confidential as provided by Section 43-21-561(5) of the Mississippi Code and as otherwise provided by law.

(2) Two or more children subject of the same petition. On each charge of abuse and neglect in the same petition admitted or proved in accordance with these rules, the court shall enter a separate adjudication on that charge within its adjudicatory order. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

ORDER ADJUDICATING CHILD AS A DELINQUENT CHILD /CHILD IN NEED OF SUPERVISION (CHILD ADMITTING ALLEGATIONS IN PETITION)

ORDER ADJUDICATING CHILD AS A DELINQUENT CHILD /CHILD IN NEED OF SUPERVISION; ORDER ADJUDICATING CHILD AS AN ABUSED OR NEGLECTED CHILD OR SEXUALLY ABUSED CHILD.

Rule 26. Disposition hearings.

(a) Delinquency proceedings.

(1) Time of hearing. If the child has been adjudicated a delinquent child, the court shall immediately set a time and place for a disposition hearing which shall be separate, distinct and subsequent to the adjudicatory hearing. The disposition hearing may be held immediately following the adjudicatory hearing unless a continuance is necessary to allow the parties to prepare for their participation in the proceedings. If the child has been taken into custody, a disposition hearing shall be held within fourteen (14) days after the adjudicatory hearing unless good cause be shown for postponement.

(2) Conduct of hearing. All cases involving children shall be heard at any place the judge deems suitable but separately from the trial of cases involving adults. Disposition hearings shall be conducted:

(i) without a jury and may be recessed from time to time;

(ii) under the rules of evidence and rules of court as may comply with applicable constitutional standards;

(iii) by excluding the general public and admitting only those persons found by the court to have a direct interest in the cause or work of the court;

(iv) with a complete record of all the evidence taken by stenographic reporting, by mechanical or electronic device or by some combination thereof.

Any person found by the court to have a direct interest in the cause shall have the right to appear and be represented by legal counsel.

(3) Evidence. In arriving at its dispositional decision, the court shall consider only evidence presented at the disposition hearing. The following evidentiary procedures apply to these disposition hearings:

(i) All testimony shall be under oath unless waived by all parties and may be in narrative form.

(ii) The court may consider any evidence that is material and relevant to the disposition of the cause, including hearsay and opinion evidence.

(iii) All parties to a youth court cause shall have the right at any hearing in which an investigation, record or report is admitted in evidence to subpoena, confront and examine the person who prepared or furnished data for the report and to introduce evidence controverting the contents of the report.

(iv) The court may exclude the attendance of a child from any portion of a disposition hearing that would be injurious to the best interest of the child in delinquency cases with consent of the child's counsel.

(4) Explaining the purpose of the dispositional hearing. At the beginning of each disposition hearing, the judge shall inform the parties of the purpose of the hearing.

(5) Opportunity to present closing argument. At the conclusion of the evidence, the youth court shall give the parties an opportunity to present closing argument.

(6) Factors for consideration. If the child has been adjudicated a delinquent child, before entering a disposition order, the youth court should consider, among others, the following relevant factors:

(i) the nature of the offense;

(ii) the manner in which the offense was committed;

(iii) the nature and number of a child's prior adjudicated offenses;

(iv) the child's need for care and assistance;

(v) the child's current medical history, including medication and diagnosis;

(vi) the child's mental health history, which may include, but not be limited to, the Massachusetts Youth Screening Instrument version 2 (MAYSI-2);

(vii) copies of the child's cumulative record from the last school of record, including special education records, if applicable;

(viii) recommendation from the school of record based on areas of remediation needed;

(ix) disciplinary records from the school of record; and records of disciplinary actions outside of the school setting.

Additionally, pursuant to Section 43-27-25 of the Mississippi Code, no child who is seriously handicapped by mental illness or retardation shall be referred to a state-supported training school.

(7) Entering disposition order. After consideration of all the evidence and the relevant factors, the court shall enter a disposition order that shall not recite any of the facts or circumstances upon which the disposition is based, nor shall it recite that a child has been found guilty; but it shall recite that a child is found to be a delinquent child. Upon a written motion by a party, the court shall make written findings of fact and conclusions of law upon which it relies for the disposition order.

(b) Child in need of supervision proceedings.

(1) Time of hearing. If the child has been adjudicated a child in need of supervision, the court shall immediately set a time and place for a disposition hearing which shall be separate, distinct and subsequent to the adjudicatory hearing. The disposition hearing may be held immediately following the adjudicatory hearing unless a continuance is necessary to allow the parties to prepare for their participation in the proceedings. If the child has been taken into custody, a disposition hearing shall be held within fourteen (14) days after the adjudicatory hearing unless good cause be shown for postponement.

(2) Conduct of hearing. All cases involving children shall be heard at any place the judge deems suitable but separately from the trial of cases involving adults. Disposition hearings shall be conducted:

(i) without a jury and may be recessed from time to time;

(ii) under the rules of evidence and rules of court as may comply with applicable constitutional standards;

(iii) by excluding the general public and admitting only those persons found by the court to have a direct interest in the cause or work of the court;

(iv) with a complete record of all the evidence taken by stenographic reporting, by mechanical or electronic device or by some combination thereof.

Any person found by the court to have a direct interest in the cause shall have the right to appear and be represented by legal counsel.

(3) Evidence. In arriving at its dispositional decision, the court shall consider only evidence presented at the disposition hearing. The following evidentiary procedures apply to these disposition hearings:

(i) All testimony shall be under oath unless waived by all parties and may be in narrative form.

(ii) The court may consider any evidence that is material and relevant to the disposition of the cause, including hearsay and opinion evidence.

(iii) All parties to a youth court cause shall have the right at any hearing in which an investigation, record or report is admitted in evidence to subpoena, confront and examine the person who prepared or furnished data for the report and to introduce evidence controverting the contents of the report.

(iv) The court may exclude the attendance of a child from any portion of a disposition hearing that would be injurious to the best interest of the child in child in need of supervision cases with consent of the child's counsel.

(4) Explaining the purpose of the dispositional hearing. At the beginning of each disposition hearing, the judge shall inform the parties of the purpose of the hearing.

(5) Opportunity to present closing argument. At the conclusion of the evidence, the youth court shall give the parties an opportunity to present closing argument.

(6) Factors for consideration. If the child has been adjudicated a child in need of supervision, before entering a disposition order, the youth court should consider, among others, the following relevant factors:

(i) the nature and history of the child's conduct;

(ii) the family and home situation; and

(iii) the child's need of care and assistance.

(7) Entering disposition order. After consideration of all the evidence and the relevant factors, the court shall enter a disposition order that shall not recite any of the facts or circumstances upon which the disposition is based, nor shall it recite that a child has been found guilty; but it shall recite that a child is found to be a child in need of supervision. Upon a written motion by a party, the court shall make written findings of fact and conclusions of law upon which it relies for the disposition order.

(c) Child protection proceedings.

(1) Time of hearing. If the child has been adjudicated a neglected child or an abused child, the youth court shall immediately set a time and place for a disposition hearing which shall be separate, distinct and subsequent to the adjudicatory hearing. The disposition hearing may be held immediately following the adjudicatory hearing unless a continuance is necessary to allow the parties to prepare for their participation in the proceedings. If the child has been taken into custody, a disposition hearing shall be held within fourteen (14) days after the adjudicatory hearing unless good cause be shown for postponement.

(2) Conduct of hearing. All cases involving children shall be heard at any place the judge deems suitable but separately from the trial of cases involving adults. Disposition hearings shall be conducted:

(i) without a jury and may be recessed from time to time;

(ii) under the rules of evidence and rules of court as may comply with applicable constitutional standards;

(iii) by excluding the general public and admitting only those persons found by the court to have a direct interest in the cause or work of the court;

(iv) with a complete record of all the evidence taken by stenographic reporting, by mechanical or electronic device or by some combination thereof.

Any person found by the court to have a direct interest in the cause shall have the right to appear and be represented by legal counsel, which shall include the foster parent(s) and the residential child caring agency providing care for the child.

(3) Evidence. In arriving at its dispositional decision, the court shall consider only evidence presented at the disposition hearing. The following evidentiary procedures apply to these disposition hearings:

(i) All testimony shall be under oath unless waived by all parties and may be in narrative form.

(ii) The court may consider any evidence that is material and relevant to the disposition of the cause, including hearsay and opinion evidence.

(iii) All parties to a youth court cause shall have the right at any hearing in which an investigation, record or report is admitted in evidence to subpoena, confront and examine the person who prepared or furnished data for the report and to introduce evidence controverting the contents of the report.

(iv) The court may exclude the attendance of a child from any portion of a disposition hearing that would be injurious to the best interest of the child in abuse and neglect cases with consent of the child's counsel.

(4) Explaining the purpose of the dispositional hearing. At the beginning of each disposition hearing, the judge shall inform the parties of the purpose of the hearing.

(5) Opportunity to present closing argument. At the conclusion of the evidence, the youth court shall give the parties an opportunity to present closing argument.

(6) Factors to be considered. If the child has been adjudicated a neglected child or an abused child, before entering a disposition order, the youth court shall consider, among others, the following relevant factors:

(i) the child's physical and mental conditions;

(ii) the child's need of assistance;

(iii) the manner in which the parent, guardian or custodian participated in, tolerated or condoned the abuse, neglect or abandonment of the child;

(iv) the ability of a child's parent, guardian or custodian to provide proper supervision and care of a child; and

(v) relevant testimony and recommendations, where available, from the foster parent of the child, the grandparents of the child, the guardian ad litem of the child, representatives of any private care agency that has cared for the child, the family protection worker or family protection specialist assigned to the case, and any other relevant testimony pertaining to the case.

(7) Entering disposition order. After consideration of all the evidence and the relevant factors, the court shall enter a disposition order that shall not recite any of the facts or circumstances upon which the disposition is based, nor shall it recite that a child has been found guilty; but it shall recite that a child is found to be a neglected child or an abused child. Upon a written motion by a party, the court shall make written findings of fact and conclusions of law upon which it relies for the disposition order. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

Rule 26(a)(1), -(b)(1), -(c)(1). — These provisions comport with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-601 (2008).

The disposition hearing is separate, distinct and subsequent to the adjudicatory hearing. See In re J.E.J., 419 So. 2d 1032, 1034 (Miss. 1982) ("Here, the court could have adjourned for fifteen (15) minutes, the entire record could have been offered in evidence and he could then have entered a disposition order."). However, unless a continuance is necessary, the court may conduct the disposition hearing immediately after the adjudicatory hearing. See In re L.C.A., 938 So. 2d 300, 306 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006) ("L.C.A. neither requested a continuance nor argued that a continuance was necessary. Accordingly, we find no merit to the issue [that the youth court failed to comply with Section 43-21-601].").

Rule 26(a)(2), -(b)(2), -(c)(2). — These provisions comport with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. §§ 43-21-203, -603 (2008).

All cases involving children must be heard separately from the trial of cases involving adults. This is consistent with the confidential and rehabilitative nature of youth court proceedings. An effective method to assure compliance is for the court to schedule its adult cases and youth court proceedings on separate days.

In child protection proceedings, the foster parent(s) and the residential child caring agency providing care for the child are entitled to appear at the disposition hearing. See also Miss. Code Ann. 43-15-13(11) (providing rights to be extended to foster parents).

Rule 26(a)(3), -(b)(3), -(c)(3). — The Mississippi Rules of Evidence do not apply to dispositional hearings. See M.R.E. 1101(b)(3); S.C. v. State, 795 So. 2d 526, 529 (Miss. 2001) ("The youth court may hear any evidence that is material and relevant to [the] disposition of the cause, including hearsay and opinion evidence."); In re R.D., 658 So. 2d 1378, 1383-84 (Miss. 1995) ("Dispositional hearings in youth courts are very informal, allowing for hearsay testimony as well as reports from various individuals or agencies who have information concerning the well being and 'best interest' of the minors before the court.").

M.R.E. 101 provides: — These rules govern proceedings in the courts of the State of Mississippi to the extent and with the exceptions stated in rule 1101.

M.R.E. 1101(b) provides in part: — Rules Inapplicable. Except for the rules pertaining to privileges, these rules do not apply in the following situations:

(1) Preliminary Questions of Fact. The determination of questions of fact preliminary to admissibility of evidence when the issue is to be determined by the court under rule 104(a)

...

(3) Miscellaneous Proceedings. . . . probable cause hearings in . . . youth court cases; . . . disposition hearings; granting or revoking probation; issuance of warrants for arrest, . . . and search warrants; and proceedings with respect to release on bail or otherwise.

(4) Contempt Proceedings. Contempt proceedings in which the court may act summarily.

Rule 26(a)(6), -(b)(6), -(c)(6). — This provision comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. §§ 43-21-603; 43-27-25 (2008).

Rule 26(a)(7), -(b)(7), -(c)(7). — These provisions comport with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-603 (2008).

Rule 27. Disposition orders.

(a) Delinquency proceedings.

(1) Authorized dispositions. In delinquency cases, the disposition order may include any of the alternatives as set forth in Section 43-21-605(1) of the Mississippi Code. Additionally, the court may order:

(i) drug testing pursuant to Section 43-21-605(8) of the Mississippi Code;

(ii) any appropriate disposition designed for the treatment and care of a child in need of special care, including civil commitment to a state institution providing care for that disability or infirmity, pursuant to Section 43-21-611 of the Mississippi Code;

(iii) parents or guardians to pay for the support of the child placed in custody of any person or agency (other than the custody of a state training school), including any necessary medical treatment, pursuant to Section 43-21-615(2) of the Mississippi Code;

(iv) parents or guardians of a child placed in a state-supported training school to receive counseling and parenting classes pursuant to Section 43-21-605(4) of the Mississippi Code;

(v) any person found encouraging, causing, or contributing to the delinquency of the child to do or omit to do any act deemed reasonable and necessary for the welfare of the child pursuant to Section 43-21-617 of the Mississippi Code;

(vi) financially able parents to pay for court ordered medical and other examinations and treatment of a child, for reasonable attorney's fees and court costs, and for other expenses found necessary or appropriate in the best interest of the child pursuant to Section 43-21-619(1) of the Mississippi Code;

(vii) parents, guardians or custodians who exercise parental custody or control of a child who has willfully or maliciously caused personal injury or damaged or destroyed property to pay damages or restitution and to participate in a counseling program or other suitable family treatment program for the purpose of preventing future occurrences pursuant to Section 43-21-619(2) of the Mississippi Code;

(viii) enrollment or reenrollment of any compulsory-school-age child in school (but in no event may a child who has been expelled from a school district for commission of a "violent act", as such term is defined under Section 43-21-605(8) of the Mississippi Code, be placed in another school district), and further order appropriate education services, pursuant to Section 43-21-621 of the Mississippi Code.

(2) Two or more offenses alleged in same petition. The court shall enter a separate disposition on each adjudicated count. The court may order the disposition of any count to run concurrent or consecutive to any other count(s) or current disposition(s), as it deems in the best interest of the child and in the interest of justice.

(3) Additional matters pertaining to delinquency orders:

(i) Admission packet to be provided to training school. If the disposition ordered by the court includes placing the child in the custody of a training school, an admission packet shall be prepared for the child and provided to the training school pursuant to Section 43-21-603(8) of the Mississippi Code. The admittance of any child to a training school shall take place between the hours of 8:00 a.m. and 3:00 p.m. on designated admission days.

(ii) Detention facility to comply with educational services requirement. If a disposition order requires placement of a child in a juvenile detention facility, the facility shall comply with the educational services requirements of Section 43-21-321 of the Mississippi Code.

(iii) School to be notified if child is to miss school due to other placement. If a disposition order requires that a child miss school due to other placement, the court shall notify a child's school while maintaining the confidentiality of the court process pursuant to Section 43-21-605(2) of the Mississippi Code.

(iv) Institution or agency to provide information to court. Any institution or agency to which a child has been committed shall give to the court any information concerning the child as the court may at any time require.

(v) Fines to be paid in the general fund, exception. Any fines levied under Mississippi's Youth Court Law shall be paid into the general fund of the county but, in those counties wherein the youth court is a branch of the municipal government, it shall be paid into the municipal treasury.

(b) Child in need of supervision proceedings.

(1) Authorized dispositions. In children in need of supervision cases, the disposition order may include any of the alternatives as set forth in Section 43-21-607(1) of the Mississippi Code. Additionally, the court may order:

(i) drug testing pursuant to Section 43-21-607(2) of the Mississippi Code;

(ii) any appropriate disposition designed for the treatment and care of a child in need of special care, including civil commitment to a state institution providing care for that disability or infirmity, pursuant to Section 43-21-611 of the Mississippi Code;

(iii) parents or guardians to pay for the support of the child placed in custody of any person or agency, including any necessary medical treatment, pursuant to Section 43-21-615(2) of the Mississippi Code;

(iv) financially able parents to pay for court ordered medical and other examinations and treatment of a child, for reasonable attorney's fees and court costs, and for other expenses found necessary or appropriate in the best interest of the child pursuant to Section 43-21-619(1) of the Mississippi Code;

(v) parents, guardians or custodians who exercise parental custody or control of a child who has willfully or maliciously caused personal injury or damaged or destroyed property to pay damages or restitution and to participate in a counseling program or other suitable family treatment program for the purpose of preventing future occurrences pursuant to Section 43-21-619(2) of the Mississippi Code;

(vi) enroll or reenroll any compulsory-school-age child in school, and further order appropriate education services, pursuant to Section 43-21-621 of the Mississippi Code.

(2) Two or more offenses alleged in same petition. The court shall enter a separate disposition on each adjudicated count. The court may order the disposition of any count to run concurrent or consecutive to any other count(s) or current disposition(s), as it deems in the best interest of the child and in the interest of justice.

(c) Child protection proceedings.

(1) Authorized dispositions. In neglect and abuse cases, the disposition order may include any of the alternatives as set forth in Section 43-21-609 of the Mississippi Code. Disposition orders shall comply, as applicable, with the requirements set forth in Sections 43-21-603(7) and 43-21-609(f) and (g) of the Mississippi Code. Additionally, the court may order:

(i) any appropriate disposition designed for the treatment and care of a child in need of special care, including civil commitment to a state institution providing care for that disability or infirmity, pursuant to Section 43-21-611 of the Mississippi Code;

(ii) parents or guardians to pay for the support of the child placed in custody of any person or agency, including any necessary medical treatment pursuant to Section 43-21-615(2) of the Mississippi Code;

(iii) any person found encouraging, causing, or contributing to the abuse or neglect of the child to do or omit to do any act deemed reasonable and necessary for the welfare of the child pursuant to Section 43-21-617 of the Mississippi Code;

(iv) financially able parents to pay for court ordered medical and other examinations and treatment of a child, for reasonable attorney's fees and court costs, and for other expenses found necessary or appropriate in the best interest of the child pursuant to Section 43-21-619(1) of the Mississippi Code;

(v) enroll or reenroll any compulsory-school-age child in school, and further order appropriate education services, pursuant to Section 43-21-621 of the Mississippi Code.

(2) Two or more children subject of the same petition. The court shall enter a separate disposition on each adjudicated charge.

(d) Other matters pertaining to disposition orders.

(1) Transportation costs. The costs of transporting any child to any institution or agency shall be pursuant to Section 43-21-615(1) of the Mississippi Code. In the case of a female child, the court shall designate some suitable woman to accompany her to the institution or agency.

(2) Mississippi Crime Victims' Bill of Rights. The youth court judge shall comply with the Mississippi Crime Victims' Bill of Rights (Miss. Code Ann. § 99-43-1 et seq.) as is applicable to youth courts.

(3) Registration of Sex Offenders. The youth court judge shall comply with the Registration of Sex Offenders (Miss. Code Ann. § 45-33-21 et seq.) as is applicable to youth courts. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

Rule 27(a). — This provision comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. §§ 43-21-605, -611, -615, -617, -619, -621 (2008).

The conditions and terms of a disposition must be reasonable and appropriate. See In re Green, 203 So. 2d 470, 472 (Miss. 1967) ("The Youth Court was amply justified in finding that the condition [of "stay out of trouble"] was valid under the particular facts of this case, and that [the child] had violated it."); K.N.L. v. State, 803 So. 2d 1245, 1249 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002) ("[T]he prohibition against [the child who had shoplifted from] going to the mall or to a [particular] store is reasonable and appropriate."). A court may order parents, guardians, or custodians to pay certain expenses. See, e.g., In re B.D., 720 So. 2d 476, 479 (Miss. 1998) ("In this case, all parties had notice that restitution was being sought, along with the amounts at issue. A hearing was held with counsel for the appellants present and allowed to present argument, cross-examine witnesses and object. This Court finds that the procedure followed by the Youth Court met due process requirements. Section 43-21-619 is not violative of the state or federal constitutions."). Courts are prohibited from committing an offender age eighteen or older to the division of youth services for placement in a state supported training school. See In re L.C.A., 938 So. 2d 300, 307 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Rule 27(b). — This provision comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. §§ 43-21-607, -611, -615, -617, -

619, -621 (2008). For procedures pertaining to these Sections of the Mississippi Code refer to the appendix of these rules.

Rule 27(c). — This provision comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. §§ 43-21-603, -609, -611, -615, -617, -619, -621 (2008).

The polestar consideration in child custody cases is the best interest of the child. See, e.g., In re E.M., 810 So. 2d 596, 600 (Miss. 2002) ("It defies logic to think that parents or relatives who have severely and permanently injured E.M. and have caused the death of her younger brother could be trusted to properly care for and raise E.M. without further incident. . . . [T]he judgment of the youth court judge should be reversed and E.M. should be placed in appropriate foster care."); In re S.M., 739 So. 2d 473, 475 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999) ("The court directed the Department to work with the parties with an ultimate goal of returning [the child] to his family. This action is within the discretion of the court and is not inconsistent with the evidence."). The youth court has no authority to commit a neglected child to training school. See In re Slay, 147 So. 2d 299, 300 (Miss. 1962).

FEDERAL REQUIREMENTS

These rules require compliance with federal laws and regulations which impact funding for cases within the jurisdiction of the youth court. See U.R.Y.C.P. 7. Failure to comply results in the loss of federal monies crucial in achieving the best interests of the child and the interest of justice. Federal laws and regulations applicable to disposition orders include:

Pursuant to the United States District Court's Order Regarding the Suicide Prevention Action Plan, youth court judges must review the federal requirements for dispositional hearings for youths that are to be committed to a training school. The Division of Youth Services must have all medical and mental records prior to accepting a youth into a training school. The youth court should review the medical and mental records prior to the youth's commitment. Failure to have the medical and mental records, will result in the youth not being admitted to the training school. See Order Regarding Suicide Prevention Action plan, Civil Action No.: 3:03-cv-1354-HTW-JCS (S. Miss. Apr. 30, 2008).

Forms

Editor's Note —

All orders of the court shall be in substantial compliance with these rules. Courts which do not utilize the Mississippi Youth Court Information Delivery System (MYCIDS) or other network database of Mississippi youth courts, such as SWORD, may access at http://www.mssc.state.ms.us the following form(s):

ORDER OF DISPOSITION OF DELINQUENT CHILD;

ORDER OF DISPOSITION OF A DELINQUENT CHILD WHO IS TO BE COMMITTED TO A STATE TRAINING SCHOOL;

ORDER OF DISPOSITION OF CHILD IN NEED OF SUPERVISION;

ORDER OF DISPOSITION OF ABUSED OR NEGLECTED CHILD;

ORDER TO TRANSPORT CHILD.

Rule 28. Modification of disposition orders/annual reviews.

(a) Delinquency and child in need of supervision proceedings.

(1) Modification of orders. Procedures governing the modification of a disposition order of a delinquent child or a child in need of supervision shall be conducted pursuant to Section 43-21-613(1) and (2) of the Mississippi Code.

Service of summons for such hearings shall be pursuant to Rule 22(c) of these rules.

(2) Annual reviews. Unless the court's jurisdiction has been terminated, all disposition orders for supervision, probation or placement of a child with an individual or an agency shall be reviewed by the court at least annually to determine if continued placement, probation or supervision is in the best interest of the child or the public.

(b) Child protection proceedings.

(1) Modification of orders. Procedures governing the modification of a disposition order of an abused or neglected child shall be conducted pursuant to Section 43-21-613(2) of the Mississippi Code. Service of summons for such hearings shall be pursuant to Rule 22(c) of these rules.

(2) Child protection reviews. Child protection reviews for abused or neglected children shall be conducted pursuant to Rules 29 and 31 of these rules.

(1) Modification of orders. Procedures governing the modification of a disposition order of a dependent child shall be conducted pursuant to Section 43-21-613(2) of the Mississippi Code. Service of summons for such hearings shall be pursuant to Rule 22(c) of these rules.

(2) Child protection reviews. Child protection reviews for dependent children shall be conducted pursuant to Rules 29 and 31 of these rules.

(d) Durable legal custody.

(1) Modification of orders. Procedures governing the modification of a durable legal custody order of a neglected or abused child shall be conducted pursuant to Section 43-21-613(2) of the Mississippi Code. Service of summons for such hearings shall be pursuant to Rule 22(c) of these rules. A durable legal custody order shall not be modified except upon the court finding:

(i) a substantial change in circumstances which has adversely affected the child;

(ii) that the order modifying the durable legal custody order remedies the conditions; and

(iii) that such modification is in the best interest of the child and the interests of justice.

(2) Permanency review hearings not required. The requirements of Section 43-21-613 of the Mississippi Code as to durable legal custody review hearings do not apply. Instead, permanency review hearings are not to be conducted unless explicitly ordered by the court. In such cases, the Department of Human Services shall be released from any oversight or monitoring responsibilities, and relieved of physical and legal custody and supervision of the child. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

The youth court has continuing jurisdiction to modify the disposition of a delinquent or child in need of supervision as necessary. See In re Litdell, 232 So. 2d 733, 736 (Miss. 1970) ("The youth court's jurisdiction of a youth adjudged to be delinquent is a continuing one, with continuing power to alter the terms of the probation if, in the best interests of the child, the original arrangement proves inadequate or to have been ill advised."). Any modification is to be of equal or greater precedence which the youth court could have originally ordered. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-613(2) (2008).

The youth court has continuing jurisdiction to modify the disposition of an abused or neglected child as necessary. See In re R.D., 658 So. 2d 1378, 1386 (Miss. 1995) ("Section 43-21-613 provides that orders of the youth court determining the disposition of a child who has been adjudicated neglected, for instance, may be modified in the discretion of the youth court thereafter, as necessary."). Modification of a custody order requires a material change in circumstances and that the modification be in the best interest of the child. See In re V.L.W., 751 So. 2d 1033, 1035 (Miss. 1999). Any modification is to be of equal or greater precedence which the youth court could have originally ordered. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-613(2) (2008).

Rule 28(c). — This provision comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-613(3)(c) (2008).

Rule 28(d). — This provision comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. §§ 43-21-609(b), -613(3)(d) (2008).

Section 43-21-609(b) of the Mississippi Code provides in part: "The requirements of Section 43-21-613 as to disposition review hearings does not apply to those matters in which the court has granted durable legal custody. In such cases, the Department of Human Services shall be released from any oversight or monitoring responsibilities." Granting of durable legal custody, however, does not preclude the court from conducting a review hearing of its order. See In re S.A.M., 826 So. 2d 1266, 1279 (Miss. 2002) ("[T]he intent of durable legal custody is merely to avoid the required annual dispositional reviews by the youth court and constant oversight and monitoring by DHS, not a complete preclusion of the court's jurisdiction, DHS's further involvement or court ordered review hearings as needed."). Durable legal custody is not allowed as an alternative disposition unless the child has been in the physical custody of the proposed durable custodians for at least one year under the supervision of the Department of Human Services. See May v. Harrison County Dep't of Human Servs., 883 So. 2d 74, 82 (Miss. 2004). The granting of durable legal custody does not afford the durable legal custodian any greater rights than those of a foster parent. See Barnett v. Oathout, 883 So. 2d 563, 1279 (Miss. 2004).

Rule 29. Permanency hearings.

(a) Time of hearing following disposition.

(1) When reasonable efforts to maintain child within child's own home are not required. Where the court has found at the disposition hearing that reasonable efforts to maintain the child within the child's own home are not required, it shall conduct a permanency hearing within thirty (30) days of such finding.

(2) When reasonable efforts to maintain child within child's own home are required. Where the court has found at the disposition hearing that reasonable efforts to maintain the child within the child's own home are required, it shall conduct a permanency hearing for any child who has been placed with the Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services or any other person or public or private agency, other than the child's parent, guardian or custodian, unless a lesser period of time is required under the Mississippi Code, within six (6) months after the earlier of:

(i) an adjudication that the child has been adjudicated abused or neglected; or

(ii) the date of the child's removal from the allegedly abusive or neglectful custodian/parent.

The court may extend the period of time to conduct the hearing for an additional six (6) months upon finding extraordinary and compelling reasons for extending the time period in the best interest of the child.

(3) Children placed in foster care on or after July 1, 1998. The court shall conduct a permanency hearing for any child placed in foster care on or after July 1, 1998 within a time period that substantially complies with Section 43-15-13(4) of the Mississippi Code.

(b) Summons.

(1) Persons Summoned. When the date of the permanency hearing has been set by the youth court, and if necessary to fulfill the notice requirements, the judge or the judge's designee shall order the clerk of the youth court to issue a summons to the following to appear personally at such hearing: the child named in the petition; the person or persons who have custody or control of the child; the parent or guardian of the child if such parent or guardian does not have custody of the child, except in no event shall summons issue to the parent(s) whose parental rights have been terminated; the foster parent(s); the residential child agency providing care for the child; and any other person whom the court deems necessary.

The clerk does not need to issue summons to any person who has already received sufficient notice of the time, date, place, and purpose of the permanency hearing.

(2) Form. The form of the summons shall be pursuant to Rule 22(a)(2) of these rules.

(3) Manner of service. The manner of service shall be pursuant to Rule 22(a)(3) of these rules.

(4) Time. Summons shall be served not less than three (3) days before the date set for the permanency hearing.

(5) Waiver of summons by a party other than the child. Waiver of summons by a party other than the child shall be pursuant to Rule 22(a)(5) of these rules.

(6) Waiver of three (3) days' time before hearing by a child served with process. Waiver of three (3) days' time before the permanency hearing by a child served with process shall be pursuant to Rule 22(a)(6) of these rules.

(7) Enforcement. Enforcement of the summons shall be pursuant to Rule 22(a)(7) of these rules.

(c) Conduct of hearing. In conducting the hearing, the court shall require a written report and may require information or statements from the child's Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services worker, youth court counselor, if any, parent, guardian or custodian, which includes, but is not limited to, an evaluation of the family's progress and recommendations for modifying the permanency plan and concurrent plan in the best interest of the child. The judge or referee shall, at the permanency hearing determine the future status of the child, including, but not limited to, whether the child should be:

(i) returned to the parent(s),

(ii) placed with suitable relatives,

(iii) referred for termination of parental rights and placed for adoption,

(iv) placed for the purpose of establishing durable legal custody, or

(v) continued in foster care on a permanent or long-term basis because of the child's special needs or circumstances.

If the child is in an out-of-state placement, the hearing shall determine whether the out-of-state placement continues to be appropriate and in the best interest of the child. At the permanency hearing the judge or referee shall determine, and the court order shall recite that reasonable efforts were made by the Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services to finalize the child's permanency plan and concurrent plan that was in effect on the date of the disposition hearing. The judge or referee may find that reasonable efforts to maintain the child within the child's home shall not be required in accordance with Section 43-21-603(7)(c) of the Mississippi Code.

(d) Findings pertaining to termination of parental rights.

(1) The court may find that the filing of a termination of parental rights petition is not in the child's best interest if:

(i) the child is being cared for by a relative; and/or

(ii) the Department of Human Services has documented compelling and extraordinary reasons why termination of parental rights would not be in the best interests of the child.

(2) Where the court does not make a finding under Rule 29(d)(1), the Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services may forward a termination of parental rights package to the Mississippi Attorney General's Office for a termination of parental rights petition to be filed pursuant to the "Termination of Rights of Unfit Parents Law" if

(i) the child is in the legal custody of the Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services; and

(ii) the court ordered permanency plan or concurrent plan is adoption.

(e) Permanency review hearings. Permanency review hearings shall be conducted pursuant to Rule 31 of these rules. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

Rule 29(a)(1). — This provision comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-603(7) (2008). It also complies with the federal requirements. See 45 U.S.C. § 1355.20 (2008). The foster parent(s) and the residential child caring agency providing care for the child are entitled to appear at the disposition hearing. See also Miss. Code Ann. 43-15-13(11) (providing rights to be extended to foster parents).

Foster parents to attend permanency review hearings. — Miss. Code Ann. § 43-15-13(12) provides in part:

The Department of Human Services shall require the following responsibilities from participating persons who provide foster care and relative care: . . .

(i) Attending dispositional review hearings . . . conducted by a court of competent jurisdiction, or providing their recommendations to the court in writing.

Rule 29(a)(2). — This provision comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-613(3)(a) (2008).

Miss. Code Ann. § 43-15-13(4) provides:

In the case of any child who is placed in foster care on or after July 1, 1998, except in cases of aggravated circumstances prescribed in Section 43-21-603(7)(c) or (d), the child's natural parent(s) will have a reasonable time to be determined by the court, which shall not exceed a six-month period of time, in which to meet the service agreement with the department for the benefit of the child unless the department has documented extraordinary and compelling reasons for extending the time period in the best interest of the child. If this agreement has not been satisfactorily met, simultaneously the child will be referred to the appropriate court for termination of parental rights and placement in a permanent relative's home, adoptive home or a foster/adoptive home. For children under the age of three (3) years, termination of parental rights shall be initiated within six (6) months, unless the department has documented compelling and extraordinary circumstances, and placement in a permanent relative's home, adoptive home or foster/adoptive home within two (2) months. For children who have been abandoned pursuant to the provisions of Section 97-5-1, termination of parental rights shall be initiated within thirty (30) days and placement in an adoptive home shall be initiated without necessity for placement in a foster home. The department need not initiate termination of parental rights proceedings where the child has been placed in durable legal custody or long-term or formalized foster care by a court of competent jurisdiction.

Rule 29(b). — This provision comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. §§ 43-21-505(5); -613(3)(a) (2008). Foster parent(s) and the residential child caring agency providing care for the child are entitled to appear at the permanency hearing. See also Miss. Code Ann. 43-15-13(11) (providing rights to be extended to foster parents)

Persons who should always be present at the permanency hearing include: "judge or judicial officer; age appropriate children; parents whose rights have not been terminated, including putative fathers; relatives with legal standing or other custodial adults; assigned caseworker; agency attorney; attorney for parents (separate attorney if conflict warrants); legal advocate for the child and/or GAL/CASA; court reporter or suitable technology; and security personnel." NATIONAL COUNCIL OF JUVENILE AND FAMILY COURT JUDGES, RESOURCE GUIDELINES: IMPROVING PRACTICE IN CHILD ABUSE AND NEGLECT CASES 85 (1995). Other persons whose presence may be needed at the permanency hearing include: "extended family members; . . . prospective adoptive parents; judicial case management staff; service providers; adult or juvenile probation or parole officers; other witnesses." Id.

Rule 29(c). — This provision comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-613(3)(a) (2008). Reasonable efforts findings are required until the permanency plan or concurrent plan is achieved.

Key decisions to be determined at review hearing. — Key decisions the court should make at the permanency review hearing include: "whether there is a need for continued placement of a child; whether the court-approved, long-term permanent plan for the child remains the best plan for the child; whether the agency is making reasonable efforts to rehabilitate the family and eliminate the need for placement of a child; whether services set forth in the case plan and the responsibilities of the parties need to be clarified or modified due to the availability of additional information or changed circumstances; whether the child is in an appropriate placement which adequately meets all physical, emotional and educational needs; whether the terms of visitation need to be modified; whether terms of child support need to be set aside or adjusted; whether any additional court orders need to be made to move the case toward successful completion; [and] what time frame should be followed to achieve reunification or other permanent plan for each child." NATIONAL COUNCIL OF JUVENILE AND FAMILY COURT JUDGES, RESOURCE GUIDELINES: IMPROVING PRACTICE IN CHILD ABUSE AND NEGLECT CASES 75 (1995).

Key elements for showing reasonable efforts. — DFCS must show that reasonable efforts have been made to maintain the child within the child's own home when recommending continued foster care. Key elements to this showing include: "a description of the efforts made by the agency to reunify the family since the last disposition or review hearing and an explanation why those efforts were not successful; [and,] an explanation why the child cannot presently be protected from the identified problems in the home even if services are provided to the child and family." NATIONAL COUNCIL OF JUVENILE AND FAMILY COURT JUDGES, RESOURCE GUIDELINES: IMPROVING PRACTICE IN CHILD ABUSE AND NEGLECT CASES 75 (1995).

Rule 29(d)(1). — This provision comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-613(3)(b) (2008).

Rule 29(d)(2). — The Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services is required to make reasonable efforts to finalize the adopted permanency plan and concurrent plan for the child. This provision is consistent with federal and state laws. See 42 U.S.C. § 675 (2008); 45 C.F.R. § 1356.21 (2008); Miss. Code Ann. §§ 43-15-13, 93-15-101 to -111 (2008).

Termination of parental rights package. — A termination of parental rights package contains forms and documentation required by the Mississippi Attorney General's Office to proceed with a termination of parental rights action.

FEDERAL REQUIREMENTS

These rules require compliance with federal laws and regulations which impact funding for cases within the jurisdiction of the youth court. See U.R.Y.C.P. 7. Failure to comply results in the loss of federal monies crucial in achieving the best interests of the child and the interest of justice. Federal laws and regulations applicable to permanency hearings include:

Foster care maintenance payments program implementation requirements. — 45 C.F.R. § 1356.21 (2008) provides in part:

(a) Statutory and regulatory requirements of the Federal foster care program. To implement the foster care maintenance payments program provisions of the Title IV-E State plan and to be eligible to receive Federal financial participation (FFP) for foster care maintenance payments under this part, a State must meet the requirements of this section, 45 CFR 1356.22, 45 CFR 1356.30, and Sections 472, 475(1), 475(4), 475(5) and 475(6) of the Act.

Foster care maintenance payments cover. — 45 C.F.R. § 1355.20 (2008) provides in part:

Foster care maintenance payments are payments made on behalf of a child eligible for Title IV-E foster care to cover the cost of (and the cost of providing) food, clothing, shelter, daily supervision, school supplies, a child's personal incidentals, liability insurance with respect to a child, and reasonable travel for a child's visitation with family, or other caretakers. Local travel associated with providing the items listed above is also an allowable expense. In the case of child care institutions, such term must include the reasonable costs of administration and operation of such institutions as are necessarily required to provide the items described in the preceding sentences.

Foster care means. — 45 C.F.R. § 1355.20 (2008) provides in part:

Foster care means 24-hour substitute care for children placed away from their parents or guardians and for whom the State agency has placement and care responsibility. This includes, but is not limited to, placements in foster family homes, foster homes of relatives, group homes, emergency shelters, residential facilities, child care institutions, and preadoptive homes. A child is in foster care in accordance with this definition regardless of whether the foster care facility is licensed and payments are made by the State or local agency for the care of the child, whether adoption subsidy payments are being made prior to the finalization of an adoption, or whether there is Federal matching of any payments that are made.

Date child is considered to have entered foster care means. — 45 C.F.R. § 1355.20 (2008) provides in part:

Date a child is considered to have entered foster care means the earlier of: The date of the first judicial finding that the child has been subjected to child abuse or neglect; or, the date that is 60 calendar days after the date on which the child is removed from the home pursuant to § 1356.21(k). A State may use a date earlier than that required in this paragraph, such as the date the child is physically removed from the home. This definition determines the date used in calculating all time period requirements for the periodic reviews, permanency hearings, and termination of parental rights provision in Section 475(5) of the Act and for providing time-limited reunification services described at Section 431(a)(7) of the Act. The definition has no relationship to establishing initial Title IV-E eligibility.

Permanency hearing means; time requirements. — 45 C.F.R. § 1355.20 (2008) provides in part:

Permanency hearing means:

(1) The hearing required by Section 475(5)(C) of the Act to determine the permanency plan for a child in foster care. Within this context, the court (including a Tribal court) or administrative body determines whether and, if applicable, when the child will be:

(i) Returned to the parent;

(ii) Placed for adoption, with the State filing a petition for termination of parental rights;

(iii) Referred for legal guardianship;

(iv) Placed permanently with a fit and willing relative; or

(v) Placed in another planned permanent living arrangement, but only in cases where the State agency has documented to the State court a compelling reason for determining that it would not be in the best interests of the child to follow one of the four specified options above.

(2) The permanency hearing must be held no later than 12 months after the date the child is considered to have entered foster care in accordance with the definition at § 1355.20 of this part or within 30 days of a judicial determination that reasonable efforts to reunify the child and family are not required. After the initial permanency hearing, subsequent permanency hearings must be held not less frequently than every 12 months during the continuation of foster care. The permanency hearing must be conducted by a family or juvenile court or another court of competent jurisdiction or by an administrative body appointed or approved by the court which is not a part of or under the supervision or direction of the State agency. Paper reviews, ex parte hearings, agreed orders, or other actions or hearings which are not open to the participation of the parents of the child, the child (if of appropriate age), and foster parents or preadoptive parents (if any) are not permanency hearings.

(5) The term "case review system" means a procedure for assuring that — . . .

(C) with respect to each such child, (i) procedural safeguards will be applied, among other things, to assure each child in foster care under the supervision of the State of a permanency hearing to be held, in a family or juvenile court or another court (including a tribal court) of competent jurisdiction, or by an administrative body appointed or approved by the court, no later than 12 months after the date the child is considered to have entered foster care (as determined under subparagraph (F)) (and not less frequently than every 12 months thereafter during the continuation of foster care), which hearing shall determine the permanency plan for the child that includes whether, and if applicable when, the child will be returned to the parent, placed for adoption and the State will file a petition for termination of parental rights, or referred for legal guardianship, or (in cases where the State agency has documented to the State court a compelling reason for determining that it would not be in the best interests of the child to return home, be referred for termination of parental rights, or be placed for adoption, with a fit and willing relative, or with a legal guardian) placed in another planned permanent living arrangement, in the case of a child who will not be returned to the parent, the hearing shall consider in-State and out-of-State placement options, and, in the case of a child described in subparagraph (A)(ii), the hearing shall determine whether the out-of-State placement continues to be appropriate and in the best interests of the child, and, in the case of a child who has attained age 16, the services needed to assist the child to make the transition from foster care to independent living; (ii) procedural safeguards shall be applied with respect to parental rights pertaining to the removal of the child from the home of his parents, to a change in the child's placement, and to any determination affecting visitation privileges of parents; and (iii) procedural safeguards shall be applied to assure that in any permanency hearing held with respect to the child, including any hearing regarding the transition of the child from foster care to independent living, the court or administrative body conducting the hearing consults, in an age-appropriate manner, with the child regarding the proposed permanency or transition plan for the child; . . .

Judicial determination of reasonable efforts to prevent a child's removal from the home. — 45 C.F.R. § 1356.21 (2008) provides in part:

(b) Reasonable efforts. . . .

(1) Judicial determination of reasonable efforts to prevent a child's removal from the home.

(i) When a child is removed from his/her home, the judicial determination as to whether reasonable efforts were made, or were not required to prevent the removal, in accordance with paragraph (b)(3) of this section, must be made no later than 60 days from the date the child is removed from the home pursuant to paragraph (k)(1)(ii) of this section.

(ii) If the determination concerning reasonable efforts to prevent the removal is not made as specified in paragraph (b)(1)(i) of this section, the child is not eligible under the Title IV-E foster care maintenance payments program for the duration of that stay in foster care.

See also 42 U.S.C. § 671(a)(15) (2008) (setting forth reasonable efforts criteria); 45 C.F.R. § 1356.21 (2008) (circumstances not requiring reasonable efforts determination).

Judicial determination of reasonable efforts to finalize a permanency plan. — 45 C.F.R. § 1356.21 (2008) provides in part:

(b) Reasonable efforts. . . .

(2) Judicial determination of reasonable efforts to finalize a permanency plan.

(i) The State agency must obtain a judicial determination that it has made reasonable efforts to finalize the permanency plan that is in effect (whether the plan is reunification, adoption, legal guardianship, placement with a fit and willing relative, or placement in another planned permanent living arrangement) within twelve months of the date the child is considered to have entered foster care in accordance with the definition at § 1355.20 of this part, and at least once every twelve months thereafter while the child is in foster care.

(ii) If such a judicial determination regarding reasonable efforts to finalize a permanency plan is not made in accordance with the schedule prescribed in paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this section, the child becomes ineligible under Title IV-E at the end of the month in which the judicial determination was required to have been made, and remains ineligible until such a determination is made.

Contrary to the welfare determination. — 45 C.F.R. § 1356.21 (2008) provides in part:

(c) Contrary to the welfare determination. Under section 472(a)(1) of the Act, a child's removal from the home must have been the result of a judicial determination

(unless the child was removed pursuant to a voluntary placement agreement) to the effect that continuation of residence in the home would be contrary to the welfare, or that placement would be in the best interest, of the child. The contrary to the welfare determination must be made in the first court ruling that sanctions (even temporarily) the removal of a child from home. If the determination regarding contrary to the welfare is not made in the first court ruling pertaining to removal from the home, the child is not eligible for Title IV-E foster care maintenance payments for the duration of that stay in foster care.

Documentation of judicial determinations. — 45 C.F.R. § 1356.21 (2008) provides in part:

(d) Documentation of judicial determinations. The judicial determinations regarding contrary to the welfare, reasonable efforts to prevent removal, and reasonable efforts to finalize the permanency plan in effect, including judicial determinations that reasonable efforts are not required, must be explicitly documented and must be made on a case-by-case basis and so stated in the court order

(1) If the reasonable efforts and contrary to the welfare judicial determinations are not included as required in the court orders identified in paragraphs (b) and (c) of this section, a transcript of the court proceedings is the only other documentation that will be accepted to verify that these required determinations have been made.

(2) Neither affidavits nor nunc pro tunc orders will be accepted as verification documentation in support of reasonable efforts and contrary to the welfare judicial determinations.

(3) Court orders that reference State law to substantiate judicial determinations are not acceptable, even if State law provides that a removal must be based on a judicial determination that remaining in the home would be contrary to the child's welfare or that removal can only be ordered after reasonable efforts have been made.

Concurrent planning — 45 C.F.R. § 1356.21 (2008) provides in part:

(b) Reasonable efforts. . . .

(4) Concurrent planning. Reasonable efforts to finalize an alternate permanency plan may be made concurrently with reasonable efforts to reunify the child and family

Trial home visits. — 45 C.F.R. § 1356.21 (2008) provides in part:

(e) Trial home visits. A trial home visit may not exceed six months in duration, unless a court orders a longer trial home visit. If a trial home visit extends beyond six months and has not been authorized by the court, or exceeds the time period the court has deemed appropriate, and the child is subsequently returned to foster care, that placement must then be considered a new placement and Title IV-E eligibility must be newly established. Under these circumstances the judicial determinations regarding contrary to the welfare and reasonable efforts to prevent removal are required.

Rule 30. Foster care review hearings.

The foster care review of a child in foster care placement shall be conducted pursuant to Section 43-15-13 of the Mississippi Code and as otherwise provided by law. (Adopted January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

Rights of foster parents. — Miss. Code Ann. § 43-15-13(11) provides:

The Department of Human Services shall extend the following rights to foster care parents:

(a) A clear understanding of their role as foster parents and the roles of the birth parent(s) and the placement agency in respect to the child in care;

(b) Respect, consideration, trust and value as a family who is making an important contribution to the agency's objectives;

(c) Involvement in all the agency's crucial decisions regarding the foster child as team members who have pertinent information based on their day-to-day knowledge of the child in care;

(d) Support from the family protection worker or the family protection specialist in efforts to do a better day-to-day job in caring for the child and in working to achieve the agency's objectives for the child and the birth family through provision of:

(i) Pertinent information about the child and the birth family.

(ii) Help in using appropriate resources to meet the child's needs.

(iii) Direct interviews between the family protection worker or specialist and the child, previously discussed and understood by the foster parents;

(e) The opportunity to develop confidence in making day-to-day decisions in regard to the child;

(f) The opportunity to learn and grow in their vocation through planned foster parent education;

(g) The opportunity to be heard regarding agency practices that they may question; and

(h) Reimbursement for costs of the foster child's care in the form of a board payment based on the age of the foster child as prescribed in Section 43-15-17.

FEDERAL REQUIREMENTS

These rules require compliance with federal laws and regulations which impact funding for cases within the jurisdiction of the youth court. See U.R.Y.C.P. 7. Failure to comply results in the loss of federal monies crucial in achieving the best interests of the child and the interest of justice. Federal laws and regulations applicable to foster care review hearings include:

Reviews no less frequently than once every six months. — 42 U.S.C. § 675 (2008) provides in part:

(5) The term "case review system" means a procedure for assuring that — ...

(B) the status of each child is reviewed periodically but no less frequently than once every six months by either a court or by administrative review (as defined in paragraph (6)) in order to determine the safety of the child the continuing necessity for and appropriateness of the placement, the extent of compliance with the case plan, and the extent of progress which has been made toward alleviating or mitigating the causes necessitating placement in foster care, and to project a likely date by which the child may be returned to and safely maintained in the home or placed for adoption or legal guardianship, . . .

Rule 31. Permanency review hearings.

(a) Time. The court shall conduct permanency review hearings for a child who has been adjudicated abused or neglected, at least annually after each permanency hearing, for as long as the child remains in the custody of the Mississippi Department of Human Services. Such shall include each case where there has been a termination of parental rights and the child is in the custody of the Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services, until such time as either:

(i) the child is adopted; or

(ii) an appropriate permanency plan is achieved.

(b) Summons.

(1) Persons summoned. When the date of the permanency review hearing has been set by the youth court, and if necessary to fulfill the notice requirements, the judge or the judge's designee shall order the clerk of the youth court to issue a summons to the following to appear personally at such hearing: the child named in the petition; the person or persons who have custody or control of the child; the parent or guardian of the child if such parent or guardian does not have custody of the child, except in no event shall summons issue to the parent(s) whose parental rights have been terminated; the foster parent(s); the residential child agency providing care for the child; and any other person whom the court deems necessary. The clerk does not need to issue summons to:

(i) any person who has already been served with process or who has already appeared in court proceedings in the cause; and

(ii) who has received sufficient notice of the time, date, place and purpose of the permanency review hearing.

(2) Form. The form of the summons shall be pursuant to Rule 22(a)(2) of these rules.

(3) Manner of service. The manner of service shall be pursuant to Rule 22(a)(3) of these rules, except in no event shall summons issue to the parent(s) whose parental rights have been terminated.

(4) Time. Summons shall be served not less than three (3) days before the date set for the permanency review hearing.

(5) Waiver of summons by a party other than the child. Waiver of summons by a party other than the child shall be pursuant to Rule 22(a)(5) of these rules.

(6) Waiver of three (3) days' time before hearing by a child served with process. Waiver of three (3) days' time before the permanency review hearing by a child served with process shall be pursuant to Rule 22(a)(6) of these rules.

(7) Enforcement. Enforcement of the summons shall be pursuant to Rule 22(a)(7) of these rules.

(c) Conduct of hearing. The court shall conduct the permanency review hearing in like manner as required for permanency hearings under Rule 29(c) of these rules. At each such hearing, the court shall determine the adequacy of the child's permanency plan and, as deemed in the best interest of the child, make appropriate modifications thereto.

(d) Findings pertaining to termination of parental rights.

(1) If the permanency plan is termination of parental rights, the court may find that the filing of a termination of parental rights petition is not in the child's best interest if:

(i) the child is being cared for by a relative; and/or

(ii) the Department of Human Services has documented compelling and extraordinary reasons why termination of parental rights would not be in the best interests of the child.

(2) Where the court does not make a finding under Rule 31(d)(1), the Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services may forward a termination of parental rights package to the Mississippi Attorney General's Office for a termination of parental rights petition to be filed pursuant to the "Termination of Rights of Unfit Parents Law" if:

(i) the child is in the legal custody of the Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services; and

(ii) the court ordered permanency plan or concurrent plan is adoption. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

Rule 31(a). — This provision comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-613(3)(a) (2008).

Rule 31(b)(1). — Foster parent(s) and the residential child caring agency providing care for the child are entitled to appear at the permanency hearing. See also Miss. Code Ann. § 43-15-13(11) (providing rights to be extended to foster parents).

Foster parents responsibility to attend certain hearings. — Miss. Code Ann. § 43-15-13(12) provides in part:

The Department of Human Services shall require the following responsibilities from participating foster parents: . . .

(i) Attending dispositional review hearings and termination of parental rights hearings conducted by a court of competent jurisdiction, or providing their recommendations to the court in writing.

Persons who should always be present at the permanency hearing include: "judge or judicial officer; age appropriate children; parents whose rights have not been terminated, including putative fathers; relatives with legal standing or other custodial adults; assigned caseworker; agency attorney; attorney for parents (separate attorney if conflict warrants); legal advocate for the child and/or GAL/CASA; court reporter or suitable technology; and security personnel." NATIONAL COUNCIL OF JUVENILE AND FAMILY COURT JUDGES, RESOURCE GUIDELINES: IMPROVING PRACTICE IN CHILD ABUSE AND NEGLECT CASES 85 (1995). Other persons whose presence may be needed at the permanency hearing include: "extended family members; . . . prospective adoptive parents; judicial case management staff; service providers; adult or juvenile probation or parole officers; other witnesses." Id. These listings should likewise pertain to a permanency review hearing.

Rule 31(c). — This provision comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-613(3)(a) (2008). Reasonable efforts findings are required until the permanency plan or concurrent plan is achieved.

Key decisions to be determined at review hearing. — Key decisions the court should make at the permanency review hearing include: "whether there is a need for continued placement of a child; whether the court-approved, long-term permanent plan for the child remains the best plan for the child; whether the agency is making reasonable efforts to rehabilitate the family and eliminate the need for placement of a child; whether services set forth in the case plan and the responsibilities of the parties need to be clarified or modified due to the availability of additional information or changed circumstances; whether the child is in an appropriate placement which adequately meets all physical, emotional and educational needs; whether the terms of visitation need to be modified; whether terms of child support need to be set aside or adjusted; whether any additional court orders need to be made to move the case toward successful completion; [and] what time frame should be followed to achieve reunification or other permanent plan for each child." NATIONAL COUNCIL OF JUVENILE AND FAMILY COURT JUDGES, RESOURCE GUIDELINES: IMPROVING PRACTICE IN CHILD ABUSE AND NEGLECT CASES 75 (1995).

Key elements for showing reasonable efforts. — DFCS must show that reasonable efforts have been made to maintain the child within the child's own home when recommending continued foster care. Key elements to this showing include: "a description of the efforts made by the agency to reunify the family since the last disposition or review hearing and an explanation why those efforts were not successful; [and,] an explanation why the child cannot presently be protected from the identified problems in the home even if services are provided to the child and family." NATIONAL COUNCIL OF JUVENILE AND FAMILY COURT JUDGES, RESOURCE GUIDELINES: IMPROVING PRACTICE IN CHILD ABUSE AND NEGLECT CASES 75 (1995).

Rule 31(d)(1). — This provision comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-613(3)(b) (2008).

Rule 32(d)(2). — The Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children's Services is required to make reasonable efforts to finalize the adopted permanency plan and concurrent plan for the child. This provision is consistent with federal and state laws. See 42 U.S.C. § 675 (2008); 45 C.F.R. § 1356.21 (2008); Miss. Code Ann. §§ 43-15-13, 93-15-101 to -111 (2008).

Termination of parental rights package. — A termination of parental rights package contains forms and documentation required by the Mississippi Attorney General's Office to proceed with a termination of parental rights action.

FEDERAL REQUIREMENTS

These rules require compliance with federal laws and regulations which impact funding for cases within the jurisdiction of the youth court. See U.R.Y.C.P. 7. Failure to comply results in the loss of federal monies crucial in achieving the best interests of the child and the interest of justice. Federal laws and regulations applicable to permanency review hearings include:

Many federal laws and regulations applicable to permanency hearings are also applicable to permanency review hearings. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 671(a)(15), -675 (2008); 45 C.F.R. §§ 1355.20, -1356.21 (2008).

ORDER OF PERMANENCY REVIEW HEARING.

Rule 32. Civil commitments within the jurisdiction of the youth court.

(a) Children who may need mental health services and commitment.

(1) Pre-evaluation screening and treatment. The youth court shall order a pre-evaluation screening and treatment, and a mental examination and a physical evaluation, pursuant to Section 41-21-67 of the Mississippi Code, for a child in its custody if:

(i) the Department of Human Services, or other interested person or agency, files with the clerk of the court an affidavit alleging the child to be in need of mental health services; and

(ii) the youth court finds, based upon the affidavit and any other relevant evidence, that there is probable cause to believe the child is in need of mental health services.

(2) Affidavit alleging child in need of mental health services. The affidavit alleging the child to be in need of mental health services shall be filed in duplicate and include:

(i) the name and address of the child's nearest relatives, if known;

(ii) the reason for the affidavit;

(iii) a factual description of the child's recent behavior, including a description of the behavior, where it occurred, and over what period of time it occurred.

Each factual allegation shall be stated in behavioral terms, and not contain judgmental or conclusory statements, and be supported by observations of witnesses named in the affidavit.

(3) Dismissal of affidavit. If the physicians, or the physician and psychologist, appointed to conduct the mental examination and physical evaluation certify that the child is not in need of treatment, the youth court shall dismiss the affidavit.

(4) Ordering a commitment hearing. The youth court shall order a commitment hearing if it finds probable cause, based upon the physicians' and any psychologist's certificate and any other relevant evidence, that the child is in need of inpatient treatment. Such hearing shall be set within seven (7) days of the filing of the certificate unless an extension is requested by the child's attorney. In no event shall the hearing be more than (10) days after the filing of the certificate.

(5) Summons. Within a reasonable period of time before the hearing, the child and the child's attorney shall be provided with notice, which shall include:

(i) notice of the date, time and place of the hearing;

(ii) a clear statement of the purpose of the hearing;

(iii) the possible consequences or outcome of the hearing;

(iv) the facts which have been alleged in support of the need for commitment;

(v) the names, addresses and telephone numbers of the examiner(s); and

(vi) other witnesses expected to testify.

(6) Conduct of the commitment hearing. At the beginning of the commitment hearing, the court shall explain to the child and parties: the right to counsel; the right to remain silent; the right to subpoena witnesses; the right to confront and cross-examine witnesses; and the right to appeal, including the right to a transcript of the proceedings. The hearing shall be conducted:

(i) without a jury and may be recessed from time to time;

(ii) under the rules of evidence and rules of court as may comply with applicable constitutional standards;

(iii) by excluding the general public and admitting only those persons found by the court to have a direct interest in the cause or work of the court;

(iv) with a complete record of all the evidence taken by stenographic reporting, by mechanical or electronic device or by some combination thereof.

The child shall be present at the hearing, unless the judge determines that the child is unable to attend and the reasons for such determination are made a part of the record, and shall not be so under the influence or suffering from the effects of drugs, medication or other treatment so as to be hampered in participating in the proceedings. The court, at the time of the hearing, shall be presented a record of all drugs, medication or other treatment which the child has received pending the hearing, unless the court determines that such a record would be impractical and documents the reasons for that determination.

(7) Commitment order. The youth court shall order the child committed in the least restrictive treatment facility necessary to meet the child's treatment needs if it finds:

(i) by clear and convincing evidence the child to be in need of mental health services; and,

(ii) after careful consideration, that there are no suitable alternatives to judicial commitment.

The court shall state the findings of fact and conclusions of law which constitute the basis for the order of commitment. The findings shall include a listing of less restrictive alternatives considered by the court and the reasons that each was found not suitable. Any initial commitment shall not exceed three (3) months.

(b) A child in need of special care who is in need of mental treatment. If the youth court finds at the disposition hearing that a delinquent child, a child in need of supervision, a neglected child, an abused child or a dependent child is also a child in need of special care, the youth court may, in its discretion, make any appropriate additional disposition designed for the treatment of the disability or infirmity, which may include civil commitment to a state institution providing care for that disability or infirmity. Any commitment, including one to a Department of Mental Health facility, ordered pursuant to this rule shall be in compliance with the requirements for civil commitment as set forth in Section 41-21-61 et seq. of the Mississippi Code.

(c) Permanency hearings and permanency review hearings not suspended. The court shall conduct permanency hearings and permanency review hearings as required under these rules without regard to whether a child has been referred for mental health services or committed for inpatient treatment. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

Rule 32(a). — This provision comports to the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 41-21-61 to -109 (2008). It is also congruent with Mississippi's constitutional mandates. See Miss. Const. Art. IV, § 86 ("It shall be the duty of the legislature to provide by law for the treatment and care of the insane; and the legislature may provide for the care of the indigent sick in the hospitals in the state."); In re B.C.M., 744 So. 2d 299, 303 (Miss. 1999) ("The Constitution requires that the State assume responsibility for [the child], and reasonable statutory interpretation requires the director to provide temporary housing, treatment and care, which should become permanent when adequate "services and facilities are available" in the facility. The only role of the trial judge regarding this minor was to determine whether the minor needed the treatment and care provided by the state facility, and if so, to order [the child's] commitment."); see also Miss. Code Ann. §§ 43-21-315(4), -603(9) (2008).

Rule 32(a)(7). — The standard of proof for civil commitments is by clear and convincing evidence. See Addington v. Texas, 441 U.S. 418, 432-33 (1979) ("To meet due process demands [required in civil commitment proceedings], the standard . . . must be greater than the preponderance-of-the-evidence standard applicable to other categories of civil cases.").

Alternatives to commitment to inpatient care may include, but shall not be limited to: voluntary or court-ordered outpatient commitment for treatment with specific reference to a treatment regimen; day treatment in a hospital; night treatment in a hospital; or placement in the custody of a friend or relative or the provision of home health services. See Miss. Code Ann. § 41-21-73(4) (2008).

Rule 32(b). — This provision comports with the statutory procedures. See Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-611 (2008).

ORDER OF INPATIENT COMMITMENT FOR CHILD WITHIN THE JURISDICTION OF THE YOUTH COURT.

Rule 33. Truancy.

(a) Truant child alleged as child in need of supervision.

(1) Filing a report of a truant child alleged as a child in need of supervision. When a school attendance officer has made all attempts to secure enrollment and/or attendance of a compulsory-school-age child and is unable to effect the enrollment and/or attendance, the attendance officer shall file a report with the youth court intake unit. Sheriffs, deputy sheriffs and municipal law enforcement officers shall be fully authorized to investigate all cases of nonattendance and unlawful absences by compulsory-school-age children and to file a report with the youth court intake unit.

(2) Intake. Intake procedures shall [be] conducted pursuant [to] Rule 8(a) of these rules.

(3) Court orders upon intake recommendations. Court orders upon intake recommendations shall be conducted pursuant to Rule 9(a) of these rules, except that if the court orders that an informal adjustment process be made it shall be initiated as expeditiously as possible.

(4) Petition. Procedures for filing a petition shall be conducted pursuant to Rule 20(b) of these rules.

(5) Proper venue. Proper venue shall be pursuant to Rule 21(a) of these rules.

(6) Summons for adjudicatory hearings. Service of summons shall be made pursuant to Rule 22(a) of these rules.

(7) Summons for disposition hearings. Service of summons shall be made pursuant to Rule 22(b) of these rules.

(8) Adjudication hearings. Adjudication hearings alleging a truant child as a child in need of supervision shall be conducted pursuant to Rule 24(a) of these rules, except that such hearings shall be conducted as expeditiously as possible and no later than twenty-one (21) days of the petition being filed.

(9) Adjudication orders. Adjudication orders shall comply with Rule 25(a) of these rules.

(10) Disposition hearings. Disposition hearings for a truant child adjudicated as a child in need of supervision shall be conducted pursuant to Rule 26(b) of these rules, except that such hearings shall be conducted as expeditiously as possible and no later than twenty-one (21) days of the petition being filed.

(11) Disposition orders. The disposition order may include any disposition allowed under Rule 27(b) of these rules. The court shall make an appropriate disposition to ensure compliance with Mississippi's Compulsory School Attendance Law, including enrollment or re-enrollment in school pursuant to Sections 37-13-91 and 43-21-621 of the Mississippi Code.

(12) Modification of disposition orders and annual reviews. Modification of disposition orders and annual reviews shall be conducted pursuant to Rule 28(a) of these rules.

(b) Truant child alleged as a neglected child.

(1) Filing a report of a truant child alleged as a child in need of supervision. When a school attendance officer has made all attempts to secure enrollment and/or attendance of a compulsory-school-age child and is unable to effect the enrollment and/or attendance, the attendance officer shall file a report with the youth court intake unit. Sheriffs, deputy sheriffs and municipal law enforcement officers shall be fully authorized to investigate all cases of nonattendance and unlawful absences by compulsory-school-age children and to file a report with the youth court intake unit.

(2) Intake. Intake procedures shall [be] conducted pursuant [to] Rule 8(b) of these rules.

(3) Court orders upon intake recommendations. Court orders upon intake recommendations shall be conducted pursuant to Rule 9(b) of these rules, except that if the court orders that an informal adjustment process be made it shall be initiated as expeditiously as possible.

(4). Petition. Procedures for filing a petition shall be conducted pursuant to Rule 20(c) of these rules.

(5) Proper venue. Proper venue shall be pursuant to Rule 21(b) of these rules.

(6) Summons for adjudicatory hearings. Service of summons shall be made pursuant to Rule 22(a) of these rules.

(7) Summons for disposition hearings. Service of summons shall be made pursuant to Rule 22(b) of these rules.

(8) Adjudication hearings. Adjudication hearings alleging a truant child as a neglected child shall be conducted pursuant to Rule 24(a) of these rules, except that such hearings shall be conducted as expeditiously as possible and no later than twenty-one (21) days of the petition being filed.

(9) Adjudication orders. Adjudication orders shall comply with Rule 25(b) of these rules.

(10) Disposition hearings. Disposition hearings for a truant child adjudicated as a neglected child shall be conducted pursuant to Rule 26(b) of these rules, except that such hearings shall be conducted as expeditiously as possible and no later than twenty-one (21) days of the petition being filed.

(11) Disposition orders. The disposition order may include any disposition allowed under Rule 27(c) of these rules. The court shall make an appropriate disposition to ensure compliance with Mississippi's Compulsory School Attendance Law, including enrollment or re-enrollment in school pursuant to Sections 37-13-91 and 43-21-621 of the Mississippi Code.

(12) Modification of disposition orders and annual reviews. Modification of disposition orders and annual reviews shall be conducted pursuant to Rule 28(b) of these rules.

(13) Permanency hearings. Permanency hearings shall be conducted pursuant to Rule 29 of these rules.

(14) Foster care review hearings. Foster care review hearings shall be conducted pursuant to Rule 30 of these rules.

(15) Permanency review hearings. Permanency review hearings shall be conducted pursuant to Rule 31 of these rules. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

Rule 33(a)(1), -(b)(1). — A school attendance officer should not file a report until all attempts have been made to secure enrollment and/or attendance of the truant child. See Miss. Code Ann. §§ 37-13-89(4), -91(7).

Duties of school attendance officers. — Miss. Code Ann. § 37-13-89(4) provides:

It shall be the duty of each school attendance officer to:

(a) Cooperate with any public agency to locate and identify all compulsory-school-age children who are not attending school;

(b) Cooperate with all courts of competent jurisdiction;

(c) Investigate all cases of nonattendance and unlawful absences by compulsory-school-age children not enrolled in a nonpublic school;

(d) Provide appropriate counseling to encourage all school-age children to attend school until they have completed high school;

(e) Attempt to secure the provision of social or welfare services that may be required to enable any child to attend school;

(f) Contact the home or place of residence of a compulsory-school-age child and any other place in which the officer is likely to find any compulsory-school-age child when the child is absent from school during school hours without a valid written excuse from school officials, and when the child is found, the officer shall notify the parents and school officials as to where the child was physically located;

(g) Contact promptly the home of each compulsory-school-age child in the school district within the officer's jurisdiction who is not enrolled in school or is not in attendance at public school and is without a valid written excuse from school officials; if no valid reason is found for the nonenrollment or absence from the school, the school attendance officer shall give written notice to the parent, guardian or custodian of the requirement for the child's enrollment or attendance;

(h) Collect and maintain information concerning absenteeism, dropouts and other attendance-related problems, as may be required by law or the Office of Compulsory School Attendance Enforcement; and

(i) Perform all other duties relating to compulsory school attendance established by the State Department of Education or district school attendance supervisor, or both.

Rule 33(a)(6), -(a)(7), -(b)(6), -(b)(7). — Persons who may be appointed by the court to serve summons under these provisions include: a sheriff, deputy sheriff, a municipal law enforcement officer, a constable, a school attendance officer, a school official, a youth court counselor, or any other person deemed appropriate.

Rule 33(a)(8), -(b)(8). — This provision departs from the usual time requirements for conducting an adjudication hearing, but is consistent with the statutory directive requiring that "[t]he youth court shall expedite a hearing to make an appropriate adjudication and a disposition to ensure compliance with the Compulsory School Attendance Law." See Miss. Code Ann. § 37-13-91(7) (2008).

Rule 34. Interstate compact for placement of children.

Procedures for the orderly and timely interstate placement of children shall be pursuant to Sections 43-18-1 through 43-18-17 of the Mississippi Code. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

Rule 34. — In accordance with Mississippi Department of Human Services policies, DFCS workers must complete the incoming ICPC home study within forty-five (45) days and directly send it to the ICPC unit at the State Office. The ICPC unit will then review the home study and, if needed, request additional information from the county staff, prior to sending it to the requesting state on or before the sixty (60) day deadline.

FEDERAL REQUIREMENTS

These rules require compliance with federal laws and regulations which impact funding for cases within the jurisdiction of the youth court. See U.R.Y.C.P. 7. Failure to comply results in the loss of federal monies crucial in achieving the best interests of the child and the interest of justice. Federal laws and regulations applicable to the interstate compact for placement of children include:

Procedures for the orderly and timely interstate placement of children — 42 U.S.C. § 671 (2008) provides in part:

[A State plan to receive formula grants shall] . . .

(25) provide that the State shall have in effect procedures for the orderly and timely interstate placement of children; and procedures implemented in accordance with an interstate compact, if incorporating with the procedures prescribed by paragraph (26), shall be considered to satisfy the requirement of this paragraph;

(26) provides that —

(A)(i) within 60 days after the State receives from another State a request to conduct a study of a home environment for purposes of assessing the safety and suitability of placing a child in the home, the State shall, directly or by contract —

(I) conduct and complete the study; and

(II) return to the other State a report on the results of the study, which shall address the extent to which placement in the home would meet the needs of the child; and

(ii) in the case of a home study begun on or before September 30, 2008, if the State fails to comply with clause (i) within the 60-day period as a result of circumstances beyond the control of the State (such as a failure by a Federal agency to provide the results of a background check, or the failure by any entity to provide completed medical forms, requested by the State at least 45 days before the end of the 60-day period), the State shall have 75 days to comply with clause (i) if the State documents the circumstances involved and certifies that completing the home study is in the best interests of the child; except that

(iii) this subparagraph shall not be construed to require the State to have completed, within the applicable period, the parts of the home study involving the education and training of the prospective foster or adoptive parents;

(B) the State shall treat any report described in subparagraph (A) that is received from another State or an Indian tribe (or from a private agency under contract with another State) as meeting any requirements imposed by the State for the completion of a home study before placing a child in the home, unless, within 14 days after receipt of the report, the State determines, based on grounds that are specific to the content of the report, that making a decision in reliance on the report would be contrary to the welfare of the child; and

(C) the State shall not impose any restriction on the ability of a State agency administering, or supervising the administration of, a State program operated under a State plan approved under this part to contract with a private agency for the conduct of a home study described in subparagraph (A); . . .

Rule 35. Drug courts.

Drug courts procedures shall be pursuant to the guidelines developed by the State Drug Court Advisory Committee. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

Rule 35. — Section 9-23-7 of the Mississippi Code provides:

The Administrative Office of Courts shall be responsible for certification and monitoring of local drug courts according to standards promulgated by the State Drug Courts Advisory Committee.

Rule 36. Rehearing of referee's order.

Procedures for a rehearing of a referee's order shall be pursuant to Section 43-21-111(5) of the Mississippi Code. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

Rule 37. Appeals from final orders or decrees.

Appeals from final orders or decrees of the court shall be pursuant to the Mississippi Rules of Appellate Procedures. (Adopted effective January 8, 2009.)

COMMENT

Rule 37. — Only the initials of the child shall appear on the record on appeal. See In re R.R.B., 394 So. 2d 907, 908 (Miss. 1981) ("[Section 43-21-651] is mandatory that nowhere on the records of this Court or the appellate records or briefs or other proceedings should the minor's name appear, only his or her initials."). In reviewing an adjudication of delinquency, the appellate court will not reverse unless, considering all of the evidence before the youth court in the light most favorable to the State, reasonable persons could not have found beyond a reasonable doubt that the child committed the delinquent act. See In re L.M., 600 So. 2d 967, 969 (Miss. 1992); In re S.B., 566 So. 2d 1276, 1278 (Miss. 1990). In reviewing an adjudication of abuse or neglect, the appellate court will not reverse unless, considering all of the evidence before the youth court in the light most favorable to the State, reasonable persons could not have found by a preponderance of the evidence that the child was abused or neglected. See In re M.R.L., 488 So. 2d 788, 791 (Miss. 1986). The right to appeal in forma pauperis attaches if a fundamental right is at issue. See M.L.B. v. S.L.J., 519 U.S. 102, 107 (1996) ("[J]ust as a State may not block an indigent petty offender's access to an appeal afforded others, [a State] may not deny [a parent], because of her poverty, appellate review of the sufficiency of the evidence on which the trial court found her unfit to remain a parent."); cf. In re J.R.T., 749 So. 2d 105, 110 (Miss. 1999) ("The state's judicial process had not been invoked to sever or alter the parents' fundamental rights. If there had been a termination of the parental relationship, then substantive and procedural due process would have required that the parents be afforded the right of appellate review.").

PREAMBLE: A LAWYER'S RESPONSIBILITIES.

A lawyer is a representative of clients, an officer of the legal system and a public citizen having special responsibility for the quality of justice.

As a representative of clients, a lawyer performs various functions. As advisor, a lawyer provides a client with an informed understanding of the client's legal rights and obligations and explains their practical implications. As advocate, a lawyer zealously asserts the client's position under the rules of the adversary system. As negotiator, a lawyer seeks a result advantageous to the client but consistent with requirements of honest dealing with others. As intermediary between clients, a lawyer seeks to reconcile their divergent interests as an advisor and, to a limited extent, as a spokesperson for each client. A lawyer acts as evaluator by examining a client's legal affairs and reporting about them to the client or to others.

In addition to these representational functions, a lawyer may serve as a third-party neutral, a nonrepresentational role helping the parties to resolve a dispute or other matter. Some of these Rules apply directly to lawyers who are or have served as third-party neutrals. See, e.g., Rules 1.12 and 2.4. In addition, there are Rules that apply to lawyers who are not active in the practice of law or to practicing lawyers even when they are acting in a nonprofessional capacity. For example, a lawyer who commits fraud in the conduct of a business is subject to discipline for engaging in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit, or misrepresentation. See Rule 8.4.

In all professional functions a lawyer should be competent, prompt and diligent. A lawyer should maintain communication with a client concerning the representation. A lawyer should keep in confidence information relating to representation of a client except so far as disclosure is required or permitted by the Rules of Professional Conduct or other law.

A lawyer's conduct should conform to the requirements of the law, both in professional service to clients and in the lawyer's business and personal affairs. A lawyer should use the law's procedures only for legitimate purposes and not to harass or intimidate others. A lawyer should demonstrate respect for the legal system and for those who serve it, including judges, other lawyers and public officials. While it is a lawyer's duty, when necessary, to challenge the rectitude of official action, it is also a lawyer's duty to uphold legal process.

As a public citizen, a lawyer should seek improvement of the law, access to the legal system, the administration of justice and the quality of service rendered by the legal profession. As a member of a learned profession, a lawyer should cultivate knowledge of the law beyond its use for clients; employ that knowledge in reform of the law and work to strengthen legal education. In addition, a lawyer should further the public's understanding of and confidence in the rule of law and the justice system because legal institutions in a constitutional democracy depend on popular participation and support to maintain their authority. A lawyer should be mindful of deficiencies in the administration of justice and of the fact that the poor, and sometimes persons who are not poor, cannot afford adequate legal assistance. Therefore, all lawyers should devote professional time and resources and use civil influence to ensure equal access to our system of justice for all those who, because of economic or social barriers, cannot afford or secure adequate legal counsel. A lawyer should aid the legal profession in pursuing these objectives and should help the bar regulate itself in the public interest.

Many of a lawyer's professional responsibilities are prescribed in the Rules of Professional Conduct, as well as substantive and procedural law. However, a lawyer is also guided by personal conscience and the approbation of professional peers. A lawyer should strive to attain the highest level of skill to improve the law and the legal profession and to exemplify the legal profession's ideals of public service.

A lawyer's responsibilities as a representative of clients, an officer of the legal system and a public citizen are usually harmonious. Thus, when an opposing party is well represented, a lawyer can be a zealous advocate on behalf of a client and at the same time assume that justice is being done. So also, a lawyer can be sure that preserving client confidences ordinarily serves the public interest because people are more likely to seek legal advice, and thereby heed their legal obligations, when they know their communications will be private.

In the nature of law practice, however, conflicting responsibilities are encountered. Virtually all difficult ethical problems arise from conflict between a lawyer's responsibilities to clients, to the legal system and to the lawyer's own interest in remaining an upright person while earning a satisfactory living. The Rules of Professional Conduct prescribe terms for resolving such conflicts. Within the framework of these Rules many difficult issues of professional discretion can arise. Such issues must be resolved through the exercise of sensitive professional and moral judgment guided by the basic principles underlying the Rules. These principles include the lawyer's obligation to zealously protect and pursue a client's legitimate interests, within the bounds of the law, while maintaining a professional, courteous, and civil attitude toward all persons involved in the legal system.

The legal profession is largely self-governing. Although other professions also have been granted powers of self-government, the legal profession is unique in this respect because of the close relationship between the profession and the processes of government and law enforcement. This connection is manifested in the fact that ultimate authority over the legal profession is vested largely in the courts.

To the extent that lawyers meet the obligations of their professional calling, the occasion for government regulation is obviated. Self-regulation also helps maintain the legal profession's independence from government domination. An independent legal profession is an important force in preserving government under law, for abuse of legal authority is more readily challenged by a profession whose members are not dependent on government for the right to practice.

The legal profession's relative autonomy carries with it special responsibilities of self-government. The profession has a responsibility to assure that its regulations are conceived in the public interest and not in furtherance of parochial or self-interested concerns of the bar. Every lawyer is responsible for observance of the Rules of Professional Conduct. A lawyer should also aid in securing their observance by other lawyers. Neglect of the responsibility compromises the independence of the profession and the public interest which it serves.

Lawyers play a vital role in the preservation of society. The fulfillment of this role requires an understanding by lawyers of their relationship to our legal system. The Rules of Professional Conduct, when properly applied, serve to define that relationship. (Amended effective November 3, 2005 to address lawyers' responsibilities as arbitrators, mediators and other third party neutrals and to emphasize lawyers' responsibilities to promote public understanding of the rule of law and promoting equal access to the legal system.)

SCOPE.

The Rules of Professional Conduct are rules of reason. They should be interpreted with reference to the purposes of legal representation and of the law itself. Some of the Rules are imperatives, cast in the terms "shall" or "shall not." These define proper conduct for purposes of professional discipline. Others, generally cast in the term "may," are permissive and define areas under the Rules in which the lawyer has professional discretion. No disciplinary action should be taken when the lawyer chooses not to act or acts within the bounds of such discretion. Other Rules define the nature of relationships between the lawyer and others. The Rules are thus partly obligatory and disciplinary and partly constitutive and descriptive in that they define a lawyer's professional role. Many of the Comments use the term "should." Comments do not add obligations to the Rules but provide guidance for practicing in compliance with the Rules.

The Rules presuppose a larger legal context shaping the lawyer's role. That context includes court rules and statutes relating to matters of licensure, laws defining specific obligations of lawyers and substantive and procedural law in general. The Comments are sometimes used to alert lawyers to their responsibilities under such other law. Compliance with the Rules, as with all laws in an open society, depends primarily upon understanding and voluntary compliance, secondarily upon reinforcement by peer and public opinion and finally, when necessary, upon enforcement through disciplinary proceedings. The Rules do not, however, exhaust the moral and ethical considerations that should inform a lawyer, for no worthwhile human activity can be completely defined by legal rules. The Rules simply provide a framework for the ethical practice of law.

Furthermore, for purposes of determining the lawyer's authority and responsibility, principles of substantive law external to these Rules determine whether a client-lawyer relationship exists. Most of the duties flowing from the client-lawyer relationship attach only after the client has requested the lawyer to render legal services and the lawyer has agreed to do so. But there are some duties, such as that of confidentiality under Rule 1.6, that may attach when the lawyer agrees to consider whether a client-lawyer relationship shall be established. Whether a client-lawyer relationship exists for any specific purpose can depend on the circumstances and may be a question of fact.

Under various legal provisions, including constitutional, statutory and common law, the responsibilities of government lawyers may include authority concerning legal matters that ordinarily reposes in the client in the private client-lawyer relationships. For example, a lawyer for a government agency may have authority on behalf of the government to decide upon settlement or whether to appeal from an adverse judgment. Such authority in various respects is generally vested in the attorney general and the state's attorney in state government, and their federal counterparts, and the same may be true of other government law officers. Also, lawyers under the supervision of these officers may be authorized to represent several government agencies in intra governmental legal controversies where a private lawyer could not represent multiple private clients. These Rules do not abrogate any such authority.

Failure to comply with an obligation or prohibition imposed by a Rule is a basis for invoking the disciplinary process. The Rules presuppose that disciplinary assessment of a lawyer's conduct will be made on the basis of the facts and circumstances as they existed at the time of the conduct in question and in recognition of the fact that a lawyer often has to act upon uncertain or incomplete evidence of the situation. Moreover, the Rules presuppose that whether or not discipline should be imposed for a violation, and the severity of a sanction, depend on all the circumstances, such as the willfulness and seriousness of the violation, extenuating factors and whether there have been previous violations.

Violation of a Rule should not give rise to a cause of action nor should it create any presumption that a legal duty has been breached. The Rules are designed to provide guidance to lawyers and to provide a structure for regulating conduct through disciplinary agencies. They are not designed to be a basis for civil liability. Furthermore, the purpose of the Rules can be subverted when they are invoked by opposing parties as procedural weapons. The fact that a Rule is a just basis for a lawyer's self-assessment, or for sanctioning a lawyer under the administration of a disciplinary authority, does not imply that an antagonist in a collateral proceeding or transaction has standing to seek enforcement of the Rule. Accordingly, nothing in the Rules should be deemed to augment any substantive legal duty of lawyers or the extra-disciplinary consequences of violating such a duty.

Moreover, these Rules are not intended to govern or affect judicial application of either the attorney-client or work product privilege. Those privileges were developed to promote compliance with law and fairness in litigation. In reliance on the attorney-client privilege, clients are entitled to expect that communications within the scope of the privilege will be protected against compelled disclosure. The attorney-client privilege is that of the client and not of the lawyer. The fact that in exceptional situations the lawyer under the Rules has a limited discretion to disclose a client confidence does not vitiate the proposition that, as a general matter, the client has a reasonable expectation that information relating to the client will not be voluntarily disclosed and that disclosure of such information may be judicially compelled only in accordance with recognized exceptions to the attorney-client and work product privileges.

The lawyer's exercise of discretion not to disclose information under Rule 1.6 should not be subject to reexamination. Permitting such reexamination would be incompatible with the general policy of promoting compliance with law through assurances that communications will be protected against disclosure.

The Comment accompanying each Rule explains and illustrates the meaning and purpose of the Rule. The Preamble and this note on Scope provide general orientation. The Comments are intended as guides to interpretation, but the text of each Rule is authoritative. Research notes were prepared to compare counterparts in the Mississippi Code of Professional Responsibility (adopted 1971, as amended) and to provide selected references to other authorities. The notes have not been adopted, do not constitute part of the Rules and are not intended to affect the application or interpretation of the Rules and Comments. (Amended effective November 3, 2005 to make technical changes in text.)

Jury instruction.

Although defendant attorney argued that a jury instruction setting forth the duties owed by an attorney to a client violated Miss. R. Prof. Conduct Scope, which provided that the rules were not to be used as a basis for liability against attorneys, there was no error found in giving the instruction because when it was read with all the other instructions, they fully informed the jury as to the necessary elements of proof concerning the claims. Pierce v. Cook, 992 So. 2d 612 (Miss. 2008).

TERMINOLOGY.

"Belief" or "Believes" denotes that the person involved actually supposed the fact in question to be true. A person's belief may be inferred from circumstances.

"Consult" or "Consultation" denotes communication of information reasonably sufficient to permit the client to appreciate the significance of the matter in question.

"Firm" or "Law firm" denotes a lawyer or lawyers in a private firm, lawyers employed in the legal department of a corporation or other organization and lawyers employed in a legal services organization. See Comment, Rule 1.10.

"Fraud" or "Fraudulent" denotes conduct having a purpose to deceive and not merely negligent misrepresentation or failure to apprise another of relevant information.

"Knowingly," "Known," or "Knows" denotes actual knowledge of the fact in question. A person's knowledge may be inferred from circumstances.

"Partner" denotes a member of a partnership and a shareholder in a law firm organized as a professional corporation.

"Reasonable" or "Reasonably" when used in relation to conduct by a lawyer denotes the conduct of a reasonably prudent and competent lawyer.

"Reasonable belief" or "Reasonably believes" when used in reference to a lawyer denotes that the lawyer believes the matter in question and that the circumstances are such that the belief is reasonable.

"Reasonably should know" when used in reference to a lawyer denotes that a lawyer of reasonable prudence and competence would ascertain the matter in question.

"Substantial" when used in reference to degree or extent denotes a material matter of clear and weighty importance.

CLIENT-LAWYER RELATIONSHIP

Rule 1.1. Competence.

A lawyer shall provide competent representation to a client. Competent representation requires the legal knowledge, skill, thoroughness and preparation reasonably necessary for the representation.

COMMENT

Legal Knowledge and Skill. — In determining whether a lawyer employs the requisite knowledge and skill in a particular matter, relevant factors include the relative complexity and specialized nature of the matter, the lawyer's general experience, the lawyer's training and experience in the field in question, the preparation and study the lawyer is able to give the matter and whether it is feasible to refer the matter to, or associate or consult with, a lawyer of established competence in the field in question. In many instances the required proficiency is that of a general practitioner. Expertise in a particular field of law may be required in some circumstances.

A lawyer need not necessarily have special training or prior experience to handle legal problems of a type with which the lawyer is unfamiliar. A newly admitted lawyer can be as competent as a practitioner with long experience. Some important skills, such as the analysis of precedent, the evaluation of evidence and legal drafting, are required in all legal problems. Perhaps the most fundamental legal skill consists of determining what kind of legal problems a situation may involve, a skill that necessarily transcends any particular specialized knowledge. A lawyer can provide adequate representation in a wholly novel field through necessary study. Competent representation can also be provided through the association of a lawyer of established competence in the field in question.

In an emergency a lawyer may give advice or assistance in a matter in which the lawyer does not have the skill ordinarily required where referral to or consultation or association with another lawyer would be impractical. Even in an emergency, however, assistance should be limited to that reasonably necessary in the circumstances, for ill considered action under emergency conditions can jeopardize the client's interest.

A lawyer may accept representation where the requisite level of competence can be achieved by reasonable preparation. This applies as well to a lawyer who is appointed as counsel for an unrepresented person. See also Rule 6.2.

Thoroughness and Preparation. — Competent handling of a particular matter includes inquiry into and analysis of the factual and legal elements of the problem, and use of methods and procedures meeting the standards of competent practitioners. It also includes adequate preparation. The required attention and preparation are determined in part by what is at stake; major litigation and complex transactions ordinarily require more elaborate treatment than matters of lesser consequence.

Maintaining Competence. — To maintain the requisite knowledge and skill, a lawyer should engage in continuing study and education. If a system of peer review has been established, the lawyer should consider making use of it in appropriate circumstances.

CODE COMPARISON

DR 6-101(A)(1) provides that a lawyer shall not handle a matter "which he knows or should know that he is not competent to handle, without associating with him a lawyer who is competent to handle it." DR 6-101(A)(2) requires "preparation adequate in the circumstances"; Rule 1.1 more fully particularizes the elements of competence.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Client files.
Disbarment.
Ineffective assistance of counsel.
Sanctions.
— Suspension.

Client files.

Where second motion to extend time in which to serve process stated that plaintiff's law firm had withdrawn but not returned the file and the firm who took the file back had no reason to know that service had not been made prior to the withdrawal, the representations of counsel were less than forthright because counsel had in fact been counsel of record since its inception, and as counsel of record, maintained all the duties and obligations to the client. Montgomery v. SmithKline Beecham Corp., 910 So. 2d 541 (Miss. 2005).

Disbarment.

Disbarment was warranted for attorney's repeated acts, some while under suspension, of taking money from clients, promising to act as their counsel, and, through deceit, doing nothing. Carter v. Mississippi Bar, 654 So. 2d 505 (Miss. 1995).

Ineffective assistance of counsel.

It appears to be problematic and inappropriate for an attorney who represents a criminal defendant at trial to represent that same defendant on appeal where the attorney intends to raise an ineffective assistance of counsel claim in that appeal. Hill v. State, 749 So. 2d 1143 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Sanctions.

— Suspension.

Appropriate sanction for attorney who negligently violated his duty to perform tasks for which he was hired, and who knowingly and intentionally lied to his clients over a two year period, was one year suspension from practice of law. Underwood v. Mississippi Bar, 618 So. 2d 64 (Miss. 1993).

Appropriate discipline for attorney charged with neglect, with prior disciplinary record for substantially similar neglect of a client's case, was sixty days suspension from practice of law. Mississippi Bar v. Hall, 612 So. 2d 1075 (Miss. 1992).

Rule 1.2. Scope of representation.

(a) A lawyer shall abide by a client's decisions concerning the objectives of representation, subject to paragraphs (c), (d) and (e), and shall consult with the client as to the means by which they are to be pursued. A lawyer shall abide by a client's decision whether to accept an offer of settlement of a matter. In a criminal case, a lawyer shall abide by the client's decision, after consultation with the lawyer, as to a plea to be entered, whether to waive jury trial and whether the client will testify.

(b) A lawyer's representation of a client, including representation by appointment, does not constitute an endorsement of the client's political, economic, social or moral views or activities.

(c) A lawyer may limit the objectives of the representation if the client gives informed consent.

(d) A lawyer shall not counsel a client to engage, or assist a client, in conduct that a lawyer knows is criminal or fraudulent, but a lawyer may discuss the legal consequences of any proposed course of conduct with a client and may counsel or assist a client to make a good faith effort to determine the validity, scope, meaning or application of the law.

(e) When a lawyer knows that a client expects assistance not permitted by the Rules of Professional Conduct or other law, the lawyer shall consult with the client regarding the relevant limitations on the lawyer's conduct. (Amended effective November 3, 2005.)

COMMENT

Scope of Representation. — Both lawyer and client have authority and responsibility in the objectives and means of representation. The client has ultimate authority to determine the purposes to be served by legal representation, within the limits imposed by law and the lawyer's professional obligations. At the same time, a lawyer is not required to pursue objectives or employ means simply because a client may wish that the lawyer do so. A clear distinction between objectives and means sometimes cannot be drawn, and in many cases the client-lawyer relationship partakes of a joint undertaking. In questions of means, the lawyer should assume responsibility for technical and legal tactical issues, but should defer to the client regarding such questions as the expense to be incurred and concern for third persons who might be adversely affected. Law defining the lawyer's scope of authority in litigation varies among jurisdictions.

In a case in which the client appears to be suffering mental disability, the lawyer's duty to abide by the client's decisions is to be guided by reference to Rule 1.14.

Independence from Client's Views or Activities. — Legal representation should not be denied to people who are unable to afford legal services, or whose cause is controversial or the subject of popular disapproval. By the same token, representing a client does not constitute approval of the client's views or activities.

Services Limited in Objectives or Means. — The objectives or scope of services provided by a lawyer may be limited by agreement with the client or by the terms under which the lawyer's services are made available to the client. For example, a retainer may be for a specifically defined purpose. Representation provided through a legal aid agency may be subject to limitations on the types of cases the agency handles. When a lawyer has been retained by an insurer to represent an insured, the representation may be limited to matters related to the insurance coverage. The terms upon which representation is undertaken may exclude specific objectives or means that the lawyer regards as imprudent.

An agreement concerning the scope of representation must accord with the Rules of Professional Conduct and other law. Thus, the client may not be asked to agree to representation so limited in scope as to violate Rule 1.1, or to surrender the right to terminate the lawyer's services or the right to settle litigation that the lawyer might wish to continue.

Criminal, Fraudulent and Prohibited Transactions. — A lawyer is required to give an honest opinion about the actual consequences that appear likely to result from a client's conduct. The fact that a client uses advice in a course of action that is criminal or fraudulent does not, of itself, make a lawyer a party to the course of action. However, a lawyer may not knowingly assist a client in criminal or fraudulent conduct. There is a critical distinction between presenting an analysis of legal aspects of questionable conduct and recommending the means by which a crime or fraud might be committed with impunity.

When the client's course of action has already begun and is continuing, the lawyer's responsibility is especially delicate. The lawyer is not permitted to reveal the client's wrongdoing, except where permitted by Rule 1.6. However, the lawyer is required to avoid furthering the purpose, for example, by suggesting how it might be concealed. A lawyer may not continue assisting a client in conduct that the lawyer originally supposes is legally proper, but then discovers is criminal or fraudulent. Withdrawal from the representation, therefore, may be required.

Where the client is a fiduciary, the lawyer may be charged with special obligations in dealings with a beneficiary.

Paragraph (d) applies whether or not the defrauded party is a party to the transaction. Hence, a lawyer should not participate in a sham transaction; for example, a transaction to effectuate criminal or fraudulent escape of tax liability. Paragraph (d) does not preclude undertaking a criminal defense incident to a general retainer for legal services to a lawful enterprise. The last clause of paragraph (d) recognizes that determining the validity or interpretation of a statute or regulation may require a course of action involving disobedience of the statute or regulation or of the interpretation placed upon it by governmental authorities.

CODE COMPARISON

Rule 1.2(a) has no counterpart in the Disciplinary Rules of the Code. EC 7-7 states that "In certain areas of legal representation not affecting the merits of the cause or substantially prejudicing the rights of a client, a lawyer is entitled to make decisions on his own. But otherwise the authority to make decisions is exclusively that of the client. . . ." EC 7-8 states that "In the final analysis, however, the ... decision whether to forego legally available objectives or methods because of nonlegal factors is ultimately for the client. ... In the event that the client in a nonadjudicatory matter insists upon a course of conduct that is contrary to the judgment and advice of the lawyer but not prohibited by Disciplinary Rules, the lawyer may withdraw from the employment." DR 7-101(A)(1) provides that "A lawyer shall not intentionally . . . fail to seek the lawful objections of his client through reasonable available means permitted by law. . . . A lawyer does not violate this Disciplinary Rule, however, by . . . avoiding offensive tactics. . . ."

Rule 1.2(b) has no counterpart in the Code.

Rule 1.2(c) has no counterpart in the Code.

With regard to paragraph (d), DR 7-102(A)(7) provides that a lawyer shall not "counsel or assist his client in conduct that the lawyer knows to be illegal or fraudulent." DR 7-102(A)(6) provides that a lawyer shall not "participate in the creation or preservation of evidence when he knows or it is obvious that the evidence is false." DR 7-106 provides that "A lawyer shall not . . . advise his client to disregard a standing rule of a tribunal . . . but he may take appropriate steps in good faith to test the validity of such rule or ruling." EC 7-5 states that "A lawyer should never encourage or aid his client to commit criminal acts or counsel his client on how to violate the law and avoid punishment therefor."

With regard to Rule 1.2(e), DR 2-110(C)(1)(c) provides that a lawyer may withdraw from representation if a client "insists" that the lawyer engage in "conduct that is illegal or that is prohibited under the Disciplinary Rules." DR 9-101(C) provides that "a lawyer shall not state or imply that he is able to influence improperly . . . any tribunal, legislative body or public official."

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Conflict of interest.
Sanctions.
Sanctions not appropriate.
Service of process.

In general.

Where defense counsel revealed to a trial judge in an ex parte conference that a defendant had confessed to the murder and was intent on falsely testifying, the trial judge did not allow counsel to withdraw from the case and did not commit manifest error in failing to recuse herself; the judge was not the ultimate trier of fact because it was a jury trial. Scott v. State, 8 So. 3d 855 (Miss. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 130 S. Ct. 1500, 176 L. Ed. 2d 117, 2010 U.S. LEXIS 1205, 78 U.S.L.W. 3480 (U.S. 2010).

Client retained an attorney in a wrongful death action after her husband was shot and killed in the presence of a police officer and the case was dismissed due to the attorney's neglect or failure to comply with proper procedure. The attorney failed to cooperate in the investigation, his disciplinary record consisted of eight informal reprimands, three private reprimands, a suspension by a federal court, and the Mississippi State Bar Complaint Tribunal found the only mitigating circumstances offered by the attorney were that he had a very busy law practice and that his membership in the Mississippi State Senate took up much of his time; the Mississippi Supreme Court held that only a public reprimand was necessary, and rejected the Bar's argument that a lengthy suspension was called for. Miss. Bar v. Walls, 890 So. 2d 875 (Miss. 2004).

Subdivision (a) of this rule makes it is clear that an attorney is bound, excepting the restrictions set out in subdivision (b) through (e) of this rule, to abide by the wishes of his client in the accepting of an offer of settlement. Fortenberry v. Parker, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 521 (Miss. Ct. App. Aug. 10, 1999), subst. op., 754 So. 2d 561 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Conflict of interest.

Although a lawyer may in some circumstances, and with his client's consent, limit objectives of his representation, this can never authorize attorney to engage in dual representation entailing professional decisions on his part which stand to benefit one client at the expense of the other. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. v. Foster, 528 So. 2d 255 (Miss. 1988).

Sanctions.

Mississippi Bar filed a formal complaint against the attorney after an investigation revealed that the attorney failed to file a habeas petition and neglected other legal matters for which he was paid due to a substance abuse problem. Pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 8, a complaint tribunal heard the matter and found that the attorney violated Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.2(a), 1.3, 1.4, 1.5, 1.15(b), 1.16(d), 8.1(b), and 8.4(a); the attorney was suspended from the practice of law for six months. In re Reinstatement of Kelly, 987 So. 2d 925 (Miss. 2008).

Where the evidence showed that an attorney took money from a client for a real estate matter, but did not file a complaint or maintain contact with the client, it was established that the attorney violated Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.2(a), 1.3, 1.4, 8.1(a), 8.4(a), (c); a three-year suspension was imposed based on the fact that the attorney had been suspended twice before for violations of these same rules, but disbarment was not appropriate. Shah v. Miss. Bar, 962 So. 2d 514 (Miss. 2007).

Attorney was disbarred for violating Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.2(a), 1.3,1.4, 1.5(a), 8.1(b), and 8.4(a) and (d) where, inter alia, he caused serious injury to his client by knowingly failing to file a timely appeal from a conviction, deceiving the client as to the status of the appeal, taking the client's money, failing to inform the client of his suspension. The attorney deliberately prevaricated and lacked candor during the disciplinary proceedings and in the motion for out-of-time appeal, the attorney deceived the court by implying that another attorney, and not he, had failed to perfect timely an appeal. Shah v. Miss. Bar, 919 So. 2d 59 (Miss. 2005).

An attorney was properly disbarred, rather than suspended where he represented a client in a personal injury action that was eventually settled, deducted both his fee and the client's medical bills from the settlement and disbursed the rest to the client, and then failed to pay the medical bills. Cotton v. Mississippi Bar, 809 So. 2d 582 (Miss. 2000).

Disbarment was the appropriate sanction for an attorney's misuse of client funds since no significant mitigating factors weighed in his favor, notwithstanding that he had not previously been disciplined, that he eventually made restitution to all parties involved, and that he made no attempt to mislead the bar or the court, as the attorney's fitness to practice law became questionable once he converted his client's funds for his own use and made no attempt to defend himself once the bar filed a formal complaint, which raised additional concerns regarding his fitness to practice law. Cotton v. Mississippi Bar, 809 So. 2d 582 (Miss. 2000).

Appropriate sanction for attorney who negligently violated his duty to perform tasks for which he was hired, and who knowingly and intentionally lied to his clients over a two year period, was one year suspension from practice of law. Underwood v. Mississippi Bar, 618 So. 2d 64 (Miss. 1993).

Three-year suspension was reversed and disbarment ordered, for attorney who misled his client, misrepresented to court that his client had agreed to terms which she in fact had not agreed to, and presented a document to the court containing a signature which was not his client's. Culpepper v. Mississippi State Bar, 588 So. 2d 413 (Miss. 1991).

Sanctions not appropriate.

Attorney whose paralegal falsely communicated to a prisoner that the attorney had agreed to work on the prisoner's case did not violate Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.2(a) or 1.3 because no attorney-client relationship with the prisoner existed, as there was insufficient evidence that the attorney had indicated that the paralegal had authority to communicate her consent to undertake the representation of a client, and she had no knowledge of the prisoner's case or the paralegal's correspondence with the prisoner Miss. Bar v. Thompson, 5 So. 3d 330 (Miss. 2008).

Decision of bar complaint tribunal imposing public reprimand was reversed and the complaint dismissed, where Bar failed to meet burden of showing that attorney's actions in settling client's case constituted professional misconduct; at best, evidence revealed a miscommunication between attorney and his client. Attorney W.L. v. Mississippi Bar, 621 So. 2d 235 (Miss. 1993).

Service of process.

Where second motion to extend time in which to serve process stated that plaintiff's law firm had withdrawn but not returned the file and the firm who took the file back had no reason to know that service had not been made prior to the withdrawal, the representations of counsel were less than forthright because counsel had in fact been counsel of record since its inception, and as counsel of record, maintained all the duties and obligations to the client. Montgomery v. SmithKline Beecham Corp., 910 So. 2d 541 (Miss. 2005).

Rule 1.3. Diligence.

A lawyer shall act with reasonable diligence and promptness in representing a client.

COMMENT

A lawyer should pursue a matter on behalf of a client despite opposition, obstruction or personal inconvenience to the lawyer, and may take whatever lawful and ethical measures are required to vindicate a client's cause or endeavor. A lawyer should act with commitment and dedication to the interests of the client and with zeal in advocacy upon the client's behalf. However, a lawyer is not bound to press for every advantage that might be realized for a client. A lawyer has professional discretion in determining the means by which a matter should be pursued. See Rule 1.2. A lawyer's workload should be controlled so that each matter can be handled adequately.

Perhaps no professional shortcoming is more widely resented than procrastination. A client's interests often can be adversely affected by the passage of time or the change of conditions; in extreme instances, as when a lawyer overlooks a statute of limitations, the client's legal position may be destroyed. Even when the client's interests are not affected in substances, however, unreasonable delay can cause a client needless anxiety and undermine confidence in the lawyer's trustworthiness.

Unless the relationship is terminated as provided in Rule 1.16, a lawyer should carry through to conclusion all matters undertaken for a client. If a lawyer's employment is limited to a specific matter, the relationship terminates when the matter has been resolved. If a lawyer has served a client over a substantial period in a variety of matters, the client sometimes may assume that the lawyer will continue to serve on a continuing basis unless the lawyer gives notice of withdrawal. Doubt about whether a client-lawyer relationship still exists should be clarified by the lawyer, preferably in writing, so that the client will not mistakenly suppose the lawyer is looking after the client's affairs when the lawyer has ceased to do so. For example, if a lawyer has handled a judicial or administrative proceeding that produced a result adverse to the client but has not been specifically instructed concerning pursuit of an appeal, the lawyer should advise the client of the possibility of appeal before relinquishing responsibility for the matter.

CODE COMPARISON

DR 6-101(A)(3) requires that a lawyer not "neglect a legal matter entrusted to him." EC 6-4 states that a lawyer should "give appropriate attention to his legal work." Canon 7 states that "a lawyer should represent a client zealously within the bounds of the law." DR 7-101(A)(1) provides that "a lawyer shall not intentionally . . . fail to seek the lawful objectives of his client through reasonably available means permitted by law and the Disciplinary Rules. . . ." DR 7-101(A)(3) provides that "a lawyer shall not intentionally . . . prejudice or damage his client during the course of the professional relationship. . . ."

Ineffective assistance of counsel.

It appears to be problematic and inappropriate for an attorney who represents a criminal defendant at trial to represent that same defendant on appeal where the attorney intends to raise an ineffective assistance of counsel claim in that appeal. Hill v. State, 749 So. 2d 1143 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Sanctions.

Mississippi Bar filed a formal complaint against the attorney after an investigation revealed that the attorney failed to file a habeas petition and neglected other legal matters for which he was paid due to a substance abuse problem. Pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 8, a complaint tribunal heard the matter and found that the attorney violated Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.2(a), 1.3, 1.4, 1.5, 1.15(b), 1.16(d), 8.1(b), and 8.4(a); the attorney was suspended from the practice of law for six months. In re Reinstatement of Kelly, 987 So. 2d 925 (Miss. 2008).

Where the evidence showed that an attorney took money from a client for a real estate matter, but did not file a complaint or maintain contact with the client, it was established that the attorney violated Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.2(a), 1.3, 1.4, 8.1(a), 8.4(a), (c); a three-year suspension was imposed based on the fact that the attorney had been suspended twice before for violations of these same rules, but disbarment was not appropriate. Shah v. Miss. Bar, 962 So. 2d 514 (Miss. 2007).

Client retained an attorney in a wrongful death action after her husband was shot and killed in the presence of a police officer and the case was dismissed due to the attorney's neglect or failure to comply with proper procedure. The attorney failed to cooperate in the investigation, his disciplinary record consisted of eight informal reprimands, three private reprimands, a suspension by a federal court, and the Mississippi State Bar Complaint Tribunal found the only mitigating circumstances offered by the attorney were that he had a very busy law practice and that his membership in the Mississippi State Senate took up much of his time; the Mississippi Supreme Court held that only a public reprimand was necessary, and rejected the Bar's argument that a lengthy suspension was called for. Miss. Bar v. Walls, 890 So. 2d 875 (Miss. 2004).

— Disbarment.

Attorney was disbarred for violating Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.2(a), 1.3,1.4, 1.5(a), 8.1(b), and 8.4(a) and (d) where, inter alia, he caused serious injury to his client by knowingly failing to file a timely appeal from a conviction, deceiving the client as to the status of the appeal, taking the client's money, failing to inform the client of his suspension. The attorney deliberately prevaricated and lacked candor during the disciplinary proceedings and in the motion for out-of-time appeal, the attorney deceived the court by implying that another attorney, and not he, had failed to perfect timely an appeal. Shah v. Miss. Bar, 919 So. 2d 59 (Miss. 2005).

An attorney was properly disbarred, rather than suspended where he represented a client in a personal injury action that was eventually settled, deducted both his fee and the client's medical bills from the settlement and disbursed the rest to the client, and then failed to pay the medical bills. Cotton v. Mississippi Bar, 809 So. 2d 582 (Miss. 2000).

Disbarment was the appropriate sanction for an attorney's misuse of client funds since no significant mitigating factors weighed in his favor, notwithstanding that he had not previously been disciplined, that he eventually made restitution to all parties involved, and that he made no attempt to mislead the bar or the court, as the attorney's fitness to practice law became questionable once he converted his client's funds for his own use and made no attempt to defend himself once the bar filed a formal complaint, which raised additional concerns regarding his fitness to practice law. Cotton v. Mississippi Bar, 809 So. 2d 582 (Miss. 2000).

Disbarment was warranted for attorney's repeated acts, some while under suspension, of taking money from clients, promising to act as their counsel, and, through deceit, doing nothing. Carter v. Mississippi Bar, 654 So. 2d 505 (Miss. 1995).

— Suspension.

Attorney's unprofessional and unethical conduct, together with extensive record of disciplinary sanctions for similar conduct, warranted imposition of public reprimand, unconditional suspension from practice of law in state courts for one year, and requirement that attorney pass all sections of bar exam before filing petition for reinstatement. Mississippi Bar v. Alexander, 697 So. 2d 1164 (Miss. 1997).

Where attorney engaged to file complaint to remove cloud on title never filed an actual complaint, but instead forged clerk's signature, obtained court's stamp and rolled date back, and then stamped alleged complaint as filed, attorney was suspended from practice of law for eighteen months. Asher v. Mississippi Bar, 661 So. 2d 722 (Miss. 1995).

Appropriate sanction for attorney who negligently violated his duty to perform tasks for which he was hired, and who knowingly and intentionally lied to his clients over a two year period, was one year suspension from practice of law. Underwood v. Mississippi Bar, 618 So. 2d 64 (Miss. 1993).

Appropriate discipline for attorney charged with neglect, with prior disciplinary record for substantially similar neglect of a client's case, was sixty days suspension from practice of law. Mississippi Bar v. Hall, 612 So. 2d 1075 (Miss. 1992).

Sanctions not appropriate.

Attorney whose paralegal falsely communicated to a prisoner that the attorney had agreed to work on the prisoner's case did not violate Miss. R. Montgomery v. SmithKline Beecham Corp., 910 So. 2d 541 (Miss. 2005).

Rule 1.4. Communication.

(a) A lawyer shall keep a client reasonably informed about the status of a matter and promptly comply with reasonable requests for information.

(b) A lawyer shall explain a matter to the extent reasonably necessary to permit the client to make informed decisions regarding the representation.

COMMENT

The client should have sufficient information to participate intelligently in decisions concerning the objectives of the representation and the means by which they are to be pursued, to the extent the client is willing and able to do so. For example, a lawyer negotiating on behalf of a client should provide the client with facts relevant to the matter, inform the client of communications from another party and take other reasonable steps that permit the client to make a decision regarding a serious offer from another party. A lawyer who receives from opposing counsel an offer of settlement in a civil controversy or a proffered plea bargain in a criminal case should promptly inform the client of its substance unless prior discussions with the client have left it clear that the proposal will be unacceptable. See Rule 1.2(a). Even when a client delegates authority to the lawyer, the client should be kept advised of the status of the matter.

Adequacy of communication depends in part on the kind of advice or assistance involved. For example, in negotiations where there is time to explain a proposal, the lawyer should review all important provisions with the client before proceeding to an agreement. In litigation a lawyer should explain the general strategy and prospects of success and ordinarily should consult the client on tactics that might injury or coerce others. On the other hand, a lawyer ordinarily cannot be expected to describe trial or negotiation strategy in detail. The guiding principle is that the lawyer should fulfill reasonable client expectations for information consistent with the duty to act in the client's best interests, and the client's overall requirements as to the character of representation.

Ordinarily, the information to be provided is that appropriate for a client who is a comprehending and responsible adult. However, fully informing the client according to this standard may be impracticable, for example, where the client is a child or suffers from mental disability. See Rule 1.14. When the client is an organization or group, it is often impossible or inappropriate to inform every one of its members about its legal affairs; ordinarily, the lawyer should address communications to the appropriate officials of the organization. See Rule 1.13. Where many routine matters are involved, a system of limited or occasional reporting may be arranged with the client. Practical exigency may also require a lawyer to act for a client without prior consultation.

Withholding Information. — In some circumstances, a lawyer may be justified in delaying transmission of information when the client would be likely to react imprudently to an immediate communication. Thus, a lawyer might withhold a psychiatric diagnosis of a client when the examining psychiatrist indicates that disclosure would harm the client. A lawyer may not withhold information to serve the lawyer's own interest or convenience. Rules or court orders governing litigation may provide that information supplied to a lawyer may not be disclosed to the client. Rule 3.4(c) directs compliance with such rules or orders.

CODE COMPARISON

This Rule has no direct counterpart in the Disciplinary Rules of the Code. DR 6-101(A)(3) provides that a lawyer shall not "neglect a legal matter entrusted to him." DR 9-102(B)(1) provides that a lawyer "shall promptly notify a client of the receipt of his funds, securities, or other properties." EC 7-8 states that "a lawyer should exert his best efforts to insure that decisions of his client are made only after the client has been informed of relevant considerations." EC 9-2 states that "a lawyer should fully and promptly inform his client of material developments in the matters being handled for the client."

Rule 1.5. Fees.

(a) A lawyer's fee shall be reasonable. The factors to be considered in determining the reasonableness of a fee include the following:

(1) the time and labor required, the novelty and difficulty of the questions involved, and the skill requisite to perform the legal service properly;

(2) the likelihood, if apparent to the client, that the acceptance of the particular employment will preclude other employment by the lawyer;

(3) the fee customarily charged in the locality for similar legal services;

(4) the amount involved and the results obtained;

(5) the time limitations imposed by the client or by the circumstances;

(6) the nature and length of the professional relationship with the client;

(7) the experience, reputation, and ability of the lawyer or lawyers performing the services; and

(8) whether the fee is fixed or contingent.

(b) When the lawyer has not regularly represented the client, the basis or rate of the fee shall be communicated to the client, preferably in writing, before or within a reasonable time after commencing the representation.

(c) A fee may be contingent on the outcome of the matter for which the service is rendered, except in a matter in which a contingent fee is prohibited by paragraph (d) or other law. A contingent fee agreement shall be in writing and shall state the method by which the fee is to be determined, including the percentage or percentages that shall accrue to the lawyer in the event of settlement, trial or appeal, litigation and other expenses to be deducted from the recovery, and whether such expenses are to be deducted before or after the contingent fee is calculated. Upon conclusion of a contingent fee matter, the lawyer shall provide the client with a written statement stating the outcome of the matter and, if there is a recovery, showing the remittance to the client and the method of its determination.

(d) A lawyer shall not enter into an arrangement for, charge, or collect:

(1) any fee in a domestic relations matter, the payment or amount of which is contingent upon the securing of a divorce or upon the amount of alimony or support, or property settlement in lieu thereof; or

(2) a contingent fee for representing a defendant in a criminal case.

(e) A division of fee between lawyers who are not in the same firm may be made only if:

(1) the division is in proportion to the services performed by each lawyer or, by written agreement with the client, each lawyer assumes joint responsibility for the representation;

(2) the client is advised of and does not object to the participation of all the lawyers involved; and

(3) the total fee is reasonable.

COMMENT

Basis or Rate of Fee. — When the lawyer has regularly represented a client, they ordinarily will have evolved an understanding concerning the basis or rate of the fee. In a new client-lawyer relationship, however, an understanding as to the fee should be promptly established. It is not necessary to recite all the factors that that underlie the basis of the fee, but only those that are directly involved in its computation. It is sufficient, for example, to state that the basic rate is an hourly charge or a fixed amount or an estimated amount, or to identify the factors that may be taken into account in finally fixing the fee. When developments occur during the representation that render an earlier estimate substantially inaccurate, a revised estimate should be provided to the client. A written statement concerning the fee reduces the possibility of a misunderstanding. Furnishing the client with a simple memorandum or a copy of the lawyer's customary fee schedule is sufficient if the basis or rate of the fee is set forth.

Terms of Payment. — A lawyer may require advance payment of a fee, but is obliged to return any unearned portion. See Rule 1.16(d). A lawyer may accept property in payment for services, such as an ownership interest in an enterprise, providing this does not involve acquisition of a proprietary interest in the cause of action or subject matter of the litigation contrary to Rule 1.8(j). However, a fee paid in property instead of money may be subject to special scrutiny because it involves questions concerning both the value of the services and the lawyer's special knowledge of the value of the property.

An agreement may not be made whose terms might induce the lawyer improperly to curtail services for the client or perform them in such a way contrary to the client's interest. For example, a lawyer should not enter into an agreement whereby services are to be provided only up to a stated amount when it is foreseeable that more extensive services will probably be required, unless the situation is adequately explained to the client. Otherwise, the client might have to bargain for further assistance in the midst of a proceeding or transaction. However, it is proper to define the extent of services in light of the client's ability to pay. A lawyer should not exploit a fee arrangement based primarily on hourly charges by using wasteful procedures. When there is doubt whether a contingent fee is consistent with the client's best interest, the lawyer should offer the client alternative bases for the fee and explain their implications. Applicable law may impose limitations on contingent fees, such as a ceiling on the percentage.

Paragraph (d)(1) does not prohibit a contingent fee agreement for the collection of past due alimony or support. See MSB Ethics Opinion No. 88.

Division of Fee. — A division of fee is a single billing to a client covering the fee of two or more lawyers who are not in the same firm. A division of fee facilitates association of more than one lawyer in a matter in which neither alone could serve the client as well, and most often is used when the fee is contingent and the division is between a referring lawyer and a trial specialist. Paragraph (e) permits the lawyers to divide a fee on either the basis of the proportion of services they render or by agreement between the participating lawyers if all assume responsibility for the representation as a whole and the client is advised and does not object. It does not require disclosure to the client of the share that each lawyer is to receive. Joint responsibility for the representation entails the obligations stated in Rule 5.1 for purposes of the matter involved.

Disputes Over Fee. — If a procedure has been established for resolution of fee disputes, such as an arbitration or mediation procedure established by the bar, the lawyer should conscientiously consider submitting to it. Law may prescribe a procedure for determining a lawyer's fee, for example, in representation of an executor or administrator, a class or a person entitled to a reasonable fee as part of the measure of damages. The lawyer entitled to such a fee and a lawyer representing another party concerned with the fee should comply with the prescribed procedure.

CODE COMPARISON

DR 2-106(A) provides that "A lawyer shall not enter into an agreement for, charge, or collect an illegal or clearly excessive fee." DR 2-106(B) provides that "A fee is clearly excessive when, after a review of the facts, a lawyer of ordinary prudence would be left with a definite and firm conviction that the fee is in excess of a reasonable fee." DR 2-106(B) further provides that "Factors to be considered... in determining... reasonableness . . . include . . .: (1) The time and labor required, the novelty and difficulty of the questions involved and the skill requisite to perform the legal service properly. (2) The likelihood, if apparent to the client, that the acceptance of the particular employment will preclude other employment by the lawyer. (3) The fee customarily charged in the locality for similar services. (4) The amount involved and the results obtained. (5) The time limitations imposed by the client or by the circumstances. (6) The nature and length of the professional relationship with the client. (7) The experience, reputation, and ability of the lawyer or lawyers performing the services. (8) Whether the fee is fixed or contingent." The Rule includes the factor of ability to pay; a person of ample means may justly be charged more for a service, and a person of limited means less, other factors being the same. EC 2-17 states that "A lawyer should not charge more than a reasonable fee. . . ."

There is no counterpart to Rule 1.5(b) in the Disciplinary Rules of the Code. EC 2-19 states that "It is usually beneficial to reduce to writing the understanding of the parties concerning the fee, particularly when it is contingent."

With regard to Rule 1.5(c), DR 2-106(C) prohibits "a contingent fee in a criminal case."

With regard to Rule 1.5(d), DR2-107(A) permits division of fees only if: "(1) The client consents to employment of the other lawyer after a full disclosure that a division of fees will be made. (2) The division is in proportion to the services performed and responsibility assumed by each. (3) The total fee does not exceed clearly reasonable compensation. . . ." Rule 1.5(d) permits division without regard to the services rendered by each lawyer if they assume joint responsibility for the representation.

Disputes over fee.

Trial court chancellor did not abuse his discretion in awarding attorney fees on an hourly basis after he voided the lawyer's contingency fee contract with the former administratrix, where it properly considered the eight factors enumerated in Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.5 that the Supreme Court established for determining reasonable attorney fees. Gillis v. Gillies, 830 So. 2d 640 (Miss. 2002).

Attorney fees awarded in a case involving an employer's bad faith failure to pay a worker's compensation claim were improperly granted because the trial court abused its discretion by making inaccurate findings regarding the factors outlined in determining the reasonableness of such an award. Miss. Power & Light Co. v. Cook, 832 So. 2d 474 (Miss. 2002).

Division of fee.

Under Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.5, a Mississippi attorney who performed the vast majority of the work on a wrongful death contingency case against a railroad was entitled to 90 percent of the attorney's fees, and the Louisiana attorney who associated with the Mississippi attorney was entitled to 10 percent. In re Guardianship v. Barrett, 31 So. 3d 1285 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

Fee agreement.

Chancellor was not manifestly wrong in approving contingent fee recovery under unusual facts of case, despite fact that fee agreement was not reduced to writing. Lowrey v. Will of Smith, 543 So. 2d 1155 (Miss. 1989).

Sanction.

Because the trial court's finding of multiple, intentional discovery violations was erroneous, so too was its award of attorney fees and expenses in amount in excess of $200,000 to plaintiffs (presumably under Miss. R. Civ. P. 37(e)), although plaintiffs were owed some amount of reasonable attorney fees and expenses; the court should have assessed the reasonable expenses incurred by plaintiffs caused by defendant's compliance with the court's ruling two days later than ordered. Ford Motor Co. v. Tennin, 960 So. 2d 379 (Miss. 2007).

— Disbarment.

Attorney was disbarred for violating Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.2(a), 1.3,1.4, 1.5(a), 8.1(b), and 8.4(a) and (d) where, inter alia, he caused serious injury to his client by knowingly failing to file a timely appeal from a conviction, deceiving the client as to the status of the appeal, taking the client's money, failing to inform the client of his suspension. The attorney deliberately prevaricated and lacked candor during the disciplinary proceedings and in the motion for out-of-time appeal, the attorney deceived the court by implying that another attorney, and not he, had failed to perfect timely an appeal. Shah v. Miss. Bar, 919 So. 2d 59 (Miss. 2005).

Illustrative cases.

In a products liability action alleging three welding rod manufacturers' failure to warn, the court granted the married couple's request for an attorney's fee award; exercising its discretion under Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d) and recognizing the factors for determining a reasonable fee, set forth in Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.5, as well as the legislative dictated regarding reasonable fees in Miss. Code Ann. § 9-1-41, the court allowed the manufacturers to either stipulate to the fee amount requested by the couple, $2,173,185.73, or to provide the court with a challenge to the couple's fee request within 28 days from the date of the court's order. Jowers v. BOC Group, Inc., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 28806 (S.D. Miss. Apr. 1, 2009), vacated in part by 617 F.3d 346, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 17862 (5th Cir. Miss. 2010).

Mississippi Bar filed a formal complaint against the attorney after an investigation revealed that the attorney failed to file a habeas petition and neglected other legal matters for which he was paid due to a substance abuse problem. Pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 8, a complaint tribunal heard the matter and found that the attorney violated Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.2(a), 1.3, 1.4, 1.5, 1.15(b), 1.16(d), 8.1(b), and 8.4(a); the attorney was suspended from the practice of law for six months. In re Reinstatement of Kelly, 987 So. 2d 925 (Miss. 2008).

In a complex contract case regarding damages to equipment owned by a utilities commission, a trial court did not abuse its discretion by awarding fees to two attorneys in the case, as it was clear from the language of the trial judge's order that the judge did in fact apply the reasonableness factors under McKee v. McKee, 418 So. 2d 764 (Miss 1982), even though he did not detail his reasoning; moreover, it was unnecessary to determine whether McKee predated Miss. Code Ann. § 9-1-41. Upchurch Plumbing, Inc. v. Greenwood Utils. Comm'n, 964 So. 2d 1100 (Miss. 2007).

When a contractor damaged a utilities commission's equipment in the process of testing a control system the contractor installed, and the commission was awarded attorney fees in the subsequent litigation, the trial court did not abuse its discretion because it was clear the judge applied the factors adopted from Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.5(a), even though it did not detail its reasoning. Upchurch Plumbing, Inc. v. Greenwood Utils. Comm'n, — So. 2d —, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 225 (Miss. Apr. 19, 2007), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 964 So. 2d 1100, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 495 (Miss. 2007).

Pursuant to the indemnification clause in the contract voluntarily entered into by both the marketer and the manufacturer, the chancellor did not err in its judgment because the amount of attorney fees assessed against the manufacturer was not an abuse of discretion; it was evident that the chancellor painstakingly addressed the relevant factors regarding the attorney fees under Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.5(a). Microtek Med., Inc. v. 3M Co., 942 So. 2d 122 (Miss. 2006).

Award of attorney fees equal to 27 times a contempt award was not an abuse of discretion, where work was required that was not typically necessary in a routine contempt action (including research on the duration of appointment of a special chancellor, the preparation and filing of a motion for clarification of order of appointment, the presentment of an executed recusal order of the chancellors to the court, a conference with the Department of Human Services, conferences with an expert witness, in addition to the normal communications and telephone calls, preparation for the hearing, and the marshaling of exhibits), and the chancellor, who was in the unique position to observe the parties and their demeanor, found that the mother was in willful and contumacious contempt of the child custody order and that the fee award was reasonable and necessary. Mabus v. Mabus, 910 So. 2d 486 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court's grant of the county's motion for voluntary dismissal without prejudice was an adverse and final appealable order, and the award of attorney's fees under Miss. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(2) was well supported but the reasonableness of fee amount was never substantiated, therefore the fee award was vacated and the case was remanded for the trial court to determine the reasonableness of fees pursuant to the factors provided in Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.5. BellSouth Pers. Commun., LLC v. Bd. of Supervisors, 912 So. 2d 436 (Miss. 2005).

In a case involving the destruction of trees, a trial court erred by basing an award of attorney fees on the amount recovered from a lumber company because the trial court should have examined the fees requested under Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.5 for reasonableness. Smith v. Parkerson Lumber, Inc., 888 So. 2d 1197 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Despite finding an entitlement to attorney's fees, the couple did not offer sufficient proof upon which to make an actual award of attorney's fees; because there had to be a rational basis upon which any award of attorney's fees was made, the appellate court could not say that the decision not to enter an actual award was error, and the trial court's determination that there was insufficient proof upon which to enter an actual award of attorney's fees was not a modification of a final judgment. Romney v. Barbetta, 881 So. 2d 958 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Where the attorneys in fact entered into a contract of employment with an attorney to pursue a personal injury claim on the ward's behalf, and the attorney, primarily out of caution, later submitted a proposed settlement to the chancery court for approval, the chancery court abused its discretion in reducing the lawyer's fee from a 40 percent contingency fee as provided in the contract to a 33 1/3 percent contingency fee. The contract was not one entered into pursuant to a traditional probate matter, it was not a contract within the parameters of Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 6.12, and the practical effect of the chancellor's decision, upheld by the court of appeals, was a judicial abrogation of the provisions of the Uniform Durable Power of Attorney Act found in Miss. Code Ann. §§ 87-3-101 through 87-3-113; the chancellor also failed to analyze the reasonableness of the attorneys' fees by application of the eight factors listed under Miss.

R. Prof. Conduct 1.5. In re Savell v. Renfroe, 876 So. 2d 308 (Miss. 2004).

Judge did not err in awarding the attorneys only a small percentage of the settlement they obtained on behalf of the estate, as this followed from his decision to void their contingency fee agreement and award fees based on quantum meruit. Gillis v. Gillies (In re Estate of Gillies), — So. 2d —, 2001 Miss. LEXIS 291 (Miss. Oct. 31, 2001), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 830 So. 2d 640, 2002 Miss. LEXIS 341 (Miss. 2002).

A chancellor did not abuse her discretion when she applied the factors of this rule and awarded attorneys' fees and documented expenses. Mauck v. Columbus Hotel Co., 741 So. 2d 259 (Miss. 1999).

The chancellor did not abuse her discretion when she awarded attorneys' fees based on an application and complete analysis of the eight factors contained in the rule. Mauck v. Columbus Hotel Co., — So. 2d —, 1998 Miss. LEXIS 577 (Miss. Nov. 25, 1998), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at, remanded by 1999 Miss. LEXIS 203 (Miss. June 17, 1999).

Rule 1.6. Confidentiality of information.

(a) A lawyer shall not reveal information relating to the representation of a client unless the client gives informed consent, the disclosure is impliedly authorized in order to carry out the representation, or the disclosure is permitted by paragraph (b).

(b) A lawyer may reveal such information to the extent the lawyer reasonably believes necessary:

(1) to prevent reasonably certain death or substantial bodily harm;

(2) to prevent the client from committing a crime or fraud that is reasonably certain to result in substantial injury to the financial interest or property of another and in furtherance of which the client has used or is using the lawyer's services;

(3) to prevent, mitigate or rectify substantial injury to the financial interests or property of another that is reasonably certain to result or has resulted from the client's commission of a crime or fraud in furtherance of which the client has used the lawyer's services;

(4) to secure legal advice about the lawyer's compliance with these rules;

(5) to establish a claim or defense on behalf of the lawyer in a controversy between the lawyer and the client, to establish a defense to a criminal charge or civil claim against the lawyer based upon conduct in which the client was involved, or to respond to allegations in any proceeding concerning the lawyer's representation of the client.

(6) to comply with other law or a court order.

(c) A lawyer who participates in an intervention on a lawyer, judge or law student by the Lawyers and Judges Assistance Committee shall not reveal any information learned through the intervention from or relating to the lawyer, judge or law student on whom the intervention is conducted except as may be permitted by the Rules of Discipline of the Mississippi Bar or required by law or court order.

(d) A lawyer shall reveal information to the Lawyers and Judges Assistance Committee in accordance with approved monitoring procedures of the Lawyers and Judges Assistance Committee relating to the status of compliance of a lawyer, judge or law student with the terms and conditions imposed upon the lawyer, judge or law student by the Lawyers and Judges Assistance Committee.

(e) A lawyer may reveal such information to the extent required by law or court order. (Amended June 23, 1994; amended April 18, 2002; amended effective November 3 , 2005 to add circumstances under which disclosure of otherwise confidential information is permitted.)

COMMENT

The lawyer is part of a judicial system charged with upholding the law. One of the lawyer's functions is to advise clients so that they avoid any violation of the law in the proper exercise of their rights.

The observance of the ethical obligation of a lawyer to hold inviolate confidential information of the client not only facilitates the full development of facts essential to proper representation of the client but also encourages people to seek early legal assistance.

A fundamental principle in the client-lawyer relationship is that, in the absence of the client's informed consent, the lawyer must not reveal information relating to the representation. See Terminology for definition of "informed consent." This contributes to the trust that is the hallmark of the client-lawyer relationship. The client is thereby encouraged to seek legal assistance and to communicate fully and frankly with the lawyer even as to embarrassing or legally damaging subject matter. The lawyer needs this information to represent the client effectively and, if necessary, to advise the client to refrain from wrongful conduct. Almost without exception, clients come to lawyers in order to determine their rights and what is, in the complex of laws and regulations, deemed to be legal and correct. Based upon experience, lawyers know that almost all clients follow the advice given, and the law is upheld.

The principle of client-lawyer confidentiality is given effect by related bodies of law : the attorney-client privilege the work product doctrine, and the rule of confidentiality established in professional ethics. The attorney-client and the work product doctrine apply in judicial and other proceedings in which a lawyer may be called as a witness or otherwise required to produce evidence concerning a client. The rule of client-lawyer confidentiality applies in situations other than those where evidence is sought from the lawyer through compulsion of law. The confidentiality rule, for example, applies not only to matters communicated in confidence by the client but also to all information relating to the representation, whatever the source. A lawyer may not disclose such information except as authorized or required by the Rules of Professional Conduct or other law. See also Scope.

The requirement of maintaining confidentiality of information relating to representation applies to government lawyers who may disagree with the policy goals that their representation is designed to advance.

Paragraph (a) prohibits a lawyer from revealing information relating to the representation of a client. This prohibition also applies to disclosures by a lawyer that do not in themselves reveal protected information but could reasonably lead to the discovery of such information by a third person. A lawyer's use of a hypothetical to discuss issues relating to the representation is permissible so long as there is no reasonable likelihood that the listener will be able to ascertain the identity of the client or the situation involved.

Authorized Disclosure. — Except to the extent that the client's instructions or special circumstances limit that authority, a lawyer is impliedly authorized to make disclosures about a client when appropriate in carrying out the representation. In some situations, for example, a lawyer may be impliedly authorized to admit a fact that cannot properly be disputed or to make a disclosure that facilitates a satisfactory conclusion to a matter.

Lawyers in a firm may, in the course of the firm's practice, disclose to each other information relating to a client of the firm, unless the client has instructed that particular information be confined to specified lawyers.

Disclosure Adverse to Client. — Although the public interest is usually best served by a strict rule requiring lawyers to preserve the confidentiality of information relating to the representation of their clients, the confidentiality rule is subject to limited exceptions. Paragraph (b)(1) recognizes the overriding value of life and physical integrity and permits disclosure reasonably necessary to prevent reasonably certain death or substantial bodily harm. Such harm is reasonably certain to occur if it will be suffered imminently or if there is a present and substantial threat that a person will suffer such harm at a later date if the lawyer fails to take action necessary to eliminate the threat. Thus, a lawyer who knows that a client has accidentally discharged toxic waste into a town's water supply may reveal this information to the authorities if there is a present and substantial risk that a person who drinks the water will contract a life-threatening or debilitating disease and the lawyer's disclosure is necessary to eliminate the threat or reduce the number of victims.

Paragraph (b)(2) is a limited exception to the rule of confidentiality that permits the lawyer to reveal information to the extent necessary to enable affected persons or appropriate authorities to prevent the client from committing a crime or fraud, as defined in the Terminology section, that is reasonably certain to result in substantial injury to the financial or property interest of another and in furtherance of which the client has used or is using that lawyer's services. Such a serious abuse of the client-lawyer relationship by the client forfeits the protection of this rule. The client can, of course, prevent such disclosure by refraining from the wrongful conduct. Although paragraph (b)(2) does not require the lawyer to reveal the client's misconduct, the lawyer may not counsel or assist the client in conduct the lawyer knows is criminal or fraudulent. See Rule 1.2(d). See also Rule 1.16 with respect to the lawyer's obligation or right to withdraw from the representation of the client in such circumstances.

Paragraph (b)(3) addresses the situation in which the lawyer does not learn of the client's crime or fraud until after it has been consummated. Although the client no longer has the option of preventing disclosure by refraining from the wrongful conduct, there will be situations in which the loss suffered by the affected person can be prevented, rectified or mitigated. In such situations, the lawyer may disclose information related to the representation to the extent necessary to enable the affected persons to prevent or mitigate reasonably certain losses or to attempt to recoup their losses. Paragraph (b)(3) does not apply when a person who has committed a crime or fraud thereafter employs a lawyer for representation concerning that offense.

A lawyer's confidentiality obligations do not preclude a lawyer from securing confidential legal advice about the lawyer's personal responsibility to comply with these Rules. In most situations, disclosing information to secure such advice will be impliedly authorized for the lawyer to carry out the representation. Even when the disclosure is not impliedly authorized, paragraph (b)(4) permits such disclosure because of the importance of a lawyer's compliance with the Rules of Professional Conduct.

A lawyer entitled to a fee is permitted by paragraph (b)(5) to prove the services rendered in an action to collect it. This aspect of the rule expresses the principle that the beneficiary of a fiduciary relationship may not exploit it to the detriment of the fiduciary.

Withdrawal. — If the lawyer's services will be used by the client in materially furthering a course of criminal or fraudulent conduct, the lawyer must withdraw, as stated in Rule 1.16(a)(1).

After withdrawal the lawyer is required to refrain from making disclosure of the clients' confidences, except as otherwise provided in Rule 1.6. Neither this rule nor Rule 1.8(b) nor Rule 1.16(d) prevents the lawyer from giving notice of the fact of withdrawal, and the lawyer may also withdraw or disaffirm any opinion, document, affirmation, or the like.

Where the client is an organization, the lawyer may be in doubt whether contemplated conduct will actually be carried out by the organization. Where necessary to guide conduct in connection with this Rule, the lawyer may make inquiry within the organization as indicated in Rule 1.13(b).

Dispute Concerning Lawyer's Conduct. — Where a legal claim or disciplinary charge alleges complicity of the lawyer in a client's conduct or other misconduct of the lawyer involving representation of the client, the lawyer may respond to the extent that lawyer reasonably believes necessary to establish a defense. The same is true with respect to a claim involving the conduct or representation of a former client. Such a charge can arise in a civil, criminal, disciplinary or other proceeding and can be based on a wrong allegedly committed by the lawyer against the client or on a wrong alleged by a third person, for example, a person claiming to have been defrauded by the lawyer and client acting together. The lawyer's right to respond arises when an assertion of such complicity has been made. Paragraph (b)(5) does not require the lawyer to await the commencement of an action or proceeding that charges such complicity, so that the defense may be established by responding directly to a third party who has made such an assertion. The right to defend also applies, of course, where a proceeding has been commenced. Where practicable and not prejudicial to the lawyer's ability to establish the defense, the lawyer should advise the client of the third party's assertion and request that the client respond appropriately. In any event, disclosure should be no greater than the lawyer reasonably believes is necessary to vindicate innocence.

As stated above, the lawyer must make every effort practicable to avoid unnecessary disclosure of information relating to a representation, to limit disclosure to those having the need to know it, and to obtain protective orders or make other arrangements minimizing the risk of disclosure.

Other law may require that a lawyer disclose information about a client. Whether such a law supersedes Rule 1.6 is a question of law beyond the scope of these rules. When disclosure of information relating to the representation appears to be required by other law, the lawyer must discuss the matter with the client to the extent required by Rule 1.4. If, however, the other law supersedes this rule and requires disclosure, paragraph (b)(6) permits the lawyer to make such disclosures as are necessary to comply with the law.

A lawyer may be ordered to reveal information, relating to the representation of a client, by a court or by another tribunal or governmental entity claiming authority pursuant to other law to compel the disclosure. Absent informed consent of the client to do otherwise, the lawyer should assert on behalf of the client all nonfrivolous claims that the order is not authorized by other law or that the information sought is protected against disclosure by the other law or that the information sought is protected against disclosure by the attorney-client privilege or other applicable law. In the event of an adverse ruling, the lawyer must consult with the client about the possibility of appeal to the extent required by Rule 1.4. Unless review is sought, however, paragraph (b)(6) permits the lawyer to comply with the court's order.

Paragraph (b) permits disclosure only to the extent the lawyer reasonably believes the disclosure is necessary to accomplish one of the purposes specified. Where practicable, the lawyer should first seek to persuade the client to take suitable action to obviate the need for disclosure. In any case, a disclosure adverse to the client's interest should be no greater than the lawyer reasonably believes necessary to accomplish the purpose. If the disclosure will be made in connection with a judicial proceeding, the disclosure should be made in a manner that limits access to the information to the tribunal or other person having a need to know it and appropriate protective orders or other arrangements should be sought by the lawyer to the fullest extent practicable.

Paragraph (b) permits but does not require the disclosure of information relating to a client's representation to accomplish the purposes specified in paragraphs (b)(1) through (b)(6). In exercising the discretion conferred by this rule, the lawyer may consider such factors as the nature of the lawyer's relationship with the client and with those who might be injured by the client, the lawyer's own involvement in the transaction and factors that may extenuate the conduct in question. A lawyer's decision not to disclose as permitted by paragraph (b) does not violate this rule. Disclosure may be required, however, by other rules. Some rules require disclosure only if such disclosure would be permitted by paragraph (b). See Rules 4,1(b), 8.1 and 8.3. Rule 3.3, on the other hand, requires disclosure in some circumstances regardless of whether such disclosure is permitted by this rule.

Acting competently to preserve confidentiality. — A lawyer must act competently to safeguard information relating to the representation of a client against inadvertent or unauthorized disclosure by the lawyer or other persons who are participating in the representation of the client or who are subject to the lawyer's supervision. See rules 1.1, 5.1 and 5.3.

When transmitting a communication that includes information relating to the representation of a client, the lawyer must take reasonable precautions to prevent the information from coming into the hands of unintended recipients. This duty, however, does not require that the lawyer use special security measures if the method of communication affords a reasonable expectation of privacy. Special circumstances, however, may warrant special precautions. Factors to be considered in determining the reasonableness of the lawyer's expectation of confidentiality include the sensitivity of the information and the extent to which the privacy of the communication is protected by law or by a confidentiality agreement. A client may require the lawyer to implement special security measures not required by this rule or may give informed consent to the use of a means of communication that would otherwise be prohibited by this rule.

Disclosures otherwise required or authorized. — The attorney-client privilege is differently defined in various jurisdictions. If a lawyer is called as a witness to give testimony concerning a client, absent waiver by the client, Rule 1.6(a) requires the lawyer to invoke the privilege when it is applicable. The lawyer must comply with the final orders of a court or other tribunal of competent jurisdiction requiring the lawyer to give information about the client.

The Rules of Professional Conduct in various circumstances permit or require a lawyer to disclose information relating to the representation. See Rules 2.2, 2.3, 3.3 and 4.1. In addition to these provisions, a lawyer may be obligated or permitted by other provisions of the law to give information about a client. Whether another provision of law supersedes Rule 1.6 is a matter of interpretation beyond the scope of these Rules, but a presumption should exist against such a supersession.

Former client. — The duty of confidentiality continues after the client-lawyer relationship has terminated. See Rule 1.9.

[Amended June 23, 1994; amended effective November 3, 2005.]

CODE COMPARISON

The general principle of confidentiality is enlarged, under Rule 1.6, in that the confidentiality requirement applies to all information about a client "relating to the representation." Under the Code, DR 4-101, the requirement applies only to information governed by the client-attorney privilege and to information "gained in" the professional relationship that "the client has requested be held inviolate or the disclosure of which would be embarrassing or would be likely to be detrimental to the client." Rule 1.6 thus imposes confidentiality on information relating to the representation even if it is acquired before or after the relationship existed. It does not require the client to indicate information that is to be confidential, or permit the lawyer to speculate whether particular information might be embarrassing or detrimental. Furthermore, this definition avoids the constricted definition of "confidence" that appears in some decisions.

See Allegaert v. Perot, 434 F.Supp. 790 (S.D.N.Y.1977); Moritz v. Medical Protective Co., 428 F.Supp. 865 (W.D.Wis.1977); City of Wichita v. Chapman, 214 Kan. 575, 521 P.2d 589 (Kan.1974).

Rule 1.6(a) permits a lawyer to disclose information where impliedly authorized in order to carry out the representation. Under DR 4-101(B) and (C), a lawyer cannot disclose "confidences" unless the client first expressly consents after disclosure.

Rule 1.6(b)(1) is similar to DR 4-101(C)(3) which provides that a lawyer "may reveal the intention of his client to commit a crime and the information necessary to prevent the crime." This option exists regardless of the seriousness of the proposed crime.

With regard to Rule 1.6(b)(2), DR 4-101(C)(4) provides that a lawyer may reveal "confidences or secrets necessary to establish or collect his fee or to defend himself or his employers or associates against an accusation of wrongful conduct." Rule 1.6(b)(2) enlarges the exception to include disclosure of information relating to claims by the lawyer other than for his fee; for example, recovery of property from the client. It narrows the exception dealing with defense against claims of wrongful conduct to situations where the client's conduct was involved.

Rule 1.6(c) is substantially similar to DR 4-101(C)(2).

Criminal act.

Neither an attorney nor his law clerk could be faulted for providing a client's mental health records to law enforcement officials where the attorney, in good faith, believed that the client may have been committing a crime. Crawford v. State, 716 So. 2d 1028 (Miss. 1998), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1021, 119 S. Ct. 550, 142 L. Ed. 2d 458 (1998).

Entitlement to defend.

Circuit court erred in denying summary judgment to the law firm on the client's claim of direct breach of fiduciary duty. All defendants were legally entitled to defend themselves and none of the client's claimed damages purported to related to conduct arising on or after his demand on November 12, 2004, which was the initial date when the law firm was apprised of the "secret and covert" affair between the attorney and the client's wife. Baker Donelson Bearman Caldwell & Berkowitz, P.C. v. Seay, 42 So. 3d 474 (Miss. 2010).

Paralegal's prior work for opposing party's prior counsel.

Where a paralegal worked for defendant lenders' prior counsel, and then worked for different plaintiff consumers' counsel, and all the consumer fraud cases involved the same lenders, claims and documents, and nearly identical facts, a substantial relationship existed requiring disqualification of plaintiff consumers' counsel under Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.6, 1.9(a), and 1.10(b). Owens v. First Family Fin. Servs., 379 F. Supp. 2d 840 (S.D. Miss. 2005).

Potential perjury of client.

Defendant was denied his right to a fair trial because the trial judge, sitting as finder of fact on defendant's motion to suppress, was informed by defense counsel that defendant had confessed to counsel that he committed the crime and that he intended to offer perjured testimony at trial, and therefore, the trial judge should have recused herself from hearing the motion to suppress, and her failure to do so deprived defendant of his right to due process. Scott v. State, 8 So. 3d 871 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), reversed by 8 So. 3d 855, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 589 (Miss. 2008).

Rule 1.7. Conflict of interest: general rule.

(a) A lawyer shall not represent a client if the representation of that client will be directly adverse to another client, unless the lawyer reasonably believes:

(1) the representation will not adversely affect the relationship with the other client; and

(2) each client has given knowing and informed consent after consultation. The consultation shall include explanation of the implications of the adverse representation and the advantages and risks involved.

(b) A lawyer shall not represent a client if the representation of that client may be materially limited by the lawyer's responsibilities to another client or to a third person, or by the lawyer's own interests, unless the lawyer reasonably believes:

(1) the representation will not be adversely affected; and

(2) the client has given knowing and informed consent after consultation. The consultation shall include explanation of the implications of the representation and the advantage and risks involved.

COMMENT

Loyalty to a Client. — Loyalty is an essential element in the lawyer's relationship to a client. An impermissible conflict of interest may exist before representation is undertaken, in which event the representation should be declined. If such a conflict arises after representation has been undertaken, the lawyer should withdraw from the representation. See Rule 1.16. Where more than one client is involved and the lawyer withdraws because a conflict arises after representation, whether the lawyer may continue to represent any of the clients is determined by Rule 1.9. See also Rule 2.2(c). As to whether a client-lawyer relationship exists or, having once been established, is continuing, see Comment to Rule 1.3 and Scope.

As a general proposition, loyalty to a client prohibits undertaking representation directly adverse to that client without that client's consent. Paragraph (a) expresses that general rule. Thus, a lawyer ordinarily may not act as advocate against a person the lawyer represents in some other matter, even if it is wholly unrelated. On the other hand, simultaneous representation in unrelated matters of clients whose interests are only generally adverse, such as competing economic enterprises, does not require consent of the respective clients. Paragraph (a) applies only when the representation of one client would be directly adverse to the other.

Loyalty to a client is also impaired when a lawyer cannot consider, recommend or carry out an appropriate course of action for the client because of the lawyer's other responsibilities or interests. The conflict in effect forecloses alternatives that would otherwise be available to the client. Paragraph (b) addresses such situations. A possible conflict does not itself preclude the representation. The critical questions are the likelihood that a conflict will eventuate and, if it does, whether it will materially interfere with the lawyer's independent professional judgment in considering alternatives or foreclose courses of action that reasonably should be pursued on behalf of the client. Consideration should be given to whether the client wishes to accommodate the other interest involved.

Consultation and Consent. — In some cases a client may consent to representation notwithstanding a conflict. However, as indicated in paragraph (a)(1) with respect to representation directly adverse to a client, and paragraph (b)(1) with respect to material limitations on representation of a client, when a disinterested lawyer would conclude that the client should not agree to the representation under the circumstances, the lawyer involved cannot properly ask for such agreement or provide representation on the basis of the client's consent. When more than one client is involved, the question of conflict must be resolved as to each client. Moreover, there may be circumstances where it is impossible to make the disclosure necessary to obtain consent. For example, when the lawyer represents different clients in related matters and one of the clients refuses to consent to the disclosure necessary to permit the other client to make an informed decision, the lawyer cannot properly ask the latter to consent.

Lawyer's Interests. — The lawyer's own interests should not be permitted to have an adverse effect on representation of a client. For example, a lawyer's need for income should not lead the lawyer to undertake matters that cannot be handled competently and at reasonable fee. See Rules 1.1 and 1.5. If the probity of a lawyer's own conduct in a transaction is in serious question, it may be difficult or impossible for the lawyer to give a client detached advice. A lawyer may not allow related business interests to affect representation, for example, by referring clients to an enterprise in which the lawyer has an undisclosed interest.

Conflicts in Litigation. — Paragraph (a) prohibits representation of opposing parties in litigation, including both parties to a divorce action. See MSB Ethics Opinion No. 80. Simultaneous representation of parties whose interests in litigation may conflict, such as co-plaintiffs or co-defendants, is governed by paragraph (b). An impermissible conflict may exist by reason of substantial discrepancy in the parties' testimony, incompatibility in positions in relation to an opposing party or the fact that there are substantially different possibilities of settlement of the claims or liabilities in question. Such conflicts can arise in criminal cases as well as civil. The potential for conflict of interest in representing multiple defendants in a criminal case is so grave that ordinarily a lawyer should decline to represent more than one co-defendant. On the other hand, common representation of persons having similar interests is proper if the risk of adverse effect is minimal and the requirements of paragraph (b) are met. Compare Rule 2.2 involving intermediation between clients.

Ordinarily, a lawyer may not act as advocate against a client the lawyer represents in some other matter, even if the other matter is wholly unrelated. However, there are circumstances in which a lawyer may act as advocate against a client. For example, a lawyer representing an enterprise with diverse operations may accept employment as an advocate against the enterprise in an unrelated matter if doing so will not adversely affect the lawyer's relationship with the enterprise or conduct of the suit and if both clients consent upon consultation. By the same token, government lawyers in some circumstances may represent government employees in proceedings in which a government agency is the opposing party. The propriety of concurrent representation can depend on the nature of the litigation. For example, a suit charging fraud entails conflict to a degree not involved in a suit for a declaratory judgment concerning statutory interpretation.

A lawyer may represent parties having antagonistic positions on a legal question that has arisen in different cases, unless representation of either client would be adversely affected. Thus, it is ordinarily not improper to assert such positions in cases pending in different trial courts, but it may be improper to do so in cases pending at the same time in an appellate court.

Interest of Person Paying for a Lawyer's Service. — A lawyer may be paid from a source other than the client, if the client is informed of the fact and consents and the arrangement does not compromise the lawyer's duty of loyalty to the client. See Rule 1.8(f). For example, when an insurer and its insured have conflicting interests in a matter arising from a liability insurance agreement, and the insurer is required to provide special counsel for the insured, the arrangement should assure the special counsel's professional independence. So also, when a corporation and its directors or employees are involved in a controversy in which they have conflicting interests, the corporation may provide funds for separate legal representation of the directors or employees, if the clients consent after consultation and the arrangement ensures the lawyer's professional independence.

Other Conflict Situations. — Conflicts of interest in contexts other than litigation sometimes may be difficult to assess. Relevant factors in determining whether there is potential for adverse effect include the duration and intimacy of the lawyer's relationship with the client or clients involved, the functions being performed by the lawyer, the likelihood that actual conflict will arise and the likely prejudice to the client from the conflict if it does arise. The question is often one of proximity and degree.

For example, a lawyer may not represent multiple parties to a negotiation whose interests are fundamentally antagonistic to each other, but common representation is permissible where the clients are generally aligned in interest even though there is some difference of interest among them.

Conflict questions may also arise in estate planning and estate administration. A lawyer may be called upon to prepare wills for several family members, such as husband and wife, and depending upon the circumstances, a conflict of interest may arise. In estate administration the identity of the client may be unclear under the law of a particular jurisdiction. Under one view, the client is the fiduciary; under another view the client is the estate or trust, including its beneficiaries. The lawyer should make clear the relationship to the parties involved.

A lawyer for a corporation or other organization who is also a member of its board of directors should determine whether the responsibilities of the two roles may conflict. The lawyer may be called on to advise the corporation in matters involving actions of the directors. Consideration should be given to the frequency with which such situations may arise, the potential intensity of the conflict, the effect of the lawyer's resignation from the board and the possibility of the corporation's obtaining legal advice from another lawyer in such situations. If there is material risk that the dual role will compromise the lawyer's independence of professional judgment, the lawyer should not serve as a director.

Conflict Charged by an Opposing Party. — Resolving questions of conflict of interest is primarily the responsibility of the lawyer undertaking the representation. In litigation, a court may raise the question when there is reason to infer that the lawyer has neglected the responsibility. In a criminal case, inquiry by the court is generally required when a lawyer represents multiple defendants. Where the conflict is such as clearly to call in question the fair or efficient administration of justice, opposing counsel may properly raise the question. Such an objection should be viewed with caution, however, for it can be misused as a technique of harassment. See Scope.

CODE COMPARISON

DR 5-101(A) provides that "Except with the consent of his client after full disclosure, a lawyer shall not accept employment if the exercise of his professional judgment on behalf of the client will be or reasonably may be affected by his own financial, business, property, or personal interests." DR 5-105(A) provides that "A lawyer shall decline proffered employment if the exercise of his independent professional judgment in behalf of a client will be or is likely to be adversely affected by the acceptance of the proffered employment, or if it would be likely to involve him in representing differing interests, except to the extent permitted under DR 5-105(C)." DR 5-105(C) provides that "In the situations covered by DR 5-105(A) and (B), a lawyer may represent multiple clients if it is obvious that he can adequately represent the interest of each and if each consents to the representation after full disclosure of the possible effect of such representation on the exercise of his independent professional judgment on behalf of each." DR 5-107(B) provides that "A lawyer shall not permit a person who recommends, employs, or pays him to render legal services for another to direct or regulate his professional judgment in rendering such services."

Rule 1.7 goes beyond DR 5-105(A) in requiring that, when the lawyer's other interests are involved, not only must the client consent after consultation but also that, independent of such consent, the representation reasonably appears not to be adversely affected by the lawyer's other interests. This requirement appears to be the intended meaning of the provision in DR 5-105(C) that "it is obvious that he can adequately represent" the client, and is implicit in EC 5-2, which states that "A lawyer should not accept proffered employment if his personal interests or desires will, or there is a reasonable possibility that they will, adversely affect the advice to be given or services to be rendered the prospective client."

Paralegal's prior work for opposing party's prior counsel.

In general.

Although a lawyer may in some circumstances, and with his client's consent, limit objectives of his representation, this can never authorize attorney to engage in dual representation entailing professional decisions on his part which stand to benefit one client at the expense of the other. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. v. Foster, 528 So. 2d 255 (Miss. 1988).

Applicability.

As to whether a law firm, due to its prior representation of corporation three, was disqualified from representing corporations one and two in their suit concerning an alleged coup by corporation three to gain control of hybrid automobile technology, investments, and contracts that the parties had been working on jointly, Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.9 applied, rather than Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.7, because the firm had already terminated its representation of corporation three. Hybrid Kinetic Auto. Holdings, Inc. v. Hybrid Kinetic Auto. Corp., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 52322 (N.D. Miss. June 18, 2009).

Criminal defendants.

Consent of criminal defendant is a necessary prerequisite to joint representation, and trial court inquiry into whether defendant has made a knowing and voluntary waiver of his right to conflict-free counsel is imperative. Armstrong v. State, 573 So. 2d 1329 (Miss. 1990).

Ineffective assistance of counsel.

Post-conviction relief petitioner was denied his U.S. Const. amend. VI right to counsel as trial counsel's representation of petitioner at the same time he represented a prosecution witness against petitioner was a per se actual conflict of interest that required an automatic reversal when there was no evidence that petitioner waived the conflict. Kiker v. State, 55 So. 3d 1060 (Miss. 2011).

It appears to be problematic and inappropriate for an attorney who represents a criminal defendant at trial to represent that same defendant on appeal where the attorney intends to raise an ineffective assistance of counsel claim in that appeal. Hill v. State, 749 So. 2d 1143 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Informed consent.

A knowing and informed consent by a criminal defendant after consultation of the advantages and risks involved is a necessary prerequisite to joint representation only if an actual conflict exists. Witt v. State, 781 So. 2d 135 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

Insurance.

Mississippi law applied to the issue of whether an insurer was required to provide an insured with independent counsel while defending under a reservation of rights; although the policies at issue were entered into in Louisiana, Mississippi had the most significant relationship to the insurer and the insured where the suits in which the defense was required took place in Mississippi courts, the suits concerned the insured's Mississippi nursing homes, and the relevant policies of Mississippi with regard to the provision of independent counsel were important, as they were rooted in conflict of interest rules such as Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.7. Hartford Underwriters Ins. Co. v. Found. Health Servs., 524 F.3d 588 (5th Cir. 2008).

Fact that an insurance contract authorizes insurance company to employ an attorney to handle defense of a case in no way impairs or diminishes duty of lawyer to the insured client. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. v. Foster, 528 So. 2d 255 (Miss. 1988).

When there is a question as to insurance coverage and insurance company notifies insured that it will fulfill its obligation to defend suit, while reserving a right to deny coverage of insured's conduct, lawyer employed by insurance company is presented with an ethical question, and may in some circumstances be required to withdraw from case. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. v. Foster, 528 So. 2d 255 (Miss. 1988).

Malpractice.

In a legal malpractice case, the fact that an attorney's father at one time was employed by the opposite party in the underlying suit did not, standing alone, violate the Mississippi Rules of Professional Conduct. Chambers v. Campbell, 968 So. 2d 949 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 904 So. 2d 184, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 401 (Miss. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 546 U.S. 1034, 126 S. Ct. 759, 163 L. Ed. 2d 575, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 8633, 74 U.S.L.W. 3322 (2005).

Paralegal's prior work for opposing party's prior counsel.

Where a paralegal worked for defendant lenders' prior counsel, and then worked for different plaintiff consumers' counsel, and all the consumer fraud cases involved the same lenders, claims and documents, and nearly identical facts, a substantial relationship existed requiring disqualification of plaintiff consumers' counsel under Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.6, 1.9(a), and1.10(b); the lenders' new counsel had sent a letter to plaintiff consumers' counsel as to the conflict of interest which specifically stated no conflict was waived, and thus, there was no waiver under Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.7. Owens v. First Family Fin. Servs., 379 F. Supp. 2d 840 (S.D. Miss. 2005).

Rule 1.8. Conflict of interest: prohibited transactions.

(a) A lawyer shall not enter into a business transaction with a client or knowingly acquire an ownership, possessory, security or pecuniary interest adverse to a client unless:

(1) the transaction and terms on which the lawyer acquires the interests are fair and reasonable to the client and are fully disclosed and transmitted in writing to the client in a manner which can be reasonably understood by the client;

(2) the client is given a reasonable opportunity to seek the advice of independent counsel in the transaction; and

(3) the client consents in writing thereto.

(b) A lawyer shall not use information relating to representation of a client

(1) to the disadvantage of the client, or

(2) to the advantage of himself or a third person, unless the client consents after consultation.

(c) A lawyer shall not prepare an instrument giving the lawyer or a person related to the lawyer as parent, child, sibling, or spouse any substantial gift from a client, including a testamentary gift, except where the client is related to the donee.

(d) Prior to the conclusion or representation of a client, a lawyer shall not make or negotiate an agreement giving the lawyer literary or media right to a portrayal or account based in substantial part on information relating to the representation.

(e) A lawyer shall not provide financial assistance to a client in connection with pending or contemplated litigation, or administrative proceedings, except that:

(1) A lawyer may advance court costs and expenses of litigation, including but not limited to reasonable medical expenses necessary to the preparation of the litigation of hearing or trail, the repayment of which may be contingent on the outcome of the matter; and

(2) A lawyer representing a client may, in addition to the above, advance the following costs and expenses on behalf of the client, which shall be repaid upon successful conclusion of the matter.

a. Reasonable and necessary medical expenses associated with treatment for the injury giving rise to the litigation or administrative proceeding for which the client seeks legal representation; and

b. Reasonable and necessary living expenses incurred.

The expenses enumerated in paragraph 2 above can only be advanced to a client under dire and necessitous circumstances, and shall be limited to minimal living expenses of minor sums such as those necessary to prevent foreclosure or repossession or for necessary medical treatment. There can be no payment of expenses under paragraph 2 until the expiration of 60 days after the client has signed a contract of employment with counsel. Such payments under paragraph 2 cannot include a promise of future payments, and counsel cannot promise any such payments in any type of communication to the public, and such funds may only be advanced after due diligence and inquiry into the circumstances of the client.

Payments under paragraph 2 shall be limited to $1,500 to any one party by any lawyer or group or succession of lawyers during the continuation of any litigation unless, upon ex parte application, such further payment has been approved by the Standing Committee on Ethics of the Mississippi Bar. An attorney contemplating such payment must exercise due diligence to determine whether such party has received any such payments from another attorney during the continuation of the same litigation, and, if so, the total of such payments, without approval of the Standing Committee on Ethics shall not in the aggregate exceed $1,500. Upon denial of such application, the decision thereon shall be subject to review by the Mississippi Supreme Court on petition of the attorney seeking leave to make further payments. Payments under paragraph 2 aggregating $1,500 or less shall be reported by the lawyer making the payment to the Standing Committee on Ethics within seven (7) days following the making of each such payment. Applications for approval by the Standing Committee on Ethics as required hereunder and notices to the Standing Committee on Ethics of payments aggregating $1,500 or less, shall be confidential.

(f) A lawyer shall not accept compensation for representing a client from one other than the client unless:

(1) the client consents after consultation;

(2) there is no interference with the lawyer's independence of professional judgment or with the client-lawyer relationship; and

(3) information relating to representation of a client is protected as required by Rule 1.6.

(g) A lawyer who represents two or more clients shall not participate in making an aggregate settlement of the claims of or against the clients, or in a criminal case an aggregated agreement as to guilty or nolo contendere pleas, unless each client consents after consultation, including disclosure of the existence and nature of all the claims or pleas involved and of the participation of each person in the settlement.

(h) A lawyer shall not make an agreement prospectively limiting the lawyer's liability to a client for malpractice unless permitted by law and the client is independently represented in making the agreement, or settle a claim for such liability with an unrepresented client or former client without first advising that person in writing that independent representation is appropriate in connection therewith.

(i) A lawyer related to another lawyer as parent, child, sibling or spouse shall not represent a client in a representation directly adverse to a person who the lawyer knows is represented by the other lawyer except upon consent by the client after consultation regarding the relationship.

(j) A lawyer shall not acquire a proprietary interest in the cause of action or subject matter of litigation the lawyer is conducting for a client, except that the lawyer may:

(1) acquire a lien granted by law to secure the lawyer's fee or expenses; and

(2) contract with a client for a reasonable contingent fee in a civil case. (Amended, March 25, 1999; October 21, 1999.)

COMMENT

Transactions Between Client and Lawyer. — As a general principle, all transactions between client and lawyer should be fair and reasonable to the client. In such transactions a review by independent counsel on behalf of the client is often advisable. Furthermore, a lawyer may not exploit information relating to the representation to the client's disadvantage. For example, a lawyer who has learned that the client is investing in specific real estate may not, without the client's consent, seek to acquire nearby property where doing so would adversely affect the client's plan for investment. Paragraph (a) does not, however, apply to standard commercial transactions between the lawyer and the client for products or services that the client generally markets to others, for example, banking or brokerage services, medical services, products manufactured or distributed by the client, and utilities services. In such transactions, the lawyer has no advantage in dealing with the client, and the restrictions in paragraph (a) are unnecessary and impracticable.

A lawyer may accept a gift from a client, if the transaction meets general standards of fairness. For example, a simple gift such as a present given at a holiday or as a token of appreciation is permitted. If effectuation of a substantial gift requires preparing a legal instrument such as a will or conveyance, however, the client should have the detached advice that another lawyer can provide. Paragraph (c) recognizes an exception where the client is a relative of the donee or the gift is not substantial.

Literary Rights. — An agreement by which a lawyer acquires literary or media rights concerning the conduct of the representation creates a conflict between the interests of the client and the personal interests of the lawyer. Measures suitable in the representation of the client may detract from the publication value of an account of the representation. Paragraph (d) does not prohibit a lawyer representing a client in a transaction concerning literary property from agreeing that the lawyer's fee shall consist of a share in ownership in the property, if the arrangement conforms to Rule 1.5 and paragraph (j).

Person Paying for Lawyer's Services. — Rule 1.8(f) requires disclosure of the fact that the lawyer's services are being paid for by a third party. Such an arrangement must also conform to the requirements of Rule 1.6 concerning confidentiality and Rule 1.7 concerning conflict of interest. Where the client is a class, consent may be obtained on behalf of the class by court-supervised procedure.

Family Relationships Between Lawyers. — Rule 1.8(i) applies to related lawyers who are in different firms. Related lawyers in the same firm are governed by Rules 1.7, 1.9, and 1.10. The disqualification stated in Rule 1.8(i) is personal and is not imputed to members of firms with whom the lawyers are associated.

Acquisition of Interest in Litigation. — Paragraph (j) states the traditional general rule that lawyers are prohibited from acquiring a proprietary interest in litigation. This general rule, which has its basis in common law champerty and maintenance, is subject to specific exceptions developed in decisional law and continued in these Rules, such as the exception for reasonable contingent fees set forth in Rule 1.5 and the exception for certain advances of the costs of litigation set forth in paragraph (e).

This Rule is not intended to apply to customary qualification and limitations in legal opinions and memoranda.

CODE COMPARISON

This Rule deals with certain transactions that per se involve conflict of interest.

With regard to Rule 1.8(a), DR 5-104(A) provides that "A lawyer shall not enter into a business transaction with a client if they have differing interests therein and if the client expects the lawyer to exercise his professional judgment therein for the protection of the client, unless the client has consented after full disclosure." EC 5-3 states that "A lawyer should not seek to persuade his client to permit him to invest in an undertaking of his client nor make improper use of his professional relationship to influence his client to invest in an enterprise in which the lawyer is interested."

With regard to Rule 1.8(b), DR 4-101(B)(3) provides that a lawyer shall not "use a confidence or secret of his client for the advantage of himself, or of a third person, unless the client consents after full disclosure."

There is no counterpart to Rule 1.8(c) in the Disciplinary Rules of the Code. EC 5-5 states that "A lawyer should not suggest to his client that a gift be made to himself or for his benefit. If a lawyer accepts a gift from his client, he is peculiarly susceptible to the charge that he unduly influenced or overreached the client. If a client voluntarily offers to make a gift to his lawyer, the lawyer may accept the gift, but before doing so, he should urge that the client secure disinterested advice from an independent, competent person who is cognizant of all the circumstances. Other than in exceptional circumstances, a lawyer should insist that an instrument in which his client desires to name him beneficially be prepared by another lawyer selected by the client."

Rule 1.8(d) is substantially similar to DR 5-104(B), but refers to "literary or media" rights, a more generally inclusive term than "publication" rights.

Rule 1.8(e)(1) is similar to DR 5-103(B), but eliminates the requirement that "the client remain ultimately liable for such expenses."

Rule 1.8(e)(2) has no counterpart in the Code.

Rule 1.8(f) is substantially identical to DR 5-107(A)(1).

Rule 1.8(g) is substantially identical to DR 5-106.

The first clause of Rule 1.8(h) deals with the same subject as DR 6-102(A). There is no counterpart in the Code to the second clause of Rule 1.8(h).

Rule 1.8(i) has no counterpart in the Code.

Financial assistance to client.

Attorney was suspended for 90 days for violating the reporting requirement of Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.8(e) where he subsequently self-reported that he had made 555 advances to 67 clients over a 3-year period totaling more than $ 160,000, the majority of which were for basic necessities such as utilities, rent, food, travel, medical, and other living expenses. The tribunal specifically found no violation of the stated interest to protect against "buying clients" but it expressed concern over the potential for harm if attorneys were allowed to give the impression that they had a revolving credit plan for prospective clients. Miss. Bar v. Shaw, 919 So. 2d 51 (Miss. 2005).

The Standing Committee on Ethics erred in its conclusion that Rule 1.8(e) absolutely prohibits the advance of medical insurance premiums by attorneys to their needy clients and in failing to consider limited approval that would allow monthly payments subject to reasonable restrictions and re-application as needed. In re G.M., 797 So. 2d 931 (Miss. 2001).

The action of loaning a client money to pay some of her medical and living expenses was not a violation of Rule 1.8(e) where the amount of funds advanced to the client was less than the limit of $1,500 set out in the amended Rule 1.8(e). Attorney AAA v. Mississippi Bar, 735 So. 2d 294 (Miss. 1999).

Attorney's advancement of personal living expenses to his indigent client violated Rules of Professional Conduct, and attorney was subjected to a private reprimand. Mississippi Bar v. Attorney HH, 671 So. 2d 1293 (Miss. 1995).

Living expenses.

State supreme court granted a petition that relaxed the requirements in Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.8(e)(2) for period of 90 days such that attorneys could advance living expenses to clients who lived, or had lived, in a county that had been declared a federal disaster area by the President of the United States. In re Rules of Prof'l Conduct, — So. 2d —, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 663 (Miss. Sept. 30, 2005).

Settlements.

Disclosures specified under Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.8(g), regarding settlements on behalf of multiple claimants, require disclosures of the existence and nature of all the claims or pleas involved and of the participation of each person in the settlement. Waggoner v. Williamson, 8 So. 3d 147 (Miss. 2009).

Attorneys sued by clients regarding a settlement of the clients' personal injury claims were not entitled to partial summary judgment because the clients said that, despite agreeing, in the settlement with the party sued on the clients' behalf, to abide by Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.8, the attorneys did not reveal to the clients, inter alia, the existence and amount of an aggregate settlement which included the clients' claim. Waggoner v. Williamson, 8 So. 3d 147 (Miss. 2009).

Rule 1.9. Conflict of interest: former client.

A lawyer who has formerly represented a client in a matter shall not thereafter:

(a) represent another in the same or a substantially related matter in which that person's interests are materially adverse to the interests of the former client unless the former client consents after consultation; or

(b) use information relating to the representation to the disadvantage of the former client except as Rule 1.6 would permit with respect to a client or when the information has become generally known.

COMMENT

After termination of a client-lawyer relationship, a lawyer may not represent another client except in conformity with this Rule. The principles in Rule 1.7 determine whether the interests of the present and former client are adverse. Thus, a lawyer could not properly seek to rescind on behalf of a new client a contract drafted on behalf of the former client. So also a lawyer who has prosecuted an accused person could not properly represent the accused in subsequent civil action against the government concerning the same transaction.

The scope of a "matter" for purposes of Rule 1.9(a) may depend on the facts of a particular situation or transaction. The lawyer's involvement in a matter can also be a question of degree. When a lawyer has been directly involved in a specific transaction, subsequent representation of other clients with materially adverse interests clearly is prohibited. On the other hand, a lawyer who recurrently handled a type of problem for a former client is not precluded from later representing another client in a wholly distinct problem of that type even though the subsequent representation involves a position adverse to the prior client. Similar considerations can apply to the reassignment of military lawyers between defense and prosecution functions within the same military jurisdiction. The underlying question is whether the lawyer was so involved in the matter that the subsequent representation can be justly regarded as a changing of sides in the matter in question.

Information acquired by the lawyer in the course of representing a client may not subsequently be used by the lawyer to the disadvantage of the client. However, the fact that a lawyer has once served a client does not preclude the lawyer from using generally known information about that client when later representing another client.

Disqualification from subsequent representation is for the protection of clients and can be waived only by them. A waiver is effective only if there is disclosure of the circumstances, including the lawyer's intended role in behalf of a new client.

With regard to an opposing party's raising a question of conflict of interest, see Comment to Rule 1.7. With regard to disqualification of a firm with which a lawyer is associated, see Rule 1.10.

CODE COMPARISON

There is no counterpart to Rule 1.9(a) or (b) in the Disciplinary Rules of the Code. The problem addressed in Rule 1.9(a) sometimes has been dealt with under the rubric of Canon 9 of the Code, which provides that "A lawyer should avoid even the appearance of impropriety." EC 4-6 states that "the obligation of a lawyer to preserve the confidences and secrets of his client continues after the termination of his employment."

The exception in the last sentence of Rule 1.9(b) permits a lawyer to use information relating to a former client that is in the "public domain," a use that is also not prohibited by the Code. Since the scope of Rule 1.6(a) is much broader than "confidences and secrets," it is necessary to define when a lawyer may make use of information after the client-lawyer relationship has terminated.

The provision for waiver by the former client is in effect similar to DR 5-105(C).

The wife's attorney in a divorce proceeding was not subject to disqualification based on a conflict of interest since his prior representation of the parties in probate matters and in litigation against a former business partner was not substantially related to the divorce proceeding. Law firm's representation of corporations one and two in their suit concerning an alleged coup by corporation three to gain control of hybrid automobile technology, investments, and contracts that the parties had been working on jointly violated Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.9 because (1) there was a former attorney-client relationship between the firm and corporation three, evidenced by a retainer agreement; (2) there was a substantial relationship between the firm's prior representation of corporation three and its current representation of plaintiffs, as there was evidence that the firm was also working on issues related to corporation three's ownership and corporate structure, which issues were central in the instant litigation; and (3) the firm had information regarding corporate structure that it believed was contrary to corporation three's position. Rule 1.10. Imputed disqualification: general rule.

(a) While lawyers are associated in a firm, none of them shall knowingly represent a client when any one of them practicing alone would be prohibited from doing so by Rules 1.7, 1.8(c), 1.9 or 2.4.

(b) When a lawyer becomes associated with a firm, the firm may not knowingly represent a person in the same or a substantially related matter in which that lawyer, or a firm with which the lawyer was associated, had previously represented a client whose interests are materially adverse to that person and about whom the lawyer had acquired information protected by Rules 1.6 and 1.9(b) that is material to the matter.

(c) When a lawyer has terminated an association with a firm, the firm is not prohibited from thereafter representing a person with interests materially adverse to those of a client represented by the formerly associated lawyer unless:

(1) the matter is the same or substantially related to that in which the formerly associated lawyer represented the client; and

(2) any lawyer remaining in the firm has information protected by Rules 1.6 and 1.9(b) that is material to the matter.

(d) A disqualification prescribed by this Rule may be waived by the affected client under the conditions stated in Rule 1.7. (Amended effective November 3, 2005 to add reference to Rule 2.4.)

COMMENT

Definition of "Firm". — For purposes of the Rules of Professional Conduct, the term "firm" includes lawyers in a private firm, and lawyers employed in the legal department of a corporation or other organization. Whether two or more lawyers constitute a firm within this definition can depend on the specific facts. For example, two practitioners who share office space and occasionally consult or assist each other ordinarily would not be regarded as constituting a firm. However, if they present themselves to the public in a way suggesting that they are a firm or conduct themselves as a firm, they should be regarded as a firm for purposes of the Rules. The terms of any formal agreement between associated lawyers are relevant in determining whether they are a firm, as is the fact that they have mutual access to confidential information concerning the clients they serve. Furthermore, it is relevant in doubtful cases to consider the underlying purpose of the rule that is involved. A group of lawyers could be regarded as a firm for purposes of the rule that the same lawyer should not represent opposing parties in litigation, while it might not be so regarded for purposes of the rule that information acquired by one lawyer is attributed to another.

With respect to the law department of an organization, there is ordinarily no question that the members of the department constitute a firm within the meaning of the Rules of Professional Conduct. However, there can be uncertainty as to the identity of the client. For example, it may not be clear whether a law department of a corporation represents a subsidiary or an affiliated corporation, as well as the corporation by which the members of the department are directly employed. A similar question can arise concerning an unincorporated association and its local affiliates.

Similar questions can also arise with respect to lawyers in legal aid. Lawyers employed in the same unit of a legal service organization constitute a firm, but not necessarily those employed in separate units. As in the case of independent practitioners, whether the lawyers should be treated as associated with each other can depend on the particular rule that is involved, and on the specific facts of the situation.

Where a lawyer has joined a private firm after having represented the government, the situation is governed by Rule 1.11(a) and (b); where a lawyer represents the government after having served private clients, the situation is governed by Rule 1.11(c)(1). The individual lawyer involved is bound by the Rules generally, including Rules 1.6, 1.7, and 1.9.

Different provisions are thus made for movement of a lawyer from one private firm to another and for movement of a lawyer between a private firm and the government. The government is entitled to protection of its client confidences, and therefore to the protections provided in Rules 1.6, 1.9, and 1.11. However, if the more extensive disqualification in Rule 1.10 were applied to former government lawyers, the potential effect on the government would be unduly burdensome. The government deals with all private citizens and organizations, and thus has a much wider circle of adverse legal interests than does any private law firm. In these circumstances, the government's recruitment of lawyers would be seriously impaired if Rule 1.10 were applied to the government. On balance, therefore, the government is better served in the long run by the protections stated in Rule 1.11.

Principles of Imputed Disqualifications. — The rule of imputed disqualification stated in paragraph (a) gives effect to the principles of loyalty to the client as it applies to lawyers who practice in a law firm. Such situations can be considered from the premise that a firm of lawyers is essentially one lawyer for purposes of the rules governing loyalty to the client, or from the premise that each lawyer is vicariously bound by the obligation of loyalty owned by each lawyer with whom the lawyer is associated. Paragraph (a) operates only among the lawyers currently associated in a firm. When a lawyer moves from one firm to another, the situation is governed by paragraphs (b) and (c).

Lawyers Moving Between Firms. — When lawyers have been associated in a firm but then end their association, however, the problem is more complicated. The fiction that the law firm is the same as a single lawyer is no longer wholly realistic. There are several competing considerations. First, the client previously represented must be reasonably assured that the principle of loyalty to the client is not compromised. Second, the rule of disqualification should not be so broadly cast as to preclude other persons from having reasonable choice of legal counsel. Third, the rule of disqualification should not unreasonably hamper lawyers from forming new associations and taking on new clients after having left a previous association. In this connection, it should be recognized that today many lawyers practice in firms, that many to some degree limit their practice to one field or another, and that many move from one association to another several times in their careers. If the concept of imputed disqualification were defined with unqualified rigor, the result would be radical curtailment of the opportunity of lawyers to move from one practice setting to another and the opportunity of clients to change counsel.

Reconciliation of these competing principles in the past has been attempted under two rubrics. One approach has been to seek per se rules of disqualification. For example, it has been held that a partner in a law firm is conclusively presumed to have access to all confidences concerning all clients of the firm. Under this analysis, if a lawyer has been a partner in one law firm and then becomes a partner in another law firm, there is a presumption that all confidences known by a partner in the first firm are known to all partners in the second firm. This presumption might properly be applied in some circumstances, especially where the client has been extensively represented, but may be unrealistic where the client was represented only for limited purposes. Furthermore, such a rigid rule exaggerates the difference between a partner and an associate in modern law firms.

The other rubric formerly used for dealing with vicarious disqualification is the appearance of impropriety proscribed in Canon 9 of the Code of Professional Responsibility. This rubric has a two-fold problem. First, the appearance of impropriety can be taken to include any new client-lawyer relationship that might make a former client feel anxious. If that meaning were adopted, disqualification would become little more than a question of subjective judgment by the former client. Second, since "impropriety" is undefined, the term "appearance of impropriety" is question-begging. It therefore has to be recognized that the problem of imputed disqualification cannot be properly resolved either by simple analogy to a lawyer practicing alone or by the very general concept of appearance of impropriety.

A rule based on a functional analysis is more appropriate for determining the question of vicarious disqualification. Two functions are involved: preserving confidentiality and avoiding positions adverse to a client.

Confidentiality. — Preserving confidentiality is a question of access to information. Access to information, in turn, is essentially a question of fact in particular circumstances, aided by inferences, deductions or working presumptions that reasonably may be made about the way in which lawyers work together. A lawyer may have general access to files of all clients of a law firm and may regularly participate in discussions of their affairs; it should be inferred that such a lawyer in fact is privy to all information about all the firm's clients. In contrast, another lawyer may have access to the files of only a limited number of clients and participate in discussion of the affairs of no other clients; in the absence of information to the contrary, it should be inferred that such a lawyer in fact is privy to information about the clients actually served but not those of other clients.

Application of paragraphs (b) and (c) depends on a situation's particular facts. In any such inquiry, the burden of proof should rest upon the firm whose disqualification is sought.

Paragraphs (b) and (c) operate to disqualify the firm only when the lawyer involved has actual knowledge of information protected by Rules 1.6 and 1.9(b). Thus, if a lawyer while with one firm acquired no knowledge of information relating to a particular client of the firm, and that lawyer later joined another firm, neither the lawyer individually nor the second firm is disqualified from representing another client in the same or a related matter even though the interests of the two clients conflict.

Independent of the question of disqualification of a firm, a lawyer changing professional association has a continuing duty to preserve confidentiality of information about a client formerly represented. See Rules 1.6 and 1.9.

Adverse Positions. — The second aspect of loyalty to a client is the lawyer's obligation to decline subsequent representations involving positions adverse to a former client arising in substantially related matters. This obligation requires abstention from adverse representation by the individual lawyer involved, but does not properly entail abstention of other lawyers through imputed disqualification. Hence, this aspect of the problem is governed by Rule 1.9(a). Thus, if a lawyer left one firm for another, the new affiliation would not preclude the firms involved from continuing to represent clients with adverse interests in the same or related matters, so long as the conditions of Rule 1.10(b) and (c) concerning confidentiality have been met.

Rule 1.11. Successive government and private employment.

(a) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer shall not represent a private client in connection with a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially as a public officer or employee, unless the appropriate government agency consents after consultation. No lawyer in a firm with which that lawyer is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in such a matter unless:

(1) the disqualified lawyer is screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom; and

(2) written notice is promptly given to the appropriate government agency to enable it to ascertain compliance with the provisions of this rule.

(b) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer having information that the lawyer knows is confidential government information about a person acquired when the lawyer was a public officer or employee, may not represent a private client whose interests are adverse to that person in a matter in which the information could be used to the material disadvantage of that person. A firm with which that lawyer is associated may undertake or continue representation in the matter only if the disqualified lawyer is screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom.

(c) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer serving as a public officer or employee shall not:

(1) participate in a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially while in private practice or nongovernmental employment, unless under applicable law no one is, or by lawful delegation may be, authorized to act in the lawyer's stead in the matter; or

(2) negotiate for private employment with any person who is involved as a party or as attorney for a party in a matter in which the lawyer is participating personally and substantially.

(d) As used in this Rule, the term "matter" includes:

(1) any judicial or other proceeding, application, request for a ruling or other determination, contract, claim, controversy, investigation, charge, accusation, arrest or other particular matter involving a specific party or parties; and

(2) any other matter covered by the conflict of interest rules of the appropriate government agency.

(e) As used in this Rule, the term "confidential government information" means information which has been obtained under governmental authority and which, at the time this Rule is applied, the government is prohibited by law from disclosing to the public or has a legal privilege not to disclose, and which is not otherwise available to the public.

COMMENT

This Rule prevents a lawyer from exploiting public office for the advantage of a private client. It is a counterpart of Rule 1.10(b), which applies to lawyers moving from one firm to another.

A lawyer representing a government agency, whether employed or specially retained by the government, is subject to the Rules of Professional Conduct, including the prohibition against representing adverse interests stated in Rule 1.7 and the protections afforded former clients in Rule 1.9. In addition, such a lawyer is subject to Rule 1.11 and to statutes and government regulations regarding conflict of interest. Such statutes and regulations may circumscribe the extent to which the government agency may give consent under this Rule.

Where the successive clients are a public agency and a private client, the risk exists that power or discretion vested in public authority might be used for the special benefit of a private client. A lawyer should not be in a position where benefit to a private client might affect performance of the lawyer's professional functions on behalf of public authority. Also, unfair advantage could accrue to the private client by reason of access to confidential government information about the client's adversary obtainable only through the lawyer's government service. However, the rules governing lawyers presently or formerly employed by a government agency should not be so restrictive as to inhibit transfer of employment to and from the government. The government has a legitimate need to attract qualified lawyers as well as to maintain high ethical standards. The provisions for screening and waiver are necessary to prevent the disqualification rule from imposing too severe a deterrent against entering public service.

When the client is an agency of one government, that agency should be treated as a private client for purposes of this Rule if the lawyer thereafter represents an agency of another government, as when a lawyer represents a city and subsequently is employed by a federal agency.

Paragraphs (a)(1) and (b) do not prohibit a lawyer from receiving a salary or partnership share established by prior independent agreement. They prohibit directly relating the attorney's compensation to the fee in the matter in which the lawyer is disqualified.

Paragraph (a)(2) does not require that a lawyer give notice to the government agency at a time when premature disclosure would injure the client; a requirement for premature disclosure might preclude engagement of the lawyer. Such notice is, however, required to be given as soon as practicable in order that the government agency will have a reasonable opportunity to ascertain that the lawyer is complying with Rule 1.11 and to take appropriate action if it believes the lawyer is not complying.

Paragraph (b) operates only when the lawyer in question has knowledge of the information, which means actual knowledge; it does not operate with respect to information that merely could be imputed to the lawyer.

Paragraphs (a) and (c) do not prohibit a lawyer from jointly representing a private party and a government agency when doing so is permitted by Rule 1.7 and is not otherwise prohibited by law.

Paragraph (c) does not disqualify other lawyers in the agency with which the lawyer in question has become associated.

CODE COMPARISON

Rule 1.11(a) is similar to DR 9-101(B), except that the latter uses the terms "in which he had substantial responsibility while he was a public employee."

Rules 1.11(b), (c), (d) and (e) have no counterparts in the Code.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Disqualification not necessary.

Disqualification not necessary.

In a murder trial, no disqualification of a prosecutor was necessary due to a conflict of interest under Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.11(a), (b) based on the fact that defendant's former attorney worked in the prosecutor's office; the former attorney gave the required notice to the public defender's office under Aldridge v. State, 583 So. 2d 203 (Miss. 1991) and the former attorney was required to notify the other party, which did not mean that she had to notify defendant directly. Ousley v. State, 984 So. 2d 996 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), affirmed by 984 So. 2d 985, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 338 (Miss. 2008).

Sanctions.

Imposition of a public reprimand against the attorney in her disciplinary proceeding was appropriate pursuant to Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.11 and Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.12(a) because the judge represented a party in a case related to one over which she formerly presided as a judge, which was in violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct; the only way she could have represented anyone in connection with the former case was if all parties had given informed consent, which did not occur. James v. Miss. Bar, 962 So. 2d 528 (Miss. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 555 U.S. 826, 129 S. Ct. 160, 172 L. Ed. 2d 42, 2008 U.S. LEXIS 6447, 77 U.S.L.W. 3197 (2008).

Rule 1.12. Former judge or arbitrator.

(a) Except as stated in paragraph (d), a lawyer shall not represent anyone in connection with a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially as a judge or other adjudicative officer, or law clerk to such person or as an arbitrator, mediator or other third-party neutral, unless all parties to the proceeding give informed consent confirmed in writing.

(b) A lawyer shall not negotiate for employment with any person who is involved as a party or as an attorney for a party in a matter in which the lawyer is participating personally and substantially as a judge or other adjudicative officer, or as a law clerk to such a person or as an arbitrator, mediator, or other third-party neutral.

(c) If a lawyer is disqualified by paragraph (a), no lawyer in a firm with which that lawyer is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in the matter unless:

(1) the disqualified lawyer is screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom; and

(2) written notice is promptly given to the appropriate tribunal to enable it to ascertain compliance with the provisions of this rule.

(d) An arbitrator selected as a partisan of a party in a multi-member arbitration panel is not prohibited from subsequently representing that party. (Amended effective November 3, 2005 to include third party neutrals generally.)

COMMENT

This Rule generally parallels Rule 1.11. The term "personally and substantially" signifies that a judge who was a member of a multimember court, and thereafter left judicial office to practice law, is not prohibited from representing a client in a matter pending in the court, but in which the former judge did not participate. So also the fact that a former judge exercised administrative responsibility in a court does not prevent the former judge from acting as a lawyer in a matter where the judge had previously exercised remote or incidental administrative responsibility that did not affect the merits. Compare the Comment to Rule 1.11. The term "adjudicative officer" includes such officials as judges pro tempore, referees, special masters, hearing officers and other parajudicial officers, and also lawyers who serve as part-time judges.

Like former judges, lawyers who have served as arbitrators, mediators or other third-party neutrals may be asked to represent a client in a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially. This Rule forbids such representation unless all of the parties to the proceedings give their informed consent, confirmed in writing. See Terminology. Other law or codes of ethics governing third-party neutrals may impose more stringent standards of personal or imputed disqualification. Rule 2.4.

Although lawyers who serve as third-party neutrals do not have information concerning the parties that is protected under Rule 1.6, they typically owe the parties an obligation of confidentiality under law or codes of ethics governing third-party neutrals. Thus, paragraph (c) provides that conflicts of the personally disqualified lawyer will be imputed to other lawyers in a law firm unless the conditions of this paragraph are met.

Requirements for screening procedures are stated in Terminology. Paragraph (c)(1) does not prohibit the screened lawyer from receiving a salary or partnership share established by prior independent agreement, but that lawyer may not receive compensation directly related to the matter in which the lawyer is disqualified.

Notice, including a description of the screened lawyer's prior representation and of the screening procedures employed, generally should be given as soon as practicable after the need for screening becomes apparent.

[Amended effective November 3, 2005.]

CODE COMPARISON

Paragraph (a) is substantially similar to DR 9-101(A), which provides that "A lawyer shall not accept employment in a matter upon the merits of which he has acted in a judicial capacity." Paragraph (a) differs, however, in that it is broader in scope and states more specifically the persons to whom it applies. There is no counterpart in the Code to paragraphs (b), (c) or (d).

With regard to arbitrators, EC 5-20 states that "a lawyer who has undertaken to act as an impartial arbitrator or mediator, ... should not thereafter represent in the dispute any of the parties involved." DR 9-101(A) does not provide a waiver of the disqualification applied to former judges by consent of the parties. However, DR 5-105(C) is similar in effect and could be construed to permit waiver.

Disqualification of an attorney.

Appellate court affirmed the disqualification of the mother's new counsel pursuant to Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.12 in her motion to modify custody as the mother's attorney's role as chancellor in the parties' prior custody issues constituted substantial participation in the litigation. J.N.W.E. v. W.D.W., 922 So. 2d 12 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 926 So. 2d 922, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 129 (Miss. 2006).

Appellate court upheld a trial court's decision to deny the mother's motion to disqualify the father's attorney, because even though the appellate court may have reached a different decision, it was obligated to give deference to the trial court's findings that the father's attorney had not acted as judge in a prior custody issue between the parties. J.N.W.E. v. W.D.W., 922 So. 2d 12 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 926 So. 2d 922, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 129 (Miss. 2006).

Sanctions.

Imposition of a public reprimand against the attorney in her disciplinary proceeding was appropriate pursuant to Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.11 and Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.12(a) because the judge represented a party in a case related to one over which she formerly presided as a judge, which was in violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct; the only way she could have represented anyone in connection with the former case was if all parties had given informed consent, which did not occur. James v. Miss. Bar, 962 So. 2d 528 (Miss. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 555 U.S. 826, 129 S. Ct. 160, 172 L. Ed. 2d 42, 2008 U.S. LEXIS 6447, 77 U.S.L.W. 3197 (2008).

— Reprimand.

Judge who served part-time—pro tem as a municipal court judge, and also engaged in private criminal defense practice, received sanction of public reprimand for assuming role of attorney, and presumably accepting a fee, for representing a defendant and attempting to reduce the same bond which he, as city judge, had earlier set for that defendant. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Atkinson, 645 So. 2d 1331 (Miss. 1994).

Rule 1.13. Organization as client.

(a) A lawyer employed or retained by an organization represents the organization acting through its duly authorized constituents.

(b) If a lawyer for an organization knows that an officer, employee or other person associated with the organization is engaged in action, intends to act or refuses to act in a matter related to the representation that is a violation of a legal obligation to the organization, or a violation of law which reasonably might be imputed to the organization, and is likely to result in substantial injury to the organization, the lawyer shall proceed as is reasonably necessary in the best interest of the organization. In determining how to proceed, the lawyer shall give due consideration to the seriousness of the violation and its consequences, the scope and nature of the lawyer's representation, the responsibility in the organization and the apparent motivation of the person involved, the policies of the organization concerning such matters and any other relevant considerations. Any measures taken shall be designed to minimize disruption of the organization and the risk of revealing information relating to the representation to persons outside the organization. Such measures may include among others:

(1) asking reconsideration of the matter;

(2) advising that a separate legal opinion on the matter be sought for presentation to appropriate authority in the organization; and

(3) referring the matter to higher authority in the organization, including, if warranted by the seriousness of the matter, referral to the highest authority that can act in behalf of the organization as determined by applicable law.

(c) If, despite the lawyer's efforts in accordance with paragraph (b), the highest authority that can act on behalf of the organization insists upon action, or a refusal to act, that is clearly a violation of law and is likely to result in substantial injury to the organization, the lawyer may resign in accordance with Rule 1.16.

(d) In dealing with an organization's directors, officers, employees, members, shareholders or other constituents, a lawyer shall explain the identity of the client when it is apparent that the organization's interests are adverse to those of the constituents with whom the lawyer is dealing.

(e) A lawyer representing an organization may also represent any of its directors, officers, employees, members, shareholders or other constituents, object on the provisions of Rule 1.7. If the organization's consent to the dual representation is required by Rule 1.7, the consent shall be given by an appropriate official of the organization other than the individual who is to be represented, or by the shareholders.

COMMENT

The Entity as the Client. — An organizational client is a legal entity, but it cannot act except through its officers, directors, employees, shareholders and other constituents.

Officers, directors, employees and shareholders are the constituents of the corporate organizational client. The duties defined in this Comment apply equally to unincorporated associations. "Other constituents" as used in this Comment means the positions equivalent to officers, directors, employees and shareholders held by persons acting for organizational clients that are not corporations.

When one of the constituents of an organizational client communicates with the organization's lawyer in that person's organizational capacity, the communication is protected by Rule 1.6. Thus, by way of example, if an organizational client requests its lawyer to investigate allegations of wrongdoing, interviews made in the course of that investigation between the lawyer and the client's employees or other constituents are covered by Rule 1.6. This does not mean, however, that constituents of an organizational client are the clients of the lawyer. The lawyer may not disclose to such constituents information relating to the representation except for disclosures explicitly or impliedly authorized by the organizational client in order to carry out the representation or as otherwise permitted by Rule 1.6.

When constituents of the organization make decisions for it, the decisions ordinarily must be accepted by the lawyer even if their utility or prudence is doubtful. Decisions concerning policy and operations, including ones entailing serious risk, are not as such in the lawyer's province. However, different considerations arise when the lawyer knows that the organization may be substantially injured by action of a constituent that is in violation of law. In such a circumstance, it may be reasonably necessary for the lawyer to ask the constituent to reconsider the matter. If that fails, or if the matter is of sufficient seriousness and importance to the organization, it may be reasonably necessary for the lawyer to take steps to have the matter reviewed by a higher authority in the organization. Clear justification should exist for seeking review over the head of the constituent normally responsible for it. The stated policy of the organization may define circumstances and prescribe channels for such review, and a lawyer should encourage the formulation of such a policy. Even in the absence of organization policy, however, the lawyer may have an obligation to refer a matter to higher authority, depending on the seriousness of the matter and whether the constituent in question has apparent motives to act at variance with the organization's interest. Review by the chief executive officer or by the board of directors may be required when the matter is of importance commensurate with their authority. At some point it may be useful or essential to obtain an independent legal opinion.

In an extreme case, it may be reasonably necessary for the lawyer to refer the matter to the organization's highest authority. Ordinarily, that is the board of directors or similar governing body. However, applicable law may prescribe that under certain conditions highest authority reposes elsewhere; for example, in the independent directors of a corporation.

Relation to Other Rules. — The authority and responsibility provided in paragraph (b) are concurrent with the authority and responsibility provided in other rules. In particular, this Rule does not limit or expand the lawyer's responsibility under Rules 1.6, 1.8 and 1.16, 3.3 or 4.1. If the lawyer's services are being used by an organization to further a crime or fraud by the organization, Rule 1.2(d) can be applicable.

Government Agency. — The duty defined in this Rule applies to governmental organizations. However, when the client is a governmental organization, a different balance may be appropriate between maintaining confidentiality and assuring that the wrongful official act is prevented or rectified, for public business is involved. In addition, duties of lawyers employed by the government or lawyers in military service may be defined by statutes and regulation. Therefore, defining precisely the identity of the client and prescribing the resulting obligations of such lawyers may be more difficult in the government context. Although in some circumstances the client may be a specific agency, it is generally the government as a whole. For example, if the action or failure to act involves the head of a bureau, either the department of which the bureau is a part or the government as a whole may be the client for purpose of this Rule. Moreover, in a matter involving the conduct of government officials, a government lawyer may have authority to question such conduct more extensively than that of a lawyer for a private organization in similar circumstances. This Rule does not limit that authority. See note on Scope.

Clarifying the Lawyer's Role. — There are times when the organization's interest may be or become adverse to those of one or more of its constituents. In such circumstances the lawyer should advise any constituent, whose interest the lawyer finds adverse to that of the organization, of the conflict or potential conflict of interest, that the lawyer cannot represent such constituent, and that such person may wish to obtain independent representation. Care must be taken to assure that the individual understands that, when there is such adversity of interest, the lawyer for the organization cannot provide legal representation for that constituent individual, and that discussions between the lawyer for the organization and the individual may not be privileged.

Dual Representation. — Paragraph (e) recognizes that a lawyer for an organization may also represent a principal officer or shareholder.

Derivative Actions. — Under generally prevailing law, the shareholders or members of a corporation may bring suit to compel the directors to perform their legal obligations in the supervision of the organization. Members of unincorporated associations have essentially the same right. Such an action may be brought nominally by the organization, but usually is, in fact, a legal controversy over management of the organization.

The question can arise whether counsel for the organization may defend such an action. The proposition that the organization is the lawyer's client does not alone resolve the issue. Most derivative actions are a normal incident of an organization's affairs, to be defended by the organization's lawyer like any other suit. However, if the claim involves serious charges of wrongdoing by those in control of the organization, a conflict may arise between the lawyer's duty to the organization and the lawyer's relationship with the board. In those circumstances, Rule 1.7 governs who should represent the directors and the organization.

CODE COMPARISON

There is no counterpart to this Rule in the Disciplinary Rules of the Code. EC 5-18 states that "A lawyer employed or retained by a corporation or similar entity owes his allegiance to the entity and not to a stockholder, director, officer, employee, representative, or other person connected with the entity. In advising the entity, a lawyer should keep paramount its interests and his professional judgment should not be influenced by the personal desires of any person or organization. Occasionally, a lawyer for an entity is requested by a stockholder, director, officer, employee, representative, or other person connected with the entity to represent him in an individual capacity; in such a case the lawyer may serve the individual only if the lawyer is convinced that differing interests are not present." EC 5-24 states "Although a lawyer may be employed by a business corporation with non-lawyers serving as directors or officers, and they necessarily have the right to make decisions of business policy, a lawyer must decline to accept direction of his professional judgment from any layman." DR 5-107(B) provides that "a lawyer shall not permit a person who ... employs ... him to render legal services for another to direct or regulate his professional judgment in rendering such legal services."

Rule 1.14. Client under a disability.

(a) When a client's ability to make adequately considered decisions in connection with the representation is impaired, whether because of minority, mental disability or for some other reason, the lawyer shall, as far as reasonably possible, maintain a normal client-lawyer relationship with the client.

(b) A lawyer may seek the appointment of a guardian or take other protective action with respect to a client, only when the lawyer reasonably believes that the client cannot adequately act in the client's own interest.

(c) Information relating to the representation of a client who may be impaired is protected by Rule 1.6. When taking protective action pursuant to paragraph (b), the lawyer is impliedly authorized under Rule 1.6(a) to reveal information about the client, but only to the extent necessary to protect the client's interest. (Amended effective November 3, 2005 to add subsection (c).)

COMMENT

The normal client-lawyer relationship is based on the assumption that the client, when properly advised and assisted, is capable of making decisions about important matters. When the client is a minor or suffers from a mental disorder or disability, however, maintaining the ordinary client-lawyer relationship may not be possible in all respects. In particular, an incapacitated person may have no power to make legally binding decisions. Nevertheless, a client lacking legal competence often has the ability to understand, deliberate upon, and reach conclusions about matters affecting the client's own well-being. Furthermore, to an increasing extent the law recognizes intermediate degrees of competence. For example, children as young as five or six years of age, and certainly those of ten or twelve, are regarded as having opinions that are entitled to weight in legal proceedings concerning their custody. So also, it is recognized that some persons of advanced age can be quite capable of handling routine financial matters while needing special legal protection concerning major transactions.

The fact that a client suffers a disability does not diminish the lawyer's obligation to treat the client with attention and respect. If the person has no guardian or legal representative, the lawyer often must act as de facto guardian. Even if the person does have a legal representative, the lawyer should as far as possible accord the represented person the status of client, particularly in maintaining communication.

If a legal representative has already been appointed for the client, the lawyer should ordinarily look to the representative for decisions on behalf of the client. If a legal representative has not been appointed, the lawyer should see to such an appointment where it would serve the client's best interests. Thus, if a disabled client has substantial property that should be sold for the client's benefit, effective completion of the transaction ordinarily requires appointment of a legal representative. In many circumstances, however, appointment of a legal representative may be expensive or traumatic for the client. Evaluation of these considerations is a matter of professional judgment on the lawyer's part.

If the lawyer represents the guardian as distinct from the ward, and is aware that the guardian is acting adversely to the ward's interest, the lawyer may have an obligation to prevent or rectify the guardian's misconduct. See Rule 1.2(d).

Disclosure of the Client's Condition. — Rules of procedure in litigation generally provide that minors or persons suffering a mental disability shall be represented by a guardian or next friend if they do not have a general guardian. However, disclosure of the client's disability could, in some circumstances, lead to proceedings for involuntary commitment. Information relating to the representation is protected by Rule 1.6. Therefore, unless authorized to do so, the lawyer may not disclose such information. When taking protective action pursuant to paragraph (b), the lawyer is impliedly authorized to make the necessary disclosures, even when the client directs the lawyer to the contrary. Nevertheless, given the risks of disclosure, paragraph (c) limits what the lawyer may disclose in consulting with other individuals or entities or seeking the appointment of a legal representative. At the very least, the lawyer should determine whether it is likely that the person or entity consulted will act adversely to the client's interests before discussing matters related to the client. The lawyer's position in such cases is an unavoidably difficult one. The lawyer may seek guidance from an appropriate diagnostician.

There is no counterpart to this Rule in the Disciplinary Rules of the Code. EC 7-12 states that "Any mental or physical condition of a client that renders him incapable of making a considered judgment on his own behalf casts additional responsibilities upon his lawyer. Where an incompetent is acting through a guardian or other legal representative, a lawyer must look to such representative for those decisions which are normally the prerogative of the client to make. If a client under disability has no legal representative, his lawyer may be compelled in court proceedings to make decisions on behalf of the client. If the client is capable of understanding the matter in question or of contributing to the advancement of his interests, regardless of whether he is legally disqualified from performing certain acts, the lawyer should obtain from him all possible aid. If the disability of a client and the lack of a legal representative compel the lawyer to make decisions for his client, the lawyer should consider all circumstances then prevailing and act with care to safeguard and advance the interests of his client. But obviously a lawyer cannot perform any act or make any decision which the law requires his client to perform or make, either acting for himself if competent, or by a duly constituted representative if legally incompetent."

Rule 1.15. Safekeeping property.

(a) A lawyer shall hold clients' and third persons' property separate from the lawyer's own property. Funds shall be kept in a separate trust account maintained in the state where the lawyer's office is situated, or elsewhere with the consent of the client or third person. Other property shall be identified as such and appropriately safeguarded. Complete records of such trust account funds and other property shall be kept and preserved by the lawyer for a period of seven years after termination of the representation.

(b) Upon receiving funds or other property in which a client or third person has an interest, a lawyer shall promptly notify the client or third person. Except as stated in this Rule or otherwise permitted by law or by agreement with the client, a lawyer shall promptly deliver to the client or third person any funds or other property the client or third person is entitled to receive and, upon request by the client or third person, shall promptly render a full accounting regarding such property.

(c) When a lawyer is in possession of property in which both the lawyer and another person claim an interest, the property shall be kept separate by the lawyer until completion of an accounting and severance of their respective interests. If a dispute arises concerning their respective interests, the lawyer shall disburse the portion not in dispute, and keep separate the portion in dispute until the dispute is resolved.

(d) Except as provided in paragraph (f) of this rule, a lawyer or law firm shall create and maintain an interest- or dividend-bearing trust account (IOLTA Account) for all funds which are nominal or short term funds that cannot earn income for the client or third party in excess of the costs incurred to secure such income (IOLTA eligible Funds), pursuant to the following:

(1) All trust Funds shall be deposited in a lawyer's or law firm's IOLTA Account unless- in the lawyer's judgment - the funds can earn income for the client or third party in excess of the costs incurred to secure such income.

(2) No earnings from such an IOLTA Account shall be made available to a lawyer or law firm.

(3) IOLTA Accounts shall be established only with financial institutions:

(i) authorized by federal or state law to do business in Mississippi;

(ii) the deposits of which are insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation or the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation or any successors thereof;

(iii) which pay a rate of interest or dividend on IOLTA Accounts that is no less than the highest rate generally available to its own non-IOLTA Account depositors when the IOLTA Account meets the same minimum balance or other eligibility requirements, provided however that: (a) IOLTA Accounts may be maintained in an interest-bearing checking account or an interest or dividend-bearing account with check-writing and with a sweep feature which is tied to either a money market account insured by an agency of the federal government or a money market fund or daily overnight repurchase agreement invested solely in or fully collateralized by U.S. Government securities (defined as U.S. Treasury obligations and obligations issued or guaranteed as to principal and interest by the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof) so long as there is no impairment of the right to immediately withdraw and transfer principal as soon as permitted by law; (b) institutions may choose to pay these rates on a qualifying IOLTA checking account instead of establishing the higher rate product; and (c) institutions may also elect to pay a higher interest or dividend rate and may waive any fees on IOLTA Accounts.

(4) Financial institutions are prohibited from using interest from one IOLTA Account to pay fees or charges in excess of the interest earned on another IOLTA Account. If not waived by the financial institution, such fees, if any, are the responsibility of the lawyer or the law firm.

(5) Lawyers or law firms depositing funds in an IOLTA Account established pursuant to this rule shall direct the depository institution:

(i) to remit all interest, net of reasonable service charges or fees, if any, on the average monthly balance in the account, or as otherwise computed in accordance with the institution's standard accounting practice, at least quarterly, to the Mississippi Bar Foundation, Inc. For the purposes of this paragraph, reasonable services charges or fees shall not include fees for wire transfers, insufficient funds, bad checks, stop payments, account reconciliation, negative collected balances and check printing;

(ii) to transmit with each remittance to the Foundation a report showing the following information for each IOLTA Account: the name of the lawyer or law firm, the amount of interest or dividends earned, the rate and type of interest or dividend applied, the amount of any services charges or fees assessed during the remittance period, the net amount of interest or dividends remitted for the period, the average account balance for the period for which the interest was earned and such other information as is reasonably required by the Foundation;

(iii) to transmit to the depositing lawyer or law firm a periodic account statement in accordance with normal procedures for reporting to depositors.

(e) Any IOLTA Account which has or may have the net effect of costing the IOLTA program more in fees than earned in interest over a period of time may, at the discretion of the Foundation, be exempted from and removed from the IOLTA program. Exemption of an IOLTA Account from the IOLTA program revokes the permission to use the Foundation's tax identification number for that account. Exemption of such account from the IOLTA program shall not relieve the lawyer and/or law firm from the obligation to maintain the nominal or short term funds of clients and third persons separately, as required above, in a non-interest bearing account.

(f) Every lawyer admitted to practice in this State shall annually certify to this Court that all IOLTA eligible Funds are held in an IOLTA Account, or that the lawyer is exempt because the lawyer:

(1) is not engaged in the private practice of law;

(2) does not have an office within the State of Mississippi;

(3) is a judge, attorney general, public defender, U.S. attorney, district attorney, on duty with the armed services or employed by a local, state or federal government, and is not otherwise engaged in the private practice of law;

(4) is a corporate counsel or teacher of law and is not otherwise engaged in the private practice of law;

(5) has been exempted pursuant to Section (e) above; or

(6) has been exempted by an order of general or special application of this Court which is cited in the certification.

(g) In the exercise of a lawyer's good faith judgment in determining whether funds can earn income in excess of costs, a lawyer may take into consideration all reasonable factors including, without limitation:

(1) the amount of the funds to be deposited;

(2) the expected duration of the deposit, including the likelihood of delay in the matter for which the funds are held;

(3) the rates of interest or yield at the financial institutions where the funds are to be deposited;

(4) the cost of establishing and administering the account, including the cost of the lawyer's services, accounting fees, and tax reporting costs and procedures;

(5) the capability of a financial institution, a lawyer or a law firm to calculate and pay income to individual clients; and

(6) any other circumstances that affect the ability of the funds to earn a net return for the client.

(h) A lawyer shall review the IOLTA Account at reasonable intervals to determine whether changed circumstances require further action with respect to the funds of any client.

(i) The determination of whether funds are nominal or short-term so that they can not earn income in excess of costs shall rest in the sound judgment of the lawyer or law firm. No lawyer shall be charged with an ethical impropriety or other breach of professional conduct based on the good faith exercise of such judgment.

(j) A lawyer generally may not use, endanger, or encumber money held in trust for a client or third person without the permission of the owner given after full disclosure of the circumstances. Except for disbursements based upon any of the four categories of limited-risk uncollected deposits enumerated in paragraph (1) below, a lawyer may not disburse funds held in trust unless the funds are collected funds. For purposes of this provision, 'collected funds' means funds deposited, finally settled, and credited to the lawyer's trust account.

(1) Certain categories of trust account deposits are considered to carry a limited and acceptable risk of failure so that disbursements of trust account funds may be made in reliance on such deposits without disclosure to and permission of clients and third persons owning trust account funds that may be affected by such disbursements. Provided the lawyer has other sources of funds available at the time of disbursement (other than client or third party funds) sufficient to replace any uncollected funds, not withstanding that a deposit made to the lawyer's trust account has not been finally settled and credited to the account, the lawyer may disburse funds from the trust account in reliance on such deposit under any of the following circumstances:

(i) when the deposit is made by certified check or cashier's check;

(ii) when the deposit is made by a bank check, official check, treasurer's check, money order, or other such instrument where the payor is a bank, savings and loan association, or credit union;

(iii) when the deposit is made by a check issued by the United States, the State of Mississippi, or any agency or political subdivision of the State of Mississippi; or

(iv) when the deposit is made by a check or draft issued by an insurance company, title insurance company, or a licensed title insurance agency authorized to do business in the State of Mississippi.

In any of the above circumstances, a lawyer's disbursement of funds from a trust account in reliance on deposits that are not yet collected funds is at the risk of the lawyer making the disbursement. If any of the deposits fail, for any reason, the lawyer, upon obtaining knowledge of the failure, must immediately act to protect the property of the lawyer's clients and third persons. If the lawyer accepting any such check personally pays the amount of any failed deposit within three business days of receipt of notice that the deposit has failed, the lawyer will not be considered guilty of professional misconduct based upon the disbursement of uncollected funds.

(2) A lawyer's disbursement of funds from a trust account in reliance on deposits that are not yet collected funds in any circumstances other than those four categories set forth above, when it results in funds of clients or third persons being used, endangered, or encumbered, will be grounds for a finding of professional misconduct. (Amended effective August 1, 1993; amended effective November 3, 2005 to add new sub-section (h); amended effective January 1, 2007, to provide for mandatory IOLTA participation.)

COMMENT

A lawyer should hold property of others with the care required of a professional fiduciary. Securities should be kept in a safe deposit box, except when some other form of safekeeping is warranted by special circumstances. All property which is the property of clients or third persons should be kept separate from the lawyer's business and personal property and, if monies, in one or more trust accounts. Separate trust accounts may be warranted when administering estate monies or acting in similar fiduciary capacities.

Lawyers often receive funds from third parties from which the lawyer's fee will be paid. If there is a risk that the client may divert the funds without paying the fee, the lawyer is not required to remit the portion from which the fee is to be paid. However, a lawyer may not hold funds to coerce a client into accepting the lawyer's contention. The disputed portion of the funds should be kept in trust and the lawyer should suggest means for prompt resolution of the dispute, such as arbitration. The undisputed portion of the funds shall be promptly distributed.

Third parties, such as a client's creditors, may have just claims against funds or other property in a lawyer's custody. A lawyer may have a duty under applicable law to protect such third-party claims against wrongful interference by the client, and accordingly may refuse to surrender the property to the client. However, a lawyer should not unilaterally assume to arbitrate a dispute between the client and the third party.

The obligations of a lawyer under this Rule are independent of those arising from activity other than rendering legal services. For example, a lawyer who serves as an escrow agent is governed by the applicable law relating to fiduciaries even though the lawyer does not render legal services in the transaction.

Interest on Lawyer's Trust Accounts. — Each lawyer or law firm, unless specifically excluded in paragraph (f), is required to establish an IOLTA Account. Only IOLTA eligible funds - those nominal or short term funds that cannot earn income for the client or third party in excess of the costs incurred to secure such income - may be placed in the IOLTA Account. This definition of IOLTA eligible funds is in compliance with the decision in *Brown v. Legal Foundation of Washington,*538 U.S. 216 (2003), which upheld the constitutionality of the IOLTA concept.

No earnings on the IOLTA Accounts may be made available to or utilized by the lawyer or law firm. Upon the request of the client, earnings may be made available to the client whenever possible upon deposited funds which are neither nominal in amount nor to be held for a short period of time; however, traditional attorney client relationships do not compel lawyers either to invest clients' funds or to advise clients to make their funds productive.

IOLTA eligible funds shall be retained in an interest - or dividend - bearing trust account with the interest (net of any reasonable service charge or fees) made payable to the Mississippi Bar Foundation, Inc., said payments to be made by the financial institution at least quarterly. The determination of whether client or third party funds are nominal in amount or to be held for a short period of time so that they cannot earn net income over costs rests in the sound judgment of each lawyer or law firm and no charge of ethical impropriety or other breach of professional conduct shall attend a lawyer's exercise of judgment in that regard.

Annual certification required in (f) above shall be through a form that is made a part of the members's annual membership fees statement.

The decision to deposit client or third party funds in an IOLTA Account rests with the lawyers, so notification of such a deposit to clients whose funds are nominal in amount or to be held for a short period of time is unnecessary. This is not to suggest that many lawyers will not want to notify their clients of their participation in the program in some fashion. There is no impropriety in a lawyer or law firm advising all clients of how their participation advances the administration of justice in Mississippi.

Unclaimed Property. — Any lawyer holding property or monies belonging to clients with whom he has lost contact must retain and account for said funds, subject to the Mississippi Uniform Disposition of Unclaimed Property Act.

CODE COMPARISON

With regard to Rule 1.15(a), DR 9-102(A) provides that "funds of clients" are to be kept in a trust account in the state in which the lawyer's office is situated. DR 9-102(B)(2) provides that a lawyer shall "identify and label securities and properties of a client ... and place them in ... safekeeping ...." DR 9-102(B)(3) requires that a lawyer "maintain complete records of all funds, securities and other properties of a client ...." Rule 1.15(a) extends these requirements to property of a third person that is in the lawyer's possession in connection with the representation.

Rule 1.15(b) is substantially similar to DR 9-102(B)(1) and (4).

Rule 1.15(c) is substantially similar to DR 9-102(A)(2), except that the requirement regarding disputes applies to property concerning which an interest is claimed by a third person as well as by a client.

See MSB Ethics Opinions Nos. 98 and 104.

Sufficiency of evidence.

Attorney violated Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.15 because: (1) she admitted to losing client files that she had placed in a storage unit; and (2) although she said that she returned important documents to clients "most times," she could not say that she had done so every time. Miss. Bar v. Thompson, 5 So. 3d 330 (Miss. 2008).

Bankruptcy court found that as an escrow agent for a real estate transaction, debtor's duty fell within the concept of fiduciary under 11 U.S.C.S. § 523(a)(4) because an express or technical trust was created when the creditor wired money into the debtor's trust account, but even if the debtor were not acting as an escrow agent, as a licensed attorney in the State of Mississippi, he had a fiduciary obligation regarding the money in his trust account pursuant to the Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.15. This was true even if that money belonged to a third person as opposed to a client. Gardner v. Deer (In re Deer), — Bankr. —, 2008 Bankr. LEXIS 777 (Bankr. S.D. Miss. Mar. 14, 2008).

Rule 1.16. Declining or terminating representation.

(a) Except as stated in paragraph (c), a lawyer shall not represent a client or, where representation has commenced, shall withdraw from the representation of a client if:

(1) the representation will result in violation of the rules of professional conduct or other law;

(2) the lawyer's physical or mental condition materially impairs the lawyer's ability to represent the client; or

(3) the lawyer is discharged.

(b) Except as stated in paragraph (c), a lawyer may withdraw from representing a client if withdrawal can be accomplished without materially adverse effect on the interests of the client, or if:

(1) the client persists in a course of action involving the lawyer's services that the lawyer reasonably believes is criminal or fraudulent;

(2) the client has used the lawyer's services to perpetrate a crime or fraud;

(3) a client insists upon pursuing an objective that the lawyer considers repugnant or imprudent;

(4) the client fails substantially to fulfill an obligation to the lawyer regarding the lawyer's services and has been given reasonable warning that the lawyer will withdraw unless the obligation is fulfilled;

(5) the representation will result in an unreasonable financial burden on the lawyer or has been rendered unreasonably difficult by the client; or

(6) other good cause for withdrawal exists.

(c) When ordered to do so by a tribunal, a lawyer shall continue representation notwithstanding good cause for terminating the representation.

(d) Upon termination of representation, a lawyer shall take steps to the extent reasonably practicable to protect a client's interest, such as giving reasonable notice to the client, allowing time for employment of other counsel, surrendering papers and property to which the client is entitled and refunding any advance payment that has not been earned. The lawyer may retain papers relating to the client to the extent permitted by other law.

COMMENT

A lawyer should not accept representation in a matter unless it can be performed competently, promptly, without improper conflict of interest and to completion.

Mandatory Withdrawal. — A lawyer ordinarily must decline or withdraw from representation if the client demands that the lawyer engage in conduct that is illegal or violates the Rules of Professional Conduct or other law. The lawyer is not obliged to decline or withdraw simply because the client suggests such a course of conduct; a client may make such a suggestion in the hope that a lawyer will not be constrained by a professional obligation.

When a lawyer has been appointed to represent a client, withdrawal ordinarily requires approval of the appointing authority. See also Rule 6.2. Difficulty may be encountered if withdrawal is based on the client's demand that the lawyer engage in unprofessional conduct. The court may wish an explanation of the withdrawal, while the lawyer may be bound to keep confidential the facts that would constitute such an explanation. The lawyer's statement that professional considerations require termination of the representation ordinarily should be accepted as sufficient.

Discharge. — A client has a right to discharge a lawyer at any time, with or without cause, subject to liability for payment for the lawyer's services. Where future dispute about the withdrawal may be anticipated, it may be advisable to prepare a written statement reciting the circumstances.

Whether a client can discharge appointed counsel may depend on applicable law. A client seeking to do so should be given a full explanation of the consequences. These consequences may include a decision by the appointing authority that appointment of successor counsel is unjustified, thus requiring the client to represent himself.

If the client is mentally incompetent, the client may lack the legal capacity to discharge the lawyer, and in any event the discharge may be seriously adverse to the client's interests. The lawyer should make special effort to help the client consider the consequences and, in an extreme case, may initiate proceedings for a conservatorship or similar protection of the client. See Rule 1.14.

Optional Withdrawal. — A lawyer may withdraw from representation in some circumstances. The lawyer has the option to withdraw if it can be accomplished without material adverse effect on the client's interests. Withdrawal is also justified if the client persists in a course of action that the lawyer reasonably believes is criminal or fraudulent, for a lawyer is not required to be associated with such conduct even if the lawyer does not further it. Withdrawal is also permitted if the lawyer's services were misused in the past even if that would materially prejudice the client. The lawyer also may withdraw where the client insists on a repugnant or imprudent objective.

A lawyer may withdraw if the client refuses to abide by the terms of an agreement relating to the representation, such as an agreement concerning fees or court costs or an agreement limiting the objectives of the representation.

Assisting the Client Upon Withdrawal. — Even if the lawyer has been unfairly discharged by the client, a lawyer must take all reasonable steps to mitigate the consequences to the client. The lawyer may retain papers as security for a fee only to the extent permitted by law.

Whether or not a lawyer for an organization may under certain unusual circumstances have a legal obligation to the organization after withdrawing or being discharged by the organization's highest authority is beyond the scope of these Rules.

See MSB Ethics Opinions Nos. 49 and 105.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Permission to withdraw.
Illustrative Cases.

In general.

Any time an attorney undertakes to represent a client in any court of record in Mississippi, there attaches a legal, ethical, professional and moral obligation to continue with that representation until such time as he is properly relieved by the court of record; this is true regardless of circumstances under which his representation of that client may be terminated, and this withdrawal may be accomplished only by filing of motion with court, with proper notice to client. Myers v. Mississippi State Bar, 480 So. 2d 1080 (Miss. 1985), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 813, 107 S. Ct. 64, 93 L. Ed. 2d 23 (1986).

Permission to withdraw.

An attorney is not free to disregard requirement of court permission for withdrawal, established by Mississippi case law, simply because there is no published court rule mandating same requirement. Myers v. Mississippi State Bar, 480 So. 2d 1080 (Miss. 1985), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 813, 107 S. Ct. 64, 93 L. Ed. 2d 23 (1986).

Appropriate discipline for attorney charged with neglect, with prior disciplinary record for substantially similar neglect of a client's case, was sixty days suspension from practice of law. Mississippi Bar v. Hall, 612 So. 2d 1075 (Miss. 1992).

Illustrative Cases.

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying clients' motion to compel their former attorneys to give their case file to the clients and in rejecting the clients' contention that the case file was their property; the trial court properly ordered that counsel make the case file available to the clients and allow the clients to copy as much of the case file as they chose at the client's expense because the trial court's order comported with Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.16(d) in that it required the attorneys to do what was reasonably practicable in order to protect the clients' interests. Edmonds v. Williamson, 13 So. 3d 1283 (Miss. 2009).

Mississippi Bar filed a formal complaint against the attorney after an investigation revealed that the attorney failed to file a habeas petition and neglected other legal matters for which he was paid due to a substance abuse problem. Pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 8, a complaint tribunal heard the matter and found that the attorney violated Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.2(a), 1.3, 1.4, 1.5, 1.15(b), 1.16(d), 8.1(b), and 8.4(a); the attorney was suspended from the practice of law for six months. In re Reinstatement of Kelly, 987 So. 2d 925 (Miss. 2008).

Rule 1.17. Sale of law practice.

A lawyer or law firm may sell or purchase a law practice including good will if the conditions set forth in Rule 1.17 are satisfied. The estate of a deceased, disabled or disappeared lawyer may be a seller.

(a) The selling lawyer or law firm ceases to engage in the private practice of law in the geographic area wherein the practice has been conducted;

(b) The practice is sold as an entirety to another lawyer or law firm;

(c) Actual written notice is given to each of the seller's clients regarding:

(1) the proposed sale;

(2) the terms of any proposed change in the fee arrangement authorized by paragraph (d);

(3) the client's right to retain other counsel or take possession of the file; and

(4) the fact that the client's consent to the sale will be presumed if the client does not take any action or does not otherwise object within ninety (90) days of receipt of the notice.

If a client cannot be given notice, the representation of that client may be transferred to the purchaser only upon entry of an order so authorizing by any court having jurisdiction. The seller may disclose to the court in camera information relating to the representation only to the extent necessary to obtain an order authorizing the transfer of the file.

(d) The fees charged clients shall not be increased by reason of the sale. The purchaser may however refuse to undertake the representation unless the client consents to pay the purchaser's fees at a rate not exceeding the fee charged by the purchaser for rendering substantially similar services before the initiation of the purchase negotiations.

(e) For purposes of this rule, good will, as used herein, is defined as reputation, including use of the lawyer or law firm's name that will probably generate future business. However, any use of the lawyer or law firms name, after the sale or purchase of the subject law practice has been completed, must be accompanied with a notice that the selling lawyer or law firm is no longer engaged in the active practice of law.

(f) Notwithstanding the provisions of this rule, if the selling lawyer or law firm returns to the practice of law, then use of the selling lawyer or law firm's name must be discontinued by the purchasing lawyer or law firm. (Adopted August 20, 1998.)

COUNSELOR

Rule 2.1. Advisor.

In representing a client, a lawyer shall exercise independent professional judgment and render candid advice. In rendering advice, a lawyer may refer not only to law but to other considerations such as moral, economic, social and political factors, that may be relevant to the client's situation.

COMMENT

Scope of Advice. — A client is entitled to straightforward advice expressing the lawyer's honest assessment. Legal advice often involves unpleasant facts and alternatives that a client may be disinclined to confront. In presenting advice, a lawyer endeavors to sustain the client's morale and may put advice in as acceptable a form as honesty permits. However, a lawyer should not be deterred from giving candid advice by the prospect that the advice will be unpalatable to the client.

Advice couched in narrowly legal terms may be of little value to a client, especially where practical considerations, such as cost or effects on other people, are predominant. Purely technical legal advice, therefore, can sometimes be inadequate. It is proper for a lawyer to refer to relevant moral and ethical considerations in giving advice. Although a lawyer is not a moral advisor as such, moral and ethical considerations impinge upon most legal questions and may decisively influence how the law will be applied.

A client may expressly or impliedly ask the lawyer for purely technical advice. When such a request is made by a client experienced in legal matters, the lawyer may accept it at face value. When such a request is made by a client inexperienced in legal matters, however, the lawyer's responsibility as advisor may include indicating that more may be involved than strictly legal considerations.

Matters that go beyond strictly legal questions may also be in the domain of another profession. Family matters can involve problems within the professional competence of psychiatry, clinical psychology or social work; business matters can involve problems within the competence of the accounting profession or of financial specialists. Where consultation with a professional in another field is itself something a competent lawyer would recommend, the lawyer should make such a recommendation. At the same time, a lawyer's advice at its best often consists of recommending a course of action in the face of conflicting recommendations of experts.

Offering Advice. — In general, a lawyer is not expected to give advice until asked by the client. However, when a lawyer knows that a client proposes a course of action that is likely to result in substantial adverse legal consequences to the client, duty to the client under Rule 1.4 may require that the lawyer act if the client's course of action is related to the representation. A lawyer ordinarily has no duty to initiate investigation of a client's affairs or to give advice that the client has indicated is unwanted, but a lawyer may initiate advice to a client when doing so appears to be in the client's interest.

CODE COMPARISON

There is no direct counterpart to Rule 2.1 in the Disciplinary Rules of the Code. DR 5-107(B) provides that "A lawyer shall not permit a person who recommends, employs, or pays him to render legal services for another to direct or regulate his professional judgment in rendering such legal services." EC 7-8 states that "Advice of a lawyer to his client need not be confined to purely legal considerations. ... In assisting his client to reach a proper decision, it is often desirable for a lawyer to point out those factors which may lead to a decision that is morally just as well as legally permissible. ... In the final analysis, however, ... the decision whether to forego legally available objectives or methods because of nonlegal factors is ultimately for the client. ..."

Rule 2.2. Lawyer serving as an intermediary between clients.

(a) A lawyer represents clients as an intermediary when the lawyer provides impartial legal advice and assistance to two or more clients who are engaged in a candid and non-adversarial effort to accomplish a common objective with respect to the formation, conduct, modification, or termination of a consensual legal relation between them.

(b) A lawyer shall not represent two or more clients as an intermediary in a matter unless:

(1) as between the clients, the lawyer reasonably believes that the matter can be resolved on terms compatible with the best interests of each of the clients, that each client will be able to make adequately informed decisions in the matter, that there is little risk of material prejudice to the interest of any of the clients if the contemplated resolution is unsuccessful, and that the intermediation can be undertaken impartially;

(2) the lawyer's representation of each of the clients, or the lawyer's relationship with each, will not be adversely affected by the lawyer's responsibilities to other clients or third persons, or by the lawyer's own interests;

(3) the lawyer consults with each client about:

(i) the lawyer's responsibilities as an intermediary;

(ii) the implications of the intermediation (including the advantages and risks involved, the effect of the intermediation on the attorney-client privilege, and the effect of the intermediation on any other obligation of confidentiality the lawyer may have);

(iii) any circumstances that will materially affect the lawyer's impartiality between the clients; and

(iv) the lawyer's representation in another matter of a client whose interests are directly adverse to the interests of any one of the clients; and any interests of the lawyer, the lawyer's other clients, or third persons that will materially limit the lawyer's representation of one of the clients; and

(c) While representing clients as an intermediary, the lawyer shall:

(1) act impartially to assist the clients in accomplishing their common objective;

(2) as between the clients, treat information relating to the intermediation as information protected by Rule 1.6 that the lawyer has been authorized by each client to disclose to the other clients to the extent the lawyer reasonably believes necessary for the lawyer to comply with Rule 1.4; and

(3) consult with each client concerning the decisions to be made with respect to the intermediation and the considerations relevant in making them, so that each client can make adequately informed decisions.

(d) A lawyer shall withdraw from service as an intermediary if:

(1) any of the clients so requests;

(2) any of the clients revokes the lawyer's authority to disclose to the other clients any information that the lawyer would be required by Rule 1.4 to reveal to them; or

(3) any of the other conditions stated in paragraph (b) are no longer satisfied.

(e) If the lawyer's withdrawal is required by paragraph (d)(2) the lawyer shall so advise each client of the withdrawal, but shall do so without any further disclosure of information protected by Rule 1.6. (Adopted September 17, 2002, effective March 1, 2003; substantially rewritten effective November

3, 2005 to address specifically and exclusively lawyers intermediating between clients.)

COMMENT

A lawyer acts as an intermediary under this Rule when the lawyer represents two or more clients who are cooperatively trying to accomplish a common objective with respect to the formation, conduct, modification, or termination of a consensual legal relation between them. The hallmarks of an intermediation include the impartiality of the lawyer who serves as an intermediary; the open, candid, and non-adversarial nature of the clients' pursuit of a common objective; and the limited subject matters in which a lawyer may serve multiple clients as an intermediary (i.e., the adjustment of a consensual legal relationship among or between the clients). Because intermediation differs significantly from the partisan role normally played by lawyers, and because it requires that the lawyer be impartial as between the clients rather than an advocate on behalf of each, a lawyer should only undertake this role with client consent after consultation about the distinctive features of this role. Also, given the risks associated with joint representation of parties whose interests may potentially be in conflict, the Rule provides a number of safeguards designed to limit its applicability and to protect the interests of the several clients.

Paragraph (b) specifies the circumstances in which a lawyer may serve multiple clients as an intermediary. With respect to the clients being served by an intermediary, this Rule, and not Rule 1.7, applies. Rule 1.7 remains applicable, however, to protect other clients the lawyer may be representing or may wish to represent in other matters. For example, if the lawyer's representation of two clients as an intermediary in a matter will materially limit the lawyer's representation of another client the lawyer is representing as an advocate, the lawyer must afford that client the protections of Rule 1.7. Similarly, if the lawyer's representation of two clients as an intermediary would be materially adverse to one of the lawyer's former clients and the matters are substantially related, the lawyer must afford the former client the protection of Rule 1.9.

Rule 2.2 does not apply to a lawyer acting as a dispute resolution neutral, such as an arbitrator or a mediator, as the parties to a dispute resolution proceeding are not clients of the lawyer, even where the lawyer has been appointed with the concurrence of the parties. Other rules of conduct govern a lawyer's service as a dispute resolution neutral. See Rule 2.4.

Because this Rule only applies to the formation, conduct, modification or termination of consensual legal relationships between clients, it does not apply to the representation of multiple clients in connection with gratuitous transfers or other matters in which there is not a quid pro quo exchange. Thus, for example, conflicts of interest arising from the representation of multiple clients in estate planning or the administration of an estate are governed by Rule 1.7 rather than by this Rule. If, however, the effectuation of an estate plan or other gratuitous transfer entails the formation, modification or termination of a consensual legal relationship between clients, and the lawyer acts as an intermediary in connection with the transaction, this Rule, and not Rule 1.7, will apply.

A lawyer may act as an intermediary in seeking to establish or adjust a consensual legal relationship among or between clients on an amicable and mutually advantageous basis, such as helping to organize a business in which two or more clients are entrepreneurs or working out the financial reorganization of an enterprise in which two or more clients have an interest. As part of the work of an intermediary, the lawyer may seek to achieve the clients' common objective or to resolve potentially conflicting interests by developing the parties' mutual interests. The alternative may be that each party may have to obtain separate representation, with the possibility in some situations of incurring additional cost, complications, or even litigation. Given these and other relevant factors, each client may prefer to have one lawyer act as an intermediary for all rather than hiring a separate lawyer to serve as his or her partisan.

In considering whether to act as an intermediary between clients, a lawyer should be mindful that if the intermediation fails, the result can be additional cost, embarrassment, and recrimination. In some situations, the risk of failure is so great that intermediation is plainly impossible or imprudent for the lawyer or the clients. For example, a lawyer cannot undertake common representation of clients between whom contentious litigation is imminent or who contemplate contentious negotiations, as is often the case when dissolution of a marriage is involved. More generally, if the relationship between the parties has already assumed definite antagonism, the possibility that the clients' interests can be adjusted by intermediation ordinarily is not very good.

The appropriateness of intermediation can depend on its form. Forms of intermediation range from an informal "facilitation," in which the lawyer's responsibilities are limited to presenting alternatives from which the clients will choose, to a full-blown representation in which the lawyer provides all legal services needed in connection with the proposed transaction. One form may be appropriate in circumstances where another would not. Other relevant factors are whether the lawyer subsequently will represent both parties on a continuing basis; whether the situation involves creating a relationship between the parties or terminating one; the relative experience, sophistication, and economic bargaining power of the clients; and the existence of prior familial, business, or legal relationships.

Confidentiality and privilege. — A particularly important factor in determining the appropriateness of intermediation is the effect on client-lawyer confidentiality and the attorney-client privilege. In a common representation, the lawyer is still required both to keep each client adequately informed and to maintain confidentiality of information relating to the representation. See Rules 1.4 and 1.6. Complying with both requirements while acting as an intermediary requires a delicate balance. If the balance cannot be maintained, the common representation is improper.

Paragraphs (b)(4) and (c)(2) make clear that the obligations of attorney-client confidentiality apply to clients being served by a lawyer as an intermediary, but that, as between the clients being so served, confidentiality is inappropriate and must be waived by each of the clients. Thus, while the lawyer must maintain confidentiality as against strangers to the relationship, the lawyer has no such duty to keep information provided to the lawyer by one client confidential from the other clients. Moreover, the lawyer may well, depending on the circumstances, have an affirmative obligation to disclose such information obtained from one client to other clients. Obviously, this important implication of the lawyer's responsibilities as an intermediary must be disclosed and explained to the clients. Since the lawyer is required to be impartial between commonly represented clients, intermediation is improper when that impartiality cannot be maintained. For example, a lawyer who has represented one of the clients for a long period and in a variety of matters might have difficulty being impartial between that client and one to whom the lawyer has only recently been introduced.

Since the lawyer is required to be impartial between commonly represented clients, intermediation is improper when that impartiality cannot be maintained. For example, a lawyer who has represented one of the clients for a long period and in a variety of matters might have difficulty being impartial between that client and one to whom the lawyer has only recently been introduced.

Consultation. — In acting as an intermediary between clients, the lawyer is required to consult with the clients on the implications of doing so and may proceed only upon consent based on such a consultation. The consultation should make clear that the lawyer's role is not that of partisanship normally expected in other circumstances. This consent must be in writing.

Paragraph (c)(3) is an application of the principle expressed in Rule 1.4. Where the lawyer is an intermediary, the clients ordinarily must assume greater responsibility for decisions than when each client is independently represented.

Withdrawal. — Common representation does not diminish the rights of each client in the client-lawyer relationship. Each client has the right to loyal and diligent representation, the right to discharge the lawyer as stated in Rule 1.16, and the protection of Rule 1.9 concerning obligations to a former client.

Because of the obligations of a lawyer serving as an intermediary to the intermediation clients, the lawyer must withdraw from the representation if any of the intermediation clients so requests; if one or more of the clients denies the lawyer the authority to disclose certain information to any of the remaining clients, thereby preventing the lawyer from being able to discharge the lawyer's duties to the remaining clients to communicate with them and disclose information to them; or if any of the various predicate requirements for intermediation can no longer be satisfied.

Upon withdrawal from the role of intermediary or completion of an intermediation, the lawyer must afford all of the clients formerly served as an intermediary the protections of Rules 1.9 and 1.10.

[Amended effective November 3, 2005.]

CODE COMPARISON

There is no direct counterpart to Rule 2.2 in the Disciplinary Rules of the Code. EC 5-20 states that "A lawyer is often asked to serve as an impartial arbitrator or mediator in matters which involve present or former clients. He may serve in either capacity if he first discloses such present or former relationships." DR 5-105(B) provides that "A lawyer shall not continue multiple employment if the exercise of his independent judgment in behalf of a client will be or is likely to be adversely affected by his representation of another client, or if it would involve him in representation of differing interests, except to the extent permitted under DR 5-105(C)." DR 5-105(C) provides that "A lawyer may represent multiple clients if it is obvious that he can adequately represent the interest of each and if each consents to the representation on the exercise of his independent professional judgment on behalf of each.

Rule 2.3. Evaluation for use by third persons.

(a) A lawyer may undertake an evaluation of a matter affecting a client for the use of someone other than the client if:

(1) the lawyer reasonably believes that making the evaluation is compatible with other aspects of the lawyer's relationship with the client; and

(2) The client gives informed consent in writing.

(b) Except as disclosure is required in connection with a report of an evaluation, information relating to the evaluation is otherwise protected by Rule 1.6. (Amended effective November 3, 2005.)

COMMENT

Definition. — An evaluation may be performed at the client's direction but for the primary purpose of establishing information for the benefit of third parties; for example, an opinion concerning the title of property rendered at the behest of a vendor for the information of a prospective purchaser, or at the behest of a borrower for the information of a prospective lender. In some situations, the evaluation may be required by a government agency; for example, an opinion concerning the legality of the securities registered for sale under the securities laws. In other instances, the evaluation may be required by a third person, such as a purchaser of a business.

Lawyers for the government may be called upon to give a formal opinion on the legality of contemplated government agency action. In making such an evaluation, the government lawyer acts at the behest of the government as the client but for the purpose of establishing the limits of the agency's authorized activity. Such an opinion is to be distinguished from confidential legal advice given agency officials. The critical question is whether the opinion is to be made public.

A legal evaluation should be distinguished from an investigation of a person with whom the lawyer does not have a client-lawyer relationship. For example, a lawyer retained by a purchaser to analyze a vendor's title to property does not have a client-lawyer relationship with the vendor. So also, an investigation into a person's affairs by a government lawyer, or by special counsel employed by the government, is not an evaluation as that term is used in the Rule. The question is whether the lawyer is retained by the person whose affairs are being examined. When the lawyer is retained by that person, the general rules concerning loyalty to client and preservation of confidences apply, which is not the case if the lawyer is retained by someone else. For this reason, it is essential to identify the person by whom the lawyer is retained. This should be made clear not only to the person under examination, but also to others to whom the results are to be made available.

Duty to Third Person. — When the evaluation is intended for the information or use of a third person, a legal duty to that person may or may not arise. That legal question is beyond the scope of this Rule. However, since such an evaluation involves a departure from the normal client-lawyer relationship, careful analysis of the situation is required. The lawyer must be satisfied as a matter of professional judgment that making the evaluation is compatible with other functions undertaken in behalf of the client. For example, if the lawyer is acting as advocate in defending the client against charges of fraud, it would normally be incompatible with that responsibility for the lawyer to perform an evaluation for others concerning the same or a related transaction. Assuming no such impediment is apparent, however, the lawyer should advise the client of the implications of the evaluation, particularly the lawyer's responsibilities to third persons and the duty to disseminate the findings.

Access to and Disclose of Information. — The quality of an evaluation depends on the freedom and extent of the investigation upon which it is based. Ordinarily a lawyer should have whatever latitude of investigation seems necessary as a matter of professional judgment. Under some circumstances, however, the terms of the evaluation may be limited. For example, certain issues or sources may be categorically excluded, or the scope of search may be limited by time constraints or the noncooperation of persons having relevant information. Any such limitations which are material to the evaluation should be described in the report. If after a lawyer has commenced an evaluation, the client refuses to comply with the terms upon which it was understood the evaluation was to have been made, the lawyer's obligations are determined by law, having reference to the terms of the client's agreement and the surrounding circumstances.

Financial Auditors' Requests for Information. — When a question concerning the legal situation of a client arises at the instance of the client's financial auditor and the question is referred to the lawyer, the lawyer's response may be made in accordance with procedures recognized in the legal profession. Such a procedure is set forth in the American Bar Association Statement of Policy Regarding Lawyers' Responses to Auditors' Requests for Information, adopted in 1975.

CODE COMPARISON

There is no counterpart to Rule 2.3 in the Code.

Rule 2.4. Lawyers serving as third party neutrals.

(a) A lawyer serves as a third-party neutral when the lawyer assists two or more persons who are not clients of the lawyer to reach a resolution of a dispute or other matter that has arisen between them. Service as a third-party neutral may include service as an arbitrator, a mediator or in such other capacity as will enable the lawyer to assist the parties to resolve the matter.

(b) A lawyer serving as a third-party neutral shall inform unrepresented parties that the lawyer is not representing them. When the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that a party does not understand the lawyer's role in the matter, the lawyer shall explain the difference between the lawyer's role as a third-party neutral and a lawyer's role as one who represents a client. (Adopted effective November 3, 2005.)

COMMENT

Alternative dispute resolution has become a substantial part of the civil justice system. Aside from representing clients in dispute-resolution processes, lawyers often serve as third-party neutrals. A third-party neutral is a person, such as a mediator, arbitrator, conciliator or evaluator, who assists the parties, represented or unrepresented, in the resolution of a dispute or in the arrangement of a transaction. Whether a third-party neutral serves primarily as a facilitator, evaluator or decision maker depends on the particular process that is either selected by the parties or mandated by a court.

The role of a third-party neutral is not unique to lawyers, although, in some court-connected contexts, only lawyers are allowed to serve in this role or to handle certain types of cases. In performing this role, the lawyer may be subject to court rules or other law that apply either to third-party neutrals generally or to lawyers serving as third-party neutrals. Lawyer-neutrals may also be subject to various codes of ethics, such as the Code of Ethics for Arbitration in Commercial Disputes prepared by a joint committee of the American Bar Association and the American Arbitration Association or the Model Standards of Conduct for Mediators jointly prepared by the American Bar Association, the American Arbitration Association and the Society of Professionals in Dispute Resolution.

Unlike non-lawyers who serve as third-party neutrals, lawyers serving in this role may experience unique problems as a result of differences between the role of a third-party neutral and a lawyer's service as a client representative. The potential for confusion is significant when the parties are unrepresented in the process. Thus, paragraph (b) requires a lawyer-neutral to inform unrepresented parties that the lawyer is not representing them. For some parties, particularly parties who frequently use dispute-resolution processes, this information will be sufficient. For others, particularly those who are using the process for the first time, more information will be required. Where appropriate, the lawyer should inform unrepresented parties of the important differences between the lawyer's role as third-party neutral and a lawyer's role as a client representative, including the inapplicability of the attorney-client evidentiary privilege. The extent of disclosure required under this paragraph will depend on the particular parties involved and the subject matter of the proceeding, as well as the particular features of the dispute-resolution process selected.

A lawyer who serves as a third-party neutral subsequently may be asked to serve as a lawyer representing a client in the same matter. The conflicts of interest that arise for both the individual lawyer and the lawyer's law firm are addressed in Rule 1.12.

Lawyers who represent clients in alterative dispute-resolution processes are governed by the Rules of Professional Conduct. When the dispute-resolution process takes place before a tribunal, as in binding arbitration, the lawyer's duty of candor is governed by Rule 3.3 Otherwise, the lawyer's duty of candor toward both the third-party neutral and other parties is governed by Rule 4.1.

[Adopted effective November 3, 2005.]

ADVOCATE

Rule 3.1. Meritorious claims and contentions.

A lawyer shall not bring or defend a proceeding, or assert or controvert an issue therein, unless there is a basis in law and in fact for doing so that is not frivolous, which includes a good faith argument for an extension, modification or reversal of existing law. A lawyer for the defendant in a criminal proceeding, or the respondent in a proceeding that could result in incarceration, may nevertheless so defend the proceeding as to require that every element of the case be established. (Amended effective November 3, 2005 to add the phrase "in law and in fact".)

COMMENT

The advocate has a duty to use legal procedure for the fullest benefit of the client's cause, but also a duty not to abuse legal procedure. The law, both procedural and substantive, establishes the limits within which an advocate may proceed. However, the law is not always clear and never is static. Accordingly, in determining the proper scope of advocacy, account must be taken of the law's ambiguities and potential for change.

The filing of an action or defense or similar action taken for a client is not frivolous merely because the facts have not first been fully substantiated or because the lawyer expects to develop vital evidence only by discovery. Such action is not frivolous even though the lawyer believes that the client's position ultimately will not prevail. The action is frivolous, however, if the client desires to have the action taken primarily for the purpose of harassing or maliciously injuring a person or if the lawyer is unable either to make a good faith argument on the merits of the action taken or to support the action taken by a good faith argument for an extension, modification or reversal of existing law.

CODE COMPARISON

DR 7-102(A)(1) provides that a lawyer may not "file a suit, assert a position, conduct a defense, delay a trial, or take other action on behalf of his client when he knows or when it is obvious that such action would serve merely to harass or maliciously injure another." Rule 3.1 is to the same general effect as DR 7-102(A)(1), with three qualifications. First, the test of improper conduct is changed from "merely to harass or maliciously injure another" to the requirement that there be a basis for the litigation measure involved that is "not frivolous." This includes the concept stated in DR 7-102(A)(2) that a lawyer may advance a claim or defense unwarranted by existing law if "it can be supported by good faith argument for an extension, modification, or reversal of existing law." Second, the test in Rule 3.1 is an objective test, whereas DR 7-102(A)(1) applies only if the lawyer "knows or when it is obvious" that the litigation is frivolous. Third, Rule 3.1 has an exception that in a criminal case, or a case in which incarceration of the client may result (for example, certain juvenile proceedings), the lawyer may put the prosecution to its proof even if there is no nonfrivolous basis for defense.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Ineffective assistance of counsel.

It appears to be problematic and inappropriate for an attorney who represents a criminal defendant at trial to represent that same defendant on appeal where the attorney intends to raise an ineffective assistance of counsel claim in that appeal. Hill v. State, 749 So. 2d 1143 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Rule 3.2. Expediting litigation.

A lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to expedite litigation consistent with the interests of the client.

COMMENT

Dilatory practices bring the administration of justice into disrepute. Delay should not be indulged merely for the convenience of the advocates, or for the purpose of frustrating an opposing party's attempt to obtain rightful redress or repose. It is not a justification that similar conduct is often tolerated by the bench and bar. The question is whether a competent lawyer acting in good faith would regard the course of action as having some substantial purpose other than delay. Realizing financial or other benefit from otherwise improper delay in litigation is not a legitimate interest of the client.

CODE COMPARISON

DR 7-102(A)(1) provides that "A lawyer shall not ... file a suit, assert a position, conduct a defense (or) delay a trial ... when he knows or when it is obvious that such action would serve merely to harass or maliciously injure another."

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Sanctions.
— Suspension.

Sanctions.

— Suspension.

Disbarment was warranted for attorney's repeated acts, some while under suspension, of taking money from clients, promising to act as their counsel, and, through deceit, doing nothing. Carter v. Mississippi Bar, 654 So. 2d 505 (Miss. 1995).

Rule 3.3. Candor toward the tribunal.

(a) A lawyer shall not knowingly:

(1) make a false statement of material fact or law to a tribunal;

(2) fail to disclose a material fact to a tribunal when disclosure is necessary to avoid assisting a criminal or fraudulent act by the client;

(3) fail to disclose to the tribunal legal authority in the controlling jurisdiction known to the lawyer to be directly adverse to the position of the client and not disclosed by opposing counsel; or

(4) offer evidence that the lawyer knows to be false. If a lawyer has offered material evidence and comes to know of its falsity, the lawyer shall take reasonable remedial measures.

(b) The duties stated in paragraph (a) continue to the conclusion of the proceeding, and apply even if compliance requires disclosure of information otherwise protected by Rule 1.6.

(c) A lawyer may refuse to offer evidence that the lawyer reasonably believes is false.

(d) In an ex parte proceeding, a lawyer shall inform the tribunal of all material facts known to the lawyer which will enable the tribunal to make an informed decision, whether or not the facts are adverse.

COMMENT

The advocate's task is to present the client's case with persuasive force. Performance of that duty while maintaining confidences of the client is qualified by the advocate's duty of candor to the tribunal. However, an advocate does not vouch for the evidence submitted in a cause; the tribunal is responsible for assessing its probative value.

Representations by a Lawyer. — An advocate is responsible for pleadings and other documents prepared for litigation, but is usually not required to have personal knowledge of matters asserted therein, for litigation documents ordinarily present assertions by the client, or by someone on the client's behalf, and not assertions by the lawyer. Compare Rule 3.1. However, an assertion purporting to be on the lawyer's own knowledge, as in an affidavit by the lawyer or in a statement in open court, may properly be made only when the lawyer knows the assertion is true or believes it to be true on the basis of a reasonably diligent inquiry. There are circumstances where failure to make a disclosure is the equivalent of an affirmative misrepresentation. The obligation prescribed in Rule 1.2(d) not to counsel a client to commit or assist the client in committing a fraud applies in litigation. Regarding compliance with Rule 1.2(d), see the Comment to that Rule. See also the Comment to Rule 8.4(b).

Misleading Legal Argument. — Legal argument based on a knowingly false representation of law constitutes dishonesty toward the tribunal. A lawyer is not required to make a disinterested exposition of the law, but must recognize the existence of pertinent legal authorities. Furthermore, as stated in paragraph (a)(3), an advocate has a duty to disclose directly adverse authority in the controlling jurisdiction which has not been disclosed by the opposing party. The underlying concept is that legal argument is a discussion seeking to determine the legal premises properly applicable to the case.

False Evidence. — When evidence that a lawyer knows to be false is provided by a person who is not the client, the lawyer must refuse to offer it regardless of the client's wishes.

When false evidence is offered by the client, however, a conflict may arise between the lawyer's duty to keep the client's revelations confidential and the duty of candor to the court. Upon ascertaining that material evidence is false, the lawyer should seek to persuade the client that the evidence should not be offered or, if it has been offered, that its false character should immediately be disclosed. If the persuasion is ineffective, the lawyer must take reasonable remedial measures.

Except in the defense of a criminal accused, the rule generally recognized is that, if necessary to rectify the situation, an advocate must disclose the existence of the client's deception to the court or to the other party. Such a disclosure can result in grave consequences to the client, including not only a sense of betrayal but also loss of the case and perhaps a prosecution for perjury. But the alternative is that the lawyer cooperate in deceiving the court, thereby subverting the truth-finding process which the adversary system is designed to implement. See Rule 1.2(d). Furthermore, unless it is clearly understood that the lawyer will act upon the duty to disclose the existence of false evidence, the client can simply reject the lawyer's advice to reveal the false evidence and insist that the lawyer keep silent. Thus the client could in effect coerce the lawyer into being a party to fraud on the court.

Perjury by a Criminal Defendant. — Whether an advocate for a criminally accused has the same duty of disclosure has been intensely debated. While it is agreed that the lawyer should seek to persuade the client to refrain from perjurious testimony, there has been dispute concerning the lawyer's duty when that persuasion fails. If the confrontation with the client occurs before trial, the lawyer ordinarily can withdraw. Withdrawal before trial may not be possible, however, either because trial is imminent, or because the confrontation with the client does not take place until the trial itself, or because no other counsel is available.

The most difficult situation, therefore, arises in a criminal case where the accused insists on testifying when the lawyer knows that the testimony is perjurious. The lawyer's effort to rectify the situation can increase the likelihood of the client's being convicted as well as opening the possibility of a prosecution for perjury. On the other hand, if the lawyer does not exercise control over the proof, the lawyer participates, although in a merely passive way, in deception of the court.

Three resolutions of this dilemma have been proposed. One is to permit the accused to testify by a narrative without guidance through the lawyer's questioning. This compromises both contending principles; it exempts the lawyer from the duty to disclose false evidence but subjects the client to an implicit disclosure of information imparted to counsel. Another suggested resolution, of relatively recent origin, is that the advocate be entirely excused from the duty to reveal perjury if the perjury is that of the client. This is a coherent solution but makes the advocate a knowing instrument of perjury.

The other resolution of the dilemma is that the lawyer must reveal the client's perjury if necessary to rectify the situation. A criminal accused has a right to the assistance of an advocate, a right to testify and a right of confidential communication with counsel. However, an accused should not have a right to assistance of counsel in committing perjury. Furthermore, an advocate has an obligation, not only in professional ethics but under the law as well, to avoid implication in the commission of perjury or other falsification of evidence. See Rule 1.2(d).

Remedial Measures. — If perjured testimony or false evidence has been offered, the advocate's proper course ordinarily is to remonstrate with the client confidentially. If that fails, the advocate should seek to withdraw if that will remedy the situation. If withdrawal will not remedy the situation or is impossible, the advocate should make disclosure to the court. It is for the court then to determine what should be done—making a statement about the matter to the trier of fact, ordering a mistrial or perhaps nothing. If the false testimony was that of the client, the client may controvert the lawyer's version of their communication when the lawyer discloses the situation to the court. If there is an issue whether the client has committed perjury, the lawyer cannot represent the client in resolution of the issue, and a mistrial may be unavoidable. An unscrupulous client might in this way attempt to produce a series of mistrials and thus escape prosecution. However, a second such encounter could be construed as a deliberate abuse of the right to counsel and as such a waiver of the right to further representation.

Constitutional Requirements. — The general rule—that an advocate must disclose the existence of perjury with respect to a material fact, even that of a client—applies to defense counsel in criminal cases, as well as in other instances. However, the definition of the lawyer's ethical duty in such a situation may be qualified by constitutional provisions for due process and the right to counsel in criminal cases. In some jurisdictions these provisions have been construed to require that counsel present an accused as a witness if the accused wishes to testify, even if counsel knows the testimony will be false. The obligation of the advocate under these Rules is subordinate to such a constitutional requirement.

Duration of Obligation. — A practical time limit on the obligation to rectify the presentation of false evidence has to be established. The conclusion of the proceeding is a reasonably definite point for the termination of the obligation.

Refusing to Offer Proof Believed to Be False. — Generally speaking, a lawyer has authority to refuse to offer testimony or other proof that the lawyer believes is untrustworthy. Offering such proof may reflect adversely on the lawyer's ability to discriminate in the quality of evidence and thus impair the lawyer's effectiveness as an advocate. In criminal cases, however, a lawyer may, in some jurisdictions, be denied this authority by constitutional requirements governing the right to counsel.

Ex Parte Proceedings. — Ordinarily, an advocate has the limited responsibility of presenting one side of the matters that a tribunal should consider in reaching a decision; the conflicting position is expected to be presented by the opposing party. However, in an ex parte proceeding, such as an application for a temporary restraining order, there is no balance of presentation by opposing advocates. The object of an ex parte proceeding is nevertheless to yield a substantially just result. The judge has an affirmative responsibility to accord the absent party just consideration. The lawyer for the represented party has the correlative duty to make disclosures of material facts known to the lawyer and that the lawyer reasonably believes are necessary to an informed decision.

CODE COMPARISON

Rule 3.3(a)(1) is substantially identical to DR 7-102(A)(5), which provides that a lawyer shall not "knowingly make a false statement of law or fact."

Rule 3.3(a)(2) is implicit in DR 7-102(A)(3), which provides that "a lawyer shall not ... knowingly fail to disclose that which he is required by law to reveal."

Rule 3.3(a)(3) is identical to DR 7-106(B)(1).

With regard to Rule 3.3(a)(4), the first sentence of this subparagraph is similar to DR 7-102(A)(4), which provides that a lawyer shall not "knowingly use" perjured testimony or false evidence. The second sentence of Rule 3.3(a)(4) resolves an ambiguity in the Code concerning the action required of a lawyer when he discovers that he has offered perjured testimony or false evidence. DR 7-102(A)(4), quoted above, does not expressly deal with this situation, but the prohibition against "use" of false evidence can be construed to preclude carrying through with a case based on such evidence when that fact has become known during the trial. DR 7-102(B)(1), also noted in connection with Rule 1.6, provides that "a lawyer who receives information clearly establishing that ... his client has ... perpetrated a fraud upon ... a tribunal shall if the client does not rectify the situation ... reveal the fraud to the ... tribunal...." Since use of perjured testimony or false evidence is usually regarded as "fraud" upon the court, DR 7-102(B)(1) apparently requires disclosure by the lawyer in such circumstances. However, some states have amended DR 7-102(B)(1) in conformity with an ABA-recommended amendment to provide that the duty of disclosure does not apply when the "information is protected as a privileged communication." This qualification may be empty, for the rule of attorney-client privilege has been construed to exclude communications that further a crime, including the crime of perjury. On this interpretation of DR 7-102(B)(1), the lawyer has a duty to disclose the perjury.

Rule 3.3(c) confers discretion on the lawyer to refuse to offer evidence that he "reasonably believes" is false. This gives the lawyer more latitude than DR 7-102(A)(4), which prohibits the lawyer from offering evidence the lawyer "knows" is false.

There is no counterpart in the Code to paragraph (d). Hyde v. Berggren, 249 Miss. 860, 164 So. 2d 454 (1964); 92 A.L.R.3d 1232; 73 A.L.R.4th 938; Jones v. Southern United Ice Co., 167 Miss. 886, 150 So. 652 (1933); Mobile & O.R. Co., v. Watly, 69 Miss. 475, 12 So. 558 (1891).

Conduct constituting violation.

Where attorney responded to interrogatories without revealing incident relevant to causation of injury in suit against his client, his actions went far beyond what could be considered a discovery dispute, and amounted to conduct involving dishonesty, deceit, misrepresentation, obstructing another party's access to evidence, conduct prejudicial to administration of justice, and both failure to disclose a material fact and making a false statement of material fact to a tribunal. Mississippi Bar v. Land, 653 So. 2d 899 (Miss. 1994).

Attorney's knowing misrepresentations to court and opposing counsel that no autopsy had been performed on deceased's body were in violation of this rule and were prejudicial to the administration of justice. Mississippi Bar v. Mathis, 620 So. 2d 1213 (Miss. 1993).

Denial of wrongdoing.

An attorney did not violate Rule 3.3(a)(1) by denying improper conduct in his response to a court petition accusing the attorney of violating the ethics rules; a denial in a pleading, even if later proven true, is not a violation of the duty of candor towards the tribunal. Mississippi Bar v. Logan, 726 So. 2d 170 (Miss. 1998).

Ex parte proceedings.

Where defense counsel revealed to a trial judge in an ex parte conference that a defendant had confessed to the murder and was intent on falsely testifying, the trial judge did not allow counsel to withdraw from the case and did not commit manifest error in failing to recuse herself; the judge was not the ultimate trier of fact because it was a jury trial. Scott v. State, 8 So. 3d 855 (Miss. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 130 S. Ct. 1500, 176 L. Ed. 2d 117, 2010 U.S. LEXIS 1205, 78 U.S.L.W. 3480 (U.S. 2010).

Trial judge never was given the opportunity to perform his affirmative responsibility to accord an absent party just consideration, as required by Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 3.3(d), cmt., because plaintiff's attorney did not present to the trial judge the facts known to her, such as defendant being represented by an attorney, the identity of that attorney, defendant's previous filing of a motion to dismiss, and the settlement negotiations between the attorneys. Johnson v. Thomas, 982 So. 2d 405 (Miss. 2008).

Potential perjury of client.

Defendant was denied his right to a fair trial because the trial judge, sitting as finder of fact on defendant's motion to suppress, was informed by defense counsel that defendant had confessed to counsel that he committed the crime and that he intended to offer perjured testimony at trial, and therefore, the trial judge should have recused herself from hearing the motion to suppress, and her failure to do so deprived defendant of his right to due process. Scott v. State, 8 So. 3d 871 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), reversed by 8 So. 3d 855, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 589 (Miss. 2008).

Sanctions.

— Disbarment.

Three-year suspension was reversed and disbarment ordered, for attorney who misled his client, misrepresented to court that his client had agreed to terms which she in fact had not agreed to, and presented a document to the court containing a signature which was not his client's. Culpepper v. Mississippi State Bar, 588 So. 2d 413 (Miss. 1991).

— Public reprimand.

Attorney was sanctioned for making a statement about a judge's election contributions during a motion to recuse because the attorney violated Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 3.3 and Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 8.2 by knowingly repeating remarks that had been proven to be false. Welsh v. Mounger, 912 So. 2d 823 (Miss. 2005).

— Suspension.

Attorney who forged client's signature on motion, and then deliberately deceived court regarding authenticity of the signature, was suspended from practice of law for one hundred eighty days. Goodsell v. Mississippi Bar, 667 So. 2d 7 (Miss. 1996).

Rule 3.4. Fairness to opposing party and counsel.

A lawyer shall not:

(a) unlawfully obstruct another party's access to evidence or unlawfully alter, destroy or conceal a document or other material having potential evidentiary value. A lawyer shall not counsel or assist another person to do any such act;

(b) falsify evidence, counsel or assist a witness to testify falsely, or offer an inducement to a witness that is prohibited by law;

(c) knowingly disobey an obligation under the rules of a tribunal except for an open refusal based on an assertion that no valid obligation exists;

(d) in pretrial procedure, make a frivolous discovery request or fail to make reasonably diligent effort to comply with a legally proper discovery request by an opposing party;

(e) in trial, allude to any matter that the lawyer does not reasonably believe is relevant or that will not be supported by admissible evidence, assert personal knowledge of facts in issue except when testifying as a witness, or state a personal opinion as to the justness of a cause, the credibility of a witness, the culpability of a civil litigant or the guilt or innocence of an accused; or

(f) request a person other than a client to refrain from voluntarily giving relevant information to another party unless:

(1) the person is a relative or an employee or other agent of a client; and

(2) the lawyer reasonably believes that the person's interests will not be adversely affected by refraining from giving such information.

COMMENT

The procedure of the adversary system contemplates that the evidence in a case is to be marshalled competitively by the contending parties. Fair competition in the adversary system is secured by prohibitions against destruction or concealment of evidence, improperly influencing witnesses, obstructive tactics in discovery procedure, and the like.

Documents and other items of evidence are often essential to establish a claim or defense. Subject to evidentiary privileges, the right of an opposing party, including the government, to obtain evidence through discovery or subpoena is an important procedural right. The exercise of that right can be frustrated if relevant material is altered, concealed or destroyed. Applicable law in many jurisdictions makes it an offense to destroy material for purpose of impairing its availability in a pending proceeding or one whose commencement can be foreseen. Falsifying evidence is also generally a criminal offense. Paragraph (a) applies to evidentiary material generally, including computerized information.

With regard to paragraph (b), it is not improper to pay a witness's expenses or to compensate an expert witness on terms permitted by law. The common law rule in most jurisdictions is that it is improper to pay an occurrence witness any fee for testifying and that it is improper to pay an expert witness a contingent fee.

Paragraph (f) permits a lawyer to advise employees of a client to refrain from giving information to another party, for the employees may identify their interests with those of the client. See also Rule 4.2.

CODE COMPARISON

With regard to Rule 3.4(a), DR 7-109(A) provides that "a lawyer shall not suppress any evidence that he or his client has a legal obligation to reveal." DR 7-109(B) provides that "a lawyer shall not advise or cause a person to secrete himself ... for the purpose of making him unavailable as a witness...." DR 7-106(C)(7) provides that a lawyer shall not "intentionally or habitually violate any established rule of procedure or of evidence."

With regard to Rule 3.4(b), DR 7-102(B)(6) provides that a lawyer shall not "participate in the creation or preservation of evidence when he knows or it is obvious that the evidence is false." DR 7-109 provides that "a lawyer shall not pay, offer to pay, or acquiesce in the payment of compensation to a witness contingent on the content of his testimony or the outcome of the case. But a lawyer may advance, guarantee or acquiesce in the payment of: (1) expenses reasonably incurred by a witness in attending or testifying; (2) reasonable compensation to a witness for his loss of time in attending or testifying; (or) (3) a reasonable fee for the professional services of an expert witness." EC 7-28 states that "witnesses should always testify truthfully and should be free from any financial inducements that might tempt them to do otherwise."

Rule 3.4(c) is substantially similar to DR 7-106(A), which provides that "A lawyer shall not disregard ... a standing rule of a tribunal or a ruling of a tribunal made in the course of a proceeding, but he may take appropriate steps in good faith to test the validity of such rule or ruling."

Rule 3.4(d) has no counterpart in the Code.

Rule 3.4(e) substantially incorporates DR 7-106(C)(1), (2), (3) and (4). DR 7-106(C)(2) proscribes asking a question "intended to degrade a witness or other person," a matter dealt with in Rule 4.4. DR 7-106(C)(5), providing that a lawyer shall not "fail to comply with known local customs of courtesy or practice," is too vague to be a rule of conduct enforceable as law.

With regard to Rule 3.4(f), DR 7-104(A)(2) provides that a lawyer shall not "give advice to a person who is not represented ... other than the advice to secure counsel, if the interests of such person are or have a reasonable possibility of being in conflict with the interests of his client." Helbig v. Hooper, 200 Miss. 282, 25 So. 2d 404 (1946); Graves v. Fulton, 8 Miss. (7 Howard) 592 (1843); Middleton v. National Box Co., 38 F.2d 89 (D.C. 1930); Schloss & Rothschild v. Inducement to witness.

Although witness fees and expenses paid to victim's husband and to state's expert witness were improper, there was no indication that witnesses' testimony changed based on payments they received, and no prejudice resulting from the payments could be demonstrated. Woodward v. State, 726 So. 2d 524 (Miss. 1997), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1041, 119 S. Ct. 1338, 143 L. Ed. 2d 502 (1999).

— Suspension.

Attorney who failed to furnish obvious information to opposing counsel, and who employed deceit and misrepresentation in arranging for arrest of opposing party, merited suspension from practice of law for a period of six months. Mississippi Bar v. Robb, 684 So. 2d 615 (Miss. 1996), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1117, 117 S. Ct. 1248, 137 L. Ed. 2d 330 (1997).

Attorney who accepted compensation from bankruptcy clients without first petitioning court for approval, and who failed to tender payment to bankruptcy trustee within ninety days after signing court order agreeing to do so, was suspended from practice of law for six months. Mathes v. Mississippi Bar, 637 So. 2d 840 (Miss. 1994).

Violation of court rules.

Wilful violation of Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 1.06, adopted and effective May 29, 2003, may constitute an offense subject to suspension and other discipline under Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 3.4(c). Sanctions authorized by the rule are cumulative to discipline under the Mississippi Rules of Professional Conduct. In re Unif. Ch. Ct. Rules, — So. 2d —, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 252 (Miss. May 29, 2003).

Rule 3.5. Impartiality and decorum of the tribunal.

A lawyer shall not:

(a) seek to influence a judge, juror, prospective juror or other official by means prohibited by law;

(b) communicate ex parte with such a person during the proceeding unless authorized to do so by law or court order;

(c) communicate with a juror or prospective juror after discharge of the jury if:

(1) the communication is prohibited by law or court order: or

(2) the juror has made known to the lawyer a desire not to communicate.

(d) engage in conduct intended to disrupt a tribunal. (Amended effective November 3, 2005 to add new subsection (c).)

COMMENT

Many forms of improper influence upon a tribunal are proscribed by criminal law. Others are specified in the Code of Judicial Conduct, with which an advocate should be familiar. A lawyer is required to avoid contributing to a violation of such provisions.

The advocate's function is to present evidence and argument so that the cause may be decided according to law. Refraining from abusive or obstreperous conduct is a corollary of the advocate's right to speak on behalf of litigants. A lawyer may stand firm against abuse by a judge but should avoid reciprocation; the judge's default is no justification for similar dereliction by an advocate. An advocate can present the cause, protect the record for subsequent review and preserve professional integrity by patient firmness no less effectively than by belligerence or theatrics.

CODE COMPARISON

With regard to Rule 3.5(a), DR 7-108(A) provides that "before the trial of a case a lawyer ... shall not communicate with ... anyone he knows to be a member of the venire ...." DR 7-108(B) provides that "during the trial of a case ... a lawyer ... shall not communicate with ... a juror concerning the case." DR 7-109(C) provides that a lawyer shall not "communicate ... as to the merits of the cause with a judge or an official before whom the proceeding is pending except ... upon adequate notice to opposing counsel ... (or) as otherwise authorized by law."

With regard to Rule 3.5(b), DR 7-106(C)(6) provides that a lawyer shall not "engage in undignified or discourteous conduct which is degrading to a tribunal." Griffin v. State, 565 So. 2d 545 (Miss. 1990); Cashin v. Murphy, 132 Miss. 834, 96 So. 747 (1923); Fletcher v. State, 60 Miss. 675 (1882).

Ex parte communications.

Ex parte communication by a lawyer with a magistrate for the purposes of obtaining procedural advice is not a violation of the rule in light of the fact that it appeared to be a common and accepted practice during the time period. Mississippi Bar v. Logan, 726 So. 2d 170 (Miss. 1998).

Attorney who telephoned juror and alternate juror and recorded their conversations, and who represented to them that he had approval to talk to them when in fact he did not, received private reprimand for violation of this rule. Attorney L.S. v. Mississippi Bar, 649 So. 2d 810 (Miss. 1994).

"Other official."

A magistrate for the Supreme Court was an "other official" within the meaning of this rule even though he may not have had the authority to rule on a motion; his duties included research and preparing memorandums outlining his recommendations, which, "were quite often followed by the Court." Mississippi Bar v. Logan, 726 So. 2d 170 (Miss. 1998).

Suspension.

Attorney was suspended, partially due to prior similar conduct, for violating Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 3.5, 8.4, 8.2 where the evidence showed that the attorney made disparaging remarks to a judge relating to "paying for justice" and later told a newspaper reporter that the judge a barbarian; the statements were not protected by the First Amendment because a reasonable person would not have acted in the same manner. Miss. Bar v. Lumumba, 912 So. 2d 871 (Miss. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 546 U.S. 825, 126 S. Ct. 363, 163 L. Ed. 2d 70, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 6085, 74 U.S.L.W. 3202 (2005).

Rule 3.6. Trial publicity.

(a) A lawyer shall not make an extrajudicial statement that a reasonable person would expect to be disseminated by means of public communication if the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that it will have a substantial likelihood of materially prejudicing an adjudicative proceeding.

(b) A statement referred to in paragraph (a) ordinarily is likely to have such an effect when it refers to a civil matter triable to a jury, a criminal matter, or any other proceeding that could result in incarceration, and the statement relates to:

(1) the character, credibility, reputation or criminal record of a party, suspect in a criminal investigation or witness, or the identity of a witness, or the expected testimony of a party or witness;

(2) in a criminal case or proceeding that could result in incarceration, the possibility of a plea of guilty to the offense or the existence or contents of any confession, admission, or statement given by a defendant or suspect or that person's refusal or failure to make a statement;

(3) the performance or results of any examination or test of the refusal or failure of a person to submit to an examination or test, or the identity or nature of physical evidence expected to be presented;

(4) any opinion as to the guilt or innocence of a defendant or suspect in a criminal case or proceeding that could result in incarceration;

(5) information the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is likely to be inadmissible as evidence in a trial and would if disclosed create a substantial risk of prejudicing an impartial trial; or

(6) the fact that a defendant has been charged with a crime, unless there is included therein a statement explaining that the charge is merely an accusation and that the defendant is presumed innocent until and unless proven guilty.

(c) Notwithstanding paragraph (a) and (b)(1-5), a lawyer involved in the investigation or litigation of a matter may state without elaboration:

(1) the general nature of the claim or defense;

(2) the information contained in a public record;

(3) that an investigation of the matter is in progress, including the general scope of the investigation, the offense or claim or defense involved and, except when prohibited by law, the identity of the persons involved;

(4) the scheduling or result of any step in litigation;

(5) a request for assistance in obtaining evidence and information necessary thereto;

(6) a warning of danger concerning the behavior of a person involved, when there is reason to believe that there exists the likelihood of substantial harm to an individual or to the public interest; and

(7) in a criminal case:

(i) the identity, residence, occupation and family status of the accused;

(ii) if the accused has not been apprehended, information necessary to aid in apprehension of that person;

(iii) the fact, time and place of arrest; and

(iv) the identity of investigating and arresting officers or agencies and the length of the investigation.

COMMENT

It is difficult to strike a balance between protecting the right to a fair trial and safeguarding the right of free expression. Preserving the right to a fair trial necessarily entails some curtailment of the information that may be disseminated about a party prior to trial, particularly where trial by jury is involved. If there were no such limits, the result would be the practical nullification of the protective effect of the rules of forensic decorum and the exclusionary rules of evidence. On the other hand, there are vital social interests served by the free dissemination of information about events having legal consequences and about legal proceedings themselves. The public has a right to know about threats to its safety and measures aimed at assuring its security. It also has a legitimate interest in the conduct of judicial proceedings, particularly in matters of general public concern. Furthermore, the subject matter of legal proceedings is often of direct significance in debate and deliberation over questions of public policy.

No body of rules can simultaneously satisfy all interests of fair trial and all those of free expression. The formula in this Rule is based upon the ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility and the ABA Standards Relating to Fair Trial and Free Press, as amended in 1978.

Special rules of confidentiality may validly govern proceedings in juvenile, domestic relations and mental disability proceedings, and perhaps other types of litigation. Rule 3.4(c) requires compliance with such Rules.

CODE COMPARISON

Rule 3.6 is similar to DR 7-107, except as follows: First, Rule 3.6 adopts the general criteria of "substantial likelihood of materially prejudicing an adjudicative proceeding" to describe impermissible conduct. Second, Rule 3.6 transforms the particulars in DR 7-107 into an illustrative compilation that gives fair notice of conduct ordinarily posing unacceptable dangers to the fair administration of justice. Finally, Rule 3.6 omits DR 7-107(C)(7), which provides that a lawyer may reveal "at the time of seizure, a description of the physical evidence seized, other than a confession, admission or statement." Such revelations may be substantially prejudicial and are frequently the subject of pretrial suppression motions, which, if successful, may be circumvented by prior disclosure to the press.

Rule 3.7. Lawyer as witness.

(a) A lawyer shall not act as advocate at a trial in which the lawyer is likely to be a necessary witness except where:

(1) the testimony relates to an uncontested issue;

(2) the testimony relates to the nature and value of legal services rendered in the case; or

(3) disqualification of the lawyer would work substantial hardship on the client.

(b) A lawyer may act as advocate in a trial in which another lawyer in the lawyer's firm is likely to be called as a witness unless precluded from doing so by Rule 1.7 or Rule 1.9.

COMMENT

Combining the roles of advocate and witness can prejudice the opposing party and can involve a conflict of interest between the lawyer and client.

The opposing party has proper objection where the combination of roles may prejudice that party's rights in the litigation. A witness is required to testify on the basis of personal knowledge, while an advocate is expected to explain and comment on evidence given by others. It may not be clear whether a statement by an advocate-witness should be taken as proof or as an analysis of the proof.

Paragraph (a)(1) recognizes that if the testimony will be uncontested, the ambiguities in the dual role are purely theoretical. Paragraph (a)(2) recognizes that where the testimony concerns the extent and value of legal services rendered in the action in which the testimony is offered, permitting the lawyers to testify avoids the need for a second trial with new counsel to resolve that issue. Moreover, in such a situation the judge has first hand knowledge of the matter in issue; hence, there is less dependence on the adversary process to test the credibility of the testimony.

Apart from these two exceptions, paragraph (a)(3) recognizes that a balancing is required between the interests of the client and those of the opposing party. Whether the opposing party is likely to suffer prejudice depends on the nature of the case, the importance and probable tenor of the lawyer's testimony, and the probability that the lawyer's testimony will conflict with that of other witnesses. Even if there is risk of such prejudice, in determining whether the lawyer should be disqualified due regard must be given to the effect of disqualification on the lawyer's client. It is relevant that one or both parties could reasonably foresee that the lawyer would probably be a witness. The principle of imputed disqualification stated in Rule 1.10 has no application to this aspect of the problem.

Whether the combination of roles involves an improper conflict of interest with respect to the client is determined by Rule 1.7 or 1.9. For example, if there is likely to be substantial conflict between the testimony of the client and that of the lawyer or a member of the lawyer's firm, the representation is improper. The problem can arise whether the lawyer is called as a witness on behalf of the client or is called by the opposing party. Determining whether or not such a conflict exists is primarily the responsibility of the lawyer involved. See Comment to Rule 1.7. If a lawyer who is a member of a firm may not act as both advocate and witness by reason of conflict of interest, Rule 1.10 disqualifies the firm also.

CODE COMPARISON

DR 5-102(A) prohibits a lawyer, or the lawyer's firm, from serving as advocate if the lawyer "learns or it is obvious that he or a lawyer in his firm ought to be called as a witness on behalf of his client." DR 5-102(B) provides that a lawyer, and the lawyer's firm, may continue representation if the "lawyer learns or it is obvious that he or a lawyer in his firm may be called as a witness other than on behalf of his client ... until it is apparent that his testimony is or may be prejudicial to his client." DR 5-101(B) permits a lawyer to testify while representing a client: "(1) If the testimony will relate solely to an uncontested matter; (2) If the testimony will relate solely to a matter of formality and there is no reason to believe that substantial evidence will be offered in opposition to the testimony; (3) If the testimony will relate solely to the nature and value of legal services rendered in the case by the lawyer or his firm to the client; (4) As to any matter if refusal would work a substantial hardship on the client because of the distinctive value of the lawyer or his firm as counsel in the particular case."

The exception stated in (a)(1) consolidates provisions of DR 5-101(B)(1) and (2). Testimony relating to a formality, referred to in DR 5-101(B)(2), in effect defines the phrase "uncontested issue," and is redundant.

R. Prof. Conduct 3.7, but since it was not premised on a real conflict of interest, the attorney's firm would not be sua sponte disqualified. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Tedford, — F. Supp. 2d —, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9754 (N.D. Miss. Feb. 9, 2009).

Where plaintiff's brother represented him in an action for a prescriptive easement, the judge acted within his discretion in allowing the attorney to testify on his brother's behalf; the attorney ceased his advocacy on behalf of his brother when he was brought in to testify. Graves v. Dudley Maples, L.P., 950 So. 2d 1017 (Miss. 2007).

There was no need to challenge the authentication of the bag and its contents, which included the victim's gun, money, food stamps, and coin wrappers, because the bag was found in co-defendant's yard and only served to reinforce the defense's theory that co-defendant, not defendant, killed the victim. Therefore, one of defendant's attorney's was not ineffective for failing to withdraw from the case as she was not an authenticating witness. Branch v. State, 882 So. 2d 36 (Miss. 2004), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 125 S. Ct. 1594, 161 L. Ed. 2d 282 (2005).

Judge was well within his discretion in requiring, on his own motion, withdrawal of counsel to both parties in election contest, where both attorneys were to be witnesses on contested issues of the election. Pearson v. Parsons, 541 So. 2d 447 (Miss. 1989).

Rule 3.8. Special responsibilities of a prosecutor.

The prosecutor in a criminal case shall:

(a) refrain from prosecuting a charge that the prosecutor knows is not supported by probable cause;

(b) make reasonable efforts to assure that the accused has been advised of the right to, and the procedure for obtaining, counsel and has been given reasonable opportunity to obtain counsel;

(c) not seek to obtain from an unrepresented accused a waiver of important pretrial rights, such as the right to a preliminary hearing;

(d) make timely disclosure to the defense of all evidence or information known to the prosecutor that tends to negate the guilt of the accused or mitigates the offense, and, in connection with sentencing, disclose to the defense and to the tribunal all unprivileged mitigating information known to the prosecutor, except when the prosecutor is relieved of this responsibility by a protective order of the tribunal; and

(e) exercise reasonable care to prevent investigators, law enforcement personnel, employees or other persons assisting or associated with the prosecutor in a criminal case from making an extrajudicial statement that the prosecutor would be prohibited from making under Rule 3.6.

COMMENT

A prosecutor has the responsibility of a minister of justice and not simply that of an advocate. This responsibility carries with it specific obligations to see that the defendant is accorded procedural justice and that guilt is decided upon the basis of sufficient evidence. Precisely how far the prosecutor is required to go in this direction is a matter of debate and varies in different jurisdictions. Many jurisdictions have adopted the ABA Standards of Criminal Justice Relating to Prosecution Function, which in turn are the product of prolonged and careful deliberation by lawyers experienced in both criminal prosecution and defense. See also Rule 3.3(d), governing ex parte proceedings, among which grand jury proceedings are included. Applicable law may require other measures by the prosecutor and knowing disregard of those obligations or a systematic abuse of prosecutorial discretion could constitute a violation of Rule 8.4.

With reference to paragraphs (b) and (d), see Mississippi Uniform Criminal Rules of Circuit Court Practice, 1.04 and 4.06.

Paragraph (c) does not apply to an accused appearing pro se with the approval of the tribunal. Nor does it forbid the lawful questioning of a suspect who has knowingly waived the rights to counsel and silence.

The exception in paragraph (d) recognizes that a prosecutor may seek an appropriate protective order from the tribunal if disclosure of information to the defense could result in substantial harm to an individual or to the public interest.

CODE COMPARISON

DR 7-103(A) provides that "A public prosecutor ... shall not institute ... criminal charges when he knows or it is obvious that the charges are not supported by probable cause." DR 7-103(B) provides that "A public prosecutor ... shall make timely disclosure ... of the existence of evidence, known to the prosecutor ... that tends to negate the guilt of the accused, mitigate the degree of the offense, or reduce the punishment."

Rule 3.9. Advocate in non-adjudicative proceedings.

A lawyer representing a client before a legislative body or administrative agency in a nonadjudicative proceeding shall disclose that the appearance is in a representative capacity and shall conform to the provisions of Rules 3.3(a) through (c), 3.4(a) through (c), and 3.5. (Amended effective November 3, 2005 to adopt language: "legislative body or administrative agency" to replace prior text.)

COMMENT

In representation before bodies such as legislature, municipal councils, and executive and administrative agencies acting in a rule-making or policy-making capacity, lawyers present facts, formulate issues and advance argument in the matters under consideration. The decision-making body, like a court, should be able to rely on the integrity of the submissions made to it. A lawyer appearing before such a body should deal with the tribunal honestly and in conformity with applicable rules of procedure.

Lawyers have no exclusive right to appear before nonadjudicative bodies, as they do before a court. The requirements of this Rule therefore may subject lawyers to regulations inapplicable to advocates who are not lawyers. However, legislatures and administrative agencies have a right to expect lawyers to deal with them as they deal with courts.

This Rule does not apply to representation of a client in a negotiation or other bilateral transaction with a governmental agency; representation in such a transaction is governed by Rules 4.1 through 4.4.

CODE COMPARISON

EC 7-15 states that "A lawyer appearing before an administrative agency, regardless of the nature of the proceeding it is conducting, has the continuing duty to advance the cause of his client within the bounds of the law." EC 7-16 states that "When a lawyer appears in connection with proposed legislation, he ... should comply with applicable laws and regulations." EC 8-5 states that "Fraudulent, deceptive, or otherwise illegal conduct by a participant in a proceeding before a ... legislative body should never be participated in ... by lawyers." DR 7-106(B)(1) provides that "In presenting a matter to a tribunal, a lawyer shall disclose ... unless privileged or irrelevant, the identity of the clients he represents and of the persons who employed him."

TRANSACTIONS WITH PERSONS OTHER THAN CLIENTS

Rule 4.1. Truthfulness in statements to others.

In the course of representing a client a lawyer shall not knowingly:

(a) make a false statement of material fact or law to a third person; or

(b) fail to disclose a material fact to a third person when disclosure is necessary to avoid assisting a criminal or fraudulent act by a client.

COMMENT

Misrepresentation. — A lawyer is required to be truthful when dealing with others on a client's behalf, but generally has no affirmative duty to inform an opposing party of relevant facts. A misrepresentation can occur if the lawyer incorporates or affirms a statement of another person that the lawyer knows is false. Misrepresentations can also occur by failure to act or by partially true but misleading statements or omissions that are the equivalent of affirmative false statements. For dishonest conduct that does not amount to a false statement or for misrepresentations by a lawyer other than in the course of representing a client, see Rule 8.4.

Statements of Fact. — This Rule refers to statements of fact. Whether a particular statement should be regarded as one of fact can depend on the circumstances. Under generally accepted conventions in negotiation, certain types of statements ordinarily are not taken as statements of material fact. Estimates of price or value placed on the subject of a transaction and a party's intentions as to an acceptable settlement of a claim are in this category, and so is the existence of an undisclosed principal except where nondisclosure of the principal would constitute fraud.

Fraud by Client. — Paragraph (b) recognizes that substantive law, for example, Miss. Code Ann. Section 97-1-3 (1972), may require a lawyer to disclose certain information to avoid being deemed to have assisted the client's crime or fraud. The requirement of disclosure created by this paragraph is, however, subject to the obligations created by Rule 1.6.

[Amended effective November 3, 2005.]

CODE COMPARISON

Rule 4.1(a) is substantially similar to DR 7-102(A)(5), which states that "In his representation of a client, a lawyer shall not ... knowingly make a false statement of law or fact."

With regard to Rule 4.1(b), DR 7-102(A)(3) provides that a lawyer shall not "conceal or knowingly fail to disclose that which he is required by law to reveal." James v. State, 77 Miss. 370, 26 So. 929, 78 Am. St. R. 527 (1900); Thomas v. Cook, 236 Miss. 365, 109 So. 2d 861 (1959); Huston v. King, 119 Miss. 347, 80 So. 779 (1919); 13 A.L.R.4th 1060.

Attorney who failed to furnish obvious information to opposing counsel, and who employed deceit and misrepresentation in arranging for arrest of opposing party, merited suspension from practice of law for a period of six months. Attorney who forged client's signature on motion, and then deliberately deceived court regarding authenticity of the signature, was suspended from practice of law for one hundred eighty days. Goodsell v. Mississippi Bar, 667 So. 2d 7 (Miss. 1996).

Taping of telephone conversations.

Attorney who telephoned juror and alternate juror and recorded their conversations, and who represented to them that he had approval to talk to them when in fact he did not, received private reprimand for violation of this rule. Attorney L.S. v. Mississippi Bar, 649 So. 2d 810 (Miss. 1994).

Although attorney was acting to protect his client's interests in surreptitiously taping telephone conversations with judge and police chief, attorney violated this rule when he blatantly denied, when asked, that he was taping the conversations. Mississippi Bar v. Attorney ST, 621 So. 2d 229 (Miss. 1993).

Rule 4.2. Communication with person represented by counsel.

In representing a client, a lawyer shall not communicate about the subject of the representation with a party the lawyer knows to be represented by another lawyer in the matter, unless the lawyer has the consent of the other lawyer or is authorized by law to do so.

COMMENT

This Rule does not prohibit communication with a party, or an employee or agent of a party, concerning matters outside the representation. For example, the existence of a controversy between a government agency and a private party, or between two organizations, does not prohibit a lawyer for either from communicating with nonlawyer representatives of the other regarding a separate matter. Also, parties to a matter may communicate directly with each other and a lawyer having independent justification for communicating with the other party is permitted to do so. Communications authorized by law include, for example, the right of a party to a controversy with a government agency to speak with government officials about the matter.

In the case of an organization, this rule prohibits communications by a lawyer for one party concerning the matter in representation with persons having a managerial responsibility on behalf of the organization, and with any other person whose act or omission in connection with that matter may be imputed to the organization for purposes of civil or criminal liability or whose statement may constitute an admission on the part of the organization. If an agent or employee of the organization is represented in the matter by his or her own counsel, the consent by that counsel to a communication will be sufficient for purposes of this Rule. Compare Rule 3.4(f).

This Rule also covers any person, whether or not a party to a formal proceeding, who is represented by counsel concerning the matter in question.

CODE COMPARISON

This Rule is substantially identical to DR 7-104(A)(1). Premeaux v. Smith, 569 So. 2d 681 (Miss. 1990).

Rule 4.3. Dealing with unrepresented person.

In dealing on behalf of a client with a person who is not represented by counsel, a lawyer shall not state or imply that the lawyer is disinterested. When the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the unrepresented person misunderstands the lawyer's role in the matter, the lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to correct the misunderstanding. The lawyer shall not give legal advice to an unrepresented person, other than the advice to secure counsel, if the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the interests of such a person are or have a reasonably possibility of being in conflict with the interests of the client. In dealing on behalf of a client with a person who is not represented by counsel, a lawyer shall not state or imply that the lawyer is disinterested. When the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the unrepresented person misunderstands the lawyer's role in the matter, the lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to correct the misunderstanding. (Amended effective November 3, 2005 to cover giving legal advice to unrepresented persons.)

COMMENT

An unrepresented person, particularly one not experienced in dealing with legal matters, might assume that a lawyer is disinterested in loyalties or is a disinterested authority on the law even when the lawyer represents a client. During the course of a lawyer's representation of a client, the lawyer should not give advice to an unrepresented person other than the advice to obtain counsel.

CODE COMPARISON

There is no direct counterpart to this Rule in the Code. DR 7-104(A)(2) provides that a lawyer shall not "give advice to a person who is not represented by a lawyer, other than the advice to secure counsel...."

See Supplement to MSB Ethics Opinion No. 80.

Rule 4.4. Respect for rights of third persons.

(a) In representing a client, a lawyer shall not use means that have no substantial purpose other than to embarrass, delay, or burden a third person, or use methods of obtaining evidence that violate the legal rights of such a person.

(b) A lawyer who receives a document relating to the representation of the lawyer's client and knows or reasonably should know that the document was inadvertently sent shall promptly notify the sender. (Amended effective November 3, 2005 to add new subsection (b).)

COMMENT

Responsibility to a client requires a lawyer to subordinate the interests of others to those of the client, but that responsibility does not imply that a lawyer may disregard the rights of third persons. It is impractical to catalogue all such rights, but they include legal restrictions on methods of obtaining evidence from third persons and unwarranted intrusions into privileged relationships, such as the attorney-client relationship.

Paragraph (b) recognizes that lawyers sometimes receive documents that were mistakenly sent or produced by opposing parties or other lawyers. If a lawyer knows or reasonably should know that such a document was sent inadvertently, then this rule requires the lawyer to promptly notify the sender in order to permit that person to take protective measures. Whether the lawyer is required to take additional steps, such as returning the original document, is a matter of law beyond the scope of these rules, as is the question of whether the privileged status of a document has been waived. Similarly, this rule does not address the legal duties of a lawyer who receives a document that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know may have been wrongfully obtained by the sending person. For purposes of this rule, "document" includes e-mail or other electronic modes of transmission subject to being read or put into readable form.

Some lawyers may choose to return a document unread, for example, when the lawyer learns before receiving the document that it is inadvertently sent to the wrong address. Where a lawyer is not required by applicable law to do so, the decision to voluntarily return such a document is a matter of professional judgment ordinarily reserved to the lawyer. See Rules 1.2 and 1.4.

DR 7-108(D) provides that "after discharge of the jury ... the lawyer shall not ask questions of or make comments to a member of that jury that are calculated merely to harass or embarrass the juror ..." LAW FIRMS AND ASSOCIATIONS

Rule 5.1. Responsibilities of a partner or supervisory lawyer.

(a) A partner in a law firm, and a lawyer who individually or together with other lawyers possesses comparable managerial authority in a law firm, shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the firm has in effect measures giving reasonable assurance that all lawyers in the firm conform to the rules of professional conduct.

(b) A lawyer having direct supervisory authority over another lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the other lawyer conforms to the rules of professional conduct.

(c) A lawyer shall be responsible for another lawyer's violation of the rules of professional conduct if:

(1) the lawyer orders or, with knowledge of the specific conduct, ratifies the conduct involved; or

(2) the lawyer is a partner in the law firm or has comparable managerial authority in which the other lawyer practices, or has direct supervisory authority over the other lawyer, and knows of the conduct at a time when its consequences can be avoided or mitigated but fails to take reasonable remedial action. (Amended effective November 3, 2005 to include in coverage not only partners but also those in comparable managerial authority.)

COMMENT

Paragraphs (a) and (b) refer to lawyers who have supervisory and/or managerial authority over the professional work of a firm or legal department of a government agency. This includes members of a partnership and, the shareholders in a law firm organized as a professional corporation, and members of other associations authorized to practice law; lawyers having comparable managerial authority in a legal services organization or a law department of an enterprise or government agency; and lawyers who have immediate managerial responsibilities in a firm. Paragraph (b) applies to lawyers who have supervisory authority over the work of other lawyers in a firm.

Paragraph (a) requires lawyers with managerial authority within a firm to make reasonable efforts to establish internal policies and procedures designed to provide reasonable assurance that all lawyers in the firm will conform to the Rules of Professional Conduct. Such policies and procedures include those designed to detect and resolve conflicts of interest, identify dates by which actions must be taken in pending matters, account for client funds and property and ensure that inexperienced lawyers are properly supervised.

The measures required to fulfill the responsibility prescribed in paragraphs (a) and (b) can depend on the firm's structure and the nature of its practice. In a small firm, informal supervision and occasional admonition ordinarily might be sufficient. In a large firm, or in practice situations in which intensely difficult ethical problems frequently arise, more elaborate procedures may be necessary. Some firms, for example, have a procedure whereby junior lawyers can make confidential referral of ethical problems directly to a designated senior partner or special committee. See Rule 5.2. Firms, whether large or small, may also rely on continuing legal education in professional ethics. In any event, the ethical atmosphere of a firm can influence the conduct of all its members and a lawyer having authority over the work of another may not assume that the subordinate lawyer will inevitably conform to the Rules.

Paragraph (c)(1) expresses a general principle of responsibility for acts of another. See also Rule 8.4(a).

Paragraph (c)(2) defines the duty of a lawyer having direct supervisory authority over performance of specific legal work by another lawyer. Whether a lawyer has such supervisory authority in particular circumstances is a question of fact. Partners of a private firm have at least indirect responsibility for all work being done by the firm, while a partner in charge of a particular matter ordinarily has direct authority over other firm lawyers engaged in the matter. Appropriate remedial action by a partner would depend on the immediacy of the partner's involvement and the seriousness of the misconduct.

The supervisor is required to intervene to prevent avoidable consequences of misconduct if the supervisor knows that the misconduct occurred. Thus, if a supervising lawyer knows that a subordinate misrepresented a matter to an opposing party in negotiation, the supervisor as well as the subordinate has a duty to correct the resulting misapprehension.

Professional misconduct by a lawyer under supervision could reveal a violation of paragraph (b) on the part of the supervisory lawyer even though it does not entail a violation of paragraph (c) because there was no direction, ratification or knowledge of the violation.

Apart from this Rule and Rule 8.4(a), a lawyer does not have disciplinary liability for the conduct of a partner, associate or subordinate. Whether a lawyer may be liable civilly or criminally for another lawyer's conduct is a question of law beyond the scope of these Rules.

The duties imposed by this Rule on managing and supervising lawyers do not alter the personal duty of each lawyer in a firm to abide by the Rules of Professional Conduct. See Rule 5.2(a).

[Amended effective November 3, 2005.]

CODE COMPARISON

There is no direct counterpart to this Rule in the Code. DR 1-103(A) provides that "A lawyer possessing unprivileged knowledge of a violation of DR 1-102 shall report such knowledge to ... authority empowered to investigate or act upon such violation."

Rule 5.2. Responsibilities of a subordinate lawyer.

(a) A lawyer is bound by the rules of professional conduct notwithstanding that the lawyer acted at the direction of another person.

(b) A subordinate lawyer does not violate the rules of professional conduct if that lawyer acts in accordance with a supervisory lawyer's reasonable resolution of an arguable question of professional duty.

COMMENT

Although a lawyer is not relieved of responsibility for a violation by the fact that the lawyer acted at the direction of a supervisor, that fact may be relevant in determining whether a lawyer had the knowledge required to render conduct a violation of the Rules. For example, if a subordinate filed a frivolous pleading at the direction of a supervisor, the subordinate would not be guilty of a professional violation unless the subordinate knew of the document's frivolous character.

When lawyers in a supervisor-subordinate relationship encounter a matter involving professional judgment as to ethical duty, the supervisor may assume responsibility for making the judgment. Otherwise a consistent course of action or position could not be taken. If the question can reasonably be answered only one way, the duty of both lawyers is clear and they are equally responsible for fulfilling it. However, if the question is reasonably arguable, someone has to decide upon the course of action. That authority ordinarily reposes in the supervisor, and a subordinate may be guided accordingly. For example, if a question arises whether the interests of two clients conflict under Rule 1.7, the supervisor's reasonable resolution of the question should protect the subordinate professionally if the resolution is subsequently challenged.

CODE COMPARISON

There is no counterpart to this Rule in the Code.

Rule 5.3. Responsibilities regarding non-lawyer assistants.

With respect to a non-lawyer employed or retained by or associated with a lawyer:

(a) a partner, and a lawyer who individually or together with other lawyers possesses comparable managerial authority in a law firm shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the firm has in effect measures giving reasonable assurance that the person's conduct is compatible with the professional obligations of the lawyer;

(b) a lawyer having direct supervisory authority over the nonlawyer shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the person's conduct is compatible with the professional obligations of the lawyer;

(c) a lawyer shall be responsible for conduct of such a person that would be a violation of the rules of professional conduct if engaged in by a lawyer if:

(1) the lawyer orders or, with the knowledge of the specific conduct, ratifies the conduct involved; or

(2) the lawyer is a partner or has comparable managerial authority in the law firm in which the person is employed, or has direct supervisory authority over the person, and knows of the conduct at a time when its consequences can be avoided or mitigated but fails to take reasonable remedial action. (Amended effective November 3, 2005 to add scope to include as well as partners, other lawyers possessing managerial authority.)

COMMENT

Lawyers generally employ assistants in their practice, including secretaries, investigators, law student interns, and paraprofessionals. Such assistants, whether employees or independent contractors, act for the lawyer in the rendition of the lawyer's professional services. A lawyer must make reasonable efforts to give such assistants appropriate instruction and supervision concerning the ethical aspects of their employment, particularly regarding the obligation not to disclose information relating to representation of the client, and should be responsible for their work product. The measures employed in supervising non-lawyers should take account of the fact that they do not have legal training and are not subject to professional discipline.

Paragraph (a) requires lawyers with managerial authority within a law firm to make reasonable efforts to establish internal policies and procedures designed to provide reasonable assurance that nonlawyers in the firm will act in a way compatible with the Rules of Professional Conduct. See Comment to Rule 5.1. Paragraph (b) applies to lawyers who have supervisory authority over the work of a nonlawyer. Paragraph (c) specifies the circumstances in which a lawyer is responsible for conduct of a nonlawyer that would be a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct if engaged in by a lawyer.

CODE COMPARISON

There is no direct counterpart to this Rule in the Code. DR 4-101(D) provides that "A lawyer shall exercise reasonable care to prevent his employees, associates and others whose services are utilized by him from disclosing or using confidences or secrets of a client...." DR 7-107(J) provides that "A lawyer shall exercise reasonable care to prevent his employees and associates from making an extrajudicial statement that he would be prohibited from making under DR 7-107."

Inadequate supervision of paralegal.

With respect to an attorney whose paralegal falsely communicated to a prisoner that the attorney had agreed to work on the prisoner's case, the attorney violated Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 5.3 and 5.5(b) by inadequately supervising the paralegal's work and effectively assisting him in the unauthorized practice of law. Miss. Bar v. Thompson, 5 So. 3d 330 (Miss. 2008).

Paralegal's prior work for opposing party's prior counsel.

Where a paralegal worked for defendant lenders' prior counsel, and then worked for different plaintiff consumers' counsel, and all the consumer fraud cases involved the same lenders, claims and documents, and nearly identical facts, a substantial relationship existed requiring disqualification of plaintiff consumers' counsel under Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.6, 1.9(a), and1.10(b); plaintiff consumers' counsel was on notice of the conflict when it hired the paralegal due to the paralegal informing the firm of her prior employment with the lender's prior counsel, and thus, plaintiff consumers' counsel was required, under Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 5.3(b), to ensure that the paralegal was not allowed access to the consumer fraud case files, which was not done. Owens v. First Family Fin. Servs., 379 F. Supp. 2d 840 (S.D. Miss. 2005).

Rule 5.4. Professional independence of a lawyer.

(a) A lawyer or law firm shall not share legal fees with a nonlawyer, except that:

(1) an agreement by a lawyer with the lawyer's firm, partner, or associate may provide for the payment of money, over a reasonable period of time after the lawyer's death, to the lawyer's estate or to one or more specified persons;

(2) a lawyer who purchases the practice of law of a deceased, disabled or disappeared lawyer may pursuant to the provisions of Rule 1.17, pay to the estate or other representative of that lawyer the agreed-upon purchase price; and

(3) a lawyer or law firm may include nonlawyer employees in a compensation or retirement plan, even though the plan is based in whole or in part on a profit-sharing arrangement.

(b) A lawyer shall not form a partnership with a nonlawyer if any of the activities of the partnership consist of the practice of law.

(c) A lawyer shall not permit a person who recommends, employs, or pays the lawyer to render legal services for another to direct or regulate the lawyer's professional judgment in rendering such legal services.

(d) A lawyer shall not practice with or in the form of a professional corporation or association authorized to practice law for a profit, if:

(1) a nonlawyer owns any interest therein, except that a fiduciary representative of the estate of a lawyer may hold the stock or interest of the lawyer for a reasonable time during administration;

(2) a nonlawyer is a corporate director or officer thereof; or

(3) a nonlawyer has the right to direct or control the professional judgment of a lawyer. (Amended August 20, 1998.)

COMMENT

The provisions of this Rule express traditional limitations on sharing fees. These limitations are to protect the lawyer's professional independence of judgment. Where someone other than the client pays the lawyer's fee or salary, or recommends employment of the lawyer, that arrangement does not modify the lawyer's obligation to the client. As stated in paragraph (c), such arrangements should not interfere with the lawyer's professional judgment.

CODE COMPARISON

DR 3-102(a) provides that "A lawyer or law firm shall not share legal fees with a nonlawyer ...." DR 3-103(A) provides that "A lawyer shall not form a partnership with a nonlawyer if any of the activities of the partnership consist of the practice of law." DR 5-107(B) provides that "A lawyer shall not permit a person who recommends, employs, or pays him to render legal services for another to direct or regulate his professional judgment in rendering such legal services." DR 5-107(C) provides that "A lawyer shall not practice with or in the form of a professional corporation or association authorized to practice law for a profit, if: (1) A nonlawyer owns any interests therein, except that a fiduciary representative of the estate of a lawyer may hold the stock or interest of the lawyer for a reasonable time during administration; (2) A nonlawyer is a corporate director or officer thereof; or (3) A nonlawyer has the right to direct or control the professional judgment of the lawyer." EC 5-24 states that "A lawyer should not practice with or in the form of a professional legal corporation, even though the corporate form is permitted by law, if any director, officer, or stockholder of it is a nonlawyer. Although a lawyer may be employed by a business corporation with nonlawyers serving as directors or officers, and they necessarily have the right to make decisions of business policy, a lawyer must decline to accept direction of his professional judgment from any layman. Various types of legal aid offices are administered by boards of directors composed of lawyers and laymen. A lawyer should not accept employment from such an organization unless the board sets only broad policies and there is no interference in the relationship of the lawyer and the individual client he serves. Where a lawyer is employed by an organization, a written agreement that defines the relationship between him and the organization and provides for his independence is desirable since it may serve to prevent misunderstanding as to their respective roles. Although other innovations in the means of supplying legal counsel may develop, the responsibility of the lawyer to maintain his professional independence remains constant ...."

Construction.

As an exception to the fee-sharing prohibition, Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 5.4(a)(3) contemplates a compensation or retirement plan that is dependant on a periodic evaluation of the financial health of the law firm. Bolen v. Crowe (In re Holmes), 304 B.R. 292 (Bankr. N.D. Miss. 2004).

Purpose.

Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 5.4 serves to discourage the unauthorized practice of law by lay persons, as well as prevent a nonlawyer from acquiring a pecuniary interest in the disposition of a case that could possibly take preeminence over the client's best interest. Bolen v. Crowe (In re Holmes), 304 B.R. 292 (Bankr. N.D. Miss. 2004).

Sanctions.

— Suspension.

Attorney who used various inethical means to solicit employment was suspended from practice of law for an indefinite period, with reinstatement contingent on successfully passing all sections of Mississippi Bar Examination. Emil v. Mississippi Bar, 690 So. 2d 301 (Miss. 1997).

Illustrative cases.

Where a bankruptcy attorney paid bonuses to his nonlawyer employees when clients paid a retainer, returned their bankruptcy questionnaire, or signed living wills/durable powers of attorney, and failed to disclose the arrangement to the bankruptcy court, the bonuses violated 11 U.S.C.S. § 504(a) and Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 5.4(a), and also violated the disclosure requirements of Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2016(b); the attorney could not avail himself of the exception to the fee-sharing prohibition set forth in Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 5.4(a)(3) because the arrangement conveyed a pecuniary interest to the nonlawyer employee that was directly dependent on a decision that the client was called upon to make. Bolen v. Crowe (In re Holmes), 304 B.R. 292 (Bankr. N.D. Miss. 2004).

The evidence established that an attorney improperly shared a fee with his paralegal, notwithstanding testimony of the attorney and the paralegal denying a sharing of a fee, where the attorney wrote a check to the paralegal representing half of the settlement proceeds of a case on the same day the attorney received his fee for the case. Attorney AAA v. Mississippi Bar, 735 So. 2d 294 (Miss. 1999).

Rule 5.5. Unauthorized practice of law.

A lawyer shall not:

(a) practice law in a jurisdiction where doing so violates the regulation of the legal profession in that jurisdiction; or

(b) assist a person who is not a member of the bar in the performance of activity that constitutes the unauthorized practice of law.

Cross References — Admission and conduct of attorneys, see Mississippi Code of 1972, §§ 73-3-1 et seq.

Restrictions of certain persons to practice law, see Mississippi Code of 1972, § 73-3-45.

Unlawful to practice law without a license, see Mississippi Code of 1972, § 73-3-55.

COMMENT

The definition of the practice of law is established by law and varies from one jurisdiction to another. Whatever the definition, limiting the practice of law to members of the bar protects the public against rendition of legal services by unqualified persons. Paragraph (b) does not prohibit a lawyer from employing the services of paraprofessionals and delegating functions to them, so long as the lawyer supervises the delegated work and retains responsibility for their work. See Rule 5.3. Likewise, it does not prohibit lawyers from providing professional advice and instruction to nonlawyers whose employment requires knowledge of law; for example, claims adjusters, employees of financial or commercial institutions, social workers, accountants and persons employed in government agencies. In addition, a lawyer may counsel nonlawyers who wish to proceed pro se.

CODE COMPARISON

With regard to Rule 5.5(a), DR 3-101(B) of the Code provides that "A lawyer shall not practice law in a jurisdiction where to do so would be in violation of regulations of the profession in that jurisdiction."

With regard to Rule 5.5(b), DR 3-101(A) of the Code provides that "A lawyer shall not aid a nonlawyer in the unauthorized practice of law."

See MSB Ethics Opinions Nos. 25, 32, 33 and 96. Cates v. Allen, 149 U.S. 451, 13 S. Ct. 883, 37 L. Ed. 804 (1893), superseded by statute on other grounds as stated in Kunkel v. Topmaster Int'l, Inc., 906 F.2d 693 (1990), criticized in In re Bonham, 33 Bankr. Ct. Dec. (CRR) 642 (Bankr. D. Alaska 1998).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Assisting nonlawyer in unauthorized practice.

Assisting nonlawyer in unauthorized practice.

With respect to an attorney whose paralegal falsely communicated to a prisoner that the attorney had agreed to work on the prisoner's case, the attorney violated Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 5.3 and 5.5(b) by inadequately supervising the paralegal's work and effectively assisting him in the unauthorized practice of law. Miss. Bar v. Thompson, 5 So. 3d 330 (Miss. 2008).

Practice while suspended.

Appropriate penalty for practicing law while under an order of suspension is disbarment. Carter v. Mississippi Bar, 654 So. 2d 505 (Miss. 1995).

Rule 5.6. Restrictions on right to practice.

A lawyer shall not participate in offering or making:

(a) a partnership or employment agreement that restricts the rights of a lawyer to practice after termination of the relationship, except an agreement concerning benefits upon retirement; or

(b) an agreement in which a restriction on the lawyer's right to practice is part of the settlement of a controversy between private parties.

This Rule does not prohibit restrictions that may be included in the terms of the sale of a law practice pursuant to Rule 1.17. (Amended August 20, 1998.)

COMMENT

An agreement restricting the right of partners or associates to practice after leaving a firm not only limits their professional autonomy but also limits the freedom of clients to choose a lawyer. Paragraph (a) prohibits such agreements except for restrictions incident to provisions concerning retirement benefits for service with the firm.

Paragraph (b) prohibits a lawyer from agreeing not to represent other persons in connection with settling a claim on behalf of a client.

CODE COMPARISON

Rule 5.6 is substantially similar to DR 2-108.

PUBLIC SERVICE

Rule 6.1. Voluntary pro bono public service.

(a) Professional Responsibility. Each member of the Mississippi Bar in good standing and not exempt hereunder, as part of the member's professional responsibility, should (1) render pro bono legal services to the poor and (2) participate, to the extent possible, in other pro bono service activities that directly relate to the legal needs of the poor.

(b) Discharge of the Professional Responsibility to Provide Pro Bono Legal Services to the Poor. The professional responsibility to provide pro bono legal services to the poor may be discharged by:

(1) annually providing at least 20 hours of pro bono legal services to the poor, or

(2) annually providing at least 20 hours of pro bono legal services to charitable, religious, civic, community, governmental or educational organizations for the purpose of providing legal counsel and representation to the poor, or

(3) making an annual contribution of at least $200 to the Mississippi Bar, which will be used by the Bar to provide legal services to the poor through legal aid organizations.

(c) Collective Discharge of the Professional Responsibility to Provide Pro Bono Legal Service to the Poor. Each member of the bar should strive to individually satisfy the member's professional responsibility to provide pro bono legal service to the poor. Collective satisfaction of this professional responsibility is permitted by law firms only under a collective satisfaction plan that has been previously approved by The Mississippi Bar and only when providing pro bono legal services to the poor

(1) in a major case or matter involving a substantial expenditure of time and resources; or

(2) through a full-time community or public service staff, or

(3) other government lawyers who are prohibited from performing legal services by constitutional, statutory, rule, other regulatory prohibitions, or by employment policies,

(d) Exemptions. Those exempt from the provisions of this rule are:

(1) those lawyers who are restricted from practicing law outside their specific employment,

(2) members of the judiciary and their staff,

(3) other government lawyers who are prohibited from performing legal services by constitutional, statutory, rule, other regulatory prohibitions, or by employment policies,

(4) attorneys employed in established Legal Services Programs, and

(5) members of the bar who have acquired inactive or active exempt status or who are suspended.

Nevertheless, exempt attorneys are encouraged to assist in meeting the needs of the poor for legal services to the extent that they can, whether by monetary contributions or otherwise.

(e) Reporting Requirements. Each member of the bar shall annually certify whether the member has satisfied the member's professional responsibility to provide pro bono legal services to the poor. Each member shall certify this information through a form that is made a part of the member's annual membership fees statement which shall require the member to report the following information:

(1) the number of hours the attorney dedicated to pro bono legal services,

(2) whether the attorney satisfied the obligation through a collective plan, the name or nature of that plan, and

(3) if the attorney has satisfied the obligation by contribution, the amount of that contribution.

If the attorney has not provided pro bono legal services to the poor in the current year, the form shall so state, and the reason for non-compliance shall be stated. If the attorney is exempt from the obligation to provide pro bono services to the poor, the report shall so state and indicate the nature of the exemption.

(f) Compliance. The provisions of Rule 6.1(b) are aspirational goals and an affirmation of professional responsibility, but are not mandatory and do not constitute a basis for discipline under the Rules of Discipline for the Mississippi Bar.

The reporting requirements of Rule 6.1(e) are mandatory and the failure to report this information shall be treated in the same manner as failure to pay dues or comply with mandatory Continuing Legal Education.

The Bar shall from time to time, but at least annually, provide the Supreme Court with statistical data regarding compliance, providing such information in such form as the Chief Justice shall direct.

(g) Credit Toward Professional Responsibility in Future Years. In the event that more than 20 hours of pro bono legal service to the poor are provided and reported in any 1 year, the hours in excess of 20 may be carried forward and reported as such for up to 2 succeeding years. (Amended effective September 12, 1996; amended effective March 24, 2005.)

COMMENT

Every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional work load, has a responsibility to provide legal services to those unable to pay, and personal involvement in the problems of the disadvantaged can be one of the most rewarding experiences in the life of a lawyer. All lawyers are urged to provide a minimum of 20 hours of pro bono services to the poor annually. Pro bono legal service to the poor is an integral and particular part of a lawyer's pro bono public service responsibility. As our society has become one in which rights and responsibilities are increasingly defined in legal terms, access to legal services has become of critical importance. This is true for all people, be they rich, poor, or of moderate means. However, because the legal problems of the poor often involve areas of basic need, their inability to obtain legal services can have dire consequences. The vast unmet legal needs of the poor in Mississippi have been recognized by the Supreme Court of Mississippi. The Supreme Court has further recognized the necessity of finding a solution to the problem of providing the poor greater access to legal service and the unique role of lawyers in our adversarial system of representing and defending persons against the actions and conduct of governmental entities, individuals, and non-governmental entities. As an officer of the court, each member of The Mississippi Bar in good standing has a professional responsibility to provide pro bono legal service to the poor.

Certain lawyers, however, are prohibited from performing legal services outside their employment by constitutional, statutory, rule, or other regulatory prohibitions, or by the policies of their employers. Consequently, members of the judiciary and their staffs, government lawyers who are prohibited from performing legal services by constitutional, statutory, rule, or regulatory prohibitions, members of the bar who are inactive, or suspended are exempt from participation in this program. Those exempt (other than those suspended) and others who, although licensed to do so, do not engage in the practice of law and those who are prevented by their employment from performing legal services for those other than their employers, are, however, encouraged to meet the professional responsibility to render public service to the extent that they can. For definition of "inactive members," see Miss. Code Ann. § 73-3-120(b). These attorneys, should attempt to serve the public good through activities which do not involve pro bono services but promote the public understanding of the legal system. These might include serving, without compensation, in public information and educational programs such as Law Day programs, high school moot court programs, CLE programs and the like.

Attorneys who are employed in Legal Services Programs are specifically exempt, it being recognized that they have chosen to dedicate their entire professional activities to assisting the poor.

In discharging the professional responsibility to provide pro bono legal service to the poor, each lawyer should furnish a minimum of twenty hours of pro bono legal service to the poor annually or contribute $200 to the Mississippi Bar, which will be used by the Bar to provide legal services to indigents through legal aid organizations. "Pro bono legal service" means legal service rendered without charge or expectation of a fee for the lawyer at the time the service commences. Legal services written off as bad debts do not qualify as pro bono service. Most pro bono service should involve civil proceedings where there is no governmental obligation to provide counsel, given that government must provide indigent representation in most criminal matters. Pro bono legal service to the poor is to be provided not only to those persons whose household incomes are below the federal poverty standard but also to those persons society sees as unable to pay for legal services, those frequently referred to as the "working poor." Lawyers providing pro bono legal service on their own need not undertake an investigation to determine client eligibility. Rather, a good faith determination by the lawyer of client eligibility is sufficient. Pro bono legal service to the poor need not be provided only through legal services to individuals; it can also be provided through legal services to charitable, religious, or educational organizations whose overall mission and activities are designed predominantly to address the needs of the poor. For example, legal service to organizations such as a church, civic, or community service organizations relating to a project seeking to address the problems of the poor would qualify. Awards of statutory attorney's fees in a case originally accepted as pro bono would not disqualify such services from inclusion under this section.

While the personal involvement of each lawyer in the provision of pro bono legal service to the poor is generally preferable, such personal involvement may not always be possible or produce the ultimate desired result, that is, a significant maximum increase in the quantity and quality of legal service provided to the poor. The annual contribution alternative recognizes a lawyer's professional responsibility to provide financial assistance to increase and improve the delivery of legal service to the poor when a lawyer cannot or decides not to provide legal service to the poor through the contribution of time. Also, there is no prohibition against a lawyer contributing a combination of hours and financial support.

The amount of dollar contribution does not and is not intended to equate with 20 hours of services at the customary hourly rate of private practitioner. It does, however, provide an alternative recognizing that contributions to established legal services organizations can, in some cases, provide a more efficient mechanism for reaching those in need.

The limited provision allowing for collective satisfaction of the 20-hour standard recognizes the importance of encouraging law firms to undertake the pro bono legal representation of the poor in substantial, complex matters requiring significant expenditures of law firm resources and time and costs, and through the establishment of full-time community or public service staffs. When a law firm uses collective satisfaction, the total hours of legal services provided in such substantial, complex matters or through a full-time community or public service staff should be credited among the firm's lawyers in a fair and reasonable manner as determined by the firm.

Neither providing pro bono services nor contributing is mandatory and failure to do so does not result in discipline as a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct under the Rules of Discipline. However, attorneys are required to comply with the reporting requirements of Rule 6.1(e). The simple reporting requirement of Rule 6.1(e) is designed to provide a sound basis for evaluating the results achieved by this rule, and to remind lawyers of their professional responsibility under this rule. The reporting is designed to be as simple as possible, and does not require itemization of services rendered. Failure to comply with the reporting requirements is handled in the same manner as failure to pay bar dues.

It is recognized that in some years a lawyer may render greater or fewer hours than the annual standard specified, but during the course of his or her legal career, each lawyer should render on average per year, the number of hours set forth in this Rule. Services can be performed in civil matters or in criminal or quasi-criminal matters for which there is no government obligation to provide funds for legal representation.

Rule 6.2. Accepting appointments.

A lawyer shall not seek to avoid appointment by a tribunal to represent a person except for good cause, such as:

(a) representing the client to likely to result in violation of the rules of professional conduct or other law;

(b) representing the client is likely to result in an unreasonable financial burden on the lawyer; or

(c) the client or the cause is so repugnant to the lawyer as to be likely to impair the client-lawyer relationship or the lawyer's ability to represent the client.

COMMENT

A lawyer ordinarily is not obliged to accept a client whose character or cause the lawyer regards as repugnant. The lawyer's freedom to select clients is, however, qualified. All lawyers have a responsibility to assist in providing pro bono publico service. See Rule 6.1. An individual lawyer fulfills this responsibility by accepting a fair share of unpopular matters or indigent or unpopular clients. A lawyer may also be subject to appointment by a court to service unpopular clients or persons unable to afford legal services.

Appointed Counsel. — For good cause a lawyer may seek to decline an appointment to represent a person who cannot afford to retain counsel or whose cause is unpopular. Good cause exists if the lawyer could not handle the matter competently, see Rule 1.1, or if undertaking the representation would result in an improper conflict of interest, for example, when the client or the cause is so repugnant to the lawyer as to be likely to impair the client-lawyer relationship or the lawyer's ability to represent the client. A lawyer may also seek to decline an appointment if acceptance would be unreasonably burdensome, for example, when it would impose a financial sacrifice so great as to be unjust.

An appointed lawyer has the same obligations to the client as retained counsel, including the obligations of loyalty and confidentiality, and is subject to the same limitations on the client-lawyer relationship, such as the obligation to refrain from assisting the client in violation of the Rules.

CODE COMPARISON

There is no counterpart to Rule 6.2 in the Disciplinary Rules of the Code. EC 2-29 states that "When a lawyer is appointed by a court or requested by a bar association to undertake representation of a person unable to obtain counsel, whether for financial or other reasons, he should not seek to be excused from undertaking the representation except for compelling reason. Compelling reasons do not include such factors as the repugnance of the subject matter of the proceeding, the identity or position of a person involved in the case, the belief of the lawyer that the defendant in a criminal proceeding is guilty, or the belief of the lawyer regarding the merits of the civil case." EC 2-30 states that "a lawyer should decline employment if the intensity of his personal feelings, as distinguished from a community attitude, may impair his effective representation of a prospective client."

Rule 6.3. Membership in legal services organization.

A lawyer may serve as a director, officer or member of a legal services organization, apart from the law firm in which the lawyer practices, notwithstanding that the organization serves persons having interests adverse to a client of the lawyer. The lawyer shall not knowingly participate in a decision or action of the organization:

(a) if participating in the decision would be incompatible with the lawyer's obligations to a client under Rule 1.7; or

(b) where the decision could have a material adverse effect on the representation of a client of the organization whose interests are adverse to a client of the lawyer.

COMMENT

Lawyers should be encouraged to support and participate in legal service organizations. A lawyer who is an officer or a member of such an organization does not thereby have a client-lawyer relationship with persons served by the organization. However, there is potential conflict between the interests of such persons and the interests of the lawyer's clients. If the possibility of such conflict disqualified a lawyer from serving on the board of a legal services organization, the profession's involvement in such organizations would be severely curtailed.

It may be necessary in appropriate cases to reassure a client of the organization that the representation will not be affected by conflicting loyalties of a member of the board. Established, written policies in this respect can enhance the credibility of such assurances.

CODE COMPARISON

There is no counterpart to this Rule in the Code.

Rule 6.4. Law reform activities affecting client interests.

A lawyer may serve as a director, officer or member of an organization involved in reform of the law or its administration notwithstanding that the reform may affect the interests of a client of the lawyer. When the lawyer knows that the interests of a client may be materially benefitted by a decision in which the lawyer participates, the lawyer shall disclose that fact but need not identify the client.

COMMENT

Lawyers involved in organizations seeking law reform generally do not have a client-lawyer relationship with the organization. Otherwise, it might follow that a lawyer could not be involved in a bar association law reform program that might indirectly affect a client. See also Rule 1.2(b). For example, a lawyer specializing in antitrust litigation might be regarded as disqualified from participating in drafting revisions of rules governing that subject. In determining the nature and scope of participation in such activities, a lawyer should be mindful of obligations to clients under other Rules, particularly Rule 1.7. A lawyer is professionally obligated to protect the integrity of the program by making an appropriate disclosure within the organization when the lawyer knows a private client might be materially benefitted.

CODE COMPARISON

There is no counterpart to this Rule in the Code.

INFORMATION ABOUT LEGAL SERVICES

Rule 7.1. Communications concerning a lawyer's services.

A lawyer shall not make or permit to be made a false, misleading, deceptive or unfair communication about the lawyer or lawyer's services. A communication violates this rule if it:

(a) Contains a material misrepresentation of fact or law or omits a fact necessary to make the statement considered as a whole not materially misleading, or

(b) Creates an unjustified, false or misleading expectation about results the lawyer can achieve, or states or implies that the lawyer can achieve results by means that violate these rules or other law; or

(c) states or implies that the lawyer is able to influence improperly or upon irrelevant grounds any tribunal, legislative body, or public official; or

(d) Compares the lawyer's services with other lawyers' services unless the comparison can be factually substantiated. (Amended effective June 22, 1994; amended February 11, 1999; amended May 20, 1999; amended effective September 1, 2003; suspended by Order of August 8, 2003, reinstated effective October 1, 2004.)

COMMENT

This Rule governs all communications about a lawyer's services, including advertising permitted by Rule 7.2. Whatever means are used to make known a lawyer's services, statements about them shall be truthful.

The prohibition in paragraph (b) of statements that create an unjustified expectation of results precludes advertisements about results obtained on behalf of a client, such as the amount of damage verdicts or settlements, that create an unjustified expectation of similar results without reference to the specific factual and legal circumstances.

The prohibition in paragraph (d) discussing comparisons that cannot be factually substantiated would preclude a lawyer from representing that he or she (or his or her law firm) is "the best," "one of the best" or "one of the most experienced" in a particular field of law.

[Amended effective June 22, 1994; amended February 11, 1999; amended effective September 1, 2003, suspended by Order of August 8, 2003, reinstated effective October 1, 2004.]

Rule 7.2. Advertising.

(a) An advertisement is an active quest for clients involving a public or non-public communication. The term "advertisement" includes, but is not limited to, communication by means of telephone, television, radio, motion picture, computer-accessed communication, newspaper, sign, directory, listing or through written communication.

(b) A lawyer who advertises a specific fee or range of fees for a particular service shall honor the advertised fee or range of fees for at least 90 days unless the advertisement specifies a longer period; provided that for advertisements in the yellow pages of telephone directories or other media not published more frequently than annually, the advertised fee or range of fees shall be honored for no less than one year following publication.

(c) All advertisements and written communications provided for under these rules shall disclose the geographic location by city and state of one or more offices of the lawyer or lawyers whose services are advertised or shall state that additional information about the lawyer or firm can be obtained by contacting the Mississippi Bar at a number designated by the Bar and included in the advertisement.

(d) All advertisements and written communications pursuant to these Rules shall include the name of at least one lawyer or the lawyer referral service responsible for their content. A lawyer shall not advertise services under a name that violates the provisions of Rule 7.7.

(e) No lawyer shall directly or indirectly pay all or a part of the cost of an advertisement by a lawyer not in the same firm unless the advertisement discloses the name and address of the nonadvertising lawyer, the relationship between the advertising lawyer and the nonadvertising lawyer, and whether the advertising lawyer may refer any case received through the advertisement to the nonadvertising lawyer.

(f) The following information in advertisements and written communications shall be presumed not to violate the provisions of Rule 7.1:

(1) Subject to the requirements of this Rule and Rule 7.7, the name of the lawyer or law firm, a listing of lawyers associated with the firm, office addresses and telephone numbers, office and telephone service hours, and a designation such as "attorney" or "law firm."

(2) Date of admission to The Mississippi Bar and any other Bars and a listing of federal courts and jurisdictions other than Mississippi where the lawyer is licensed to practice.

(3) Foreign language ability.

(4) Prepaid or group legal service plans in which the lawyer participates.

(5) Acceptance of credit cards.

(6) Fee for initial consultation and fee schedule, subject to the requirements of paragraphs (b) of this Rule.

(7) A listing of the name and geographic location by city and state of one or more offices of a lawyer or law firm as a sponsor of a public service announcement or charitable, civic or community program or event.

(g) Nothing in this Rule prohibits the inclusion of the name of a lawyer or law firm in law lists and law directories intended primarily for the use of the legal profession of such information as has traditionally been included in these publications.

(h) A copy or recording of an advertisement or written or recorded communication shall be submitted to the Office of General Counsel of the Mississippi Bar (hereinafter referred to as "OGCMB") in accordance with the provisions of Rule 7.5. The OGCMB shall retain a copy of such advertisement or communication for three (3) years from the date of submission. The lawyer shall retain a copy or recording for three (3) years after its last dissemination along with a record of when and where it was used.

(i) The lawyer shall not give anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services, except that a lawyer may pay the reasonable cost of advertising or a written or recorded communication permitted by these Rules and may pay the usual charges of a lawyer referral service or to other legal service organization. (Amended effective June 22, 1994; amended August 20, 1998; amended February 11, 1999; amended effective September 1, 2003, suspended by Order of August 8, 2003; amended effective October 1, 2004.)

COMMENT

To assist the public in obtaining legal services, lawyers should be allowed to make known their services not only through reputation but also through organized information campaigns in the form of advertising. The public's need to know about legal services can be fulfilled in part through advertising which provides the public with useful, factual information about legal rights and needs and the availability and terms of legal services from a particular lawyer or law firm. This need is particularly acute in the case of persons of moderate means who have not made extensive use of legal services. Nevertheless, certain types of advertising by lawyers create the risk of practices that are misleading or overreaching and can create unwarranted expectations by laymen untrained in the law. Such advertising can also adversely affect the public's confidence and trust in our judicial system. The language in Rule 7.2(a) is reflective of that set forth in the ABA's Model Rules of Professional Conduct.

One developing area of communications to which the rules relating to communications about lawyers' services are intended to apply is computer-accessed communications. For purposes of this rule, "computer-accessed communications" are defined as information regarding a lawyer's or law firm's services that is read, viewed, or heard directly through the use of a computer. Computer-accessed communications include, but are not limited to, Internet presences such as home pages or World Wide Web sites, unsolicited electronic mail communications, and information concerning a lawyer's or law firm's services that appears on World Wide Web search engine screens and elsewhere.

This Rule is included in order to balance the public's need for useful information, the state's need to ensure a system by which justice will be administered fairly and properly, and the state's need to regulate and monitor the advertising practices of lawyers, with a lawyer's right to advertise the availability of the lawyer's services to the public. This Rule permits public dissemination of information concerning a lawyer's name or firm name, address, and telephone number; the kinds of services the lawyer will undertake; the basis on which the lawyer's fees are determined, including prices for specific services and payment and credit arrangements; lawyer's foreign language ability; names of references and, with their consent, names of clients regularly represented; and other factual information that might invite the attention of those seeking legal assistance. Rule 7.2(c) requires advertisements to contain a geographic office location because experience in other jurisdictions has shown, in the absence of such a rule, members of the public have been misled into employing an inaccessible lawyer in a distant city or another state. See Rule 7.04(j), Tex. Disciplinary R. Prof. Conduct.

Neither this Rule nor Rule 7.4 prohibits communications authorized by law, such as notice to members of a class in class action litigation.

This Rule applies to advertisements and written communications directed at prospective clients and concerning a lawyer's or law firm's availability to provide legal services. The Rule does not apply to communications between lawyers, including brochures used for recruitment purposes.

Paying others to recommend a lawyer. — A lawyer is allowed to pay for advertising permitted by this Rule, but otherwise is not permitted to pay or provide other tangible benefits to another person for procuring professional work. However, a legal aid agency or prepaid legal services plan may pay to advertise legal services provided under its auspices. Likewise, a lawyer may participate in lawyer referral programs and pay the usual fees charged by such programs. Paragraph (g) does not prohibit paying regular compensation to an assistant, such as secretary or advertising consultant, to prepare communications permitted by this Rule. Owen v. Owen, 228 Miss. 534, 88 So. 2d 100 (1956); Federal Reserve Bank v. Sparkman, 140 Miss. 336, 105 So. 637 (1925); Hubbard v. Massey, 192 Miss. 95, 4 So. 2d 230 (1941), error overruled, 192 Miss. 111, 4 So. 2d 494 (1941).

Constitutionality.

Mississippi does not prohibit a lawyer from exercising First Amendment rights of free speech, but State has an interest in protecting the public, and hence can regulate any potentially misleading communication as reasonably necessary. Mississippi Bar v. Attorney R., 649 So. 2d 820 (Miss. 1995), cert. denied, 515 U.S. 1144, 115 S. Ct. 2582, 132 L. Ed. 2d 831 (1995).

Construction.

Rules of Professional Conduct are interpreted from perspective of the reasonable client or, in the case of attorney advertising, the reasonable lay person whom the lawyer is charged with misleading. Mississippi Bar v. Attorney R., 649 So. 2d 820 (Miss. 1995), cert. denied, 515 U.S. 1144, 115 S. Ct. 2582, 132 L. Ed. 2d 831 (1995).

Sanctions.

— Suspension.

Attorney who used various means to unethically solicit employment as an attorney was suspended from practice of law for an indefinite period, with reinstatement contingent on successfully passing all sections of Mississippi Bar Examination. Emil v. Mississippi Bar, 690 So. 2d 301 (Miss. 1997).

Rule 7.3. Direct contact with prospective clients.

(a) A Lawyer shall not by in-person live telephone or real-time electronic contact solicit professional employment from a particular prospective client with whom the lawyer has no family, close personal, or prior professional relationship when a significant motive of the lawyer's doing so is the lawyer's pecuniary gain.

(b) A lawyer shall not solicit professional employment from a particular prospective client by written, recorded or electronic communication or by in-person, telephone real time electronic contact even when not otherwise prohibited by paragraph (a), if:

(1) Prospective client has made known to the lawyer the desire not to be solicited by the lawyer or

(2) The solicitation involves coercion, duress or harassment.

(c) Every written, recorded or electronic communication from a lawyer soliciting professional employment from a particular prospective client known to be in need of legal services in a particular matter, with whom the lawyer has no family, close personal, or prior professional relationship, shall include the words, "solicitation material" on the outside envelope or at the beginning and ending of any recorded communication.

(d) Notwithstanding the prohibitions of paragraph (a), a lawyer may participate with a prepaid or group legal service plan operated by an organization not owned or directed by the lawyer which uses in-person or telephone contact to solicit memberships or subscriptions for the plan from persons who are not known to need legal services in a particular matter covered by the plan. (Amended effective June 22, 1994; amended February 11, 1999; amended effective November 3, 2005.)

COMMENT

There is a potential for abuse inherent in direct in-person, live telephone or real-time electronic contact by a lawyer with a particular prospective client known to need legal services. These forms of contact between a lawyer and a prospective client subject the layperson to the private importuning of the trained advocate in a direct interpersonal encounter. The prospective client, who may already feel overwhelmed by the circumstances giving rise to the need for legal services, may find it difficult to fully evaluate all available alternatives with reasoned judgment and appropriate self-interest in the face of the lawyer's presence and insistence upon being retained immediately. The situation is fraught with the possibility of undue influence, intimidation, and over-reaching.

This potential for abuse inherent in direct in-person, live telephone or real-time electronic solicitation of particular prospective clients justifies its prohibition, particularly since lawyer advertising and written and recorded communication permitted under Rule 7.2 offer alternative means of conveying necessary information to those who may be in need of legal services. Advertising and written and recorded communications which may be mailed or auto-dialed make it possible for a prospective client to be informed about the need for legal services, and about the qualifications of available lawyers and law firms, without subjecting the prospective client to direct in-person or telephone persuasion that may overwhelm the client's judgment.

The use of general advertising and written, recorded or electronic communications to transmit information from lawyer to prospective client, rather than direct in-person, live telephone or real-time contact, will help to assure that the information flows cleanly as well as freely. The contents of advertisements and communications permitted under Rule 7.2 are permanently recorded so that they cannot be disputed and may be shared with others who know the lawyer. This potential for informal review is itself likely to help guard against statements and claims that might constitute false and misleading communications in violation of Rule 7.1. The contents of direct in-person, live telephone or real-time electronic conversations between a lawyer and a prospective client can be disputed and are not subject to third party scrutiny. Consequently, they are much more likely to approach (and occasionally cross) the dividing line between accurate representations and those that are false and misleading.

But even permitted forms of solicitation can be abused. Thus, any solicitation which contains information which is false or misleading within the meaning of Rule 7.1, which involves coercion, duress or harassment within the meaning of Rule 7.3(b)(2), or which involves contact with a prospective client who has made known to the lawyer a desire not to be solicited by the lawyer within the meaning of Rule 7.3(b)(1) is prohibited. Moreover, if after sending a letter or other communication to a client as permitted by Rule 7.2, the lawyer receives no response, any further effort to communicate with the prospective client may violate the provisions of Rule 7.3(b).

This Rule is not intended to prohibit a lawyer from contacting representatives of organizations or groups that may be interested in establishing a group or prepaid legal plan for their members, insureds, beneficiaries or other third parties for the purpose of informing such entities of the availability of and details concerning the plan or arrangement which the lawyer or lawyer's firm is willing to offer. This form of communication is not directed to a prospective client. Rather, it is usually addressed to an individual acting in a fiduciary capacity seeking a supplier of legal services for others who may, if they choose, become prospective clients of the lawyer. Under these circumstances, the activity which the lawyer undertakes in communicating with such representatives and the type of information transmitted to the individual are functionally similar to and serve the same purpose as advertising permitted under Rule 7.2.

The requirement in Rule 7.3(c) that certain communications be marked 'Solicitation Material' does not apply to communications sent in response to requests of potential clients or their spokespersons or sponsors. General announcements by lawyers, including changes in personnel or office location do not constitute communications soliciting professional employment from a client known to be in need of legal services within the meaning of this Rule.

Paragraph (d) of this Rule would permit an attorney to participate with an organization which uses personal contact to solicit members for its group or prepaid legal service plan, provided that the personal contact is not undertaken by any lawyer who would be a provider of legal services through the plan. The organization referred to in paragraph (d) must not be owned by or directed (whether as manager or otherwise) by any lawyer or law firm that participates in the plan. For example, paragraph (d) would not permit a lawyer to create an organization controlled directly or indirectly by the lawyer and use the organization for the in-person or telephone solicitation of legal employment of the lawyer through memberships in the plan or otherwise. The communication permitted by these organizations also must not be directed to a person known to need legal services in a particular matter, but is to be designed to inform potential plan members generally of another means of affordable legal services. Lawyers who participate in a legal service plan must reasonably assure that the plan sponsors are in compliance with Rules 7.1, 7.2 and 7.3(b). See Rule 8.4(a).

CODE COMPARISON

DR 2-104(A) provided with certain exceptions that "[a] lawyer who has given in-person unsolicited advice to a layperson that he should obtain counsel or take legal action shall not accept employment resulting from that advice . . ." The exceptions include DR 2-104(A)(1), which provided that a lawyer "may accept employment by a close friend, relative, former client (if the advice is germane to the former employment), or one whom the lawyer reasonably believes to be a client." DR 2-104(A)(2) through DR 2-104(A)(5) provided other exceptions relating, respectively, to employment resulting from public educational programs, recommendation by a legal assistance organization, public speaking or writing and representing members of a class in class action litigation.

Rule 7.4. Legal service information.

(a) Each lawyer or law firm that advertises his, her or its availability to provide legal services shall have available in written form for delivery to any potential client:

(1) A factual statement detailing the background, training and experience of each lawyer or law firm.

(2) If the lawyer or law firm claims special expertise in the representation of clients in special matters or publicly limits the lawyer's or law firm's practice to special types of cases or clients, the written information shall set forth the factual details of the lawyer's experience, expertise, background, and training in such matters.

Further, any advertisement or written communication shall advise any potential client of the availability of the above information by prominently displaying in all such advertisements and communications the following notice: FREE BACKGROUND INFORMATION AVAILABLE UPON REQUEST.

(b) Whenever a potential client shall request information regarding a lawyer or law firm for the purpose of making a decision regarding employment of the lawyer or law firm:

(1) The lawyer or law firm shall promptly furnish (by mail if requested) the written information described in paragraph (a) of this Rule.

(2) The lawyer or law firm may furnish such additional factual information regarding the law firm deemed valuable to assist the client.

(c) A copy of all information furnished to clients by reason of this Rule shall be retained by the lawyer or law firm for a period of five years after the last regular use of the information.

(d) Any factual statement contained in any advertisement or written communication or any information furnished to a prospective client under this Rule shall not:

(1) Be directly or inherently false or misleading;

(2) Be potentially false or misleading;

(3) Fail to disclose material information necessary to prevent the information supplied from being actually or potentially false or misleading;

(4) Be unsubstantiated in fact; or

(5) Be unfair or deceptive.

(e) Upon reasonable request by The Mississippi Bar, a lawyer shall promptly provide proof that any statement or claim made in any advertisement or written communication, as well as the information furnished to a prospective client as authorized or required by these Rules, is in compliance with paragraph (d) above.

(f) A statement and any information furnished to a prospective client, as authorized by paragraph (a) of this Rule, that a lawyer or law firm will represent a client in a particular type of matter, without appropriate qualification, shall be presumed to be misleading if the lawyer reasonably believes that a lawyer or law firm not associated with the originally retained lawyer or law firm will be associated or act as primary counsel in representing the client. In determining whether the statement is misleading in this respect, the history of prior conduct by the lawyer in similar matters may be considered. (Adopted effective June 22, 1994; amended February 11, 1999.)

COMMENT

Consumers and potential clients have a right to receive factual, objective information from lawyers who are advertising their availability to handle legal matters. The Rule provides that potential clients may request such information and be given an opportunity to review that information without being required to come to a lawyer's office to obtain it. Selection of appropriate counsel is based upon a number of factors. However, selection can be enhanced by potential clients having factual information at their disposal for review and comparison.

Constitutionality.

Mississippi does not prohibit a lawyer from exercising First Amendment rights of free speech, but state has an interest in protecting public, and hence can regulate any potentially misleading communication as reasonably necessary. Mississippi Bar v. Attorney R., 649 So. 2d 820 (Miss. 1995), cert. denied, 515 U.S. 1144, 115 S. Ct. 2582, 132 L. Ed. 2d 831 (1995).

Construction.

Rules of Professional Conduct are interpreted from perspective of the reasonable client or, in the case of attorney advertising, the reasonable lay person whom the lawyer is charged with misleading. Mississippi Bar v. Attorney R., 649 So. 2d 820 (Miss. 1995), cert. denied, 515 U.S. 1144, 115 S. Ct. 2582, 132 L. Ed. 2d 831 (1995).

Rule 7.5. Submission of advertisements.

(a) Mandatory submission. A copy or recording of any advertisement to be published shall be submitted to the Office of the General Counsel of the Mississippi Bar (OGCMB) as set forth in paragraph(c) below prior to its first dissemination.

(b) Exemptions. The following are exempt from this submission requirement:

(1) Any advertisement that contains no illustrations and no information other than that set forth in Rules 7.2 and 7.4;

(2) Any telephone directory advertisement;

(3) Notices or announcements that do not solicit clients, but rather state new or changed associations or membership of firms, changed location of offices, the opening of new offices, and similar changes relating to a lawyer or law firm;

(4) Professional business cards or letterhead;

(5) On premises office signage;

(6) Notices and paid listings in law directories addressed primarily to other members of the legal profession;

(7) Advertisements in professional, trade, academic, resource or specialty publications circulated to specific subscribing audiences rather than the general public at large that announce the availability of a lawyer or law firm to practice a particular type of law in many jurisdictions and that are not for the purpose of soliciting clients to commence or join in specific litigation to be performed in Mississippi;

(8) Internet Web pages viewed via a Web browser, in a search initiated by a person without solicitation.

(9) Informative or scholarly writings in professional, trade or academic publications;

(10) A communication mailed only to existing clients, former clients or other lawyers;

(11) Any written communications requested by a prospective client;

(12) Any notices or publications required by law; and

(13) Such other exemptions as may be authorized by the OGCMB.

(c) Items to be submitted. A submission to the OGCMB pursuant to paragraph (a) shall consist of:

(1) A copy of the advertisement or communication in the form or forms in which it is to be disseminated (e.g., videotapes, audiotapes, print media, photographs or other accurate replicas of outdoor advertising);

(2) A transcript, if the advertisement or communication is on videotape or audiotape;

(3) A statement of when and where the advertisement has been, is, or will be used; and

(4) A fee of twenty-five dollars ($25) per submission of advertisement or communication timely filed as provided in paragraph (a), or a fee of one hundred and fifty dollars ($150) for submissions not timely filed, made payable to The Mississippi Bar. This fee shall be used only for administration and enforcement of these Rules. A "submission of advertisement" is defined as each advertisement unless the same advertisement is to be republished in print or electronic media utilizing the same script. An advertisement does not need to be resubmitted upon each dissemination so long as no changes to form or content are made following the previous submission.

(d) Optional advisory opinion. A lawyer may request an advisory opinion concerning the compliance of a contemplated advertisement or communication with these Rules in advance of disseminating the advertisement or communication by submitting the advertisement or communication and fee specified in paragraph (1) below to the OGCMB at least forty-five days prior to such dissemination. The OGCMB shall, upon receipt of such request, evaluate all advertisements and communications submitted to it pursuant to this Rule for compliance with the applicable requirements set forth in this Rule. If an evaluation is requested, the OGCMB shall render its advisory opinion within forty-five days of receipt of a request unless the OGCMB determines that there is reasonable doubt that the advertisement or communication is in compliance with the Rules and that further examination is warranted but such evaluation cannot be completed within the forty-five day time period, and so advise the filing lawyer within the forty-five day time period. In the latter event, the OGCMB shall complete its review as promptly as the circumstances reasonably allow. If the OGCMB does not send any correspondence or notice to the lawyer within forty-five days, the advertisement or communication will be deemed approved.

(1) Items to be submitted to obtain advisory opinion. . A submission to OGCMB to obtain an advisory opinion pursuant to paragraph (d) shall consist of the same items as (c)(1)(2)(3) above, and an additional fee of fifty dollars ($50) per submission of advertisement or communication made payable to The Mississippi Bar. This fee shall be used only for the purposes of evaluation and/or review of advertisements and preparing the Advisory Opinion. A "submission of advertisement" is defined as each advertisement unless the same advertisement is to be republished in print or electronic media utilizing the same script.

(2) Use of finding. A finding by the OGCMB of either compliance or noncompliance shall not be binding in disciplinary proceedings, but may be offered as evidence.

(3) Change of circumstances. If a change of circumstances occurring subsequent to the OGCMB's evaluation of an advertisement or communication raises a substantial possibility that the advertisement or communication has become false or misleading as a result of the change in circumstances, the lawyer shall promptly resubmit the advertisement or a modified advertisement with the OGCMB along with an explanation of the change in circumstances and a fee of twenty dollars ($20) per "submission of advertisement or communication."

(e) Substantiation. If requested to do so by the OGCMB, the requesting lawyer shall submit information to substantiate representations made or implied in that lawyer's advertisement or communication.

(f) Non-compliance. When the OGCMB determines that an advertisement or communication is not in compliance with the applicable Rules, the OGCMB shall advise the lawyer that dissemination or continued dissemination of the advertisement or communication may result in professional discipline.

(g) Policies and procedures. The Mississippi Bar shall formulate the necessary policies and procedures to implement and enforce the provisions of this Rule and submit same to the Supreme Court for approval pursuant to Rule 3 of the Mississippi Rules of Discipline. (Adopted effective June 22, 1994; amended February 5, 1999; amended effective September 1, 2003, suspended by Order of August 8, 2003; amended effective October 1, 2004.)

COMMENT

This Rule has a dual purpose: to enhance the Court's and the bar's ability to monitor advertising practices for the protection of the public and to assist members of the Bar to conform their advertisements to the requirements of these Rules. This Rule requires lawyers to submit their advertisements and other communications and gives them the opportunity to obtain an advisory opinion. In such event, the OGCMB will advise the filing lawyer in writing whether the advertisement appears to comply with the Rules. The OGCMB's opinion will be advisory only, but may be considered as evidence of a good faith effort to comply with these Rules. A lawyer who wishes to be able to rely on the OGCMB's opinion as demonstrating the lawyer's good faith effort to comply with these Rules has the responsibility of supplying the OGCMB with all information material for a determination of whether an advertisement or communication is false or misleading.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

State supreme court denied a petition that would have suspended fees that attorneys are required to pay under Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 7.5 as the court found that granting the petition was not likely to serve the intended purpose of providing aid to attorneys and their clients. In re Rules of Prof'l Conduct, — So. 2d —, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 663 (Miss. Sept. 30, 2005).

Rule 7.6. Communication of certification or designation.

(a) A lawyer may communicate the fact that he or she has been certified or designated in a field of law by a named organization or authority, but only if that certification or designation is granted by an organization or authority whose specialty certification or designation program is accredited by the American Bar Association. Notwithstanding the provisions of this Rule, a lawyer may communicate the fact that he is certified or designated in a particular field of law by a named, non-American Bar Association organization or authority, but must disclose such fact and further disclose that there is no procedure in Mississippi for approving certifying or designating organizations and authorities.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of Rule 7.6(a), a lawyer may state or imply as follows:

1. A lawyer who is admitted to engage in patent practice before the United States Patent and Trademark Office may use the designation "patent attorney" or a substantially similar designation; or

2. A lawyer engaged in admiralty practice may use the designation "admiralty," "proctor in admiralty" or a substantially similar designation. (Former Rule 7.4 amended and renumbered effective June 22, 1994; amended February 11, 1999.)

COMMENT

Rule 7.6(a) permits a lawyer to communicate that a lawyer has been certified or designated as a specialist in a field of law when the American Bar Association has accredited the organization's or authority's specialty program to grant such certification or designation. Certification or designation procedures imply that an objective entity has recognized a lawyer's higher degree of specialized ability than is suggested by general licensure to practice law. Those objective entities may be expected to apply standards of competence, experience and knowledge to ensure that the lawyer's recognition as a specialist is meaningful and reliable. In order to ensure that the consumers can obtain access to useful certification or designation information, the name of the certifying or designating organization or other agency must be included in any communication regarding the certification or designation. See Peel v. Attorney Registration & Disciplinary Com., 496 U.S. 91 110 S. Ct. 2281, 210 L. Ed. 2d 83 (1990).

However, even though this Rule permits a lawyer to communicate that a lawyer has been certified or designated as a specialist in the field of law when the American Bar Association has accredited the organization's or authority's specialty program, a lawyer may communicate the fact that he is certified or designated in a field of law by a named, non-American Bar Association accredited organization or authority, provided such fact is disclosed and further disclosure is made that there is no procedure in Mississippi for approving certifying or designating organizations and authorities.

Recognition of specialization in patent matters is a matter of law and established policy of the Patent and Trademark Office, as reflected in Rule 7.6(b)(1).

Rule 7.6(b)(2) recognizes that the designation of admiralty practice has a long historical tradition associated with maritime commerce and the federal courts.

[Amended effective June 22, 1994; amended February 11, 1999.]

Rule 7.7. Firm names and letterheads.

(a) A lawyer shall not use a firm name, letterhead, or other professional designation that violates Rule 7.1.

(b) A lawyer shall not practice under a trade or fictitious name or a name that is misleading as to the identity of the lawyer or lawyers practicing under such name. A lawyer in private practice may use the term "legal clinic" or "legal services" in conjunction with the lawyer's own name if the lawyer's practice is devoted to providing routine legal services for fees that are lower than the prevailing rate in the legal community for those services.

(c) A law firm with offices in more than one jurisdiction may use the same name in each jurisdiction, but identification of the lawyers in an office of the firm shall indicate the jurisdictional limitations on those not licensed to practice in the jurisdiction where the office is located.

(d) The name of a lawyer holding a public office shall not be used in the name of a law firm, or in communications on its behalf, during any substantial period in which the lawyer is not actively and regularly practicing with the firm except as permitted by Rule 1.17.

(e) Lawyers may state or imply that they practice in a partnership or to other organization only when that is the fact except as permitted by Rule 1.17. (Former Rule 7.5 amended and renumbered effective June 22, 1994; amended August 20, 1998; amended February 11, 1999.)

COMMENT

A firm may be designated by the names of all or some of its members, or by the names of deceased members where there has been a continuing succession in the firm's identity. The United States Supreme Court has held that legislation may prohibit the use of trade names in professional practice. It may be observed that any firm name including the name of a deceased partner is, strictly speaking, a trade name. The use of such names to designate law firms has proven a useful means of identification. However, it is misleading to use the name of a lawyer not associated with the firm or a predecessor of the firm.

Paragraph (a) precludes use in a law firm name of terms that imply that the firm is something other than a private law firm. Two examples of such terms are "academy" and "institute". Paragraph (b) precludes use of a trade or fictitious name suggesting that the firm is named for a person when in fact such a person does not exist or is not associated with the firm. Although not prohibited per se, the terms "legal clinic" and "legal services" would be misleading if used by a law firm that did not devote its practice to providing routine legal services at prices below those prevailing in the legal community for like services.

With regard to paragraph (c), lawyers sharing office facilities, but who are not in fact partners, may not denominate themselves as, for example, "Smith and Jones", for that title suggests partnership in the practice of law.

[Amended effective June 22, 1994; amended February 11, 1999.]

MAINTAINING THE INTEGRITY OF THE PROFESSION

Rule 8.1. Bar admission and disciplinary matters.

An applicant for admission to the bar, or a lawyer in connection with a bar admission application or in connection with a disciplinary matter, shall not:

(a) knowingly make a false statement of material fact; or

(b) fail to disclose a fact necessary to correct a misapprehension known by the person to have arisen in the matter, or knowingly fail to respond to a lawful demand for information from an admissions or disciplinary authority, except that this rule does not require disclosure of information otherwise protected by Rule 1.6.

Cross References — Admission and conduct of attorneys, see Mississippi Code of 1972, see §§ 73-3-1 et seq.

Procedures to discipline and to determine personal incapacity to practice law, see Mississippi Code of 1972, §§ 73-3-301 et seq.

COMMENT

The duty imposed by this Rule extends to persons seeking admission to the bar as well as to lawyers. Hence, if a person makes a material false statement in connection with an application for admission, it may be the basis for subsequent disciplinary action if the person is admitted, and in any event may be relevant in a subsequent admission application. The duty imposed by this Rule applies to a lawyer's own admission or discipline as well as that of others. Thus, it is a separate professional offense for a lawyer to knowingly make a misrepresentation or omission in connection with a disciplinary investigation of the lawyer's own conduct. This Rule also requires affirmative clarification of any misunderstanding on the part of the admissions or disciplinary authority of which the person involved becomes aware.

This Rule is subject to the provisions of the Fifth Amendment of the United States Constitution and Article 3, Section 26 of the Mississippi Constitution. A person relying on such a provision in response to a question, however, should do so openly and not use the right of nondisclosure as a justification for failure to comply with this Rule.

A lawyer representing an applicant for admission to the bar, or representing a lawyer who is the subject of a disciplinary inquiry or proceeding, is governed by the rules applicable to the client-lawyer relationship.

CODE COMPARISON

DR 1-101(A) provides that "A lawyer is subject to discipline if he has made a materially false statement in, or if he has deliberately failed to disclose a material fact requested in connection with, his application for admission to the bar." DR 1-101(B) provides that "A lawyer shall not further the application for admission to the bar of another person known by him to be unqualified in respect to character, education, or other relevant attribute." With respect to paragraph (b) of Rule 8.1, DR 1-102(A)(5) provides that "A lawyer shall not ... Engage in conduct that is prejudicial to the administration of justice." 30 A.L.R.4th 9.

Disciplinary matters.

Mississippi Bar filed a formal complaint against the attorney after an investigation revealed that the attorney failed to file a habeas petition and neglected other legal matters for which he was paid due to a substance abuse problem. Pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 8, a complaint tribunal heard the matter and found that the attorney violated Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.2(a), 1.3, 1.4, 1.5, 1.15(b), 1.16(d), 8.1(b), and 8.4(a); the attorney was suspended from the practice of law for six months. In re Reinstatement of Kelly, 987 So. 2d 925 (Miss. 2008).

Client retained an attorney in a wrongful death action after her husband was shot and killed in the presence of a police officer and the case was dismissed due to the attorney's neglect or failure to comply with proper procedure. The attorney failed to cooperate in the investigation, his disciplinary record consisted of eight informal reprimands, three private reprimands, a suspension by a federal court, and the Mississippi State Bar Complaint Tribunal found the only mitigating circumstances offered by the attorney were that he had a very busy law practice and that his membership in the Mississippi State Senate took up much of his time; the Mississippi Supreme Court held that only a public reprimand was necessary, and rejected the Bar's argument that a lengthy suspension was called for. Miss. Bar v. Walls, 890 So. 2d 875 (Miss. 2004).

Attorney's unprofessional and unethical conduct, together with extensive record of disciplinary sanctions for similar conduct, warranted imposition of public reprimand, unconditional suspension from practice of law in state courts for one year, and requirement that attorney pass all sections of bar exam before filing petition for reinstatement. Mississippi Bar v. Alexander, 697 So. 2d 1164 (Miss. 1997).

Sanction.

Attorney's claim that a 90-day suspension of his license to practice law was too harsh was not only rejected by the court, but the court found that the 90-day suspension recommended by the Complaint Tribunal was too lenient given the attorney's history of five prior violations of Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 8.1(b), and concluded that a one-year suspension was more appropriate. Stewart v. Miss. Bar, 969 So. 2d 6 (Miss. 2007).

Where the evidence showed that an attorney took money from a client for a real estate matter, but did not file a complaint or maintain contact with the client, it was established that the attorney violated Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.2(a), 1.3, 1.4, 8.1(a), 8.4(a), (c); a three-year suspension was imposed based on the fact that the attorney had been suspended twice before for violations of these same rules, but disbarment was not appropriate. Shah v. Miss. Bar, 962 So. 2d 514 (Miss. 2007).

— Disbarment.

Attorney was disbarred for violating Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.2(a), 1.3,1.4, 1.5(a), 8.1(b), and 8.4(a) and (d) where, inter alia, he caused serious injury to his client by knowingly failing to file a timely appeal from a conviction, deceiving the client as to the status of the appeal, taking the client's money, failing to inform the client of his suspension. The attorney deliberately prevaricated and lacked candor during the disciplinary proceedings and in the motion for out-of-time appeal, the attorney deceived the court by implying that another attorney, and not he, had failed to perfect timely an appeal. Shah v. Miss. Bar, 919 So. 2d 59 (Miss. 2005).

Rule 8.2. Judicial and legal officials.

(a) A lawyer shall not make a statement that the lawyer knows to be false or with reckless disregard as to its truth or falsity concerning the qualifications or integrity of a judge, adjudicating officer or public legal officer, or of a candidate for election or appointment to judicial or legal office.

(b) A lawyer who is a candidate for judicial office shall comply with the applicable provisions of the Code of Judicial Conduct.

COMMENT

Assessments by lawyers are relied on in evaluating the professional or personal fitness of persons being considered for election or appointment to judicial office and to public legal offices, such as attorney general, prosecuting attorney and public defender. Expressing honest and candid opinions on such matters contributes to improving the administration of justice. Conversely, false statements by a lawyer can unfairly undermine public confidence in the administration of justice.

When a lawyer seeks judicial office, the lawyer should be bound by applicable limitations on political activity.

To maintain the fair and independent administration of justice, lawyers are encouraged to continue traditional efforts to defend judges and courts unjustly criticized.

CODE COMPARISON

With regard to Rule 8.2(a), DR 8-102(A) provides that "A lawyer shall not knowingly make false statements of fact concerning the qualifications of a candidate for election or appointment to a judicial office." DR 8-102(B) provides that "A lawyer shall not knowingly make false accusations against a judge or other adjudicatory officer."

Attorney was sanctioned for making a statement about a judge's election contributions during a motion to recuse because the attorney violated Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 3.3 and Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 8.2 by knowingly repeating remarks that had been proven to be false. Welsh v. Mounger, 912 So. 2d 823 (Miss. 2005).

Suspension.

Attorney was suspended, partially due to prior similar conduct, for violating Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 3.5, 8.4, 8.2 where the evidence showed that the attorney made disparaging remarks to a judge relating to "paying for justice" and later told a newspaper reporter that the judge a barbarian; the statements were not protected by the First Amendment because a reasonable person would not have acted in the same manner. Miss. Bar v. Lumumba, 912 So. 2d 871 (Miss. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 546 U.S. 825, 126 S. Ct. 363, 163 L. Ed. 2d 70, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 6085, 74 U.S.L.W. 3202 (2005).

Rule 8.3. Reporting professional misconduct.

(a) A lawyer having knowledge that another lawyer has committed a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct that raises a substantial question as to that lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness or fitness as a lawyer in other respects, shall inform the appropriate professional authority.

(b) A lawyer having knowledge that a judge has committed a violation of applicable rules of judicial conduct that raises a substantial question as to the judge's fitness for office shall inform the appropriate authority. (Amended June 23, 1994.)

COMMENT

Self-regulation of the legal profession requires that members of the profession initiate disciplinary investigation when they know of a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct. Lawyers have a similar obligation with respect to judicial misconduct. An apparently isolated violation may indicate a pattern of misconduct that only a disciplinary investigation can uncover. Reporting a violation is especially important where the victim is unlikely to discover the offense.

If a lawyer were obliged to report every violation of the Rules, the failure to report any violation would itself be a professional offense. Such a requirement existed in many jurisdictions but proved to be unenforceable. This Rule limits the reporting obligation to those offenses that a self-regulating profession must vigorously endeavor to prevent. A measure of judgment is, therefore, required in complying with the provisions of this Rule. The term "substantial" refers to the seriousness of the possible offense and not the quantum of evidence of which the lawyer is aware. A report should be made to the bar disciplinary agency unless some other agency, such as a peer review agency, is more appropriate in the circumstances. Similar considerations apply to the reporting of judicial misconduct.

The duty to report professional misconduct does not apply to a lawyer retained to represent a lawyer whose professional conduct is in question. Such a situation is governed by the rules applicable to the client-lawyer relationship.

[Amended June 23, 1994.]

CODE COMPARISON

DR 1-103(A) provides that "A lawyer possessing unprivileged knowledge of a violation of DR 1-102 shall report such knowledge to ... authority empowered to investigate or act upon such violation." Mississippi Cent. R.R. v. Hardy, 88 Miss. 732, 41 So. 505 (1906).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Standard of knowledge.

Standard of knowledge required to trigger obligation to report another lawyer's misconduct must be an objective one, not tied to subjective beliefs of the lawyer in question; supporting evidence must be such that a reasonable lawyer under the circumstances would have formed a firm opinion that conduct in question had more likely than not occurred and that the conduct, if it did occur, raises a substantial question as to the purported offender's honesty, trustworthiness or fitness to practice law. Attorney U v. Mississippi Bar, 678 So. 2d 963 (Miss. 1996).

Rule 8.4. Misconduct.

It is professional misconduct for a lawyer to:

(a) violate or attempt to violate the rules of professional conduct, knowingly assist or induce another to do so, or do so through the acts of another;

(b) commit a criminal act that reflects adversely on the lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness or fitness as a lawyer in other respects;

(c) engage in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentation;

(d) engage in conduct that is prejudicial to the administration of justice;

(e) state or imply an ability to influence improperly a government agency or official or to achieve results by means that violate the Rules of Professional Conduct or other law; or

(f) knowingly assist a judge or judicial officer in conduct that is a violation of applicable rules of judicial conduct or other law. (Amended effective November 3, 2005 to add new subsection (e).)

COMMENT

Many kinds of illegal conduct reflect adversely on fitness to practice law, such as offenses involving fraud and the offense of willful failure to file an income tax return. However, some kinds of offense carry no such implication. Traditionally, the distinction was drawn in terms of offenses involving "moral turpitude." That concept can be construed to include offenses concerning some matters of personal morality, such as adultery and comparable offenses, that have no specific connection to fitness for the practice of law. Although a lawyer is personally answerable to the entire criminal law, a lawyer should be professionally answerable only for offenses that indicate lack of those characteristics relevant to law practice. Offenses involving violence, dishonesty, or breach of trust, or serious interference with the administration of justice are in that category. A pattern of repeated offenses, even ones of minor significance when considered separately, can indicate indifference to legal obligation.

A lawyer may refuse to comply with an obligation imposed by law upon a good faith belief that no valid obligation exists. The provisions of Rule 1.2(d) concerning a good faith challenge to the validity, scope, meaning or application of the law apply to challenges of legal regulation of the practice of law.

Lawyers holding public office assume legal responsibilities going beyond those of other citizens. A lawyer's abuse of public office can suggest an inability to fulfill the professional role of attorney. The same is true of abuse of positions of private trust such as trustee, executor, administrator, guardian, agent and officer, director or manager of a corporation or other organization.

CODE COMPARISON

With regard to Rule 8.4(a)-(d) DR 1-102(A) provides that "A lawyer shall not:

"(1) Violate a Disciplinary Rule.

"(2) Circumvent a Disciplinary Rule through actions of another.

"(3) Engage in illegal conduct involving moral turpitude.

"(4) Engage in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit, or misrepresentation.

"(5) Engage in conduct that is prejudicial to the administration of justice.

"(6) Engage in any other conduct that adversely reflects on his fitness to practice law."

Rule 8.4(e) is substantially similar to DR 9-101(C).

There is no direct counterpart to Rule 8.4(f) in the Disciplinary Rules of the Code. EC 7-34 states in part that "A lawyer ... is never justified in making a gift or a loan to a judge, a hearing officer, or an official or employee of a tribunal." EC 9-1 states that "A lawyer should promote public confidence in our legal system and in the legal profession."

Subsections (a), (b), and (c) are not void for vagueness; they are sufficiently clear as to their meaning and application so as to instruct those of ordinary intelligence, within the profession, on how to pattern their actions in accordance with the rules. Rogers v. Mississippi Bar, 731 So. 2d 1158 (Miss. 1999).

Advertising.

Attorney who used various means to unethically solicit employment as an attorney was suspended from practice of law for an indefinite period, with reinstatement contingent on successfully passing all sections of Mississippi Bar Examination. Emil v. Mississippi Bar, 690 So. 2d 301 (Miss. 1997).

Candor towards tribunal.

Attorney was disbarred for violating Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.2(a), 1.3,1.4, 1.5(a), 8.1(b), and 8.4(a) and (d) where, inter alia, he caused serious injury to his client by knowingly failing to file a timely appeal from a conviction, deceiving the client as to the status of the appeal, taking the client's money, failing to inform the client of his suspension. The attorney deliberately prevaricated and lacked candor during the disciplinary proceedings and in the motion for out-of-time appeal, the attorney deceived the court by implying that another attorney, and not he, had failed to perfect timely an appeal. Shah v. Miss. Bar, 919 So. 2d 59 (Miss. 2005).

Attorney who forged client's signature on motion, and then deliberately deceived court regarding authenticity of the signature, was suspended from practice of law for one hundred eighty days. Goodsell v. Mississippi Bar, 667 So. 2d 7 (Miss. 1996).

Attorney's knowing misrepresentations to court and opposing counsel that no autopsy had been performed on deceased's body were in violation of this rule and were prejudicial to the administration of justice. Mississippi Bar v. Mathis, 620 So. 2d 1213 (Miss. 1993).

Diligence.

Attorney who failed to prosecute appeal and failed to communicate with client was suspended from practice of law for a period of six months. Terrell v. Mississippi Bar, 662 So. 2d 586 (Miss. 1995).

Attorney who accepted compensation from bankruptcy clients without first petitioning court for approval, and who failed to tender payment to bankruptcy trustee within ninety days after signing court order agreeing to do so, was suspended from practice of law for six months. Mathes v. Mississippi Bar, 637 So. 2d 840 (Miss. 1994).

Dishonesty or fraud.

An attorney was properly disbarred, rather than suspended where he represented a client in a personal injury action that was eventually settled, deducted both his fee and the client's medical bills from the settlement and disbursed the rest to the client, and then failed to pay the medical bills. Cotton v. Mississippi Bar, 809 So. 2d 582 (Miss. 2000).

Disbarment was the appropriate sanction for an attorney's misuse of client funds since no significant mitigating factors weighed in his favor, notwithstanding that he had not previously been disciplined, that he eventually made restitution to all parties involved, and that he made no attempt to mislead the bar or the court, as the attorney's fitness to practice law became questionable once he converted his client's funds for his own use and made no attempt to defend himself once the bar filed a formal complaint, which raised additional concerns regarding his fitness to practice law. Cotton v. Mississippi Bar, 809 So. 2d 582 (Miss. 2000).

An attorney violated subsection (c) by converting funds which belonged to his law firm where he performed legal services after hours and thereby appropriated business opportunities that belonged to the firm; such actions did not violate subsection (d) since it was not related to a judicial proceeding. Rogers v. Mississippi Bar, 731 So. 2d 1158 (Miss. 1999).

Where attorney engaged to file complaint to remove cloud on title never filed an actual complaint, but instead forged clerk's signature, obtained court's stamp and rolled date back, and then stamped alleged complaint as filed, attorney was suspended from practice of law for eighteen months. Asher v. Mississippi Bar, 661 So. 2d 722 (Miss. 1995).

Disbarment was warranted for attorney's repeated acts, some while under suspension, of taking money from clients, promising to act as their counsel, and, through deceit, doing nothing. Carter v. Mississippi Bar, 654 So. 2d 505 (Miss. 1995).

Three-year suspension was reversed and disbarment ordered, for attorney who misled his client, misrepresented to court that his client had agreed to terms which she in fact had not agreed to, and presented a document to the court containing a signature which was not his client's. Culpepper v. Mississippi State Bar, 588 So. 2d 413 (Miss. 1991).

Failure to file tax returns.

Attorney violated Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 8.4(b), because even though the attorney had no intent to defraud the government, the attorney's procrastination in failing to file federal income tax returns could not be characterized as anything but willful. Byrd v. The Miss. Bar, 826 So. 2d 1249 (Miss. 2002).

Fairness to opposing counsel.

An attorney's conduct violated the "notions of fair play" and was conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice as contemplated under the rule where he communicated with a magistrate to the Supreme Court to confirm that there was no motion pending before the court with regard to a matter and then acted on that knowledge without divulging his contact with the magistrate. Mississippi Bar v. Logan, 726 So. 2d 170 (Miss. 1998).

Attorney who failed to furnish obvious information to opposing counsel, and who employed deceit and misrepresentation in arranging for arrest of opposing party, merited suspension from practice of law for a period of six months. Mississippi Bar v. Robb, 684 So. 2d 615 (Miss. 1996), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1117, 117 S. Ct. 1248, 137 L. Ed. 2d 330 (1997).

Where attorney responded to interrogatories without revealing incident relevant to causation of injury in suit against his client, his actions went far beyond what could be considered a discovery dispute, and amounted to conduct involving dishonesty, deceit, misrepresentation, obstructing another party's access to evidence, conduct prejudicial to administration of justice, and both failure to disclose a material fact and making a false statement of material fact to a tribunal. Mississippi Bar v. Land, 653 So. 2d 899 (Miss. 1994).

General misconduct.

Attorney whose paralegal falsely communicated to a prisoner that the attorney had agreed to work on the prisoner's case violated Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 8.4 because the attorney's conduct was prejudicial to the administration of justice, as the prisoner was deprived of his right to file a habeas corpus petition and paid for nonexistent representation. Miss. Bar v. Thompson, 5 So. 3d 330 (Miss. 2008).

Attorney's unprofessional and unethical conduct, together with extensive record of disciplinary sanctions for similar conduct, warranted imposition of public reprimand, unconditional suspension from practice of law in state courts for one year, and requirement that attorney pass all sections of bar exam before filing petition for reinstatement. Mississippi Bar v. Alexander, 697 So. 2d 1164 (Miss. 1997).

Misconduct not found.

In a prosecution for statutory rape, there was no professional misconduct by the prosecutor in his opening statement concerning DNA where the defense first raised the subject of DNA, mentioning it in his opening statement and in cross-examination. Richardson v. State, 767 So. 2d 195 (Miss. 2000).

Decision of bar complaint tribunal imposing public reprimand was reversed and the complaint dismissed, where Bar failed to meet burden of showing that attorney's actions in settling client's case constituted professional misconduct; at best, evidence revealed a miscommunication between attorney and his client. Attorney W.L. v. Mississippi Bar, 621 So. 2d 235 (Miss. 1993).

No violation.

Failure by an attorney to file income tax returns is no "conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice" under Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 8.4(d) where the misconduct does not bear directly upon any decision or the decision-making process of any tribunal. Byrd v. The Miss. Bar, 826 So. 2d 1249 (Miss. 2002).

Telephone conversations.

Although attorney was acting to protect his client's interests in surreptitiously taping telephone conversations with judge and police chief, attorney violated this rule when he blatantly denied, when asked, that he was taping the conversations. Mississippi Bar v. Attorney ST, 621 So. 2d 229 (Miss. 1993).

Attorney's surreptitious recording of conversation with potential party opponent did not violate this rule, as it did not suggest dishonesty, fraud, deceit, or misrepresentation, and information attorney sought to record was of the type that one might reasonably expect to be taken down for future use. Attorney M v. Mississippi Bar, 621 So. 2d 220 (Miss. 1992).

Violations.

Mississippi Bar filed a formal complaint against the attorney after an investigation revealed that the attorney failed to file a habeas petition and neglected other legal matters for which he was paid due to a substance abuse problem. Pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 8, a complaint tribunal heard the matter and found that the attorney violated Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.2(a), 1.3, 1.4, 1.5, 1.15(b), 1.16(d), 8.1(b), and 8.4(a); the attorney was suspended from the practice of law for six months. In re Reinstatement of Kelly, 987 So. 2d 925 (Miss. 2008).

Attorney was suspended, partially due to prior similar conduct, for violating Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 3.5, 8.4, 8.2 where the evidence showed that the attorney made disparaging remarks to a judge relating to "paying for justice" and later told a newspaper reporter that the judge a barbarian; the statements were not protected by the First Amendment because a reasonable person would not have acted in the same manner. Miss. Bar v. Lumumba, 912 So. 2d 871 (Miss. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 546 U.S. 825, 126 S. Ct. 363, 163 L. Ed. 2d 70, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 6085, 74 U.S.L.W. 3202 (2005).

Where the evidence showed that an attorney took money from a client for a real estate matter, but did not file a complaint or maintain contact with the client, it was established that the attorney violated Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.2(a), 1.3, 1.4, 8.1(a), 8.4(a), (c); a three-year suspension was imposed based on the fact that the attorney had been suspended twice before for violations of these same rules, but disbarment was not appropriate. Shah v. Miss. Bar, 962 So. 2d 514 (Miss. 2007).

Attorney's failure to file income tax returns is a violation of Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 8.4(b). Byrd v. The Miss. Bar, 826 So. 2d 1249 (Miss. 2002).

Rule 8.5. Jurisdiction.

A lawyer admitted to practice in this jurisdiction is subject to the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction although engaged in practice elsewhere. A lawyer not admitted in this jurisdiction is also subject to the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction if the lawyer advertises, provides or offers to provide any legal services to be performed in this jurisdiction. A lawyer may be subject to the disciplinary authority of both this jurisdiction and another jurisdiction for the same conduct. (Amended effective September 1, 2003, suspended by Order of August 8, 2003, reinstated effective October 1, 2004.)

COMMENT

In modern practice lawyers frequently act outside the territorial limits of the jurisdiction in which they are licensed to practice, either in another state or outside the United States. In doing so, they remain subject to the governing authority of the jurisdiction in which they are licensed to practice. If their activity in another jurisdiction is substantial and continuous, it may constitute practice of law in that jurisdiction. See Rule 5.5. It is settled law that the conduct of a lawyer admitted to practice in this jurisdiction is subject to the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction. Extension of the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction to other lawyers who provide or offer to provide legal services in this jurisdiction is for the protection of the citizens of this jurisdiction. Reciprocal enforcement of a jurisdiction's disciplinary findings and sanctions will further advance the purposes of this Rule. Nothing in this rule shall be construed to allow an unlicensed individual to engage in the practice of law in Mississippi contrary to any other rule or statute. See also Mississippi Rules of Discipline 1(1.1) and 16. The language in Rule 8.5 is reflective of that set forth in the ABA's Model Rules of Professional Conduct. The scope of Rule 8.5 is not intended to extend to advertisements such as those reference in Rule 7.5(b)(7), unless they are for the purpose of soliciting clients to commence or join in litigation to be performed in Mississippi.

If the rules of professional conduct in the two jurisdictions differ, principles of conflict of laws may apply. Similar problems can arise when a lawyer is licensed to practice in more than one jurisdiction.

Where the lawyer is licensed to practice law in two jurisdictions which impose conflicting obligations, applicable rules of choice of law may govern the situation. A related problem arises with respect to practice before a federal tribunal, where the general authority of the states to regulate the practice of law must be reconciled with such authority as federal tribunals may have to regulate practice before them.

PART ONE. RULES OF DISCIPLINE

GROUNDS FOR DISCIPLINE

The license to practice law in this state is a continuing proclamation by the Supreme Court that the holder is fit to be entrusted with professional and judicial matters, and to aid in the administration of justice as an attorney and as an officer of the Court. It is the duty of every recipient of that privilege to conduct himself at all times, both professionally and personally, in conformity with the standards imposed upon members of the bar as conditions for the privilege of practicing law. Acts or omissions by an attorney, individually or in concert with any other person or persons, which violate the Attorney's Oath of Office or the Code of Professional Responsibility as now set forth or as hereafter amended, shall constitute misconduct and shall be grounds for discipline, whether or not the acts or omissions occurred in the course of an attorney-client relationship.

Rule 1. Jurisdiction.

(a) The Supreme Court of Mississippi (the Court) has exclusive and inherent jurisdiction of matters pertaining to attorney discipline, reinstatement, and appointment of receivers for suspended and disbarred attorneys, and hereafter such proceedings shall be conducted in accordance with these rules. The court shall be the ultimate judge of matters arising under these rules, and from time to time the Court shall review these rules and amend them when necessary or desirable.

(b) Nothing contained in these rules shall be construed to deny to any other court such powers as may be necessary for that court to maintain control over practice and proceedings conducted before it; such as the power of contempt, nor to prohibit local bar associations from censuring, suspending, or expelling their members from membership in such local bar associations.

(c) Actions by other courts or by local bar associations are cumulative and in addition to the disciplinary jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of Mississippi and its disciplinary agencies. Actions by other courts and local bar associations shall not be binding or conclusive as to the Court or the Mississippi State Bar (the Bar), and any action taken by them shall be reported to the Bar, and when required by rule or by statute, to the Court.

(d) Nothing herein shall be construed to affect or limit the Court's power to regulate admission to the practice of law.

Procedure

(1.1) The jurisdiction of the Court shall extend to any resident or nonresident attorney who practices law or renders legal services in the State of Mississippi. Any nonresident, by rendition of legal services in this state, shall be deemed to have appointed the Executive Director of the Bar as his agent for service of process or any notice required by these rules.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Construction.
Applicability.
Applicability of rules.
Contempt powers.
Inherent power of Supreme Court.
Review.

Construction.

Fact that Bar did not raise issue of attorney's punishment at hearing stage did not mean it was estopped from doing so on appeal, since Rules of Discipline superseded all other rules or statutes pertaining to attorney discipline, and supreme court had power to render any order it deemed appropriate. Mississippi State Bar v. Blackmon, 600 So. 2d 166 (Miss. 1992).

Applicability.

Effect of supreme court's assertion of exclusive and inherent jurisdiction over matters pertaining to attorney discipline, and its promulgation of the Rules of Discipline for the Mississippi State Bar, is that any statute must yield to a contradictory Rule of Discipline. Mississippi Bar v. McGuire, 647 So. 2d 706 (Miss. 1994).

Applicability of rules.

Mississippi State Bar rules of discipline contain no provisions concerning default judgments, and therefore Rules of Civil Procedure concerning default judgments apply to disciplinary proceedings. Harrison v. Mississippi Bar, 637 So. 2d 204 (Miss. 1994).

Bar disciplinary matters are governed first and foremost by Rules of Discipline for Mississippi State Bar, subject only to Constitutions of State of Mississippi and of United States; to the extent they are not inconsistent with Rules of Discipline, Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure are to govern bar disciplinary matters, and where there is conflict between a provision of Rules of Discipline and a provision of Civil Rules, Rules of Discipline shall control. Mississippi State Bar v. Attorney L., 511 So. 2d 119 (Miss. 1987).

Contempt powers.

When supreme court found attorney in contempt of court, it was not exercising its disciplinary jurisdiction as that was delegated to disciplinary agencies, but was exercising inherent authority to enforce its rules of procedure under its rule-making power, and nothing in the Rules of Discipline was to be construed to deny the court that power. Attorney BT v. Mississippi Bar, 589 So. 2d 119 (Miss. 1991).

Inherent power of Supreme Court.

In a reciprocal disciplinary proceeding in which an attorney had been suspended in Mississippi for failing to pay his enrollment fees, the attorney was still subject to the disciplinary jurisdiction of the Mississippi Supreme Court, and, pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 1, the Mississippi Supreme Court had exclusive and inherent jurisdiction of matters pertaining to attorney discipline. Miss. Bar v. Inserra, 38 So. 3d 605 (Miss. 2009).

Where the attorney filed a petition for reinstatement, the Mississippi Supreme Court had exclusive and inherent jurisdiction over the matter pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 1(a). In re Baldwin, 890 So. 2d 56 (Miss. 2003).

Supreme court's delegation of responsibility for attorney discipline to complaint tribunal and to Mississippi Bar, as expressed in Rules of Discipline, does not strip court of its fundamental responsibility to prevent injustice to litigants; court retains ability to regulate, pending further proceedings under rules, the operation of the courts and the fair and just progress of litigation. In re Lewis, 654 So. 2d 1379 (Miss. 1995).

Review.

Complaint tribunal has opportunity to observe demeanor and attitude of witnesses, including the accused attorney, and therefore supreme court will give deference to the tribunal's findings. Parrish v. Mississippi Bar, 691 So. 2d 904 (Miss. 1996).

Rule 2. Power and enforcement.

(a) Each of the disciplinary agencies is hereby given such jurisdiction and lawful powers as are necessary to conduct a proper and speedy disposition of any complaint. The power to summons and examine witnesses under oath and to compel their attendance, or take or cause to be taken the deposition of witnesses, and to order the production of books, papers, records, and other documentary evidence necessary or material to the investigation or complaint, shall be co-equal to the powers exercisable by the courts of record of this State. All summonses or subpoenas shall be issued by the Clerk of the Court, and it shall be the duty of any person so summoned to appear and testify as in the writ commanded and to produce the books, papers, records, or other documentary evidence required. Summonses and subpoenas issued by the Clerk shall be served as in the Circuit Court.

(b) Any defiance of any summons or subpoenas so issued, or other extrajudicial conduct which shall inhibit, impede, or disrupt any of the above disciplinary agencies in the performance of the duties and in the exercise of the powers herein given shall be treated as contempt of Court and punishable accordingly.

Procedure

(2.1) The Clerk of the Court shall file all pleadings and issue all process. Summonses and subpoenas shall be served as in the Circuit Court; provided, such summonses and subpoenas shall avoid name identification of the accused attorney. Costs shall be paid by the party or person requesting the issuance.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality.
Construction.
Subpoenas.

Constitutionality.

Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination could properly be asserted in bar disciplinary proceeding, and since attorney met his burden of establishing that privilege, bar complaint tribunal erred when it held that attorney must nevertheless answer. Mississippi State Bar v. Attorney L., 511 So. 2d 119 (Miss. 1987).

Construction.

Insofar as they may be applicable, discovery procedures contemplated by M.R.C.P. Rules 26-32 and 37 are available to either party in a bar disciplinary matter, for the taking of depositions of parties or witnesses. Mississippi State Bar v. Attorney L., 511 So. 2d 119 (Miss. 1987).

Subpoenas.

Where Committee on Professional Responsibility issued subpoena itself, instead of applying for a subpoena from the Clerk of Court, the subpoena was invalid, as it was not issued in accordance with rules of court. Mississippi Ethics Comm'n v. Committee on Professional Responsibility of Mississippi Bar, 672 So. 2d 1222 (Miss. 1996).

Rule 3. Disciplinary agencies designated.

For purposes of administering the Court's disciplinary jurisdiction, the following entities are hereby established and designated as agencies of the Court.

(a) The Board of Commissioners of the Bar.

(b) The Executive Director of the Bar and Complaint Counsel.

(c) Committee on Professional Responsibility.

(d) The Complaint Tribunal and Panels appointed by the Court.

(e) Receivers designated by the Committee, a tribunal or the Court.

(f) Other attorneys who may from time to time be requested in writing by the President or First Vice-President of the Bar or by the Court to assist with an investigation or prosecution.

(g) Lawyers and Judges Assistance Committee of the Bar.

Procedure

(3.1) When acting in the course of their disciplinary duties, each of the disciplinary agencies shall be considered a special master of the Court.

(3.2) The agencies shall be composed of active practicing attorneys or judges of the Circuit, Chancery or County Courts who are members of the Bar of this State and shall further be constituted as follows:

(a) Board of Commissioners. The Board of Commissioners of the Bar is provided for by Section 73-3-107, Mississippi Code of 1972. The Board shall have the authority to employ and compensate competent persons to serve as Complaint Counsel, Assistant Complaint Counsel and non-lawyer staff who shall serve at the pleasure of the Board, either in full-time or part-time capacity, as the Board may from time to time deem necessary or advisable to effect the disciplinary procedures set forth herein.

(b) Committee on Professional Responsibility. The Committee on Professional Responsibility shall be composed of six (6) members appointed by the President of the Bar for terms of two (2) years except the terms of the initial members shall be staggered in one and two year terms and shall consist of two members from each of the Supreme Court Districts of the state. The Chairman and Vice Chairman of the Committee shall be designated by the President of the Bar.

(c) Panels. The Court shall appoint a panel of judges and attorneys from each Supreme Court District, and from those panels Complaint Tribunals shall be designated and constituted as the need arises. The panel members shall be in such numbers as the Court may deem appropriate. The term of office of all panel members shall be three (3) years, except the terms of the initial members shall be staggered in one, two and three year terms. No panel member shall serve more than two consecutive three year terms. Appointments may be terminated by the Court.

(d) Complaint Tribunal. All tribunal members shall be selected from the panels mentioned above. Each tribunal shall consist of two attorneys and one judge, and the judge member shall serve as the presiding judge of the tribunal. Whenever a tribunal member is unable to serve or a hearing will be unduly delayed because of the unavailability of a tribunal member, the presiding judge may select from the remaining panel members an attorney to serve in the place of the attorney appointed by the court.

*(e) Receivers. If the presiding judge is unable to serve or the hearing shall be unduly delayed, the Chief Justice may appoint a new presiding judge from the judge members on the panels. All members of a tribunal designated to hear and determine a case as hereafter provide shall conclude the matter, the termination of a term of office of one or more of its members notwithstanding. All members of a Complaint Tribunal shall reside in a Chancery and Circuit District different from that within which the accused attorney resides. Tribunal members shall be selected on a rotating basis from the panels mentioned above.

(f) Other Attorneys. The assistance of other attorneys shall be requested and utilized on a case-by-case basis, and they shall be deemed to act for the Court only when their assistance has been requested in writing by the President or the First Vice President of the Bar, such attorneys may be individuals or members of local professional responsibility committees or local complaint committees.

(g) The Board of Commissioners of the Bar is authorized to establish a program of evaluation, intervention, treatment, monitoring and assistance for attorneys who suffer from chemical dependence or from physical, emotional, or mental disabilities that result from disease, disorder, trauma or age, and which impairs or tends to impair their ability to practice and their professional conduct. Such program shall be implemented by a Lawyers and Judges Assistance (LJA) Committee appointed by the President of the Bar; provided, no member of other disciplinary agencies shall be a member of the LJA Committee. Such Committee's creation shall in no way be construed to hinder, limit or otherwise affect any other disciplinary process. The LJA Committee shall be governed by appropriate regulations promulgated by the LJA Committee and approved by the Board of Commissioners of the Bar consistent with these rules. The LJA Committee shall have the following responsibilities, powers and immunities.

(1) Jurisdiction to investigate and evaluate allegations of attorney impairment arising from chemical dependency or physical, mental or emotional disability, which specifically includes, but is not limited to, conferring with any attorney who is the subject of such allegations as to such allegations, and making recommendations to such attorney, should it be determined that he or she in fact impaired, of sources of remedial assistance.

(2) Perform similar functions as to cases referred to it by a disciplinary agency, reporting the results thereof to the referring agency;

(3) Except as noted in the these Rules, allegations and information furnished, results of investigations, conferences and the like shall be privileged communication and held in the strictest confidence between the attorney involved and the LJA Committee; however, the status of compliance of an attorney who has been referred to the LJA Committee by a disciplinary agency as defined by Rule 3(c) or (d) of these rules with the terms and conditions imposed upon the attorney by the LJA Committee shall not be privileged communication for the purpose of the LJA Committee reporting such information to that disciplinary agency. The provisions of Rule 14 shall be applicable to the LJA Committee in its actions on allegations of impairment affecting attorneys. For good cause shown where the allegations of impairment are made by the attorney's family, the LJA Committee may, in its discretion, release such information to such person or persons as in its judgment will be in the best interest of the attorney involved;

(4) Should such investigation and evaluation clearly indicate that an attorney involved other than an attorney who has been referred to the LJA Committee by a disciplinary agency as defined by Rule 3(c) or (d) of these rules is impaired or engaging in conduct detrimental to the public, the courts, or the legal profession, the LJA Committee shall take such action, including, if warranted, notification of Complaint Counsel, as may appear appropriate to the LJA Committee;

(5) In regard to an attorney who has been referred to the LJA Committee by a disciplinary agency as defined by Rule 3(c) or (d) of these rules, should such investigation and evaluation indicate that the attorney involved is impaired or engaged in conduct detrimental to the public, the courts, or the legal profession, the LJA Committee shall take such action as may appear appropriate to the LJA Committee, including, but not limited to, notification of Complaint Counsel of the noncompliance by the attorney of terms and conditions imposed upon the attorney by the LJA Committee;

(6) The LJA Committee may, under appropriate rules and regulations approved by the Board of Commissioners of the Bar, create action groups which may exercise any or all of the functions set forth herein to the extent provided in any such rules and regulations. Such action groups shall have all of the immunities provided for the LJA Committee.

[Amended November 16, 1995; amended January 16, 1996; amended April 18, 2002] (Amended October 24, 1984; amended effective February 9, 1988; amended August 23, 1988.)

Committee on professional responsibility.

Where Committee on Professional Responsibility issued subpoena itself, instead of applying for a subpoena from the Clerk of Court, the subpoena was invalid, as it was not issued in accordance with rules of court. Mississippi Ethics Comm'n v. Committee on Professional Responsibility of Mississippi Bar, 672 So. 2d 1222 (Miss. 1996).

Rule 4. Initiation and filing of complaints.

(a) Any matter touching on the misconduct of an attorney licensed by the State of Mississippi or any attorney who renders or has rendered legal services in this state shall be called to the attention of Complaint Counsel either verbally or in writing.

(b) All attorneys, courts and their officers shall have the affirmative duty to notify Complaint Counsel of conduct of any attorney evincing unfitness for the practice of law or unprofessional or unethical conduct and any action taken by the Court.

(c) The committee on complaints shall not consider the matter until it has been reduced to writing.

(d) No complaint shall be considered by the Complaint Counsel or the Committee on Professional Responsibility unless received, discovered, or otherwise brought to their attention within three years after the date of discovery of the facts upon which the complaint is based. Complaints alleging violations of Rules 1.15, 8.1 and 8.4 (b) through (f) of the Rules of Professional Conduct shall not be covered by this limitation.

Procedure

(4.1) Complaint Counsel shall keep a docket of all written complaints, but same shall not be considered a grievance or charge touching the attorney's conduct until docketed with the Executive Director of the Bar by the Committee on Professional Responsibility. Until docketed with the Executive Director, the attorney may state that no complaint, grievance or charge has been filed against him. Complaints at any stage may be reported for statistical purposes.

4.2 Written complaints shall contain:

(a) The name, mailing address, and phone number of the complainant; and

(b) The name and address of the accused attorney; and

(c) A statement of the facts of the complaint; and

(d) A list of witnesses, with addresses and phone numbers, if known; and

(e) Copies of any statement by the witnesses and documents in support of the statement of facts of the complaint.

(4.3) If a written complaint is found to be deficient, complaint counsel may return it to complainant with a statement of the deficiency. All such complaints shall be reported to the Committee on Professional Responsibility if the deficiency has not been cured within forty-five (45) days of the date on which the same was returned to the complaining person. The Committee on Professional Responsibility thereafter may act upon those matters as provided in Rule 7. (Amended November 16, 1995.)

Cross References — Committee on complaints referral of complaints, and formal requirement of complaints, see Mississippi Code of 1972, § 73-3-309.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Though the Mississippi Bar violated Miss. R. Disc. State Bar 4(c) by considering a complaint against an attorney that had not been reduced to writing, because the Bar kept the attorney informed of each step it took and was planning to take outside of the prescribed procedure, the attorney waived his procedural argument and was not prejudiced by the deviations from the Rule. Miss. Bar v. Coleman, 849 So. 2d 867 (Miss. 2002).

Rule 5. Complaint counsel — Duties and powers.

The Complaint Counsel shall investigate complaints, prosecute formal complaints, and discharge other duties assigned by the Board of Commissioners. Complaint Counsel shall conduct any investigation or investigatory hearing fairly and impartially and shall seek to elicit any and all facts which might be exculpatory or incriminatory of the accused attorney. All proceedings under these rules shall be expeditiously conducted to the end that no complainant be deprived of his right to a timely, fair and proper investigation of a complaint and that no attorney be subjected to unfair and unjust charges.

(5.1) General. — Upon receipt of a written complaint or information indicating probable cause, Complaint Counsel shall conduct an investigation, either with or without notice to the accused attorney, as in Counsel's discretion appears appropriate. Complaint Counsel may require a complaint to be in writing or may file a complaint on information and belief. Statements and evidence during an investigation shall be obtained in the most expeditious and efficient manner possible without a sacrifice of accuracy.

(5.2) Investigations and Reports. — Complaint Counsel shall investigate and report to the Committee on Professional Responsibility within sixty (60) days from receipt of the written complaint. Upon completion of the investigation, a copy of the report, complaint and all evidence shall be served upon the attorney. In Complaint Counsel's discretion, the complaint and evidence may be served upon the attorney prior to submission of the report to the Committee on Professional Responsibility.

(5.3) Any responses by the attorney to the report shall be tendered to Complaint Counsel within fifteen (15) days of the mailing of the report.

(5.4) The Chair of the Committee on Professional Responsibility may enlarge the time for completion of an investigation and submission of Complaint Counsel's report or the attorney's responses.

(5.5) Process During Investigations. — Subpoenas during investigations may be issued only upon approval of the Chair or a majority of the Committee on Professional Responsibility.

(5.6) Complaining Person or Witnesses. — The person signing the complaint is not a party to the proceedings, and the failure or refusal of that person or any witness to cooperate during the investigation shall not be cause for dismissal of the complaint or termination of the investigation or proceedings before a complaint tribunal. Any person signing a complaint or any witness may be represented by counsel or may proceed as counsel for themselves during any investigation.

(5.7) The Accused Attorney. — The accused attorney is a party to the proceedings, and after written notice of the investigation or complaint has been given to the attorney by Complaint Counsel, the accused attorney or his counsel may appear at any investigatory hearing conducted by complaint counsel.

(5.8) The Investigatory Hearing. — An investigatory hearing in the discretion of complaint counsel or by direction of the Committee on Professional Responsibility may be conducted during the investigation and prior to the submission of complaint counsel's report to the committee. After written notice of the complaint or investigation is given to the attorney, such attorney or counsel therefor shall have the right to appear at any investigatory hearing for the purposes of examining or cross-examining all witnesses and for presenting witnesses and evidence on behalf of the attorney. (Amended November 16, 1995.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Duties.
Timeliness.

Duties.

Rules of Discipline prohibit an attorney for a person lodging a complaint with the Mississippi State Bar from taking part in the Bar's disciplinary hearings or proceedings except to be present, confer with, and advise the complainant who serves as a witness in such proceedings. In re Attorney A, 565 So. 2d 1139 (Miss. 1990).

Timeliness.

This rule is directory and not jurisdictional, and attorney was not entitled to dismissal of disciplinary charges as untimely where there had been no showing of an unconstitutional delay in the proceedings. Emil v. Mississippi Bar, 690 So. 2d 301 (Miss. 1997).

Rule 6. Suspensions and disbarments based on other proceedings.

(a) Whenever any attorney subject to the disciplinary jurisdiction of the Court shall be convicted in any court of any state or in any federal court, or enter a plea of guilty or a plea of nolo contendere therein, or tender a guilty plea pursuant to the provisions of Miss. Code Ann. § 99-15-26 (Supp. 1993), or any similar provision in state or federal law therein of any felony (other than manslaughter) or of any misdemeanor involving fraud, dishonesty, misrepresentation, deceit, or willful failure to account for money or property of a client, a certified copy of the judgment of conviction or order accepting or acknowledging the offer or tender of a guilty plea pursuant to the provisions of Miss. Code Ann. § 99-15-26 (Supp. 1993), or any similar provision in state or federal law shall be presented to the Court by Complaint Counsel and shall be conclusive evidence thereof. The Court shall then forthwith strike the name of the attorney and order his immediate suspension from the practice of law.

(b) Upon reversal of the conviction or judgment that has resulted in the automatic suspension, the attorney may seek reinstatement pursuant to Rule 12. For purposes of these rules executive clemency or pardon shall not constitute reversal of the conviction and shall not bar or terminate disciplinary proceedings predicated upon such convictions or judgments. Dismissal of charges pursuant to the provision of Miss. Code Ann. § 99-15-26 (Supp. 1993), or any similar state or federal statute shall have no effect upon disciplinary proceedings or sanctions predicated upon an entry, offer or tender of a plea of guilty or nolo contendere.

(c) Whenever any attorney subject to the disciplinary jurisdiction of the Court shall have entered against him in any Court of any State or in any Federal Court a civil judgment in accordance with Section 11-49-3, Mississippi Code of 1972, or any other civil judgment based upon clear and convincing evidence of fraud, misrepresentation, dishonesty, deceit, or willful failure to account for money or property of a client, a certified copy of the judgment, upon becoming final, shall be presented to the Court by Complaint Counsel and shall constitute sufficient, clear and convincing evidence of the facts necessary to support such judgment, and, unless successfully rebutted, the Court shall forthwith strike the name of the attorney and order his immediate suspension from the practice of law. This section shall not apply to Internal Revenue Code, Federal Communications Commission, Securities and Exchange Commission, Federal Trade Commission, and/or similar Federal Agency violations involving civil judgments and/or civil penalties, but nothing herein contained shall prohibit disciplinary prosecution for felony convictions based upon such violations.

(d) When time for appeal from judgment or conviction provided above expires or all appeals have been concluded without reversal, Complaint Counsel shall certify that result to the Court, and the Court shall forthwith enter an order of disbarment.

(e) Upon conviction of manslaughter, Complaint Counsel shall immediately commence an investigation and where warranted shall, upon directive of the Committee on Professional Responsibility, present same to the Court for its consideration as herein set out.

(f) The judge of any court within this state shall have the affirmative duty to cause a certified copy of a conviction or judgment or order accepting or acknowledging the offer or tender of a plea pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 99-15-26 (Supp. 1993), or any similar provision of a state or federal law to be transmitted to Complaint Counsel.

Procedure

(6.1) A Formal Complaint, with a certified copy of the criminal judgment or conviction or order accepting or acknowledging the entry, offer, or tender of a plea pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 99-15-26 (Supp. 1993), or any similar provision of state or federal law attached, and a motion for indefinite suspension pending appeals shall be filed with the Court, upon which the attorney shall be automatically suspended subject to the right of such attorney to move for reconsideration upon a showing that the judgment or conviction has been reversed or a new trial is granted.

(6.2) Upon a showing that the time for all appeals has expired, or that all appeals have been concluded without reversal, the attorney shall be automatically disbarred.

(6.3) In a proceeding based upon a civil judgment, Complaint Counsel shall file a Formal Complaint, with a certified copy of the judgment attached, which shall constitute a prima facie case.

(6.4) Matters of Public Record.— All proceedings brought pursuant to Rule 6 shall in all respects be matter of public record, Rule 15 notwithstanding.

[6.1 amended to apply to attorney discipline cases arising after January 13, 1994.] (Amended to apply to attorney discipline cases arising after January 13, 1994; corrected March 21, 1994; amended November 16, 1995; amended July 1, 2008.)

In general.

In a Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 13 proceeding in which an attorney had been permanently disbarred from the practice of law in Louisiana after he pled guilty to inciting a felony, while the attorney offered several mitigating factors for consideration by the Supreme Court of Mississippi, he cited no extraordinary circumstances which compelled, justified or supported variance from Louisiana's sanction. Additionally, Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6 provided for disbarment following a plea of guilty to any felony in any state or federal court. Miss. Bar v. Dorhauer, 38 So. 3d 610 (Miss. 2009).

Attorney was disbarred under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6 because he filed a Notice of Irrevocable Resignation under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 10.5. State Bar v. Naugle, 968 So. 2d 1266 (Miss. 2007).

Attorney's disbarment was appropriate pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6 because the attorney had pled guilty to the crime of accessory after the fact in violation of Miss. Code Ann. § 97-1-5 and she had been ordered to voluntarily surrender her license to practice law; all procedural prerequisites had been met and disbarment was required. Miss. Bar v. Smith-Miller, 962 So. 2d 545 (Miss. 2007).

Attorney was disbarred from the practice of law in Mississippi under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6 where he entered a guilty plea to possession of child pornography and was sentenced to probation; the purpose of discipline was to protect the public, the administration of justice, to maintain appropriate professional standards, and deter similar conduct. Miss. Bar v. Robinson, 918 So. 2d 1264 (Miss. 2005).

Mississippi Supreme Court had exclusive inherent jurisdiction over an attorney and his or her license to practice law in Mississippi. Thus, Miss. Code Ann. § 73-3-41, which allowed any court (in the instant case a circuit court), to disbar an attorney, was in direct conflict with the aforementioned rule; however, the substantive and procedural prerequisites of Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6 had been satisfied, and therefore, the attorney who was convicted of a felony, was suspended from the practice of law pending his appeal of the criminal conviction. Miss. Bar v. Jackson, 904 So. 2d 109 (Miss. 2004).

Mississippi Supreme Court has the power to render immediate sanctions for admitted felonious conduct under the non-adjudication of guilt statutory procedure of Miss. Code Ann. § 99-15-26 and Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6, without a hearing by a complaint tribunal; however, the Supreme Court does not extend that rule to include admitted felonious conduct under the Mississippi Pretrial Intervention Act, Miss. Code Ann. §§ 99-15-101, et seq. The critical difference between the non-adjudication statute and the Act is that the former requires the entry of a sworn guilty plea before the circuit or county court while the latter does not, and since the attorney had not offered a guilty plea entered under oath before the circuit court, nor had the circuit court entered an order with respect the attorney's felony level offense, disbarment proceedings were properly stayed until such time as the attorney was able to complete the Mississippi Pretrial Intervention Program, and until such time as a disposition of all charges against him had been entered. Miss. Bar v. Cofer, 904 So. 2d 97 (Miss. 2004).

The Supreme Court has the power to render immediate sanctions for admitted felonious conduct under this rule and the non-adjudication of guilt statutory procedure found in § 99-15-26. Mississippi Bar v. Baldwin, 752 So. 2d 996 (Miss. 1999).

Formal disciplinary complaint was correctly brought under this rule, against attorney who entered guilty plea to federal crime involving fraud, dishonesty, misrepresentation and deceit; reasons why attorney entered plea, whether for leniency, fear of harsher punishment, or other reasons, were irrelevant to complaint filed under this rule. Holmes v. Mississippi State Bar Ass'n, 498 So. 2d 837 (Miss. 1986).

Bad checks.

Attorney who pled guilty to charge of false pretense for issuance of bad check was disbarred and his license to practice law rescinded. Mississippi Bar v. Clifton, 625 So. 2d 804 (Miss. 1993).

Attorney's convictions for executing bad checks constituted misdemeanor convictions involving fraud, dishonesty, misrepresentation and deceit, as set forth in this rule. Mississippi State Bar Ass'n v. Cotter, 512 So. 2d 1288 (Miss. 1987).

Bribery.

Attorney met the requirements for reinstatement under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 12.7, given that (1) the attorney's plea of guilty to a charge of bribery of a public official, for purposes of Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6(a), was not accepted by the trial court and the trial court dismissed the charges finding that there was a strong doubt as to the State's ability to carry its burden of proof, (2) the only basis for the attorney's suspension was the plea to the charge that was dismissed, (3) there was no evidence that anyone besides the attorney suffered pecuniary loss, (4) the complaint tribunal found no evidence that the attorney ever lacked the requisite moral character to practice law, many people testified as to his character and recommended reinstatement, and the attorney testified that he ministered to youth in his community, and (5) the complaint tribunal found no reason to suspect that the attorney lacked the requisite legal education to practice law, plus the attorney had attended various seminars that offered continuing legal education credit and reviewed the court's hand-down lists on the court's website, and the tribunal recommended, pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 12.5, that the attorney not be required to take the Multi-State Professional Responsibility Exam because there was no evidence that he was lacking in ethical responsibility; the court accepted the recommendations and reinstated the attorney to the practice of law. In re Shelton, 987 So. 2d 938 (Miss. 2008).

Supreme court's referral of the attorney's petition for reinstatement to the Complaint Tribunal after he was suspended pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6(a) subsequent to entering an Alford plea to bribery of a judge was appropriate even though the attorney was eligible for reinstatement under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 12, because his petition before the supreme court failed to meet the requisite burden of proof for reinstatement. In re Shelton, 987 So. 2d 898 (Miss. 2006).

Because an attorney entered a valid plea of guilty to charges of bribery under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-11-11, pursuant to the requirements of Miss. R. Disc. St. B. 6, the attorney demonstrated evidence of unprofessional and unethical conduct evincing unfitness for the practice of law, which warranted immediate suspension, and while the plea might later be withdrawn, the court found that this provided the attorney no relief from the application of Rule 6; furthermore, the court had the power to render immediate sanctions for admitted felonies under the non-adjudication of guilt statutory procedure of Miss. Code Ann. § 99-15-26 and Miss. R. Disc. St. B. 6 without a hearing by a complaint tribunal. Miss. Bar v. Shelton, 890 So. 2d 827 (Miss. 2003).

Civil judgments.

Civil judgment against attorney, in action by mortgage company for conversion, met requirement for disbarment under subdivision (c) of this rule. Mississippi State Bar v. Nichols, 562 So. 2d 1285 (Miss. 1990).

Contempt.

This rule did not apply to a conviction in a contempt proceeding before a judge, even though contempt may have arisen from an attorney's misrepresentation to a court, since attorney had not been convicted of any criminal offense. Mississippi State Bar v. Attorney A., 475 So. 2d 1164 (Miss. 1985).

Driving under the influence.

Where an attorney pled guilty to felony driving under the influence and the complaint counsel forwarded to the court a certified copy of the probation order entered against the attorney, the certified copy constituted conclusive evidence of the attorney's guilt and required that the court enter an order disbarring him. Mississippi Bar v. Woolbright, 797 So. 2d 208 (Miss. 2000).

Drug offenses.

Where the attorney was found guilty of the crime of sale of marijuana within a correctional facility in violation of Miss. Code Ann. § 47-5-198, the Mississippi Bar filed a formal complaint against him pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6. The Supreme Court of Mississippi disbarred the attorney from the practice of law. Miss. Bar v. Jackson, 987 So. 2d 930 (Miss. 2008).

Attorney was disbarred where the crime to which the attorney pleaded guilty, of which he was convicted andfor which he was sentenced, possession of methamphetamine, was among those contemplated by Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6 and required his disbarment and the striking of his name from the rolls of those licensed to practice law in Mississippi. Miss. Bar v. Brackeen, 890 So. 2d 62 (Miss. 2004).

Disbarment was mandated under subsection (a) of this rule where attorney pled guilty to the charge of possession of cocaine, a crime resulting in unprofessional and unethical conduct evincing unfitness for the practice of law. Mississippi Bar v. Baldwin, 752 So. 2d 996 (Miss. 1999).

Attorney found guilty of drug offenses and of enticing an individual to travel in interstate commerce for the purpose of prostitution was disbarred and assessed costs. Mississippi Bar v. Parsons, 677 So. 2d 192 (Miss. 1996).

Embezzlement.

Attorney's embezzlement conviction required that he be disbarred pursuant to the provisions of Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6(a). Miss. Bar v. McInnis, 905 So. 2d 505 (Miss. 2004).

Because an attorney had entered a guilty plea to an embezzlement charge, and a certified copy of the judgment had been forwarded to the court, conclusive evidence of the attorney's guilt existed, as required by Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6(a); since no further proceedings were filed in the attorney's criminal case, the attorney's conviction was final and Rule 6(d) required that the court enter an order disbarring the attorney. Miss. Bar v. Boyd, 890 So. 2d 857 (Miss. 2004).

Attorney who pled guilty to theft or embezzlement of government property was disbarred and assessed costs. Mississippi Bar v. Murphy, 675 So. 2d 845 (Miss. 1996).

Attorney was disbarred following his plea of guilty to felony of conspiracy to embezzle ERISA funds. Mississippi Bar v. Sykes, 637 So. 2d 192 (Miss. 1994).

On its face, order accepting attorney's guilty plea to charge of embezzlement was well within circuit court's authority, and it therefore brought him within general scope of this rule's summary process. Mississippi State Bar v. Odom, 573 So. 2d 710 (Miss. 1990).

False statements.

Attorney adjudicated guilty of felony of filing false currency reporting forms was disbarred from practice of law. Mississippi Bar v. McGuire, 694 So. 2d 674 (Miss. 1997).

Where an attorney entered a conditional guilty plea in federal court to aiding and assisting in fraud and false statements related to the filing of a return with the Internal Revenue Service, he was immediately suspended from practicing law, though he had reserved his right to appeal his conviction, as conclusive evidence proved that he had committed a crime resulting in unprofessional and unethical conduct evincing unfitness for the practice of law; if his conviction was reversed, under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6(b) he would be reinstated. Miss. Bar v. Shelton, 855 So. 2d 444 (Miss. 2003).

Attorney convicted in federal court for crime of falsifying a document would be reinstated to practice law upon earning a passing score on examinations required by rule. In re McHann, 691 So. 2d 422 (Miss. 1997).

Falsification of Housing and Urban Development loan closing statement was among types of offenses contemplated by this rule, as it was a misdemeanor involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentation, and sanction of automatic disbarment was warranted. Mississippi Bar v. McHann, 618 So. 2d 702 (Miss. 1993).

Attorney was disbarred due to multiple felony convictions of financial institution fraud and making false statements to influence actions of a federally insured financial institution. Watkins v. Mississippi Bar, 589 So. 2d 660 (Miss. 1991).

Federal offenses.

Given that an attorney's conviction of a felony in a federal district court was affirmed on appeal and she had exhausted the appellate process, Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6 required the Supreme Court of Mississippi to disbar the attorney from the practice of law in Mississippi. Miss. Bar v. Castle, 38 So. 3d 632 (Miss. 2010).

In a case in which an attorney and several attorneys across the country entered into a fee-splitting and referral-fee agreement to recruit clients for settlements in a multi-jurisdiction mass tort case and he had pled guilty to violating 18 U.S.C.S. §§ 371, 1341, and 1343, the crimes for which he was convicted and sentenced are among those contemplated by Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6, and Rule 6(d) provided for disbarment. Miss. Bar v. Arledge, 37 So. 3d 607 (Miss. 2009).

Pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6, the Mississippi Bar filed a formal complaint seeking the disbarment of an attorney, who pled guilty in a federal district court to one count of conspiracy to corruptly influence an elected state official in violation of 18 U.S.C.S. § 371. The Mississippi Bar met its burden of proof in the attorney's disciplinary matter and was entitled to the disbarment of the attorney because (1) the attorney pled guilty to the felony offense of conspiracy to corruptly influence an elected state official in violation of 18 U.S.C.S. § 371; and (2) the attorney filed his notice of irrevocable resignation pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 10(b) and 10.5. Miss. Bar v. Langston, 987 So. 2d 936 (Miss. 2008); Miss. Bar v. Balducci, 987 So. 2d 933 (Miss. 2008).

Where the Mississippi Bar filed a formal complaint against an attorney based on his felony convictions in federal court for conspiracy, racketeering, mail fraud/honest services fraud, wire fraud/honest services fraud and bribery involving a federally funded program, the Supreme Court of Mississippi granted the Bar's motion for indefinite suspension pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6. Miss. Bar v. Minor, 35 So. 3d 1206 (Miss. 2008); Miss. Bar v. Teel, 35 So. 3d 1206 (Miss. 2008).

Where the Mississippi Bar filed a formal complaint against an attorney based on his felony convictions in federal court, the Supreme Court of Mississippi granted the Bar's motion for indefinite suspension pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Thompson, 972 So. 2d 582 (Miss. 2008).

Attorney was disbarred because he was convicted, upon a plea of guilty in federal court, of the offense of concealment of assets from a bankruptcy trustee in violation of 18 U.S.C.S. § 152(1), a felony within the meaning of the term as used in Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6. Miss. Bar v. Jones, 904 So. 2d 1026 (Miss. 2004).

Based on the attorney's guilty plea to one count of conspiracy to commit extortion under color of official right in violation of 18 U.S.C.S. § 371, the crime was a felony warranting the imposition of disbarment. Miss. Bar v. Stewart, 890 So. 2d 900 (Miss. 2004).

Where an attorney entered a conditional guilty plea in federal court to aiding and assisting in fraud and false statements related to the filing of a return with the Internal Revenue Service, he was immediately suspended from practicing law, though he had reserved his right to appeal his conviction, as conclusive evidence proved that he had committed a crime resulting in unprofessional and unethical conduct evincing unfitness for the practice of law; if his conviction was reversed, under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6(b) he would be reinstated. Miss. Bar v. Shelton, 855 So. 2d 444 (Miss. 2003).

Attorney's disbarment was proper where he was adjudicated guilty of various federal felonies involving conspiracy, wire fraud, racketeering, and obstruction of justice. Miss. Bar v. Halat, 849 So. 2d 866 (Miss. 2002).

Information embezzlement.

An attorney would be disbarred where he pleaded guilty to information embezzlement, which is a felony, and filed a letter stating that he did not object to the formal complaint seeking his disbarment. Mississippi Bar v. Benson, 749 So. 2d 1052 (Miss. 1999).

Perjury.

Attorney convicted of perjury in federal court was not entitled to formation of a bar complaint tribunal to hear and determine his case, since disciplinary matters based on conviction of crime proceed upon a factual record which is documentary in nature, where court's function is merely the correct ascertainment of and application of law to uncontradicted facts. Mississippi State Bar v. Nixon, 494 So. 2d 1388 (Miss. 1986).

Reciprocity.

When another jurisdiction has imposed on a Mississippi lawyer a sanction of suspension or disbarment, the matter of reciprocal discipline is to be presented directly to the supreme court and not to a complaint tribunal, with the sole issue to be the extent of final discipline to be imposed on the attorney in Mississippi. Mississippi Bar v. Strauss, 601 So. 2d 840 (Miss. 1992).

Stay pending appeal.

Where an attorney entered a conditional guilty plea in federal court to aiding and assisting in fraud and false statements related to the filing of a return with the Internal Revenue Service, he was immediately suspended from practicing law, though he had reserved his right to appeal his conviction, as conclusive evidence proved that he had committed a crime resulting in unprofessional and unethical conduct evincing unfitness for the practice of law; if his conviction was reversed, under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6(b) he would be reinstated. Miss. Bar v. Shelton, 855 So. 2d 444 (Miss. 2003).

Attorney subject to disciplinary proceeding under this rule was not entitled to stay of proceedings pending final disposition of his appeal before federal appeals court. Mississippi State Bar v. Nixon, 494 So. 2d 1388 (Miss. 1986).

Theft.

Attorney's conviction for theft of government property supported finding that he engaged in unprofessional and unethical conduct, and conduct evincing unfitness for the practice of law, justifying disbarment. Mississippi Bar v. McCarthy, 680 So. 2d 856 (Miss. 1996).

Unethical financial conduct.

An attorney was guilty of unprofessional and unethical conduct and conduct evincing unfitness for the practice of law and was disbarred pursuant to Rule 6(d) where he pleaded guilty to 18 U.S.C. § 2314 (interstate transportation of stolen money) and 18 U.S.C. § 5324(a)(3) (structuring transactions) in a United States District Court. Mississippi Bar v. Thompson, 797 So. 2d 197 (Miss. 2000).

Rule 7. Committee on professional responsibility — Duties and powers.

(a) The Committee shall function as a grand jury in matters of attorney discipline.

(b) Upon receipt of a complaint, Complaint Counsel's report and any response by the attorney, within a reasonable time the Committee shall:

(i) Dismiss any complaint without merit and retire the file; or

(ii) Direct or conduct further investigation if needed; or

(iii) Refer the matter to Complaint Counsel for filing and prosecution of a Formal Complaint; or

(iv) If investigation discloses a minor ethical violation or instance of relatively trivial misconduct or an isolated instance of a minor nature, then the committee shall be authorized to issue a letter of admonition, a private reprimand, or a public reprimand.

(v) In its discretion, and with the assent and accord of the attorney who is the subject of the complaint, in addition to any action taken by the Committee under (ii), (iii) or (iv) of this paragraph, not withstanding the provisions of Rule 15(a) of these rules, delay final action and refer the attorney to the Lawyers and Judges Assistance Committee for evaluation and, as recommended by the Lawyers and Judges Assistance Committee, treatment, monitoring and assistance.

(c) If issued, a letter of admonition, a private reprimand, or a public reprimand shall be sent to the accused attorney and a copy shall be sent to the complaining party. The accused attorney shall have a right within twenty days after receipt of the letter or reprimand to request in writing that a formal disciplinary proceeding be initiated against him to adjudicate the propriety of the conduct upon which the admonition or reprimand is based. If such request is timely made, the letter of admonition or reprimand shall be vacated, and the matter shall be processed by means of a formal complaint. An informal admonition shall not be used as a substitute for and shall not be considered, discipline. However, the fact, nature, and cause of such informal admonition may be disclosed in any subsequent disciplinary proceedings against the accused attorney for an informal admonition, private reprimand, or public reprimand and issued by the Committee.

(d) Referral to the Lawyers and Judges Assistance Committee may not be used as a substitute for, and may not be considered, discipline. However, notwithstanding the provisions of Rule 15(a) of these rules, the Committee, in its discretion, may delay any action under (ii), (iii) or (iv) of paragraph (b) of this rule provided that an attorney who is referred to the Lawyers and Judges Assistance Committee by the Committee complies with all terms and conditions imposed upon the attorney by the Lawyers and Judges Assistance Committee. If an attorney violates the terms and conditions imposed by the Lawyers and Judges Assistance Committee upon such attorney, notwithstanding the provisions of Rule (3.2)(g)(3) of these rules, the Lawyers and Judges Assistance Committee, in accordance with Rule (3.2)(g)(5) of these rules, shall report such failure to comply with all terms and conditions imposed upon the attorney by the Lawyers and Judges Assistance Committee, and upon receipt of such report, the Committee shall take such action under paragraph (b) which the Committee delayed but originally could have taken. In any notification to the complainant of the action or actions taken by the Committee, the Committee, in its discretion, may decide not to include notice of the Committee's referral of the attorney to the Lawyers and Judges Assistance Program.

Procedure

(7.1) Dismissals.— Any complaint dismissed pursuant to Rule (b)(i) shall be neither reported to nor docketed by the Executive Director of the Bar, and such complaints shall be deemed expunged and not considered a charge touching upon the conduct of the attorney. Upon dismissal, the complaining person, the accused attorney and Complaint Counsel shall be given notice.

(7.2) Referrals for Investigation.— Upon receipt of Complaint Counsel's report and any response by the attorney, the Committee may refer the matter for additional investigation and report with such instructions as may appear appropriate. The Committee shall periodically fix the costs and expenses incurred as of that date; provided, no cost shall actually be assessed unless a discipline is finally imposed. Upon referral for additional investigation and report, Complaint Counsel shall have not more than sixty (60) days from and after the date of receipt of the referral directive to conclude the additional investigation and report back to the Committee. A copy of that report and all evidence shall be served upon the accused attorney who shall have fifteen (15) days to respond. Within thirty (30) days, unless enlarged by the Chairman, the Committee on Professional Responsibility shall act upon the matter.

(7.3) Formal Complaints.— If, after conclusion of the investigation, the Committee is of the opinion that probable cause exists to believe the attorney is guilty of conduct warranting discipline, the matter shall be referred to Complaint Counsel for filing of a Formal Complaint for trial before a Complaint Tribunal. Within thirty (30) days of the date of the receipt of the directive, Complaint Counsel shall file the Formal Complaint with the Clerk of the Court with a certificate of costs incurred to date.

(7.4) Complaints Docketed by the Executive Director.— Formal Complaints shall be docketed by the Executive Director and shall not be expunged except on order of a Complaint Tribunal of the Court. (Amended November 16, 1995; amended April 18, 2002.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Appeals.
Due process.
Grand jury function.

Appeals.

There is no constitutional or statutory provision authorizing an appeal from dismissal of a complaint filed against an attorney before the Mississippi State Bar Committee on Complaints; neither this rule nor any other extant rule of law authorizes supreme court to hear such appeal. Smith v. Mississippi State Bar, 475 So. 2d 148 (Miss. 1985).

Due process.

Attorney's due process rights were not violated even though she did not receive notice of possible allegations and was not given opportunity to cross-examine witnesses during committee's pre-complaint investigative proceedings; formal complaint clearly included all disciplinary rules of which tribunal found her in violation; had attorney responded to complaint she would have been in position to exercise all due process rights to which she was entitled, and tribunal employed the required clear and convincing burden of proof. Terrell v. Mississippi Bar, 635 So. 2d 1377 (Miss. 1994).

Grand jury function.

Just as it is impermissible to question members of a grand jury about their deliberations, it is likewise improper to question members of the Committee on Professional Responsibility to discover why they made particular decisions. Mississippi State Bar v. Blackmon, 600 So. 2d 166 (Miss. 1992).

Rule 8. Complaint tribunal — Powers and duties.

(a) All formal complaints shall be filed with the Clerk of the court and the Court shall designate a Complaint Tribunal to hear and determine the matter. Hearings before Complaint Tribunals shall be as cases in chancery.

(b) At the conclusion of the hearing, upon majority vote, the tribunal shall render a written opinion incorporating a finding of fact and a judgment which may:

(i) Exonerate the accused attorney and dismiss the Formal Complaint; or

(ii) Publicly or privately reprimand the attorney; or

(iii) Suspend the attorney with or without probation for a fixed period of time and may specify conditions precedent to reinstatement; or

(iv) Disbar the attorney; or

(v) In addition to any disposition authorized under this paragraph, with the assent and accord of the attorney who is the subject of the complaint, notwithstanding the provisions of Rule 15 of these rules, refer the attorney to the Lawyers and Judges Assistance Committee for evaluation and, as recommended by such committee, treatment, monitoring and assistance.

(c) The Complaint Tribunal shall have the power to enjoin violations under the Mississippi Rules of Professional Conduct.

Procedure

(8.1) Within ten (10) days following the designation of a Complaint Tribunal, the presiding judge shall establish a tentative schedule for discovery, motion hearings and rulings, trial and adjudication, all of which shall be completed within one hundred and eighty (180) days from the date of the designation of the Tribunal, unless extended by the Court on motion of either party for good cause shown.

(8.2) All Formal Complaints shall be prosecuted in the name of the Bar by Complaint Counsel unless the President or First Vice-President of the Bar shall appoint another attorney or attorneys to assist or proceed in the place of Complaint Counsel.

(8.3) The Formal Complaint shall be served in accordance with the applicable Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure.

(8.4) Unless an enlargement of time be granted by the presiding judge of the Complaint Tribunal, the attorney's answer shall be filed within twenty (20) days after a copy of the Formal Complaint is served.

(8.5) Trials shall be held in the attorney's county of residence for those attorneys residing in the State of Mississippi; provided, upon written waiver by the attorney or upon motion made by either party and order by the Tribunal, trial may be held elsewhere. Trials shall be held before the Mississippi Supreme Court or a Tribunal sitting in Hinds County for those attorneys residing outside the State of Mississippi. The presiding judge shall hear and determine all pre-trial motions and all non-dispositive motions and enter all appropriate orders. The tribunal may hold such pre-trial conferences as deemed appropriate. Trial upon the merits shall be held before the full tribunal and shall be held as expeditiously as possible consistent with due process.

(8.6) Imposition of discipline. No discipline shall be imposed except upon clear and convincing evidence. After final hearing on the merits, the opinion of the Tribunal may provide the following:

(i) Exonerate the accused attorney and dismiss the Formal Complaint.

(ii) Publicly or privately reprimand the attorney. If the Tribunal is of the opinion that a private reprimand will adequately afford the disciplinary sanctions required by the particular circumstances, the Tribunal may order the attorney to appear before the Board of Commissioners of the Bar at the board meeting convening first after the reprimand becomes final or may have it forwarded to the attorney by the Clerk of the Court or by certified mail, return receipt requested, restricted delivery to addressee only. If the Tribunal is of the opinion that a Public Reprimand will adequately afford the disciplinary sanctions required by the particular circumstances, the Tribunal may order the attorney to appear before the Circuit Court of the attorney's county of residence on the first day of a term convening next after the date the reprimand becomes final or on some other similar day when a maximum number of the Bar and the public are present. When a reprimand becomes public, a copy shall be given to the person filing the complaint, the Executive Director of the Bar and to the judges of the circuit and chancery districts of the attorney's county of residence. A Final Public Reprimand shall be read by the senior judge or his the senior judge's designee at the time herein indicated and placed upon the minutes of the Court.

(iii) Suspend the attorney with or without probation for a fixed period of time, and may specify conditions precedent to reinstatement. When such orders of suspension become public, they shall be placed upon the minutes of the chancery and circuit courts of the attorney's county of residence, and shall immediately become matters of public record.

(iv) Disbar the attorney. Such orders, when entered, shall be treated as provided in subparagraph (iii), above.

(v) In addition to (ii), (iii), or (iv), notwithstanding the provisions of Rule 15 of these rules, with the assent and accord of the attorney who is the subject of the complaint, refer the attorney to the Lawyers and Judges Assistance Committee for evaluation and, as recommended by such committee, treatment, monitoring and assistance. The Tribunal may delay action under (ii), (iii) or (iv) of this Rule provided that an attorney who is referred to the Lawyers and Judges Assistance Committee by the Tribunal complies with the terms and conditions imposed upon the attorney by the Lawyers and Judges Assistance Committee. If an attorney violates the terms and conditions imposed by the Lawyers and Judges Assistance Committee upon such attorney, notwithstanding the provisions of Rule (3.2)(g)(3) of these rules, the Lawyers and Judges Assistance Committee, in accordance with Rule (3.2)(g)(5) of these rules shall report such failure to comply with all terms and conditions imposed upon the attorney by the Lawyers and Judges Assistance Committee, and upon receipt of such report, the Tribunal may take such action under paragraph (b) which the Tribunal delayed but originally could have taken. (Amended November 16, 1995; amended April 18, 2002; amended effective September 1, 2003; suspended by Order of August 8, 2003, reinstated effective October 1, 2004.)

Construction of discipline.

Use of word "shall" in Rule 8.6 means that complaint tribunal has no discretion in meting out discipline once the Bar establishes beyond clear and convincing evidence that an attorney has violated Rules of Professional Conduct. Mississippi Bar v. Attorney HH, 671 So. 2d 1293 (Miss. 1995).

Delay.

In order to bar disciplinary proceedings due to delay, respondent must demonstrate substantial prejudice in his ability to present a defense. Mississippi Bar v. An Att'y, 636 So. 2d 371 (Miss. 1994), reh'g denied.

Hearing requirement.

Where unethical conduct not processed through a criminal court is charged against an attorney, the bar must present its proof in a Complaint Tribunal hearing before a sanction may be imposed. Mississippi Bar v. Attorney G., 630 So. 2d 344 (Miss. 1994).

Notice.

Bar complaint tribunal did not err in entering default judgment against attorney, despite fact that no scheduling order was ever set and it could not be proven that attorney had received notice of hearing date; attorney chose to represent himself and should have inquired into status of his case when he allegedly did not hear from Bar within a reasonable time after filing his response to the formal complaint. Fougerousse v. Mississippi State Bar Ass'n, 563 So. 2d 1363 (Miss. 1990).

Pleading.

Neither attorney's letter to member of bar complaint tribunal nor her discovery requests constituted an "answer" or a sufficient responsive pleading to disciplinary complaint of Mississippi Bar, and therefore tribunal did not err in entering default against attorney. Harrison v. Mississippi Bar, 637 So. 2d 204 (Miss. 1994).

Procedure.

This rule does not require a bifurcated hearing on issue of imposition of discipline. Terrell v. Mississippi Bar, 635 So. 2d 1377 (Miss. 1994).

Illustrative cases.

Mississippi Bar filed a formal complaint against the attorney after an investigation revealed that the attorney failed to file a habeas petition and neglected other legal matters for which he was paid due to a substance abuse problem. Pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 8, a complaint tribunal heard the matter and found that the attorney violated Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.2(a), 1.3, 1.4, 1.5, 1.15(b), 1.16(d), 8.1(b), and 8.4(a); the attorney was suspended from the practice of law for six months. In re Reinstatement of Kelly, 987 So. 2d 925 (Miss. 2008).

Where an attorney received an informal admonishment in Tennessee for appearing as counsel in a civil case without fully complying with Tennessee's pro hac vice rule, a private reprimand was an appropriate sanction in Mississippi. Miss. Bar v. Atty. BBB, 890 So. 2d 882 (Miss. 2004).

Where an attorney was suspended in Arizona as a result of overdrawing the attorney's client trust account four times, reciprocal discipline in the form of a public reprimand pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 8.6(ii) was imposed in Mississippi pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 13. Miss. Bar v. Inserra, 855 So. 2d 447 (Miss. 2003).

Attorney was disbarred following default judgment, for falsifying law school transcript and fraudulently attempting to secure employment with two out-of-state law firms. Barfield v. Mississippi State Bar Ass'n, 547 So. 2d 46 (Miss. 1989).

Rule 9. Appeals.

(a) Either the Bar or the accused attorney may, as a matter of right, appeal any final disposition of the Tribunal to the Court.

(b) Where the Tribunal's final disposition is made upon a nolo contendere plea, an admission or an irrevocable resignation, the extent or absence of discipline shall be the sole question presented by an appeal.

Procedure

(9.1) Who May take An Appeal. Either the Board or the attorney may appeal a final disposition of the Tribunal. The Board of Commissioners of the Bar shall determine whether General Counsel shall take an appeal on behalf of the Bar. The Board of Bar Commissioners may direct General Counsel to perfect an appeal when the Board believes that the Tribunal's findings and decisions are arbitrary and capricious, not supported by substantial evidence, manifestly wrong, or in error as to a matter of law.

(9.2) Taking an Appeal. Any notice of appeal shall be filed and served on all opposing counsel within thirty (30) days of the date on which the Tribunal's judgment was filed with the Clerk of the Court and by paying within that time, all sums assessed as costs and expenses. Failure to give notice within that time or failure to pay the costs and expenses assessed, or failure to pay any costs due the Clerk of Court, shall be grounds for dismissal, notice and payment within the time provided being jurisdictional for any appeal. Otherwise, appeals shall be taken as in other civil cases.

(9.3) Distribution of Opinion and Judgment and Supersedeas. No private reprimand shall issue within thirty (30) days provided for taking an appeal or until the Court has disposed of any appeal, and an appeal duly perfected, as provided above, from a judgment of the tribunal imposing discipline of suspension for not more than six months shall operate as supersedeas except for making public the imposition of such public discipline or as provided in Rules 6(a) and 10, and the accused attorney shall be permitted to continue the practice of law until such time as the Court disposes of the appeal. In appeals from judgments imposing discipline of six months or more and those imposing disbarment, supersedeas shall be within the sound discretion of the Tribunal, subject to review by this Court, upon application of the accused attorney made within thirty days of the entry of the judgment. In ruling upon such application, the Tribunal shall state the reasons for its action. A motion for a stay of the judgment or the vacating of a stay granted by the Tribunal may be made to this Court or to a justice of this Court, but the motion shall show that the application to the Tribunal for relief sought is not practicable, or that the Tribunal has denied an application or has failed to afford the relief which the applicant has requested, with the reasons given by the Tribunal for its action. The motion shall also show the reasons for the relief requested and the facts relied upon, and, if the facts are subject to dispute, the motion shall be supported by affidavits or other sworn statements. The applicant shall file an original and four (4) copies of the motion for stay and, if the motion is opposed, shall attach legible copies of the documents specified in M.R.A.P. 8(e) for appeals under those rules.

Any stay may be conditioned upon giving bond as may be found appropriate by the Tribunal in the first instance or this Court upon review. Such bonds may be enforced by a motion in this Court without the necessity of an independent action. The motion for satisfaction of the bond and notice of the motion shall be served upon the sureties if their addresses are known.

In no event shall a stay be granted in cases where the accused attorney has defended asserting mental or physical impairment as an excuse for the behavior which is the subject of the complaint, except upon a clear and convincing showing of restoration to mental and physical health sufficient to assure the accused attorney's ability to perform his or her professional responsibilities.

(9.4) Extent of Appellate Review. Upon appeal the Court shall review the entire record and the findings and conclusions of the Tribunal, and shall render such orders as the Court may find appropriate. In so ruling, the Court shall not be bound by the rule applicable to administrative agencies to the effect that their orders must be affirmed, unless they are arbitrary and capricious and are not supported by substantial evidence, or the rule that, as in chancery, the chancellor will not be reversed on the facts unless he is manifestly wrong. Upon the conclusion of any appeal, the Court shall award costs and expenses as in its discretion appears appropriate. (Amended January 2, 1985; amended effective December 5, 1988; 9.3 amended effective as to appeals from complaint tribunals perfected from and after July 1, 1995; amended effective March 29, 2001.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.

Supreme court will not hesitate to impose substantial sanctions upon an attorney for any act which evinces want of personal honesty and integrity, or renders such attorney unworthy of public confidence. Foote v. Mississippi State Bar Ass'n, 517 So. 2d 561 (Miss. 1987).

Construction.

Fact that Bar did not raise issue of attorney's punishment at hearing stage did not mean it was estopped from doing so on appeal, since Rules of Discipline superseded all other rules or statutes pertaining to attorney discipline, and supreme court had power to render any order it deemed appropriate. Mississippi State Bar v. Blackmon, 600 So. 2d 166 (Miss. 1992).

Burden of proof.

Bar has the burden to show by clear and convincing evidence that an attorney's actions constitute professional misconduct. Gex v. Mississippi Bar, 656 So. 2d 1124 (Miss. 1995).

Extenuating circumstances.

In view of extenuating circumstances involving attorney's personal health, health of a family member, and a matter of personal distress, suspension from practice of law was not appropriate; his 120-day suspension was therefore vacated, and he was ordered to receive a public reprimand. Vining v. Mississippi State Bar Ass'n, 508 So. 2d 1047 (Miss. 1987).

Scope of review.

Supreme court reviews evidence de novo, on a case-by-case basis, sitting as triers of fact, and no substantial evidence or manifest error rule shields bar complaint tribunal from scrutiny. Foote v. Mississippi State Bar Ass'n, 517 So. 2d 561 (Miss. 1987); Hoffman v. Mississippi State Bar Ass'n, 508 So. 2d 1120 (Miss. 1987).

Standard of review.

In appeal from attorney disciplinary proceedings, supreme court examines evidence de novo, by reviewing record and findings and conclusions of complaint tribunal, and renders such orders as it deems appropriate. Terrell v. Mississippi Bar, 662 So. 2d 586 (Miss. 1995).

Punishment for violation of rules of discipline is considered and imposed on a case-by-case basis, and is not governed by a set standard; supreme court may impose sanctions either more or less severe than bar complaint tribunal. Harrison v. Mississippi Bar, 637 So. 2d 204 (Miss. 1994).

Supreme court is charged by law to inquire whether evidence in a complaint tribunal is clear and convincing, and court is not bound by any findings of fact made by the complaint tribunal; although no substantial evidence or manifest error rule shields the tribunal from scrutiny, court is not prohibited from giving deference to its findings. Mississippi State Bar v. Odom, 566 So. 2d 712 (Miss. 1990).

Illustrative cases.

Attorney's appeal from a decision of the Complaint Tribunal's recommendation of a public reprimand as a penalty for the violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct was appropriate because the attorney was permitted, under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 9, to appeal as a matter of right; thus, the denial of the State Bar's motion asking for damages for a frivolous appeal was rightfully denied. James v. Miss. Bar, 962 So. 2d 528 (Miss. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 555 U.S. 826, 129 S. Ct. 160, 172 L. Ed. 2d 42, 2008 U.S. LEXIS 6447, 77 U.S.L.W. 3197 (2008).

Client retained an attorney in a wrongful death action after her husband was shot and killed in the presence of a police officer and the case was dismissed due to the attorney's neglect or failure to comply with proper procedure. The attorney failed to cooperate in the investigation, his disciplinary record consisted of eight informal reprimands, three private reprimands, a suspension by a federal court, and the Mississippi State Bar Complaint Tribunal found the only mitigating circumstances offered by the attorney were that he had a very busy law practice and that his membership in the Mississippi State Senate took up much of his time; the Mississippi Supreme Court held that only a public reprimand was necessary, and rejected the Bar's argument that a lengthy suspension was called for. Miss. Bar v. Walls, 890 So. 2d 875 (Miss. 2004).

On appeal from judgment of complaint tribunal imposing sixty day suspension and payment of $1,000 restitution, supreme court found attorney guilty of misconduct, but instead ordered a public reprimand and required that attorney pay restitution of $2,000. Alexander v. Mississippi Bar, 651 So. 2d 541 (Miss. 1995).

Rule 10. Pleas of nolo contendere, admissions and irrevocable resignations.

(a) Any time after the filing of the Formal Complaint, either the Complaint Tribunal or the Court may in its discretion, accept pleas of nolo contendere and admissions. Upon acceptance, the proceedings may terminate, but nothing contained herein shall prevent the further receipt of evidence for purposes of determining the final disposition to be made under Rule 8, above.

(b) Irrevocable resignations may be tendered to the Court or Complaint Tribunal at any time after Complaint Counsel's receipt of a complaint.

Procedure

(10.1) Submission and Effect. The entity to which pleas, admissions or irrevocable resignation are submitted shall direct what proceedings, if any, shall be had thereafter. If the Tribunal enters an opinion and judgment based upon a plea of nolo contendere, admission, or irrevocable resignation, the sole question to be presented by any appeal shall be the extent or absence of discipline.

(10.2) Pleas of Nolo Contendere - Contents. Such pleas need not address the factual matters alleged on the Formal Complaint. If accepted, a plea of nolo contendere shall be considered tantamount to proof of guilt on the matters charged for purposes of determining the discipline to be imposed or the disposition to be made.

(10.3) Admissions - Contents. Admissions shall fully address the factual matters alleged in the Formal Complaint, shall set out that the attorney could not defend himself on the matters admitted, and that the attorney submits to discipline on the matters admitted.

(10.4) Acceptance - Discretionary. Acceptance of a nolo contendere plea or an admission shall be discretionary. Such discretion shall include the right to accept a nolo contendere plea of the Formal Complaint and admission to the remainder.

(10.5) Irrevocable Resignation - Contents and Effect.. An attorney may tender an irrevocable resignation to either the Court or the Tribunal. Such a resignation shall acknowledge each and all disciplinary matters then pending, provide the docket number or numbers, state that the attorney does not desire to defend, and request permission to resign with prejudice from the Bar. Upon receipt of such a resignation, and any response that the Bar may elect to file, the disciplinary proceedings shall terminate and either the Court or the Tribunal shall enter its order accepting the resignation, revoking the attorney's license, and barring forever thereafter the attorney's right to seek reinstatement to the privilege of practicing law in this state. Such a resignation and order shall be considered disciplinary action, and the resignation shall be considered tantamount to the proof of guilt on the matter charged.

(10.6). The purpose of sections 10.1 through 10.5 is to provide a prompt, speedy, knowledgeable, and just disposition of any disciplinary matter.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Resignation.

Pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6, the Mississippi Bar filed a formal complaint seeking the disbarment of an attorney, who pled guilty in a federal district court to one count of conspiracy to corruptly influence an elected state official in violation of 18 U.S.C.S. § 371. The Mississippi Bar met its burden of proof in the attorney's disciplinary matter and was entitled to the disbarment of the attorney because (1) the attorney pled guilty to the felony offense of conspiracy to corruptly influence an elected state official in violation of 18 U.S.C.S. § 371; and (2) the attorney filed his notice of irrevocable resignation pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 10(b) and 10.5. In re Peters, 22 So. 3d 266 (Miss. 2009).

Pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6, the Mississippi Bar filed a formal complaint seeking the disbarment of an attorney, who pled guilty in a federal district court to one count of conspiracy to corruptly influence an elected state official in violation of 18 U.S.C.S. § 371. The Mississippi Bar met its burden of proof in the attorney's disciplinary matter and was entitled to the disbarment of the attorney because (1) the attorney pled guilty to the felony offense of conspiracy to corruptly influence an elected state official in violation of 18 U.S.C.S. § 371; and (2) the attorney filed his notice of irrevocable resignation pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 10(b) and 10.5. Miss. Bar v. Langston, 987 So. 2d 936 (Miss. 2008); Miss. Bar v. Balducci, 987 So. 2d 933 (Miss. 2008).

Attorney was disbarred under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6 because he filed a Notice of Irrevocable Resignation under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 10.5. State Bar v. Naugle, 968 So. 2d 1266 (Miss. 2007).

Attorney's disbarment was appropriate because the attorney had pled guilty to the crime of accessory after the fact; because of the attorney's filing of her notice of irrevocable resignation in compliance with Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 10.5, the supreme court was required to order her disbarment. Miss. Bar v. Smith-Miller, 962 So. 2d 545 (Miss. 2007).

Where an attorney was convicted of conspiracy to commit mail fraud and mail fraud, the court accepted the attorney's resignation from the Mississippi Bar and terminated all disciplinary proceedings.

Miss. Bar v. Ellington, 904 So. 2d 107
(Miss. 2004).

Rule 11. Effect of suspension, disbarment, resignation, incapacity or death.

(a) An appeal shall operate as a supersedeas except as to any judgment of disbarment or suspension entered under Rule 6 or 10. A person disbarred or suspended shall not be permitted to practice law until restored to that privilege by the Court by way of an appeal or petition for reinstatement.

(b) An attorney suspended may be placed on probation or specified terms and may continue to practice law thereunder.

(c) A disbarred, suspended or resigned attorney shall: (1) notify all clients of his disbarment, suspension or resignation and his consequent inability to act as an attorney after the effective date of his disbarment, suspension or resignation; (2) notify each client involved in pending litigation or administrative proceedings and the attorney or attorneys for each adverse party in such proceedings, of his disbarment, suspension or resignation and consequent inability to act as an attorney after the effective date of his disbarment, suspension or resignation; (3) advise each client promptly to substitute another attorney or attorneys in his place or to seek legal advice elsewhere; (4) notify all effected courts and agencies of his disbarment, suspension or resignation and consequent inability to act as an attorney after the effective date thereof; and (5) give such other notice as the disciplinary agency last having jurisdiction may direct in the public interest.

(d) In the event of resignation, disbarment, or suspension, receivers may be appointed by the Committee on Complaints for the limited purpose of making an inventory and disposing of the attorney's files, cases and practice. Neither receivers nor their associates shall be permitted to become counsel for any parties in the cases and files inventoried, but they shall be permitted to take such actions as appear necessary to protect the interests of the clients with pending cases and the interests of the attorney. The Committee on Professional Responsibility shall receive and review reports from the receivers and shall monitor compliance with the terms of any probation, suspension or disbarment.

(e) Failure to comply with any order of discipline may be punished as a contempt and may constitute a separate ground for disciplinary action.

(f) Whenever an attorney has been transferred to inactive status because of incapacity or disability, or disappears or dies, and no partner, or other responsible party capable of conducting the attorney's affairs is known to exist, the Court, or any judge having probate jurisdiction in the district in which the attorney maintains his practice, upon proper proof of the fact, will appoint an attorney or attorneys as receivers to inventory the files of the inactive, missing or deceased attorney and to take such actions as seems indicated to protect the interest of the inactive, missing or deceased attorney and his clients, and to generally carry out the functions described in Rule 11(d).

(g) Any attorney appointed receiver under this rule shall not be permitted to disclose any information contained in any files inventoried without the consent of the client to whom such file relates, except as necessary to carry out the orders of the appointing agency or court.

Procedure

(11.1) Notice to Be Given and Action to Be Taken. When an order of disbarment or an order of suspension for an indefinite period or a suspension without probation or a determination of incapacity or a resignation or proof of death is entered, the receivers, either with or without assistance from the suspended or disbarred person, shall immediately take such action as may be necessary to protect the interests of the clients and the attorney. This action shall include, but need not be limited to, giving notice that the attorney is disqualified to all clients in pending cases, all courts and agencies affected, all co-counsel in pending cases and all opposing counsel in pending matters, or, in the absence of such counsel, the opposing parties. The receivers shall offer to deliver, and where appropriate, shall deliver, to all clients being represented in pending matters, any papers or any other property to which the clients are entitled and shall notify the clients and any counsel representing them, of a suitable time and place where the papers or other property may be obtained. On motion of the attorney, his client, or other litigants, the Court or disciplinary agency last having jurisdiction of the attorney, shall have broad discretion in allowing the attorney to continue as the attorney of record in a particular case.

(11.2) Questions Pertaining to Closing a Practice. The receivers shall present to the agency last having jurisdiction of the disciplinary matter or the appropriate chancery court, any question upon which direction is needed. Nothing contained herein shall be construed to limit the inherent and statutory powers of the chancery court.

(11.3) Reports by Receivers. Upon the closing of the practice, the receivers shall tender appropriate reports to the Committee on Professional Responsibility and to the entity which last had jurisdiction of the disciplinary matter. Where appropriate or necessary, interim reports shall be tendered.

(11.4) Law Partners - Continuance of Representation. If the client agrees, the law partners of a suspended or disbarred attorney may continue to represent any client affected by the suspension or disbarment, but notice thereof should be given as set out above.

(11.5) Costs and Expenses. All costs and expenses incurred by the receivers in the closing of the practice, except as normally payable by the client, shall be paid by the Bar. The Bar shall be entitled to recover of and from the suspended or disbarred attorney, expenses incurred in connection with the receivers. (Amended November 16, 1995.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality.
Disbarment.

Constitutionality.

Attorney disciplinary procedures did not violate sole practitioners' freedom of association, right to equal protection, or right to due process by virtue of provision allowing, with client's agreement, continuation of representation by law partners of a suspended or disbarred attorney. Hall v. Mississippi Bar, 631 So. 2d 120 (Miss. 1993).

Disbarment.

Where the attorney was found guilty of the crime of sale of marijuana within a correctional facility in violation of Miss. Code Ann. § 47-5-198, the Mississippi Bar filed a formal complaint against him pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6. The Supreme Court of Mississippi disbarred the attorney from the practice of law, and ordered him to comply with all other requirements applicable to disbarred attorneys pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 11. Miss. Bar v. Jackson, 987 So. 2d 930 (Miss. 2008).

Rule 12. Reinstatement.

(a) No person disbarred or suspended for a period of six months or longer shall be reinstated to the privilege of practicing law except upon petition to the Court.

(b) Reinstatement to the practice of law following any other discipline shall be only upon proof of compliance with any such sanctions.

(c) An attorney who has been disbarred for conviction of a felony criminal offense which occurred after April 4, 2002, in a court of this state or any other state, or a court of the United States for any felony crime a necessary element of which, as determined by the statutory or common law definition of the crime, involves interference with the administration of justice, false swearing, misrepresentation, fraud, deceit, bribery, extortion, misappropriation, theft, the sale or distribution of a controlled substance, or an attempt, conspiracy or solicitation of another to commit such a crime, shall be ineligible for reinstatement to the practice of law.

Procedure.

(12.1) Disbarments. The petition for reinstatement shall not be filed until three (3) years after the date the order of disbarment became final.

(12.2) Suspensions. A petition for reinstatement shall be required in all cases of suspension for a period of six months or more. In cases of suspension pending satisfaction of conditions precedent, reinstatement shall not be permitted except upon proof that the conditions have been met.

(12.3) Suspensions - Revocation of Probation. Probation may be revoked upon clear and convincing proof that the attorney has failed to meet the terms of the probation. It shall be the duty of the Committee on Professional Responsibility to monitor such suspensions with probation, to receive any reports which the attorney may be required to submit, and to take such action as may be appropriate in the circumstances.

(12.4) Suspensions - Time for Filing Petitions for Reinstatement. A suspended attorney shall not file a petition for reinstatement until the expiration of the period of suspension. In cases of suspension of six months or longer pending satisfaction of conditions precedent, the petition for reinstatement may be filed immediately upon the attorney's meeting these conditions.

(12.5) Examination Requirements. Subsequent to the time of eligibility for reinstatement of an attorney suspended for six months or longer, the petitioning attorney shall take the Multi-State Professional Responsibility Exam, as prepared by the National Conference of Bar Examiners, and achieve a scaled score of not less than 80, if the Complaint Tribunal determines, on a case-by-case basis, that good cause exists to require the applicant for reinstatement to take such test. A disbarred attorney, prior to reinstatement, shall be required to take and pass the complete bar examination administered by the Mississippi Board of Bar Admissions and achieve the score then required for admission to the bar of new attorneys as well as passing the Multi-State Professional Responsibility Exam with the score required for admission of new lawyers.

(12.6) Effect - Adverse Determination. If a petition for reinstatement is denied, no other petition shall be filed until one year after the date of the prior adverse decision.

(12.7) Contents of Reinstatement Petitions - Jurisdictional Matters. All reinstatement petitions shall be addressed to the Court, shall state the cause or causes for suspension or disbarment, give the names and current addresses of all persons, parties, firms, or legal entities who suffered pecuniary loss due to the improper conduct, the making of full amends and restitution, the reasons justifying reinstatement, and requisite moral character and legal learning to be reinstated to the privilege of practicing law. Upon filing, the petition shall be served on, and an investigatory fee of $500.00 shall be paid to the Bar, same to be in addition to any other sum due the Bar, or persons injured by the petitioner's improper conduct. The matters set out in this paragraph shall be jurisdictional.

(12.8) Board of Bar Commissioners. Upon receipt of the reinstatement petition, the Court shall allow the Board of Bar Commissioners thirty (30) days within which to conduct an investigation and fully answer the petition. After filing of pleadings or notice on behalf of the Bar, the proceedings shall continue, if necessary or desirable, as the Court may direct and the Court, in its discretion, may grant or deny the petition as circumstances and justice require.

(12.9) Matter of Public Record. All petitions for reinstatement shall be matters of public record, Rule 15 notwithstanding. (Amended effective August 12, 1992; amended April 4, 2002.)

Construction.

Plain meaning of phrase "full amends and restitution" means exactly what it says: attorney must make complete and total restitution to all parties who suffered a pecuniary loss; these words are clear and unambiguous, and proper construction of them requires interpretation as written. In re Baker, 649 So. 2d 850 (Miss. 1995).

Fundamental question to be addressed before reinstatement is the attorney's rehabilitation in conduct and character since disbarment; focus should not be on attorney's character at the time the offense was committed, but on his character since the time the offense was committed. In re Nixon, 618 So. 2d 1283 (Miss. 1993).

Burden of suspended attorney petitioning for reinstatement is not the same or as great as that demanded of one who has been disbarred; implicit in judgment of suspension, stopping short of disbarment, is that attorney's character has not been shown so deficient that proof of general moral and professional rehabilitation is required. Haimes v. Mississippi State Bar, 551 So. 2d 910 (Miss. 1989).

Authority of court.

Even though Rules of Discipline provide for reinstatement through petition, an order of automatic reinstatement is within scope of supreme court's exclusive and inherent jurisdiction of attorney discipline matters. Broome v. Mississippi Bar, 603 So. 2d 349 (Miss. 1992).

Contempt.

Attorney disbarred due to misdemeanor contempt of court, resulting from failure to provide information to grand jury, was reinstated subject to passage of special ethics exam. Holmes v. Mississippi Bar, 602 So. 2d 847 (Miss. 1992).

Drug offenses.

Disbarred attorney's petition for reinstatement was denied, where his conviction was for that of distributing, not merely using, unlawful drugs, and he failed to demonstrate the requisite moral character to practice law. In re Massey, 670 So. 2d 843 (Miss. 1996).

Attorney convicted of cocaine possession was reinstated, where he fulfilled all requirements of reinstatement and was subject to condition that he submit to random drug screening for a period of two years. Mississippi State Bar v. Gautier, 538 So. 2d 772 (Miss. 1989).

Embezzlement.

Attorney who embezzled money from his former employer demonstrated requisite rehabilitation in conduct and moral character since his disbarment and would be reinstated to practice law, contingent upon passage of Mississippi Bar Exam and Multi-State Professional Responsibility Exam. In re Medley, 687 So. 2d 1219 (Miss. 1997).

Attorney convicted of two counts of felonious embezzlement from his clients met his burden of proving that he had rehabilitated himself and re-established requisite moral character; he was thus reinstated, on condition that he pay $1,500 to comply with "full amends and restitution" requirement, and that he successfully take entire Mississippi Bar Exam and Professional Responsibility Exam. In re Baker, 649 So. 2d 850 (Miss. 1995).

Failure to comply.

Because an attorney failed to satisfy the conditions of his suspension under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 12.2 and 12.5 and his petition was premature under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 12.4, his petition for reinstatement to the practice of law was denied. In re Petition of Shah, 5 So. 3d 352 (Miss. 2008).

Attorney's petition for reinstatement to the practice of law was denied because evidence indicated that the attorney had attempted to mislead the Bar and the court that he possessed the requisite moral character, and that the Bar, through limited investigation, had accepted his averments. In re Prisock, 5 So. 3d 319 (Miss. 2008).

An attorney would not be reinstated to the practice of law since it appeared that he lacked the necessary moral character where (1) only four months after he was suspended, he incorrectly stated on his application for a real estate broker's license that he had never had a license suspended or revoked, (2) he was previously assessed with the costs and expenses of a proceeding and neglected to pay until almost two years after the assessment, and (3) he was also previously required to apologize, in writing, to the bar and tribunal for an unnecessary hearing, but the bar never received such an apology. In re Asher, 733 So. 2d 815 (Miss. 1999).

Attorney's petition for reinstatement was denied, where he failed to fully comply with court order regarding submission of affidavits and possibly still owed restitution to his former law firm, and where court remained unconvinced that attorney had rehabilitated his character. In re Tucker, 656 So. 2d 799 (Miss. 1995).

Petitioner failed to list parties who suffered pecuniary loss due to his improper conduct and made no showing of full amends and restitution to those persons, and he stated no reason justifying reinstatement and failed to reference requisite moral character or provide information regarding requisite legal learning, and as these defects were jurisdictional, petitioner was denied reinstatement. Burgin v. Mississippi State Bar, 453 So. 2d 689 (Miss. 1984).

Felony conviction.

Attorney disbarred from practice of law, following conviction for felony, was reinstated on condition that he make full amends and restitution, and that he successfully take and pass complete Bar Examination as well as Multi-State Professional Responsibility Exam. In re Burgin, 654 So. 2d 40 (Miss. 1995).

Grounds for reinstatement note applies to Rule 12.7.

Supreme court's referral of the attorney's petition for reinstatement to the Complaint Tribunal was proper even though the attorney was eligible for reinstatement under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 12, because his petition before the supreme court failed to meet the requisite burden of proof for reinstatement set forth in Rule 12.7. In re Shelton, 987 So. 2d 898 (Miss. 2006).

Where an attorney was disbarred after being convicted of felony cocaine possession, the attorney did not satisfy the rules for reinstatement under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 12.7, as the attorney failed to present documentation of the rehabilitation treatment that the attorney had received, most of the attorney's involvement in charitable and community activities was by financial contributions, and the attorney, in contravention of the order of disbarment, continued to hold himself out as an attorney. In re Baldwin, 890 So. 2d 56 (Miss. 2003).

Pleading of conclusions was insufficient to satisfy requirements of this rule; such failures were jurisdictional, and revealed that petitioner had not carried burden of proving himself worthy of reinstatement. Jennings v. Mississippi State Bar, 533 So. 2d 443 (Miss. 1988).

Procedure.

Disbarred attorney's petition for reinstatement, filed on October 18, 2007, was dismissed as premature because the three-year waiting period for the petition under Miss. R. Disc. 12.1 began to run on June 23, 2005, the date that the court filed its opinion, and not May 27, 2004, the date of his suspension by the complaint tribunal. In re Petition for Reinstatement of Shah, 987 So. 2d 964 (Miss. 2008).

Second petition for reinstatement filed by an attorney who was disbarred after pleading guilty to felonious possession of cocaine was dismissed with prejudice where the scant one-page petition, which contained only generic statements, lacked both content and substance, and failed to adequately address each of the requirements set forth in Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 12.5, 12.6, and 12.7. In re Petition ex rel. Baldwin, 987 So. 2d 961 (Miss. 2008).

Attorney's petition to modify order of suspension was denied; no petition for rehearing had been filed and judgment had become final, and his petition amounted to a petition for reinstatement which, under this rule, was not to be filed until expiration of the period of suspension. Mississippi State Bar v. Young, 523 So. 2d 323 (Miss. 1988).

Rehabilitation.

Disbarred attorney's petition for reinstatement was denied; although the attorney, who had pleaded guilty in federal court to one count of conspiracy to commit extortion, showed some rehabilitation and outward improvement in his conduct, the attorney failed to show the requisite rehabilitated moral character to be reinstated. Stewart v. Miss. Bar, 5 So. 3d 344 (Miss. 2008).

Attorney's petition for reinstatement to the practice of law was denied because the attorney's petition was lacking in any proof that the attorney possessed a firm resolve to live a correct life which would have justified the court granting the petition and reinstating the attorney's license under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 12 because (1) the attorney continued to show no remorse for the attorney's actions, (2) many of the letters of recommendation which were submitted on the attorney's behalf did not acknowledge the gravity of the attorney's offenses, nor did the attorney's own petition, (3) the attorney failed to become involved in charities on a more personal level, and the attorney's claim that several of these charities already had ample volunteers was unconvincing, (4) the attorney's employment was minimal, and (5) the attorney's petition failed to provide clear and convincing evidence of rehabilitation justifying reinstatement. In re McGuire, 849 So. 2d 880 (Miss. 2003).

Disbarred attorney's petition for reinstatement was denied where the attorney worked during disbarment in the law office in which the attorney had formerly practiced; the issue of unauthorized practice of law is a matter to be considered in reinstatement proceedings, and, although a disbarred or suspended lawyer may work as a clerk or paralegal under certain stringent guidelines, such a lawyer may not work for a former firm. In re Parsons, 890 So. 2d 40 (Miss. 2003).

Attorney convicted of federal money laundering failed to satisfy requisite burden to justify court's reinstatement of his license to practice law by neglecting to engage in any type of community service, mischaracterizing the severity of the offense; Letters of recommendation he presented in support of his petition expressed chagrin over his treatment by the court, and ignored the severity level of the committed offense. McGuire v. Mississippi Bar, 798 So. 2d 476 (Miss. 2001).

Fundamental issue posed by a petition for reinstatement is the attorney's rehabilitation in conduct and character since disbarment or suspension; burden is on petitioner to prove that he has been rehabilitated sufficiently to entitle him to reinstatement. In re Robb, 702 So. 2d 423 (Miss. 1997).

Petitioner failed to meet required burden of proof that he was fully rehabilitated during suspension from practice of law, where his involvement in alleged assault with possession of concealed weapon, and suspicious nature of circumstances surrounding dismissal of those charges, warranted full evidentiary hearing. In re Robb, 702 So. 2d 423 (Miss. 1997).

Reinstatement granted.

Attorney's petition under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 12 for reinstatement to practice law in Mississippi was granted because the attorney had shown sufficiently that he was rehabilitated and had the requisite moral character to practice law in the State, the attorney accepted responsibility and expressed remorse for his actions throughout his petitions and deposition, and the attorney submitted that he had learned a valuable lesson over the past six years; letters of support, while laudable and relevant, were not necessarily dispositive of moral character and were not required by Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 12, and the attorney attached to his petition a document from the National Conference of Bar Examiners, showing that he had scored a 90 on the Multistate Professional Responsibility Examination, well above the required score of 80 under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 12.5. Azki Shah v. Miss. Bar, 83 So. 3d 1274 (Miss. 2011).

Conditional grant of the attorney's petition for reinstatement to the practice of law contingent upon the attorney's taking and passing the Mississippi Bar Examination was appropriate because the attorney had proven by clear and convincing evidence that he had rehabilitated himself and was worthy of reinstatement to the practice of law. Daly v. Miss. Bar, 83 So. 3d 1262 (Miss. 2011).

Based on the evidence provided, the Mississippi Supreme Court found that the suspended attorney proved that he had rehabilitated himself and possessed the moral character necessary for reinstatement to the practice of law, Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 13; the attorney had to file monthly reports of the results of drug and alcohol screens. In re Hodges, 19 So. 3d 656 (Miss. 2009).

Attorney met the requirements for reinstatement under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 12.7, given that (1) the attorney's plea of guilty to a charge of bribery of a public official, for purposes of Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6(a), was not accepted by the trial court and the trial court dismissed the charges finding that there was a strong doubt as to the State's ability to carry its burden of proof, (2) the only basis for the attorney's suspension was the plea to the charge that was dismissed, (3) there was no evidence that anyone besides the attorney suffered pecuniary loss, (4) the complaint tribunal found no evidence that the attorney ever lacked the requisite moral character to practice law, many people testified as to his character and recommended reinstatement, and the attorney testified that he ministered to youth in his community, and (5) the complaint tribunal found no reason to suspect that the attorney lacked the requisite legal education to practice law, plus the attorney had attended various seminars that offered continuing legal education credit and reviewed the court's hand-down lists on the court's website, and the tribunal recommended, pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 12.5, that the attorney not be required to take the Multi-State Professional Responsibility Exam because there was no evidence that he was lacking in ethical responsibility; the court accepted the recommendations and reinstated the attorney to the practice of law. In re Shelton, 987 So. 2d 938 (Miss. 2008).

In the petition for reinstatement, the attorney stated the cause for his suspension was inattention to matters as a result of substance abuse; he provided the names and addresses of the persons who suffered loss as a result of his misconduct; the attorney made restitution to the clients. he attorney showed true remorse a result of his experience in a drug treatment and alcohol program; the letters of recommendation he provided showed that he possessed the necessary moral character for the practice of law; the attorney also kept up with developments in the law, and passed the Multi-State Professional Responsibility Exam. The attorney satisfied the five jurisdictional requirements for reinstatement under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 12. In re Reinstatement of Kelly, 987 So. 2d 925 (Miss. 2008).

State supreme court granted an attorney's petition for reinstatement pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 12 because, inter alia, the attorney acknowledged that his actions violated Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.15 and Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 8.4(a), (c), and (d), and the attorney stated that he had reimbursed the fund from which he had withheld the money. In re Coleman, 949 So. 2d 680 (Miss. 2006).

Attorney's petition to reinstate his license to practice law and be readmitted to the Mississippi Bar, subject to the following conditions: that he continued to participate in a lawyers' assistance program and that he open a new trust/escrow account for conducting his law practice and that he submit the monthly bank statements for such account to the Mississippi Bar's General Counsel for his review for a period of twelve months following his resumption of the practice of law. In re Flautt, 890 So. 2d 928 (Miss. 2004).

An attorney was entitled to reinstatement, contingent upon his passage of the Mississippi Bar Examination and the Multi-State Professional Responsibility Exam, where (1) the petition clearly stated the causes for the attorney's disbarment, (2) the criminal violation for which the attorney was convicted did not directly involve pecuniary loss to any person, party, firm or legal entity, and no restitution of any type was ordered, (3) the attorney was ordered to pay and did pay the bar's costs and expenses associated with its investigation and prosecution of the disbarment proceeding, (4) the attorney listed sufficient reasons justifying his reinstatement, (5) the attorney established the requisite moral character, and

(6) the attorney established that, during the period of his disbarment, he had read various periodicals and articles concerning matters of legal interest to him, although not on a scheduled basis. In re Parsons, 797 So. 2d 203 (Miss. 2000).

A petition for reinstatement to the practice of law was granted to an attorney who was suspended for six months based upon the United States Bankruptcy Court's issuance of an injunction that prohibited him from practicing in that court for a specified period of time where the attorney (1) paid an amount to a client as order by the Bankruptcy Court, (2) paid the bar's costs and expenses involved in its investigation and prosecution of the instant disciplinary proceeding and the investigatory fee in connection with his petition for reinstatment, (3) showed the requisite moral character, (4) satisfied Rule 11(c), (5) retook and passed the Multi-State Professional Responsibility portion of the bar exam, (6) appeared to be mentally and emotionally stable and did not appear to be suffering from any medical problems, and (7) intended to resume private practice and specialize in the area of criminal law, rather than doing bankruptcy work. In re Shah, 797 So. 2d 199 (Miss. 2000).

The court would grant a petition for reinstatement where (1) the attorney made restitution as required and submitted his investigatory fee, (2) following his suspension, he promptly closed his practice, notified all clients and others of his suspension, provided new counsel with all required information, returned documents to clients, and filed an affidavit attesting to his completion of these acts, (3) he offered numerous letters of recommendation, (4) he obtained the requisite legal education for reinstatement, and (5) he met the jurisdictional requirements for reinstatement. In re Steele, 722 So. 2d 662 (Miss. 1998).

Attorney met conditions for reinstatement where he paid required restitution to his former client in conjunction with settling client's threatened malpractice action, and client understood that $5,000 settlement included $1,750 in restitution owed by attorney. In re Pace, 699 So. 2d 593 (Miss. 1997).

— Jurisdictional requirements.

State supreme court conditionally granted attorney's reinstatement to the bar upon passing the Mississippi Bar Exam and the Multi-State Professional Responsibility Exam, as the attorney satisfied the jurisdictional requirements and met his burden of proving that he had rehabilitated himself and had the requisite moral character as required by Miss. R. Disc. State Bar 12. The attorney identified the reasons for his disbarment, showed proof of payment on all ordered costs, had 66 letters of recommendation from community members, and the state bar conditionally supported his reinstatement. In re McGuire, 912 So. 2d 902 (Miss. 2005).

Denial of an attorney's petition for reinstatement to the practice of law was proper where he failed to give the names and addresses of those who had suffered pecuniary loss as a result of his improper conduct and failed to offer letters of recommendation. Further, the following are five jurisdictional requirements which will henceforth apply to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 12 reinstatement petitions: The petitioner must: (1) state the cause or causes for suspension or disbarment; (2) give the name and current address of all persons, parties, firms, or legal entities who suffered pecuniary loss due to the improper conduct; (3) make full amends and restitution, (4) show that he has the necessary moral character for the practice of law; and (5) demonstrate the requisite legal education to be reinstated to the privilege of practicing law. In re Benson, 890 So. 2d 888 (Miss. 2004).

Time limits.

Attorney's disbarment was not retroactive to date of his suspension, for purposes of calculating three year waiting period required before filing a petition for reinstatement, where attorney sought a stay of the final order and thus delay in entry of final order was due to his own initiative. Mississippi State Bar v. Nixon, 562 So. 2d 1288 (Miss. 1990).

Three-year time period governing petitions for reinstatement began to run from date of final order of disbarment, and there was no "relation back" to date of initial order which suspended petitioner from practice of law. McIntosh v. Mississippi State Bar, 449 So. 2d 1203 (Miss. 1984).

Illustrative cases.

Attorney failed to satisfy the necessary requirements for reinstatement to the privilege of practicing law, under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 12, on both procedural and substantive grounds because (1) the attorney had not satisfied the requirement that he state the cause or causes for suspension because, in his petition for reinstatement, the attorney merely listed the Mississippi Rules of Professional Conduct which he was found to have violated; (2) the attorney's petition for reinstatement failed to give the name and current address of all persons, parties, firms, or legal entities who suffered pecuniary loss due to his misconduct; and (3) the attorney failed to offer clear and convincing evidence to satisfy the burden of proving that he had rehabilitated himself and reestablished the requisite moral character sufficient to entitle him to reinstatement because the scant evidence of community service and a single letter regarding moral character were contextually inadequate in view of the severity of the attorney's prior violations. In re Asher, 987 So. 2d 954 (Miss. 2008).

Petitioner attorney failed to show that he met all jurisdictional requirements of the Rule; until the attorney could prove that the financial loss suffered by one of the financial institutions involved was equal to the amount of restitution paid to the FDIC, he failed to meet his burden of proof, therefore, his petition for reinstatement to the practice of law was denied. In re Watkins, 849 So. 2d 843 (Miss. 2002).

On condition that he retake and pass the Mississippi Bar Exam and the Multi-State Professional Responsibility Exam, a petition to reinstate an attorney was granted where (1) the petition clearly stated the causes for the attorney's disbarment, (2) the criminal violation for which the attorney was convicted did not directly involve pecuniary loss to any person, party, firm or legal entity, and no restitution was ordered, (3) the attorney was ordered to pay and did pay the bar's costs and expenses associated with its investigation and prosecution of the disbarment proceeding, (4) in support of his petition for reinstatement, the attorney listed sufficient reasons justifying his reinstatement, and (5) the attorney established the requisite moral character. In re Parsons, 797 So. 2d 203 (Miss. 2000).

An attorney was entitled to reinstatement to the bar by complying with all necessary requirements for reinstatement where (1) he included a list of names and addresses of persons, parties, firms, or legal entities who suffered pecuniary loss due to his misconduct; (2) he made full amends and restitution; (3) he established good moral character by showing his church activities, explaining his treatment by a local psychiatrist, and expressing remorse for his misconduct, and (4) he showed that he had the requisite legal learning. In re Smith, 758 So. 2d 396 (Miss. 1999).

Where attorney, during a period when he was suspended from the practice of law, represented a client, converted that client's funds, and then became unavailable to that client, attorney's actions merited disbarment, and attorney was prohibited from applying for reinstatement for a period of three years. Mississippi Bar v. Carter, 678 So. 2d 981 (Miss. 1996).

Attorney convicted in federal court for crime of falsifying a document would be reinstated to practice law upon earning a passing score on examinations required by rule. In re McHann, 691 So. 2d 422 (Miss. 1997).

Rule 13. Discipline in another jurisdiction.

When an attorney should be subjected to disciplinary sanctions in another jurisdiction, such sanction shall be grounds for disciplinary action in this state, and certification of such sanction by the appropriate authority of such jurisdiction to the Executive Director of the Bar or to the Court, shall be conclusive evidence of the guilt of the offense or unprofessional conduct on which said sanction was ordered, and it will not be necessary to prove the grounds for such offense in the disciplinary proceeding in this state. The sole issue to be determined in the disciplinary proceeding in this state shall be the extent of the final discipline to be imposed on the attorney, which may be less or more severe than the discipline imposed by the other jurisdiction.

Procedure

(13.1). Upon receipt by the Executive Director of a certified copy of disciplinary sanctions imposed by the bar or a court in another jurisdiction or by a Mississippi trial court or local bar association upon an attorney subject to these rules, the Executive Director shall immediately docket same as a complaint, charge or grievance and shall immediately forward the matter to Complaint Counsel. Complaint Counsel shall present the certified copies of the disciplinary action of the other court or Bar to the Court wherein the sole issue to be determined shall be the extent of final discipline to be imposed on the attorney in this state, which discipline may be less or more severe than the discipline imposed by the other jurisdiction. (Amended effective April 5, 1994.)

Appropriate sanctions.

In a Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 13 proceeding in which an attorney had been permanently disbarred from the practice of law in Louisiana after he pled guilty to inciting a felony, while the attorney offered several mitigating factors for consideration by the Supreme Court of Mississippi, he cited no extraordinary circumstances which compelled, justified or supported variance from Louisiana's sanction. Additionally, Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 6 provided for disbarment following a plea of guilty to any felony in any state or federal court. Miss. Bar v. Dorhauer, 38 So. 3d 610 (Miss. 2009).

In a case in which an attorney had been suspended from the practice of law in Tennessee for three months and the Mississippi Bar filed a formal complaint against the attorney, the case did not present any extraordinary circumstances which compelled, justified, or supported variance from Tennessee's sanction. Miss. Bar v. Burlison, 38 So. 3d 614 (Miss. 2009).

In a disciplinary proceeding brought under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 13, after considering the facts and sanctions in similar cases, the court found that the sanctions of a one-year suspension, one-year probation and assessment of costs were appropriate, which was similar to the sanctions imposed by the Tennessee Supreme Court for the violations. Miss. Bar v. Dolan, 987 So. 2d 921 (Miss. 2008).

In a disciplinary proceeding brought under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 13, reciprocal sanctions were appropriate because the supreme court took the disciplinary action of another state's supreme court to be conclusive proof of a disciplinary violation. Miss. Bar v. Inserra, 929 So. 2d 884 (Miss. 2006).

Attorney was sanctioned with a six-month suspension with all but one month deferred and probation for one year, under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 13, because the sanction of another jurisdiction (Louisiana) was conclusive evidence of the guilt of an offense or unprofessional conduct. Miss. Bar v. Pepper, 939 So. 2d 767 (Miss. 2006).

Under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 13 and 18, the lawyer was transferred to disability inactive status and not permitted to practice law when he was personally incapable of practicing law due to his cardiac problems and where his license had been similarly suspended in Kentucky and Tennessee. Miss. Bar v. Catron, 918 So. 2d 1267 (Miss. 2005).

Because the Mississippi Supreme Court takes the cold record of a foreign jurisdiction as conclusive, it holds that in reciprocal attorney discipline cases, deference must be afforded to the foreign jurisdiction's findings. Clearly Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 13 provides the Supreme Court can impose whatever sanction it deems appropriate in reciprocal attorney discipline cases; however, Rule 13 is not an invitation to disregard logic, reason or common sense. Only under extraordinary circumstances should there be significant variance from a sanction imposed by the foreign jurisdiction. Miss. Bar v. Drungole, 913 So. 2d 963 (Miss. 2005).

Where an attorney received an informal admonishment in Tennessee for appearing as counsel in a civil case without fully complying with Tennessee's pro hac vice rule, a private reprimand was an appropriate sanction in Mississippi. Miss. Bar v. Atty. BBB, 890 So. 2d 882 (Miss. 2004).

Where an attorney was disbarred in Texas for conversion of a client's funds, disbarment in Mississippi was also appropriate; final discipline can be more or less severe than the discipline imposed by another jurisdiction. Miss. Bar v. Montgomery, 890 So. 2d 880 (Miss. 2004).

Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 13 provided that if an attorney licensed to practice law in the State of Mississippi was disciplined in another jurisdiction, the Mississippi Supreme Court could impose discipline; a 90-day suspension was appropriate, but because the lawyer voluntarily suspended her practice of law in Mississippi, she had completed her 90-day suspension and could petition for reinstatement to the practice of law in Mississippi after she complied with all of the conditions for readmission to the Tennessee Bar Association. Miss. Bar v. Caldwell, 890 So. 2d 855 (Miss. 2004).

Where an attorney was suspended in Arizona as a result of overdrafting the attorney's client trust account four times, reciprocal discipline in the form of a public reprimand pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 8.6(ii) was imposed in Mississippi pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 13. Miss. Bar v. Inserra, 855 So. 2d 447 (Miss. 2003).

Following his suspension from practice before the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals for one year based upon his conduct in handling a client's case pending before that court, an attorney was subjected to a public reprimand and was ordered to pay restitution to the client of any compensation received for representing the client and to pay all costs and expenses. Mississippi Bar v. Walls, 797 So. 2d 217 (Miss. 2001).

In determining an appropriate sanction for an offense committed in a foreign jurisdiction, the court should not be bound by those findings of the foreign jurisdiction which go to the sanction imposed; but should approach the issue of an appropriate sanction under Mississippi case law, which permits the court to place either more or less weight on the mitigating circumstances of the individual case. Mississippi Bar v. Pels, 708 So. 2d 1372 (Miss. 1998).

Bankruptcy court.

Attorney made material misrepresentations to the United States Bankruptcy Court, violated the bankruptcy court's order to have the filing fee accompany the petition, and violated Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1006, which required payment of the filing fees in full before the attorney may accept fees. In applying Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 13, the Mississippi Supreme Court found that a reciprocal suspension was proper as there were no extraordinary circumstances, while noting it could impose any discipline it deemed proper in a given case depending upon the particular circumstances Miss. Bar v. Drungole, 913 So. 2d 963 (Miss. 2005).

Reciprocal sanctions against attorney suspended by United States Bankruptcy Court were in order; attorney was therefore suspended from practice of law for 180 days, with taxation of costs and expenses, for his failure to follow three court orders and to protect his clients' interests.

Mississippi Bar v. Felton, 699 So. 2d 949 (Miss. 1997).

Federal courts.

Attorney was suspended from practice of law in any Mississippi state court for six months, as a reciprocal sanction for federal court's suspending him for two years for failure to comply with court orders. Mississippi Bar v. Alexander, 669 So. 2d 40 (Miss. 1996).

Although sanction of disbarment was requested by State Bar, supreme court imposed suspension of one year on attorney adjudged guilty of unprofessional conduct by federal appeals court and suspended from practice before its bar for a year. Mississippi State Bar v. Young, 509 So. 2d 210 (Miss. 1987).

Procedure.

Where the attorney had been disciplined in Florida, the Supreme Court of Mississippi would only consider, pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 13, whether or not the discipline to be imposed against the attorney in Mississippi should be more or less severe than the discipline imposed against the attorney in Florida. Miss. Bar v. Broome, 949 So. 2d 704 (Miss. 2006).

Five-year suspension from the practice of law in Mississippi was appropriate sanction, Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 13, for attorney who had been suspended for five years in Tennessee; attorney's inaction to Mississippi Bar attempting to serve process demonstrated his intent not to contest any discipline which may be imposed on him. Miss. Bar v. Gilmer, 949 So. 2d 689 (Miss. 2006).

When another jurisdiction has imposed on a Mississippi lawyer a sanction of suspension or disbarment, the matter of reciprocal discipline is to be presented directly to the supreme court and not to a complaint tribunal, with the sole issue to be the extent of final discipline to be imposed on the attorney in Mississippi. Mississippi Bar v. Strauss, 601 So. 2d 840 (Miss. 1992).

State court.

In a reciprocal disciplinary proceeding in which an attorney had been suspended from the practice of law in Arizona for one year with one year of probation upon reinstatement after a hearing officer found that he had violated ten Arizona ethical rules, two Arizona Supreme Court Rules, and American Bar Association Standard 3.0, pursuant to Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 13, the sanction imposed by the Arizona Supreme Court was conclusive evidence of the guilt of the offense or unprofessional conduct. Miss. Bar v. Inserra, 38 So. 3d 605 (Miss. 2009).

Where an attorney pled guilty in Tennessee to consuming alcohol in violation of his monitoring agreement and was suspended by the Tennessee Supreme Court for one year, he was suspended for one year in Mississippi, retroactive to the date of the Tennessee order, because the infraction did not involve an act of moral turpitude or significantly harm a Mississippi client. Miss. Bar v. Hodges, 949 So. 2d 683 (Miss. 2006).

Lawyer was suspended from the practice of law in Mississippi for nine months after the lawyer was suspended in Illinois for representing to clients and to court that the lawyer had acquired expert opinions as to causation in a medical malpractice suit when the lawyer had not. Miss. Bar v. Barry, 890 So. 2d 870 (Miss. 2004).

Findings of Louisiana supreme court were conclusive evidence of attorney's guilt of offenses charged in Louisiana. Mississippi State Bar v. Edwins, 534 So. 2d 218 (Miss. 1988).

Rule 14. Immunity from civil suit — Right to sue.

(a) All complaints filed, statements made and documents or other tangible things produced pursuant hereto shall be absolutely privileged, and no civil suit predicated therein may be instituted, and each person, firm, association or legal entity filing such a complaint shall be immune from any civil suit pending thereon. The officers of the Bar and all of the disciplinary agencies, and their assistants, staff, employees and receivers shall be immune from civil suit for any conduct arising out of the performance of their official duties. Every person shall be immune from civil suit for all evidence or testimony given or submitted in the course of any investigation, investigatory hearing, formal hearing or review proceedings held and conducted under these rules.

(b) In an action separate and distinct from the disciplinary proceedings, the attorney may, by petition filed with the clerk of the Court, seek a finding by the Court or its special master on the issue of malicious prosecution, abuse of process, malicious publication to persons not authorized to receive information pertaining to matters arising under these rules, slander or libel. If the Court finds or approves a finding by a special master that there appears to or may have been malicious prosecution, abuse of process, defamation of character, slander or libel, the court shall enter its order granting the right to sue, notwithstanding the immunity provided above. Such finding and right to sue shall constitute only a right to commence an action, not an adjudication as to whether or not there was, in fact, a waiver of the immunity provided above, and not a finding upon the merits of any action which the attorney may thereafter institute. No action shall be instituted prior to the issuance of the order herein provided. The statute of limitations provided by statute for applicable causes of action shall commence on the date the order is entered. (Amended November 16, 1995.)

Illustrative cases.

Having initiated lawsuit against defendant attorney in Circuit Court after his bar complaint was dismissed, plaintiff enjoyed no immunity to attorney's counterclaims for malicious prosecution, and therefore trial judge properly allowed attorney's counterclaims to go forward. Roussel v. Robbins, 688 So. 2d 714 (Miss. 1996).

Rule 15. Confidentiality of matters under these rules — Penalties.

(a) All disciplinary agencies, their assistants, staff and employees, members of the bar, court reporters, clerks, and receivers are strictly enjoined to keep and maintain confidential, all things arising under these rules and all proceedings thereon. The attorney may make such public statement or disclosure as he desires. The period of confidentiality shall end, however, upon the happening of any of the following events: (i) upon the accused attorney making any public statement or disclosure about a proceeding under these rules; or (ii) a formal complaint under these rules is filed with the clerk of the Mississippi Supreme Court.

(b) Disciplinary agencies under these rules shall have authority to share information with law enforcement officials concerning any alleged violation of any federal or state criminal laws by an attorney.

(c) These rules shall not prohibit any complainant, the accused attorney, or any witnesses from discussing publicly the existence of the proceeding under these rules or from disclosing any information relating thereto, including the disclosing of any documents involved in the disciplinary proceeding.

(d) Statements made pursuant to Rule 15(c), in whatever form or by whatever means, outside the disciplinary process shall not enjoy the immunity provided in Rule 14. (Amended November 16, 1995.)

Cross References — Confidentiality of matters under investigation and proceedings, see Mississippi Code of 1972, § 73-3-343.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Applicability.

Confidentiality provisions of this rule could not be construed to prevent complaint tribunal's consideration of attorney's prior disciplinary offenses. Hall v. Mississippi Bar, 631 So. 2d 120 (Miss. 1993).

Rule 16. Jurisdiction of non-resident attorneys — Notice — Service.

(a) The acceptance by a non-resident attorney of the rights and privileges of the practice of law within this state, as evidenced by his practice of law in this state, shall be deemed equivalent to an appointment by such non-resident attorney to the Executive Director of the Bar to be his true and lawful attorney, upon whom may be served all process, summons or notice of any and all proceedings against him instituted pursuant to and conducted under these rules. Acceptance of such rights and privileges and the practice of law by any such non-resident attorney in this state shall be the signification of his agreement that any such process, summons or notice against him which is so served shall have the same legal force and validity as if served personally.

(b) Notice of the service of such process, summons, or notice, together with a copy of any complaint or charge, shall be mailed forthwith by the Executive Director by United States certified or registered mail, return receipt requested, restricted for delivery to addressee only, and with postage pre-paid, to such non-resident attorney at his last known address.

(c) When such process, summons or notice is served as herein provided, and return receipt or refusal is filed, it shall be deemed sufficient to give to the Court and its disciplinary agencies provided for herein, jurisdiction over said non-resident attorney for the purpose of investigating and finally determining any complaint or charge touching upon the professional conduct or conduct evincing unfitness for the practice of law or the personal incapacity to practice law of such non-resident attorney.

Cross References — Jurisdiction over non-resident attorneys, see Mississippi Code of 1972, § 73-3-369.

PART TWO. PERSONAL INCAPACITY

Rule 17. Personal incapacity — Meaning of term "personally incapable" of practicing law.

For purposes of Rules 17 through 25, the term "personally incapable" of practicing law shall include (a) suffering from mental or physical illness of such nature as to render the person afflicted incapable of managing himself, his affairs or the affairs of others with the integrity and competency requisite for the proper practice of law; or (b) habitual use of alcoholic beverages, or liquids of any alcoholic content, hallucinogens, sedatives, drugs, narcotics or other mentally or physically disabling substance of any character whatsoever to any extent which impairs or tends to impair the ability to conduct efficiently and properly, the affairs undertaken for a client in the practice of law.

Cross References — Personal incapacity generally, see Mississippi Code of 1972, §§ 73-3-347 through 73-3-365.

Rule 18. Personal incapacity — Disability — Inactive status.

Whenever it has been determined that any attorney subject to the disciplinary jurisdiction of the Court is personally incapable of practicing law, he shall be transferred to disability inactive status and not permitted to practice law until further order from the Court.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Appropriate sanctions.

Under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 13 and 18, the lawyer was transferred to disability inactive status and not permitted to practice law when he was personally incapable of practicing law due to his cardiac problems and where his license had been similarly suspended in Kentucky and Tennessee. Miss. Bar v. Catron, 918 So. 2d 1267 (Miss. 2005).

Rule 19. Personal incapacity — Proceedings — Circumstances showing existence of condition.

Proceedings, including appeals, to determine whether an attorney is personally incapable of practicing law shall be instituted and conducted in the same manner and upon the same procedure as disciplinary proceedings, except as otherwise set out in Rules 17 through 25. In addition to, and without exclusion of any other circumstances, cause to believe that an attorney may be personally incapable of practicing law shall exist whenever information is received that such member (a) has interposed successfully a defense of mental incompetence to secure abatement of or to defeat an adverse determination in a disciplinary proceeding brought against him in any tribunal in any jurisdiction, (b) has defended, upon like grounds, a suit brought against him in any tribunal in any jurisdiction, (c) has been judicially declared incompetent, or (d) has been legally committed to an institution for the treatment of mental illness.

Rule 20. Personal incapacity — Representation by counsel — Guardian.

In proceedings under Rules 17-25, the attorney shall be entitled to representation by counsel. An attorney who has been declared mentally incompetent, judicially, or who has been committed, judicially, to an institution for the treatment of the mentally ill shall be defended by his legally appointed guardian or guardian ad litem, if any; if a guardian or guardian ad litem has not been appointed, the Court or Tribunal shall appoint a guardian ad litem. The same procedure shall apply to an attorney who has asserted his incompetence, or whose incompetence to defend becomes apparent during the proceedings. In all cases, counsel previously selected by the attorney will be appointed guardian ad litem, absent clear and compelling reasons to the contrary.

Rule 21. Personal incapacity — Service on attorney who has been committed or declared incompetent.

Service of process or notice to an attorney who has been committed or declared incompetent shall be accomplished in the same manner as that for process on incompetents in proceedings in the chancery court of Mississippi. After the appointment of a guardian ad litem, notice shall be served upon said guardian ad litem.

Rule 22. Personal incapacity — Sufficiency as evidence, of court order of incompetence or commitment.

A certified copy of the court order declaring an attorney mentally incompetent, or an order of commitment if he has been committed to an institution for the mentally incompetent, shall constitute sufficient evidence that said attorney is personally incapable of practicing law, if such is not successfully rebutted.

Rule 23. Personal incapacity — Mental examination and reports.

In any proceeding where mental incompetency is an issue, the attorney may be required to submit to a mental examination by one or more practicing psychiatrists selected by the Complaint Tribunal after its designation, or the Court. Reports of physicians regarding the mental condition of an attorney may be received as probative evidence, if the physicians are available for cross-examination.

Rule 24. Personal incapacity — Judgment.

If a Tribunal or the Court finds an attorney personally incapable of practicing law, the Court or Tribunal shall enter an order placing the attorney on disability inactive status, and the attorney shall not be permitted to practice law until restored to the privileges by order of the Court.

Rule 25. Personal incapacity — Reinstatement procedures.

Procedures for reinstatement of an attorney suspended because of personal incapacity to practice law shall be, insofar as is applicable, the same as the procedure for reinstatement of an attorney following suspension upon disciplinary grounds. The petition for reinstatement shall be filed with the Clerk of the Court, and a copy of said petition shall be served upon the Bar, and it shall be under a duty to investigate the matter, respond to the petition and appear at the hearing. The petitioner shall be required to supply such supporting proof of personal capacity as may be necessary and, in addition, the attorney may be required to submit to examinations by physicians or psychiatrists selected by the Court. If satisfied that the attorney has regained his capacity to practice law, the Court may reinstate the petitioner to the practice of law and enter judgment accordingly; provided, however, no judgment of reinstatement shall be entered by default or on an ex parte basis, and in all cases the Court shall hear the Bar. A filing fee of two hundred fifty dollars ($250.00) to defray the expense of investigating the matter shall be paid the Bar upon the filing of each petition for reinstatement, and any petition for reinstatement subsequent to the initial petition shall not be filed within six (6) months from the date of an adverse determination of any prior petition.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Reinstatement granted.

Based on attorney's successful completion of a two-year monitoring contract with LJAP, medical report of her psychiatrist that stated she was fully capable of practicing law again, personal recommendations and employment record during inactivity, it was determined she was in compliance with the requirements for reinstatement from inactive disability status and reinstatement was granted. In re Atty. Doe, 22 So. 3d 262 (Miss. 2009).

PART THREE. MISCELLANEOUS

Rule 26. Time — Generally not jurisdictional.

References to time within these rules and procedural sections are directory and not jurisdictional. Time limitations are administrative, not jurisdictional; however, the time for filing appeals or seeking reinstatement shall be jurisdictional. Failure to observe directory time interval may result in contempt of the agency having jurisdiction but will not justify abatement of any disciplinary investigation or proceeding.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Delay in proceedings.

Attorney's request for a new disciplinary hearing, because a scheduling order was not issued within 10 days and because an opinion and judgment was not signed by a specific date, was denied because under Miss. R. Disc. St. Bar 26 such deviations did not justify abatement of any disciplinary investigation or proceeding. Stewart v. Miss. Bar, 969 So. 2d 6 (Miss. 2007).

In order to bar disciplinary proceedings due to delay, respondent must demonstrate substantial prejudice in his ability to present a defense. Mississippi Bar v. An Att'y, 636 So. 2d 371 (Miss. 1994), reh'g denied.

Statutory time limitations were directory rather than jurisdictional, and 17-day delay in filing of formal disciplinary complaint did not justify dismissal of complaint; more protracted delay in holding tribunal hearing did not prejudice respondent attorneys, when in some instances they themselves requested delays and in one instance delay was due to a material case pending before Supreme Court. Myers v. Mississippi State Bar, 480 So. 2d 1080 (Miss. 1985), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 813, 107 S. Ct. 64, 93 L. Ed. 2d 23 (1986).

Rule 27. Costs and expenses.

(a) A Tribunal or the Court may assess costs incurred in the investigation, prosecution and defense of any disciplinary matter as justice may require. Such costs and expenses shall include the actual and reasonably necessary expenses of the Bar, excluding Complaint Counsel's time.

(b) An attorney exonerated of the charge may recover from the Bar any sums actually paid to the Bar and costs paid to the Clerk of the Court or for service of process in this State. The attorney shall recover no other costs or expenses.

(c) In reinstatement proceedings, in addition to any investigatory fee, the petitioner shall pay all court costs and expenses of any physical or psychiatric examinations required by the Court.

Rule 28. Preservation of evidence.

Proceedings to preserve evidence may be initiated by complaint counsel at any time independently of pleas of guilty, pleas of nolo contendere, convictions, or imposition of discipline in any jurisdiction.

Rule 29. Repealer and severability.

(a) From and after the adoption of these rules, all other rules or statutes pertaining to attorney disciplinary proceedings shall be superseded by these rules.

(b) If any of these rules or sections, or any part thereof, are declared to be unconstitutional or void, or if for any reason is declared to be invalid or of no effect, the remaining parts thereof shall be in no manner affected thereby but shall remain in full force and effect. Unless the contrary intent shall clearly appear in every amendment hereinafter made, each and every amendment made hereafter shall be read and construed as though the provisions hereof form an integral part of such amendments, whether expressly set out therein or not. (Amended effective December 5, 1988.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality.
Construction.
Applicability.

Constitutionality.

Attorney disciplinary proceedings are an integral part of the functioning of the judicial branch and thus not properly subject to the "legislative power" vested in Section 33 of the 1890 Mississippi Constitution; upon their adoption, the Rules of Discipline superseded all statutes on the subject of attorney discipline. Hall v. Mississippi Bar, 631 So. 2d 120 (Miss. 1993).

Construction.

Fact that Bar did not raise issue of attorney's punishment at hearing stage did not mean it was estopped from doing so on appeal, since Rules of Discipline superseded all other rules or statutes pertaining to attorney discipline, and supreme court had power to render any order it deemed appropriate. Mississippi State Bar v. Blackmon, 600 So. 2d 166 (Miss. 1992).

Applicability.

Effect of supreme court's assertion of exclusive and inherent jurisdiction over matters pertaining to attorney discipline, and its promulgation of the Rules of Discipline for the Mississippi State Bar, is that any statute must yield to a contradictory Rule of Discipline. Mississippi Bar v. McGuire, 647 So. 2d 706 (Miss. 1994).

RULE I. DEFINITIONS AND INTERPRETATIONS

Section 1. Definitions.

As used in these Rules, the following terms have the following meanings, unless expressly otherwise provided, or as may result from necessary implication:

A. Applicant. Individual applying for admission to the Bar or registration as a law student.

B. Bar. Mississippi Bar.

C. Board. Board of Bar Admissions.

D. Clerk. Clerk of the Supreme Court.

E. Committee. Committee on Character and Fitness.

F. Court. Supreme Court of Mississippi.

G. File or filed. Delivered and accepted in the office of the Board during normal working hours on or before the day required for filing.

H. MBE. Multistate Bar Examination.

I. MEE. Multistate Essay Examination.

J. Notify or notified. Notice by the Board shall be effective when mailed by regular first class mail, postage prepaid, to the address listed by the applicant on his application. Applicants shall notify the Board in writing of any change of mailing address occurring after their applications are filed.

K. Rules. The Rules Governing Admission to the Mississippi Bar as adopted by the Board and approved by the Chief Justice of the Court.

L. Secretary. Secretary of the Board of Bar Admissions. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 2. Interpretation.

Words in the masculine shall include the feminine and neuter gender except as may result from necessary implication. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 3. Headquarters.

The office of the Board shall be located at the Gartin Justice Building, 450 High Street, Second Floor, Jackson, Mississippi 39201. The mailing address of the Board is P.O. Box 1449, Jackson, Mississippi, 39215-1449. (Effective November 1, 1991; amended effective April 15, 2004; amended effective July 1, 2010.)

RULE II. BOARD OF BAR ADMISSIONS

Section 1. Appointment — Term of office.

By virtue of Section 73-3-2, Mississippi Code of 1972, the Mississippi Legislature created a Board to be known as the "Board of Bar Admissions" which shall be appointed by the Supreme Court of Mississippi. The Board shall consist of nine (9) members, who shall be members in good standing of the Mississippi Bar and shall serve for terms of three (3) years. Three (3) members shall be appointed from each Supreme Court District, one (1) by each Supreme Court justice from his district, with the original appointments to be as follows: Three (3) to be appointed for a term of one (1) year, three (3) to be appointed for a term of two (2) years, and three (3) to be appointed for a term of three (3) years, one (1) from each district to be appointed each year. No member of the Board of Bar Admissions may be a member of the Legislature. Board members will serve until replaced. Vacancies during a term shall be filled by the appointing justice or his successor for the remainder of the unexpired term. (Effective November 1, 1991; amended effective April 15, 2004 to provide that Board members serve until replaced.)

Section 2. Duties.

It shall be the duty of the Board to administer these Rules and to determine the fitness and qualifications of persons seeking admission to practice law in the State of Mississippi. In the performance of these duties the Board, the Committee and their staff and assistants shall be deemed to be officers of the Court and members of the Judicial Branch of the Government of the State of Mississippi. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Mental and emotional fitness.

Applicant asserted that the Mississippi Board of Bar Admissions made a medical determination of the applicant's mental instability without having a medical license; however, there was no requirement that the Board include a member with a medical degree, and the rules presupposed the Board was capable of evaluating an applicant's mental and emotional state, not for the purposes of medical diagnosis, but for the purpose of determining whether he or she was mentally and emotionally fit to practice law. Dean v. Miss. Bd. of Bar Admissions (In re Dean), 972 So. 2d 590 (Miss. 2008).

Section 3. General powers.

The Board shall have the power:

A. To promulgate necessary Rules for the administration of their duties, subject to the approval of the Chief Justice of the Court, and to promulgate operating regulations and procedures, consistent therewith, as the Board deems necessary and proper to carry out the administration of their duties.

B. In connection with the performance of its duties, to take testimony under oath and to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents by the filing of a praecipe for a subpoena with the Clerk.

C. To require the payment by each applicant of such reasonable fees as prescribed by the Rules adopted by the Board and approved by the Chief Justice of the Court. All fees collected by the Board shall be paid to the State Treasurer, who shall issue receipts therefor and who shall deposit such funds in the State Treasury in a special fund to the credit of said Board.

D. To employ such stenographic or other assistance as may from time to time be necessary or proper.

E. To conduct, directly or through the Committee on Character and Fitness, such investigation of each applicant as shall be necessary to determine his character and fitness to practice law and his compliance with the Rules.

F. To certify to the Court the names of applicants who are qualified for admission to the Bar.

G. To elect one of its members as chairman and another as vice-chairman.

H. To appoint the members of the Committee on Character and Fitness to perform duties prescribed herein.

I. To appoint a Secretary (who may or may not be a member of the Board). The duties of the Secretary shall be as follows:

(1) Execute official documents as the Secretary of the Board which shall include but not be limited to Certificates of Eligibility for Admission to the Bar.

(2) Serve as liaison between the Board and the Supreme Court of Mississippi.

(3) Such other duties as the Board may determine.

J. To employ a Bar Admissions Administrator and other employees of the Board who shall be paid salaries and/or compensation fixed by the Board. The Bar Admissions Administrator and such other employees shall be supervised by an Executive Director who shall be the Director of the Administrative Office of Courts. The Bar Admissions Administrator and such other employees, as may be designated by the Board, shall be bonded to insure faithful performance of their duties. The duties of the Bar Admissions Administrator shall be as follows:

(1) Dissemination of information as to the prerequisites which a person must have prior to taking the bar examination.

(2) Receiving and examining applications of persons for registration and admission and maintaining appropriate registers of applicants.

(3) Keeping on file all examination papers (except MBE examination booklets and answer sheets) for a period of (45) days following the publication of the results of the examination, after which he shall destroy all such papers unless a request for review has been filed by a failing applicant within the said (45) day period. In such a case, the examination papers of all applicants will be kept

a. until the entry of a final order of the Board changing every petitioning applicant's failing status or

b. for a period of 6 months following the final order of the Board affirming the failure of any applicant, after which period all examination papers shall be destroyed unless the Board otherwise directs.

(4) Unless otherwise directed by the Board, keeping on file all information and documents pertaining to applicants for a period of five (5) years after the applicant is issued a "Certificate of Eligibility" at which time the Board shall have no obligation to retain the files and may thereafter destroy them. This rule does not apply to examination papers which shall be retained only as provided by Item J(3) above.

(5) Keeping a record of all meetings and proceedings, and keeping all minutes and records of the Board of Bar Admissions.

(6) Receiving application fees and other monies paid to the Board and properly depositing and accounting for the same in accordance with state law.

(7) Preparing an annual budget for approval by the Board and assisting in its presentation to the Mississippi State Legislature.

(8) Presenting to the State Auditor claims for payment of expenses incurred by the Board and otherwise administering, or assisting in the administration of the fiscal affairs of the Board.

(9) Supervising the work of other employees of the Board.

(10) Receiving from and preserving records of previous Boards of Bar Admissions, including lists of former applicants for admission.

(11) Such other duties as the Board may determine. (Effective November 1, 1991; amended effective April 15, 2004 to designate the Director of the Administrative Office of Courts as Executive Director of the Board of Bar Admissions and to limit requirements concerning keeping and destruction of files; amended effective July 1, 2010.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Challenges to denial of admission.

Where plaintiff Mississippi Bar applicant, in a suit against defendant Chairman of the Mississippi Board of Bar Admissions challenged the denial of the applicant's application for admission to the Mississippi Bar under Miss. R. Admis. St. Bar II, § 3, VIII, §§ 6, 12, the federal court, sua sponte, dismissed the claim for lack of subject matter jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C.S. § 1257 because the claims focused on the application of the Mississippi Board of Bar Admissions' rules to him, not upon the promulgation or propriety of a rule, and a state court had also rejected the same claims. Dean v. Mozingo, 521 F. Supp. 2d 541 (S.D. Miss. 2007), vacated by, remanded by 326 Fed. Appx. 760, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 10071, 73 Fed. R. Serv. 3d (Callaghan) 684 (5th Cir. Miss. 2009).

Section 4. Devotion to duty.

A Board member should be willing and able to devote whatever time is necessary to perform the duties imposed upon him. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 5. Essential conduct.

A Board member should be conscientious, studious, thorough and diligent in learning the methods, problems and progress of legal education, in preparing bar examinations, and in seeking to improve the examination, its administration and requirements for admission to the Bar. He should be just and impartial in recommending the admission of applicants. He should exhibit courage, judgment and moral stamina in refusing to recommend applicants who lack adequate general and professional preparation or who lack good moral character. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 6. Adverse influences, conflicting duties and inconsistent obligations.

A Board member should not have adverse interests, conflicting duties nor inconsistent obligations which will in any way interfere or appear to interfere with the proper administration of his functions. A Board member or agents of the Board should not participate directly or indirectly in courses for the preparation of applicants for bar admission nor act as a trustee of a law school or of a university of which a law school is a part or with which a law school is affiliated. A Board member should so conduct himself that there may be no appearance that his judgment may be swayed by improper considerations. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 7. Oath.

The members of the Board shall take a prescribed Oath to be administered by one (1) of the Judges of the Court, or by another person authorized by law to take Oaths, to faithfully and impartially discharge the duties of the office. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 8. Compensation and expenses.

The members of the Board shall receive compensation as established by the Court for preparing, giving and grading the examination, plus all reasonable and necessary travel expenses incurred in the performance of their duties. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Substantial evidence.

Denial of an applicant's request to be admitted to the Mississippi Bar was supported by substantial evidence when the applicant's conduct exhibited: (1) dishonesty; (2) irresponsibility in business or professional matters; (3) unauthorized practice of law; (4) violation of reasonable rules of conduct; (5) failure to exercise self-control; and (6) mental and emotional instability to the extent that the applicant was not suited for the practice of law. Dean v. Miss. Bd. of Bar Admissions (In re Dean), 972 So. 2d 590 (Miss. 2008).

Section 9. Quorum.

The Board shall act upon each application at a special or regular meeting of the Board at which a quorum is present. A special or regular meeting may be conducted in person, via telephone or conference call or in such other manner as allows for the presence of a quorum, provided that each member of the Board is given at least twenty-four hour's actual notice of the meeting or executes a waiver of notice and consent to such a meeting. Actual notice of the meeting may be given by telephone, telefax, email or any other means reasonably calculated to assure that the members have actual notice of the meeting. Attendance of a Member without objection constitutes waiver of notice and consent to such meeting. A quorum shall consist of a majority of the members. Action on any matter at the meeting of the Board may be taken by a majority of a quorum. The Board may act upon any matter without a meeting by a written poll conducted by the Chairman. Action taken upon such a poll may be taken only upon majority vote of the entire Board. The action of the Board taken by written poll shall be placed in the minutes of the Board at its next meeting. (Effective November 1, 1991; amended effective July 1, 2010.)

RULE III. APPLICATION FOR REGISTRATION AS A LAW STUDENT

Section 1. Application forms.

Law student applications, examination applications and all other forms used in the admissions process shall be in a form approved by the Board. There shall be a fee of $25.00 for the official application forms (money order, certified check or cash only). Applications are available on-line at www.mssc.state.ms.us/baradmissions.

No application shall be accepted which is not filed on official forms and which is not accompanied by the full amount of fees due. Payment of fees shall be made to "Board of Bar Admissions". (Money order, certified check or cash only). ALL FEES AND OTHER MONIES PAID TO THE BOARD ARE NOT REFUNDABLE IN WHOLE OR IN PART.

Applications must be COMPLETE (must include all required attachments) at time of filing and must include an executed authorization and release to enable the Board to obtain information concerning applicant from third persons.

The applicant must give a full and direct response to all inquiries on the Application and furnish all additional documents required by the Application.

The answers contained in any Application shall be made under oath. The duty to make a true and complete response shall be considered as continuing from the date of the filing of the Application until the date upon which the applicant is admitted to the Bar. If, at any time after the filing of any Application and before the applicant is admitted to the Bar, any answer or portion of any answer ceases to be fully true and complete or fairly requires supplementation, the applicant shall notify the Board through the Bar Admissions Administrator immediately in writing. As soon as reasonably possible after so notifying the Board, the applicant shall provide such information, documents, and disclosures as are necessary to make the Application fully true and correct. Upon receipt of such notice or supplementation from applicant, or from other sources, the Board may, in its discretion, require further information, investigation, or hearings as it may deem appropriate under the circumstances and may defer consideration of the application until a subsequent bar examination.

An applicant may request, in writing, a certified copy of his or her own completed Application Form filed with the Board under Rule III or Rule IV. The fee for obtaining a certified copy of a filed Application Form shall be $25.00 (money order, certified check, or cash only.) (Effective November 1, 1991; amended May 18, 1999, effective July 1, 1999; amended effective August 24, 2000; amended effective July 1, 2010, to correct the location where applications can be obtained.)

Section 2. Registration as a law student.

A. Except as otherwise hereinafter provided, every person who intends to apply for admission to the Bar through the general bar examination under Rule IX must file with the Board an Application for Registration as a Law Student. The said application must be filed on or before October 1st after completion of two (2) semesters of law school, or the equivalent thereof. Said application for registration shall be accompanied by a fee of $100.00. (Money order, certified check or cash only). All documents required by the Law Student Application form must be received by the Board within sixty (60) days following the filing of the Application, or such Law Student Application shall be deemed withdrawn and no further action will be taken thereon until the Application is refiled and late filing fees prescribed in Rule III, Section 3, or Rule IV, Section 3 or Section 4, as the case may be, have been paid.

B. The filing of a law student application does not constitute the filing of an examination application. An examination application must be filed in addition to the law student application. See Rule IV, Section 2. (Effective November 1, 1991; amended effective December 9, 2004, to provide a specific date for filing application.)

Section 3. Late registration as a law student.

Any person who does not comply with Section 2(a) above shall be permitted to file a late law student application upon payment of a late registration fee of $300.00: provided, however, that the completed application must be filed with the Board on or before March 1st preceding the February examination deadline, or on or before August 1st preceding the July examination filing deadline. Such applications shall be considered after those filed under Section 2 above. (Money order, certified check or cash only.) (Effective November 1, 1991; amended effective December 9, 2004, to change the filing deadline.)

Section 4. Additional investigation fees.

In addition to the law student registration and examination fees provided for in Rule III, Sections 2(A) and 3 and Rule IV, Sections 2 and 3, any applicant who has previously been admitted to the practice of law in any other jurisdiction shall pay at the time of registration an additional fee in such amount as the National Conference of Bar Examiners may charge in connection with a character investigation. The Board or the Committee may also require any applicant to pay the additional costs of investigation when circumstances require a character investigation more costly than the usual investigation.

The cost of any record, document, or conduction of an investigation or inquiry concerning an application shall be paid by the applicant. The cost of any transcript or record incurred during the conduction of a hearing shall be paid by the applicant. Upon determining that additional costs of investigation shall be assessed, the Board or the Committee shall notify the applicant thereof, along with the amount of the additional costs for which he is required to pay. Said sums shall be due from applicant immediately upon receipt of notice thereof. If payment of the additional costs is not received by the Board within thirty (30) days of the date of such notice to applicant, the application shall be considered withdrawn, and the applicant shall not be considered for admission. For good cause shown for non-payment, the Board may extend the time within which payment must be received before the application is deemed withdrawn. From the time of the determination that additional costs of investigation should be charged to the applicant until the same are paid, neither the Board nor the Committee shall proceed further with the application. (Effective November 1, 1991; amended effective April 4, 2004.)

RULE IV. EXAMINATION APPLICATIONS

Section 1. Application forms.

The application for admission by examination shall be on a form prescribed by the Board. The provisions of Rule III, Section 1 shall apply to applications for admission by examination. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 2. Examination applications for applicants who have filed law student registrations.

Those applicants who have previously registered as law students under Rule III, Section 2(A) and those law students who previously registered late under Rule III, Section 3, must file with the Board an Application for Admission by Examination, designating the examination for which applicant desires to sit. Each Application for Admission by Examination must be accompanied by a fee of $525.00, which shall be in addition to registration fees due under Rule III, Sections 2(A) and 3. (Money order, certified check or cash only.) Application must be filed with the Board on or before September 1st preceding the February examination for which applicant wishes to sit, or on or before February 1st preceding the July examination for which applicant wishes to sit.

Any law student who has not filed a law student application under Rule III, Section 2(A) or 3, must file the Application for Admission by Examination under Rule IV, Section 3 below. (Effective November 1, 1991; amended effective July 1, 1999; amended effective August 24, 2000, for applications for the February 2001 and subsequent examination; amended effective April 15, 2004, for applications for the February 2005, and subsequent examinations; amended effective July 10, 2009; amended effective July 1, 2010, to move the deadline for filing applications.)

Section 3. Examination applications for applicants not registering as law students.

Any applicant who has not previously filed an Application for Registration as a Law Student as provided in Rule III, Section 2(A) or 3, must file a completed Application for Admission by Examination with the Board on or before September 1st preceding the February examination for which he or she wishes to sit or on or before February 1st preceding the July examination for which he or she wishes to sit. A filing fee of $825.00 must accompany the Application. (Money order, certified check, or cash only) Applicants admitted in other jurisdictions may be required to pay additional fees for character investigations. Such applicants must contact the Board of Bar Admissions Office for the amount of the additional fees required, if any. (Effective November 1, 1991; amended effective July 1, 1999; amended effective August 24, 2000, for applications for the February 2001 and subsequent examinations; amended effective April 15, 2004, for applications for the February 2005 and subsequent examinations; amended effective July 10, 2009.)

Section 4. Late applications for general bar examination.

Any applicant who failed to file a timely Application for Admission by Examination under Section 2 or Section 3 above may file a late Application for Admission by Examination with the Board from September 2nd to November 1st preceding the February examination for which he or she wishes to sit or February 2nd to April 1st preceding the July examination for which he or she wishes to sit. A filing fee of $725.00 must accompany the Application if the applicant has previously registered as a law student as provided in Rule III, Section 2(A) or 3, or by a filing fee of $1,025.00 if the applicant has not previously registered as a law student as provided in Article III, Section 2(A) or 3. Applicants admitted in other jurisdictions may be required to pay additional fees for character investigations. Such applicants must contact the Board of Bar Admissions Office for the amount of the additional fees required, if any.

When an Application for Admissions by Examination is filed later than the prescribed deadlines the Board may act, but shall not be required to act, upon such application in time to permit the applicant to take such approaching examination.

However, under no circumstances will an application to sit for the examination be accepted after the prescribed late deadlines in this Section. (Effective November 1, 1991; amended effective July 1, 1999; amended effective August 24, 2000, for applications for the February 2001 and subsequent examinations; amended effective April 15, 2004, for applications for the February 2005 and subsequent examinations; amended effective July 10, 2009.)

Section 5. Qualifications for examination applicants.

An application for admission to the Bar by examination may be filed by an individual who:

A. is 21 years of age:

B. has received a bachelor's degree from an accredited college or university or has received credit for the requirements of the first three (3) years of college work from a college or university offering an integrated six-year prelaw and law course, and has completed his law course at a college or university offering such an integrated six-year course; and

C.(1) has successfully completed, or (2) at the time of taking the bar examination, will be within sixty (60) days of completion of, a general course of study of law in a law school which is provisionally or fully approved by the Section on Legal Education and Admission to the Bar of the American Bar Association. Any applicant filing an exam application under Subsection 1(C)(2) of this Rule shall file with the Board on a form prescribed by the Board, a statement requesting to take the bar exam pursuant to the above Rule and must request the dean or registrar of his law school to file with the Board, on a form prescribed by the Board, a certification stating that said applicant should complete his course of study on or before sixty (60) days from the date of the examination for which the applicant is registered. At the completion of said course and within sixty (60) days after the exam date, the applicant must request his law school dean or registrar to file with the Board a "Certificate of Completion" evidencing the satisfactory completion of such course of study within the prescribed sixty (60) day period. A Certificate of Eligibility for Admission will not be issued to applicant without the final certification from his law school dean or registrar. Failure to complete the course of study within sixty (60) days of the examination and to have the dean or registrar of the applicant's law school so certify shall render the applicant's results on the subject examination void. (However, an applicant who, as of November 1, 1981, was or had been previously enrolled in a law school in active existence in Mississippi for more than ten (10) years prior to the date of application shall be eligible for examination for admission; provided that such an applicant must have graduated from such law school prior to November 1, 1984). (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 6. Re-examination deadlines and fees.

Any applicant who fails the bar examination shall be allowed to take the next scheduled examination without further investigation as to his character and fitness unless additional information requiring investigation comes to the attention of the Board.

The applicant must file an application on a form provided by the Board for re-examination with a fee of $550.00 (money order, certified check, or cash only) by November 1st preceding the February examination and by May 1st preceding the July examination. (Effective November 1, 1991; amended effective July 1, 1999; amended effective August 24, 2000, for applications for the February 2001 and subsequent examinations; amended effective April 15, 2004, for applications for the February 2005 and subsequent examinations; amended effective July 10, 2009.)

Section 7. Deferment.

If after filing an exam application, an applicant finds he is unable to take the examination on the prescribed date, a written request shall be submitted to the Board for a deferment to the subsequent exam period. One deferment will be granted an applicant without the filing of a new application or payment of additional fees. Additional deferments shall require the payment of the filing fee of $325.00 (money order, certified check or cash only). After more than one deferment, the Board may require re-investigation of the applicant's character and fitness. Failure on the part of an applicant to appear for an examination without first requesting deferment will result in the application being dismissed and the applicant will have to file a new application and pay the regular application fee for the subsequent examination. (Effective November 1, 1991; section renumbered effective December 9, 2004; amended effective July 10, 2009.)

Editor's Note — Former section 7 was deleted effective December 9, 2004, removing the requirement of additional study after three unsuccessful attempts to pass the examination.

Section 8. Examination of disbarred attorneys.

A disbarred attorney seeking reinstatement to the Mississippi Bar pursuant to Rule 12 of the Mississippi Rules of Discipline shall file with the Board of Bar Admissions an application to take the Mississippi Bar Examination on or before January 1st preceding the February examination for which such applicant proposes to sit or on or before June 1st preceding the July examination for which such applicant proposes to sit. The form of such applications shall be prescribed by the Board. The application must be accompanied by an examination fee of $525.00 (money order, certified check, or cash only) payable to the Board of Bar Admissions. The Mississippi Bar Examination shall be administered and graded for such applicants in the same manner as for applicants for new admission. The results shall be reported to the applicant, to the Clerk of the Mississippi Supreme Court, and to the Board of Bar Commissioners. The same procedures and fees, where applicable, for deferrals, petitions for review, appeals, and re-examination applicable to applicants for admission through the regular bar examination shall be applicable to applicants for examination under this Rule. (Adopted effective December 31, 1992; amended effective August 24, 2000, for the February 2001 and subsequent examinations; amended effective April 15, 2004, for applications for the February 2005 and subsequent examinations; section renumbered effective December 9, 2004; amended effective July 10, 2009.)

RULE V. DISCLOSURE AND CONFIDENTIALITY OF INFORMATION

Section 1. Penalty for failure to disclose information.

No one shall be licensed to practice law in this state:

A. Who fails to disclose fully to the Committee and Board, whether requested to do so or not, the facts relating to any disciplinary proceedings or charges as to his professional conduct, whether same have been terminated or not, in this or any other state, or any federal court or other jurisdiction, or

B. Who fails to disclose fully to the Committee and Board all facts relating to any civil or criminal proceedings or other material information concerning his character and fitness called for by these Rules or by the application forms.

In the event an applicant shall fail to fully, timely and faithfully comply with the requirements of Rule III, Section 1, his application will be deferred to a future bar exam, if such failure comes to the attention of the Board prior to the administration of the bar examination. If such failure comes to the attention of the Board after the applicant has taken the bar examination, the Board may order that his result on that bar examination be deemed void. If such failure comes to the attention of the Board after the applicant has been admitted to the Bar, the Board may file a complaint with the appropriate disciplinary authorities.

The Committee and Board shall consider an applicant's failure to disclose material information in making its determination of whether the applicant has the requisite character and fitness to be admitted to the Bar. The Board may excuse the failure to disclose information and suspend the operations of the preceding portions of this Section only if it determines that the information which the applicant failed to fully and timely disclose or supplement is not significant or germane to the applicant's character and fitness. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 2. Release of confidential information.

By making application for registration as a law student or examination an applicant waives his right to confidentiality of medical/psychological communication, record, evaluations and any other pertinent medical/psychological information touching on the applicant's fitness to practice law as determined by the Board or Committee. A refusal by an applicant to furnish written release for such medical/psychological information or an applicant's objection to the disclosure of such information to the Board or Committee shall be cause for the dismissal of the application. Any written release executed by a law student registrant or examination applicant shall terminate immediately upon admission to the Bar or sixty (60) days after the application is terminated by voluntary withdrawal or by denial of admission on grounds of character and fitness. An application is not terminated until any appeal or rights to appeal have terminated. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 3. Confidentiality of information and documents.

Information and documents concerning an applicant's character and fitness shall be considered confidential. Such information and documents shall not be disclosed except to members of the Board, members of the Committee on Character and Fitness, the Secretary, Special Counsel (appointed pursuant to Rule VIII, Section 5), and necessary clerical personnel authorized by the Board, Committee, or Secretary to assist in their duties. An applicant shall have the right to inspect information and documents pertaining to his application during regular business hours. Such inspection shall be by appointment with the Bar Admissions Administrator and all materials shall remain under the surveillance of the Bar Admissions Administrator during such inspection. No person shall disclose information or documents concerning an applicant's character and fitness to persons other than those listed above, except to the extent that such disclosure is necessary to the investigation of applicant's character and fitness.

In addition to the foregoing, upon proper request, the Board, at its discretion, may disclose information or documents from an applicant's file to the admitting authorities in other jurisdictions, to any disciplinary agency and to any law enforcement agency for use in connection with disciplinary or criminal proceedings against such applicant. (Effective November 1, 1991; amended effective August 24, 2001, for application for February 2001 and subsequent examinations.)

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

Disclosure of documents from an applicant's file to a law enforcement agency is allowed in the discretion of the Board of Bar Admissions. Knight, Apr. 19, 2002, A.G. Op. #02-0195.

Section 4. Records.

A This Section establishes the rules and procedures governing the inspection, copying, and/or reproduction of any Public Records, as defined by the Mississippi Public Records Act of 1983, Miss. Code Ann.§25-61-1, et seq., (1972, as amended), (the "Act"), in the possession of the Mississippi Board of Bar Admissions (Board) which are required or allowed to be examined and copied as Public Records under said Act, subject to any exemptions or exceptions thereto.

B. The following non-inclusive list of records of the Board are not Public Records and will not be made available, to-wit:

(1) Applications for licensure;

(2) Records concerning an applicant's character and fitness;

(3) Test questions and answers/analyses unless previously made public by the Board;

(4) Recommendations concerning an applicant from any source;

(5) Bar examination answers and scores of applicants;

(6) Those items exempted from inspection and production by Miss. Code Ann.§ 9-1-38 (1972, as amended), and including, but not limited to, the internal communications between or among Board members, or between or among Board members and the staff or employees of the Board, or between or among members of the staff or employees of the Board concerning any application for admission or any matter defined herein as not being a Public Record. This Section 4 shall also apply to the notes or other memoranda prepared by or for the use of Members of the Board in regard to any application for admission or any matter defined herein as not a Public Record. (For the purposes of this Section 4, members of the Committee on Character & Fitness and special counsel to said Committee shall be treated as Members of the Board.);

(7) Personnel records exempted under Miss. Code Ann.§ 25-1-100 (1972, as amended);

(8) Attorneys' work product exempted under Miss. Code Ann.§ 25-1-102 (1972, as amended);

(9) Academic records exempted under Miss. Code Ann.§ 37-11-51 (1972, as amended);

(10) Criminal investigation records exempted under Miss. Code Ann.§§ 45-29-1 and 3 (1972, as amended);

(11) Licensure application and examination records exempted under Miss. Code Ann.§ 73-52-1 (1972, as amended);

(12) Commercial and financial information exempted under Miss. Code Ann.§ 79-23-1 (1972, as amended); and

(13) Any other record or records which are confidential, privileged or otherwise exempt pursuant to these Rules or the laws of the State of Mississippi or the United States, or any records which the Board has declared confidential as a condition to obtaining them.

C. All requests shall be in writing describing the information sought with sufficient specificity that the Board is able to determine the precise information requested.

D. The Board shall respond to a request for access to records within fourteen (14) working days of the receipt of such request.

E. If any record, requested as provided for herein, cannot be produced for any reason, the Board shall provide a written response with the specific reasons therefor.

F. Upon compliance with the other provisions of this Rule:

(1) Public Records of the Board will be available for inspection and copying during regular business hours (8:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m.), Monday through Friday, by prior appointment made at least three (3) business days in advance unless otherwise authorized by the Board;

(2) All inspection, copying or reproduction shall be done in the office of the Board or such other place or in such other manner as designated by the Board, and all copying and reproduction shall be performed by employees of the Board or designees of the Board;

(3) Copies of records will be made available according to the following schedule of charges:

Retrieval of records (on-site)	$10.00
Retrieval of records (off-site)	$15.00
Regular Copying of printed material (per page)	$0.50
Copying from bound volumes or records (per page)	$2.00
Printing of electronically maintained records (per page)	$1.00
Minimum Copy/Printing Charge	$1.00
Certification of Record (per record)	$25.00
Fax Transmission Fee (per fax, 5 page maximum)	$5.00
Email Transmission Fee (per record)	$1.00
Postage, delivery charges (e.g., FedEx, UPS)	Actual charges + $5.00

For each Public Record produced the requesting party shall pay the applicable retrieval fee, together with all applicable copying charges and transmission or delivery charges per the above schedule. For any services rendered other than those listed in the schedule above, the requesting party shall pay the cost of providing such services as determined by the Board.

(4) No services will be provided until payment in full of the estimated costs of providing the services is made. Any charges in excess of the estimate shall be made in full at or prior to the time of delivery. (Effective July 1, 2010, to add Section 4 in its entirety.)

RULE VI. ADMISSION BY COMITY AND RECIPROCITY

Section 1. Qualification of applicant.

A. Any lawyer from another state whose requirements for admission to the bar are equivalent to those of this state, who has practiced not less than five (5) years may be admitted to practice in this state without passing the general bar examination as to his knowledge of law required of all other applicants by Rule IX, upon taking and passing a written "attorneys' examination" on topics of Mississippi law and practice designated by the Board (which may consist of designated portions of the general bar examination) and upon complying with the other requirements as set out in these Rules Governing Admission to the Mississippi Bar; provided, however, that the laws of the state from which the applicant comes grants similar privileges to the applicants from this state.

B. An applicant who has failed a bar examination administered in this jurisdiction within five (5) years of the date of filing an application under this rule shall not be eligible for admission under this Rule VI.

C. An applicant who has been subject to discipline in another state for conduct which would make the applicant ineligible for admission in this state shall not be eligible for admission under this Rule VI. (Effective November 1, 1991; amended effective October 1, 2008, as set forth in the Comment; amended effective August 1, 2009.)

Section 2. Application.

Any lawyer from another state desiring to practice in Mississippi must make application to the Board on the same forms as required of applicants for admission by general bar examination. Such application shall be subject to the provisions of Rule III, Sections 1 and 4 and Rule V. In addition, such applicant, shall file with the Board evidence of his good standing to practice law in the states in which he has previously been admitted, including a certificate from the Clerk of the highest appellate court of each state in which he has been admitted and from two (2) members of the bar in each such state, certifying to his qualifications and good standing. The completed application of an attorney desiring to sit for the special "attorneys' examination" administered as part of the regular February bar examination must be filed on or before September 1 preceding the February examination. The completed application of an attorney desiring to sit for the special "attorneys' examination" administered as part of the regular July bar examination must be filed on or before April 1 preceding the July examination. The Board of the Committee on Character and Fitness may make additional inquiry as to the qualifications, good standing, and moral character of the applicant and may require submission of additional evidence by the applicant. (Effective November 1, 1991; amended May 18, 1999, effective July 1, 1999 for applications for the February 2000 and subsequent examinations; amended effective April 15, 2004, for applications for the February 2005 and subsequent examinations; amended effective October 1, 2008, as set forth in the Comment.)

Section 3. Late applications.

Any applicant who failed to file a timely application for the special "attorneys' examination" under Section 2 above, may file a late application with the Board from September 2nd to November 1st preceding the February special "attorneys' examination" for which he or she wishes to sit or February 2nd to April 1st preceding the July special "attorneys' examination" for which he or she wishes to sit. (Amended effective August 24, 2000, for applications for the February 2001 and subsequent examinations; amended effective October 1, 2008, as set forth in the Comment.)

Section 4. Fees.

Each application for admission by comity and reciprocity filed by the deadlines set forth in Rule VI, Section 2, must be accompanied by a fee of $1,000.00, plus an additional fee in such amount as the National Conference of Bar Examiners may charge in connection with a character investigation in jurisdiction(s) in which the attorney applicant has been previously admitted. The Board may in its discretion, for good cause shown, accept applications for admission by comity and reciprocity filed after the deadlines set forth in Rule

VI, Section 2, provided that such application must be accompanied by a filing fee of $1200.00, plus an additional fee in such amount as the National Conference of Bar Examiners may charge in connection with a character investigation in jurisdiction(s) in which the attorney applicant has been previously admitted. (Money order, certified check, or cash only.) The Board shall not accept any application for admission by comity and reciprocity not accompanied by the full amount of fees due. The Board or the Committee may require payment of additional investigation fees and costs as provided in Rule III, Section 4. Payment of the fee shall be made to the "Board of Bar Admissions." The fee is not refundable in whole or in part. (Effective November 1, 1991; amended effective August 24, 2000, for the February 2001 and subsequent examinations; amended effective April 15, 2004, for applications for the February 2005 and subsequent examinations; amended effective October 1, 2008, as set forth in the Comment.)

Section 5. Conflict of laws among states concerning reciprocity and comity.

If the jurisdiction from which the applicant comes permits the admission of Mississippi judges and lawyers by comity and reciprocity but the rules of such jurisdiction are more stringent and exacting or condictions of admission or require payment of higher fees, the admission of applicant shall be governed by such rules and he shall pay the same fees which would apply to the applicants from Mississippi seeking admission to the bar in the applicant's former jurisdiction. (Effective November 1, 1991; amended effective April 15, 2004 to renumber sections; amended effective October 1, 2008, as set forth in the Comment.)

Section 6. Applicant licensed to practice by more than one state.

If an applicant has been licensed by more than one state, the Board shall determine in its discretion the licensing state to which reference shall be made in determining whether to admit an applicant by comity and reciprocity. (Effective November 1, 1991; amended effective April 15, 2004 to renumber sections; amended effective October 1, 2008, as set forth in the Comment.)

Section 7. Definition of practice of law.

For purposes of admission under this Rule, practice for not less than five (5) years must consist of active practice of law, after admission to the bar of another jurisdiction, either as a partner or associate of a private or public law firm, as a legal officer of a corporation or other business organization, as a governmental employee whose duties are primarily providing legal advice or representation of the governmental agency in the courts, as a legal officer in the Armed Services, as a judge, magistrate, administrative judge or referee, or law clerk to a judge, or as a full time teacher in a law school approved by the Section on Legal Education and Admission to the Bar of the American Bar Association. Practice of law which qualifies for purposes of this Rule must have occurred within a state or states in which the applicant was then admitted to practice law and must have occurred while applicant was licensed by and in good standing with the court or other agency having authority over the practice of law in such jurisdiction. (Effective November 1, 1991; amended effective April 15, 2004 to renumber sections; amended effective October 1, 2008, as set forth in the Comment.)

COMMENT

This amended rule does away with the requirement of a one (1) day attorney's examination on topics of Mississippi law for attorneys seeking to establish a practice in Mississippi and returns the rule to its pre-1979 format of allowing complete reciprocity with other states granting similar privileges to Mississippi lawyers. The amended rule requires that any lawyer from another state which requires Mississippi attorneys to be examined before admission must take the entire Mississippi Bar Examination.

It is not the intention of this rule to provide an alternative means of admission for temporary practice in Mississippi, which is governed by the pro hac vice admission rules of the Mississippi Rules of Appellate Procedure.

The five (5) year practice of law requirement contemplates that the work done by the applicant be of a general legal nature but not work that is very narrow in scope, is of a type which need not be performed by an attorney, or does not generally require the services of an attorney. An attorney's five (5) years of prior practice must have constituted a full-time or regular undertaking and not have been on only an occasional or haphazard basis.

For the purposes of this Rule, the active practice of law does not include work that, as undertaken, constituted the unauthorized practice of law in the jurisdiction in which it was performed or in the jurisdiction in which the clients receiving the unauthorized services were located.

(Amended effective August 1, 2009.)

RULE VII. PROTEST OF APPLICATION

Section 1. Nature of protest.

Any person may protest the application of any applicant to be admitted to the practice of law either by examination or by comity and reciprocity. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 2. Format.

A protest shall be made in writing, signed by the person making the protest and bearing his home and business address, and shall be filed with the Board prior to the date on which the applicant is to be examined or within sixty (60) day after the filing of an application by an attorney for admission by comity and reciprocity. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 3. Notification: right to withdraw.

The Executive Assistant shall, as soon as practical, notify the applicant of the protest and of the charges therein made; and the applicant thereupon may file with the Board a written withdrawal as a candidate for admission to the practice of law. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 4. Hearing.

In case the applicant does not withdraw as a candidate for admission to the practice of law, the person or persons making the protest and the applicant in question shall appear before the Committee at a time and place to be designated by the Committee. In the event time will not permit a hearing on the protest, and a final determination prior to a scheduled examination, the applicant may not take the written examination unless the Board finds exceptional circumstances justifying the taking of the examination; however, if the applicant passes the written examination, no license to practice law shall be issued to him until final disposition of the protest in favor of the applicant. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 5. Withholding certification.

Nothing herein contained shall prevent the Board on its own motion from withholding its certification of the applicant until it has been fully satisfied as to the moral fitness of the applicant. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

RULE VIII. COMMITTEE ON CHARACTER AND FITNESS

Section 1. Appointment — Term of office.

There is hereby created a committee to be known as the "Committee on Character and Fitness" which shall be appointed by the Board. Members of the Committee shall be members in good standing of the Mississippi Bar. At least three (3) members shall be appointed from each of the Supreme Court Districts, provided, however, that the Board in its discretion may appoint more than three (3) members from any Supreme Court District. Members shall serve for terms of three (3) years provided that initial appointments shall be made for terms of one (1), two (2), or three (3) years so that expiration of terms shall thereafter be staggered. Vacancies during a term shall be filled by the Board for the remainder of the unexpired term. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 2. Officers.

The Board shall designate a Chairman and Vice-Chairman of the Committee on Character and Fitness. The Chairman shall serve as an ex officio non-voting member of the Board. The Chairman shall be responsible for the overall operation and coordination of the Committee's work. The Chairman shall be responsible for calling and presiding over meetings of the Committee. The Chairman of the Committee, or in his absence the Vice-Chairman, shall certify all recommendations concerning applicants to the Board. The Bar Admissions Administrator or other designated employee of the Board of Bar Admissions shall serve as Secretary to the Committee on Character and Fitness. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 3. Division into subcommittees.

The Committee shall act on individual applicants through subcommittees consisting of the members from any one Supreme Court District. Such a Subcommittee shall have all the rights, powers and obligations of the entire Committee. The Board shall select one of the Committee members from each District as Subcommittee Chairman who shall be responsible for receiving referrals of applicants from the Bar Admissions Administrator, for calling and presiding over meetings of the Subcommittee and for reporting the recommendations of the Subcommittee to the Chairman of the full Committee, who shall certify the recommendations of the Subcommittee to the Board, as the recommendation of the full Committee, unless in the Chairman's opinion special circumstances require that the recommendation of the Subcommittee be reconsidered by the full Committee. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 4. Referral of applications.

Law student registration applications (as provided in Rule III), applications for admission by examination (as provided in Rule IV), applications for admission by comity and reciprocity (as provided in Rule VI), together with any other materials relevant to the application, shall be referred to the subcommittee of the Committee on Character and Fitness for the Supreme Court District in which the applicant resides. In the case of non-residents, applications will be divided among the subcommittees. The application shall be referred as soon as practicable after all required materials are filed with the Bar Admissions Administrator. The Bar Admissions Administrator may, in his discretion, also send additional copies of the application to the subcommittee for any other District with which the applicant appears to have substantial contacts. A list of all applicants regardless of District of residence shall be simultaneously circulated to all members of the full Committee, and the Committee members from other Districts having information relevant to the applicant's character and fitness shall provide such information, as soon as practicable, to the Chairman of the subcommittee to which the application has been referred. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 5. Duties and powers.

A. Investigation. The Committee on Character and Fitness, or its subcommittees, shall consider applications at such time and place and in such manner as it may elect, and may require the personal presence of any applicant at such time and place as the Committee may prescribe for interview and examination touching on his character and fitness. The Committee may also propound written interrogatories, requests for admissions and requests for production of documents to be answered by applicant under oath within thirty (30) days of service thereof. The Committee may take evidence under oath before a court reporter or notary public and shall have the power to compel attendance of witnesses and the production of documents by the filing of a praecipe for a subpoena with the Clerk of the Supreme Court. The committee shall also have the power to receive information touching on the character and fitness of any applicant from any source deemed relevant and reliable by the Committee and to give such information the weight and credibility which the Committee deems proper.

B. Meetings and votes. The Committee, or the subcommittees thereof, shall act upon each application at a special or regular meeting at which a quorum is present. A quorum for a meeting of the Committee shall be five (5) members. A quorum for a meeting of a subcommittee shall be three (3) members. Action on any matter may be taken by a majority vote of a quorum. However, the members of the Committee or of a subcommittee may separately and without assembling in meeting consider any application together with the data submitted in support of such application by written or oral poll conducted by the Chairman. Any unanimous action of the Committee or subcommittee, so taken, shall constitute valid action, but if such is not unanimous, the Committee, or subcommittee shall further consider and act upon such application in meeting assembled.

C. Special counsel. In cases where the Committee, or subcommittee thereof, deems a formal hearing to be necessary, the Committee, or subcommittee, may appoint an attorney to appear on a voluntary basis as Special Counsel for the purpose of preparing and presenting evidence concerning applicant's character and fitness. Such counsel shall be an attorney in good standing with the Mississippi State Bar Association and shall have no conflict of interest in regard to application under consideration.

D. Procedure at formal hearings. During formal hearings before the Committee, or its subcommittees, an applicant shall have the right to be represented by counsel, to call and examine witnesses, to introduce exhibits, to cross-examine witnesses on any matter relevant to the issues, even if not covered in direct examination, to impeach the credibility of any witness regardless of by whom called and to rebut the evidence against him. The applicant may be called and examined as if under cross-examination whether or not he testifies on his own behalf. The hearing need not be conducted according to technical rules relating to evidence and witnesses. Hearsay evidence may be used for the purpose of supplementing or explaining other evidence but shall not be sufficient standing alone to support a finding unless it would be admissible over objection in civil actions. Except as required to be waived under other provisions of these Rules, the rules of privilege shall be effective to the extent that they are required by civil rules to be recognized.

Irrelevant and unduly repetitious evidence shall be excluded. Hearings shall be private unless the applicant shall request that they be public. A complete stenographic record of the hearing shall be kept, and a typescript may be ordered by the applicant at his or her own expense.

E. Reports. The Committee shall report to the Board its recommendations as to approval or disapproval of each law student registrant and each applicant for admission by examination. Recommendations shall be filed with the Board as soon as reasonably practical after the completed application is referred to the Committee, provided that the Committee shall file with the Board not later than thirty (30) days before the examination at which the applicant purposes to sit, a recommendation with respect to each applicant who has filed a timely Application for Admission for that examination. If the Committee has not been able to complete its investigation of an applicant before thirty (30) days prior to the examination, the Committee shall so report to the Board along with the status of the case and a recommendation as to whether the applicant should be allowed to take the examination pending the outcome of the investigation. (Effective November 1, 1991; amended effective August 24, 2000.)

Section 6. Standards for disqualification of applicant.

The Committee shall recommend that the applicant not be admitted to practice law in Mississippi if, in the judgment of the Committee, the applicant has exhibited conduct substantially evidencing an inclination:

A. To be dishonest;

B. To take unfair advantage of others;

C. To be disloyal to those to whom loyalty is legally owed;

D. To be irresponsible in business or professional matters;

E. To support or advocate the overthrow of the government of the United States by force;

F. To unlawfully engage in the practice of law while not being so licensed;

G. To violate reasonable rules of conduct governing any activity in which applicant has been engaged;

H. To fail to exercise substantial self-control, including excessive and continuing violation of traffic rules, the improper use of drugs, and the excessive use of alcohol;

I. To be mentally or emotionally unstable to the extent that applicant is not suited for the practice of law.

Every person who has been or shall hereafter be convicted of a felony, in a court of this or any state or a court of the United States, manslaughter or a violation of the Internal Revenue Code excepted, shall be incapable of obtaining a license to practice law.

Conviction for manslaughter or a felony violation of the Internal Revenue Code or commission of acts constituting felonious conduct not resulting in a conviction or the conviction of a misdemeanor involving moral turpitude may constitute grounds for denial of an application for admission to practice.

The commission of acts while a juvenile which, if done by an adult, would be the equivalent of such crimes shall be grounds for recommending that applicant be denied the right to practice law, unless special circumstances in the opinion of the Committee excuse the applicant.

A final decision having the legal effect of acquitting an applicant of an alleged offense shall not affect the right of the Committee to consider the alleged conduct, unless the decision is directly on the merits and necessarily negates any immoral or unethical conduct.

The doing of any act which would be a crime except as excused by mental condition may be considered as a ground for recommending denial of the application.

Provocation, if established to the satisfaction of the Committee, may be considered as excusing some types of improper conduct, such as minor batteries and other actions indicating a temporary loss of self-control.

Any conduct of a kind which has been considered by the Supreme Court of Mississippi as ground for suspension or revocation of the right to practice law may be considered as sufficient to recommend denial of an application for admission. If an applicant has at any time committed acts or offenses not constituting a felony or misdemeanor, which would have been grounds for disbarment of a practicing attorney, such applicant shall be required to meet the same standards as a disbarred attorney would be required to meet for readmission in order for the Committee to make a favorable recommendation.

The Committee shall consider whether or not the past conduct of the applicant is likely to be repeated in the future and whether the applicant's past conduct evidences applicant's character and fitness to practice law. If applicant is found to have engaged in conduct which at that time would have constituted grounds for an unfavorable recommendation, then applicant must affirmatively show that his character has been rehabilitated and that such inclination or instability is unlikely to recur in the future. The mere fact that there has been no repeat of any such conduct or other conduct evidencing unfitness to practice law shall not in and of itself be sufficient to constitute rehabilitation or proof of good character.

The following conduct, while not proper, will not in and of itself be considered as indicating a lack of moral or ethical qualification:

1. Traffic violations unless involving substantial disregard of the rights of others or evidencing substantial or continuing lack of self-discipline;

2. Conduct involving domestic relations unless under circumstances indicating violation of criminal law or disregard of moral obligations under circumstances where no reasonable provocation exists;

3. Conduct in the nature of horseplay;

4. Misconduct remote in time unless felonious in nature or recently repeated in similar acts. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality.

A state's system for screening applicants for admission to the bar, including questions to the applicant as to his willingness to take an oath supporting the federal and state constitutions, his good faith in doing so, his membership in organizations advocating violent or unlawful overthrow of the government with knowledge of such aims, and his specific intent to further such aims, would not be declared invalid as necessarily having a chilling effect upon the exercise of First Amendment freedoms, where it was apparent that state agents had been scrupulous in the use of their powers, keeping their investigations within constitutionally permissible limits, and where there was no showing that any applicant had been unjustifiably denied admission under the system, since the choice of screening system rests with the legislatures and other policy-making bodies of the states rather than with the United States Supreme Court. Law Students Civil Rights Research Council, Inc. v. Wadmond, 401 U.S. 154, 91 S. Ct. 720, 27 L. Ed. 2d 749 (1971).

Under the First and Fourteenth Amendments, an applicant for admission to the state bar could not be denied admission merely because she refused to answer the question whether she had ever been a member of an organization which advocated overthrow of the United States Government by force or violence, where, because of a state law providing that it shall be perjury to answer the bar committee's questions falsely, the question would require the applicant to make a guess at her peril as to whether any organization to which she had belonged was one advocating such overthrow, and where, in response to another question, the applicant had listed by name all of the organizations with which she had been associated since the age of 16. Baird v. State Bar of Ariz., 401 U.S. 1, 91 S. Ct. 702, 27 L. Ed. 2d 639 (1971).

Section 7. Burden of establishing character and fitness.

The burden is on the applicant to establish to the reasonable satisfaction of a majority of the Committee that he possesses such character and qualifications as to justify his admission to the Bar and qualify him to perform the duties of an attorney and counselor at law. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 8. Recommendations on character and fitness.

A. Form of favorable recommendations. The Chairman of the Committee shall certify to the Board the name of each applicant whose application has been approved by the Committee on Character and Fitness. The Chairman of the Committee shall simultaneously therewith return to the Bar Admissions Administrator all materials relating to the application.

B. Form of unfavorable recommendations. In the case of an application which the Committee disapproves for admission to the Bar, the Chairman shall file with the Board a complete report setting forth the grounds and evidentiary basis for disapproval and attaching thereto all materials relating to the application.

C. Board action. The Board, after receiving the recommendations of the Committee on Character and Fitness, shall enter an order approving or denying the application. In making its decision, the Board may make such additional investigation as it deems appropriate. The Bar Admissions Administrator shall notify the applicant of the Board's decision. Denial of an application for registration as a law student shall constitute notice to the applicant that any subsequent application for admission will be denied by the Board on the same grounds. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 9. Review of adverse determination on character and fitness.

An applicant may request a review of the decision of the Board denying his application for admission to the Bar by filing a written petition with the Bar Admissions Administrator within ten (10) days after applicant has been notified of the adverse action of the Board.

Such review shall be heard at the next regular, adjourned or special meeting of the Board held after the request for review has been filed, at which meeting the applicant may appear personally. The applicant shall be provided with a copy of the Committee's report. The applicant may file a statement, memorandum or other writing with the Board at least ten (10) days prior to the review hearing, setting forth the grounds on which the applicant seeks review and the reasons why the Board's decision should be reversed. At a review hearing, the burden shall be upon the applicant to show that the Board's denial of his application was in error. Review shall be made upon the records previously developed by the Committee on Character and Fitness. At the review hearing, the record may not be supplemented by additional evidence from the applicant or other sources. If the Board finds that further evidence should be considered, it shall remand the application to the Committee for further proceedings. Upon completion of review, the Board shall enter a final order affirming or reversing its previous action. During the pendency of review or appeal proceedings, the applicant shall not take the bar examination pending a final decision on his character and fitness. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 10. Appeal from final decision of board.

An applicant whose petition for review of an adverse determination on his character and fitness has been unsuccessful and denial of the application affirmed by the Board shall have the right to appeal from the final decision of the Board to the Chancery Court of Hinds County within thirty (30) days of entry of such order of denial. The Board's decision may be reversed by the Chancery Court only if the applicant proves by a preponderance of the evidence in the record before the Board that denial of his application was arbitrary, capricious, or malicious. An appeal may be taken from the decision of the Chancery Court to the Supreme Court of Mississippi in accordance with the Mississippi Supreme Court Rules. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 11. Compensation and expenses.

The members of the Committee on Character and Fitness shall receive the same compensation as established by the Supreme Court for members of the Board of Bar Admission, plus all reasonable and necessary travel expenses incurred in the performance of their duties under the provisions of these Rules. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 12. Immunity.

The sworn testimony of a witness subpoenaed under these Rules or otherwise received by the Board or Committee shall be deemed testimony received in a judicial proceeding. In any action for defamation arising out of such sworn testimony, the witness shall be entitled to the defense of privilege to the same extent available to witnesses in judicial proceedings. Board and Committee members, Special Counsel, and employees and agents of the Board and Committee shall be immune from civil suit from any conduct arising out of the performance of their official duties. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Challenges to denial of admission.

Where plaintiff Mississippi Bar applicant, in a suit against defendant Chairman of the Mississippi Board of Bar Admissions challenged the denial of the applicant's application for admission to the Mississippi Bar under Miss. R. Admis. St. Bar II, § 3, VIII, §§ 6, 12, the federal court, sua sponte, dismissed the claim for lack of subject matter jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C.S. § 1257 because the claims focused on the application of the Mississippi Board of Bar Admissions' rules to him, not upon the promulgation or propriety of a rule, and a state court had also rejected the same claims. Dean v. Mozingo, 521 F. Supp. 2d 541 (S.D. Miss. 2007), vacated by, remanded by 326 Fed. Appx. 760, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 10071, 73 Fed. R. Serv. 3d (Callaghan) 684 (5th Cir. Miss. 2009).

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

An investigator hired by the board of bar admission would be immune from a civil suit arising out of the performance of his or her official duties as long as the board's contract with the investigator creates an agency relationship. Lackey, July 8, 2005, A.G. Op. 05-0303.

RULE IX. EXAMINATION

Section 1. Requirements.

Every person desiring admission to the bar, except those exempt from the general bar examination under Rule VI, shall be required to take and pass a written bar examination in a manner satisfactory to the Board of Bar Admissions. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Transfer of essay scores.

The Board of Bar Admissions' policy allowing transfers of essay scores was applied evenhandedly to all applicants, and board acted in a manner that could not be deemed arbitrary and capricious; although policy was not sanctioned by supreme court and was later eliminated by supreme court order, board did have a rational basis for allowing transfers and for the manner in which such transfers were allowed. Watkins v. Mississippi Bd. of Bar Admissions, 659 So. 2d 561 (Miss. 1995).

Section 2. Preparation of the examination.

The Chairman shall make assignments among the members of the Board concerning preparation and grading of the examination. The Board members may prepare the examination questions personally or may utilize the services of expert draftsmen to prepare bar examination questions, including out-of-state law teachers, or may use the services of the National Conference of Bar Examiners or other national agency. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 3. Analysis of questions.

Before an essay question is used in the bar examination, whether drafted by a Board member or by an expert draftsman, an outline or analysis of the important points of law which should be covered by the examinee shall be prepared. Each proposed question and the outline or analysis for the grading of answers will be reviewed by at least one other member of the Board before the examination. Proposed models for grading may be adjusted and reevaluated in light of examinees' actual responses. A final version of the outline or analysis of the question used in grading answers will be filed in the Board's office by each examiner simultaneously with the submission of essay grades. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 4. Time and place of examination.

A. Regular bar examination. The Board shall conduct a bar examination twice each year on dates to be set by the Board in February and July for the purpose of examining the applicants for license to practice law. (Until further order by the Board, the examination shall be administered on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of the week containing the last Wednesday in February and July.) Each examination shall be administered over a period of three consecutive days. One day of the examination will be devoted to the Multi-state Bar Examination (MBE) prepared by the National Conference of Bar Examiners and two days of the examination will consist of essay-type questions and/or written performance tests prepared by or at the direction of the Board or through the services of the National Conference of Bar Examiners.

Each applicant for admission under Rule IX at a particular administration of the Mississippi Bar Examination must take all portions of the essay and performance examination at that administration. Scores achieved on essay or performance-type questions at a previous administration may not be utilized or considered as part of an applicant's score on a subsequent administration.

B. Utilization of previous MBE scaled score. An applicant who has taken the Multi-state Bar Examination (MBE) prepared by the National Conference of Bar Examiners, either in Mississippi or in another jurisdiction, within the immediately preceding 20-month period may elect to utilize the scaled score which he achieved on said previous administration of the MBE in lieu of retaking MBE during current Mississippi Bar Examination. Applicant's election to utilize MBE scaled score from a previous administration must be made in a written petition received by the Board not later than thirty (30) days before the Mississippi Bar Examination at which the applicant proposes to sit. Such petition shall state the date and place at which he took the MBE and the scaled score which he achieved. In the case of a request to utilize an MBE score from another administration of the MBE in a state other than Mississippi, the applicant must attach to his petition an authorization for the Board to obtain a certification of the MBE Scaled Score attained by the applicant from the Board of Bar Admissions (or equivalent agency) of the jurisdiction in which applicant sat for the subject MBE or from the National Conference of Bar Examiners. In the event that any change occurs in the procedure for preparation, grading or scaling of the MBE which, in the opinion of the Mississippi Board of Bar Admissions, renders impossible or inaccurate comparison of scaled scores between different administrations of the MBE, the Board may terminate or modify the utilization of previous MBE scores.

C. Multi-state Professional Responsibility Examination. As a mandatory condition for admission to the Mississippi Bar by examination each applicant must achieve a scaled score of not less than 75 on the Multi-state Professional Responsibility Examination (MPRE) administered by the National Conference of Bar Examiners (NCBE). This score must be achieved on an administration of the MPRE within twenty-four (24) months before or within twelve (12) months after the date of administration of the Mississippi Bar Examination at which the applicant achieves a passing result. It shall be the responsibility of each applicant to register for and take the MPRE in the manner and at the time prescribed by the NCBE and to request that his scores be furnished by the NCBE to Mississippi Board of Bar Admissions. The MPRE may be taken before or after the administration of the Mississippi Bar Examination at which an applicant proposes to sit. However, applicants are strongly encouraged to take the MPRE before taking the Mississippi Bar Examination, since no applicant will receive a "certificate of eligibility for admission" until the Board receives the certification of the applicant's achieving the said minimum scaled score on the MPRE within the time period prescribed in this subpart.

(Section 4A amended effective for Mississippi Bar Examinations administered in February 1992 and thereafter; Section 4B amended March 14, 1995, effective from and after July 1, 1995, but examinations administered February 1995, are to be scored according to existing rules and also by the rules in the March 14, 1995, order; amended effective April 24, 1997. Section 4C was further amended December 14, 2000, to increase the required scaled score from 70 to 75 and require that it be achieved within a stated time span; amended effective April 15, 2004; amended December 9, 2004, to delete transitional provision.) Section 5. Subjects on the examination.

The examination shall be based upon such of the following subjects as the Board shall determine:

A. Administrative Law
B. Contracts
C. Business Organizations, including Corporations, Partnership, and Agency
D. Criminal Law and Procedure
E. Domestic Relations
F. Evidence
G. Federal Income Taxation
H. Federal Jurisdiction and Rules of Civil Procedure
I. Practice and Procedure of Mississippi Courts
J. Professional Conduct and Ethics
K. Real Property
L. Torts
M. Uniform Commercial Code
N. Constitution of the United States and the State of Mississippi
O. Wills, Estates, Trusts and Future Interests (including basic federal tax consequences)
P. Conflict of Laws
Q. Bankruptcy

The Multistate Performance Test (MPT) will measure skills required for performance of legal tasks, such as (a) problem solving, (b) legal analysis and reasoning, (c) factual analysis, (d) communication, (e) organization and management of a legal task and (f) recognizing and resolving ethical dilemmas.

Prior to the examination the Board shall indicate to all applicants for a particular examination which subjects will be covered on the portion of the examination prepared by the Board and the order and time of the examination.

The contents of the Multi-state Bar Examination (MBE), Multi-state Essay Examination (MEE), and Multistate Performance Test (MPT) shall be determined by the authorities preparing such examination. (Effective November 1, 1991; amended effective February 1, 1998.)

Section 6. Conduct of examination.

Bar examinations shall be held under the supervision of the Board, which shall be in actual charge thereof through one or more of its members or staff employees. The Chairman of the Board shall have authority to designate the duties of members of the Board with respect to the examination. The member of the Board or staff employee in charge at an examination session may be hereinafter referred to as the "examiner".

The Board may utilize such number of monitors as the Board deems necessary to assist in conducting the examinations. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 7. Mode of examination.

A. Identification procedure. The Board shall utilize an identification procedure which shall insure the anonymity of the examinees throughout the examination and grading process.

B. No assistance during examination. Applicants shall not bring with them into the examination room any books, memoranda, notes, brief cases, bags, parcels, or any materials or devices to assist them in answering questions. All questions shall be answered solely from the applicant's own knowledge and without assistance from any other source. Any applicant violating this rule, or knowingly assisting another applicant in a violation of this rule, shall be given an automatic failing grade on the entire examination. The circumstances of such violation may be considered by the Board as grounds for barring such applicant from retaking the Mississippi Bar Examination at a later session.

C. Oath of applicant. Each applicant shall, upon concluding the last examination session, take and subscribe the following oath:

> I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I never saw until handed me by the Examiner the questions upon which I have been examined in connection with my application for admission to the Bar, nor a copy thereof; that I have not, before my examination, received any information as to the contents of said questions, and that I did not, while said examination was in progress, use or refer to any memorandum of any kind or receive directly or indirectly, from any source whatever, any suggestion, but that I wrote each and every answer exclusively from my own knowledge.

Sign name (not number) of Applicant

Address where results of examination are to be mailed

This paper shall be delivered to the examiner to be preserved as a part of the records of the Board.

D. Handling of examination papers. At the beginning of each examination session, the examiner shall deliver to the applicants a copy of the questions to be answered at that session.

The Multi-state Bar Examination (MBE) and the Multi-state Essay Examination (MEE) shall be administered in the manner prescribed therefor. No questions, answer sheets, or other materials relating to the MBE shall be copied or removed from the examination room.

Questions prepared by the Mississippi Board of Bar Admissions shall be consecutively numbered and shall be labeled as to their general subject matter. Answers to such questions shall be written in blank booklets supplied by the examiner. The applicant shall write all answers in ink. The Board may in its discretion permit applicants to typewrite their answers, in which case the Board may require payment of additional fees to defray additional expenses involved. The applicant must label and number his answers to correspond with the subject matter and numbers of that part of the examination and shall consecutively number each page of his answers to each part of the examination. The applicant shall not write his name or number, or otherwise attempt to identify himself on the pages containing his answers.

E. Anonymity of grading. Applicants are forbidden to identify, or attempt to identify, themselves, their identification numbers, or their answers to any member of the Board or any other person. Applicants shall not in any manner attempt to influence the grading of their examination. The circumstances may be considered by the Board as a grounds for barring such applicant from retaking the Mississippi Bar Examination at a later session.

F. Absence from examination room. Each applicant must complete and turn in his answer to the portion of the examination given to him before leaving the examination room, except by permission of the examiner, or unless accompanied by a monitor.

G. Monitors. Monitors shall perform such duties as are assigned to them by the examiner. Their purpose shall be to facilitate the conduct of the examination and to insure its integrity. Monitors shall not under any circumstances discuss the content of the examination with an applicant. Any question relating to the examination shall be referred immediately to the examiner.

H. Special testing accommodations. The Board, in its sole discretion, may direct that the Bar Examination be administered to applicants with disabilities in a fair and reasonable manner, but different from the manner by which it is administered to other applicants. An applicant with a disability who desires a special procedure for administration of the Examination shall so petition the Board at the time of filing his application, setting out the basis for the request and the type of special procedure which would be appropriate for his situation. Medical documentation must be submitted with the request. (Effective November 1, 1991; amended effective July 1, 2010.)

Section 8. Grading of the examination.

A. Procedure. All examinations (except MBE) shall be graded and reviewed by the Board or by members of the Mississippi Bar under the direction of the Board. If graders who are not members of the Board are employed they must meet the requirements against conflicts of interest applicable to members of the Board under Rule II, Section 6, above. The Board shall establish specific standards by which such graders perform their duties.

B. Standard for grading. Essay and performance test questions will test the applicant's ability to reason logically, to analyze accurately legal problems, and to demonstrate a knowledge of the fundamental principles of law and their application, and to perform basic legal tasks. The grade of the paper shall be measured by the reasoning power as well as by the correctness or incorrectness of the answer.

C. Time limits for grading. Grades, exam papers and analysis shall be returned to the Bar Admissions Administrator no later than thirty (30) days following the examination. In the event of disability of an examination grader during the performance of his duties, the Board shall determine the procedures to be followed in grading the papers involved. (Effective November 1, 1991; amended effective February 1, 1998.)

Section 9. Passing grade.

A. Answers to each of the essay examinations propounded by the Mississippi Board of Bar Admissions (hereinafter called, collectively, the "MSE") shall be assigned a score on a range of 0 to 100 points. Answers on each of the questions on the Multistate Essay Examination (hereinafter called the "MEE") and Multistate Performance Test ("MPT") shall be assigned a raw score on a range of 0 to 30 points. The Board shall have the right to make the final determination respecting all essay and performance test grades.

B. The applicant's score on each of the MSE examinations and on each question on the MEE and MPT shall be converted to the range of 0 to 200 points utilizing the MBE scaled scores of all applicants on the current Mississippi Bar Examination and the "Standard Deviation Method" described in The Bar Examiners' Handbook (3rd Edition, 1993 Supplement) at pp. 30:605-606, or such other standard statistical method as may be adopted by the Board. (The scores thus determined are hereinafter called "converted scores.")

C. The applicant's converted scores on all examinations on the MSE shall be averaged to determine the applicant's "Average Converted MSE Score." The applicant's converted scores on all questions on the MEE shall be averaged to determine the applicant's "Average Converted MEE Score." The applicant's converted scores on all questions on the MPT shall be averaged to determine the applicant's "Average Converted MPT score."

D. In order to pass the Mississippi Bar Examination, an applicant must achieve a combined score of 132 points (rounded to the nearest 0.1 point) on the entire examination, weighing the applicant's "Average Converted MSE Score" (determined under Item C above) as 30% of the combined score, the applicant's "Average Converted MEE Score" (determined under Item C above) as 15% of the combined score, the applicant's "Average Converted MPT Score" (determined under Item C above) as 15% of the combined score and the applicant's scaled score on the MBE as 40% of the combined score. (Effective November 1, 1991, with Section 9D(2), applied to determine results on Mississippi Bar Examination administered in July 1991 and thereafter; amended March 14, 1995 effective from and after July 1, 1995, but examinations administered February 1995 are to be scored according to existing rules and also by the rules in the March 14, 1995, order; amended effective February 1, 1998; amended effective August 24, 2000, for February 2001 and subsequent examinations.)

Section 10. Borderline reappraisal.

Prior to the final calculation of grades, each answer (excluding MBE) of those applicants achieving a combined score between 129 and 131.9 shall be individually reviewed by the Board. The procedures employed in such borderline reappraisal shall be determined by the Board. (Amended March 14, 1995 effective from and after July 1, 1995, but examinations administered February 1995 are to be scored according to existing rules and also by the rules in the March 14, 1995, order.)

Section 11. Examination results.

The Bar Admissions Administrator shall make a permanent record of the grades attained by each applicant and shall inform each applicant whether he has passed or failed the examination.

Each applicant failing to achieve a passing grade on the examination shall be provided (at no cost to the applicant) with a report showing his or her score on the MBE, on each of the MSE examinations, and on each question on the MEE and MPT.

An applicant receiving a passing grade on the examination may request, in writing, a report showing his or her score on the MBE and his or her combined score. A request for such report shall be accompanied by a report fee of $25.00 (money order, certified check, or cash only).

An applicant may request in writing a certification of the scaled score achieved on the MBE suitable for transfer of the applicant's MBE scaled score to another jurisdiction which accepts transfers of MBE scaled scores. A request for such a certification shall be accompanied by a score certification fee of $25.00 (money order, certified check, or cash only). (Effective November 1, 1991; amended effective August 24, 2000.)

RULE X. REVIEW BEFORE THE BOARD

Section 1. Request for copies of examination.

A failing applicant may request in writing from the Board, within thirty (30) days after the results of the examination have been made public, copies of the questions, his answers and model answers or analysis of the question used in grading the examination, which shall be provided to the applicant at his expense. A request for the copies shall be accompanied by a fee of $75.00 (money order, certified check, or cash only). In regard to the Multistate Bar Examination, the Board shall only be required to provide the examination grade and such other information concerning the applicant's examination results which are available to the Board. (Effective November 1, 1991; amended effective July 1, 2010.)

Section 2. Petition for review.

A failing applicant may petition for a review of his examination (excluding the MBE). Such petition must be filed not later than forty-five (45) days after the date on which the Board has mailed the examination results to the applicant. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 3. Content of petition.

A Petition for Review shall be verified under oath by the applicant and shall designate the specific questions claimed to have been substantially misgraded. Requests for review shall be limited to particular questions on MSE examinations and on the MEE and MPT on which the applicant received a raw score of less than 75.0% of the maximum raw score points assigned to that question.

The applicant shall attach to his Petition for Review a separate Memorandum setting forth, for each examination designated in the Petition, the grounds for his request for review. To preserve anonymity during review, the Memorandum, which will be the only part of the Petition for Review circulated among members of the Review Committee and the Board, shall not mention the applicant's name and shall not be signed. For identification purposes, the applicant will use the coded number assigned him during the grading process. The Memorandum shall particularize how the grade awarded is unjustified by the merits of the answers. The Memorandum must include such citation of legal authority or other briefing as the applicant wishes to have considered by the Board. No generalized claims, not accompanied by a specification of errors, shall be considered by the Board.

No reference to the applicant's legal education, economic status, social standing, employment, personal hardship, past performance on Bar examinations, or other extraneous factors shall be made in the Petition or Memorandum or mentioned in any way in review proceedings. No applicant shall communicate directly with members of the Board concerning his performance on the examination. Any violation of this Rule shall result in the automatic denial of the Petition for Review. (Effective November 1, 1991; amended March 14, 1995 effective from and after July 1, 1995, but examinations administered February 1995 are to be scored according to existing rules and also by the rules in the March 14, 1995 order; amended effective February 1, 1998.)

Section 4. Review by board.

Upon receipt of a Petition for Review, a review committee of not less than three (3) members of the Board shall review all papers on which the applicant alleges error in grading. The role of the Review Committee shall be to identify and consider specific errors in grading. It shall not be the function of the Review Committee merely to reconsider grades originally awarded. In the event that a majority of the members of the Review Committee find clear and manifest evidence that the applicant's papers have been substantially misgraded to such an extent that the result of the examination may have been affected, the Review Committee shall so report to the Board and the Board, as a whole, shall review the applicant's examination result. In the event that a majority of the members of the Review Committee find that the applicant's papers have not been substantially misgraded to an extent that the result of the examination was affected, such determination by the Review Committee shall be final without further action by the Board as a whole. After completion of the review process described in this Section and at least thirty (30) days prior to the administration of the next bar examination, an Order shall be entered in the Board minutes granting or denying the applicant's petition. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

RULE XI. APPEAL FROM BOARDS FINAL DETERMINATION OF FAILING GRADE

Section 1. Right to appeal.

A failing applicant who has filed a Petition for Review as provided in Rule X shall have the right to appeal from the order of the Board denying his Petition to the Chancery Court of Hinds County within thirty (30) days of entry of such order of denial. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 2. Record on appeal.

The Board must within thirty (30) days after the applicants appeal is filed in Hinds County Chancery Court, or within such further time as the court may grant, file with the Court and serve upon the applicant an answer. The Board shall therewith forward to the Court applicants Petition together with copies of examination questions (excluding the MBE), model answers or other analyses used in grading the examination, and the original of applicants answers. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

Section 3. Standard of review.

The grounds of appeal shall be limited to those specified in the applicants Petition for Review before the Board. The Chancery Court shall not regrade the examination or substitute its judgment of the merits of the applicants examination for the decision of the Board. The Boards decision to fail an applicant shall be reversed by the Chancery Court only if the applicant proves by a preponderance of the evidence that the Boards denial of his Petition was arbitrary, capricious or malicious. An appeal may be taken from the decision of the Chancery Court to the Supreme Court of Mississippi in accordance with the Mississippi Supreme Court Rules. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Illustrative cases.

Applicant whose exam showed little understanding of certain subject areas, and challenged his failing grade on the bar exam, was not entitled to have courts regrade his examination. Mississippi Bd. of Bar Admissions v. Applicant F, 582 So. 2d 377 (Miss. 1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 984, 112 S. Ct. 591, 116 L. Ed. 2d 616 (1991).

RULE XII. CERTIFICATION OF ELIGIBILITY FOR ADMISSION

The Board, upon finding the applicant qualified for admission by examination or by comity and reciprocity, shall issue to the applicant a "Certificate of Eligibility". The applicant shall file said certificate and a Petition for Admission in the Chancery Court of Hinds County, Mississippi, or in the Chancery Court in the county of his residence, or in the case of an applicant who is a non-resident of the State of Mississippi, in the Chancery Court of a county in which the applicant intends to practice. Said Chancery Court shall, in term time or in vacation, enter on the minutes of that court an order granting to the applicant license to practice in all courts in this state, upon taking by the applicant in the presence of the Court, the oath prescribed by law, Section 73-3-35, Mississippi Code of 1972, to-wit:

> I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will demean myself, as an attorney and counselor of this court; according, to the best of my learning and ability, and with all good fidelity as well to the court as to the client; that I will use no falsehood nor delay any person's cause for lucre or malice, and that I will support the Constitution of the State of Mississippi. So help me God.

And thereupon the name of such person, with the date of his admission, shall be entered in a roll or book to be kept in each court for the purpose. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

RULE XIII. PRECEPTOR STUDY

An applicant who had notified the Board of Bar Admissions in writing of an intention to pursue a general course of study of law under the supervision of a Mississippi lawyer prior to July 1, 1979, and in fact began study prior to July 1, 1979, and who completed the required course of study prior to November 1, 1984, in accordance with Miss. Code 1972, Subsection 73-3-3(b) and Subsection [Section] 73-3-15, as the same existed prior to their repeal in 1979, and who complied with former Rule XIV of the Rules Governing Admission to the Mississippi State Bar, shall be eligible for admission upon satisfaction of all requirements for admission, other than the law school education requirements set forth in Rule IV, Section 5. (Effective November 1, 1991.)

RULE XIV. EFFECTIVE DATE

The effective date of these Rules shall be November 1, 1979, and as amended through March 29, 2010. (Effective July 1, 2010.)

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI RULES AND REGULATIONS FOR MANDATORY CONTINUING LEGAL EDUCATION

Revised effective August 1, 1994

Rule
1. Continuing Legal Education Commission.
2. Scope and exemptions.
3. CLE requirement.
4. Accreditation.
5. Annual report.
6. Non-compliance and sanctions.
7. [Deleted].

Cross References — Admission and conduct of attorneys, see Mississippi Code of 1972, §§ 73-3-1 et seq.

Rule 1. Continuing Legal Education Commission.

a. There is hereby established a Commission on Continuing Legal Education (hereinafter referred to as the Commission) consisting of nine (9) members who are resident members of the Bar of this state. The members shall be appointed by the Mississippi Supreme Court.

b. All appointments shall be for a term of three (3) years. Therefore, there shall be three (3) appointments each year, one from each state Supreme Court district. An appointment to fill any vacancy due to the death, resignation or disability of a member shall be for the unexpired term only.

c. The Commission shall have the following duties:

1. To exercise general supervisory authority over the administration of these rules.

2. To adopt, repeal and amend regulations consistent with these rules.

3. To make available for inspection by the Mississippi Supreme Court all minutes of the Commission, business records, and financial data.

d. Financing.

1. Sponsors of CLE programs to be held within the State of Mississippi shall, as a condition of accreditation, agree to remit a list of Mississippi attendees and to pay a fee of one dollar and fifty cents ($1.50) per credit hour for each State Bar member who attends the program and is subject to mandatory continuing legal education. Such lists and fees shall be submitted to the Commission within thirty (30) days of said program.

2. Individual attorneys who either attend approved CLE programs outside the State of Mississippi, or attend unapproved CLE programs within the State of Mississippi that would have been approved for credit except for failure of the sponsor to pay the fee described in the preceding paragraph, shall pay a fee of one dollar and fifty cents ($1.50) for each credit hour claimed. Such fees shall accompany the attorney's annual report of compliance to the Commission. (Amended effective July 26, 2001.)

Regulations

1.1 The Chairman of the Commission shall be elected by the nine (9) voting members of the Commission.

1.2 The Commission shall elect a Vice-Chairman and Secretary from among its members.

1.3 The Commission may organize itself into Committees of not fewer than three (3) voting members for the purpose of considering and deciding matters submitted to them, except five (5) affirmative votes shall be necessary for any action under Rule 6.

1.4 Members of the Commission in the performance of their official duties shall be reimbursed for expenses subject to reimbursement policies set by the Commission.

1.5 The Commission may designate such staff as may be necessary and may further delegate executive authority to such staff to conduct the business of the Commission within the scope of the Rules and Regulations, subject at all times, however, to continual review by the Commission.

Rule 2. Scope and exemptions.

These Rules shall apply to every attorney licensed to practice law in the State of Mississippi, except for the following persons who shall be exempt from the requirement of these rules:

a. All attorneys shall be exempt from the requirement of these rules for the calendar year in which they are first admitted to practice.

b. All attorneys licensed to practice law in the State of Mississippi residing outside of the State and not engaged in the practice of law in Mississippi.

c. All attorneys licensed to practice law in the State of Mississippi residing in the state but not engaged in the practice of law in Mississippi.

d. All full-time members of the United States Armed Forces.

e. All of the Justices of the Mississippi Supreme Court, Circuit, Court of Appeals, Chancery, and County Judges, United States Magistrate Judges, Judges of the Bankruptcy Courts and the Judges of the Federal Courts. However, all members of the Judiciary are encouraged to attend and participate in continuing legal education programs.

f. The Governor of the State of Mississippi.

g. All members of the United States Senate and the United States House of Representatives.

h. All members of the bar shall be exempt from the requirement of these rules on and after their seventieth birthday.

Regulations

2.1 Non-resident attorneys from other jurisdictions who are temporarily admitted to practice for a case or proceeding shall not be subject to these rules.

2.2 Any member of the Mississippi State Bar licensed to practice law in the State of Mississippi but not engaged in the practice of law in Mississippi shall endorse and claim the exemption on the Annual Report required by Rule 5.

2.3 Any full-time member of the U.S. Armed Forces shall endorse and claim the exemption on the Annual Report required by Rule 5.

Rule 3. CLE requirement.

Each attorney licensed to practice law in the State of Mississippi shall attend, or complete an approved substitute for attendance, a minimum of twelve (12) actual hours of approved Continuing Legal Education ("CLE") during each successive twelve (12) month period (the "CLE year") from and after August 1 of each year, of which one hour shall be in the area of legal ethics, professional responsibility, professionalism, malpractice prevention, substance abuse or mental health (the "ethics/professionalism hour").
(Amended effective July 1, 2010.)

Regulations

3.1 The number of hours required means that the attorney must actually attend twelve (12) instruction hours of CLE per CLE year, with no credit given for introductory remarks, breaks, meal breaks, keynote or luncheon speakers or business meetings.

3.2 CLE hours shall be computed by the following formula:

$$\frac{\text{Total minutes of actual instruction}}{60} = \text{Total hours (rounded to nearest 1/10 of an hour)}$$

3.3 No attorney shall be permitted to claim more than six (6) hours of CLE credit through the use of satellite-transmitted or electronically recorded or reproduced material, even though same is presented by an accredited sponsor. As part of the six (6) hours an attorney may claim up to three (3) hours of CLE credit for telephone seminars and/or approved online programs. Seminars offered by satellite-transmittal, electronic reproduction, telephone or online programs must be approved by the Commission and must comply with Regulation 4.9 and 4.9.1. Approved online programs further must comply with Regulation 4.10.

3.4 Attorneys who have a permanent physical disability which makes attendance of CLE programs inordinately difficult may file a request for a permanent substitute program in lieu of attendance and shall therein set out continuing legal education plans tailored to their specific interests and physical ability. The Commission shall review and approve or disapprove such plans on an individual basis and without delay. Rejection of any requested substitute for attendance will be reviewed as provided in Rule 6 prior to any sanction being imposed.

3.5 Other requests for substituted compliance, partial waivers, or other exemptions for hardship or extenuating circumstances may be granted by the Commission upon written application of the attorney and may likewise be reviewed as provided in Rule 6.

3.6 No credit will be allowed for self-study, except as specifically approved under Regulation 3.3 for approved on-line programs and Regulation 4.10.

3.7 Twelve (12) hours of credit in excess of the minimum annual requirement may be carried forward for credit in the succeeding CLE year. Such hours must, however, be reported in the annual report of compliance for the CLE year in which they were completed and must be designated as hours to be carried forward. This regulation applies to attorneys claiming exemptions also. Ethics hours in excess of the one-hour requirement for the year may not be carried over to another year as ethics hours, although they may be carried over as regular hours.

3.8 The maximum number of hours which may be claimed for credit in any one seminar is 18.

3.9 Credit may be earned through teaching in an approved continuing legal education activity. Presentations accompanied by thorough, high quality, readable, and carefully prepared written materials will qualify for CLE credit on the basis of six (6) hours of credit for each instructional hour of presentation. Presentations accompanied by one or two page outlines or not accompanied by written materials will qualify for CLE credit on the basis of three (3) hours of credit per hour of presentation. Repeat presentations qualify for one half of the credits available for the initial presentation. A maximum of twelve (12) hours of CLE credit shall be earned from teaching pursuant to these regulations in any CLE year.

3.10 No credit will be allowed for teaching a continuing legal education activity if the instructor is compensated in any manner, excluding reimbursement of reasonable and necessary expenses. Contributions of honorariums to a public service organization such as the Mississippi Bar Foundation shall preclude this regulation.

3.11 Credits may also be earned through authorship of a law journal article on matters of law published by an ABA or AALS approved law school. The Commission will award six (6) hours of CLE credit for each such article published.

3.12 Credit may be earned through service as a member of the Mississippi Board of Bar Admissions or as a bar examiner. The Board of Bar Admissions will be awarded a maximum of six (6) hours of CLE credit per CLE year for writing and grading the Mississippi Essay Examination or for grading either the Multistate Essay Examination or Multistate Performance Test including attendance at the grading seminar, unless compensated for such service excluding reimbursement of reasonable and necessary expenses.

3.12.1 Credit may be earned through service as a member of the Committee on Professional Responsibility, as a member of the Ethics Committee, as a member of the Unauthorized Practice of Law Committee, or as a member of the Professionalism Committee of the Mississippi Bar. A member of the Committee on Professional Responsibility, the Ethics Committee, the Unauthorized Practice of Law Committee, or the Professionalism Committee will be awarded a maximum of one (1) hour of CLE ethics/professionalism credit per CLE year for service on those Committees.

3.13 Credit may be earned through formal enrollment for audit or for credit for which regular fees are paid in an ABA or AALS accredited law school. Four (4) hours of CLE credit will be awarded for each credit hour of the particular course audited or taken for credit. A maximum of twelve (12) credit hours per CLE year will be awarded.

3.14 Credit may be earned through formal enrollment in a bar review course approved by the Commission. The attorney must already be admitted to practice in Mississippi or another state. Self-study bar review courses do not qualify for credit. A maximum of twelve (12) credit hours per CLE year will be awarded.

3.15 Credit may be earned through service as a member of the Supreme Court Advisory Committee on Rules. The Commission will award six (6) hours of CLE credit annually for service on this Committee.

3.16 Credit may be earned through service as a member of the Model Civil Jury Instructions Committee or the Model Criminal Jury Instruction Committee. The Commission will award six (6) hours of CLE credit annually for service on these committees.

3.17 Credit may be earned through service as Lieutenant Governor of the State of Mississippi or as a member of the Mississippi Legislature. The Commission will award six (6) hours of CLE credit annually to the Lieutenant Governor and to each attorney who certifies his/her membership in the Mississippi Senate or the House of Representatives.

3.18 Credit may also be earned through teaching a course in an ABA or AALS approved law school. The Commission will award six (6) hours of CLE credit for each hour of academic credit awarded by the law school for the course.

3.19 Full-time employees of a governmental department or agency may earn up to twelve (12) hours of credit per year by attending approved CLE activities offered by their governmental department or agency for its employees.

3.20 Part-time employees of a governmental department or agency may earn up to six (6) hours of credit per year by attending approved CLE activities offered by their governmental department or agency for its employees. (Amended effective August 1, 1995; amended January, 1998; Regulations 3.3 and 3.6 amended effective December 9, 2004, to provide for approved online programs; Regulation 3.12.1 adopted effective December 9, 2004 to allow credit for service on Committee on Professional Responsibility and Ethics Committee of the Mississippi Bar; amended effective January 25, 2007, to add professionalism as an option for CLE credit; amended effective August 1, 2008, to increase the number of hours allowed for telephone seminars and online programs; amended effective July 1, 2009 to allow one (1) hour of CLE ethics/professionalism credit for service on the Mississippi Bar's Unauthorized Practice of Law Committee.)

Rule 4. Accreditation.

Credit will be given only for CLE programs approved by the Commission. Such approval normally must be sought and granted prior to the occurrence of the activity, but may be given retroactively.

Regulations

4.1 The following standards will govern the approval of continuing legal education activities by the Commission.

4.2 The activity must be effectively open to all attorneys licensed to practice law in the State of Mississippi, unless offered by a governmental department or agency for employees of the governmental department or agency. By making an application for approval by the Commission, the seminar sponsor consents to the seminar being listed on the calendar of upcoming CLE events disseminated by the Commission.

4.3 The activity must have significant intellectual or practical content and its primary objective must be to increase the participant's professional competence as an attorney.

4.4 The activity must deal primarily with matters related to the practice of law, professional responsibility or ethical obligations of attorneys.

4.5 The activity must be offered by a sponsor having substantial, recent experience in offering continuing legal education or demonstrated ability to organize and present effectively continuing legal education. Demonstrated ability arises partly from the extent to which individuals with legal training or educational experience are involved in the planning, instruction and supervision of the activity.

4.6 The activity itself must be conducted by an individual or group qualified by practical or academic experience. The program, including the named advertised participants, must be conducted substantially as planned, subject to emergency withdrawals and alterations.

4.7 Thorough, high quality, readable, and carefully prepared written materials must be made available to all participants at or before the time the course is presented, unless the absence of such materials is recognized as reasonable and approved by the Commission; mere outline without citations or explanatory notations will not be sufficient. Materials in an electronic format may be acceptable in lieu of printed material as long as the attorney consents to receive such material. Printed material must be made available to those attorneys for whom the electronic format is not satisfactory.

4.8 The activity must be conducted in a physical setting conducive to learning.

4.9 Activities offered by any sponsor must provide a qualified on-site moderator and question-and-answer session. Telephone seminars must be conducted "live," not pre-recorded, and must provide a question-and-answer session. As a minimum the activity must consist of not less than one (1) hour of actual instruction.

4.10 Each online program or online seminar will be reviewed for approval on a case by case basis. The course content, interactivity, as well as the effectiveness of the delivery method will be considered in the approval process. Applications for approval must be submitted by the sponsor and submitted 30 days prior to the beginning date of the program. Applications will not be approved retroactively. Sponsors must be able to verify attorney attendance and the number of hours attended. Attorney attendance must be reported to the Mississippi Commission on CLE immediately following the conclusion of the program.

4.11 Activities that cross academic lines, such as an accounting-tax seminar, may be considered for approval.

4.12 At the conclusion of an approved program or activity, each participating attorney must be given the opportunity to complete an evaluation questionnaire addressing the quality, effectiveness and usefulness of the particular activity. Within thirty (30) days of the conclusion of the activity, a summary of the results of the questionnaire must be forwarded to the Commission. If requested, copies of the questionnaires must also be forwarded to the Commission. Sponsors must maintain the questionnaires for a period of 90 days following a program pending a request for submission of them to the Commission.

4.13 The costs of the program itself to the participating attorney, apart from optional meals, lodging, travel, etc., must be reasonable considering the subject matter, instructional level, etc.

4.14 Continuing legal education activities sponsored by the following organizations (hereinafter referred to as Sponsors) are presumptively approved for credit, provided the standards set out in Regulations 4.1 through 4.13 are met.

4.16 The Commission may at any time reevaluate a program and revoke approval of the Sponsor or of a particular seminar.

4.17 Any Sponsor not included in Regulation 4.14 above, desiring approval of a course, program, or other activity, will apply to the Commission by submitting a required application form and supporting documentation no less than forty-five (45) days prior to the date for which the course or program is scheduled. The Commission will advise the applicant in writing by mail within thirty (30) days of the receipt of the completed application whether the activity is approved or disapproved. Applicants denied approval of a program or activity may appeal such a decision by submitting a letter of appeal to the Commission within fifteen (15) days of the receipt of the notice of the disapproval. (Amended effective August 1, 1995; Regulations 4.7, 4.9 and 4.10 amended effective December 9, 2004 to allow limited use of approved on-line programs; amended effective July 1, 2009, to add two approved sponsors to Regulation 4.14.)

Rule 5. Annual report.

On or before August 15 of each year, each attorney admitted to practice in the State, unless exempted from making a report under the provisions of Rule 2 hereof and regulations thereunder, shall make a written report to the Commission, in such form as the Commission shall prescribe, concerning his or her completion of accredited legal education during the CLE year having ended on July 31 of such year.

Regulations

5.1 On or before August 15 of each year, each attorney will submit a report on a form as the Commission shall provide concerning such attorney's completion of, exemption from or approved substitute for the minimum hours of instruction, including reference to hours earned during that CLE year and hours to be carried forward to the next CLE year.

5.2 The files and records of the Commission are deemed confidential and shall not be disclosed except in furtherance of the duties of the Commission; statistical abstracts may, however, be drawn therefrom in an anonymous fashion.

5.3 Each attorney failing to timely submit the reports of compliance required by Regulation 5.1 hereof shall, at the time of filing such report, pay a late fee to the Commission in the sum of Twenty-five Dollars ($25.00). The Commission shall treat all delinquently filed reports not accompanied by the late fee required hereunder as not having been filed.

Rule 6. Non-compliance and sanctions.

a. As soon as practicable after August 15 of each year, the Commission shall compile the following:

1. A list of attorneys who have filed annual reports of compliance for the next preceding CLE year ending July 31, as required by Rule 5, Mississippi Rules of Mandatory Continuing Legal Education.

2. A list of attorneys who have filed annual reports of compliance on or before the next preceding July 31 indicating that they have not complied with the requirement of Rule 3, Mississippi Rules for Mandatory Continuing Legal Education.

3. A list of attorneys who have failed to file annual reports of compliance for the next preceding CLE year as required by Rule 5, Mississippi Rules for Mandatory Continuing Legal Education.

b. The Commission shall then serve, by certified mail, each attorney whose name appears upon the lists compiled by the Commission who has not complied with Rules 3 and 5, Mississippi Rules for Mandatory Continuing Legal Education, with an Order to Show Cause, within sixty (60) days, why the attorney's license should not be suspended. Said attorney shall furnish the Commission with an affidavit:

1. Indicating that the attorney has complied with the requirement prior to expiration of the sixty (60) days, or

2. Setting forth a valid excuse for failure to comply with the requirements because of illness or other good cause.

c. At the expiration of sixty (60) days from the date of the Order to Show Cause, the Commission shall notify the Supreme Court of Mississippi of each attorney who fails to file an affidavit satisfactory to the Commission as described in (b)(1) and (b)(2) above and recommend appropriate sanctions to the Supreme Court, which may include, among others, that the attorney's license to practice law be suspended.

d. At any time after notice of noncompliance to the Supreme Court, an attorney may file with the Commission an affidavit indicating compliance with Rule 3, Rules for Mandatory Continuing Legal Education and if satisfactory to the Commission, it shall forthwith notify the Supreme Court for appropriate action, including reinstatement.

e. Administration of this program is complicated by attorneys who fail to comply with theses rules. Accordingly, the Commission and/or the Supreme Court is authorized to assess costs against such delinquent and/or non-filing attorneys in the form of a reasonable fee for filing late, filing an annual report reflecting a deficiency and/or not filing during the reporting period. Such costs can be increased proportionately by an attorney's late compliance or non-compliance for two successive CLE years.

CODE OF JUDICIAL CONDUCT

Adopted by the Mississippi Supreme Court April 4, 2002

PREAMBLE.
TERMINOLOGY.

Canon
1. A judge shall uphold the integrity and independence of the judiciary.
2. A judge shall avoid impropriety and the appearance of impropriety in all activities.
3. A judge shall perform the duties of judicial office impartially and diligently.
4. A Judge shall so conduct the Judge's extra-judicial activities as to minimize the risk of conflict with judicial obligations.
5. A judge or judicial candidate shall refrain from inappropriate political activity.
Application of the Code of Judicial Conduct.

Cross References — Commission on Judicial Performance, see Mississippi Code of 1972 §§ 9-19-1 et seq.

Editor's Note — The Supreme Court of Mississippi on April 4, 2002, revised the Mississippi Code of Judicial Conduct, replacing the previous code, adopted February 15, 1995.

The Court's April 4, 2002 order adopting the Code stated: "On October 25, 2001, the draft of the proposed revised Mississippi Code of Judicial Conduct was published and comments and other suggestions were solicited from the public, the Mississippi judiciary, the Mississippi Bar, other bar organizations, and members of the bar. Comments and suggestions were received after the closure of the period for public comment and were fully considered by the Court for revision and adoption. Thereafter, by order issued on February 8, 2002, the proposed Mississippi Code of Judicial Conduct, with revisions and the proposed amendments of the associated procedural rules, were disseminated to the Conference of Circuit Court Judges, the Conference of Chancery Court Judges and the Conference of County Court Judges for review and further comments and suggestions. Further comments and suggestions were thereafter received and these also have been fully considered by the Court. The Court now finds that the adoption of this revised Mississippi Code of Judicial Conduct, the repeal of the existing Code of Judicial Conduct, and the adoption of the specified amendments to the procedural rules will promote the fair and efficient administration of justice."

The revised Code of Judicial Conduct retains three of the canons of the code it replaces and compresses the other four into only two rules. Detailed rule contents are rearranged and expanded using the model American Bar Association (ABA) Code as source and introducing several new areas of regulation. Further, in many instances, ABA language was adopted to replace the former language of some rules, often without fundamentally changing content. Among the most noticeable new elements in the revised rules are the preamble, the terminology section, the application section, and the addition of a commentary. Among the expanded rules are:

Canon 2 C, which rules that a judge shall not be a member of any organization that discriminates on the basis of race, gender, religion or national origin.

Canon 3 B (1), stating that a judge shall hear and decide matters assigned unless disqualified.

Canon 3 B (5) on impartiality and fairness in words and conduct, specifying further biases or prejudices to be avoided in a list that includes prejudice based on race, gender, religion, national origin, disability, age, sexual orientation and socioeconomic status. Judges must require the same standard of conduct of those under their control.

Canon 3 B (6) does not preclude legitimate advocacy over these factors and other similar factors if they are issues in the proceeding.

Canon 3 B (7) expands and strengthens the rules on ex parte communication.

Canon 2 B (8) states that a judge shall dispose of all judicial matters promptly, efficiently and fairly.

Canon 3 B (10) rules that a judge shall not commend or criticize jurors for their verdict.

Canon 3 B (11) lists the adjudicative responsibility of not disclosing or using, for any purpose unrelated to judicial duties, nonpublic information acquired in a judicial capacity.

Canon 3 C (5) describes how a judge should deal with the appointment to a position of a major donor if the judge knows the donor has contributed to his election campaign.

Canon 3 D details a judge's disciplinary responsibilities with respect to conduct violations by other judges and by lawyers for which the judge is covered by an absolute privilege.

Canon 3 E, on disqualification, repeats the provisions of current rules but adds a procedure for recusal from lawsuits involving major donors, while Canon 3 F sets the rule for remittal of disqualification.

Canon 4 regulates extrajudicial activities, introducing a few tightenings of existing rules.

Canon 5 greatly develops the rules on political activity in the election of judges and creates the Special Committee on Judicial Election Campaign Intervention "to deal expeditiously with allegations of ethical misconduct in campaigns for judicial office." Exhibits B through E to the Court's order contain the following amendments to rules other than the Code of Judicial Conduct: Proposed new M.R.C.P. 16 A and comment on Motions for Recusal of Judges; Proposed new Rule 1.15 of the Rules of Circuit and County Court Practice and Proposed new Rule 1.11 of Rules of Chancery Court Practice on Motions for Recusal of Judges; Proposed new Rule 48B to Mississippi Rules of Appellate Procedure on Proceedings on Motion for Disqualification of Trial Judge, and Proposed revised Rule 6A to the Rules of the Commission on Judicial Performance.

PREAMBLE.

Our legal system is based on the principle that an independent, fair and competent judiciary will interpret and apply the laws that govern us. The role of the judiciary is central to American concepts of justice and the rule of law. Intrinsic to all sections of this Code are the precepts that judges, individually and collectively, must respect and honor the judicial office as a public trust and strive to enhance and maintain confidence in our legal system. The judge is an arbiter of facts and law for the resolution of disputes and a highly visible symbol of government under the rule of law.

The Code of Judicial Conduct is intended to establish standards for ethical conduct of judges. It consists of broad statements called Canons, specific rules set forth in Sections under each Canon, a Terminology Section, an Application Section and Commentary. The text of the Canons and the Sections, including the Terminology and Application Sections, is authoritative. The Commentary, by explanation and example, provides guidance with respect to the purpose and meaning of the Canons and Sections. The Commentary is not intended as a statement of additional rules. When the text uses "shall" or "shall not," it is intended to impose binding obligations the violation of which can result in disciplinary action. When "should" or "should not" is used, the text is intended as hortatory and as a statement of what is or is not appropriate conduct but not as a binding rule under which a judge may be disciplined. When "may" is used, it denotes permissible discretion or, depending on the context, it refers to action that is not covered by specific proscriptions. The Canons and Sections are rules of reason. They should be applied consistent with constitutional requirements, statutes, other court rules and decisional law and in the context of all relevant circumstances. The Code is to be construed so as not to impinge on the essential independence of judges in making judicial decisions.

The Code is designed to provide guidance to judges and candidates for judicial office and to provide a structure for regulating conduct through disciplinary agencies. It is not designed or intended as a basis for civil liability or criminal prosecution. Furthermore, the purpose of the Code would be subverted if the Code were invoked by lawyers for mere tactical advantage in a proceeding.

The text of the Canons and Sections is intended to govern conduct of judges and to be binding upon them. It is not intended, however, that every transgression will result in disciplinary action. Whether disciplinary action is appropriate, and the degree of discipline to be imposed, should be determined through a reasonable and reasoned application of the text and should depend on such factors as the seriousness of the transgression, whether there is a pattern of improper activity and the effect of the improper activity on others or on the judicial system.

The Code of Judicial Conduct is not intended as an exhaustive guide for the conduct of judges. They should also be governed in their judicial and personal conduct by general ethical standards. The Code is intended, however, to state basic standards which should govern the conduct of all judges and to provide guidance to assist judges in establishing and maintaining high standards of judicial and personal conduct.

TERMINOLOGY.

"Appropriate authority" denotes the authority with responsibility for initiation of disciplinary process with respect to the violation to be reported. See Sections 3D(1) and 3D(2).

"Candidate." A candidate is a person seeking selection for judicial office by election or appointment. Persons become candidates for judicial office as soon as they make public announcements of candidacy, declare or file as candidates with the election or appointment authority, or authorize solicitation or acceptance of contributions or support. The term "candidate" has the same meaning when applied to a judge seeking election or appointment to non-judicial office. See Preamble and Canon 5.

"Court personnel" does not include the lawyers in a proceeding before a judge. See Sections 3B(7)(c) and 3B(9).

"De minimis" denotes an insignificant interest that could not raise reasonable question as to a judge's impartiality. See Sections 3E(1)(c) and 3E(1)(d).

"Economic interest" denotes ownership of a more than de minimis legal or equitable interest, or a relationship as officer, director, advisor or other active participant in the affairs of a party, except that:

(i) ownership of an interest in a mutual or common investment fund that holds securities is not an economic interest in such securities unless the judge participates in the management of the fund or a proceeding pending or impending before the judge could substantially affect the value of the interest;

(ii) service by a judge as an officer, director, advisor or other active participant in an educational, religious, charitable, fraternal or civic organization, or service by a judge's spouse, parent or child as an officer, director, advisor or other active participant in any organization does not create an economic interest in securities held by that organization;

(iii) a deposit in a financial institution, the proprietary interest of a policy holder in a mutual insurance company, of a depositor in a mutual savings association or of a member in a credit union, or a similar proprietary interest, is not an economic interest in the organization unless a proceeding pending or impending before the judge could substantially affect the value of the interest;

(iv) ownership of government securities is not an economic interest in the issuer unless a proceeding pending or impending before the judge could substantially affect the value of the securities. See Sections 3E(1)(c) and 3E(2).

"Fiduciary" includes such relationships as executor, administrator, trustee, and guardian. See Sections 3E(3) and 4E.

"Independent persons, committees or organizations" shall mean an individual person or organization not required to report as affiliated with a campaign for judicial office. See Section 5F.

"Knowingly," "knowledge," "known" or "knows" denotes actual knowledge of the fact in question. A person's knowledge may be inferred from circumstances. See Sections 3D, 3E(1), and 5A(3).

"Law" denotes court rules as well as statutes, constitutional provisions and decisional law. See Sections 2A, 3A, 3B(2), 3B(7), 4B, 4C, 4F, 4I, 5A(2), 5A(3), 5B(2), 5C, 5D, and 5F.

"Major donor", for the purposes of Section 3E(2), shall be defined as follows:

(a) If the donor is an individual, "donor" means that individual, the individual's spouse, or the individual's or the individual's spouse's child, mother, father, grandmother, grandfather, grandchild, employee and employee's spouse.

(b) If the donor is an entity other than an individual, "donor" means the entity, its employees, officers, directors, shareholders, partners members, and contributors and the spouse of any of them.

(c) A "major donor" is a donor who or which has, in the judge's most recent election campaign, made a contribution to the judge's campaign of (a) more than $2,000 if the judge is a justice of the Supreme Court or judge of the Court of Appeals, or (b) more than $1,000 if the judge is a judge of a court other than the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals.

(d) The term "contribution to the judge's campaign" shall be the total of all contributions to a judge's campaign and shall be deemed to include all contributions of every kind and type whatsoever, whether in the form of cash, goods, services, or other form of contribution, and whether donated directly to the judge's campaign or donated to any other person or entity for the purpose of supporting the judge's campaign and/or opposing the campaign of the judge's opponent(s). The term "contribution to a judge's campaign" shall also be deemed to include any publication, advertisement or other release of information, or payment therefor, other than a bona fide news item published by existing news media, which contains favorable information about the judge or which contains unfavorable information about the judge's opponent(s).

"Member of the candidate's family" denotes a spouse, child, grandchild, parent, grandparent, siblings, or other relative or person with whom the candidate maintains a close familial relationship. See Section 5A(3)(a).

"Member of the judge's family" denotes a spouse, child, grandchild, parent, grandparent, siblings, or other relative or person with whom the judge maintains a close familial relationship. See Sections 4D, 4E and 4G.

"Member of the judge's family residing in the judge's household" denotes any relative of a judge by blood or marriage, or a person treated by a judge as a member of the judge's family, who resides in the judge's household. See Sections 3E(1) and 4D.

"Nonpublic information" denotes information that, by law, is not available to the public. Nonpublic information may include but is not limited to: information that is sealed by statute or court order, impounded or communicated in camera; and information offered in grand jury proceedings, presentencing reports, dependency cases or psychiatric reports. See Sections 3B(11) and 4D(4).

"Part-time judge" denotes a judge who serves for an extended, fixed term, but is allowed to practice law or any other profession or occupation. The term does not apply to magistrates, court commissioners, special masters or referees.

"Political organization" denotes a political party or other group, the principal purpose of which is to further the election or appointment of candidates to political office. See Sections 5A(1).

"Public election." This term includes primary and general elections; it includes partisan elections and nonpartisan elections. See Section 5C.

"Require." The rules prescribing that a judge "require" certain conduct of others are, like all of the rules in this Code, rules of reason. The use of the term "require" in that context means a judge is to exercise reasonable direction and control over the conduct of those persons subject to the judge's direction and control. See Sections 3B(3), 3B(4), 3B(5), 3B(6), 3B(9) and 3C(2).

"Special judge" denotes a judge, including a retired judge, other than one who is serving to fill the unexpired term of a regularly elected or appointed judge who has vacated the office, who serves by appointment for a limited period or in a particular matter due to the unwillingness or inability of a sitting judge to hear a case or attend court, or who is appointed on an emergency basis.

"Third degree of relationship." The following persons are relatives within the third degree of relationship: great-grandparent, grandparent, parent, uncle, aunt, brother, sister, child, grandchild, great-grandchild, nephew or niece. See Section 3E(1)(d).

Commentary

In defining "members of the candidate's family" and "members of the judge's family" siblings of the candidate and judge are included. The phrase "major donor" is also included. Likewise, no reference is made to retention elections. In these respects, this section differs from the ABA Model Code of Judicial Conduct.

The ABA Model Code defines "continuing part-time judge," "periodic part-time judge," and "pro tempore part-time judge." Also, in the Application Section, the ABA model refers to "retired judge subject to recall." In the adaption of the model for Mississippi application, these are reduced to "part-time judge," and "special judge," which covers non-standard positions subject to special treatment. See Application Section.

Canon 1. A judge shall uphold the integrity and independence of the judiciary.

An independent and honorable judiciary is indispensable to justice in our society. A judge should participate in establishing, maintaining, and enforcing, and should himself observe, high standards of conduct so that the integrity and independence of the judiciary may be preserved. The provisions of this Code should be construed and applied to further that objective.

Commentary

Deference to the judgments and rulings of courts depends upon public confidence in the integrity and independence of judges. The integrity and independence of judges depends in turn upon their acting without fear or favor. Although judges should be independent, they must comply with the law, including the provisions of this Code. Public confidence in the impartiality of the judiciary is maintained by the adherence of each judge to this responsibility. Conversely, violation of this Code diminishes public confidence in the judiciary and thereby does injury to the system of government under law.

County justice court judge was publicly reprimanded for violating Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2(A), 2(B), 3(B)(2), 4(A)(1)-(3) as he ordered that his grandson's driver's license be reinstated (after the grandson pled nolo contendere to DUI) and attempted to have a sheriff allow the grandson to serve his time in a local jail instead of a state facility. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Cole, 932 So. 2d 9 (Miss. 2006).

Where a judge allowed intervention in a will contest by a company that he was assisting in locating a barge landing site for a county landfill, at the same time that he was negotiating with the proponent of the will, and ruled in favor of the company, he violated Canons 1, 2 A, 2 B, 3 A(1), 3 A(4), 3 C, 3 D, 5 C(1) and 5 F. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Jenkins, 725 So. 2d 162 (Miss. 1998).

Where a judge established a relationship with various persons by assisting them in locating a barge landing site for a county landfill and used his position as judge for their benefit by appearing before the county board of supervisors, he violated Canons 1, 2 A, 2 B, 3 A(1) and 5 C(1). Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Jenkins, 725 So. 2d 162 (Miss. 1998).

The judge's conduct violated Canons 1, 2, and 3 of the Code of Judicial Conduct when he came down from the bench, grabbed defendant around the head, used racial epithets and other inappropriate language, and then denied ever having met the defendant previously, when in fact, he had met him during a prior confrontation relating to the judge's private business. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Guest, 717 So. 2d 325 (Miss. 1998).

Judge who served part-time—pro tem as a municipal court judge, and also engaged in private criminal defense practice, received sanction of public reprimand for assuming role of attorney, and presumably accepting a fee, for representing a defendant and attempting to reduce the same bond which he, as city judge, had earlier set for that defendant. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Atkinson, 645 So. 2d 1331 (Miss. 1994).

Justice court judge violated this canon by disrupting court proceedings, accusing another judge and wildlife officers of impropriety, and acting on behalf of criminal defendants. In re Cooksey, 515 So. 2d 957 (Miss. 1987).

Justice court judge was fined and publicly reprimanded for using criminal process to collect civil debts, failing to properly docket and process bad checks, failing to properly collect and account for contributions to county law library fund, collecting fees in excess of statutory maximum and paying fees in excess of statutory maximum to court officials, and having a pecuniary interest in the outcome of litigation filed in his court. In re Lambert, 421 So. 2d 1023 (Miss. 1982).

Exceeding scope of authority.

Public reprimand against a judge was proper because he misused the powers of contempt and violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 3(B)(2), and 3(B)(8) when he held a defendant in criminal contempt for failing to recite the pledge of allegiance in open court. He violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 2(A) and 3(B)(4) by incarcerating the defendant for expressing his rights under U.S. Const. amend. I. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Littlejohn, 62 So. 3d 968 (Miss. 2011).

Order that the judge be suspended for 30 days from office without pay, along with a public reprimand, a fine, and an assessment of costs was appropriate because he violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2(A), (B), 3(A), (B)(1), (B)(2), and 3(B)(7) and his egregious actions constituted willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice. By involving himself in another judge's cases and attempting to assist defendants with their tickets, the judge compromised the integrity and independence of the judiciary and his actions created an impression that certain defendants were in a special position to influence him. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. McKenzie, 63 So. 3d 1219 (Miss. 2011).

Chancellor was publicly reprimanded for misconduct in violation of, inter alia, Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 1, 2A, 3B(2), 3C(1) because the chancellor had issued subpoenas to two members of county board of supervisors, and during a later meeting with the board of supervisors, the chancellor admitted that he had failed to comply with the law in doing so; further, the commission found by clear and convincing evidence that the chancellor had engaged in willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice which brought the office into disrepute, under Miss. Const. art. VI, § 177A. The record did not indicate any aggravating factors. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Buffington, 55 So. 3d 167 (Miss. 2011).

Removal of the judge from office was appropriate because he violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2(A), and 3(E) when he committed a minor child to detention after recusing himself from the case and then entered an order appointing another judge to hear the case without authority. His actions constituted willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice and his assertion that his actions were a mere error of law was without merit. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Osborne, 16 So. 3d 16 (Miss. 2009).

Mississippi Commission on Judicial Performance's finding that a justice court judge violated Miss. Code Ann. §§ 99-23-1, 99-23-5, 99-23-13, and Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2A, 2B, 3(B)(2), 3(B)(4), 3(B)(7), 3(B)(8), 3(C)(1), and Miss. Const. Art. VI, § 177A, was clearly and convincingly supported by the record because the judge exceeded her authority in repeatedly entering unlawful orders pertaining to peace bonds resulting in the incarceration of an accused. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Boland, 998 So. 2d 380 (Miss. 2008).

Failure to follow the correct procedural safeguards of giving one accused of contempt a specific charge, notice, and a hearing violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 1 since disregard of the law brings the integrity and independence of the judiciary into question. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Willard, 788 So. 2d 736 (Miss. 2001).

A judge abused her contempt powers and thereby violated Canons 1, 2, and 3 when she held a newspaper reporter in contempt and put her in jail without following the proper procedures. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Byers, 757 So. 2d 961 (Miss. 2000).

Although a judge's conduct in entering orders regarding a defendant at the same time the senior judge was also entering orders regarding that defendant in some of the same cases did not evidence the level of civility and professionalism expected of judges, the judge's conduct did not constitute a violation of the statute. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Byers, 757 So. 2d 961 (Miss. 2000).

Circuit court judge was not required to pay the fine that was recommended by the Mississippi Commission on Judicial Performance, but was publicly reprimanded and assessed costs for violating the canons of judicial conduct by abusing her contempt powers and illegally expunging the drug convictions of two persons. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Sanders, 749 So. 2d 1062 (Miss. 1999).

A judge violated Section 177A of the Mississippi Constitution of 1890, as amended and judicial canons 1, 2A, 2B, and 3A(1) of the Mississippi Code of Judicial Conduct when he willfully and improperly reduced DUI charges against several defendants, and he would be publicly reprimanded, fined $1,500, and ordered to pay all costs associated with the case. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Jones, 735 So. 2d 385 (Miss. 1999).

Where a judge suspended the sentences previously entered in two cases with the full knowledge that she lacked jurisdiction to enter such orders and without considering the Uniform Post Conviction Relief Act, she violated Canons 1, 2A, 3A(1), 3A(4), and 3B(1) of the Code of Judicial Conduct. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Sanders, 708 So. 2d 866 (Miss. 1998).

Judge was publicly reprimanded, fined $1500, and taxed with costs for his post-sentencing release of four state prisoners in excess of his authority. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Russell, 691 So. 2d 929 (Miss. 1997), reh'g denied, 693 So. 2d 384 (Miss. 1997).

Municipal court judge who incarcerated a defendant without notice or hearing, and who sentenced a defendant to more jail time than allowed by law and found same defendant guilty of perjury based upon judge's own affidavit and warrant, was sanctioned by public reprimand and taxation of costs. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Fletcher, 686 So. 2d 1075 (Miss. 1996).

Where justice court judge found litigant in contempt for what judge perceived as a direct attack on him personally, rather than on the court, judge's action was in direct violation of case law and Code of Judicial Conduct, and constituted willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to administration of justice. Mississippi Judicial Performance Comm'n v. Walker, 565 So. 2d 1117 (Miss. 1990).

Justice court judge was removed from office for using his judgeship for his own pecuniary benefit, where he collected fines or fees and failed to remit them to the court clerk. Mississippi Judicial Performance Comm'n v. Coleman, 553 So. 2d 513 (Miss. 1989).

Justice court judge was publicly reprimanded for mishandling an eviction and past due rent case, which culminated in judge's ordering tenant imprisoned for non-payment of civil debt. In re Bailey, 541 So. 2d 1036 (Miss. 1989).

County court judge was removed from office for charging excessive fines, using county prisoners for personal and county work, and deciding more than 100 misdemeanor cases "off the record," for which there were no case files, docket entries, or other records of filing or disposition in office of circuit clerk. In re Collins, 524 So. 2d 553 (Miss. 1987).

Justice court judge violated this canon by utilizing criminal process or threat of criminal process to collect civil debts, failing to properly docket and process bad check cases, failing to collect civil court costs deposit in advance from merchants, failing to keep records required of his office, and collecting court costs from county in cases which were never docketed. In re Odom, 444 So. 2d 835 (Miss. 1984).

Failing to sign court documents.

Justice court judge received private reprimand for first infraction involving collecting fines, failing to sign criminal dockets, and dismissal of tickets, where there was no intent to be detrimental to law enforcement or judicial fairness, and no hint of dishonesty or attempt to gain political favor. Mississippi Judicial Performance Comm'n v. Justice Court Judge, 580 So. 2d 1259 (Miss. 1991).

Sanction of public reprimand and fine of $500 was not too harsh a punishment for judge's improper dismissal of non-moving violations and traffic tickets, assessment of excessive fees and costs, and failure to sign court dockets. Mississippi Judicial Performance Comm'n v. Cowart, 566 So. 2d 1251 (Miss. 1990).

Harmless error.

Change of primary physical custody of the child from the father to the mother was proper because, even though the chancellor's remarks were clearly inappropriate, the error arising therefrom was harmless. The record revealed ample evidence that supported the chancellor's finding on every issue except that of visitation, which the appellate court remanded for further proceedings; thus, the appellate court was unable to find that the chancellor's improper conduct affected a substantial right of the parties. Schmidt v. Bermudez, 5 So. 3d 1100 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), reversed by, remanded by 5 So. 3d 1064, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 104 (Miss. 2009).

Improper communications.

Justice court judge was suspended from office for ninety days without pay and was publicly reprimanded for violating Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2A, 2B, 3B(2), 3B(4), 4A, and Miss. Const. art. 6, § 177A, where the judge engaged in ex parte communications with a female litigant and inappropriately handled a fine reduction. Allegations that the judge made sexual advances toward the female litigant were not established by clear and convincing evidence. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Boone, 60 So. 3d 172 (Miss. 2011).

Public reprimand imposed against a judge was proper because he had engaged in ex parte communications with parties involved in a disturbance-of-the-peace case and also entered a plea of not guilty for one of the parties. That misconduct violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2(A), 2(B), 3(B)(2), 3(B)(4), and 3(B)(7), and was willful, prejudicial to the administration of justice, and brought the judicial office into disrepute. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Vess, 10 So. 3d 486 (Miss. 2009).

Judge's actions in engaging in ex parte communications with community members constituted willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice which brought the judicial office into disrepute, Miss. Const. Art. 6, § 177A; the judge's actions violated Miss. Code Jud. Canons 1, 2A, 2B, 3B(2), and 3B(7); he was publicly reprimanded and suspended for sixty days. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Carr, 990 So. 2d 763 (Miss. 2008).

Justice court judge was publicly reprimanded and assessed costs as he committed willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice which brought the office into disrepute in violation of Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2A, 3B(2), 3B(4), 3B(7), 3B(8), and 3C(1) by, among other things, engaging in ex parte communications with litigants, which created the perception that his decisions were not made independently and that he would not deal honestly with all litigants in his court. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Sutton, 985 So. 2d 322 (Miss. 2008).

County judge was ordered to be publicly reprimanded and suspended for 30 days because he repeatedly engaged in prohibited ex parte conversations with a litigant and offered advice as to actions that the litigant should take to advance her case. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Fowlkes, 967 So. 2d 12 (Miss. 2007).

Where a justice court judge acted to cause a complaining officer to not show up for trial so that drunk driving charges could be dismissed for failure to prosecute, the Mississippi Supreme Court held, under Miss. Const. Art. 6, § 177A, that the offense involved moral turpitude, and imposed a 30-day suspension upon the judge. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Sanford, 941 So. 2d 209 (Miss. 2006).

Recommendation for a public reprimand was not adopted since it was too lenient for a judge who committed willful misconduct under Miss. Const. Art. 6, § 177A by violating Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2A, 3B(2), 3B(7), 3B(8), and 3C(1) when he engaged in improper ex parte communications; moreover, he ignored Miss. Code Ann. § 9-11-33 and Miss. Unif. R. P. J. Ct. 2.06 when he set aside a final judgment and interfered with orders handed down by another judge. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Britton, 936 So. 2d 898 (Miss. 2006).

A judge violated § 9-11-11 and Canons 1, 2A, 2B, 3A(1), 3A(4), 3A(5), and 3B(1) where he failed to promptly dispose of the court's business and discharge his administrative duties, he allowed his relationship with the court clerk to affect his duties, and he engaged in ex parte communications which required his recusal in 44 cases within a short period of time. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Spencer, 725 So. 2d 171 (Miss. 1998).

A judge's conduct of numerous ex parte communications violated Canons 1, 2A, 2B, 3A(1), 3A(2), 3A(3), and 3A(4), and constituted willful misconduct in office prejudicial to the administration of justice. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Spencer, 725 So. 2d 171 (Miss. 1998).

Judge's communications with detainee, her mother, arresting officer, and prosecuting attorney, and his interference with detainee's bonding process, constituted willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to administration of justice, warranting public reprimand and taxation of costs. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Vess, 692 So. 2d 80 (Miss. 1997).

Justice court judge was publicly reprimanded, fined $1,450 and assessed costs, for dismissing speeding and traffic tickets, and for holding ex parte communications with defendants. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Bowen, 662 So. 2d 551 (Miss. 1995).

Where justice court judge directed that judgment in a particular case be held, and later attempted to change the judgment after ex parte communications with a party, his actions were improper and warranted public reprimand and fine of $250. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Underwood, 644 So. 2d 458 (Miss. 1994).

Justice court judge was removed from office for continuing misconduct involving ticket fixing and adjudicating criminal matters without a hearing or notice to officer. In re Hearn, 542 So. 2d 901 (Miss. 1989).

Miscellaneous misconduct.

While the judge did delay in issuing a ruling in a case in violation of Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 1, 2A, 3B(8) and 3C(1), the court did not find willfulness under Miss. Const., art. 6, § 177A(b), (c) but did find negligence. The judge testified that he was presented a case of first impression for him and that it wasn't his intention that it be held up, and the summary judgment hearing was held approximately ten days after he had started treatment for a serious medical condition, with those treatments continuing for a period of several months. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Agin, 17 So. 3d 578 (Miss. 2009).

Judge's remarks violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2(A) & (B), 3(B)(5), constituting willful misconduct in the judicial office which brought the judicial office into disrepute, thus causing the judge's conduct to be actionable pursuant to Miss. Const. Art. 6, § 177A; the judge's comments were disparaging results and not matters of legitimate public concern and went beyond the realm of protected campaign speech. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Osborne, — So. 2d —, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 9 (Miss. Feb. 5, 2009), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 11 So. 3d 107, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 278 (Miss. 2009).

Mississippi Commission on Judicial Performance had no direct authority or power to order punishment on a justice court judge after a formal complaint was filed, alleging violations of Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2A, 3B(2), 3B(5), 3B(7), and 3B(8); a memorandum of understanding reached between the judge and the Commission was considered by the court but was not binding on the court in assessing the judge's punishment. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Martin, 995 So. 2d 727 (Miss. 2008).

Judge was publicly reprimanded and assessed costs of $ 100 because the judge violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2A, 3B(8), and 3C(1) by failing to timely issue rulings in cases; the judge established a pattern of delays in rendering opinions, giving the appearance that the judge failed diligently to perform judicial duties. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Agin, 987 So. 2d 418 (Miss. 2008).

Facts of the judge's case were that, in her capacity as judge, she made a derogatory, public statement concerning African-American members of her community; while the statement was insulting as opposed to a chargeable, dishonest act, the statement brought the integrity of the judiciary into question. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Boland, 975 So. 2d 882 (Miss. 2008).

Where a judge breached the peace during the repossession of an automobile jointly owned by the judge's wife and mother-in-law, his conduct violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 1. Pursuant to Miss. Const. Art. 6, § 177A, the Supreme Court of Mississippi suspended the judge for 180 days without compensation. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Osborne, 977 So. 2d 314 (Miss. 2008).

Where a judge violated Canons 1, 2B and 3B(2) of the Code of Judicial Conduct by expressing anger at a second judge for refusing to talk with him before signing an arrest warrant, and then instructing a deputy clerk not to issue the warrant, public reprimand was appropriate because such conduct created the appearance that the judge might be partial to certain interests and brought the judicial office into disrepute. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Thompson, 972 So. 2d 582 (Miss. 2008).

Where the Mississippi Commission on Judicial Performance, acting on information from a police officer, filed a formal complaint against a municipal court judge, accusing the judge of inappropriately engaging in "fixing" traffic tickets, it was determined that the judge used his position to fix tickets by "passing" them to the file without requiring defendants to appear and over the objections from the issuing officer; clear and convincing evidence showed that the judge's actions violated numerous Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons as well as Miss. Const. Art. 6, § 177A; whether the judge's actions were actually willful was of no consequence because the result was the same regardless of whether bad faith or negligence and ignorance were involved and warranted sanctions. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Gordon, 955 So. 2d 300 (Miss. 2007).

Removal from office was an appropriate punishment for a judge who interfered with the prosecution of a domestic violence and assault case against the judge's son because the judge's misuse of the power of his office evidenced his disregard for the administration of justice. By attempting to use his position to obtain favorable treatment for his son and obstruct the prosecution, the judge discredited the dignity and integrity of his office and the judiciary in violation of Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 1. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Brown, 918 So. 2d 1247 (Miss. 2005).

State supreme court granted a joint motion for the approval of the recommendation of sanctions against a judge who violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3(E) by participating in proceedings where there was an admitted conflict of interest, and committed willful misconduct that brought the judicial office into disrepute. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Cowart, 936 So. 2d 343 (Miss. 2006).

In handling several matters set before his court, a judge was found to be in violation of the Miss. Code of Jud. Conduct as well as the Mississippi Constitution where the judge ackowledged that his actions, in refusing to allow a defendant to present evidence, in presiding over a probation revocation matter in which there were recusal issues, in trying a defendant in absentia, and in revoking bail and issuing an arrest warrant, violated the Code of Judicial Conduct; public reprimand, suspension from office, and assessment of a fine and costs were warranted. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Roberts, 952 So. 2d 934 (Miss. 2007).

Petitions for writ of mandamus for the recusal of a circuit judge in seven pending civil cases in which an attorney appeared were granted, pursuant to Miss. Code Judge. Conduct Canon 3(E)(1), as the impartiality of the judge towards the attorney was questioned and a reasonable person aware of all the circumstances would question whether the attorney's clients could get a fair hearing in the judge's court; however, the petitions were denied to the extent that they requested the judge's recusal in future cases in which the attorney appeared, as it was not the Supreme Court of Mississippi's practice to grant prospective recusal. In re Blake, 912 So. 2d 907 (Miss. 2005).

Judge's suspension of the fines and State assessments were in response to the county's lack of funding for a court bailiff, and said conduct constituted willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice which brought the judicial office into disrepute. However, the record did not show any other incidents that demonstrated that his behavior evidenced a pattern of conduct, there was no moral turpitude involved, and mitigating circumstances were also present in light of the fact that the judge acknowledged the inappropriateness of his conduct and was in agreement with the findings of the Mississippi Commission of Judicial Performance; thus, a public reprimand, a fine, and payment of the costs of the proceedings was a proper sanction. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Sheffield, 883 So. 2d 546 (Miss. 2004).

While acting in an official capacity, judge violated Miss. Const. Art. VI, § 177A, Miss. Code Ann. § 9-11-33, and Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2A, 2B, 3A, 3B(2), 3B(7), 3(B)(8), 3C(1), 3C(2), 4A, and 4D(1), in conducting ex parte communications with parties, rendering decisions without giving notice of hearings to parties, and habitually taking civil cases under advisement and failing to render timely decisions; a public reprimand, suspension for 30 days without pay, and payment of the costs of the proceeding was held to be appropriate discipline. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. McPhail, 874 So. 2d 441 (Miss. 2004).

Judge's actions involving the issuance of an ex parte temporary order changing child custody without notice to the nonmovant, without providing a copy of the order to the nonmovant, and later refusing to allow the nonmovant to be heard, constituted willful misconduct in violation of Miss. Const. Art. 6, § 177A and Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2A, 3A(1) and (4), and 3B(1). Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Perdue, 853 So. 2d 85 (Miss. 2003).

Although there was no proof that a judge willfully intended to misuse a sentencing statute, where she did misuse it and subsequently did nothing to correct her error, and also made a false statement under oath regarding the sentencing, she violated canons 1, 2, and 3. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Byers, 757 So. 2d 961 (Miss. 2000).

The record supported the conclusion that a judge's offensive comments to members of the court staff constituted gross personal conduct in violation of Canons 1, 2A, 2B, 3A(1), 3A(3) and 3B(1). Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Spencer, 725 So. 2d 171 (Miss. 1998).

Judge's irregularities and improprieties, both on and off the bench, amounted to willful misconduct in office; sanctions of public reprimand, $1,500 fine, and thirty day suspension without pay were appropriate in light of judge's prior discipline for similar conduct. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Franklin, 704 So. 2d 89 (Miss. 1997).

Justice court judge was publicly reprimanded, fined $2,628.00, and assessed costs, for numerous violations and irregularities in the disposition of various cases. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Emmanuel, 688 So. 2d 222 (Miss. 1996).

Justice court judge was removed from office for misconduct in the performance of his judicial duties, in view of the number of offenses committed as well as his denial of any wrongdoing. Mississippi Judicial Performance Comm'n v. Hopkins, 590 So. 2d 857 (Miss. 1991).

It was immaterial that justice court judge may not have known the law, that he was negligent, or that he did not understand the law; removal from office was warranted, where judge failed to file 28 of his DUI adjudications and 552 other routine traffic offenses with the Department of Public Safety. In re Quick, 553 So. 2d 522 (Miss. 1989).

Justice court judge was publicly censured, fined $500, and suspended without pay for thirty days, for ordering or allowing an improper alteration of official court records, and for refusing to allow a debtor-defendant to redeem property replevined in his court and then purchasing the property himself at a price which appeared to be below market value. In re Mullen, 530 So. 2d 175 (Miss. 1988).

Justice court judge was publicly reprimanded and fined $250, for improper conduct in handling of speeding tickets, D.U.I. charges, and criminal bad check cases, and for interference with orderly assignment of cases by the justice court clerk. In re Hearn, 515 So. 2d 1225 (Miss. 1987).

Mishandling of funds.

Former judge's failure to pay office-related charges to vendors after being reimbursed for such charges by the State was willful misconduct prejudicial to the administration of justice which brought the judicial office into disrepute, and he was publicly reprimanded. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Teel, 863 So. 2d 973 (Miss. 2004).

Justice court judge was removed from the bench and assessed costs, on charges of judicial misconduct including: entering orders without authority, accepting money without authority, acting outside his legal authority to sign an execution of judgment, improper handling of DUI charges, and interference with rotation of cases. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Dodds, 680 So. 2d 180 (Miss. 1996).

Judge was removed from office for his misappropriation and mishandling of money collected by virtue of his office as justice court judge. In re Stewart, 490 So. 2d 882 (Miss. 1986).

Justice court judge was fined $1,400, publicly reprimanded, and removed from office for misappropriation of funds over a period of seven years. In re Brown, 458 So. 2d 681 (Miss. 1984).

Justice court judge was removed from office for mishandling and unlawfully converting public money to his own use. In re Anderson, 412 So. 2d 743 (Miss. 1982).

Personal conduct.

Order that the judge be suspended from office for a period of one year was appropriate because his disparaging racial remarks were not protected speech under either the federal or state constitution. The judge's remarks violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2(A) and (B), and

3(B)(5), thus causing the judge's conduct to be actionable under Miss. Const. Art. VI, § 177A. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Osborne, 11 So. 3d 107 (Miss. 2009).

Judge was publicly reprimanded, assessed costs of proceedings, and fined after he and a woman wrote over $ 330,000 in bad checks for a house and motor vehicles, because any economic injury suffered by the businesses visited by the judge and the woman had been repaid. Although writing checks for insufficient funds was reprehensible conduct for a judge, usually it had to be in conjunction with some other inappropriate act or acts before warranting removal. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Hartzog, 904 So. 2d 981 (Miss. 2004).

Where a county judge had filed new actions within six months of his appointment after misinterpreting the law in Miss. Code Ann. §§ 9-1-25, 9-9-9, the appellate court held that the judge had not willfully abused the privilege of filing new complaints while in office, and the court adopted the commission's recommendation that the judge be publicly reprimanded and that he be reinstated after his temporary suspension. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Osborne, 876 So. 2d 324 (Miss. 2004).

Where a county judge had filed new actions within six months of his appointment after misinterpreting the law in Miss. Code Ann. §§ 9-1-25, 9-9-9, the appellate court held that the judge had not willfully abused the privilege of filing new complaints while in office, and the court adopted the commission's recommendation that the judge be publicly reprimanded and that he be reinstated after his temporary suspension. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Osborne, 876 So. 2d 324 (Miss. 2004).

A judge violated Canons 1 and 2A where he was arrested for and pleaded guilty to first offenses driving under the influence. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Thomas, 722 So. 2d 629 (Miss. 1998).

Municipal judge who used firearm to detain three individuals on his neighbor's property, and who shot out a tire on their vehicle in the process, received sanctions of public reprimand, fine of $2,500, and assessment of costs. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Whitten, 687 So. 2d 744 (Miss. 1997).

Justice court judge's relationship with defendant who appeared before her, and her subsequent marriage to that individual, damaged reputation and integrity of her judicial office and justified her removal from office. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Milling, 651 So. 2d 531 (Miss. 1995).

Canon 2. A judge shall avoid impropriety and the appearance of impropriety in all activities.

A. A judge should respect and comply with the law and should conduct himself at all times in a manner that promotes public confidence in the integrity and impartiality of the judiciary.

Commentary

Public confidence in the judiciary is eroded by irresponsible or improper conduct by judges. A judge must avoid all impropriety and appearance of impropriety. A judge must expect to be the subject of constant public scrutiny. A judge must therefore accept restrictions on the judge's conduct that might be viewed as burdensome by the ordinary citizen and should do so freely and willingly.

The prohibition against behaving with impropriety or the appearance of impropriety applies to both the professional and personal conduct of a judge. Because it is not practicable to list all prohibited acts, the proscription is necessarily cast in general terms that extend to conduct by judges that is harmful although not specifically mentioned in the Code. Actual improprieties under this standard include violations of law, court rules or other specific provisions of this Code. The test for appearance of impropriety is whether, based on the conduct, the judge's impartiality might be questioned by a reasonable person knowing all the circumstances.

B. Judges shall not allow their family, social, or other relationships to influence the judges' judicial conduct or judgment. Judges shall not lend the prestige of their offices to advance the private interests of the judges or others; nor shall judges convey or permit others to convey the impression that they are in a special position to influence the judges. Judges shall not testify voluntarily as character witnesses.

Commentary

Maintaining the prestige of judicial office is essential to a system of government in which the judiciary functions independently of the executive and legislative branches. Respect for the judicial office facilitates the orderly conduct of legitimate judicial functions. Judges should distinguish between proper and improper use of the prestige of office in all of their activities. For example, it would be improper for judges to allude to their judgeships to gain a personal advantage such as deferential treatment when stopped by a police officer for a traffic offense. Similarly, judicial letterhead must not be used for conducting a judge's personal business.

A judge must avoid lending the prestige of judicial office for the advancement of the private interests of others. For example, a judge must not use the judge's judicial position to gain advantage in a civil suit involving a member of the judge's family. In contracts for publication of a judge's writings, a judge should retain control over the advertising to avoid exploitation of the judge's office.

Although a judge should be sensitive to possible abuse of the prestige of office, a judge may, based on the judge's personal knowledge, serve as a reference or provide a letter of recommendation. However, a judge must not initiate the communication of information to a sentencing judge or a probation or corrections officer but may provide to such persons information for the record in response to a formal request.

Judges may participate in the process of judicial selection by cooperating with appointing authorities and screening committees seeking names for consideration, and by responding to official inquiries concerning a person being considered for a judgeship. See also Canon 5 regarding use of a judge's name in political activities.

A judge must not testify voluntarily as a character witness because to do so may lend the prestige of the judicial office in support of the party for whom the judge testifies. Moreover, when a judge testifies as a witness, a lawyer who regularly appears before the judge may be placed in the awkward position of cross-examining the judge. A judge may, however, testify when properly summoned. Except in unusual circumstances where the demands of justice require, a judge should discourage a party from requiring the judge to testify as a character witness.

C. A judge shall not hold membership in any organization that practices invidious discrimination on the basis of race, gender, religion or national origin.

Commentary

Membership of a judge in an organization that practices invidious discrimination gives rise to perceptions that the judge's impartiality is impaired. Section 2C refers to the current practices of the organization. Whether an organization practices invidious discrimination is often a complex question to which judges should be sensitive. The answer cannot be determined from a mere examination of an organization's current membership rolls but rather depends on how the organization selects members and other relevant factors, such as that the organization is dedicated to the preservation of religious, ethnic or cultural values of legitimate common interest to its members, or that it is in fact and effect an intimate, purely private organization whose membership limitations could not be constitutionally prohibited. Absent such factors, an organization is generally said to discriminate invidiously if it arbitrarily excludes from membership on the basis of race, religion, gender or national origin persons who would otherwise be admitted to membership. See New York State Club Ass'n. v. City of New York, U.S. , 108 S.Ct. 2225, 101 L.Ed.2d 1 (1988); Board of Directors of Rotary International v. Rotary Club of Duarte, 481 U.S. 537, 107 S.Ct. 1940, 95 L.Ed.2d 474 (1987); Roberts v. United States Jaycees, 468 U.S. 609, 104 S.Ct. 3244, 82 L.Ed.2d 462 (1984).

Although Section 2C relates only to membership in organizations that invidiously discriminate on the basis of race, gender, religion or national origin, a judge's membership in an organization that engages in any discriminatory membership practices prohibited by the law of the jurisdiction also violates Canon 2 and Section 2A and gives the appearance of impropriety. In addition, it would be a violation of Canon 2 and Section 2A for a judge to arrange a meeting at a club that the judge knows practices invidious discrimination on the basis of race, gender, religion or national origin in its membership or other policies, or for the judge to regularly use such a club. Moreover, public manifestation by a judge of the judge's knowing approval of invidious discrimination on any basis gives the appearance of impropriety under Canon 2 and diminishes public confidence in the integrity and impartiality of the judiciary, in violation of Section 2A.

When a person who is a judge on the date this Code becomes effective learns that an organization to which the judge belongs engages in invidious discrimination that would preclude membership under Section 2C or under Canon 2 and Section 2A, the judge is permitted, in lieu of resigning, to make immediate efforts to have the organization discontinue its invidiously discriminatory practices, but is required to suspend participation in any other activities of the organization. If the organization fails to discontinue its invidiously discriminatory practices as promptly as possible (and in all events within a year of the judge's first learning of the practices), the judge is required to resign immediately from the organization.

Appearance of impropriety.

Judge's statement concerning the African Americans within her community might be questioned by a reasonable person knowing all the circumstances, and thus, it met the test for impropriety. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Boland, 975 So. 2d 882 (Miss. 2008).

Where a judge violated Canons 1, 2B and 3B(2) of the Code of Judicial Conduct by expressing anger at a second judge for refusing to talk with him before signing an arrest warrant, and then instructing a deputy clerk not to issue the warrant, public reprimand was appropriate because such conduct created the appearance that the judge might be partial to certain interests and brought the judicial office into disrepute. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Thompson, 972 So. 2d 582 (Miss. 2008).

County justice court judge was publicly reprimanded for violating Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2(A), 2(B), 3(B)(2), 4(A)(1)-(3) as he ordered that his grandson's driver's license be reinstated (after the grandson pled nolo contendere to DUI) and attempted to have a sheriff allow the grandson to serve his time in a local jail instead of a state facility. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Cole, 932 So. 2d 9 (Miss. 2006).

Removal from office was an appropriate punishment for a judge who interfered with the prosecution of a domestic violence and assault case against the judge's son because the judge's conduct not only created the appearance of an impropriety but also constituted an actual impropriety in violation of Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 2. By threatening the complainant, his son's ex-wife, the judge attempted to "muzzle" the authority of the Commission on Judicial Performance which, in turn, served to diminish public confidence that the judiciary was honest and impartial; and by using his office to improperly influence other officers of the judicial system, the judge both created the appearance of impropriety and committed an actual impropriety, which would tend to erode public confidence in the impartiality of the judiciary. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Brown, 918 So. 2d 1247 (Miss. 2005).

In the context of recusal of a judge, and the presumption that a judge is qualified and unbiased, the stringent "beyond a reasonable doubt" burden is incompatible with the standard of a hypothetical "reasonable person knowing all the circumstances." The proper standard is that recusal is required when the evidence produces a "reasonable doubt" as to the judge's impartiality. Dodson v. Singing River Hosp. Sys., 839 So. 2d 530 (Miss. 2003).

In patient's suit against hospital, where a large firm represented the hospital, one of the firm's partners had served as treasurer in the judge's election campaign, and other lawyers from the firm had represented the judge and his wife for four years in a defective residential construction case, without charge. Under a totality of the circumstances analysis, a reasonable person could have had reasonable doubts as to the judge's impartiality, and the patient was entitled to a new trial before another trial judge. Dodson v. Singing River Hosp. Sys., 839 So. 2d 530 (Miss. 2003).

Standing alone, special chancellor's failure to recuse himself in light of his contact with husband in divorce proceeding was not reversible error. Robinson v. Irwin, 546 So. 2d 683 (Miss. 1989).

Conflict of interest.

Where a judge established a relationship with various persons by assisting them in locating a barge landing site for a county landfill and used his position as judge for their benefit by appearing before the county board of supervisors, he violated Canons 1, 2 A, 2 B, 3 A(1) and 5 C(1). Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Jenkins, 725 So. 2d 162 (Miss. 1998).

Where a judge allowed intervention in a will contest by a company that he was assisting in locating a barge landing site for a county landfill, at the same time that he was negotiating with the proponent of the will, and ruled in favor of the company, he violated Canons 1, 2 A, 2 B, 3 A(1), 3 A(4), 3 C, 3 D, 5 C(1) and 5 F. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Jenkins, 725 So. 2d 162 (Miss. 1998).

The judge's conduct violated Canons 1, 2, and 3 of the Code of Judicial Conduct when he came down from the bench, grabbed defendant around the head, used racial epithets and other inappropriate language, and then denied ever having met the defendant previously, when in fact, he had met him during a prior confrontation relating to the judge's private business. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Guest, 717 So. 2d 325 (Miss. 1998).

Judge who served part-time—pro tem as a municipal court judge, and also engaged in private criminal defense practice, received sanction of public reprimand for assuming role of attorney, and presumably accepting a fee, for representing a defendant and attempting to reduce the same bond which he, as city judge, had earlier set for that defendant. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Atkinson, 645 So. 2d 1331 (Miss. 1994).

Judge did not violate this canon by refusing to recuse himself from sitting at defendant's trial on charges of embezzlement; although judge had known defendant for approximately nine years, there was no indication of any bias or prejudice for or against him. Medley v. State, 600 So. 2d 957 (Miss. 1992).

Justice court judge violated this canon by disrupting court proceedings, accusing another judge and wildlife officers of impropriety, and acting on behalf of criminal defendants. In re Cooksey, 515 So. 2d 957 (Miss. 1987).

Exceeding scope of authority.

Public reprimand against a judge was proper because he misused the powers of contempt and violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 3(B)(2), and 3(B)(8) when he held a defendant in criminal contempt for failing to recite the pledge of allegiance in open court. He violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 2(A) and 3(B)(4) by incarcerating the defendant for expressing his rights under U.S. Const. amend. I. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Littlejohn, 62 So. 3d 968 (Miss. 2011).

Order that the judge be suspended for 30 days from office without pay, along with a public reprimand, a fine, and an assessment of costs was appropriate because he violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2(A), (B), 3(A), (B)(1), (B)(2), and 3(B)(7) and his egregious actions constituted willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice. By involving himself in another judge's cases and attempting to assist defendants with their tickets, the judge compromised the integrity and independence of the judiciary and his actions created an impression that certain defendants were in a special position to influence him. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. McKenzie, 63 So. 3d 1219 (Miss. 2011).

Chancellor was publicly reprimanded for misconduct in violation of, inter alia, Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 1, 2A, 3B(2), 3C(1) because the chancellor had issued subpoenas to two members of county board of supervisors, and during a later meeting with the board of supervisors, the chancellor admitted that he had failed to comply with the law in doing so; further, the commission found by clear and convincing evidence that the chancellor had engaged in willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice which brought the office into disrepute, under Miss. Const. art. VI, § 177A. The record did not indicate any aggravating factors. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Buffington, 55 So. 3d 167 (Miss. 2011).

Removal of the judge from office was appropriate because he violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2(A), and 3(E) when he committed a minor child to detention after recusing himself from the case and then entered an order appointing another judge to hear the case without authority. His actions constituted willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice and his assertion that his actions were a mere error of law was without merit. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Osborne, 16 So. 3d 16 (Miss. 2009).

Mississippi Commission on Judicial Performance's finding that a justice court judge violated Miss. Code Ann. §§ 99-23-1, 99-23-5, 99-23-13, and Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2A, 2B, 3(B)(2), 3(B)(4), 3(B)(7), 3(B)(8), 3(C)(1), and Miss. Const. Art. VI, § 177A, was clearly and convincingly supported by the record because the judge exceeded her authority in repeatedly entering unlawful orders pertaining to peace bonds resulting in the incarceration of an accused. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Boland, 998 So. 2d 380 (Miss. 2008).

A judge's failure to follow the correct procedural safeguards of giving one accused of contempt a specific charge, notice, and a hearing eroded the public's confidence in the judge's ability to sit as a justice court judge and thus violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 2A. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Willard, 788 So. 2d 736 (Miss. 2001).

Although a judge's conduct in entering orders regarding a defendant at the same time the senior judge was also entering orders regarding that defendant in some of the same cases did not evidence the level of civility and professionalism expected of judges, the judge's conduct did not constitute a violation of the statute. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Byers, 757 So. 2d 961 (Miss. 2000).

A judge abused her contempt powers and thereby violated Canons 1, 2, and 3 when she held a newspaper reporter in contempt and put her in jail without following the proper procedures. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Byers, 757 So. 2d 961 (Miss. 2000).

Circuit court judge was not required to pay the fine that was recommended by the Mississippi Commission on Judicial Performance, but was publicly reprimanded and assessed costs for violating the canons of judicial conduct by abusing her contempt powers and illegally expunging the drug convictions of two persons. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Sanders, 749 So. 2d 1062 (Miss. 1999).

A judge violated Section 177A of the Mississippi Constitution of 1890, as amended and judicial canons 1, 2A, 2B, and 3A(1) of the Mississippi Code of Judicial Conduct when he willfully and improperly reduced DUI charges against several defendants, and he would be publicly reprimanded, fined $1,500, and ordered to pay all costs associated with the case. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Jones, 735 So. 2d 385 (Miss. 1999).

Where a judge suspended the sentences previously entered in two cases with the full knowledge that she lacked jurisdiction to enter such orders and without considering the Uniform Post Conviction Relief Act, she violated Canons 1, 2A, 3A(1), 3A(4), and 3B(1) of the Code of Judicial Conduct. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Sanders, 708 So. 2d 866 (Miss. 1998).

Judge was publicly reprimanded, fined $1500, and taxed with costs for his post-sentencing release of four state prisoners in excess of his authority. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Russell, 691 So. 2d 929 (Miss. 1997), reh'g denied, 693 So. 2d 384 (Miss. 1997).

Municipal court judge who incarcerated a defendant without notice or hearing, and who sentenced a defendant to more jail time than allowed by law and found same defendant guilty of perjury based upon judge's own affidavit and warrant, was sanctioned by public reprimand and taxation of costs. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Fletcher, 686 So. 2d 1075 (Miss. 1996).

Justice court judge abused his authority by failing to comply with acknowledgment that he executed, and by entering orders in cases which were not pending before his court, justifying public reprimand and assessment of costs. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Hartzog, 646 So. 2d 1319 (Miss. 1994).

Where justice court judge found litigant in contempt for what judge perceived as a direct attack on him personally, rather than on the court, judge's action was in direct violation of case law and Code of Judicial Conduct, and constituted willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to administration of justice. Mississippi Judicial Performance Comm'n v. Walker, 565 So. 2d 1117 (Miss. 1990).

Justice court judge was removed from office for continuing misconduct involving ticket fixing and adjudicating criminal matters without a hearing or notice to officer. In re Hearn, 542 So. 2d 901 (Miss. 1989).

Justice court judge was publicly reprimanded for mishandling an eviction and past due rent case, which culminated in judge's ordering tenant imprisoned for non-payment of civil debt. In re Bailey, 541 So. 2d 1036 (Miss. 1989).

Justice court judge was publicly censured, fined $500, and suspended without pay for thirty days, for ordering or allowing an improper alteration of official court records, and for refusing to allow a debtor-defendant to redeem property replevined in his court and then purchasing the property himself at a price which appeared to be below market value. In re Mullen, 530 So. 2d 175 (Miss. 1988).

County court judge was removed from office for charging excessive fines, using county prisoners for personal and county work, and deciding more than 100 misdemeanor cases "off the record," for which there were no case files, docket entries, or other records of filing or disposition in office of circuit clerk. In re Collins, 524 So. 2d 553 (Miss. 1987).

Justice court judge was publicly reprimanded and fined $250, for improper conduct in handling of speeding tickets, D.U.I. charges, and criminal bad check cases, and for interference with orderly assignment of cases by the justice court clerk. In re Hearn, 515 So. 2d 1225 (Miss. 1987).

Failure to sign documents.

Justice court judge received private reprimand for first infraction involving collecting fines, failing to sign criminal dockets, and dismissal of tickets, where there was no intent to be detrimental to law enforcement or judicial fairness, and no hint of dishonesty or attempt to gain political favor. Mississippi Judicial Performance Comm'n v. Justice Court Judge, 580 So. 2d 1259 (Miss. 1991).

Sanction of public reprimand and fine of $500 was not too harsh a punishment for judge's improper dismissal of non-moving violations and traffic tickets, assessment of excessive fees and costs, and failure to sign court dockets. Mississippi Judicial Performance Comm'n v. Cowart, 566 So. 2d 1251 (Miss. 1990).

Improper communications.

Justice court judge was suspended from office for ninety days without pay and was publicly reprimanded for violating Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2A, 2B, 3B(2), 3B(4), 4A, and Miss. Const. art. 6, § 177A, where the judge engaged in ex parte communications with a female litigant and inappropriately handled a fine reduction. Allegations that the judge made sexual advances toward the female litigant were not established by clear and convincing evidence. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Boone, 60 So. 3d 172 (Miss. 2011).

Public reprimand imposed against a judge was proper because he had engaged in ex parte communications with parties involved in a disturbance-of-the-peace case and also entered a plea of not guilty for one of the parties. That misconduct violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2(A), 2(B), 3(B)(2), 3(B)(4), and 3(B)(7), and was willful, prejudicial to the administration of justice, and brought the judicial office into disrepute. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Vess, 10 So. 3d 486 (Miss. 2009).

Judge's actions in engaging in ex parte communications with community members constituted willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice which brought the judicial office into disrepute, Miss. Const. Art. 6, § 177A; the judge's actions violated Miss. Code Jud. Canons 1, 2A, 2B, 3B(2), and 3B(7); he was publicly reprimanded and suspended for sixty days. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Carr, 990 So. 2d 763 (Miss. 2008).

Justice court judge was publicly reprimanded and assessed costs as he committed willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice which brought the office into disrepute in violation of Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2A, 3B(2), 3B(4), 3B(7), 3B(8), and 3C(1) by, among other things, issuing orders based on information obtained from ex parte communications with tenants in a landlord-tenant case. This conduct indicated partiality towards the tenants and did not promote public confidence in the judge's integrity and impartiality. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Sutton, 985 So. 2d 322 (Miss. 2008).

County judge was ordered to be publicly reprimanded and suspended for 30 days because he repeatedly engaged in prohibited ex parte conversations with a litigant and offered advice as to actions that the litigant should take to advance her case. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Fowlkes, 967 So. 2d 12 (Miss. 2007).

Where a justice court judge acted to cause a complaining officer to not show up for trial so that drunk driving charges could be dismissed for failure to prosecute, the Mississippi Supreme Court held, under Miss. Const. Art. 6, § 177A, that the offense involved moral turpitude, and imposed a 30-day suspension upon the judge. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Sanford, 941 So. 2d 209 (Miss. 2006).

Recommendation for a public reprimand was not adopted since it was too lenient for a judge who committed willful misconduct under Miss. Const. Art. 6, § 177A by violating Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2A, 3B(2), 3B(7), 3B(8), and 3C(1) when he engaged in improper ex parte communications; moreover, he ignored Miss. Code Ann. § 9-11-33 and Miss. Unif. R. P. J. Ct. 2.06 when he set aside a final judgment and interfered with orders handed down by another judge. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Britton, 936 So. 2d 898 (Miss. 2006).

While acting in an official capacity, judge violated Miss. Const. Art. VI, § 177A, Miss. Code Ann. § 9-11-33, and Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2(A), 2(B), 3(A), 3(B)(2), 3(B)(7), 3(B)(8), 3(C)(1), 3(C)(2), 4(A), and 4(D)(1), by conducting ex parte communications with parties, rendering decisions without giving notice of hearings to parties, and habitually taking civil cases under advisement and failing to render timely decisions; a public reprimand, suspension for 30 days without pay, and payment of the costs of the proceeding was held to be appropriate discipline. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. McPhail, 874 So. 2d 441 (Miss. 2004).

A judge violated § 9-11-11 and Canons 1, 2A, 2B, 3A(1), 3A(4), 3A(5), and 3B(1) where he failed to promptly dispose of the court's business and discharge his administrative duties, he allowed his relationship with the court clerk to affect his duties, and he engaged in ex parte communications which required his recusal in 44 cases within a short period of time. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Spencer, 725 So. 2d 171 (Miss. 1998).

A judge's conduct of numerous ex parte communications violated Canons 1, 2A, 2B, 3A(1), 3A(2), 3A(3), and 3A(4), and constituted willful misconduct in office prejudicial to the administration of justice. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Spencer, 725 So. 2d 171 (Miss. 1998).

Judge's communications with detainee, her mother, arresting officer, and prosecuting attorney, and his interference with detainee's bonding process, constituted willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to administration of justice, warranting public reprimand and taxation of costs. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Vess, 692 So. 2d 80 (Miss. 1997).

Justice court judge was publicly reprimanded, fined $1,450 and assessed costs, for dismissing speeding and traffic tickets, and for holding ex parte communications with defendants. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Bowen, 662 So. 2d 551 (Miss. 1995).

Where justice court judge directed that judgment in a particular case be held, and later attempted to change the judgment after ex parte communications with a party, his actions were improper and warranted public reprimand and fine of $250. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Underwood, 644 So. 2d 458 (Miss. 1994).

Justice court judge was removed from office for ticket fixing, ex parte communications, and abuse of his contempt powers. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Chinn, 611 So. 2d 849 (Miss. 1992).

Miscellaneous misconduct.

Judge's remarks violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2(A) & (B), 3(B)(5), constituting willful misconduct in the judicial office which brought the judicial office into disrepute, thus causing the judge's conduct to be actionable pursuant to Miss. Const. Art. 6, § 177A; the judge's comments were disparaging results and not matters of legitimate public concern and went beyond the realm of protected campaign speech. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Osborne, — So. 2d —, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 9 (Miss. Feb. 5, 2009), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 11 So. 3d 107, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 278 (Miss. 2009).

Mississippi Commission on Judicial Performance had no direct authority or power to order punishment on a justice court judge after a formal complaint was filed, alleging violations of Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2A, 3B(2), 3B(5), 3B(7), and 3B(8); a memorandum of understanding reached between the judge and the Commission was considered by the court but was not binding on the court in assessing the judge's punishment. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Martin, 995 So. 2d 727 (Miss. 2008).

Judge was publicly reprimanded and assessed costs of $ 100 because the judge violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2A, 3B(8), and 3C(1) by failing to timely issue rulings in cases; the judge established a pattern of delays in rendering opinions, giving the appearance that the judge failed diligently to perform judicial duties. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Agin, 987 So. 2d 418 (Miss. 2008).

Where a judge breached the peace during the repossession of an automobile jointly owned by the judge's wife and mother-in-law, his conduct violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 2A, B; the judge's reference to his knowledge of the law was a blatant attempt to use his office either as an advantage with the officers at the scene, or as an intimidation tactic. Pursuant to Miss. Const. Art. 6, § 177A, the Supreme Court of Mississippi suspended the judge for 180 days without compensation. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Osborne, 977 So. 2d 314 (Miss. 2008).

Where the Mississippi Commission on Judicial Performance, acting on information from a police officer, filed a formal complaint against a municipal court judge, accusing the judge of inappropriately engaging in "fixing" traffic tickets, it was determined that the judge used his position to fix tickets by "passing" them to the file without requiring defendants to appear and over the objections from the issuing officer; clear and convincing evidence showed that the judge's actions violated numerous Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons as well as Miss. Const. Art. 6, § 177A; whether the judge's actions were actually willful was of no consequence because the result was the same regardless of whether bad faith or negligence and ignorance were involved and warranted sanctions. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Gordon, 955 So. 2d 300 (Miss. 2007).

In handling several matters set before his court, a judge was found to be in violation of the Miss. Code of Jud. Conduct as well as the Mississippi Constitution where the judge ackowledged that his actions, in refusing to allow a defendant to present evidence, in presiding over a probation revocation matter in which there were recusal issues, in trying a defendant in absentia, and in revoking bail and issuing an arrest warrant, violated the Code of Judicial Conduct; public reprimand, suspension from office, and assessment of a fine and costs were warranted. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Roberts, 952 So. 2d 934 (Miss. 2007).

State supreme court granted a joint motion for the approval of the recommendation of sanctions against a judge who violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3(E) by participating in proceedings where there was an admitted conflict of interest, and committed willful misconduct that brought the judicial office into disrepute. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Cowart, 936 So. 2d 343 (Miss. 2006).

Judge's suspension of the fines and State assessments were in response to the county's lack of funding for a court bailiff, and said conduct constituted willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice which brought the judicial office into disrepute. However, the record did not show any other incidents that demonstrated that his behavior evidenced a pattern of conduct, there was no moral turpitude involved, and mitigating circumstances were also present in light of the fact that the judge acknowledged the inappropriateness of his conduct and was in agreement with the findings of the Mississippi Commission of Judicial Performance; thus, a public reprimand, a fine, and payment of the costs of the proceedings was a proper sanction. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Sheffield, 883 So. 2d 546 (Miss. 2004).

Judge's actions involving the issuance of an ex parte temporary order changing child custody without notice to the nonmovant, without providing a copy of the order to the nonmovant, and later refusing to allow the nonmovant to be heard, constituted willful misconduct in violation of Miss. Const. Art. 6, § 177A and Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2A, 3A(1) and (4), and 3B(1). Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Perdue, 853 So. 2d 85 (Miss. 2003).

Although there was no proof that a judge willfully intended to misuse a sentencing statute, where she did misuse it and subsequently did nothing to correct her error, and also made a false statement under oath regarding the sentencing, she violated canons 1, 2, and 3. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Byers, 757 So. 2d 961 (Miss. 2000).

Judge's irregularities and improprieties, both on and off the bench, amounted to willful misconduct in office; sanctions of public reprimand, $1,500 fine, and thirty day suspension without pay were appropriate in light of judge's prior discipline for similar conduct. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Franklin, 704 So. 2d 89 (Miss. 1997).

Justice court judge was publicly reprimanded, fined $2,628.00, and assessed costs, for numerous violations and irregularities in the disposition of various cases. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Emmanuel, 688 So. 2d 222 (Miss. 1996).

Justice court judge was removed from office for misconduct in the performance of his judicial duties, in view of the number of offenses committed as well as his denial of any wrongdoing. Mississippi Judicial Performance Comm'n v. Hopkins, 590 So. 2d 857 (Miss. 1991).

It was immaterial that justice court judge may not have known the law, that he was negligent, or that he did not understand the law; removal from office was warranted, where judge failed to file 28 of his DUI adjudications and 552 other routine traffic offenses with the Department of Public Safety. In re Quick, 553 So. 2d 522 (Miss. 1989).

Mishandling of funds.

Former judge's failure to pay office-related charges to vendors after being reimbursed for such charges by the State was willful misconduct prejudicial to the administration of justice which brought the judicial office into disrepute, and he was publicly reprimanded. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Teel, 863 So. 2d 973 (Miss. 2004).

Justice court judge was removed from the bench and assessed costs, on charges of judicial misconduct including: entering orders without authority, accepting money without authority, acting outside his legal authority to sign an execution of judgment, improper handling of DUI charges, and interference with rotation of cases.

Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Dodds, 680 So. 2d 180 (Miss. 1996).

Justice court judge was removed from office for using his judgeship for his own pecuniary benefit, where he collected fines or fees and failed to remit them to the court clerk. Mississippi Judicial Performance Comm'n v. Coleman, 553 So. 2d 513 (Miss. 1989).

Judge was removed from office for his misappropriation and mishandling of money collected by virtue of his office as justice court judge. In re Stewart, 490 So. 2d 882 (Miss. 1986).

Justice court judge was fined $1,400, publicly reprimanded, and removed from office for misappropriation of funds over a period of seven years. In re Brown, 458 So. 2d 681 (Miss. 1984).

Justice court judge violated this canon by utilizing criminal process or threat of criminal process to collect civil debts, failing to properly docket and process bad check cases, failing to collect civil court costs deposit in advance from merchants, failing to keep records required of his office, and collecting court costs from county in cases which were never docketed. In re Odom, 444 So. 2d 835 (Miss. 1984).

Justice court judge was fined and publicly reprimanded for using criminal process to collect civil debts, failing to properly docket and process bad checks, failing to properly collect and account for contributions to county law library fund, collecting fees in excess of statutory maximum and paying fees in excess of statutory maximum to court officials, and having a pecuniary interest in the outcome of litigation filed in his court. In re Lambert, 421 So. 2d 1023 (Miss. 1982).

Justice court judge was removed from office for mishandling and unlawfully converting public money to his own use. In re Anderson, 412 So. 2d 743 (Miss. 1982).

Negligence.

While the judge did delay in issuing a ruling in a case in violation of Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 1, 2A, 3B(8) and 3C(1), the court did not find willfulness under Miss. Const., art. 6, § 177A(b), (c), but did find negligence. The judge testified that he was presented a case of first impression for him and that it wasn't his intention that it be held up, and the summary judgment hearing was held approximately ten days after he had started treatment for a serious medical condition, with those treatments continuing for a period of several months. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Agin, 17 So. 3d 578 (Miss. 2009).

Misconduct or misfeasance of judges are not to be tolerated on any ground, particularly not on grounds of ignorance or incompetence. In re Garner, 466 So. 2d 884 (Miss. 1985).

A judge may, through negligence or ignorance not amounting to bad faith, behave in a manner prejudicial to administration of justice so as to bring judicial office into disrepute; result is the same, regardless of whether bad faith or negligence and ignorance are involved, and warrants sanctions. In re Anderson, 451 So. 2d 232 (Miss. 1984).

Personal conduct.

Order that the judge be suspended from office for a period of one year was appropriate because his disparaging racial remarks were not protected speech under either the federal or state constitution. The judge's remarks violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2(A) and (B), and 3(B)(5), thus causing the judge's conduct to be actionable under Miss. Const. art. VI, § 177A. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Osborne, 11 So. 3d 107 (Miss. 2009).

Judge was publicly reprimanded, assessed costs of proceedings, and fined after he and a woman wrote over $ 330,000 in bad checks for a house and motor vehicles because any economic injury suffered by the businesses visited by the judge and the woman had been repaid. Although writing checks for insufficient funds was reprehensible conduct for a judge, usually it had to be in conjunction with some other inappropriate act or acts before warranting removal. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Hartzog, 904 So. 2d 981 (Miss. 2004).

A judge violated Canons 1 and 2A where he was arrested for and pleaded guilty to first offenses driving under the influence. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Thomas, 722 So. 2d 629 (Miss. 1998).

The record supported the conclusion that a judge's offensive comments to members of the court staff constituted gross personal conduct in violation of Canons 1, 2A, 2B, 3A(1), 3A(3) and 3B(1). Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Spencer, 725 So. 2d 171 (Miss. 1998).

Municipal judge who used firearm to detain three individuals on his neighbor's property, and who shot out a tire on their vehicle in the process, received sanctions of public reprimand, fine of $2,500, and assessment of costs. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Whitten, 687 So. 2d 744 (Miss. 1997).

Justice court judge's relationship with defendant who appeared before her, and her subsequent marriage to that individual, damaged reputation and integrity of her judicial office and justified her removal from office. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Milling, 651 So. 2d 531 (Miss. 1995).

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

A judge should recuse himself to avoid a conflict of interest, and the nature of the charge against the accused would make no difference as to recusal. Miller, Feb. 3, 2006, A.G. Op. 06-0019.

ALR. Construction and Application of Rule of Necessity in Judicial Actions, Providing that a Judge Is Not Disqualified to Try a Case Because of Personal Interest If Case Cannot Be Heard Otherwise. 27 A.L.R.6th 403.

Canon 3. A judge shall perform the duties of judicial office impartially and diligently.

A. Judicial Duties in General. The judicial duties of judges take precedence over all their other activities. The judges' judicial duties include all the duties of their office prescribed by law. In the performance of these duties, the following standards apply:

B. Adjudicative Responsibilities.

(1) A judge shall hear and decide all assigned matters within the judge's jurisdiction except those in which disqualification is required.

(2) A judge shall be faithful to the law and maintain professional competence in it. A judge shall not be swayed by partisan interests, public clamor, or fear of criticism.

(3) A judge shall require order and decorum in proceedings before the judge.

(4) Judges shall be patient, dignified, and courteous to litigants, jurors, witnesses, lawyers, and others with whom they deal in their official capacities, and shall require similar conduct of lawyers, and of their staffs, court officials, and others subject to their direction and control.

Commentary

The duty to hear all proceedings fairly and with patience is not inconsistent with the duty to dispose promptly of the business of the court. Courts can be efficient and business like while being patient and deliberate.

(5) A judge shall perform judicial duties without bias or prejudice. A judge shall not, in the performance of judicial duties, by words or conduct manifest bias or prejudice, including but not limited to bias or prejudice based upon race, gender, religion, national origin, disability, age, sexual orientation or socioeconomic status, and shall not permit staff, court officials and others subject to the judge's direction and control to do so. A judge shall refrain from speech, gestures or other conduct that could reasonably be perceived as sexual harassment and shall require the same standard of conduct of others subject to the judge's direction and control.

Commentary

A judge must perform judicial duties impartially and fairly. A judge who manifests bias on any basis in a proceeding impairs the fairness of the proceeding and brings the judiciary into disrepute. Facial expression and body language, in addition to oral communication, can give to parties or lawyers in the proceeding, jurors, the media and others an appearance of judicial bias. A judge must be alert to avoid behavior that may be perceived as prejudicial.

(6) A judge shall require lawyers in proceedings before the judge to refrain from manifesting, by words or conduct, bias or prejudice based upon race, gender, religion, national origin, disability, age, sexual orientation or socioeconomic status, against parties, witnesses, counsel or others. This Section 3B(6) does not preclude legitimate advocacy when race, gender, religion, national origin, disability, age, sexual orientation or socioeconomic status, or other similar factors, are issues in the proceeding.

(7) A judge shall accord to all who are legally interested in a proceeding, or their lawyers, the right to be heard according to law. A judge shall not initiate, permit, or consider ex parte communications, or consider other communications made to the judge outside the presence of the parties concerning a pending or impending proceeding except that:

(a) where circumstances require, ex parte communications for scheduling, administrative purposes or emergencies that do not deal with substantive matters or issues on the merits are authorized: provided:

(i) the judge reasonably believes that no party will gain a procedural or tactical advantage as a result of the ex parte communication, and

(ii) the judge makes provision promptly to notify all other parties of the substance of the ex parte communication and allows an opportunity to respond.

(b) Judges may obtain the advice of a disinterested expert on the law applicable to a proceeding before them if the judges give notice to the parties of the person consulted and the substance of the advice, and afford the parties reasonable opportunity to respond.

(c) A judge may consult with court personnel whose function is to aid the judge in carrying out the judge's adjudicative responsibilities or with other judges.

(d) A judge may, with the consent of the parties, confer separately with the parties and their lawyers in an effort to mediate or settle matters pending before the judge.

(e) A judge may initiate or consider any ex parte communications when expressly authorized by law to do so.

Commentary

The proscription against communications concerning a proceeding includes communications from lawyers, law teachers, and other persons who are not participants in the proceeding, except to the limited extent permitted. To the extent reasonably possible, all parties or their lawyers shall be included in communications with a judge. Whenever presence of a party or notice to a party is required by Section 3B(7), it is the party's lawyer, or if the party is unrepresented, the party, who is to be present or to whom notice is to be given.

An appropriate and often desirable procedure for a court to obtain the advice of a disinterested expert on legal issues is to invite the expert to file a brief amicus curiae.

Certain ex parte communication is approved by Section 3B(7) to facilitate scheduling and other administrative purposes and to accommodate emergencies. In general, however, a judge must discourage ex parte communication and allow it only if all the criteria stated in Section 3B(7) are clearly met. A judge must disclose to all parties all ex parte communications described in Sections 3B(7)(a) and 3B(7)(b) regarding a proceeding pending or impending before the judge. A judge must not independently investigate facts in a case and must consider only the evidence presented.

A judge may request a party to submit proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law, so long as the other parties are apprized of the request and are given an opportunity to respond to the proposed findings and conclusions.

A judge must make reasonable efforts, including the provision of appropriate supervision, to ensure that Section 3B(7) is not violated through law clerks or other personnel on the judge's staff.

If communication between the trial judge and the appellate court with respect to a proceeding is permitted, a copy of any written communication or the substance of any oral communication should be provided to all parties.

(8) A judge shall dispose of all judicial matters promptly, efficiently and fairly.

Commentary

In disposing of matters promptly, efficiently and fairly, a judge must demonstrate due regard for the rights of the parties to be heard and to have issues resolved without unnecessary cost or delay. Containing costs while preserving fundamental rights of parties also protects the interests of witnesses and the general public. A judge should monitor and supervise cases so as to reduce or eliminate dilatory practices, avoidable delays and unnecessary costs. A judge should encourage and seek to facilitate settlement, but parties should not feel coerced into surrendering the right to have their controversy resolved by the courts.

Prompt disposition of the court's business requires a judge to devote adequate time to judicial duties, to be punctual in attending court and expeditious in determining matters under submission, and to insist that court officials, litigants and their lawyers cooperate with the judge to that end.

(9) A judge shall not, while a proceeding is pending or impending in any court, make any public comment that might reasonably be expected to affect its outcome or impair its fairness or make any nonpublic comment that might substantially interfere with a fair trial or hearing. The judge shall require similar abstention on the part of court personnel subject to the judge's direction and control. This Section does not prohibit judges from making public statements in the course of their official duties or from explaining for public information the procedures of the court. This Section does not apply to proceedings in which the judge is a litigant in a personal capacity.

Commentary

The requirement that judges abstain from public comment regarding a pending or impending proceeding continues during any appellate process and until final disposition. This Section does not prohibit a judge from commenting on proceedings in which the judge is a litigant in a personal capacity, but in cases such as a writ of mandamus where the judge is a litigant in an official capacity, the judge must not comment publicly. The conduct of lawyers relating to trial publicity is governed by Rule 3.6 of the Rules of Professional Conduct.

(10) A judge shall not commend or criticize jurors for their verdict other than in a court order or opinion in a proceeding, but may express appreciation to jurors for their service to the judicial system and the community.

Commentary

Commending or criticizing jurors for their verdict may imply a judicial expectation in future cases and may impair a juror's ability to be fair and impartial in a subsequent case.

(11) A judge shall not disclose or use, for any purpose unrelated to judicial duties, nonpublic information acquired in a judicial capacity.

(12) Except as may be authorized by rule or order of the Supreme Court, a judge should prohibit broadcasting, televising, recording, or taking photographs in the courtroom and areas immediately adjacent thereto during sessions of court or recesses between sessions, except that a judge may authorize:

(a) the use of electronic or photographic means for the presentation of evidence, for the perpetuation of a record, or for other purposes of judicial administration;

(b) the broadcasting, televising, recording, or photographing of investitive, ceremonial, or naturalization proceedings;

(c) the photographic or electronic recording and reproduction of appropriate court proceedings under the following conditions:

(i) the means of recording will not distract participants or impair the dignity of the proceedings;

(ii) the parties have consented, and the consent to being depicted or recorded has been obtained from each witness appearing in the recording and reproduction;

(iii) the reproduction will not be exhibited until after the proceeding has been concluded and all direct appeals have been exhausted; and

(iv) the reproduction will be exhibited only for instructional purposes in educational institutions.

Commentary

The ABA Model Code does not address broadcasting, televising, recording or photographing in the courtroom. This provision is taken from the Section 3A(7) of the prior Mississippi Code of Judicial Conduct.

Section 3B(12) prohibits broadcasting, televising, recording, or taking photographs in the courtroom and areas immediately adjacent thereto except as authorized by rule or order of the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court has now adopted the Rules for Electronic and Photographic Coverage of Proceedings which provides detailed guidance for such coverage.

[Commentary amended effective April 17, 2003.]

C. Administrative Responsibilities.

(1) A judge shall diligently discharge the judge's administrative responsibilities without bias or prejudice and maintain professional competence in judicial administration, and shall cooperate with other judges and court officials in the administration of court business.

(2) A judge shall require staff, court officials and others subject to the judge's direction and control to observe the standards of fidelity and diligence that apply to the judge and to refrain from manifesting bias or prejudice in the performance of their official duties.

(3) A judge with supervisory authority for the judicial performance of other judges shall take reasonable measures to assure the prompt disposition of matters before them and the proper performance of their other judicial responsibilities.

(4) A judge shall not make unnecessary appointments. A judge shall exercise the power of appointment impartially and on the basis of merit. A judge shall avoid nepotism and favoritism. A judge shall not approve compensation of appointees beyond the fair value of services rendered.

Commentary

Appointees of a judge include assigned counsel, officials such as referees, commissioners, special masters, receivers and guardians and personnel such as clerks, secretaries and bailiffs. Consent by the parties to an appointment or an award of compensation does not relieve the judge of the obligation prescribed by Section 3C(4).

(5) A judge shall not appoint a major donor to the judge's election campaign to a position if the judge knows or learns by means of a timely motion that the major donor has contributed to the judge's election campaign unless

(a) the position is substantially uncompensated;

(b) the person has been selected in rotation from a list of qualified and available persons compiled without regard to their having made political contributions; or

(c) the judge or another presiding or administrative judge affirmatively finds that no other person is willing, competent and able to accept the position.

D. Disciplinary Responsibilities.

(1) A judge who receives information indicating a substantial likelihood that another judge has committed a violation of this Code should take appropriate action. A judge having knowledge that another judge has committed a violation of this Code that raises a substantial question as to the other judge's fitness for office shall inform the appropriate authority.

(2) A judge who receives information indicating a substantial likelihood that a lawyer has committed a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct should take appropriate action. A judge having knowledge that a lawyer has committed a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct that raises a substantial question as to the lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness or fitness as a lawyer in other respects shall inform the appropriate authority.

(3) Acts of a judge, in the discharge of disciplinary responsibilities, required or permitted by Sections 3D(1) and 3D(2) are part of a judge's judicial duties and shall be absolutely privileged, and no civil action predicated thereon may be instituted against the judge.

Commentary

Appropriate action may include direct communication with the judge or lawyer who has committed the violation, other direct action if available, and reporting the violation to the appropriate authority or other agency or body.

E. Disqualification.

(1) Judges should disqualify themselves in proceedings in which their impartiality might be questioned by a reasonable person knowing all the circumstances or for other grounds provided in the Code of Judicial Conduct or otherwise as provided by law, including but not limited to instances where:

Commentary

Under this rule, a judge should disqualify himself or herself whenever the judge's impartiality might be questioned by a reasonable person knowing all the circumstances, regardless whether any of the specific rules in Section 3E(1) apply.

A judge should disclose on the record information that the judge believes the parties or their lawyers might consider relevant to the question of disqualification, even if the judge believes there is no real basis for disqualification.

By decisional law, the rule of necessity may override the rule of disqualification. For example, a judge might be required to participate in judicial review of a judicial salary statute, or might be the only judge available in a matter requiring immediate judicial action, such as a hearing on probable cause or a temporary restraining order. In the latter case, the judge must disclose on the record the basis for possible disqualification and use reasonable efforts to transfer the matter to another judge as soon as practicable.

For procedures concerning motions for recusal and review by the Supreme Court of denial of motions for recusal as to trial court judges, see M.R.C.P. 16A, URCCC 1.15, Unif. Chanc. R. 1.11, and M.R.A.P. 48B. For procedures concerning motions for recusal of judges of the Court of Appeals or Supreme Court justices, see M.R.A.P. 27(a).

(a) the judge has a personal bias or prejudice concerning a party, or personal knowledge of disputed evidentiary facts concerning the proceeding;

(b) the judge served as lawyer in the matter in controversy, or a lawyer with whom the judge previously practiced law served during such association as a lawyer concerning the matter, or the judge or such lawyer has been a material witness concerning it;

Commentary

A lawyer in a government agency does not ordinarily have an association with other lawyers employed by that agency within the meaning of Section 3E(1)(b); judges formerly employed by a government agency, however, should disqualify themselves in a proceeding if the judges' impartiality might reasonably be questioned because of such association.

(c) the judge knows that the judge, individually or as a fiduciary, or the judge's spouse or member of the judge's family residing in the judge's household, has a financial interest in the subject matter in controversy or in a party to the proceeding, or any other interest that could be substantially affected by the outcome of the proceeding;

(d) the judge or the judge's spouse, or a person within the third degree of relationship to either of them, or the spouse of such a person:

(i) is a party to the proceeding, or an officer, director, or trustee of a party;

(ii) is acting as a lawyer in the proceeding;

(iii) is known by the judge to have an interest that could be substantially affected by the outcome of the proceeding;

(iv) is to the judge's knowledge likely to be a material witness in the proceeding;

Commentary

The fact that a lawyer in a proceeding is affiliated with a law firm with which a relative of the judge is affiliated does not of itself disqualify the judge. Under appropriate circumstances, the fact that "the judge's impartiality might be questioned by a reasonable person knowing all the circumstances" under Section 3E(1), or that the relative is known by the judge to have an interest in the law firm that could be "substantially affected by the outcome of the proceeding" under Section 3E(1)(d)(iii) may require the judge's disqualification.

(2) Recusal of Judges from Lawsuits Involving Major Donors. A party may file a motion to recuse a judge based on the fact that an opposing party or counsel of record for that party is a major donor to the election campaign of such judge. Such motions will be filed, considered and subject to appellate review as provided for other motions for recusal.

Commentary

Section 3E(2) recognizes that political donations may but do not necessarily raise concerns about a judge's impartiality. The filing, consideration and appellate review of motions for recusal based on such donations are subject to rules governing all recusal motions. For procedures concerning motions for recusal and review by the Supreme Court of denial of motions for recusal as to trial court judges, see M.R.C.P. 16A, URCCC 1.15, Unif. Chanc. R. 1.11, and M.R.A.P. 48B. For procedures concerning motions for recusal of judges of the Court of Appeals or Supreme Court justices, see M.R.A.P. 27(a). This provision does not appear in the ABA Model Code of Judicial Conduct; however, see Section 3E(1)(e) of the ABA model.

F. Remittal of Disqualification. A judge who may be disqualified by the terms of Section 3E may disclose on the record the basis of the judge's possible disqualification and may ask the parties and their lawyers to consider, out of the presence of the judge, whether to waive disqualification. If following disclosure of any basis for disqualification other than personal bias or prejudice concerning a party, the parties and lawyers, without participation by the judge, all agree that the judge should not be disqualified, and the judge is then willing to participate, the judge may participate in the proceeding. The agreement shall be incorporated in the record of the proceeding.

Commentary

A remittal procedure provides the parties an opportunity to proceed without delay if they wish to waive the possible disqualification. To assure that consideration of the question of remittal is made independently of the judge, a judge must not solicit, seek or hear comment on the remittal or waiver of the possible disqualification unless the lawyers jointly propose remittal after consultation as provided in the rule. A party may act through counsel if counsel represents on the record that the party has been consulted and consents. As a practical matter, a judge may wish to have all parties and their lawyers sign the remittal agreement.

In general.

Judge presided over an inmate's plea hearing and his post-conviction relief motion and the inmate had not provided any evidence that the judge was biased based on the fact that he presided over both hearings, for purposes of Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3(E). Gaddy v. State, 21 So. 3d 677 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 130 S. Ct. 2115, 176 L. Ed. 2d 741, 2010 U.S. LEXIS 3422, 78 U.S.L.W. 3611 (U.S. 2010).

In a custody case, there was no motion to recuse the chancellor under Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3(E)(1)(a); therefore, the issue was not properly preserved for review. Bellais v. Bellais, 931 So. 2d 665 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Removal from office was an appropriate punishment for a judge who interfered with the prosecution of a domestic violence and assault case against the judge's son because in attempting to use his position to obtain favorable treatment for his son, the judge discredited the dignity and integrity of his office and the judiciary. However while the judge's attempts to coerce the sheriff department's attorney into dismissing the charges against his son were inappropriate in any setting and violated other canons of the Code of Judicial Conduct, the record did not demonstrate that the judge's discussion disrupted the order and decorum of the proceedings before the judge at the time, therefore the Commission had not shown by clear and convincing evidence that the judge's conduct violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3B(3). Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Brown, 918 So. 2d 1247 (Miss. 2005).

In the context of recusal of a judge, and the presumption that a judge is qualified and unbiased, the stringent "beyond a reasonable doubt" burden is incompatible with the standard of a hypothetical "reasonable person knowing all the circumstances." The proper standard is that recusal is required when the evidence produces a "reasonable doubt" as to the judge's impartiality. Dodson v. Singing River Hosp. Sys., 839 So. 2d 530 (Miss. 2003).

Where a former husband filed a complaint to modify alimony, the former wife's motion for recusal was properly granted given that the husband was an attorney, and it was the common practice of chancellors in the district to recuse themselves in contested matters involving attorneys who practiced in the district. Steiner v. Steiner, 788 So. 2d 771 (Miss. 2001).

Mississippi has an objective test in determining when a judge should recuse himself; a judge is required to disqualify himself if a reasonable person, knowing all the circumstances, would harbor doubts about his impartiality. Hunter v. State, 684 So. 2d 625 (Miss. 1996), reh'g denied, 691 So. 2d 1026 (Miss. 1996).

If a reasonable person, knowing all the circumstances, would harbor doubts about judge's impartiality, he is required to recuse himself, and supreme court enforces this judicial ethic rigorously, notwithstanding lack of litigant's specific demand. Aetna Casualty & Sur. Co. v. Berry, 669 So. 2d 56 (Miss. 1996).

Husband in divorce proceeding should have been allowed to present evidence in support of his motion for judge's recusal, where a fairminded, objective observer could have reasonably questioned judge's impartiality in view of substantial role which wife's witnesses could play in professional future of judge's son-in-law. Buchanan v. Buchanan, 587 So. 2d 892 (Miss. 1991).

A judge may, through negligence or ignorance not amounting to bad faith, behave in a manner prejudicial to administration of justice so as to bring judicial office into disrepute; result is the same, regardless of whether bad faith or negligence and ignorance are involved, and warrants sanctions. In re Anderson, 451 So. 2d 232 (Miss. 1984).

Cameras in courtroom.

Judge was privately reprimanded for allowing photography during a court hearing; the court examined several factors: (1) the length and character of the judge's public service; (2) whether there was any prior case law on point; (3) the magnitude of the offense and the harm suffered; (4) whether the misconduct was an isolated incident or evidences a pattern of conduct; (5) whether moral turpitude was involved; and, (6) the presence or absence of mitigating or aggravating circumstances before disregarding the Mississippi Commission on Judicial Conduct's recommendation for a public reprimand. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Blakeney, 905 So. 2d 521 (Miss. 2004).

Trial judge who allowed arraignment and initial appearance proceedings to be photographed and videotaped by representatives of the news media who thereafter printed or broadcast the photographs and tapes to the public was in clear violation of both the letter and spirit of Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3A(7). Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Carr, 786 So. 2d 1055 (Miss. 2001).

Prohibition on use of cameras in courtroom except under specific circumstances was not unconstitutional; there was no fundamental right to broadcast from courtroom, and there were legitimate and rational reasons for prohibition's existence, including state's interest in preserving order and decorum, preserving truth-seeking function of a trial, and protection of a defendant's rights. Associated Press v. Bost, 656 So. 2d 113 (Miss. 1995).

Defendant objected three times during course of trial to presence of television cameras, and having lacked defendant's consent, trial court erred in allowing television cameras within courtroom during trial. Brantley v. State, 610 So. 2d 1139 (Miss. 1992).

Disqualification.

Fact that the trial judge had both represented and prosecuted defendant in the past, without more, did not overcome the presumption of impartiality or require recusal under Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3. Slade v. State, 42 So. 3d 25 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

In the parties' divorce action, the wife's allegation that the chancellor should have recused himself under Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3(E)(1) and (2) was without merit because she failed to show any evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the chancellor was biased or unqualified thereby requiring his recusal in the case. There was not a reasonable basis to form a conclusion that there was a question of impartiality. Faerber v. Faerber, 13 So. 3d 853 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Where plaintiffs, a father and a son, claimed the trial court erred in denying their motion for recusal of two county judges because two defendants, both county attorneys also worked for the county, the argument was rejected in that it was not error to have found that the motion was untimely because, while plaintiffs argued they had filed their motion within 30 days of learning that the attorneys were employed by the county, their complaint clearly alleged the attorneys were acting in their official capacities, and further, there was no evidence the attorneys were well known by either judge. Blake v. Wilson, 962 So. 2d 705 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

State supreme court granted a joint motion for the approval of the recommendation of sanctions against a judge who violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3(E) by participating in proceedings where there was an admitted conflict of interest, and committed willful misconduct. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Cowart, 936 So. 2d 343 (Miss. 2006).

Denial of the inmate's petition for post-conviction relief was proper where his argument that the judge should not have presided over the revocation hearing was not preserved for review because he did not raise the issue at the revocation proceeding. In addition, it was without merit pursuant to Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3E(1) because the judge was exercising his authority under Miss. Code Ann. § 47-7-37 to issue a warrant for the inmate's arrest for a probation violation; thus, he was acting within his statutory authority and there was no indication that he was unqualified or biased. Hubbard v. State, 919 So. 2d 1022 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

— Not required.

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying plaintiff's motion for recusal where plaintiff failed to produce any evidence regarding either allegation of impropriety; plaintiff produced no evidence that the court administrator had any material input into the court's judicial decisions. Hill v. Mills, 26 So. 3d 322 (Miss. 2010).

It was not error for the same judge to hear an inmate's plea and motion for post-conviction relief, the inmate stated in his plea colloquy that he was satisfied with the assistance provided by his attorney, and a different result would not have occurred if the inmate's attorney would have objected to the judge presiding over both hearings, such that this did not rise to the level of ineffective assistance of counsel. Gaddy v. State, 21 So. 3d 677

Removal from office was an appropriate punishment for a judge who interfered with the prosecution of a domestic violence and assault case against the judge's son because in attempting to use his position to obtain favorable treatment for his son, the judge discredited the dignity and integrity of his office and the judiciary. However while the judge's conduct was inappropriate in any setting and violated other canons of the Code of Judicial Conduct, the record did not demonstrate that the judge's conduct violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3B(1) pertaining to matters "assigned" to a judge, because there was no evidence to show the judge was assigned any matter relating to the charges against his son or any other matter from which he should have disqualified himself. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Brown, 918 So. 2d 1247 (Miss. 2005).

Where department store was sued for racial profiling customers in store security measures, the trial court was not required to recuse an African-American female judge who stated in a news broadcast that she believed the Jackson, Mississippi, Police Department engaged in racial profiling. The store failed to overcome the presumption that the trial judge was unbiased and qualified. Dillard's, Inc. v. Scott, 908 So. 2d 93 (Miss. 2005).

Trial court did not violate Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3. Trial judge's alleged impartiality was not apparent merely because he had presided over previous criminal proceedings against defendant, or because he had sequestered the names of the jurors. King v. State, 897 So. 2d 981 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 896 So. 2d 373 (Miss. 2005).

Trial judge was not required to recuse himself from a trial where defendant was charged with armed robbery at a bank simply because the judge's wife worked for a company that operated a number of banks. Jack v. State, 878 So. 2d 1078 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In movant's motion to recuse an appellate court judge pursuant to Miss. R. App. P. 48C(b), the movant alleged that the judge had a bias based on statements in the judge's successful appellate court campaign that the judge would fight the special interest groups — like the personal injury lawyers who had created the lawsuit industry; however, because (1) the judge's voting record during his tenure on the appellate court did not indicate that he lacked impartiality towards a personal injury plaintiff represented by a personal injury lawyer and (2) the judge voted in the movant's favor on the merits, a reasonable person, knowing all the circumstances, could not question the judge's impartiality, Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3(E)(1)(a). Thus, the motion to recuse the judge and the motion to reconsider the judge's denial of the recusal motion were properly denied. Doe v. Stegall, 900 So. 2d 357 (Miss. 2004).

Although the chancellor did make references in the trial court to the decedent and their ex parte communications just prior to his death, the record did not show that the trial court based its decision on these; the evidence was not adequate to support a finding that a reasonable person would harbor doubts about the chancellor's impartiality. Weissinger v. Simpson, 861 So. 2d 984 (Miss. 2003).

In a capital murder case, the inmate's counsel were not ineffective for failing to move for recusal of the judge under Miss. Code of Jud. Conduct Canon 3 because the judge's decision to disallow introduction of the sheriff's conviction for impeachment purposes was proper and the judge's comments did not evidence partiality. Wilcher v. State, 863 So. 2d 776 (Miss. 2003), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 124 S. Ct. 2917, 159 L. Ed. 2d 821 (2004).

In a murder prosecution, the fact that the trial judge's former law firm represented the codefendant's father in a matter having no relation to the trial at issue, and that the prosecutor practiced law with the judge for several years, did not oblige the judge to recuse himself based on these coincidences. Jones v. State, 841 So. 2d 115 (Miss. 2003).

Defendant's mere expression of an intention to file a lawsuit against his trial judge, without more, was insufficient to require that judge to recuse himself.

Kolberg v. State, 829 So. 2d 29 (Miss. 2002), cert. denied, 538 U.S. 981, 123 S. Ct. 1787, 155 L. Ed. 2d 672 (2003).

Trial judge's involvement in a prior prosecution of defendant did not compromise the judge's impartiality and the evidence did not support a finding that the trial judge's impartiality was compromised; thus, reversal of defendant's conviction for uttering a false check was not required. Brown v. State, 829 So. 2d 93 (Miss. 2002).

In a child custody case, a mother acquiesced to a judge hearing her case where she failed to raise the issue of recusal until after the case was decided against her; therefore, the judge was not required to recuse himself voluntarily under Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3C(1). Watts v. Watts, — So. 2d —, 2002 Miss. App. LEXIS 673 (Miss. Ct. App. Nov. 26, 2002), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at, remanded by 854 So. 2d 11, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 143 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

The trial court did not err in denying a motion for recusal where the judge had absolutely no memory of a purported conversation regarding the facts of the case and he also had no memory of a previous action involving the defendant. Hodnett v. State, 787 So. 2d 670 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

A judge was not required to recuse herself sua sponte because the status of a potential witness as an employee of the court created an appearance of impropriety. Taylor v. State, 789 So. 2d 787 (Miss. 2001).

A judge was not required to recuse himself with regard to the issuance of a search warrant on the ground that he was serving as district attorney when the defendant was earlier indicted for a separate unrelated offense. Luckett v. State, 797 So. 2d 339 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

While total recusal might have been the better course of action, the trial judge did not abuse his discretion in failing to disqualify himself on the basis that, as an assistant district attorney, he had signed indictments that led to prior convictions of the defendant as he had no involvement in that portion of the trial, i.e., sentencing, where these prior convictions were relevant. Jackson v. State, 778 So. 2d 786 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

A trial judge who heard a guilty plea which was later overturned was qualified to sit for the subsequent trial, notwithstanding an allegation of bias, where an exhaustive review of the record revealed no evidence of bias. Farmer v. State, 770 So. 2d 953 (Miss. 2000).

Judge's recusal was not required where defendant failed to provide sufficient evidence that there was a personal conflict between defense counsel and the judge that would lead reasonable-minded persons to question whether the judge would have personal bias or prejudice toward defendant. Walker v. State, 759 So. 2d 422 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

The trial judge did not err when he refused to recuse itself since his conduct did not show a personal bias or prejudice concerning a party; the defendant cited no instances where the judge improperly admitted or excluded evidence as a result of his alleged bias and failed to provide any other evidence of bias. Steed v. State, 752 So. 2d 1056 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

The trial judge did not err in not recusing himself from a criminal prosecution, notwithstanding that he signed the search warrant in the case, where the judge recused himself from the suppression hearing and testified in the suppression hearing that he had no recollection of the facts of the case, and no prejudice or bias was alleged or discovered from a review of the record. Wallace v. State, 741 So. 2d 938 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Mere fact that trial judge hears a case, even an election case, in county where judge may sometime in future run for reelection, does not alone give rise to reasonable doubt as to his impartiality. McFarland v. State, 707 So. 2d 166 (Miss. 1997).

Because judge's relationship to doctor criticized by party did not appear to cast doubts on judge's impartiality, and because judge evaluated doctor's recommendations for indications of undue influence, judge did not err in not recusing himself from case. Bredemeier v. Jackson, 689 So. 2d 770 (Miss. 1997).

Where judge had no personal knowledge concerning issue before court during evidentiary hearing, and defendant offered no evidence to produce a reasonable doubt as to judge's impartiality, there was no manifest abuse of trial court's discretion in failing to recuse himself from the evidentiary hearing. Neal v. State, 687 So. 2d 1180 (Miss. 1996).

Fact that one of arson defendant's attorneys was trial judge's brother-in-law did not require judge's recusal, where judge informed parties that attorney was his brother-in-law and parties clearly agreed to judge's continued service as trial judge. Dowbak v. State, 666 So. 2d 1377 (Miss. 1996).

There was no evidence of prejudice or impropriety requiring trial judge's recusal from murder trial, where judge's former law firm, and specifically his nephew, had represented victim in his divorce from his wife, in which defendant was the wife's named paramour. Hunter v. State, 684 So. 2d 625 (Miss. 1996), reh'g denied, 691 So. 2d 1026 (Miss. 1996).

Trial judge who was district attorney at time defendant was indicted did not err in failing to recuse himself from sitting at defendant's arraignment, where defendant was given opportunity to object to him sitting as his judge, but instead conferred with counsel and specifically waived any objections. Banana v. State, 635 So. 2d 851 (Miss. 1994).

Trial judge's failure to recuse himself sua sponte, for his remarks at sentencing, was not a manifest abuse of discretion; his comment in favor of strict handgun control reflected his personal bias, but this was not "personal bias or prejudice concerning a party" as contemplated by subdivision (C) of this canon, and a reasonable person, knowing all the circumstances, would not have doubted the judge's impartiality. Green v. State, 631 So. 2d 167 (Miss. 1994).

Presumption that a judge is qualified and unbiased may only be overcome by evidence showing beyond a reasonable doubt that the judge was biased or not qualified; if a reasonable person, knowing all the circumstances, would doubt the judge's impartiality, the judge is required to recuse him or herself from the case. Collins v. Joshi, 611 So. 2d 898 (Miss. 1992).

Judge did not violate this canon by refusing to recuse himself from sitting at defendant's trial on charges of embezzlement; although judge had known defendant for approximately nine years, there was no indication of any bias or prejudice for or against him. Medley v. State, 600 So. 2d 957 (Miss. 1992).

Chancellor did not abuse his discretion in refusing to recuse himself in action against former conservator of estate; limited evidence and limited contacts presented did not overcome presumption of chancellor's impartiality beyond a reasonable doubt. Bryan v. Holzer, 589 So. 2d 648 (Miss. 1991).

Supreme court justice who had been Attorney General during time of defendant's extradition from Illinois was not required to recuse himself from participating in defendant's appeal, where judge had no personal involvement in, or actual knowledge of, defendant's case while in office, and his office's involvement in defendant's actual extradition was minimal. Turner v. State, 573 So. 2d 657 (Miss. 1990), cert. denied, 500 U.S. 910, 111 S. Ct. 1695, 114 L. Ed. 2d 89 (1991).

There was no error in trial judge's sitting in review of defendant's motion for new trial, based on fact that judge had previously, as county attorney, charged defendant with removing a pickup truck from state with intent to defraud a lien holder. Cantrell v. State, 507 So. 2d 325 (Miss. 1987).

Where chancellor, in his former position as county attorney, had represented respondent in two U.R.E.S.A. proceedings more than ten years previously, this did not require chancellor's disqualification, as his representation was largely an administrative task and did not create any reasonable doubt about his impartiality. Rutland v. Pridgen, 493 So. 2d 952 (Miss. 1986).

— Required.

In patient's suit against hospital, where a large firm represented the hospital, one of the firm's partners had served as treasurer in the judge's election campaign, and other lawyers from the firm had represented the judge and his wife for four years in a defective residential construction case, without charge. Under a totality of the circumstances analysis, a reasonable person could have had reasonable doubts as to the judge's impartiality, and the patient was entitled to a new trial before another trial judge. Dodson v. Singing River Hosp. Sys., 839 So. 2d 530 (Miss. 2003).

In a suit brought by the patient against the hospital for damages she sustained when a wheelchair attendant pushed the wheelchair in which she was riding into a door, the trial judge should have recused himself as a result of his ties to the law firm that represented the hospital. Dodson v. Singing River Hosp. Sys., — So. 2d —, 2002 Miss. LEXIS 407 (Miss. Dec. 5, 2002), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at, remanded by 839 So. 2d 530, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 91 (Miss. 2003).

The trial judge should have recused himself from a murder prosecution where, at the defendant's arraignment, he stated that he had engaged in ex parte communications with investigators in the case, that he considered these investigators to be reliable, and that the defendant did not act in self-defense. McGee v. State, 820 So. 2d 700 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

A chancellor did not abuse her discretion in refusing to recuse herself where (1) she worked for a law firm, which representing one party, over a decade before the hearing of the case, and then only for a few months, and (2) her work with another attorney, who represented the same party on the projects involved in the litigation, did not involve those projects, and the chancellor left that office several years prior to the validation hearings. McBride v. Meridian Pub. Imp. Corp., 730 So. 2d 548 (Miss. 1998).

Where a judge allowed intervention in a will contest by a company that he was assisting in locating a barge landing site for a county landfill, at the same time that he was negotiating with the proponent of the will, and ruled in favor of the company, he violated Canons 1, 2 A, 2 B, 3 A(1), 3 A(4), 3 C, 3 D, 5 C(1) and 5 F. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Jenkins, 725 So. 2d 162 (Miss. 1998).

Where a judge became involved in lease negotiations pertaining to a barge landing site for a county landfill, and advised one party to the lease on the benefits of dealing with the landfill and drafting the lease agreement himself, he violated Canons 1, 2 A, 2 B, 3 A(1), 3 C, 5 C(1) and 5 F, as well as §§ 9-1-25 and 23-15-975. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Jenkins, 725 So. 2d 162 (Miss. 1998).

Trial judge should have recused himself in action against insurance company for bad faith settlement of claim, where co-counsel for plaintiff had represented judge in his divorce and had been deeply involved in judge's re-election campaign. Aetna Casualty & Sur. Co. v. Berry, 669 So. 2d 56 (Miss. 1996).

Judge who served part-time—pro tem as a municipal court judge, and also engaged in private criminal defense practice, received sanction of public reprimand for assuming role of attorney, and presumably accepting a fee, for representing a defendant and attempting to reduce the same bond which he, as city judge, had earlier set for that defendant. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Atkinson, 645 So. 2d 1331 (Miss. 1994).

There was an unavoidable conflict of interest in a single person serving both as mayor and as judge, with the potential for bringing the judicial office into disrepute, and therefore municipal judges were ordered to be suspended according to statute and rules of Commission on Judicial Performance. In re Municipal Judges, 631 So. 2d 758 (Miss. 1994).

Judge's former representation of hospital, and personal tension between himself and plaintiffs' counsel, created a conflict of interest which would lead a reasonable-minded person to question judge's ability to be impartial, and therefore judge should have recused himself from medical malpractice case. Davis v. Neshoba County Gen. Hosp., 611 So. 2d 904 (Miss. 1992).

Judge abused his discretion in refusing to recuse himself from malpractice action against physician and hospital, where his representation of hospital trustees and participation in physician's employment created appearance of a conflict of interest. Collins v. Joshi, 611 So. 2d 898 (Miss. 1992).

Judge who served as district attorney at the time defendant was initially indicted should have recused himself on his own motion from hearing defendant's case.

Frierson v. State, 606 So. 2d 604 (Miss. 1992).

Judge should have disqualified himself from sitting as trial judge, where he had acted as prosecutor during defendant's indictment. Jenkins v. State, 570 So. 2d 1191 (Miss. 1990).

Where judge's brother was a senior partner in law firm representing hospital, and there were allegations and testimony that medical community assisted in electing judge, a reasonable person with knowledge of the circumstances would harbor doubts about judge's impartiality, and therefore judge should have recused himself from sitting in action against hospital. In re Moffett, 556 So. 2d 723 (Miss. 1990).

Reversal was required, where trial judge had been both a witness to and adjudicator of central fact issues with respect to which he was obliged to play but one role. Collins v. Dixie Transp., Inc., 543 So. 2d 160 (Miss. 1989).

Judge should have disqualified himself from hearing case involving hospital; judge's family relationship to senior partner in law firm representing hospital, and allegations and testimony that medical community had assisted in electing judge, would lead a reasonable person to harbor doubts about judge's impartiality. Jenkins v. Forrest County Gen. Hosp., 542 So. 2d 1180 (Miss. 1988).

Exceeding scope of authority.

Public reprimand against a judge was proper because he misused the powers of contempt and violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 3(B)(2), and 3(B)(8) when he held a defendant in criminal contempt for failing to recite the pledge of allegiance in open court. He violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 2(A) and 3(B)(4) by incarcerating the defendant for expressing his rights under U.S. Const. amend. I. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Littlejohn, 62 So. 3d 968 (Miss. 2011).

Order that the judge be suspended for 30 days from office without pay, along with a public reprimand, a fine, and an assessment of costs was appropriate because he violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2(A), (B), 3(A), (B)(1), (B)(2), and 3(B)(7) and his egregious actions constituted willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice. By involving himself in another judge's cases and attempting to assist defendants with their tickets, the judge compromised the integrity and independence of the judiciary and his actions created an impression that certain defendants were in a special position to influence him. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. McKenzie, 63 So. 3d 1219 (Miss. 2011).

Chancellor was publicly reprimanded for misconduct in violation of, inter alia, Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 1, 2A, 3B(2), 3C(1) because the chancellor had issued subpoenas to two members of county board of supervisors, and during a later meeting with the board of supervisors, the chancellor admitted that he had failed to comply with the law in doing so; further, the commission found by clear and convincing evidence that the chancellor had engaged in willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice which brought the office into disrepute, under Miss. Const. art. VI, § 177A. The record did not indicate any aggravating factors. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Buffington, 55 So. 3d 167 (Miss. 2011).

Mississippi Commission on Judicial Performance's finding that a justice court judge violated Miss. Code Ann. §§ 99-23-1, 99-23-5, 99-23-13, and Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2A, 2B, 3(B)(2), 3(B)(4), 3(B)(7), 3(B)(8), 3(C)(1), and Miss. Const. Art. VI, § 177A, was clearly and convincingly supported by the record because the judge exceeded her authority in repeatedly entering unlawful orders pertaining to peace bonds resulting in the incarceration of an accused. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Boland, 998 So. 2d 380 (Miss. 2008).

Judge's actions which failed to follow correct procedural safeguards of giving one accused of contempt a specific charge, notice and a hearing violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3(A)(1) and 3B(1). Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Willard, 788 So. 2d 736 (Miss. 2001).

Although a judge's conduct in entering orders regarding a defendant at the same time the senior judge was also entering orders regarding that defendant in some of the same cases did not evidence the level of civility and professionalism expected of judges, the judge's conduct did not constitute a violation of the statute. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Byers, 757 So. 2d 961 (Miss. 2000).

A judge abused her contempt powers and thereby violated Canons 1, 2, and 3 when she held a newspaper reporter in contempt and put her in jail without following the proper procedures. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Byers, 757 So. 2d 961 (Miss. 2000).

Circuit court judge was not required to pay the fine that was recommended by the Mississippi Commission on Judicial Performance, but was publicly reprimanded and assessed costs for violating the canons of judicial conduct by abusing her contempt powers and illegally expunging the drug convictions of two persons. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Sanders, 749 So. 2d 1062 (Miss. 1999).

A judge violated Section 177A of the Mississippi Constitution of 1890, as amended and judicial canons 1, 2A, 2B, and 3A(1) of the Mississippi Code of Judicial Conduct when he willfully and improperly reduced DUI charges against several defendants, and he would be publicly reprimanded, fined $1,500, and ordered to pay all costs associated with the case. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Jones, 735 So. 2d 385 (Miss. 1999).

Where a judge suspended the sentences previously entered in two cases with the full knowledge that she lacked jurisdiction to enter such orders and without considering the Uniform Post Conviction Relief Act, she violated Canons 1, 2A, 3A(1), 3A(4), and 3B(1) of the Code of Judicial Conduct. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Sanders, 708 So. 2d 866 (Miss. 1998).

Judge was publicly reprimanded, fined $1500, and taxed with costs for his post-sentencing release of four state prisoners in excess of his authority. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Russell, 691 So. 2d 929 (Miss. 1997), reh'g denied, 693 So. 2d 384 (Miss. 1997).

Municipal court judge who incarcerated a defendant without notice or hearing, and who sentenced a defendant to more jail time than allowed by law and found same defendant guilty of perjury based upon judge's own affidavit and warrant, was sanctioned by public reprimand and taxation of costs. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Fletcher, 686 So. 2d 1075 (Miss. 1996).

Justice court judge was removed from the bench and assessed costs, on charges of judicial misconduct including: entering orders without authority, accepting money without authority, acting outside his legal authority to sign an execution of judgment, improper handling of DUI charges, and interference with rotation of cases. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Dodds, 680 So. 2d 180 (Miss. 1996).

Where justice court judge found litigant in contempt for what judge perceived as a direct attack on him personally, rather than on the court, judge's action was in direct violation of case law and Code of Judicial Conduct, and constituted willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to administration of justice. Mississippi Judicial Performance Comm'n v. Walker, 565 So. 2d 1117 (Miss. 1990).

Justice court judge was removed from office for continuing misconduct involving ticket fixing and adjudicating criminal matters without a hearing or notice to officer. In re Hearn, 542 So. 2d 901 (Miss. 1989).

Justice court judge was publicly reprimanded for mishandling an eviction and past due rent case, which culminated in judge's ordering tenant imprisoned for non-payment of civil debt. In re Bailey, 541 So. 2d 1036 (Miss. 1989).

County court judge was removed from office for charging excessive fines, using county prisoners for personal and county work, and deciding more than 100 misdemeanor cases "off the record," for which there were no case files, docket entries, or other records of filing or disposition in office of circuit clerk. In re Collins, 524 So. 2d 553 (Miss. 1987).

Justice court judge violated this canon by utilizing criminal process or threat of criminal process to collect civil debts, failing to properly docket and process bad check cases, failing to collect civil court costs deposit in advance from merchants, failing to keep records required of his office, and collecting court costs from county in cases which were never docketed. In re Odom, 444 So. 2d 835 (Miss. 1984).

Change of primary physical custody of the child from the father to the mother was proper pursuant to Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3(B)(4) because, even though the chancellor's remarks were clearly inappropriate, the error arising therefrom was harmless. The record revealed ample evidence that supported the chancellor's finding on every issue except that of visitation, which the appellate court remanded for further proceedings; thus, the appellate court was unable to find that the chancellor's improper conduct affected a substantial right of the parties. Schmidt v. Bermudez, 5 So. 3d 1100 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), reversed by, remanded by 5 So. 3d 1064, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 104 (Miss. 2009).

Improper communications.

Justice court judge was suspended from office for ninety days without pay and was publicly reprimanded for violating Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2A, 2B, 3B(2), 3B(4), 4A, and Miss. Const. art. 6, § 177A, where the judge engaged in ex parte communications with a female litigant and inappropriately handled a fine reduction. Allegations that the judge made sexual advances toward the female litigant were not established by clear and convincing evidence. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Boone, 60 So. 3d 172 (Miss. 2011).

Public reprimand imposed against a judge was proper because he had engaged in ex parte communications with parties involved in a disturbance-of-the-peace case and also entered a plea of not guilty for one of the parties. That misconduct violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2(A), 2(B), 3(B)(2), 3(B)(4), and 3(B)(7), and was willful, prejudicial to the administration of justice, and brought the judicial office into disrepute. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Vess, 10 So. 3d 486 (Miss. 2009).

Judge's actions in engaging in ex parte communications with community members constituted willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice which brought the judicial office into disrepute, Miss. Const. Art. 6, § 177A; the judge's actions violated Miss. Code Jud. Canons 1, 2A, 2B, 3B(2), and 3B(7); he was publicly reprimanded and suspended for sixty days. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Carr, 990 So. 2d 763 (Miss. 2008).

County judge was ordered to be publicly reprimanded and suspended for 30 days because he repeatedly engaged in prohibited ex parte conversations with a litigant and offered advice as to actions that the litigant should take to advance her case. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Fowlkes, 967 So. 2d 12 (Miss. 2007).

Recommendation for a public reprimand was not adopted since it was too lenient for a judge who committed willful misconduct under Miss. Const. Art. 6, § 177A by violating Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2A, 3B(2), 3B(7), 3B(8), and 3C(1) when he engaged in improper ex parte communications; moreover, he ignored Miss. Code Ann. § 9-11-33 and Miss. Unif. R. P. J. Ct. 2.06 when he set aside a final judgment and interfered with orders handed down by another judge. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Britton, 936 So. 2d 898 (Miss. 2006).

County justice court judge was publicly reprimanded for violating Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2(A), 2(B), 3(B)(2), 4(A)(1)-(3) as he ordered that his grandson's driver's license be reinstated (after the grandson pled nolo contendere to DUI) and attempted to have a sheriff allow the grandson to serve his time in a local jail instead of a state facility. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Cole, 932 So. 2d 9 (Miss. 2006).

Removal from office was an appropriate punishment for a judge who interfered with the prosecution of a domestic violence and assault case against the judge's son because in attempting to use his position to obtain favorable treatment for his son, the judge discredited the dignity and integrity of his office and the judiciary. However, while the judge's communications with the jailer, the arresting office, the prosecutor, and the clerk were inappropriate and contrary to the fair administration of justice, they were not ex parte communications prohibited under Canon 3B(7), which have been has consistently been applied to cases in which the alleged ex parte communication was between a judge and a party to a case before the judge. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Brown, 918 So. 2d 1247 (Miss. 2005).

Judge's repeated pattern of misconduct involving ex parte communications with litigants, the improper dismissal of a litigant's default judgment, and sexual misconduct, coupled with his failure to pay costs assessed in prior disciplinary proceedings or to submit to a public reprimand warranted his removal from office and an assessment of all costs of the current proceeding and the costs previously assessed. By engaging in a repeated patter of ex parte communications with litigants, the judge failed to uphold the integrity and independence of the judiciary in violation of many of the Canons of the Code of Judicial Conduct, and in particular Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3B(7). Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Lewis, 913 So. 2d 266 (Miss. 2005).

Finding in favor of the patient in his medical malpractice action was improper pursuant to Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3(B)(7) where the judge erred when she called a doctor on her own initiative, without informing either party of her intentions to do so, and without allowing either party to explore the basis of the doctor's opinion. Blake v. Clein, 903 So. 2d 710 (Miss. 2005).

A judge violated § 9-11-11 and Canons 1, 2A, 2B, 3A(1), 3A(4), 3A(5), and 3B(1) where he failed to promptly dispose of the court's business and discharge his administrative duties, he allowed his relationship with the court clerk to affect his duties, and he engaged in ex parte communications which required his recusal in 44 cases within a short period of time. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Spencer, 725 So. 2d 171 (Miss. 1998).

Justice court judge was publicly reprimanded, fined $1,450 and assessed costs, for dismissing speeding and traffic tickets, and for holding ex parte communications with defendants. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Bowen, 662 So. 2d 551 (Miss. 1995).

Where justice court judge directed that judgment in a particular case be held, and later attempted to change the judgment after ex parte communications with a party, his actions were improper and warranted public reprimand and fine of $250. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Underwood, 644 So. 2d 458 (Miss. 1994).

Justice court judge was removed from office for ticket fixing, ex parte communications, and abuse of his contempt powers. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Chinn, 611 So. 2d 849 (Miss. 1992).

Miscellaneous misconduct.

Defendant's convictions for felonious child abuse were appropriate, in part because, while comments made by the trial court might have been improper, the trial court gave a curative instruction stating that the comments had not been intended as commentary on the believability of the victim's testimony and requiring the jury to disregard the comments. The judge did not violate Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3(B)(4) or (5). Clark v. State, 40 So. 3d 531 (Miss. 2010).

Defendant's convictions for felonious child abuse were appropriate, in part because, while comments made by the trial court might have been improper, the trial court gave a curative instruction stating that the comments had not been intended as commentary on the believability of the victim's testimony and requiring the jury to disregard the comments. The judge did not violate Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3(B)(4) or (5). Clark v. State, 40 So. 3d 531 (Miss. 2010).

While the judge did delay in issuing a ruling in a case in violation of Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 1, 2A, 3B(8) and 3C(1), the court did not find willfulness under Miss. Const., art. 6, § 177A(b), (c), but did find negligence. The judge testified that he was presented a case of first impression for him and that it wasn't his intention that it be held up, and the summary judgment hearing was held approximately ten days after he had started treatment for a serious medical condition, with those treatments continuing for a period of several months. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Agin, 17 So. 3d 578 (Miss. 2009).

Judge's remarks violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2(A) & (B), 3(B)(5), constituting willful misconduct in the judicial office which brought the judicial office into disrepute, thus causing the judge's conduct to be actionable pursuant to Miss. Const. Art. 6, § 177A; the judge's comments were disparaging results and not matters of legitimate public concern and went beyond the realm of protected campaign speech. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Osborne, — So. 2d —, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 9 (Miss. Feb. 5, 2009), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 11 So. 3d 107, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 278 (Miss. 2009).

Mississippi Commission on Judicial Performance had no direct authority or power to order punishment on a justice court judge after a formal complaint was filed, alleging violations of Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2A, 3B(2), 3B(5), 3B(7), and 3B(8); a memorandum of understanding reached between the judge and the Commission was considered by the court but was not binding on the court in assessing the judge's punishment. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Martin, 995 So. 2d 727 (Miss. 2008).

Judge was publicly reprimanded and assessed costs of $ 100 because the judge violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2A, 3B(8), and 3C(1) by failing to timely issue rulings in cases; the judge established a pattern of delays in rendering opinions, giving the appearance that the judge failed diligently to perform judicial duties. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Agin, 987 So. 2d 418 (Miss. 2008).

Mississippi Commission on Judicial Performance erred by finding that the judge violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3(B)(4) and (5) because the comment was not made at an adjudicative proceeding; however, she did violate Canon 3(C)(1) because at the conference, she made a derogatory remark which placed her impartiality at issue and her actions lacked professional courtesy and cooperation with others in the administration of court business. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Boland, 975 So. 2d 882 (Miss. 2008).

Where a judge violated Canons 1, 2B and 3B(2) of the Code of Judicial Conduct by expressing anger at a second judge for refusing to talk with him before signing an arrest warrant, and then instructing a deputy clerk not to issue the warrant, public reprimand was appropriate because such conduct created the appearance that the judge might be partial to certain interests and brought the judicial office into disrepute. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Thompson, 972 So. 2d 582 (Miss. 2008).

Where the Mississippi Commission on Judicial Performance, acting on information from a police officer, filed a formal complaint against a municipal court judge, accusing the judge of inappropriately engaging in "fixing" traffic tickets, it was determined that the judge used his position to fix tickets by "passing" them to the file without requiring defendants to appear and over the objections from the issuing officer; clear and convincing evidence showed that the judge's actions violated numerous Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons as well as Miss. Const. Art. 6, § 177A; whether the judge's actions were actually willful was of no consequence because the result was the same regardless of whether bad faith or negligence and ignorance were involved and warranted sanctions. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Gordon, 955 So. 2d 300 (Miss. 2007).

In handling several matters set before his court, a judge was found to be in violation of the Miss. Code of Jud. Conduct as well as the Mississippi Constitution where the judge ackowledged that his actions, in refusing to allow a defendant to present evidence, in presiding over a probation revocation matter in which there were recusal issues, in trying a defendant in absentia, and in revoking bail and issuing an arrest warrant, violated the Code of Judicial Conduct; public reprimand, suspension from office, and assessment of a fine and costs were warranted. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Roberts, 952 So. 2d 934 (Miss. 2007).

Where a justice court judge acted to cause a complaining officer to not show up for trial so that drunk driving charges could be dismissed for failure to prosecute, the Mississippi Supreme Court held, under Miss. Const. Art. 6, § 177A, that the offense involved moral turpitude, and imposed a 30-day suspension upon the judge. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Sanford, 941 So. 2d 209 (Miss. 2006).

There was no basis for a reversal stemming from an assertion of judicial misconduct in a medical malpractice action; observed friendliness towards one of the parties in the case by a former member of the judiciary, and that judge then associating with the trial judge by their own private conversation, were the kind of events best avoided during the conduct of a trial, but because the appellate court found no prejudice nor a sufficiently prompt objection, there was no basis for reversal. Scafide v. Bazzone, 962 So. 2d 585 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 962 So. 2d 38, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 435 (Miss. 2007).

Removal from office was an appropriate punishment for a judge who interfered with the prosecution of a domestic violence and assault case against the judge's son because in attempting to use his position to obtain favorable treatment for his son, the judge discredited the dignity and integrity of his office and the judiciary. Also in attempting to obstruct the justice system by interfering with the charges against his son, the judge was unfaithful to the law and he failed to maintain professional competence in violation of Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3B(2). Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Brown, 918 So. 2d 1247 (Miss. 2005).

Judge's suspension of the fines and State assessments were in response to the county's lack of funding for a court bailiff, and said conduct constituted willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice which brought the judicial office into disrepute. However, the record did not show any other incidents that demonstrated that his behavior evidenced a pattern of conduct, there was no moral turpitude involved, and mitigating circumstances were also present in light of the fact that the judge acknowledged the inappropriateness of his conduct and was in agreement with the findings of the Mississippi Commission of Judicial Performance; thus, a public reprimand, a fine, and payment of the costs of the proceedings was a proper sanction. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Sheffield, 883 So. 2d 546 (Miss. 2004).

While acting in an official capacity, judge violated Miss. Const. Art. VI, § 177A, Miss. Code Ann. § 9-11-33, and Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2(A), 2(B), 3(A), 3(B)(2), 3(B)(7), 3(B)(8), 3(C)(1), 3(C)(2), 4(A), and 4(D)(1), by conducting ex parte communications with parties, rendering decisions without giving notice of hearings to parties, and habitually taking civil cases under advisement and failing to render timely decisions; a public reprimand, suspension for 30 days without pay, and payment of the costs of the proceeding was held to be appropriate discipline. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. McPhail, 874 So. 2d 441 (Miss. 2004).

Judge's actions involving the issuance of an ex parte temporary order changing child custody without notice to the nonmovant, without providing a copy of the order to the nonmovant, and later refusing to allow the nonmovant to be heard, constituted willful misconduct in violation of Miss. Const. Art. 6, § 177A and Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2A, 3A(1) and (4), and 3B(1). Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Perdue, 853 So. 2d 85 (Miss. 2003).

Although there was no proof that a judge willfully intended to misuse a sentencing statute, where she did misuse it and subsequently did nothing to correct her error, and also made a false statement under oath regarding the sentencing, she violated canons 1, 2, and 3. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Byers, 757 So. 2d 961 (Miss. 2000).

Judge's irregularities and improprieties, both on and off the bench, amounted to willful misconduct in office; sanctions of public reprimand, $1,500 fine, and thirty day suspension without pay were appropriate in light of judge's prior discipline for similar conduct. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Franklin, 704 So. 2d 89 (Miss. 1997).

Although there was no proof that a judge willfully intended to misuse a sentencing statute, where she did misuse it and subsequently did nothing to correct her error, and also made a false statement under oath regarding the sentencing, she violated canons 1, 2, and 3. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Byers, 757 So. 2d 961 (Miss. 2000).

Judge's communications with detainee, her mother, arresting officer, and prosecuting attorney, and his interference with detainee's bonding process, constituted willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to administration of justice, warranting public reprimand and taxation of costs. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Vess, 692 So. 2d 80 (Miss. 1997).

Justice court judge was publicly reprimanded, fined $2,628.00, and assessed costs, for numerous violations and irregularities in the disposition of various cases. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Emmanuel, 688 So. 2d 222 (Miss. 1996).

Justice court judge abused his authority by failing to comply with acknowledgment that he executed, and by entering orders in cases which were not pending before his court, justifying public reprimand and assessment of costs. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Hartzog, 646 So. 2d 1319 (Miss. 1994).

Justice court judge was removed from office for misconduct in the performance of his judicial duties, in view of the number of offenses committed as well as his denial of any wrongdoing. Mississippi Judicial Performance Comm'n v. Hopkins, 590 So. 2d 857 (Miss. 1991).

Justice court judge received private reprimand for first infraction involving collecting fines, failing to sign criminal dockets, and dismissal of tickets, where there was no intent to be detrimental to law enforcement or judicial fairness, and no hint of dishonesty or attempt to gain political favor. Mississippi Judicial Performance Comm'n v. Justice Court Judge, 580 So. 2d 1259 (Miss. 1991).

Sanction of public reprimand and fine of $500 was not too harsh a punishment for judge's improper dismissal of non-moving violations and traffic tickets, assessment of excessive fees and costs, and failure to sign court dockets. Mississippi Judicial Performance Comm'n v. Cowart, 566 So. 2d 1251 (Miss. 1990).

It was immaterial that justice court judge may not have known the law, that he was negligent, or that he did not understand the law; removal from office was warranted, where judge failed to file 28 of his DUI adjudications and 552 other routine traffic offenses with the Department of Public Safety. In re Quick, 553 So. 2d 522 (Miss. 1989).

Justice court judge was publicly censured, fined $500, and suspended without pay for thirty days, for ordering or allowing an improper alteration of official court records, and for refusing to allow a debtor-defendant to redeem property replevined in his court and then purchasing the property himself at a price which appeared to be below market value. In re Mullen, 530 So. 2d 175 (Miss. 1988).

Justice court judge was publicly reprimanded and fined $250, for improper conduct in handling of speeding tickets, D.U.I. charges, and criminal bad check cases, and for interference with orderly assignment of cases by the justice court clerk. In re Hearn, 515 So. 2d 1225 (Miss. 1987).

Justice court judge violated this canon by disrupting court proceedings, accusing another judge and wildlife officers of impropriety, and acting on behalf of criminal defendants. In re Cooksey, 515 So. 2d 957 (Miss. 1987).

Mishandling of funds.

Former judge's failure to pay office-related charges to vendors after being reimbursed for such charges by the State was willful misconduct prejudicial to the administration of justice which brought the judicial office into disrepute, and he was publicly reprimanded. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Teel, 863 So. 2d 973 (Miss. 2004).

Justice court judge was removed from office for using his judgeship for his own pecuniary benefit, where he collected fines or fees and failed to remit them to the court clerk. Mississippi Judicial Performance Comm'n v. Coleman, 553 So. 2d 513 (Miss. 1989).

Judge was removed from office for his misappropriation and mishandling of money collected by virtue of his office as justice court judge. In re Stewart, 490 So. 2d 882 (Miss. 1986).

Justice court judge was fined $1,400, publicly reprimanded, and removed from office for misappropriation of funds over a period of seven years. In re Brown, 458 So. 2d 681 (Miss. 1984).

Justice court judge was fined and publicly reprimanded for using criminal process to collect civil debts, failing to properly docket and process bad checks, failing to properly collect and account for contributions to county law library fund, collecting fees in excess of statutory maximum and paying fees in excess of statutory maximum to court officials, and having a pecuniary interest in the outcome of litigation filed in his court. In re Lambert, 421 So. 2d 1023 (Miss. 1982).

Justice court judge was removed from office for mishandling and unlawfully converting public money to his own use. In re Anderson, 412 So. 2d 743 (Miss. 1982).

Personal conduct.

Order that the judge be suspended from office for a period of one year was appropriate because his disparaging racial remarks were not protected speech under either the federal or state constitution. The judge's remarks violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2(A) and (B), and 3(B)(5), thus causing the judge's conduct to be actionable under Miss. Const. Art. VI, § 177A. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Osborne, 11 So. 3d 107 (Miss. 2009).

Justice court judge was publicly reprimanded and assessed costs as he committed willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice which brought the office into disrepute in violation of Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2A, 3B(2), 3B(4), 3B(7), 3B(8), and 3C(1) by, among other things, failing to appear at the apartment inspection which he had scheduled in a landlord-tenant dispute, leaving an attorney and four apartment employees waiting without notification, and loudly and publicly chastising an attorney in open court. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Sutton, 985 So. 2d 322 (Miss. 2008).

Where a county judge had filed new actions within six months of his appointment after misinterpreting the law in Miss. Code Ann. §§ 9-1-25, 9-9-9, the appellate court held that the judge had not willfully abused the privilege of filing new complaints while in office, and the court adopted the commission's recommendation that the judge be publicly reprimanded and that he be reinstated after his temporary suspension. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Osborne, 876 So. 2d 324 (Miss. 2004).

The record supported the conclusion that a judge's offensive comments to members of the court staff constituted gross personal conduct in violation of Canons 1, 2A, 2B, 3A(1), 3A(3) and 3B(1). Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Spencer, 725 So. 2d 171 (Miss. 1998).

The judge's conduct violated Canons 1, 2, and 3 of the Code of Judicial Conduct when he came down from the bench, grabbed defendant around the head, used racial epithets and other inappropriate language, and then denied ever having met the defendant previously, when in fact, he had met him during a prior confrontation relating to the judge's private business. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Guest, 717 So. 2d 325 (Miss. 1998).

Justice court judge's relationship with defendant who appeared before her, and her subsequent marriage to that individual, damaged reputation and integrity of her judicial office and justified her removal from office. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Milling, 651 So. 2d 531 (Miss. 1995).

Recusal.

Alleged biased comments by the judge were only a snapshot of his entire statement and it was clear that the judge put aside his feelings as a father and sentenced an inmate according to the facts and the law, plus the comments did not express any prejudgment of the inmate that would have cast a reasonable doubt about the validity of the presumption of the judge's impartiality; thus, the court rejected the claim that the judge should have been recused under Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3(E). Gaddy v. State, 21 So. 3d 677 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 130 S. Ct. 2115, 176 L. Ed. 2d 741, 2010 U.S. LEXIS 3422, 78 U.S.L.W. 3611 (U.S. 2010).

Removal of the judge from office was appropriate because he violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2(A), and 3(E) when he committed a minor child to detention after recusing himself from the case and then entered an order appointing another judge to hear the case without authority. His actions constituted willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice and his assertion that his actions were a mere error of law was without merit. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Osborne, 16 So. 3d 16 (Miss. 2009).

Alleged biased comments by the judge were only a snapshot of his entire statement and it was clear that the judge put aside his feelings as a father and sentenced an inmate according to the facts and the law, plus the comments did not express any prejudgment of the inmate that would have cast a reasonable doubt about the validity of the presumption of the judge's impartiality; thus, the court rejected the claim that the judge should have been recused under Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3(E). Gaddy v. State, 21 So. 3d 677 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 130 S. Ct. 2115, 176 L. Ed. 2d 741, 2010 U.S. LEXIS 3422, 78 U.S.L.W. 3611 (U.S. 2010).

Not only was property owner's appeal of his motion to recuse a county court judge failed to abide by the requirements of Miss. R. App. P. 48B because it was improperly filed with the county court clerk, instead of with the Supreme Court of Mississippi and it did not contain a transcript of the recusal proceedings, but his motion for recusal did not abide by the requirement of Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 1.15 because it was not filed with the appropriate affidavit and was untimely. Furthermore, county court judge did not have to recuse himself under Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3(E)(1) or Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 1.15 because not only was the county court judge's prior knowledge merely from presiding over the case in open court, not from any sort of improper ex parte prior knowledge, but the owner's case was dismissed based on the statute of limitations, which did not require the county court judge to interpret his prior order. Whitley v. City of Pearl, 994 So. 2d 857 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Circuit judge, who as an assistant district attorney had participated in a suspect's prosecution, was disqualified from ruling on the suspect's motion for post-conviction relief and should have recused himself because, even assuming that the suspect had effectively waived the judge's disqualification to preside over his guilty plea hearing, that waiver did not extend to the post-conviction proceeding, which was separate and distinct from the underlying criminal proceeding. Holmes v. State, 966 So. 2d 858 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In a case alleging tortious interference with business relations, there was no error based on a trial judge's failure to recuse himself under Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 1.15 because the owners failed to raise the issue of alleged impartiality at the trial court level; the owners' website showed that they knew of a grounds for recusal at the time of trial, and even if the owners had not been able to raise this issue before the trial judge, a reversal would still not have been granted because the judge was not connected to the objectors by affinity or consanguinity, and he had no interest in the outcome of the case based on vague allegations that the judge had eaten at the owners' lodge. Bateman v. Gray, 963 So. 2d 1284 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Order resentencing defendant to 25 years in prison for armed robbery was overturned and the case was remanded for resentencing by a special judge appointed by the Mississippi Supreme Court, where the judge who resentenced defendant should have remained recused for all purposes in the case. The judge,by recusing himself after a dispute with defendant's attorney, implicitly recognized that a reasonable person, knowing all the circumstances, would harbor doubts about his impartiality. Payton v. State, 937 So. 2d 462 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 937 So. 2d 450, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 570 (Miss. 2006).

Standard test for recusal is that a judge must recuse himself if a reasonable person, knowing all the circumstances, would harbor doubts about his impartiality.

Payton v. State, 937 So. 2d 462 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 937 So. 2d 450, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 570 (Miss. 2006).

Once recused, a judge should take no further action in the case. Payton v. State, 937 So. 2d 462 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 937 So. 2d 450, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 570 (Miss. 2006).

While there is a general presumption that a judge is qualified and unbiased, once a judge recuses himself from a case, the burden shifts to the judge to show affirmatively a valid reason to set aside the disqualification. Payton v. State, 937 So. 2d 462 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 937 So. 2d 450, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 570 (Miss. 2006).

Where the judge presiding over appellant's post-conviction motion served a prosecutorial role in the underlying criminal case, these functions were inherently contradictory-zealous advocate versus neutral adjudicator. The judge should have been recused. Ryals v. State, 914 So. 2d 285 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Petitions for writ of mandamus for the recusal of a circuit judge in seven pending civil cases in which an attorney appeared were granted, pursuant to Miss. Code Judge. Conduct Canon 3(E)(1), as the impartiality of the judge towards the attorney was questioned and a reasonable person aware of all the circumstances would question whether the attorney's clients could get a fair hearing in the judge's court; however, the petitions were denied to the extent that they requested the judge's recusal in future cases in which the attorney appeared, as it was not the Supreme Court of Mississippi's practice to grant prospective recusal. In re Blake, 912 So. 2d 907 (Miss. 2005).

Pursuant to Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3, there was no evidence presented by the employee showing that the trial judge's son had a "legal" interest that could be substantially affected by the outcome of the proceeding; therefore, no objective reasonable person would conclude that the trial judge was not impartial; even had the trial judge made the disclosure, the ultimate result would be no different because there was no real basis for disqualification. Hathcock v. S. Farm Bureau Cas. Ins. Co., 912 So. 2d 844 (Miss. 2005).

In a child custody case, a motion for recusal based on the judge's partiality because the father's attorney had introduced the judge at a political rally was properly denied. Copeland v. Copeland, 904 So. 2d 1066 (Miss. 2004).

Denial of a motion for recusal of supreme court justices was proper where the motion failed to demonstrate facts that would have caused a reasonable person knowing all of the circumstances to doubt the justices' impartiality; the judges were perfectly capable of distinguishing between attorneys, their clients, and the legal issues that the attorney presented, even where animosity against the attorney might have existed, Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3E. Wash. Mut. Fin. Group, LLC v. Blackmon, 925 So. 2d 780 (Miss. 2004).

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

The intent of Canon 3B(12) prohibits the use of cameras in all courtrooms except under limited circumstances. Robinson, Jan. 3, 2003, A.G. Op. #02-0748.

Each judge must make a determination based on the facts and circumstances involved in each case whether that particular judge's impartiality might be reasonably questioned. If a reasonable person might question the judge's impartiality in a particular case, then the judge should recuse himself from that case. Littleton, Oct. 24, 2003, A.G. Op. 03-0563.

Canon 4. A Judge shall so conduct the Judge's extra-judicial activities as to minimize the risk of conflict with judicial obligations.

A. Extra-judicial Activities in General. A judge shall conduct all of the judge's extra-judicial activities so that they do not:

(1) cast reasonable doubt on the judge's capacity to act impartially as a judge;

(2) demean the judicial office; or

(3) interfere with the proper performance of judicial duties.

Commentary

Complete separation of a judge from extra-judicial activities is neither possible nor wise; a judge should not become isolated from the community in which the judge lives.

Expressions of bias or prejudice by a judge, even outside the judge's judicial activities, may cast reasonable doubt on the judge's capacity to act impartially as a judge. Expressions which may do so include jokes or other remarks demeaning individuals on the basis of their race, gender, religion, national origin, disability, age, sexual orientation or socioeconomic status. See Section 2C and accompanying Commentary.

B. Avocational Activities. A judge may speak, write, lecture, teach and participate in other extra-judicial activities concerning the law, the legal system, the administration of justice and non-legal subjects, subject to the requirements of this Code.

Commentary

As a judicial officer and person specially learned in the law, a judge is in a unique position to contribute to the improvement of the law, the legal system, and the administration of justice, including revision of substantive and procedural law and improvement of criminal and juvenile justice. To the extent that time permits, a judge is encouraged to do so, either independently or through a bar association, judicial conference or other organization dedicated to the improvement of the law. Judges may participate in efforts to promote the fair administration of justice, the independence of the judiciary and the integrity of the legal profession and may express opposition to the persecution of lawyers and judges in other countries because of their professional activities.

In this and other Sections of Canon 4, the phrase "subject to the requirements of this Code" is used, notably in connection with a judge's governmental, civic or charitable activities. This phrase is included to remind judges that the use of permissive language in various Sections of the Code does not relieve a judge from the other requirements of the Code that apply to the specific conduct.

C. Governmental, Civic or Charitable Activities.

(1) A judge shall not make an appearance before, or otherwise consult with, an executive or legislative body or official or a public hearing except on matters concerning the law, the legal system or the administration of justice or except when acting pro se in a matter involving the judge or the judge's interests.

Commentary

See Section 2B regarding the obligation to avoid improper influence.

(2) A judge shall not accept appointment to a governmental committee or commission or other governmental position that is concerned with issues of fact or policy on matters other than the improvement of the law, the legal system or the administration of justice. A judge may, however, represent a country, state or locality on ceremonial occasions or in connection with historical, educational or cultural activities.

Commentary

Section 4C(2) prohibits a judge from accepting any governmental position except one relating to the improvement of the law, legal system or administration of justice as authorized by Section 4C(3). The appropriateness of accepting extra-judicial assignments must be assessed in light of the demands on judicial resources created by crowded dockets and the need to protect the courts from involvement in extra-judicial matters that may prove to be controversial. Judges should not accept governmental appointments that are likely to interfere with the effectiveness and independence of the judiciary.

Section 4C(2) does not govern a judge's service in a non-governmental position. See Section 4C(3) permitting service by a judge with organizations devoted to the improvement of the law, the legal system or the administration of justice and with educational, religious, charitable, fraternal or civic organizations not conducted for profit. For example, service on the board of a public educational institution, unless it were a law school, would be prohibited under Section 4C(2), but service on the board of a public law school or any private educational institution would generally be permitted under Section 4C(3).

(3) A judge may serve as an officer, director, trustee or non-legal advisor of an organization or governmental agency devoted to the improvement of the law, the legal system or the administration of justice or of an educational, religious, charitable, fraternal or civic organization not conducted for profit, subject to the following limitations and the other requirements of this Code.

Commentary

Section 4C(3) does not apply to a judge's service in a governmental position unconnected with the improvement of the law, the legal system or the administration of justice. See Section 4C(2).

See Commentary to Section 4B regarding use of the phrase "subject to the following limitations and the other requirements of this Code." As an example of the meaning of the phrase, a judge permitted by Section 4C(3) to serve on the board of a fraternal institution may be prohibited from such service by Sections 2C or 4A if the institution practices invidious discrimination or if service on the board otherwise casts reasonable doubt on the judge's capacity to act impartially as a judge.

Service by a judge on behalf of a civic or charitable organization may be governed by other provisions of Canon 4 in addition to Section 4C. For example, a judge is prohibited by Section 4G from serving as a legal advisor to a civic or charitable organization.

(a) A judge shall not serve as an officer, director, trustee or non-legal advisor if it is likely that the organization:

(i) will be engaged in proceedings that would ordinarily come before the judge, or

(ii) will be engaged frequently in adversary proceedings in the court of which the judge is a member or in any court subject to the appellate jurisdiction of the court of which the judge is a member.

Commentary

The changing nature of some organizations and of their relationship to the law makes it necessary for a judge regularly to reexamine the activities of each organization with which the judge is affiliated to determine if it is proper for the judge to continue the affiliation. For example, in many jurisdictions charitable hospitals are now more frequently in court than in the past. Similarly, the boards of some legal aid organizations now make policy decisions that may have political significance or imply commitment to causes that may come before the courts for adjudication.

(b) A judge as an officer, director, trustee or non-legal advisor, or as a member or otherwise:

(i) may assist such an organization in planning fund-raising and may participate in the management and investment of the organization's funds, but shall not personally participate in the solicitation of funds or other fund-raising activities, except that a judge may solicit funds from other judges over whom the judge does not exercise supervisory or appellate authority;

(ii) may make recommendations to public and private fund-granting organizations on projects and programs concerning the law, the legal system or the administration of justice;

(iii) shall not personally participate in membership solicitation if the solicitation might reasonably be perceived as coercive or, except as permitted in Section 4C(3)(b)(i), if the membership solicitation is essentially a fund-raising mechanism;

(iv) shall not use or permit the use of the prestige of judicial office for fund-raising or membership solicitation.

Commentary

A judge may solicit membership or endorse or encourage membership efforts for an organization devoted to the improvement of the law, the legal system or the administration of justice or a nonprofit educational, religious, charitable, fraternal or civic organization as long as the solicitation cannot reasonably be perceived as coercive and is not essentially a fund-raising mechanism. Solicitation of funds for an organization and solicitation of memberships similarly involve the danger that the person solicited will feel obligated to respond favorably to the solicitor if the solicitor is in a position of influence or control. A judge must not engage in direct, individual solicitation of funds or memberships in person, in writing or by telephone except in the following cases: 1) a judge may solicit for funds or memberships other judges over whom the judge does not exercise supervisory or appellate authority, 2) a judge may solicit other persons for membership in the organizations described above if neither those persons nor persons with whom they are affiliated are likely ever to appear before the court on which the judge serves and 3) a judge who is an officer of such an organization may send a general membership solicitation mailing over the judge's signature.

Use of an organization letterhead for fund-raising or membership solicitation does not violate Section 4C(3)(b) provided the letterhead lists only the judge's name and office or other position in the organization, and, if comparable designations are listed for other persons, the judge's judicial designation. In addition, a judge must also make reasonable efforts to ensure that the judge's staff, court officials and others subject to the judge's direction and control do not solicit funds on the judge's behalf for any purpose, charitable or otherwise.

A judge must not be a speaker or guest of honor at an organization's fund-raising event, but mere attendance at such an event is permissible if otherwise consistent with this Code.

D. Financial Activities.

(1) Judges should refrain from financial and business dealings that tend to reflect adversely on their impartiality, interfere with the proper performance of their judicial duties, exploit their judicial positions, or involve them in frequent transactions with lawyers or persons likely to come before the court on which the judges serve.

(2) Judges should manage their investments and other financial interests to minimize the number of cases in which they are disqualified. As soon as a judge can do so without serious financial detriment, the judge should divest himself or herself of investments and other financial interests that might require frequent disqualification.

(3) Neither judges nor members of their families residing in their households should accept a gift, bequest, favor, or loan from anyone reflecting the expectation of judicial favor.

(4) Non-public information acquired by a judge in the judge's judicial capacity should not be used or disclosed by the judge in financial dealings or for any other purpose not related to the judge's judicial duties.

Commentary

The prohibition of Section 4D(3), limiting gifts that judges and their families may accept, does not prohibit gifts incident to public testimonials to the judges, books supplied by publishers on a complimentary basis for official use, and invitations to judges and their spouses to attend bar-related functions or activities devoted to the improvement of the law, the legal system or the administration of justice. Judges and their families residing in their households may accept ordinary social hospitality, gifts, bequests, favors and loans from relatives, wedding and engagement gifts, loans from lending institutions in the regular course of business on the same terms generally available to persons who are not judges, and scholarships and fellowships awarded on the same terms as those applied to other applicants. Judges and members of their families residing in their households may accept any other gifts, bequests, favors and loans only if the donor is not a party or likely to come before them, and the gifts are reported as may be required by law. Gifts, bequests, favors and loans are to be reported as may be required by the Ethics in Government statutes. See Miss. Code Ann. § 25-4-27. Section 4D differs from the provisions of the ABA model and retains in large part the provisions of the Mississippi Code of Judicial Conduct as it existed prior to the current revision. Although this section does not prohibit holding specific extra-judicial positions or engaging in other specific business activities, it does require that judges refrain from business activities that might reflect adversely on their impartiality and that they manage their business activities so as to minimize the need for recusal. Regarding recusals and disqualification, see Section 3E.

E. Fiduciary Activities.

(1) A judge shall not serve as executor, administrator or other personal representative, trustee, guardian, attorney in fact or other fiduciary except for the estate, trust or person of a member of the judge's family, and then only if such service will not interfere with the proper performance of judicial duties.

(2) A judge shall not serve as a fiduciary if it is likely that the judge as a fiduciary will be engaged in proceedings that would ordinarily come before the judge, or if the estate, trust or ward becomes involved in adversary proceedings in the court on which the judge serves or one under its appellate jurisdiction.

(3) The same restrictions on financial activities that apply to a judge personally also apply to the judge while acting in a fiduciary capacity.

Commentary

The Time for Compliance provision of this Code (Application, Section E) postpones the time for compliance with certain provisions of this Section in some cases.

The restrictions imposed by this Canon may conflict with the judge's obligation as a fiduciary. For example, a judge should resign as trustee if detriment to the trust would result from divestiture of holdings, the retention of which would place the judge in violation of Section 4D(3).

F. Service as Arbitrator or Mediator. A judge shall not act as an arbitrator or mediator or otherwise perform judicial functions in a private capacity unless expressly authorized by law.

Commentary

Section 4F does not prohibit a judge from participating in arbitration, mediation or settlement conferences performed as part of judicial duties.

G. Practice of Law.

1. A judge shall not practice law. Notwithstanding this prohibition, a judge may act pro se and may, without compensation, give legal advice to and draft or review documents for a member of the judge's family.

2. A judge must also make reasonable efforts to ensure that the judge's staff, court officials and others subject to the judge's direction and control do not practice law in a representative capacity. Notwithstanding this prohibition, staff, court officials and others subject to the judge's direction may act pro se, and those otherwise licensed to practice law may, without compensation, give legal advice to and draft or review documents for members of their families.

Commentary

This prohibition refers to the practice of law in a representative capacity and not in a pro se capacity. Judges may act for themselves in all legal matters, including matters involving litigation and matters involving appearances before or other dealings with legislative and other governmental bodies. However, in so doing, a judge must not abuse the prestige of office to advance the interests of the judge or the judge's family. See Section 2(B). Certain officials and others are exempt pursuant to Section D of the Application Section of the Code of Judicial Conduct.

The Code allows a judge to give legal advice to and draft legal documents for members of the judge's family, so long as the judge receives no compensation. A judge must not, however, act as an advocate or negotiator for a member of the judge's family in a legal matter. This provision does not imply any privilege to practice law to those judges, staff members, court officials or others subject to the judge's control and direction who are not licensed to practice law. [Canon 4(G) and commentary amended May 31, 2007.]

H. Compensation, Reimbursement and Reporting.

(1) Compensation and Reimbursement. A judge may receive compensation and reimbursement of expenses for the extra-judicial activities permitted by this Code, if the source of such payments does not give the appearance of influencing the judge's performance of judicial duties or otherwise give the appearance of impropriety.

(a) Compensation shall not exceed a reasonable amount nor shall it exceed what a person who is not a judge would receive for the same activity.

(b) Expense reimbursement shall be limited to the actual cost of travel, food and lodging reasonably incurred by the judge and, where appropriate to the occasion, by the judge's spouse or guest. Any payment in excess of such an amount is compensation.

(2) Public Reports. A judge shall comply with those provisions of law requiring the reporting of economic interest to the Mississippi Ethics Commission.

Commentary

See Commentary to Section 4D(4) regarding reporting of gifts, bequests and loans. See also Miss. Code Ann. §§ 25-4-25 through 29 regarding the filing of statements of economic interest with the Mississippi Ethics Commission. The ABA model suggests that since Canon 6 in the 1972 model code was drafted, reporting requirements in most jurisdictions have become much more comprehensive, and that canons regulating reporting of income should be tailored to the requirements of individual jurisdictions. Subsection 4H 2), therefore, simply requires compliance with the statutory provisions for reporting to the Ethics Commission.

The Code does not prohibit a judge from accepting honoraria or speaking fees provided that the compensation is reasonable and commensurate with the task performed. A judge should ensure, however, that no conflicts are created by the arrangement. A judge must not appear to trade on the judicial position for personal advantage. Nor should a judge spend significant time away from court duties to meet speaking or writing commitments for compensation. In addition, the source of the payment must not raise any question of undue influence or the judge's ability or willingness to be impartial.

I. Disclosure of a judge's income, debts, investments or other assets is required only to the extent provided in this Canon and in Sections 3E and 3F, or as otherwise required by law.

Commentary

Section 3E requires judges to disqualify themselves in any proceedings in which they have economic interests. See "economic interest" as explained in the Terminology Section. Section 4D requires judges to refrain from engaging in business and from financial activities that might interfere with the impartial performance of judicial duties; Section 4H requires judges to report compensation they received for activities outside judicial office. Judges have the rights of any other citizens, including the right to privacy of the judges' financial affairs, except to the extent that limitations established by law are required to safeguard the proper performance of the judges' duties.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Judicial misconduct.
Practice of law.

Financial activities.

Where a judge became involved in lease negotiations pertaining to a barge landing site for a county landfill, and advised one party to the lease on the benefits of dealing with the landfill and drafting the lease agreement himself, he violated Canons 1,2A, 2B, 3A(1), 3C, 5C(1) and 5F, as well as §§ 9-1-25 and 23-15-975. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Jenkins, 725 So. 2d 162 (Miss. 1998).

Where a judge allowed intervention in a will contest by a company that he was assisting in locating a barge landing site for a county landfill, at the same time that he was negotiating with the proponent of the will, and ruled in favor of the company, he violated Canons 1, 2A, 2B, 3A(1), 3A(4), 3C, 3D,5C(1) and 5F. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Jenkins, 725 So. 2d 162 (Miss. 1998).

Justice court judge was fined and publicly reprimanded for using criminal process to collect civil debts, failing to properly docket and process bad checks, failing to properly collect and account for contributions to county law library fund, collecting fees in excess of statutory maximum and paying fees in excess of statutory maximum to court officials, and having a pecuniary interest in the outcome of litigation filed in his court. In re Lambert, 421 So. 2d 1023 (Miss. 1982).

Judicial misconduct.

Justice court judge was suspended from office for ninety days without pay and was publicly reprimanded for violating Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2A, 2B, 3B(2), 3B(4), 4A, and Miss. Const. art. 6, § 177A, where the judge engaged in ex parte communications with a female litigant and inappropriately handled a fine reduction. Allegations that the judge made sexual advances toward the female litigant were not established by clear and convincing evidence. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Boone, 60 So. 3d 172 (Miss. 2011).

Where a judge breached the peace during the repossession of an automobile jointly owned by the judge's wife and mother-in-law, his conduct violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 4; the judge blocked the tow truck's travel and attempted to intimidate officers at the scene. Pursuant to Miss. Const. Art. 6, § 177A, the Supreme Court of Mississippi suspended the judge for 180 days without compensation. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Osborne, 977 So. 2d 314 (Miss. 2008).

County justice court judge was publicly reprimanded for violating Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2(A), 2(B), 3(B)(2), 4(A)(1)-(3) as he ordered that his grandson's driver's license be reinstated (after the grandson pled nolo contendere to DUI) and attempted to have a sheriff allow the grandson to serve his time in a local jail instead of a state facility. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Cole, 932 So. 2d 9 (Miss. 2006).

While acting in an official capacity, judge violated Miss. Const. art. VI, § 177A, Miss. Code Ann. § 9-11-33, and Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2(A), 2(B), 3(A), 3(B)(2), 3(B)(7), 3(B)(8), 3(C)(1), 3(C)(2), 4(A), and 4(D)(1), by conducting ex parte communications with parties, rendering decisions without giving notice of hearings to parties, and habitually taking civil cases under advisement and failing to render timely decisions; a public reprimand, suspension for 30 days without pay, and payment of the costs of the proceeding was held to be appropriate discipline. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. McPhail, 874 So. 2d 441 (Miss. 2004).

Practice of law.

Where a county judge had filed new actions within six months of his appointment after misinterpreting the law in Miss. Code Ann. §§ 9-1-25, 9-9-9, the appellate court held that the judge had not willfully abused the privilege of filing new complaints while in office, and the court adopted the commission's recommendation that the judge be publicly reprimanded and that he be reinstated after his temporary suspension. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Osborne, 876 So. 2d 324 (Miss. 2004).

Judge who served part-time—pro tem as a municipal court judge,and also engaged in private criminal defense practice, received sanction of public reprimand for assuming role of attorney, and presumably accepting a fee, for representing a defendant and attempting to reduce the same bond which he, as city judge, had earlier set for that defendant. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Atkinson, 645 So. 2d 1331 (Miss. 1994).

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

A practicing attorney selected as a special judge for service on the Supreme Court may remain of counsel in all cases presently pending in the state and federal courts. However, pursuant to § 9-1-25 which applies to any judge of the Supreme Court, a special judge may not be engaged in the practice of law and, therefore, may not practice in any of the state courts during his tenure as a special judge. A special judge may, pursuant to the same statute, practice in the federal courts in any case in which he or she was engaged when appointed. Hurst, May, 21, 2004, A.G. Op. 04-0180.

Canon 5. A judge or judicial candidate shall refrain from inappropriate political activity.

A. All Judges and Candidates

(1) Except as authorized in Sections 5B(2), 5C(1) and 5C(2), a judge or a candidate for election to judicial office shall not:

(a) act as a leader or hold an office in a political organization;

(b) make speeches for a political organization or candidate or publicly endorse a candidate for public office;

(c) solicit funds for or pay an assessment or make a contribution to a political organization or candidate, attend political gatherings, or purchase tickets for political party dinners, or other political functions.

Commentary

A judge or candidate for judicial office retains the right to participate in the political process as a voter.

Where false information concerning a judicial candidate is made public, a judge or another judicial candidate having knowledge of the facts is not prohibited by Section 5A(1) from making the facts public.

Section 5A(1)(a) does not prohibit a candidate for elective judicial office from retaining during candidacy a public office such as county prosecutor, which is not "an office in a political organization."

Section 5A(1)(b) does not prohibit judges or judicial candidate from privately expressing their views on judicial candidates or other candidates for public office.

A candidate does not publicly endorse another candidate for public office by having that candidate's name on the same ticket. However, Sections 23-15-973 et seq., Miss. Code Ann. (1972) impose restrictions on candidates and political organizations to assure the non-partisan quality of judicial elections for Supreme Court, Court of Appeals, Chancery Court, Circuit Court and County Court justices and judges.

(2) A judge shall resign from judicial office upon becoming a candidate either in a party primary or in a general election for a non-judicial office, except that the judge may continue to hold judicial office while being a candidate for election to or serving as a delegate in a state constitutional convention if the judge is otherwise permitted by law to do so.

(3) A candidate for a judicial office:

(a) shall maintain the dignity appropriate to judicial office and act in a manner consistent with the integrity and independence of the judiciary, and shall encourage members of the candidate's family to adhere to the same standards of political conduct in support of the candidate as apply to the candidate;

Commentary

Although judicial candidates must encourage members of their families to adhere to the same standards of political conduct in support of the candidates that apply to the candidates, family members are free to participate in other political activity. Family members are not prohibited by this subsection from serving on the candidates' campaign committees and otherwise actively involving themselves in the campaigns.

(b) shall prohibit employees and officials who serve at the pleasure of the candidate, and shall discourage other employees and officials subject to the candidate's direction and control, from doing on the candidate's behalf what the candidate is prohibited from doing under the Sections of this Canon;

(c) except to the extent permitted by Section 5C(2), shall not authorize or knowingly permit any other person to do for the candidate what the candidate is prohibited from doing under the Sections of this Canon;

(d) shall not:

(i) make pledges or promises of conduct in office other than the faithful and impartial performance of the duties of the office;

(ii) make statements that commit or appear to commit the candidate with respect to cases, controversies or issues that are likely to come before the court; or

(iii) knowingly misrepresent the identity, qualifications, present position or other fact concerning the candidate or an opponent;

Commentary

Section 5A(3)(d)(i) prohibits a candidate for judicial office making pledges or promises to decide cases in any particular way and statements committing the candidate with respect to cases, controversies or issues likely to come before the court on which the candidate will serve if elected. This section does not prohibit or limit a candidate's freedom to announce the candidate's current views on issues so long as the announcement does not bind the candidate to maintain those views after election. See Republican Party of Minn. v. White, 536 U.S. 765 (2002) (declaring unconstitutional restrictions in the Minnesota Code of Judicial Conduct on the announcement of views on legal and political issues.) The comparable offending language, referred to as the "announce clause", formerly appeared in our Code of Judicial Conduct, but was removed with the revision of the code on April 4, 2002. This Section does not prohibit an incumbent judge from making private statements to other judges or court personnel in the performance of judicial duties.

Section 5A(3)(d)(ii) prohibits a candidate for judicial office making statements that appear to commit the candidate regarding cases, controversies or issues likely to come before the court. As a corollary, a candidate should emphasize in any public statement the candidate's duty to uphold the law regardless of the candidate's personal views. See also Section 3B(9), the general rule on public comment by judges. Section 5A(3)(d) does not prohibit a candidate from making pledges and promises respecting improvements in court administration.

Section 5A(3)(d) applies to any statement made in the process of securing judicial office, such as statements to commissions charged with judicial selection and tenure and legislative bodies confirming appointment. See also Rule 8.2 of the Mississippi Rules of Professional Conduct. Phrases such as "tough on crime," "soft on crime," "pro-business," "anti-business," "pro-life," "pro-choice," or in any similar characterizations suggesting personal views on issues which may come before the courts, when applied to the candidate or an opponent, may be considered to be prohibited by Section 5A(3)(d) only when used in a context which contain a pledge or promise to decide cases in a particular manner. [Commentary amended effective February 26, 2004.]

(e) may respond to personal attacks or attacks on the candidate's record as long as the response does not violate Section 5A(3)(d).

B. Candidates Seeking Appointment to Judicial or Other Governmental Office.

(1) Candidates for appointment to judicial office or judges seeking other governmental office shall not solicit or accept funds, personally or through a committee or otherwise, to support their candidacies.

(2) A candidate for appointment to judicial office or a judge seeking other governmental office shall not engage in any political activity to secure the appointment except that:

(a) such persons may:

(i) communicate with the appointing authority, including any selection or nominating commission or other agency designated to screen candidates;

(ii) seek support or endorsement for the appointment from organizations that regularly make recommendations for reappointment or appointment to the office, and from individuals to the extent requested or required by those specified in Section 5B(2)(a); and

(iii) provide to those specified in Sections 5B(2)(a)(i) and 5B(2)(a)(ii) information as to the candidate's qualifications for the office;

(b) a non-judge candidate for appointment to judicial office may, in addition, unless otherwise prohibited by law:

(i) retain an office in a political organization,

(ii) attend political gatherings, and

(iii) continue to pay ordinary assessments and ordinary contributions to a political organization or candidate and purchase tickets for political party dinners or other political functions.

Commentary

Section 5B(2) provides a limited exception to the restrictions imposed by Sections 5A(1) and 5D. Under Section 5B(2), candidates seeking reappointment to the same judicial office or appointment to another judicial office or other governmental office may apply for the appointment and seek appropriate support.

Although under Section 5B(2) non-judge candidates seeking appointment to judicial office are permitted during candidacy to retain office in a political organization, attend political gatherings and pay ordinary dues and assessments, they remain subject to other provisions of this Code during candidacy. See Sections 5B(1), 5B(2)(a), 5E and Application Section.

C. Judges and Candidates Subject to Public Election.

(1) Judges holding an office filled by public election between competing candidates, or candidates for such office, may, only insofar as permitted by law, attend political gatherings, speak to such gatherings in their own behalf while candidates for election or re-election, identify themselves as members of political parties, and contribute to political parties or organizations.

Commentary

Section 5C recognizes the distinction between appropriate political activities by judges and candidates subject to non-partisan election and those subject to partisan elections. The language of Section 5C differs from that of corresponding provisions in the ABA Model Code, Sections C(1)(a)(ii) and (iii), in recognition of Mississippi's non-partisan elections for certain positions. Furthermore, Section 23-15-973 et seq., Miss. Code Ann. (1972) imposes restrictions on candidates and political organizations to assure the non-partisan quality of judicial elections for Supreme Court, Court of Appeals, Chancery Court, Circuit Court and County Court justices and judges. Section 5C(1) permits judges subject to election at any time to be involved in limited political activity. Section 5D, applicable solely to incumbent judges, would otherwise bar this activity. Section 5C(1)(b)(iv) of the ABA Model Code has not been incorporated. Attending or speaking at a political party gathering in the judge's own behalf while a candidate does not constitute alignments or affiliation with the party sponsoring the gathering.

(2) A candidate shall not personally solicit or accept campaign contributions or personally solicit publicly stated support. A candidate may, however, establish committees of responsible persons to conduct campaigns for the candidate through media advertisements, brochures, mailings, candidate forums and other means not prohibited by law. Such committees may solicit and accept reasonable campaign contributions, manage the expenditure of funds for the candidate's campaign and obtain public statements of support for the candidacy. Such committees are not prohibited from soliciting and accepting reasonable campaign contributions and public support from lawyers. A candidate's committees shall not solicit or accept contributions and public support for the candidate's campaign earlier than 60 days before the qualifying deadline or later than 120 days after the last election in which the candidate participates during the election year. A candidate shall not use or permit the use of campaign contributions for the private benefit of the candidate or others.

Commentary

There is legitimate concern about a judge's impartiality when parties whose interests may come before a judge, or the lawyers who represent such parties, are known to have made contributions to the election campaigns of judicial candidates. Section 5C(2) recognizes that in many jurisdictions judicial candidates must raise funds to support their candidacies for election to judicial office. It therefore permits a candidate, other than a candidate for appointment, to establish campaign committees to solicit and accept public support and financial contributions. Though not prohibited, campaign contributions of which a judge has knowledge, made by lawyers or others who appear before the judge, may, by virtue of their size or source, raise questions about a judge's impartiality and be cause for disqualification as provided under Section 3E.

Campaign committees established under Section 5C(2) should manage campaign finances responsibly, avoiding deficits that might necessitate post-election fund-raising, to the extent possible. Such committees must at all times comply with applicable statutory provisions governing their conduct.

Section 5C(2) does not prohibit a candidate from initiating an evaluation by a judicial selection commission or bar association, or, subject to the requirements of this Code, from responding to a request for information from any organization.

(3) Candidates shall instruct their campaign committees at the start of the campaign not to accept campaign contributions for any election that exceed those limitations placed on contributions by individuals, political action committees and corporations by law.

Commentary

The ABA Model Code of Judicial Conduct is drafted for the insertion of specific limits on contributions for judicial campaigns. As adopted for Mississippi, this section simply makes references to limits established by the Legislature by statutes which limit contributions to $5,000 in appellate court races, to $2,500 in chancery, circuit or county court races, and generally limits corporate contributions to $1,000. See Miss. Code Ann. § 23-15-1021 (2000 Supp.) (judicial races) and Miss. Code Ann. § 97-13-15 (1999 Supp.) (corporate contributions.)

(4) A candidate and the candidate's committee shall timely comply with all provisions of law requiring the disclosure and reporting of contributions, loans and extensions of credit.

Commentary

Section 5C(4) of the ABA Model Code of Judicial Conduct which makes special provision for reporting campaign contributions is replaced by the foregoing Section 5C(4) which requires compliance with all provisions of law. See Miss. Code Ann. §§ 23-15-805 and 23-15-1023 (2000 Supp.)

The ABA Model Code includes a Section 5C(5) which approves, under some circumstances, a judicial candidate's name being listed on election materials along with the names of other candidates. This has not been incorporated in the revision of the Mississippi canons.

D. Incumbent Judges. A judge shall not engage in any political activity except as authorized under any other Section of this Code, on behalf of measures to improve the law, the legal system or the administration of justice, or as expressly authorized by law.

Commentary

Neither Section 5D nor any other section of the Code prohibits a judge in the exercise of administrative functions from engaging in planning and other official activities with members of the executive and legislative branches of government. With respect to a judge's activity on behalf of measures to improve the law, the legal system and the administration of justice, see Commentary to Section 4B and Section 4C(1) and its Commentary.

Sections 5A through 5D limit the participation of judges and candidates in political activities. Section 5D expressly prohibits judges from engaging "in any political activity" not expressly authorized by the Code of Judicial Conduct or by law. These provisions do not prohibit voting in party primaries and general elections, which is not "political activity" as the phrase is used in Canon 5. The statute governing non-partisan judicial elections, while prohibiting candidates for judicial offices covered by the statute from campaigning or qualifying for the offices based on party affiliation, does not preclude the candidates from voting in party primaries. Miss. Code Ann. § 23-25-973 (Supp. 2000.)

E. Applicability. Canon 5 generally applies to all incumbent judges and judicial candidates. Successful candidates, whether or not incumbents, are subject to judicial discipline for their campaign conduct; unsuccessful candidates who are lawyers are subject to lawyer discipline for their campaign conduct. Lawyers who are candidates for judicial office are subject to Rule 8.2(b) of the Mississippi Rules of Professional Conduct. However, the provisions of Canon 5F below shall not apply to elections for the offices of justice court judge and municipal judge.

F. Special Committee--Proceedings and Authority. In every year in which an election is held for Supreme Court, Court of Appeals, chancery court, circuit court or county court judge in this state and at such other times as the Supreme Court may deem appropriate, a Special Committee on Judicial Election Campaign Intervention ("Special Committee") shall be created whose responsibility shall be to issue advisory opinions and to deal expeditiously with allegations of ethical misconduct in campaigns for judicial office. The committee shall consist of five (5) members. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, the Governor, the Lieutenant Governor, the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the Mississippi Legislature and the chair of the Commission on Judicial Performance (Commission) shall each appoint one member. Those appointed by the Chief Justice, the Governor and the chair of the Commission shall be attorneys licensed to practice in the state. No person shall be appointed to serve as a member of a Special Committee for the year in which such person is a candidate for judicial office. Should the Chief Justice expect to be a candidate for judicial office during the year for which a Special Committee is to be appointed the Chief Justice shall declare such expectation, and in such event, the appointment which otherwise would have been made by the Chief Justice shall be made by the next senior justice of the Supreme Court not seeking judicial office in such year. Likewise, should the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Speaker of the House of Representatives or chair of the Commission expect to seek judicial office during such year, that official shall declare such expectation, and the appointment which otherwise would have been made by such appointing authority shall be made, respectively: by the Lieutenant Governor if the Governor expects to seek such an office; by the President Pro Tem of the Senate if the Lieutenant Governor expects to seek such an office; by the Speaker Pro Tem of the House of Representatives if the Speaker expects to seek such an office; and by the vice-chair of the Commission if the chair expects to seek such an office. Any action taken by the Special Committee shall require a majority vote. Each Special Committee shall be appointed no later March 1 in the year of their service, and it shall continue in existence for ninety (90) days following such judicial elections or for so long thereafter as is necessary to consider matters submitted to it within such time. The Commission shall provide administrative support to the Special Committee. Should any appointing authority fail to make an appointment, three members shall constitute a sufficient number to conduct the business of the Special Committee. The objective of the Special Committee shall be to alleviate unethical and unfair campaign practices in judicial elections, and to that end, the Special Committee shall have the following authority:

(1) Within ten (10) days of the effective date of this rule or within the ten (10) days after formally announcing and/or officially qualifying for election or re-election to any judicial office in this state, whichever is later, all candidates, including incumbent judges, shall forward written notice of such candidacy, together with an appropriate mailing address and telephone number, to the Commission. Upon receipt of such notice, the Special Committee shall, through the Commission, cause to be distributed to all such candidates by certified mail-return receipt requested copies of the following: Canon 5 of the Code of Judicial Conduct; summaries of any previous opinions issued by the Special Committee, Special Committees organized for prior elections, or the Supreme Court of Mississippi, which relate in any way to campaign conduct and practices; and a form acknowledgment, which each candidate shall promptly return to the Commission and therein certify that the candidate has read and understands the materials forwarded and agrees to be bound by such standards during the course of the campaign. A failure to comply with this section shall constitute a per se violation of this Section authorizing the Committee to immediately publicize such failure to all candidates in such race and to all appropriate media outlets. In the event of a question relating to conduct during a judicial campaign, judicial candidates, their campaign organizations, and all independent persons, committees and organizations are encouraged to seek an opinion from the Special Committee before such conduct occurs.

(2) Opinions as to the propriety of any act or conduct by a judicial candidate, a candidate's campaign organization or an independent person, committee or organization conducting activities which impact on the election and as to the construction or application of Canon 5 may be provided by the Special Committee upon request from any judicial candidate, campaign organization or an independent person, committee or organization. If the Special Committee finds the question of limited significance, it may provide an informal opinion to the questioner. If, however, it finds the questions of sufficient general interest and importance, it may render a formal opinion, in which event it shall cause the opinion to be published in complete or synopsis form. Furthermore, the Special Committee may issue formal opinions on its own motion under such circumstances, as it finds appropriate. The Special Committee may decline to issue an opinion when a majority of the Special Committee members determine that it would be inadvisable to respond to the request and to have so confirmed in writing their reasoning to the person who requested the opinion. All formal opinions of the Special Committee shall be filed with the Supreme Court and shall be a matter of public record except for the names of the persons involved, which shall be excised. Both formal and informal opinions shall be advisory only; however, the Commission on Judicial Performance, the Supreme Court and all other regulatory and enforcement authorities shall consider reliance by a judicial candidate upon the Special Committee opinion in any disciplinary or enforcement proceeding.

(3) Upon receipt of information facially indicating a violation by a judicial candidate of any provision of Canon 5 during the course of a campaign for judicial office, or indicating actions by an independent person, committee or organization which are contrary to the limitations placed upon candidates by Canon 5, the Commission staff shall immediately forward a copy of the same by e-mail or facsimile, if available, and U.S. mail to the Special Committee members and said Committee shall:

(a) seek, from the informing party and/or the subject of the information, such further information on the allegations as it deems necessary;

(b) conduct such additional investigation as the Committee may deem necessary;

(c) determine whether the allegations warrant speedy intervention and, if so, immediately issue a confidential cease-and-desist request to the candidate and/or organization or independent committee or organization believed to be engaging in unethical and/or unfair campaign practices. If the Committee determines that the unethical and/or unfair campaign practice is of a serious and damaging nature, the Committee may, in its discretion, disregard the issuance of a cease-and-desist request and immediately take action authorized by the provisions of paragraph (3)(d)(i) and (ii), hereafter described. If the allegations of the complaint do not warrant intervention, the Committee shall dismiss the same and so notify the complaining party.

(d) If a cease-and-desist request is disregarded or if the unethical or unfair campaign practices otherwise continue, the Committee is further authorized:

(i) to immediately release to all appropriate media outlets, as well as the reporting party and the person and/or organization against whom the information is submitted, a public statement setting out the violations believed to exist, or, in the case of independent persons, committees or organizations, the actions by an independent person, committee or organization which are contrary to the limitations placed upon candidates by Canon 5. In the event that the violations or actions have continued after the imposition of the cease and desist request, the media release shall also include a statement that the candidate and/or organization or independent person, committee or organization has failed to honor the cease-and-desist request, and

(ii) to refer the matter to the Commission on Judicial Performance or to any other appropriate regulatory or enforcement authority for such action as may be appropriate under the applicable rules.

(4) All proceedings under this Rule shall be informal and non-adversarial, and the Special Committee shall act on all requests within ten (10) days of receipt, either in person, by facsimile, by U.S. mail, or by telephone. In any event, the Special Committee shall act as soon as possible taking into consideration the exigencies of the circumstances and, as to requests received during the last ten (10) days of the campaign, shall act within thirty-six (36) hours.

(5) Except as herein specifically authorized, the proceedings of the Special Committee shall remain confidential, and in no event shall the Special Committee have the authority to institute disciplinary action against any candidate for judicial office, which power is specifically reserved to the Commission on Judicial Performance under applicable rules.

(6) The Committee shall after conclusion of the election distribute to the Commission on Judicial Performance copies of all information and all proceedings relating thereto.

(7) This Canon 5F shall apply to all candidates for judicial offices of the Supreme Court, Court of Appeals, chancery courts, circuit courts and county courts, be they incumbent judges or not, and to the families and campaign/solicitation committees of all such candidates. Persons who seek to have their name placed on the ballot as candidates for such judicial offices and the judicial candidates' election committee chairpersons, or the chairperson's designee, shall no later than 20 days after the qualifying date for candidates in the year in which they seek to run complete a two-hour course on campaign practices, finance, and ethics sponsored and approved by the Committee. Within ten days of completing the course, candidates shall certify to Committee that they have completed the course and understand fully the requirements of Mississippi law and the Code of Judicial Conduct concerning campaign practices for judicial office. Candidates without opposition are exempt from attending the course.

Commentary

This Section 5F does not appear in the ABA Model Code and was added with the adoption of this Section 5. Similar provisions have been adopted for South Dakota and Georgia. See South Dakota Rules of Commission on Judicial Qualifications, Rule IV and Rules of Georgia Judicial Qualification Commission, Rule 27. In Weaver v. Bonner, 114 F. Supp. 2d 1337 (N.D. Ga. 2000), a constitutional challenge to the Georgia rule was rejected, the court saying the government may "participate in the marketplace of ideas" and "contribute its own views to those of the other speakers. Weaver at 1345, quoting Muir v. Ala.

Educ. Television Comm'n, 688 F. 2d 1033, 1037 (5th Cir. 1982). In Weaver, the court also specifically found the procedures adequate to satisfy due process requirement.

Provision is made for the Special Committee to issue opinions to judicial candidates. Ordinarily, absent extraordinary circumstances or statutory authority to the contrary, when a judge or candidate, relying on the opinion of the Special Committee, acts in accordance with the opinion and the opinion is based on a full disclosure of facts and circumstances, the judge or candidate will not be subject to disciplinary or enforcement action or liability.

Campaign conduct.

Judge did not act as a leader for, or held an office in, the voters league, in violation of Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 5A(1)(a), and there was no indication that the judge was making a speech on behalf of the Voters League, as prohibited by § 5A(1)(b); the record evinced only that the judge was there as a judicial candidate running for reelection, and Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 5C(1) expressly permitted incumbent judges to attend and speak to political gatherings on their own behalf while candidates for election or re-election. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Osborne, — So. 2d —, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 9 (Miss. Feb. 5, 2009), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 11 So. 3d 107, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 278 (Miss. 2009).

Alleged violation of the Mississippi Canons of Judicial Conduct is not cognizable as a cause of action before the Mississippi trial courts, but rather must be pursued through the Mississippi Commission on Judicial Performance or the Mississippi Special Committee on Judicial Election Campaign Intervention; therefore, a temporary restraining order was dissolved where it was based on a judicial candidate allegedly making false statements during a campaign because a chancery court had no jurisdiction to hear such. In re Bell, 962 So. 2d 537 (Miss. 2007).

Under the circumstances, chancellor who called an individual involved in litigation pending before him, and who solicited that individual's political support in the chancellor's campaign for reelection, was subject to private, not public, reprimand. In re Baker, 535 So. 2d 47 (Miss. 1988).

Candidate for nonjudicial office.

Municipal court judge was publicly reprimanded and fined $4,932.68 for failing to resign as municipal judge while running for a nonjudicial office. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Haltom, 681 So. 2d 1332 (Miss. 1996).

Judge who qualified to run for nonjudicial office of circuit clerk without resigning from his judicial office of justice court judge violated subdivision A(3) of this canon, warranting public reprimand and fine of $5,600. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Ishee, 627 So. 2d 283 (Miss. 1993).

Justice court judge violated this canon by engaging in political activities over an extended period, particularly by continuing to serve on county executive committee of Democratic Party after being elected to judicial office. Mississippi Judicial Performance Comm'n v. Peyton, 555 So. 2d 1036 (Miss. 1990).

Personal conduct.

There was no evidence in the record that the judge acted as a leader for, or held an office in, a voters league, in violation of section Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 5(A)(1)(a); likewise, there was no indication that the judge was making a speech on behalf of the voters league, as prohibited by Canon 5(A)(1)(b). Additionally, although the judge admittedly attended political gathering, ordinarily a violation under Canon 5(A)(1)(c), the record evinced only that he was there as a judicial candidate running for reelection; Canon 5(C)(1) expressly permitted incumbent judges to attend and speak to political gatherings on their own behalf while candidates for election or reelection. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Osborne, 11 So. 3d 107 (Miss. 2009).

Judge was publicly reprimanded, assessed costs of proceedings, and fined after he and a woman wrote over $ 330,000 in bad checks for a house and motor vehicles, violating Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 5C(1), because any economic injury suffered by the businesses visited by the judge and the woman had been repaid. Although writing checks for insufficient funds was reprehensible conduct for a judge, usually it had to be in conjunction with some other inappropriate act or acts before warranting removal. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Hartzog, 904 So. 2d 981 (Miss. 2004).

Procedure.

While mayor of code charter municipality may have obligation to file formal complaint with Judicial Performance Commission for a judge's political party participation, mayor does not have authority to suspend a properly appointed judge from serving on the bench. Scott v. Stater, 707 So. 2d 182 (Miss. 1997).

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

A campaign committee may receive contributions after 90 days following the election of a Justice of the Mississippi Supreme Court; however, it may not solicit funds after 90 days following the election. Easley, Jr., Feb. 1, 2001, A.G. Op. #2001-0044.

Application of the Code of Judicial Conduct.

A. Parties Affected. Anyone, whether or not a lawyer, who is an officer of a judicial system and who performs judicial functions, including an officer such as a magistrate, court commissioner, special master or referee, is a judge within the meaning of this Code. All judges shall comply with this Code except as provided below.

B. Part-time Judge. A part time judge shall not be subject to the restrictions and limitations of Sections 4C, 4D(2), 4F, and 4G, except as regards practice in the court in which the part-time judge serves [prohibition on practice of law], and 4H(1).

C. Special Judge. A special judge shall not, except while serving as a judge, be subject to the restrictions and limitations of Sections 4A. A special judge shall not, at any time be subject to the restrictions and limitations of Sections, 4B, 4D, 4E, 4F, 4G, and 4H. A special judge, except while serving as a special judge or while a candidate for judicial office, shall not be subject to the restrictions of Canon 5.

D. Magistrates, court commissioners, special masters and referees shall not at any time be subject to the restrictions and limitations of Sections 4A, 4B, 4C(1), 4C(2) 4D, 4E, 4F, 4G, and 4H. Magistrates, court commissioners, special masters and referees, except while a candidate for judicial office, shall not be subject to the restrictions of Canon 5.

E. Time for Compliance. A person to whom this Code becomes applicable shall comply immediately with all provisions of this Code except Sections 4D(1), 4D(2) and 4E and shall comply with those Sections as soon as reasonably possible and shall do so in any event within the period of one year.

F. Effective Date. The separate provisions of this Code shall govern acts, events and conduct of those subject to those provisions from and after the effective date of the adoption of each such provision. Acts, events and conduct which occur prior to the adoption of each provision shall be governed by the provisions of the Code effective at the time of such acts, events and conduct.

Commentary

The ABA Model Code of Judicial Conduct provides for several non-standard categories of judges who perform duties on a limited basis, which differ from those recognized for Mississippi by this Applications Section. If serving as a fiduciary when selected as judge, a new judge may, notwithstanding the prohibitions in Section 4E, continue to serve as a fiduciary but only for that period of time necessary to avoid serious adverse consequences to the beneficiary of the fiduciary relationship and in no event longer than one year. Similarly, if engaged at the time of judicial selection in a business activity, a new judge may, notwithstanding the prohibitions in Section 4D(2), continue in that activity for a reasonable period but in no event longer than one year.

Rule 1. General.

A. Definitions. In these rules, unless the context or subject matter otherwise requires:

(1) "Commission" means the Mississippi Commission on Judicial Performance.

(2) "Supreme Court" means the Mississippi Supreme Court.

(3) "Judge" means a Justice of the Supreme Court or a judge of the Court of Appeals, Circuit Court, Chancery Court, County Court, Family Court, Justice Court, Municipal Court, and all other courts in existence in Mississippi, including someone serving as a part-time judge, special judge or a judge in senior status. Reference to "the judge" shall mean any judge whose conduct or mental or physical condition is under consideration.

(4) "Chairman" means the chairman of the Commission or the vice-chairman when serving as chairman.

(5) "Member" means a member of the Commission or an alternate member serving in the place of a member of the Commission.

(6) "Shall" is mandatory and "may" is permissive.

(7) The masculine gender includes the feminine gender.

B. Purpose. The Commission was created in 1979 by the Mississippi Legislature and the voters of the State of Mississippi by constitutional amendment. The Commission shall enforce the standards of judicial conduct, inquire into judicial disability and conduct, protect the public from judicial misconduct and disabled judges, and protect the judiciary from unfounded allegations. All proceedings before the Commission shall be of a civil nature, not criminal, as the purpose of the Commission is to be rehabilitative and educational as well as disciplinary.

C. Construction of rules. These rules shall be liberally interpreted so as to carry out the mandate of the electorate by its approval of Section 177A of the Mississippi Constitution of 1890.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Definitions.

Respondent was a "judge", within contemplation of both rules of Judicial Performance Commission and Code of Judicial Conduct, by virtue of his role as judge pro tempore of town municipal court. Mississippi Judicial Performance Comm'n v. Thomas, 549 So. 2d 962 (Miss. 1989).

Rule 2. Jurisdiction.

The Commission shall consider conduct of a judge or the physical or mental condition of a judge. In the absence of fraud, corrupt motive, or bad faith, the Commission shall not consider allegations against a judge for making findings of fact, reaching a legal conclusion, or applying the law as he understands it. The Commission may consider allegations against a judge regarding any conduct prior to January 1, 1980, where such prior conduct relates to the judge's ability to serve, brings discredit to the judiciary, or adversely affects the administration of justice. Notwithstanding that a judge has resigned his office, the Commission shall retain jurisdiction over that judge if prior to his resignation the Commission has initiated an inquiry into the conduct of the judge.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Bad faith.

Circuit judge should have been aware that he exceeded his authority in ordering the post-sentence release of four state prisoners; there was therefore ample evidence of bad faith satisfying jurisdictional requirement of this rule. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Russell, 691 So. 2d 929 (Miss. 1997), reh'g denied, 693 So. 2d 384 (Miss. 1997).

Rule 3. Organization.

A. Membership and terms. The membership of the Commission shall be as prescribed in Section 177A of the Mississippi Constitution of 1890 for such terms as prescribed by general law.

B. Vacancies. When a judge ceases to be a judge of the court from which he was appointed or whenever any member becomes otherwise ineligible to hold office, his membership shall terminate. The Chairman shall promptly notify the appointing authority of the vacancy. The appropriate alternate member shall serve as a temporary replacement until such time as the appointing authority shall duly certify to the Commission a replacement member for the remainder of the unexpired term. An alternate member appointed to fill an unexpired term shall be eligible for an appointment for a full term. If a member who is a judge becomes a respondent to a formal complaint under Rule 6 before the Commission, that member shall be disqualified from attending meetings and shall not perform any Commission duties until the formal complaint is finally disposed of. The appointing authority shall be notified and shall appoint another alternate member to serve during the term of disability or disqualification. A formal complaint against a member shall be given highest priority on the Commission's docket and shall be brought to a conclusion expeditiously unless waived by the member.

C. Alternate members. An alternate member shall serve in the place of a member of the same category whenever such member is absent, disqualified, unwilling or unable to serve.

D. Disqualification. A member shall be disqualified to serve in any inquiry or complaint when (1) he is related to the judge or complainant by affinity or consanguinity, (2) the judge is a resident of his county, or (3) the member has personal knowledge or information which could interfere with the member impartially considering such matter.

A member may voluntarily disqualify himself when (1) the member resides in the judge's judicial district; or (2) upon a showing of good cause, the Commission approves the member's request for voluntary disqualification.

E. Officers. A Chairman and Vice-Chairman shall be elected each year at the January meeting to serve from January 1 through December 31 of such year. The Vice-Chairman shall perform the duties of the Chairman whenever he is absent or unable to act.

F. Executive director. The Commission shall appoint a member of the Mississippi State Bar as executive director to serve at its pleasure. He shall neither engage in the private practice of law nor serve in any judicial capacity.

The Commission shall prescribe the duties and responsibilities of the executive director, which may include the authority to:

(1) Receive information from any proper source, including allegations and complaints;

(2) Make preliminary evaluations;

(3) Screen complaints and make recommendations to the Commission;

(4) Conduct and/or supervise investigations as directed by the Commission;

(5) Maintain and preserve in confidentiality the Commission's records, including all complaints, files and written dispositions;

(6) Maintain statistics concerning the operations of the Commission and make them available to the Commission and to the Supreme Court;

(7) Prepare the Commission's budget for its approval and administer its funds;

(8) Recommend employment and supervise other members of the Commission's staff;

(9) Prepare an annual report of the Commission's activities;

(10) Employ, upon the direction of the Commission, special counsel, private investigators or other experts as necessary to investigate and process matters before the Commission and before the Supreme Court;

(11) Represent the Commission as counsel in formal proceedings and in other proceedings, upon the direction of the Commission; and

(12) Represent the Commission at conferences, seminars, and other educational functions.

G. Meetings. The Commission shall meet at least monthly at announced dates and places, except when there is no business to be conducted. Meetings shall be called by the Chairman or upon the written request of two (2) members.

H. Quorum; voting requirements. Four members (or their alternates) shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of all Commission business. Commission business may be decided by a majority vote of the members present. A two-thirds (2/3) vote of the Commission shall be required for any action pertaining to its disciplinary authority.

I. Rules and forms. These rules shall control complaints to, investigations by, and proceedings by the Commission. The Commission may, for good cause, suspend any or all of its rules upon a two-thirds (2/3) vote of the Commission. The Commission shall prescribe such forms as it deems appropriate.

J. Commission office. The Commission shall establish a permanent office, in a building approved by the Capitol Commission, which shall be open to the public at regular announced hours.

K. Finances. The expenses of the Commission shall be authorized to be paid in accordance with the approved Commission budget and in compliance with applicable procedures established by the Auditor of Public Accounts. In the event of an unanticipated funding shortage, the Commission shall not curtail the discharge of its constitutionally mandated operations, but shall authorize the executive director to seek a deficit appropriation to fund the Commission's operations. (Amended effective June 29, 1995; amended January 9, 1998.)

Rule 4. Confidentiality.

A. All proceedings. All proceedings before the Commission shall be confidential, except upon unanimous vote of the Commission, as prescribed in Section 177A of the Mississippi Constitution of 1890. Confidentiality shall attach upon the initiation of an inquiry and shall include all records, files and reports of the Commission. All proceedings before the Supreme Court and any final decisions made by the Supreme Court shall be made public as in other cases at law. However, an appeal from a private admonishment by the Commission shall be confidential unless on appeal the Supreme Court imposes sanctions harsher than the private admonishment.

B. Disclosure. By unanimous vote, the Commission may waive confidentiality and disclose such information deemed appropriate by the Commission. Such action may be taken upon the Commission's own motion or upon written request of the judge.

C. Violation by staff. Employment of the executive director or any member of the staff may be terminated for violation of confidentiality. (Amended March 7, 2002.)

COMMENT

Proceedings before the Commission and the Court in matters of judicial discipline are governed by Section 177A of the Mississippi Constitution. Generally, unless the Commission unanimously votes to make its proceedings public, they remain confidential. However, except in the case of an appeal by a judge of a private admonishment issued by the Commission against that judge, and in cases where the Court expressly seals the record following a private reprimand issued by the Court after the Commission has filed recommendations for more severe sanctions, proceedings before the Court and decisions of the Court are public.

Rule 5. Procedures of commission.

A. Initiation of inquiry. Upon receipt of proper information regarding a judge's conduct or physical or mental condition, the Commission shall initiate a confidential inquiry to determine whether the matter is within the Commission's jurisdiction. On its own motion, the Commission may make inquiry concerning a judge's conduct or physical or mental condition, and may file a formal complaint based upon the results of such inquiry on its own motion.

B. Preliminary inquiry. Upon receipt of such information, the executive director shall make a prompt, discreet, and confidential preliminary inquiry and evaluation under guidelines approved by the Commission. The executive director shall then make a report to the Commission.

After such report, the Commission shall dismiss complaints which are not within the Commission's jurisdiction, relate only to claimed errors of law or fact, or are unfounded. The complainant shall be informed in writing of the Commission's action.

C. Notice to judge. The Commission shall not notify a judge of any initial complaint dismissed after preliminary inquiry, unless otherwise determined by the Commission.

When the initial complaint is not dismissed, within ninety (90) days of its receipt the judge shall be notified of the investigation and nature of the charge. Failure to make timely notification shall not be Founds for dismissal of any investigation or proceeding. Such notice shall be in writing and may be transmitted by a member of the Commission, the executive director, any adult person designated by the Commission, or by certified or registered mail addressed to the judge at his last known residence of record.

When a judge has been notified of an investigation and the Commission has dismissed the matter, the judge shall be so notified and the file shall be closed.

D. Sworn complaint or statement in lieu of complaint. If the initial complaint is not dismissed, the complainant shall be asked to file a detailed, signed, sworn complaint against the judge. The sworn complaint shall state the names and addresses of the complainant and the judge, the facts constituting the alleged misconduct, and, so far as is known, whether the same or a similar complaint by the complainant against the judge has ever been made to the Commission. A sworn complaint may be waived by a two-thirds (2/3) vote of the Commission; a sworn complaint shall not be required in an inquiry initiated by the Commission on its own motion.

E. Informal conference. The Commission may request the judge to attend an informal conference concerning the matters relating to his judicial performance.

F. Right to counsel. At all stages of the Commission's proceedings, the judge shall be entitled to counsel.

G. Subpoena. The subpoena power granted the Commission by law shall apply at any stage of the investigation or any proceedings. The judge shall be entitled to subpoenae for any formal hearing. All subpoenae shall be on the form prescribed by the Commission, and the Commission shall have the power to enforce process.

H. Earwigging prohibited. No person shall discuss or attempt to discuss with or in the presence or hearing of a member anything concerning an inquiry or proceeding then pending with or likely to be considered by the Commission, except in accordance with these rules. Any person knowingly violating this or any other rule of the Commission may be guilty of contempt.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality.
Evidence.

Constitutionality.

Combination of investigative, prosecutorial, and adjudicatory functions in Commission on Judicial Performance does not violate due process. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Russell, 691 So. 2d 929 (Miss. 1997), reh'g denied, 693 So. 2d 384 (Miss. 1997).

Evidence.

Evidence was insufficient to show that the Commission on Judicial Performance violated the rule, notwithstanding evidence of two newspaper clippings in a county newspaper pertaining to the alleged charges against the judge and a closed hearing near the time of trial since there was no evidence that the commission was responsible for the disclosures. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Spencer, 725 So. 2d 171 (Miss. 1998).

Rule 6. Probable cause.

A. Grounds for discipline and retirement. The grounds for discipline and retirement, as prescribed by the Constitution, are:

(1) Actual conviction of a felony in a court other than a court of the State of Mississippi;

(2) Willful misconduct in office;

(3) Willful and persistent failure to perform his duties;

(4) Habitual intemperance in the use of alcohol or other drugs;

(5) Conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice which brings the judicial office into disrepute;

(6) Physical or mental disability seriously interfering with the performance of his duties, which disability is or is likely to become of a permanent character.

(7) Any willful violation of law constituting a serious misdemeanor or felony;

(8) Any violation of the code of judicial conduct; and

(9) Any violation of the rules of professional conduct as adopted by the Supreme Court.

B. Disposition. The Commission shall dispose of the case in one (1) of the following ways:

(1) If it finds that there has been no misconduct, the case shall be dismissed.

(2) If it finds that there has been misconduct for which a private admonishment constitutes adequate discipline, it shall issue the admonishment. The complainant shall be notified that the matter has been resolved. The Commission shall notify the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of its action.

(3) The Commission may enter into a memorandum of understanding with the judge concerning his future conduct or submission to professional treatment or counseling.

(4) If it is determined that probable cause exists to require a formal hearing, it shall so notify the judge by service of a notice and a formal complaint.

C. Formal complaint. The formal complaint shall be entitled "BEFORE THE MISSISSIPPI COMMISSION ON JUDICIAL PERFORMANCE, INQUIRY CONCERNING A JUDGE, NO. _____." The formal complaint shall identify any complainant and shall specify in ordinary and concise language the charges against the judge. The notice shall advise the judge of his right to file a written, sworn answer to the charges against him within thirty (30) days after service of the notice upon him. The notice and formal complaint shall be served upon the judge by personal service by a member of the Commission, the executive director, or by any adult person designated by the Commission, or by certified or registered mail addressed to the judge at his last known residence of record.

D. Answer. Within thirty (30) days after service of the notice and the formal complaint, the judge may file with the Commission a sworn answer or motions. The formal complaint and answer shall constitute the pleadings. Thereafter, no further motions or pleadings may be filed unless the Commission shall first grant leave. (Amended effective June 29, 1995; amended April 4, 2002.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Removal from office.

Motion to dismiss order of interim suspension filed by the Mississippi Commission on Judicial Performance was dismissed as moot and a circuit court judge was removed from office because the Commission exceeded its authority under Miss. Const. art. 6, § 177A since the supreme court had neither been presented with nor asked to approve any agreement between the Commission and a circuit court judge; the supreme court could not allow the dismissal of formal complaints in two separate cases pursuant to the circuit court judge's resignation or any mere agreement not to seek judicial office in the future, and based upon the seriousness of the circuit court judge's admitted criminal acts and judicial misconduct, he was removed from office. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. DeLaughter, 29 So. 3d 750 (Miss. 2010).

Rule 7. Interim suspension of judge.

Upon the filing of a formal complaint, the Commission may, in its discretion, issue its order directed to the judge to show good cause before the Commission why the Commission should not recommend to the Supreme Court that he be suspended from office while the inquiry is pending. The order to show cause shall be returnable before the Commission at a designated place and at a time certain, at which place and time the Commission shall consider the question of suspension. Either after issuing its order to show cause or without such order to show cause, the Commission may recommend to the Supreme Court that the judge be suspended from performing the duties of his office, pending final determination of the inquiry. If the Commission recommends suspension, such recommendation and a transcript of all proceeding of the Commission shall be immediately forwarded to the Clerk of the Supreme Court. An interim suspension shall not preclude further action by the Commission.

Rule 8. Formal hearing.

A. Scheduling of hearing. The Commission shall schedule a formal hearing concerning the charges. The hearing shall be held no sooner than five (5) days after filing of an answer or after the deadline for filing of the answer if no answer is filed. Notice of the hearing shall be sent to the judge at his last known residence of record or to his attorney.

At the date set for the formal hearing, the hearing shall proceed whether or not the judge has filed an answer, and whether or not he appears in person or through counsel. The failure of the judge to answer or appear may be taken as evidence of the facts alleged in the formal complaint.

B. Discovery and procedure. In all formal proceedings the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure shall be applicable except as otherwise provided in these rules. The sole parties to formal proceedings shall be the Commission and the judge.

C. Fact finder. The formal hearing shall be conducted before the entire Commission or before a committee of the Commission, a master or a Fact finder designated by the Commission.

D. Conduct of hearing. Facts requiring action of the Commission shall be established by clear and convincing evidence.

The Mississippi Rules of Evidence shall apply to any formal hearing. All witnesses shall take an oath or affirmation to tell the truth. All Commission members, staff, witnesses, counsel, or any other person privy to any hearing before the Commission shall take an oath of secrecy concerning all proceedings before the Commission, violation of which shall be punishable as contempt.

The Commission shall employ a member of the Mississippi State Bar to prepare and present the formal complaint to the Commission and otherwise act as counsel and to represent the Commission before the Supreme Court or direct the Executive Director to so represent the Commission as counsel.

The Commission shall designate one (1) of its judicial or attorney members to preside over each formal hearing. He shall dispose of all preliminary matters and shall rule on procedural and evidentiary matters during the course of the hearing.

The judge shall have the right to present evidence and to produce and cross-examine witnesses.

The judge shall be limited to two (2) character witnesses who may testify at the formal hearing; he may submit the affidavits of any other character witnesses he deems appropriate.

The hearing shall be recorded by a reporter employed by the Commission.

E. Determination. If the full Commission has held the formal hearing, it shall promptly prepare its findings of fact and any recommendations.

When a committee, master, or Fact finder has held the formal hearing, its findings of fact and recommendations shall be filed with the Commission within thirty (30) days after the hearing's conclusion; provided, however, the Commission may grant additional time for the preparation of such findings and recommendations. The executive director shall promptly deliver to the judge or his legal representative and to the Commission counsel a copy of the transcript of the proceedings and a copy of the findings and recommendations. Within ten (10) days from receipt of such copies, the judge and Commission counsel may submit written objections to the findings and recommendations. The Commission shall review the findings and recommendations, the written objections, and the transcript; and it may accept, modify, or reject, in whole or in part, the findings and recommendations and may make additional findings of fact and recommendations.

F. Commission recommendation. The Commission recommendations to the Supreme Court for discipline may include removal from office, suspension, fine, public censure or reprimand, or retirement. In addition, the Commission may privately admonish a judge as provided by law.

The Commission findings and recommendation and the numerical vote shall be recorded; all other Commission action shall remain confidential.

G. Dissent. If any member dissents from a recommendation as to discipline or retirement, the dissenting recommendation shall also be transmitted to the Supreme Court. Only the dissent, with the number of dissenters shall be transmitted; the names of the individual dissenters shall remain confidential.

H. No discipline recommended. If two-thirds (2/3) of the members of the Commission fail to recommend discipline or retirement, the case shall be dismissed.

I. Witness fees. All witnesses shall receive fees and expenses in the statutorily allowable amount. Expenses of witnesses shall be borne by the party calling them. When the physical or mental disability of the judge is in issue, the Commission may reimburse the judge for the reasonable fees of any physician rendering a report or testifying at a Commission hearing. If the judge is exonerated of the charges against him and the Commission determines that the imposition of cost and expert witness fees would work a financial hardship or injustice upon him, the Commission may order that part or all of those cost and fees be reimbursed.

COMMENT

Disciplinary recommendations to the Supreme Court by the Commission under Rule 8(F) may range from removal from office down to public censure or reprimand. Although the Commission generally does not impose disciplinary sanctions, but rather makes findings and recommendations for submission to the Supreme Court, it may, under Rule 6, dismiss cases or impose the lesser sanction of a private admonishment, without action by the Supreme Court. In the case of private admonishment, the Commission will notify the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of its action.

[Comment adopted March 7, 2002.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality.
Evidence.
Time limits.

Constitutionality.

Combination of investigative, prosecutorial, and adjudicatory functions in Commission on Judicial Performance does not violate due process. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Russell, 691 So. 2d 929 (Miss. 1997), reh'g denied, 693 So. 2d 384 (Miss. 1997).

Evidence.

Mississippi Commission on Judicial Performance did not err by excluding three witnesses' testimony where the judge had more than two character witnesses testify on her behalf and the testimony from the three witnesses amounted to character testimony, which was duplicative of that of other character witnesses who testified on the judge's behalf. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Boland, 975 So. 2d 882 (Miss. 2008).

A technical violation of the rule did not require that the findings of fact and conclusions of law be stricken, given the voluminous record, the length of the hearing, the number of witnesses, and the fact that the judge's attorney also requested additional time even after the commission had set a deadline for submission. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Spencer, 725 So. 2d 171 (Miss. 1998).

Time limits.

Rules of Commission on Judicial Performance did not set forth a statute of limitations for judicial performance cases, and thus charges against circuit judge were not time-barred; three-year statute of limitations utilized in attorney discipline cases was not applied. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Russell, 691 So. 2d 929 (Miss. 1997), reh'g denied, 693 So. 2d 384 (Miss. 1997).

Rule 9. Mental or physical disability.

When the mental or physical health of a judge is in issue, the Commission may request the judge either (1) to submit to examinations by licensed physicians chosen and paid by the Commission, or (2) to submit to the Commission all reports of recent examinations by licensed physicians relating to the alleged condition. If the judge fails to submit to the examinations or to submit all recent medical reports, such failure shall raise an adverse inference to the judge on such issue, unless the judge's failure was due to circumstances beyond his control. The judge shall be furnished a copy of the report of any examination conducted under this rule.

Rule 10. Supreme Court review.

A. Filing and service. The Commission shall promptly file the record, its findings and recommendations, and any dissents with the Clerk of the Supreme Court and shall immediately serve copies thereof upon the judge.

B. Procedure. The Mississippi Rules of Appellate Procedure shall be applicable for all Commission proceedings before the Supreme Court, except as otherwise provided in these rules.

C. Preference cases. The Supreme Court shall treat all Commission matters as preference cases, to be determined with reasonable expedition.

D. Briefs. When the Commission has recommended the interim suspension of a judge, the Commission, as petitioner, and the judge, as respondent, shall file simultaneous briefs with the Supreme Court within seven (7) days after the filing of the Commission's recommendations with the Clerk of the Supreme Court. No reply briefs shall be filed.

In other cases the Commission, as petitioner, and the judge, as respondent, shall file simultaneous briefs with the Supreme Court within thirty (30) days after the filing of the Commission's recommendations with the Clerk of the Supreme Court. No reply briefs shall be filed.

E. Decision. Based upon a review of the entire record, the Supreme Court shall prepare and publish a written opinion and judgment directing such disciplinary action, if any, as it finds just and proper. The Supreme Court may accept, reject, or modify, in whole or in part, the findings and recommendation of the Commission. In the event that more than one (1) recommendation for discipline of the judge is filed, the Supreme Court may render a single decision or impose a single sanction with respect to all recommendations.

F. Private admonishments. If a judge desires to appeal a private admonishment, he shall file a notice of appeal with the Commission within thirty (30) days from the issuance of such admonishment. The Commission shall promptly file with the Clerk of the Supreme Court the record and its admonishment. The judge shall be the appellant and the Commission the appellee.

An appeal from a private admonishment issued by the Commission shall follow the same procedures as other Commission matters except that such appeal shall remain confidential, as provided by law.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Assessment of costs.
Decisions.
Scope of review.
Standard of review.
Illustrative cases.

Assessment of costs.

Assessment of the costs of the Mississippi Commission on Judicial Performance's first inquiry, which the judge contested, was within the Mississippi Supreme Court's discretion and was reasonable because the judge was on notice that such costs were being sought and because his behavior was the reason the costs were incurred; but as he never contested his suspension under a second inquiry, there was no basis to award costs for that inquiry. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Teel, 863 So. 2d 973 (Miss. 2004).

An assessment of costs is within the discretion of the court, is in keeping with the precedent of the court, and is reasonable where the complaining party is on notice that such costs are being sought and where the behavior of the complaining party is the reason for the incurring of the costs. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Russell, 724 So. 2d 873 (Miss. 1998).

Decisions.

Supreme court did not lack authority to remove judge absent a recommendation for such removal from judicial performance commission; having acquired jurisdiction, supreme court had full jurisdiction to increase or diminish sanctions based upon its review of record made before commission. In re Collins, 524 So. 2d 553 (Miss. 1987).

Scope of review.

Power to impose sanctions is delegated solely to supreme court; court therefore has an obligation to conduct an independent inquiry of the record in order to make a final determination of appropriate action to be applied, and in so doing, court will accord careful consideration to findings of fact and recommendations of judicial performance commission, or its committee, which has had opportunity to observe demeanor of witnesses. In re Anderson, 412 So. 2d 743 (Miss. 1982).

Standard of review.

Supreme court conducts de novo review of judicial misconduct proceedings, giving great deference to findings, based on clear and convincing evidence, of recommendations of Judicial Performance Commission; although court considers recommendations of commission, it is in no way bound by them and may also impose additional sanctions. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Russell, 691 So. 2d 929 (Miss. 1997), reh'g denied, 693 So. 2d 384 (Miss. 1997).

Although supreme court is not bound by findings of Commission on Judicial Performance, they are given great deference when based on clear and convincing evidence. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Dodds, 680 So. 2d 180 (Miss. 1996).

Supreme court in a judicial disciplinary proceeding is not bound by limited scope-of-review rules applicable in appeals generally; however, court gives great deference to findings of fact which are based on clear and convincing evidence. Mississippi Judicial Performance Comm'n v. Hopkins, 590 So. 2d 857 (Miss. 1991).

Illustrative cases.

Judge was publicly reprimanded and suspended for thirty days pursuant to Miss. Jud. Perf. Comm'n R. 10(E) because the judge's racially disparaging language on three occasions, although used in private settings, reflected negatively on the judicial office and could give the appearance of an inability to render race-neutral decisions. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Brown, 37 So. 3d 14 (Miss. 2010).

Where a judge breached the peace during the repossession of an automobile jointly owned by the judge's wife and mother-in-law, his conduct violated Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 1. Pursuant to Miss. Jud. Perf. Comm'n R. 10, the Supreme Court of Mississippi suspended the judge for 180 days without compensation. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Osborne, 977 So. 2d 314 (Miss. 2008).

Former judge's failure to pay office-related charges to vendors after being reimbursed for such charges by the State was willful misconduct prejudicial to the administration of justice which brought the judicial office into disrepute, and he was publicly reprimanded as recommended by the Mississippi Commission on Judicial Performance. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Teel, 863 So. 2d 973 (Miss. 2004).

Recommendation for a public reprimand was not adopted since it was too lenient for a judge who committed willful misconduct under Miss. Const. Art. 6, § 177A by violating Miss. Code Jud. Conduct Canons 1, 2A, 3B(2), 3B(7), 3B(8), and 3C(1) when he engaged in improper ex parte communications; moreover, he ignored Miss. Code Ann. § 9-11-33 and Miss. Unif. R. P. J. Ct. 2.06 when he set aside a final judgment and interfered with orders handed down by another judge. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Britton, 936 So. 2d 898 (Miss. 2006).

The Supreme Court adopted the Commission's recommendation as to the public reprimand and assessment of court costs, but rejected the Commission's recommendation of a fine. Mississippi Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Sanders, 749 So. 2d 1062 (Miss. 1999).

Rule 11. Charges against Justice of the Supreme Court.

Charges against a Justice of the Supreme Court shall proceed in the same manner as charges against any other judge except that, upon the filing of the report and recommendation of the Commission, a special tribunal shall be empaneled as provided by Section 177A of the Mississippi Constitution of 1890. Upon recommendation by the Commission for discipline or retirement of a Justice of the Supreme Court, the executive director shall notify the Secretary of State to select the tribunal in accordance with the procedures established in the Constitution. In the event a judge selected for the tribunal is disqualified or otherwise unable to serve, such judge shall file a notice of recusal with the Clerk of the Supreme Court within ten (10) days. The Clerk of the Supreme Court shall notify the Secretary of State and another member shall be selected in the manner provided by the constitution. When seven (7) qualified members have been selected the tribunal shall, within ten (10) days, meet and select one of its members as the presiding member of the tribunal. The tribunal shall proceed in accordance with the Mississippi Rules of Appellate Procedure, except as otherwise provided in these rules, and the Rules of the Commission, which shall control all proceedings before the seven (7) member tribunal. (Amended March 27, 1997; amended effective May 27, 2004, to shorten the period for filing notices of recusal and convening the tribunal.)

Rule 1. Continuing Judicial Education Committee.

(a) There is hereby established a Committee on Continuing Judicial Education (hereinafter referred to as the Committee) consisting of six members. The Chief Justice of the Mississippi Supreme Court, or the Chief's designee, shall be an ex-officio member without vote. The Committee shall include three (3) members appointed by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court upon the recommendation of the divisions of Circuit Court, Chancery Court (including the Youth Court), and County Court (including the Family Court Judge), there being one person to be recommended by each conference. The Chief Justice shall appoint one Supreme Court Justice to represent the Supreme Court Justices and one Court of Appeals Judge to represent the Court of Appeals Judges.

(b) The term of the three (3) trial judges of the committee shall be for a term of two years and their election by the conference shall be at the annual meeting of the Conference of Mississippi Judges. From and after July 1, 1989, the division of Circuit Court and the division of Chancery Court shall each elect their one representative for a two year term. The County Court division, which includes the Youth Court Judges, together with the appointment of a Justice from the Supreme Court or Court of Appeals, shall be for an initial term of one year; provided, however, that from and after the annual meeting of the Mississippi Judges in the year 1990, the succeeding terms of the County Judge and the Supreme Court Justice or Court of Appeals Judge shall be for a two year term. The Chief Justice shall appoint a judge from the Court of Appeals and the term initially shall be for a term of one and one-half years beginning January 1, 1995; provided, however, that from and after July, 1996, the succeeding terms of the Court of Appeals Judge shall be for a two year term. The term of the ex-officio member of the committee, shall coincide with his or her term of office. An appointment to fill any vacancy due to the death, resignation or disability of a member shall be for the unexpired term.

(c) The Committee shall have the following duties:

(1) To exercise general supervisory authority over the administration of these rules.

(2) To adopt regulations consistent with these rules. (Amended effective July 1, 1989; August 1, 1994.)

Regulations

1.1 The Chair of the Committee shall be elected by the five (5) voting members of the Committee.

1.2 The Committee shall elect a Vice-Chair and Secretary from among its members.

1.3 The Committee may organize itself into Subcommittees of not fewer than three (3) voting members for the purpose of considering and deciding matters submitted to them except three (3) votes shall be necessary for any action under Rule 6.

1.4 Members of the Committee in the performance of their official duties, shall be reimbursed for expenses subject to reimbursement policies set by the Mississippi Judicial College which funds said reimbursements.

1.5 The Committee may designate such staff as may be necessary and may further delegate executive authority to such staff to conduct the business of the Committee within the scope of the Rules and Regulations, subject at all times, however, to continual review by the Committee and available funding from the Mississippi Judicial College. (Amended effective August 1, 1994.)

Rule 2. Scope and exemptions.

These rules shall apply to every Justice of the Supreme Court, Judges of the Court of Appeals, and Judges of the Circuit, Chancery, County, Family and Youth Courts, including Youth Court Referees, and Senior Judges under Miss. Code Ann. § 9-1-107(5), in the State of Mississippi, except for the following persons who shall be exempt from the requirements of these rules:

(1) Workers' Compensation Commission Administrative Judges.

(2) Justice Court Judges, except insofar as statutory requirements of Miss. Code Ann. 9-11-3 and 9-11-4 (Supp. 1986), dictate. (Amended effective August 1, 1994; amended effective January 1, 1998.)

Rule 3. CJE requirement.

The use of the term "judges" herein shall be deemed to include Senior Judges, Family Court Judges, Circuit Judges, Chancellors, County Court Judges, Youth Court Judges, including Youth Court Referees, Court of Appeals Judges, and Supreme Court Justices. Each judge and justice in the State of Mississippi shall attend, or complete an approved substitute for attendance, a minimum of twelve (12) actual hours of approved continuing judicial education (CJE) each calendar year beginning January 1, 1988, except for Youth Court Referees and new judges as hereinafter provided, and provided the funding for said educational programs is available through the Mississippi Judicial College or state travel allowance.

For every new Youth Court Referee there shall be a requirement that every referee, within six (6) months of being appointed to office, receive at least twelve (12) actual hours of juvenile justice training, approved by the Mississippi Judicial College and thereafter complete at least twelve (12) actual hours of juvenile justice training, approved by the Mississippi Judicial College, each calender year beginning January 1, 1998 provided funding is available through the Mississippi Judicial College or state travel allowance.

Every new circuit, chancery, county, family court judge, elected or appointed, there shall be a requirement that every judge shall attend, within one year of taking office, even though (s)he has not taken office, the General Jurisdiction course at the National Judicial College at Reno, Nevada, or other judicial college approved by the Committee on Continuing Judicial Education provided funding is available through the Mississippi Judicial College or state travel allowance.

Every new justice, elected or appointed, to the Supreme Court and judge, elected or appointed, to the Court of Appeals of the State of Mississippi, shall attend, within one year of taking office, an appropriate appellate judges course approved by the Committee on Continuing Judicial Education provided funding is available through the Mississippi Supreme Court or state travel allowance, or Mississippi Judicial College.

Every new judge, elected or certified to take office on the Court of Appeals, shall attend an intensive education program to be presented by Mississippi Judicial College or other appropriate appellate course. Said program will be approved by the Committee on Continuing Judicial Education provided funding is available through the Mississippi Supreme Court, state travel allowance, or Mississippi Judicial College. This intensive course may eliminate the first year course required in the immediate preceding paragraph if approved by the CJE Committee. (Amended effective August 1, 1994; amended effective January 1, 1998.)

Regulations

3.1 The number of hours required means that the judge or justice must actually attend twelve (12) instructional hours of CJE per year with no credit given for introductory remarks, meal breaks, or business meetings.

3.1.1 Youth Court Referees will only be credited for instructional hours in juvenile justice training, actually attended, which juvenile justice training shall be approved by the Mississippi Judicial College.

3.2 An instructional hour will in all events contain at least fifty (50) minutes.

3.3 Judges or justices who have a permanent physical disability which makes attendance at CJE programs inordinately difficult may file a request for a permanent substitute program in lieu of attendance and shall therein set out continuing legal education plans tailored to their specific interests and physical ability. The Committee shall review and approve or disapprove such plans on an individual basis and without delay. Rejection of any requested substitute for attendance will be reviewed as provided in Rule 6 prior to any sanction being imposed.

3.4 Other requests for substituted compliance, partial waivers, or other exemptions for hardship or extenuating circumstances may be granted by the Committee upon written application of the judge, and may likewise be reviewed as provided in Rule 6.

3.5 A maximum of twelve (12) hours of credit in excess of the minimum annual requirement may be carried forward for credit in the succeeding calendar year. Such hours must, however, be reported in the Annual Report of Compliance for the year in which they were completed and must be designated as hours to be carried forward.

3.6 Credit will be given only for continuing judicial education activities approved by the Committee on Continuing Judicial Education. Such approval normally must be sought and granted prior to the occurrence of the activity, but may be given retroactively.

3.6.1 Only six hours credit per year can be earned at a Judge Advocate General military course, and no hours may be carried forward from this source. For CJE credit approval, the participating judge/justice shall submit a copy of the program.

3.7.1 Credit may be earned through teaching in an approved continuing legal education activity. Presentations accompanied by thorough, high quality, readable, and carefully prepared written materials will qualify for CJE credit on the basis of six (6) hours of credit for each instructional hour presentation. Presentations accompanied by one or two page outlines or not accompanied by written materials will qualify for CJE credit on the basis of three (3) hours of credit per hour of presentation. Repeat presentations qualify for one half of the credits available for the initial presentation.

3.7.2 Credit may also be earned through teaching a course in an ABA or AALS approved law school. The Mississippi Judicial College will award six (6) hours of CJE credit for each hour of academic credit awarded by the law school for the course.

3.7.3 Credit may also be earned through authorship of a law journal article on matters of law published by an ABA or AALS approved law school. The Mississippi Judicial College will award six (6) hours of CJE credit for each such article published.

3.8 Credit may be earned through formal enrollment and education of a postgraduate nature in an ABA or AALS accredited law school. The Mississippi Judicial College will award six (6) hours of CJE credit for each hour of academic credit awarded by the law school. (Amended effective August 1, 1994; amended effective January 1, 1998.)

Rule 4. Credits.

(a) Credit will be given for CJE programs approved by the Committee on Continuing Judicial Education.

(b) A maximum of twelve (12) hours in excess of the minimum annual requirement may be carried forward for credit in the succeeding year, except those acquired from a Judge Advocate General program.

(c) Credit may be earned through teaching an approved CJE course or teaching a course in law schools approved by the Committee.

(d) Youth Court Referees may only earn credit by attending juvenile justice training approved by the Mississippi Judicial College. (Amended effective August 1, 1994; amended effective January 1, 1998.)

Regulations

4.1.1 The following standards will govern the approval of continuing judicial education activities by the Committee on Continuing Judicial Education.

4.1.2 The activity must have significant intellectual or practical content and its primary objective must be to increase the participant's professional competence as a judge.

4.1.3 The activity must deal primarily with matters related to the practice of law, professional responsibility or ethical obligations of judges, and the administration of justice.

4.1.4 The activity must be offered by a sponsor having substantial, recent experience in offering continuing legal education or demonstrated ability to organize and present effectively continuing judicial education. Demonstrated ability arises partly from the extent to which individuals with legal training or educational experience are involved in the planning, instruction and supervision of the activity.

4.1.5 The activity itself must be conducted by an individual or group qualified by practical or academic experience. The program, including the named advertised participants must be conducted substantially as planned, subject to emergency withdrawals and alterations.

4.1.6 Thorough, high quality, readable, and carefully prepared written materials must be made available to all participants at or before the time the course is presented, unless the absence of such materials is recognized as reasonable and approved by the Committee on Continuing Judicial Education. Mere outline without citations or explanatory notations will not be sufficient.

4.1.7 The activity must be conducted in a physical setting conducive to learning.

4.1.8 Approval may be given for activities where electronically recorded or reproduced material is used.

4.1.9 Activities that cross academic lines, such as an accounting-tax seminar, may be considered for approval.

4.1.10 At the conclusion of an approved program or activity, each participating judge or justice must be given the opportunity to complete an evaluation questionnaire addressing the quality, effectiveness and usefulness of the particular activity. Within thirty (30) days of the conclusion of the activity a summary of the results of the questionnaire must be forwarded to the Committee. If requested, copies of the questionnaires must also be forwarded to the Committee. Sponsors must maintain the questionnaires for a period of 90 days following a program pending a request for submission of them to the Committee.

4.1.11 The costs of the program itself to the participating judge or justice, apart from optional meals, lodging, travel, etc., must be reasonable considering the subject matter, instructional level, etc.

4.1.12 Each judge or justice, seeking to attend any seminar other than those sponsored by the Mississippi Judicial College shall be responsible for seeking approval from the Committee of the program for CJE credit and funding.

4.1.13 The only continuing judicial education activity approved for Youth Court Referees shall be juvenile justice training approved by the Mississippi Judicial College. (Amended effective August 1, 1994; amended effective January 1, 1998.)

Rule 5. Annual report.

On or before January 31 of each year, commencing January, 1990, each judge and justice subject to CJE in the state, shall make a written report to the Mississippi Judicial College, in such form as the college shall prescribe, concerning his or her compliance with these rules accredited judicial education during the preceding calendar year. (Amended effective July 1, 1989; August 1, 1994.)

Regulations

5.1 On or before January 31 of each year, each judge or justice will submit a report to the Mississippi Judicial College concerning completion of hours earned during the preceding year and hours to be carried forward to the next year.

5.2 The files and records of the Mississippi Judicial College are deemed confidential and shall not be disclosed except in furtherance of the duties of the Committee; statistical abstracts may, however, be drawn therefrom in an anonymous fashion. (Amended effective July 1, 1989; August 1, 1994.)

Rule 6. Noncompliance and sanctions.

(a) As soon as practicable after January 1 of each year, commencing January 1, 1989, the Mississippi Judicial College shall compile the following:

(1) A list of those judges, or justices who have complied with these rules for the prior preceding calendar year ending December 31, as required by Rules 3 and 5, Mississippi Rules for Mandatory Continuing Judicial Education.

(2) A list of judges or justices who have not complied with these rules for the prior preceding calendar year ending December 31 indicating that they have not complied with the requirement of Rules 3 and 5, Mississippi Rules for Mandatory Continuing Judicial Education.

(3) Any request for waiver of these rules from any judge/justice.

(b) The above lists shall then be forwarded to the Committee On Mandatory Continuing Judicial Education who shall then notify, by certified mail, each judge/justice who has not complied with Rules 3 and 5, Mississippi Rules for Mandatory Continuing Judicial Education within sixty (60) days, why the judge/justice should not be reported to the Supreme Court for sanction. Said judge/justice shall furnish the Committee with an affidavit:

(1) Indicating that the judge/justice has complied with the requirement prior to expiration of the sixty (60) days, or

(2) Setting forth a valid excuse for failure to comply with the requirements because of hardship or other good cause.

(c) At the expiration of sixty (60) days from the date of the Notice to Show Cause, the Committee shall notify the Supreme Court of Mississippi of each judge/justice who fails to file an affidavit satisfactory to the Committee On Mandatory Continuing Judicial Education as described in (b)(1) and (b)(2) above and may recommend appropriate sanctions to the Mississippi Supreme Court. The sanctions are to be determined by said Supreme Court. Said sanctions may include a private reprimand, public reprimand, and/or the publication of the name of said judge in the Mississippi Lawyer as not having satisfactorily completed mandatory judicial education, or other appropriate sanction.

(d) At any time after notice of noncompliance to the Supreme Court, a judge/justice may file with the Committee an affidavit indicating compliance with Rules 3 and 5, Rules for Mandatory Continuing Judicial Education; and if satisfactory to the Committee On Mandatory Continuing Judicial Education, it shall forthwith notify the Supreme Court and may recommend sanctions to be imposed by the Supreme Court.

(e) Any Youth Court Referee who fails to comply with the continuing judicial educational requirements of § 43-21-111(2) Miss. Code Ann. or Rule 3 hereof shall be disqualified to serve as a Youth Court Referee, until compliance, in accordance with § 43-21-111(2) Miss Code Ann. (Amended effective July 1, 1989; August 1, 1994; amended effective January 1, 1998.)

Rule 7. Additional policies.

No examination or testing shall be required at any continuing legal education course mandated by Rule 7, Mississippi Rules for Mandatory Continuing Judicial Education.

Rule 8. Sunset review.

The Supreme Court of the State of Mississippi shall review the Mandatory Continuing Judicial Education Program five years from and after January 1, 2001. However, the Supreme Court is not precluded from considering the rules, organization and agenda, or any other matter of this program during this time period. (Amended December 31, 1991; January 11, 1996.)

I. Definitions.

As used in these rules and regulations, the following terms have the following meanings, unless expressly otherwise provided, or as may result from necessary implication:

(A) Applicant. Individual applying for certification as a certified court reporter or individual applying for temporary permission as a noncertified court reporter or an individual applying for temporary permission as a nonresident court reporter.

(B) Board. Board of Certified Court Reporters.

(C) Clerk. Clerk of the Supreme Court.

(D) Court. Supreme Court of Mississippi.

(E) Notify or notified. Notice by the Board shall be effective when mailed by regular first class mail, postage prepaid, to the address listed by the applicant on his/her application. Applicants shall notify the Board in writing of any change in mailing address occurring after their applications have been received by the Board.

(F) Rules and regulations. The Rules and Regulations Governing Certified Court Reporters as adopted by the Board and approved by the Supreme Court.

(G) Secretary. Secretary of the Board of Certified Court Reporters.

(H) Court Reporting. Means the making of a verbatim record by means of written symbols or abbreviations in pen shorthand, machine shorthand, or oral stenography (also known as steno mask) of testimony or proceedings relevant to matters under the jurisdiction of the courts of the State of Mississippi, all state agencies or the Legislature or any committee or subcommittee thereof, or where appeal to any court of the State of Mississippi is allowable by law. The making of a verbatim record includes the taking of a deposition.

(I) Certification. Authorization by the Board to engage in the practice of court reporting as regulated by the Board.

(J) Certified Court Reporter. A person holding a licensure card issued by the Board permitting the person to engage in the practice of court reporting as regulated by the Board. The licensure card shall indicate the method or methods by which the court reporter has successfully passed examination, and a court reporter shall be licensed to use only that method of reporting. Upon being granted licensure, a court reporter is entitled to use the title 'Certified Court Reporter' or the abbreviation "CCR."

(K) Temporary Permission. A person holding a licensure card issued by the Board which gives authorization to a Noncertified Court Reporter or a Nonresident Court Reporter to engage in the practice of court reporting in the State on a limited basis as set forth in these rules and as regulated by the Board. Said licensure card shall state that the court reporter has Temporary Permission as a Noncertified Court reporter or as a Nonresident Court Reporter, and it shall also state the method or methods by which said court reporter is authorized to practice.

(L) Noncertified Court Reporter. A person with Mississippi residency who is granted temporary permission by the Board to engage in the practice of court reporting on a limited basis without obtaining full certification and after meeting the qualifications and requirements as set forth in these rules. A Noncertified Court Reporter shall not be entitled to use the title "Certified Court Reporter" or the abbreviation "CCR."

(M) Nonresident Court Reporter. A person who does not reside in the State of Mississippi and is granted temporary permission by the Board to engage in the practice of court reporting on an annual basis after meeting the qualifications and requirements as set forth in these rules.

(N) Reciprocity. Only applies to those applicants seeking certification by reciprocity and not certification by examination. Agreements with any state, agency, or other entity that licenses, certifies, or registers court reporters, such as the National Court Reporters Association (NCRA), the National Verbatim Reporters Association (NVRA), if the Board finds that the state, agency, or other entity has substantially the same or more stringent requirements as the Mississippi Board of Certified Court Reporters.

(O) NCRA. The National Court Reporters Association.

(P) RPR. Registered Professional Reporter certificate issued by NCRA to a court reporter who successfully completes the examination requirements.

(Q) NVRA. The National Verbatim Reporters Association.

(R) CVR. Certified Voice Reporter certificate issued by NVRA to a court reporter who successfully completes the examination requirements.

(S) Revoke a license. To unconditionally prohibit the conduct authorized by the license.

(T) Suspend a license. To prohibit, whether absolutely or subject to conditions which are reasonably related to the grounds for suspension, for a defined period of time, the conduct authorized by the license.

(U) Official Court Reporter. A competent and properly licensed court reporter who has been appointed by a circuit, chancery, or county court judge in his/her county or district by entry of an order to that effect upon the minutes of the court to make a verbatim record of testimony or proceedings relevant to matters under the jurisdiction of the courts of the State of Mississippi, all state agencies, or the Legislature or any committee or subcommittee thereof, or where appeal to any court of the State of Mississippi is allowable by law. That reporter shall be known as the official court reporter of said district or county.

(V) Freelance Court Reporter. A competent and properly licensed court reporter engaged in the practice of court reporting which is defined as the following: Making a verbatim record of testimony or proceedings relevant to matters under the jurisdiction of the courts of the State of Mississippi, all state agencies, or the Legislature or any committee or subcommittee thereof, or where appeal to any court of the State of Mississippi is allowable by law. The taking of a deposition shall be defined as the making of a verbatim record. (Approved effective January 1, 2012.)

II. Board of certified court reporters.

(A) Creation. By virtue of Section 9-13-101 Et seq., Mississippi Code of 1972, the Mississippi Legislature created a judicial board to be known as the Board of Certified Court Reporters to oversee the licensing of certified court reporters and the granting of temporary permission to noncertified and nonresident court reporters in order to aid the proper administration of the judicial branch of government.

(B) Appointment — Term of office. The Board shall be composed of nine (9) members. Two (2) members shall be judges, one (1) from the Supreme Court and one (1) from a trial court, appointed by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court with the approval of the full court. Two (2) of the Board members shall be practicing attorneys and shall be appointed by the Chief Justice, with the approval of the full court, on nomination by the Mississippi Bar. Two (2) of the members shall be official court reporters in, and citizens of, Mississippi for at least five (5) years prior to their appointments and shall be appointed by the Chief Justice with approval of the full court on nomination by the Board of Directors of the Mississippi Court Reporters Association. Two (2) of the members shall be freelance court reporters in, and citizens of, Mississippi for at least five (5) years prior to their appointments and shall be appointed by the Chief Justice with approval of the full court on nomination of the Board of Directors of the Mississippi Court Reporters Association. The ninth Board member shall be the Supreme Court Clerk, who shall serve as a permanent member of the Board. Initially, for judges, lawyers and court reporters, one (1) of the two (2) shall be appointed for a term of one (1) year and one (1) for a term of two (2) years. For court reporters, one (1) official shall be appointed for a term of one (1) year and one (1) for a term of two (2) years and one (1) freelance reporter shall be appointed for a term of one (1) year and one (1) for a term of two (2) years. After each member's term expires, his/her successor shall be appointed for a term of two (2) years. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court shall fill any vacancy for the duration of an unexpired term by appointing a person having the appropriate qualifications. The Supreme Court may remove any member for cause. Members may be appointed to successive terms.

(C) Duties and powers. The Board is charged with the duties and vested with the power and authority:

(1) To determine the content of and administer examinations to be given to applicants for certification as Certified Court Reporters.

(2) To determine an applicant's ability to make a verbatim record of proceedings which may be used in any court in this State by any recognized system designated by the Board and to pass upon the eligibility of applicants for certification, Temporary Permission as a Noncertified Court Reporter or Temporary Permission as a Nonresident Court Reporter.

(3) To issue licenses to those found qualified as Certified Court Reporters, to grant Temporary Permission to those Noncertified Court Reporters with Mississippi residency who meet the qualifications and requirements as set forth in these rules, and to grant Temporary Permission to those Nonresident Court Reporters who meet the qualifications and requirements as set forth in these rules.

(4) To promulgate, amend and revise regulations relevant to the duties of the Board, subject to the approval of the Supreme Court.

(5) To make studies and, from time to time, recommendations to the Supreme Court concerning matters pertaining to Certified Court Reporters and to reporters granted Temporary Permission as Noncertified Court Reporters or as Nonresident Court Reporters.

(6) To account to the Supreme Court in all fiscal matters following recognized accounting procedures of the State Auditor.

(7) To exercise jurisdiction over disciplinary matters with regard to Certified Court Reporters or Court Reporters who are granted Temporary Permission as Noncertified Court Reporters or as Nonresident Court Reporters in accordance with the rules and regulations adopted by the Board.

(8) To enter into contracts, hire staff and do such other things as may be necessary to carry out the administration of the duties of the Board.

(9) To maintain a current roll of Certified Court Reporters and a current roll of court reporters granted Temporary Permission as Noncertified or Nonresident Court Reporters, and said rolls shall be matters of public record.

(D) Oath. Each member of the Board shall take a prescribed oath to be administered by one (1) of the Justices of the Supreme Court, or by another person authorized by law to take oaths, to fairly, impartially and to the best of his/her ability discharge the duties of the office and agree to keep confidential all communications, discussions, and actions of the Board, unless ordered by a court of competent jurisdiction.

(E) Officers. At the first meeting of the calendar year, the Board shall elect a Chairman and a Vice-Chairman. The Board's Administrator shall serve as Secretary/Treasurer.

(F) Compensation and expenses. The members of the Board shall receive all reasonable and necessary travel expenses incurred in the performance of their duties. All fees collected by the Board shall be paid to the State Treasurer, who shall issue receipts therefore and who shall deposit such funds in the State Treasury in a special fund to the credit of the Board. All expenses incurred by the Board shall be paid out of such special fund pursuant to legislative appropriation. An annual budget shall be prepared by the Supreme Court and submitted to the Board for its approval prior to submission by the Court of its budget to the Mississippi State Legislature.

(G) Quorum. The Board shall act upon each application at a special or regular meeting of the Board at which a quorum is present. A quorum shall consist of a majority of the members. Action on any matter at the meeting of the Board may be taken by a majority of a quorum. The Board may act upon any matter without a meeting by a written poll conducted by the Chairman. Action taken upon such a poll may be taken only upon majority vote of the entire Board. The action of the Board taken by written poll shall be placed in the minutes of the Board at its next meeting.

(H) Headquarters. The office of the Board shall be located at 450 High Street, Jackson, Mississippi, 39201. The mailing address of the Board is P.O. Box 369, Jackson, Mississippi, 39205-0369, and the telephone number is (601) 576-4623. (Approved effective January 1, 2012.)

III. Applications for certification or temporary permission as a non-certified court reporter or as a nonresident court reporter.

(A) Application forms and fees. Upon request, the Board shall forward to any person application forms, statement of reference forms, and copies of the statutes and regulations of the Board. There shall be a fee of $25.00 for the packet of official confidential application forms (money order, certified check or cash only). A packet may be obtained by writing to the Board. Only official confidential application forms obtained from the Board shall be processed or considered by the Board.

Applicants applying for Certification (Mississippi residency required), Temporary Permission as a Noncertified Court Reporter (Mississippi residency required), or Temporary Permission as a Nonresident Court Reporter shall file with the Board a written application in the form prescribed by the Board, together with payment of a nonrefundable fee of $100 and a cover letter to the Board stating the type of licensure he/she is requesting and why he/she would like to be a licensed reporter in the State of Mississippi.

No application shall be accepted which is not filed on official forms and which is not accompanied by the full amount of fees due. Payment of fees shall be made to "Board of Certified Court Reporters." Applications must be complete at time of filing. The applicant must give a full and direct response to all inquiries on the application and must furnish all additional documents as required by the application. If complete documentation is not provided where applicable, said application shall not be processed or considered by the Board.

Applicants applying for Temporary Permission as a Nonresident Court Reporter shall sign and submit to their home state in which he/she is licensed any necessary privacy release form(s) which would enable the Board to obtain documents, records, and any other information pertaining to said applicant. It is the duty of the applicant to know whether or not a privacy release form is required by his/her home state prior to any information being released to the Board. If this document is not provided where applicable, said application shall not be processed or considered by the Board.

(B) Qualifications of applicants. Applications shall be screened by the Board, and those applicants twenty-one (21) years of age or older and of good moral character and a resident of the State of Mississippi, where applicable, shall be deemed eligible to take the Mississippi BCCR Examination and considered for Temporary Permission as a Noncertified Court Reporter, or considered for Temporary Permission as a Nonresident Court Reporter, or considered for Certification by Reciprocity. If applying for Temporary Permission as a Noncertified Court Reporter, an application must be filed with the Board at least thirty (30) days before the date fixed for examination. Each applicant shall be advised of the time and place the examination will be conducted, and the dates for said examinations shall be posted on the Board's website.

(C) Denial of application. All decisions of the Board denying an application for Certification, Temporary Permission as a Noncertified Court Reporter, or Temporary Permission as a Nonresident Court Reporter shall be made in writing, and the reasons for denying the application shall be included in the decision of the Board. The applicant shall be notified within thirty (30) days of the Board's decision. (Approved effective January 1, 2012.)

IV. Review before the board.

(A) Petition for Review. If an application for Certification or Temporary Permission is not acted upon favorably by the Board, the applicant may file a Petition for Review. Such Petition must be filed not later than forty-five (45) days after the date on which the Board has notified the applicant by mail of its decision.

(B) Content of Petition. A Petition for Review shall be verified under oath by the applicant and shall designate the reasons for such Petition. The Petition shall particularize how the decision of the Board is unjustified. No generalized claims shall be considered by the Board.

(C) Review by Board. Upon receipt of a Petition for Review, a review committee of not less than three (3) members of the Board shall review the application. In the event that a majority of the members of the Review Committee finds clear and manifest evidence that the application should not have received favorable consideration, the Review Committee shall so report to the Board and the Board, as a whole, shall review the application. In the event that a majority of the members of the Review Committee finds that the application should have received favorable consideration, such determination shall be final without further action by the Board as a whole. Upon completion of the review process, an order shall be entered in the Board minutes granting or denying the applicant's Petition. The applicant shall be notified within thirty (30) days of the Board's final decision on the Petition. (Approved effective January 1, 2012.)

V. Temporary permission as a noncertified court reporter (Mississippi residency required).

Applying for Temporary Permission as a Noncertified Court Reporter.

(A) Requirements: A Noncertified Court Reporter may make application to the Board for temporary permission to do verbatim reporting within the State. To be granted temporary permission, the applicant must make application on the same official forms as required of other applicants, must pay the Board a fee of $100, and must furnish proof that he/she has previously been a competent practicing reporter in another state that is not governed by certification and/or licensure rules and regulations or furnish proof of attendance at a court reporting program with documentation of a passing grade at the speed of 225 words per minute of Multi-Voice Testimony (Question and Answer), shall furnish proof that he/she is a resident of the State of Mississippi, and shall provide all documentation as required by the official application form.

(B) Temporary Permission may be granted upon a finding by the Board that the applicant is twenty-one (21) years of age or older, is of good moral character, is a resident of the State of Mississippi, and has previously been a competent practicing reporter in another state that is not governed by certification and/or licensure rules and regulations or attended a court reporting program with a passing grade at the speed of 225 words per minute of Multi-Voice Testimony (Question and Answer), and has provided all documentation as required by the official application form. Temporary Permission shall be renewed on or before January 2nd of the succeeding year upon payment of the annual fee for a period not to exceed thirty-six (36) months after being granted said temporary permission unless extended by the Board in accordance with Miss. Code Ann. § 9-13-121(2).

(C) A Noncertified Court Reporter who is granted temporary permission shall take examinations until each portion of said examination is passed in accordance with Rule XI. The court reporter shall immediately notify the Board in writing when he/she passes both Part A and Part B of the examination and request Certification by Examination licensure. If the applicant does not pass both Part A and Part B of the examination within the time provided in Miss. Code Ann. § 9-13-121(2), the court reporter shall no longer be eligible for temporary permission and must apply to the Board for Certification by Examination or Certification by Reciprocity licensure. The Board shall grant temporary permission to a noncertified court reporter one time.

(D) The Board shall issue to each successful applicant a licensure card containing the following information: Temporary Permission as a Noncertified Court Reporter number, temporary permission expiration date, and method of reporting to be used. A court reporter shall only use that method of reporting in which he/she has applied for and has been granted temporary permission. Said temporary permission number shall be placed on any transcript title page and certificate page, along with the signature of said court reporter. No court reporter granted temporary permission may authorize the use of the court reporter's temporary permission number on any transcript not produced through the court reporter's personal effort and/or supervision.

(E) A Noncertified Court Reporter shall comply with provisions set forth in Rule IX and the continuing education requirements as set forth in Rule X(C).

(F) A Noncertified Court Reporter shall not be entitled to use the title "Certified Court Reporter" or the abbreviation "CCR." (Approved effective January 1, 2012.)

VI. Temporary permission as a nonresident court reporter.

Applying for Temporary Permission as a Nonresident Court Reporter.

(A) Requirements: A nonresident court reporter wishing to make a verbatim record of any testimony of a proceeding, the jurisdiction of which is within the courts of Mississippi or where appeal to any court of the State of Mississippi as allowable by law, shall make annual application for temporary permission as a nonresident court reporter. The applicant must make application on the same official forms as required of other applicants, must pay the Board a fee of $100, and must present proof that he/she is a competent practicing reporter in good standing in another state that is governed by certification and/or licensure rules and regulations or holds a Registered Professional Reporter (RPR) certificate issued by the National Court Reporters Association (NCRA) and is in good standing with NCRA or holds a Certified Voice Reporter (CVR) certificate issued by the National Verbatim Reporters Association (NVRA) and is good standing with NVRA, and shall provide all documentation as required by the official application form. The Board shall only consider applications for nonresident temporary permission from reporters in states that grant similar privileges to applicants from this state.

(B) The Board shall issue temporary permission to a nonresident court reporter upon a finding that the applicant is twenty-one (21) years of age or older, is of good moral character, and is a competent practicing reporter in good standing in another state that is governed by certification and/or licensure rules and regulations or holds a Registered Professional Reporter (RPR) certificate issued by the National Court Reporters Association (NCRA) and is in good standing with NCRA or holds a Certified Voice Reporter (CVR) certificate issued by the National Verbatim Reporters Association (NVRA) and is good standing with NVRA, and has provided all documentation as required by the official application form. Such temporary permission shall be valid for a period not greater than one year. A nonresident court reporter must reapply annually on the same official forms as required for initial application. An annual fee of $100 or such fee as the Board may hereafter set is required.

(C) The Board shall issue to each successful applicant a licensure card containing the following information: Temporary Permission as a Nonresident Court Reporter number, temporary permission expiration date, and method of reporting to be used. A court reporter shall only use that method of reporting in which he/she has applied for and has been granted temporary permission. Said temporary permission number shall be placed on any transcript title page and certificate page, along with the signature of said court reporter. No court reporter granted temporary permission may authorize the use of the court reporter's temporary permission number on any transcript not produced through the court reporter's personal effort and/or supervision.

(D) A Nonresident Court Reporter shall comply with the provisions set forth in Rule IX and the continuing education requirements as set forth in Rule X(D). (Approved effective January 1, 2012.)

VII. Certification by examination.

(A) Examination requirements: A court reporter may make application to the Board for Certification by examination to do verbatim reporting within the State of Mississippi. To be granted Certification by examination, the applicant must make application on the same official forms as required of other applicants, shall provide all documentation as required by the official application form, must pay the Board a fee of $100, provide proof of residence in the State of Mississippi, meet all other requirements of the Board for certification, and provide proof that the applicant has successfully passed the examination administered by the Mississippi Board of Certified Court Reporters as set forth in Rule XI. Examinations, either written knowledge or skills portions/legs, given in other states will not be valid and not qualify the applicant for certification by examination as set forth in this subsection.

(B) Certification shall be granted upon a finding by the Board that the applicant is twenty-one (21) years of age or older, is of good moral character, is a resident of the State of Mississippi, has provided all documentation as required by the official application form, and has provided proof that the applicant has successfully passed the examination administered by the Mississippi Board of Certified Court Reporters as set forth in Rule XI.

(C) The Board shall issue to each successful applicant a licensure card containing the following information: Certification number, certification expiration date, and method of reporting. A court reporter shall be certified to use only that method of reporting in which he/she has been examined/certified.

Said CCR number shall be placed on any transcript title page and certificate page, along with the signature of said court reporter. No licensed court reporter may authorize the use of the court reporter's CCR number on any transcript not produced through the court reporter's personal effort and/or supervision.

(D) Annual fee. The designation "Certified Court Reporter (CCR)", once granted by the Board, shall remain in effect upon the payment to the Board of an annual fee of $100.00, or such other amount as may be hereafter established by the Board, on or before January 2nd of each succeeding year unless such designation is suspended or revoked. Upon payment of the annual fee and compliance with continuing educational requirements under Rule IX(A) herein, a court reporter shall have renewal of their license on or before January 2nd of each succeeding year.

(E) The Board may reinstate an expired license if, not later than the 120th day after the date of expiration, the applicant pays the renewal fee and a penalty fee of $50.00. The reinstatement dates from the original date of expiration. The Board may reinstate a license that has expired for more than 120 days if the Board finds, on a sworn affidavit of the applicant, that the applicant has retained the professional skills required for original certification and has paid all delinquent renewal fees and a penalty fee of $50.00. If the Board finds otherwise, the court reporter must reapply for certification.

(F) A Certified Court Reporter shall comply with the provisions set forth in Rule IX and the continuing education requirements as set forth in Rule X(B).

(G) Upon being granted certification, a court reporter is entitled to use the title "Certified Court Reporter" or the abbreviation "CCR" in conjunction with their names. (Approved effective January 1, 2012.)

VIII. Certification by reciprocity.

(A) Reciprocity Requirements: A court reporter from another state may make application to the Board for Certification by reciprocity to do verbatim reporting within the State of Mississippi. To be granted Certification by reciprocity, the applicant must make application on the same official forms as required of other applicants, shall provide all documentation as required by the official application form, must pay the Board a fee of $100, provide proof of residence in the State of Mississippi, meet all other requirements of the Board for certification, and provide proof that the applicant has successfully passed any of the following: The Registered Professional Reporter (RPR) examination administered by the National Court Reporters Association (NCRA), the Certified Voice Reporter (CVR) examination as administered by the National Verbatim Reporters Association (NVRA), or any state, agency, or other entity that licenses, certifies, or registers court reporters, if the Board finds that the state, agency, or other entity has substantially the same or more stringent requirements as the Mississippi Board of Certified Court Reporters. The applicant must ensure that his/her examination scores and a copy of his/her certificate and/or license are furnished to the Mississippi Board of Certified Court Reporters by said state, agency, association, or other entity.

(B) Certification shall be granted upon a finding by the Board that the applicant is twenty-one (21) years of age or older, is of good moral character, is a resident of the State of Mississippi, has provided all documentation as required by the official application form, and has provided proof that the applicant has successfully passed any of the following: The Registered Professional Reporter (RPR) examination administered by the National Court Reporters Association (NCRA), the Certified Voice Reporter (CVR) examination as administered by the National Verbatim Reporters Association (NVRA), or any state, agency, or other entity that licenses, certifies, or registers court reporters, if the Board finds that the state, agency, or other entity has substantially the same or more stringent requirements as the Mississippi Board of Certified Court Reporters (the applicant must ensure that his/her examination scores and a copy of his/her certificate and/or license are furnished to the Mississippi Board of Certified Court Reporters by said state, agency, association, or other entity).

(C) The Board shall issue to each successful applicant a licensure card containing the following information: Certification number, certification expiration date, and method of reporting. A court reporter shall be certified to use only that method of reporting in which he/she has been examined/certified. Said CCR number shall be placed on any transcript title page and certificate page, along with the signature of said court reporter. No licensed court reporter may authorize the use of the court reporter's CCR number on any transcript not produced through the court reporter's personal effort and/or supervision.

(D) Annual fee. The designation "Certified Court Reporter (CCR)", once granted by the Board, shall remain in effect upon the payment to the Board of an annual fee of $100.00, or such other amount as may be hereafter established by the Board, on or before January 2nd of each succeeding year unless such designation is suspended or revoked. Upon payment of the annual fee and compliance with continuing educational requirements under Rule IX(A) herein, a court reporter shall have renewal of their certificate on or before January 2nd of each succeeding year.

(E) The Board may reinstate an expired license if, not later than the 120th day after the date of expiration, the applicant pays the renewal fee and a penalty fee of $50.00. The reinstatement dates from the original date of expiration. The Board may reinstate a license that has expired for more than 120 days if the Board finds, on a sworn affidavit of the applicant, that the applicant has retained the professional skills required for original certification and has paid all delinquent renewal fees and a penalty fee of $50.00. If the Board finds otherwise, the court reporter must reapply for certification.

(F) A Certified Court Reporter shall comply with the provisions set forth in Rule IX and the continuing education requirements as set forth in Rule X(B).

(G) Upon being granted certification, a court reporter is entitled to use the title "Certified Court Reporter" or the abbreviation "CCR" in conjunction with their names. (Approved effective January 1, 2012.)

IX. Requirements for certified court reporters and court reporters granted temporary permission.

(A) Roll of Court Reporters. The Board shall maintain current rolls containing names and pertinent information on all individuals who have been certified as Certified Court Reporters or individuals granted Temporary Permission as Noncertified or Nonresident Court Reporters, and said rolls shall be matters of public record. These rolls shall contain a roster of all court reporters eligible and available for appointment.

(B) Certified Court Reporters and individuals granted Temporary Permission as Noncertified or Nonresident Court Reporters must notify the Board in writing within thirty (30) days of any change in employment, home, or business address, and/or telephone number.

(C) Oath. Upon Certification or the granting of Temporary Permission, a court reporter shall taken an oath, on a form provided by the Board, that he/she will faithfully discharge his/her duties; the oath so taken shall be submitted to the Mississippi Board of Certified Court Reporters.

Before entering into his/her office, an official court reporter shall take, in open court, an oath that he/she will faithfully discharge the duties thereof; the oath so taken shall be entered into the minutes of the court, pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 9-13-3(1974).

(D) Bond. All court reporters shall give bond in a penalty of not less than two thousand dollars, pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 9-13-9(1974).

The bond of an official court reporter shall be approved by the court, conditioned for the faithful discharge of duties and shall be filed in the office of the clerk of the court of any county in the district, who shall, at the cost of the court reporter, certify a copy thereof to the clerk of said court in each of the other counties of the district, to be filed and preserved in his office, and said copies shall be competent evidence in any proceedings. Such bond shall be recorded at length in the bond record of the county where the original is filed.

(E) Code of professional ethics. Each reporter shall abide by the following code of ethics which has been adopted by the Board:

(1) Be fair and impartial toward each participant in all aspects of reported proceedings, and always offer to provide comparable services to all parties in a proceeding.

(2) Be alert to situations that are conflicts of interests or that may give the appearance of a conflict of interest. If a conflict or a potential conflict arises, the reporter shall disclose that conflict or potential conflict.

(3) Guard against not only the fact but the appearance of impropriety.

(4) Preserve the confidentiality and ensure the security of information, oral or written, entrusted to the reporter by any of the parties in a proceeding.

(5) Be truthful and accurate when making public statements or when advertising the reporter's qualifications, certifications, or the services provided.

(6) Refrain, as an official reporter, from freelance reporting activities that interfere with official duties and obligations.

(7) Determine fees independently, except when established by statute or court order, entering into no unlawful agreements with other reporters on the fees to any user.

(8) Refrain from giving, directly or indirectly, any gift, incentive, reward or anything of value to attorneys or their staff, clients, witnesses, insurance companies, or any other persons or entities who retain the services of a court reporter, or to the representatives or agents of any of the foregoing, except for (1) items that do not exceed $100 in the aggregate per recipient each year, or, (2) pro bono services as defined by the NCRA Guidelines for Professional Practice or by applicable state and local laws, rules and regulations.

(9) Maintain the integrity of the reporting profession.

(10) Reporters granted certification or temporary permission shall place their Certification or Temporary Permission number on any transcript title page and certificate page, along with the signature of said court reporter. No court reporter granted certification or temporary permission may authorize the use of the court reporter's number on any transcript not produced through the court reporter's personal effort and/or supervision.

(11) Abide by the rules and regulations governing Certified Court Reporters and Court Reporters granted Temporary Permission in this state, any and all applicable Mississippi Supreme Court rules, and any and all applicable laws as set forth in the Mississippi Code of 1972, as amended. (Approved effective January 1, 2012.)

Editor's Note — Former Rule IX, entitled "Discipline," was renumbered as Rule XII, effective January 1, 2012.

X. Continuing education.

(A) Continuing Education Definition: Continuing education credits must contribute directly to the competence and professionalism of court reporters. The Board shall be authorized to approve continuing education activities which include but are not limited to the following subject areas: language; academic knowledge; health and wellness; statutes, rules and regulations; court reporting technology; business practice; and ethical practices-professionalism.

(B) Requirement for Certified Court Reporters. In order to maintain certification, all certified court reporters shall be required to obtain a minimum of thirty (30) continuing education credits over a three-year period in courses approved by the Board or in compliance with the continuing education requirements of the National Court Reporters Association or the National Verbatim Reporters Association. The three-year period will begin on January 2nd of the year during which the reporter is initially certified. No credits may be carried over to the following three-year term, and the court reporter shall comply with the provisions as set forth in Rule X(E) for reporting continuing education credits earned.

(C) Requirement for Court Reporters Granted Temporary Permission as Noncertified Court Reporters. In order to maintain temporary permission, all noncertified court reporters shall be required to obtain a minimum of thirty (30) continuing education credits over a three-year period in courses approved by the Board or in compliance with the continuing education requirements of the National Court Reporters Association or the National Verbatim Reporters Association. The three-year period will begin on January 2nd of the year during which the reporter is initially granted temporary permission. After the court reporter becomes certified, either by examination or reciprocity, any credits earned during that current year may be carried over to fulfill the continuing education requirements for certified court reporters as set forth in Rule X(B). The court reporter shall comply with the provisions as set forth in Rule X(E) for reporting continuing educations credits earned.

(D) Requirement for Reporters Granted Temporary Permission as Nonresident Court Reporters. All Nonresident Court Reporters shall be required to maintain good standing with respect to the continuing education requirements as set forth and governed by the rules and regulations of his/her home state of original certification and/or licensure or with respect to the continuing education requirements as set forth and governed by the National Court Reporters Association (NCRA) or the National Verbatim Reporters Association (NVRA).

(E) Report. Each Certified Court Reporter and reporters granted Temporary Permission as Noncertified or Nonresident Court Reporters shall make a written report to the Board, in such form as the Board shall prescribe, concerning his/her completion of the continuing education requirements for credit other than Mississippi Judicial College or Mississippi Court Reporters Association seminars which are already reported by those associations, on or before January 2nd at the conclusion of the third year. The Administrator of the Board shall be the recorder of continuing education credits.

(F) Noncompliance and Sanctions. If the Board's records reflect that a court reporter has not attained the required continuing education credits as set out hereinabove, the Board shall serve, by certified mail, the court reporter with an order to show cause within sixty (60) days why the reporter's certification or temporary permission should not be suspended. Upon receipt of an order to show cause, the court reporter shall furnish the Board with an affidavit setting forth the following:

(1) That the court reporter has complied with the requirements prior to the expiration of sixty (60) days and proof thereof, or

(2) Setting forth a valid excuse for failure to comply with the requirements because of illness or other good cause.

(G) Reinstatement. If a reporter's certification is suspended, he§he may file an affidavit, together with a reinstatement fee of $100, with the Board indicating compliance with the continuing education requirements, and the Board may agree to reinstate the court reporter's certification or temporary permission. Upon receipt of the affidavit and reinstatement fee, the Board shall review the same within thirty (30) days.

If the Board finds that the court reporter has complied with the requirements as set forth in IX(C)(1)(2), the reporter's certification or temporary permission shall be reinstated.

If the Board finds that the court reporter has not complied with the requirements as set forth in IX (C)(1)(2), the court reporter's certification or temporary permission shall continue to be suspended until such time as the continuing education requirement is fulfilled, and the court reporter shall not be permitted to practice court reporting in the State of Mississippi during the period of said suspension, and any violation shall subject the reporter's certification or temporary permission to being revoked. If a court reporter's certification or temporary permission is revoked, the court reporter must reapply for certification or temporary permission. (Approved effective January 1, 2012.)

XI. Mississippi court reporter examination.

(A) Certified Court Reporter Examination Defined. The State of Mississippi's Certified Court Reporter examination shall be the Mississippi Court Reporter Examination. The Mississippi Court Reporter Examination shall be administered biannually under the direction of the Board of Certified Court Reporters. For the Mississippi Court Reporter Examination, all grading decisions of the Board of Certified Court Reporters shall be final.

(B) Mississippi Court Reporter Examination.

(1) Fees for the Mississippi Court Reporter Examination shall be as follows:

Application fee	$ 50.00
Examination fee, written knowledge only	$ 75.00
Examination fee, skills only	$ 100.00
Examination fee, written knowledge and skills	$ 125.00

The $50.00 application fee is a one-time, nonrefundable fee. If only the written knowledge portion of the examination is to be taken, the examination fee is $75.00; if only the skills portion is to be taken, the examination fee is $100.00; or if both the written knowledge and the skills portion are to be taken, the fee is $125.00. This $100.00 fee is the same regardless of how many legs of the skills portion (Part A) of the examination are to be taken. First time applicants must pay both the application fee and the examination fee.

Payments are due thirty (30) days before the examination, upon registration. Refunds of the examination fees will be given if the cancellation is received before the deadline of thirty (30) days prior to the examination, or the applicant may apply payment to the next scheduled test. Payments may be in the form of a check or a money order. All checks must be made payable to the Board of Certified Court Reporters.

(2) Administration of Mississippi Court Reporters Examination.

(a) Skills Examination-Part A. The skills portion of the test is a three-part dictation consisting of the following: 5 minutes of two-voice dictation of testimony (Question and Answer) given at 225 words per minute; 5 minutes of dictation of jury charge given at 200 words per minute; and 5 minutes of dictation of selected literary material given at 180 words per minute. Each of these legs will have one minute of warm up material. Each applicant shall personally take down the test, either in his/her own handwriting (pen shorthand) by machine shorthand (stenotype), or by his/her own voice (oral stenography/steno mask), and reduce to writing the take on a typewriter, word processor/computer with or without the aid of CAT (computer aided transcription) equipment. The minimum passing grade on each section of Part A of the test shall be ninety-five percent (95%) accuracy. An error shall be charged for each wrong word, each omitted word, for each added word not dictated, for each contraction where read as two words, for two words where read as a contraction, for each misspelled word, for each plural or singular where the opposite was dictated, and for each wrong number. Applicants may use a dictionary during Part A of the test. Applicants shall have seventy-five (75) minutes (1 ¼ hours) to transcribe each leg of the skills examination (Part A). If time permits, the applicant may review his/her transcript but shall use only his/her original shorthand notes (pen shorthand), steno machine notes, or voice file/tape (mask/voice writer) from which his/her transcript was prepared. If applicant passes any one leg of Part A of the test with ninety-five percent (95%) accuracy, he/she need not retake that leg on re-examination and may consider that leg passed.

Applicants for testing must furnish their own equipment and supplies for taking down and transcribing the skills portion (Part A) of the examination. Realtime translation is allowed in the dictation room. However, the screen must be situated in such a manner so that the display will not be visible to other testing candidates. No audio assist or backup of any kind is permitted during test dictation or during transcription. Candidates must disable their computer's and/or writer's microphone by either changing the settings on their computer and/or writer or by bringing an external adapter/plug.

All shorthand notes, steno machine notes, voice files/voice tapes, floppy disks, or any other external storage devices as outlined below, and any printed material becomes property of the Board of Certified Court Reporters. These must be turned in after the examination, and before leaving the testing site, the Chief Examiner shall verify that all tests from Part A (Skills Examination) are deleted from the hard drive of the applicant's word processor or computer and, if applicable, the steno machine's RAM (Random Access Memory) and any other applicable external storage devices. If an applicant's steno machine does not use a disk, e.g. a RAM memory, eliminate any jobs that may be in your steno machine's memory as you will be asked to reformat your steno machine's memory after the exam. If you do not reformat your steno machine's memory, your steno machine will be impounded by the Chief Examiner. Those using steno machines or systems with flashcards/SD cards and/or USB/flash drives will need to bring the equipment necessary to delete the flashcard/SD cards and/or USB/flash drives or will need to turn in the flashcard/SD cards and/or USB/flash drives to the Chief Examiner with a self addressed, padded, and stamped envelope for mailing. Candidates who do not bring a self-addressed stamped envelope will have to forfeit their flashcards/SD cards and/or USB/flash drives.

The approximate allowable number of errors for each leg of the skills examination is:

Testimony (Q& A)	57
Jury Charge	50
Literary	45

(b) Written Knowledge Examination-Part B. The written knowledge examination is a, fifty (50) question, multiple choice test based on the following areas of court reporting. Approximately thirty percent (30%) of the questions will be on reporting and ethics, thirty percent (30%) on transcription; twenty percent (20%) Mississippi court procedures, and twenty percent (20%) grammar, vocabulary, and punctuation. These approximations are intended for general guidance only. Applicants shall have forty-five (45) minutes to complete the written knowledge examination (Part B). If applicant passes Part B (Written Knowledge Examination) with a grade of 75% or more, he/she need not retake Part B and may consider that portion passed.

Materials recommended for study in preparation for the written portion of the examination include but are not limited to:

National Court Reporters Association Professional Education Series, (a) English, (b) law, and (c) medical;

National Court Reporters Association Publications: (a) Systematic Guide to Medical Terminology, (b) Grammar for Shorthand Reporters, and (c) Punctuation for Shorthand Reporters:

Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure applying to the duties and responsibilities of court reporters;

Mississippi Rules of Appellate Procedure.

Rules and Regulations Governing Certified Court Reporters

(c) Test Results (Skills & Written Knowledge). Test results are mailed four (4) to six (6) weeks after the examination. No results will be given over the telephone. The written knowledge examination candidates receive the numeric scores, in addition to Pass or Fail conclusions. The skills examination candidates receive numeric scores as well as a Pass or Fail conclusion on each leg.

(d) Appeals. All appeals must be in writing to the Board of Certified Court Reporters and must be postmarked no more than twenty (20) days from the mailing date of the examination results. Applicants may request a regrade. The regrade fee is $50.00 and is due at the time of the appeal. (Approved effective January 1, 2012.)

XII. Discipline.

(A) Jurisdiction.

(1) The Board of Certified Court Reporters has jurisdiction of matters pertaining to discipline of certified court reporters, those reporters granted temporary permission as noncertified or nonresident court reporters, those holding themselves out in the State of Mississippi to be court reporters, and anyone engaged in the unauthorized practice of court reporting within the State of Mississippi. Hereafter, such proceedings shall be conducted in accordance with these rules.

(2) Nothing contained in these rules shall be construed to deny to any court such powers as may be necessary for that court to maintain control over its proceedings.

(3) The Supreme Court may, for default in the professional obligations of any court reporter or court reporter pro tempore, if such default threatens and adversely affects the efficiency of the judicial system, enter an order referring an apparent offender to the Board of Certified Court Reporters for the State of Mississippi for a disciplinary hearing as provided in these rules.

(B) Initiation and Filing of Complaints.

(1) Any matter touching on the misconduct of a court reporter certified or granted temporary permission by the Mississippi Board of Certified Court Reporters, those holding themselves out in the State of Mississippi to be court reporters, or anyone engaged in the unauthorized practice of court reporting within the State of Mississippi shall be called to the attention of the Board verbally or in writing. All court reporters, courts and their officers shall have the affirmative duty to notify the Board in writing of unprofessional or unethical conduct by a court reporter and any action taken by the court.

(2) The Board shall act based only upon a written complaint filed with the Board. A written complaint shall be filed on the complaint form provided by the Board. A written complaint shall contain the name, mailing address, and phone number of the complainant, the name and address of the accused court reporter, a statement of the facts of the complaint, a list of witnesses, with addresses and phone numbers if known, and copies of any statements by the witnesses and documents in support of the statement of facts of the complaint.

(3) No complaint shall be considered by the Board unless received, discovered or otherwise brought to the attention of the Board within three (3) years after the date of discovery of the facts upon which the complaint is based.

(4) If the written complaint, upon receipt, is found to be deficient, it shall be returned to the complainant with a statement of the deficiency and an opportunity to cure same. If the deficiency has not been cured within forty-five (45) days of the date upon which the same was returned to the complaining person, the complaint is subject to dismissal as provided in section "C" below.

(C) Investigation and Hearing.

(1) Upon receipt of a written complaint, if it appears on its face that the complaint is deficient or without merit, the Board may retire same to the file.

(2) Upon receipt of a written complaint, if it appears on its face that the complaint may have merit, the Board may conduct an investigation, either with or without notice to the accused court reporter, as in the Board's discretion appears appropriate.

(3) Results of any investigation into a written complaint shall be brought to the attention of the Board within sixty (60) days from the date the investigation was authorized by the Board.

(4) If after investigation and receipt of the report the Board determines that the matter may have merit such that a hearing is advisable, the Board shall provide the accused with a copy of the written complaint and simultaneously set a date for hearing and notify the accused reporter of the date of the hearing. Notification under this section shall be by registered, certified mail. The notice shall state the cause of any contemplated disciplinary action and the time and place of the hearing. The accused shall have fifteen (15) days from the date of notice in which to file a written response with the Board.

(5) The Chair of the Board may enlarge the time for completion of an investigation or, for good cause shown, the time for the accused to file a written response.

(6) The Board shall conduct any investigation or disciplinary hearing fairly and impartially and shall seek to elicit any and all facts which might be exculpatory or incriminatory of the accused. The Chairman, the Chair's designee, or the Board member serving as a Supreme Court Justice or trial court judge shall preside at the hearing.

(7) The accused shall appear at the hearing either with or without counsel. The accused reporter and/or counsel shall have the opportunity to present witnesses and evidence on behalf of the accused court reporter and also the opportunity to examine or cross-examine all witnesses.

(8) The Board may assess costs incurred in the investigation or hearing of any disciplinary matter as justice may require. Such costs and expenses shall include actual and necessary expenses. An accused court reporter exonerated of the charges may recover from the Board any sums assessed by and actually paid to the Board. The accused court reporter shall recover no other costs or expenses.

(D) Grounds for Disciplinary Action. The following shall be considered by the Board as grounds for disciplinary action against an accused court reporter:

(1) Fraud or corruption;

(2) Dishonesty;

(3) Willful or negligent violation or failure of duty;

(4) Incompetence in the performance of duties authorized by the certificate or temporary permission;

(5) Fraud or misrepresentation in obtaining certification or temporary permission;

(6) A conviction of a felony;

(7) A conviction of a criminal offense, either felony or misdemeanor, involving moral turpitude that indicates a clear and rational likelihood that the reporter will not properly discharge the responsibilities of a certified court reporter or of a court reporter granted temporary permission;

(8) Engaging in the practice of court reporting without certification or temporary permission issued by the State of Mississippi;

(9) Engaging in the practice of court reporting while certification or temporary permission is suspended;

(10) Engaging in the practice of court reporting by a method for which said court reporter has not been certified or granted temporary permission by the Board to use.

(11) Adjudication of insanity or incompetency;

(12) Violation of any rule or order promulgated by the Supreme Court governing the obligations or duties of court reporters;

(13) Unprofessional conduct; or

(14) Other sufficient cause.

(E) Disciplinary Action.

(1) At the conclusion of a hearing, the Board, upon majority vote, shall render a written opinion incorporating findings of fact and conclusions of law.

(2) The discipline may provide for one or more of the following:

(a) Exonerate the accused court reporter and dismiss the complaint;

(b) Publicly or privately reprimand the accused court reporter. Public reprimand shall result in the court reporter appearing before the Circuit Court of the court reporter's county of residence on the first day of a term convening next after the date the reprimand becomes final or on some other similar day when a maximum number of the Bar and public are present. When a reprimand becomes public, a copy shall be given to the person filing the complaint, the Chief Justice of the Mississippi Supreme Court, and to the judges of the circuit and chancery districts in the counties where the court reporter works, and shall be published in one or more of the following publications or websites administered by any of the following: the Mississippi Bar, the Mississippi Board of Certified Court Reporters, the Mississippi Court Reporters Association. If said court reporter was granted temporary permission as a Nonresident Court Reporter, a copy of said reprimand shall be forwarded to his/her home state of original certification and/or licensure for appropriate action to be taken therewith according to that state's governing rules and regulations. If said court reporter is a member of the National Court Reporters Association (NCRA) and/or the National Verbatim Reporters Association (NVRA), a copy of said reprimand shall be forwarded to said association(s) for appropriate action to be taken therewith according to that association's governing bylaws, rules, and regulations. A final public reprimand shall be read by the senior judge or the senior judge's designee at the time herein indicated and placed on the minutes of the Court;

(c) Suspend the accused court reporter with or without probation for a fixed period of time and specify conditions precedent to reinstatement. Orders of suspension shall immediately become matters of public record and shall be placed upon the minutes of the circuit and chancery courts in the court reporter's county of residence and in the counties where the reporter works. A copy of the Order of suspension shall be given to the person filing the complaint, the Chief Justice of the Mississippi Supreme Court, and to the judges of the circuit and chancery districts in the counties where the court reporter works, and shall be published in one or more of the following publications or websites administered by any of the following: the Mississippi Bar, the Mississippi Board of Certified Court Reporters, and the Mississippi Court Reporters Association. If said court reporter was granted temporary permission as a Nonresident Court Reporter, a copy of said Order of suspension shall be forwarded to his/her home state of original certification and/or licensure for appropriate action to be taken therewith according to that state's governing rules and regulations. If said court reporter is a member of the National Court Reporters Association (NCRA) and/or the National Verbatim Reporters Association (NVRA), a copy of said Order of suspension shall be forwarded to said association(s) for appropriate action to be taken therewith according to that association's governing bylaws, rules, and regulations. A court reporter who is suspended may not continue to work in the State of Mississippi until all conditions precedent have been met and the Board approves reinstatement;

(d) Revoke the certification or temporary permission of the court reporter. A copy of the Order of revocation shall be given to the person filing the complaint, the Chief Justice of the Mississippi Supreme Court, and to the judges of the circuit and chancery districts in the counties where the court reporter works, and shall be published in one or more of the following publications or websites administered by any of the following: the Mississippi Bar, the Mississippi Board of Certified Court Reporters, and the Mississippi Court Reporters Association. If said court reporter was granted temporary permission as a Nonresident Court Reporter, a copy of said Order of revocation shall be forwarded to his/her home state of original certification and/or licensure for appropriate action to be taken therewith according to that state's governing rules and regulations. If said court reporter is a member of the National Court Reporters Association (NCRA) and/or the National Verbatim Reporters Association (NVRA), a copy of said Order of revocation shall be forwarded to said association(s) for appropriate action to be taken therewith according to that association's governing bylaws, rules, and regulations.

(e) Impose a civil fine of five hundred dollars ($500.00) upon any person who undertakes or attempts to undertake the practice of court reporting for remuneration without having first procured a certificate or temporary permission under Sections 9-13-101 through 9-13-123; or who knowingly files false information with the Board for the purpose of obtaining certification or temporary permission under Sections 9-13-101 through 9-13-123. Each day's violation shall be considered a separate infraction. A person who is not authorized to practice court reporting under Sections 9-13-101 through 9-13-123 shall not bring or maintain an action to recover fees for court reporting services that the person performed in violation of Section 9-13-118.

(3) If the Board finds an ethical violation or instance of misconduct which does not warrant disciplinary action but should not be dismissed as being without merit, a letter of admonition shall be sent to the court reporter and a copy thereof to the person making the complaint. Informal admonition shall not be used as a substitute for, and shall not be considered as, disciplinary action. However, the fact, nature, and cause of such admonition shall be retained in the Board's file on said court reporter and shall be disclosed in any subsequent disciplinary proceedings.

(F) Admissions and Irrevocable Resignations.

(1) Any time after the court reporter has been formally notified as provided in (C)(4), the Board may, in its discretion and upon majority vote, accept admissions. Upon acceptance by the Board, the proceedings may be terminated. Nothing contained herein, however, shall prevent the further receipt of evidence for purposes of determining the final disposition to be made.

(2) Admissions shall fully address the factual matters alleged in the complaint, shall set out that the court reporter could not defend her/himself on the matters admitted, and that the court reporter submits to discipline on the matters admitted.

(3) Irrevocable resignations may be tendered to the Board at any time. An irrevocable resignation shall acknowledge every disciplinary matter then pending, state that the court reporter does not desire to defend same, and request permission to resign with prejudice. Upon receipt and acceptance of the irrevocable resignation, the disciplinary proceedings then pending shall terminate and the Board shall enter an Order accepting the resignation, revoking the court reporter's certification or temporary permission and barring forever thereafter the court reporter's right to seek reinstatement or new certification or new temporary permission. An irrevocable resignation and order accepting same shall be considered disciplinary action on the matter charged. A copy of the Order of resignation shall be given to the person filing the complaint, the Chief Justice of the Mississippi Supreme Court and to the judges of the circuit and chancery districts in the counties where the court reporter works, and shall be published in one or more of the following publications or websites administered by any of the following: the Mississippi Bar, the Mississippi Board of Certified Court Reporters, and the Mississippi Court Reporters Association. If said court reporter was granted temporary permission as a Nonresident Court Reporter, a copy of said Order of resignation shall be forwarded to his/her home state of original certification and/or licensure for appropriate action to be taken therewith according to that state's governing rules and regulations. If said court reporter is a member of the National Court Reporters Association (NCRA) and/or the National Verbatim Reporters Association (NVRA), a copy of said Order of resignation shall be forwarded to said association(s) for appropriate action to be taken therewith according to that association's governing bylaws, rules, and regulations.

(4) Failure to renew a certificate or temporary permission as provided herein on or before March 1 of each calendar year shall constitute resignation by the court reporter. Any court reporter whose resignation is for failure to timely renew his/her certification or temporary permission (Noncertified Court Reporters only - Nonresident Court Reporters must reapply annually) may be reinstated as provided in these rules. (Approved effective January 1, 2012.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Decided under former Rule IX (now Rule XII).
Contempt proceedings.

Decided under former Rule IX (now Rule XII).

Contempt proceedings.

Through the court reporter's repeated failure to complete trial transcripts in a timely manner, the court reporter had a serious negative effect on the efficiency of the Mississippi and the court reporter repeatedly ignored orders requiring him to complete transcripts and mandating that he turn over his tapes and notes to a replacement court reporter; thus, pursuant to Miss. R. Governing Certified Ct. Reporters IX(A)(2), the court reporter was in willful constructive criminal contempt of the Mississippi Supreme Court for his repeated failure to complywith its orders and the Supreme Court revoked his court reporter certification, ordered him to pay all costs of the the contempt proceedings including attorney's fees and court reporter's fees. In re Hoppock, 849 So. 2d 1275 (Miss. 2003).

XIII. Reinstatement.

(A) All reinstatement petitions shall be addressed to the Board, shall state the cause(s) for suspension or revocation, give the names and current address of all persons, parties, firm, or legal entities who suffered pecuniary loss due to the improper conduct of the reporter, the making of full amends and restitution, the reasons justifying reinstatement, and requisite moral character and proof by sworn affidavit that he/she has retained the professional skills required for original certification or temporary permission to be reinstated to the privilege of being a certified court reporter in the State of Mississippi or being granted temporary permission as a noncertified court reporter in the State of Mississippi.

(B) No court reporter whose certification or temporary permission has been revoked shall be reinstated except upon Petition to the Board. The petition for reinstatement shall not be filed until two (2) years after the date of the order of revocation.

(C) A court reporter whose certificate or temporary permission has been suspended for a period of less than six (6) months shall be automatically reinstated upon expiration of the period of suspension. No court reporter whose certification or temporary permission has been suspended for a period of six (6) months or longer shall be reinstated except upon Petition to the Board. The petition for reinstatement shall not be filed until the expiration of the period of suspension. No petition for reinstatement shall be filed until the conditions of suspension have been met.

(D) Reinstatement to reporting following any discipline shall be only upon proof of compliance with any such sanctions and approval of the Board.

(E) A court reporter who has been convicted of a felony offense shall be ineligible for reinstatement.

(F) A court reporter who has been placed on probation is subject to having the probation revoked upon proof that the court reporter has failed to meet the terms of the probation.

(G) Prior to reinstatement of any court reporter eligible for reinstatement, the Board may require the court reporter to take the written knowledge examination (Part B) as prepared by the Mississippi Board of Certified Court Reporters and as set forth in Rule XI(2)(b) and obtain a score of not less than seventy-five (75). A court reporter whose certification or temporary permission has been revoked may also be required to take and pass all three (3) legs of the skills portion of the examination (Part A) currently used to certify court reporters in the State of Mississippi and as set forth in Rule XI(2)(a).

(H) If a petition for reinstatement is denied, no other petition shall be filed until one (1) year after the date of the denial of the petition for reinstatement.

(I) All petitions for reinstatement shall be public record, Rule XIII notwithstanding, and shall be published in one or more of the following publications or websites administered by any of the following: the Mississippi Bar, the Mississippi Board of Certified Court Reporters, and the Mississippi Court Reporters Association.

(J) All decisions of the Board denying a petition for reinstatement of Certification, Temporary Permission as a Noncertified Court Reporter, or Temporary Permission as a Nonresident Court Reporter shall be made in writing and the reasons for denying the petition shall be included in the decision of the Board. The court reporter shall be notified within thirty (30) days of the Board's decision. The decision of the Board shall be final. (Approved effective January 1, 2012.)

XIV. Discipline in another jurisdiction.

(A) When any court reporter in the State of Mississippi, whether with or without certification or temporary permission issued by the Board, is subjected to disciplinary action and/or sanctions in another jurisdiction, such sanction shall be grounds for disciplinary action in this state. Certification of such sanction by the appropriate authority of such jurisdiction to the Board or to the Mississippi Supreme Court shall be conclusive evidence of the guilt of the offense or unprofessional conduct on which said action and/or sanction was ordered, and it will not be necessary to prove the grounds for such offense in the disciplinary proceeding in this state.

(B) The sole issue to be determined in the disciplinary proceeding in this state shall be the extent of the final discipline to be imposed on the court reporter, which may be more or less severe than the discipline imposed by the other jurisdiction. (Approved effective January 1, 2012.)

XV. Confidentiality.

(C) All members of the Board, their assistants, staff and employees, members of the Mississippi Bar, the Mississippi Court Reporters Association, all clerks and receivers, and court reporters hired by the Board to report any proceedings are strictly enjoined to keep and maintain confidential all things arising under these rules and all proceedings thereon. The accused court reporter may make such public statement or disclosure as he/she desires. The period of confidentiality shall end, however, upon the accused court reporter making any public statement or disclosure about a proceeding under these rules.

(D) The Board shall have authority to share information with law enforcement officials concerning any alleged violation of any federal or state criminal laws by a court reporter.

(E) These rules shall not prohibit any complainant, the accused court reporter, or any witnesses from discussing publicly the existence of the proceeding(s) under these rules or from disclosing any information relating thereto, including the disclosing of any documents involved in the disciplinary proceeding(s). (Approved effective January 1, 2012.)

XVI. Immunity from civil suit.

(A) All complaints filed, statements made, documents, or other tangible things produced pursuant hereto shall be absolutely privileged, and no civil suit predicated therein may be instituted, and each person, firm, association, or legal entity filing such a complaint shall be immune from any civil suit pending thereon.

(B) The members of the Board and all their assistants, staff, employees, and receivers shall be immune from civil suit for any conduct arising out of the performance of their official duties. Every person shall be immune from civil suit for all evidence or testimony given or submitted in the course of any investigation, investigatory hearing, formal hearing, or review proceedings held and conducted under these rules. (Approved effective January 1, 2012.)

XVII. Costs and expenses.

(A) The Board may assess costs incurred in the investigation and hearing held in any disciplinary matter as justice may require.

(B) Such costs and expenses shall include the actual and reasonably necessary expenses of the Board. (Approved effective January 1, 2012.)

XVIII. Repealer and severability.

(A) If any of these rules or sections, or any part thereof, are declared to be unconstitutional or void, or if for any reason is declared to be invalid or of no effect, the remaining parts thereof shall be in no manner affected thereby but shall remain in full force and effect.

(B) Unless the contrary intent shall clearly appear in every amendment hereinafter made, each and every amendment made hereafter shall be read and construed as though the provisions hereof form an integral part of such amendments, whether expressly set out therein or not. (Approved effective January 1, 2012.)

XI. EFFECTIVE DATE OF PLAN.
XII. TERMINATION OF EXISTING PILOT MEDIATION PROGRAM.
XIII. SUSPENSION AND TERMINATION OF THE PLAN.
XIV. REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.
XV. STANDARDS OF CONDUCT FOR MEDIATORS.

These rules shall govern the referral of cases by the Circuit, Chancery and County courts of this state to mediation.

I. POLICY

It shall be the policy of the courts of the State of Mississippi (1) to encourage the peaceable resolution of disputes and early settlement of pending litigation by voluntary action of the parties, and (2) to identify cases appropriate for referral to mediation pursuant to the guidelines set out in these rules.

II. CASES APPROPRIATE FOR REFERRAL TO MEDIATION

All Civil cases shall be considered appropriate for referral to mediation in the discretion of the court, giving consideration to such facts as the subject matter of the case, the amount in controversy, the complexity of the case, the number of parties, the interest of the parties in pursuing mediation, the availability of mediation, and the likelihood of settlement by mediation.

III. REFERRAL OF CIVIL CASES

Civil Cases may be referred to mediation in the following manner:

A. Any circuit, chancery and county court in this state may, either on its own motion or on the motion of any party, determine that a case is appropriate for mediation. A court may not order a case to mediation more than one time.

B. If the court on its own motion determines that a pending dispute is appropriate for referral to mediation, the court shall enter its order which shall direct the clerk or court administrator to notify the parties to complete a mediation as set forth in this rule within a time period as the court may specify.

Any party, within 10 days of the date of entry of the court's order, may file written objection to the referral order and request a hearing by the court.

C. Any party may apply to the courts of this state for referral of a case to mediation by motion upon giving notice to all other parties. A hearing may be conducted on the motion at which the court shall make a determination as to whether mediation is appropriate and if the case is referred shall enter its appropriate order.

D. Upon the court entering its final order referring a case to mediation all objections having been heard by the court, the parties shall have a period of 20 days from the date of entry of the court's final order to schedule the mediation. If the parties are unable to agree on a convenient date and mediator, the clerk or administrator of the court shall assign a date, time, location and mediator to conduct the mediation procedure, which assignment will be binding on the parties upon their being notified by the clerk or court administrator of the court. Any objections any party may have with regard to the date, time or location assigned for the mediation or the selection of the mediator shall be filed with the court in writing within 10 days of entry of the notice of the clerk or court administrator.

IV. AUTHORITY TO SETTLE

The attorneys for all parties must appear at the mediation unless otherwise ordered by the court. Each party including a person with authority to settle the case on the party's behalf shall be present during the mediation unless otherwise ordered by the court.

V. MEDIATION

A. Mediation is a forum in which an impartial person, the mediator, facilitates communications between parties to promote reconciliation, settlement or understanding among them.

B. A mediator may not impose his or her own judgment on the issues for that of the parties.

VI. SANCTIONS

If a party or a party's attorney fails to obey an order made pursuant to this rule, fails to appear at the scheduled mediation, or fails to participate, the other party shall report such circumstances to the court. The court may make such orders with regard thereto as are just within the discretion of the court, including requiring the party, or the attorney representing the party, or both, to pay the reasonable expenses incurred because of any noncompliance with this rule, including attorney's and mediator's fees; provided; however, the mediator shall not be called as a witness or otherwise be required to give evidence at a sanctions hearing.

VII. CONFIDENTIALITY OF COMMUNICATIONS IN MEDIATION

A. Except as provided by subsections C and D below, a communication relating to the subject matter of any civil dispute made by a participant in a mediation is confidential, is not subject to disclosure, and may not be used as evidence against the participant in any judicial or administrative proceeding.

B. Mediation is confidential and no record shall be made. The participants or the mediator may not be required to testify in any proceedings relating to matters occurring during the mediation session, nor shall they be subject to process requiring disclosure of confidential information or data relating to or arising out of the matter in dispute.

C. Any oral communication or written material used in or made a part of a mediation is admissible or discoverable only if it is admissible or discoverable independent of the mediation.

D. If this section conflicts with other legal requirements for disclosure of communications or materials, the issue of confidentiality may be presented to the court having jurisdiction of the proceedings to determine, in camera, whether the facts, circumstances and context of the communications or materials sought to be disclosed warrant a protective order of the court or whether the communications or materials are subject to disclosure.

VIII. EFFECT OF WRITTEN SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

A. If the parties reach a settlement and execute a written agreement disposing of the dispute or any part thereof; the agreement is enforceable in the same manner as any other written contract.

B. The court in its discretion may incorporate the terms of the agreement in the court's final order disposing of the case.

IX. COST OF MEDIATION

The fees and expenses of the mediation shall be established by agreement between the mediator and the parties charged with those fees and expenses. Unless otherwise agreed to by the parties or ordered by the court, the party seeking mediation shall pay the fees and expenses of the mediation. When mediation is ordered by the court on its own motion, the court shall allocate the fees and expenses of the mediation, or such fees and expenses may be taxed as costs of the litigation. The attorney's fees of the parties shall not be included in the fees and expenses of mediation.

X. ADMINISTRATIVE FUNCTIONS CONCERNING MEDIATION

The following procedures will be utilized for the conduct of administrative functions necessary to make mediators available as needed for the referral of cases.

A. The Mississippi Supreme Court assisted by the Mississippi Bar will establish qualifications for inclusion on a list of mediators and prepare such list. The list shall be distributed to all circuit, county and chancery court clerks. The Mississippi Bar staff will provide administrative assistance. An administration fee for inclusion on the list may be established and charged to the approved mediators. Courts and parties are encouraged, but not required, to select mediators from this list.

B. Administration will be conducted through a committee designated the Court Annexed Mediation Committee which will be composed of the Officers and Executive Committee members of the Alternative Dispute Resolution Section of The Mississippi Bar, ex officio.

C. The Court Annexed Mediation Committee, with the advice of the Supreme Court, shall determine, on at least a semi-annual basis, whether there is an adequate number of qualified mediators to meet the demands of this Plan. If there is a determination that there is a need for training of additional mediators, The Mississippi Bar shall train or provide training to persons to serve as mediators. Persons receiving training elsewhere may qualify for inclusion on the list if said training meets the qualifications established by the Mississippi Supreme Court.

D. Within 60 days following the adoption of this plan, the Mississippi Bar shall submit to the Supreme Court proposed qualifications for mediators and administrative procedures for the implementation of the plan. Within 60 days following the appointment of members to the Annexed Mediation Committee, the committee will report to the Supreme Court the names, addresses and qualifications of mediators, and will update the list from time to time as needed.

[Amended effective July 1, 2009 to revise the composition of the committee; amended effective January 11, 2007, to increase the term of committee members to three years; Amended effective January 26, 2006, to remove limitation of number of members on the Court Annexed Mediation Committee.]

XI. EFFECTIVE DATE OF PLAN

This mediation plan shall become effective upon adoption by the Supreme Court of the qualifications for mediators and administrative procedures identified in Part X above.

XII. TERMINATION OF EXISTING PILOT MEDIATION PROGRAM

The pilot mediation program adopted by the Supreme Court on June 20, 1996 by order dated June 12, 1996 will terminate on its existing expiration date or upon the effective date of the plan herein adopted, which ever is the earlier.

XIII. SUSPENSION AND TERMINATION OF THE PLAN

The plan may be suspended or terminated by the Supreme Court upon a determination by the Court that there is an inadequate number of qualified mediators available to meet the demand without undue delay in the disposition of cases, or for such other reason as the Court may deem appropriate. (Amended effective June 27, 2002; amended effective September 30, 2004 to remove the automatic termination provision from the rules.)

XIV. REPORTING REQUIREMENTS

The following procedures will be utilized to gather information concerning cases ordered to mediation pursuant to these Rules.

A. Each circuit and chancery court clerk shall file, on a monthly basis, a written report with the Administrative Office of Courts reporting the hereafter specified information concerning cases ordered to mediation by an order of that court entered pursuant to these rules. The report shall be filed no later than the last day of each month following the month for which activity is being reported. The report shall state (a) the number of cases ordered to mediation; (b) the general subject matter of the cases; and (c) the information obtained from mediators concerning those cases pursuant to paragraph B of this Rule. Reports concerning county court cases ordered to mediation shall be filed by the circuit court clerk in like manner.

B. Each mediator selected by the parties in a matter ordered to mediation or appointed by the Court pursuant to Rule 3D shall, within 10 days of the conclusion of the mediation, report to the clerk of the court whether the case was settled. The report shall not disclose any particulars of the settlement. (Amended November 2, 2000.)

XV. STANDARDS OF CONDUCT FOR MEDIATORS

The following procedures will be utilized to gather information concerning cases ordered to mediation pursuant to these Rules.

Comment

These standards are drawn from Model Standards of Conduct for Mediators ... promulgated by the American Arbitration Association and the Alternate Dispute Resolution Section of the American Bar Association. Certain adjustments have been made in the Model Standards to conform this Rule XV to the text and practices set forth in the other sections of these Court Annexed Mediation Rules for Civil Litigation.

A. Self-Determination: A Mediator Shall Recognize that Mediation is Based on the Principle of Self-Determination by the Parties.

Self-determination is the fundamental principle of mediation. It requires that the mediation process rely upon the ability of the parties to reach a voluntary, uncoerced agreement. Having complied in good faith with any order entered under Rule III, any party may withdraw from mediation at any time.

Comment

The mediator may provide information about the process, raise issues, and help parties explore options. The primary role of the mediator is to facilitate a voluntary resolution of a dispute. Parties shall be given the opportunity to consider all proposed options.

A mediator cannot personally ensure that each party has made a fully informed choice to reach a particular agreement, but is a good practice for the mediator to make the parties aware of the importance of consulting other professionals, where appropriate, to help them make informed decisions.

Mediation under these rules is conducted in association with proceedings pending in the courts of the state, pursuant to orders of the courts in which the subject cases are pending as described in Rule III. Mediation is commenced by an order of the assigning court, which must be complied with in good faith. Failure to abide by such an order is subject to sanctions under Rule VI. Therefore, prior to withdrawing from or terminating a mediation, the parties must have fully performed her or his obligation under such an order and under the rules.

B. Impartiality: A Mediator shall Conduct the Mediation in an Impartial Manner.

The concept of mediator impartiality is central to the mediation process. A mediator shall mediate only those matters in which she or he can remain impartial and evenhanded. If at any time the mediator is unable to conduct the process in an impartial manner, the mediator is obligated to withdraw.

Comment

A mediator shall avoid conduct that gives the appearance of partiality toward one of the parties. The quality of the mediation process is enhanced when the parties have confidence in the impartiality of the mediator. When mediators are appointed by a court, the appointing court shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that mediators serve impartially.

A mediator should guard against partiality or prejudice based on the parties' personal characteristics, background or performance at the mediation.

C. Conflicts of Interest: A Mediator shall Disclose All Actual and Potential Conflicts of Interest Reasonably Known to the Mediator.

After disclosure, the mediator shall decline to mediate unless all parties the mediator, or the court has assigned the mediator by order. The need to protect against conflicts of interest also governs conduct that occurs during and after the mediation.

A conflict of interest is a dealing or relationship that might create an impression of possible bias. The basic approach to questions of conflict of interest is consistent with the concept of self-determination. The mediator has a responsibility to disclose all actual and potential conflicts that are reasonably known to the mediator and could reasonably be seen as raising a question about impartiality. If all parties agree to mediate after being informed of conflicts, the mediator may proceed with the mediation. If, however, the conflict of interest casts serious doubt on the integrity of the process, the mediator shall decline to proceed, and the parties shall immediately notify the court that the mediator has so declined.

A mediator must avoid the appearance of conflict of interest both during and after the mediation. Without the consent of all parties, a mediator shall not subsequently establish a professional relationship with one of the parties in a related matter, or in an unrelated matter under circumstances which would raise legitimate questions about the integrity of the mediation process.

Comment

A mediator shall avoid conflicts of interest in recommending the services of other professionals. A mediator may make reference to professional referral services or associations which maintain rosters of qualified professionals.

Potential conflicts of interest may arise between administrators of mediation programs and mediators and there may be strong pressures on the mediator to settle a particular case or cases. The mediator's commitment must be to the parties and the process. Pressure from outside of the mediation process should never influence the mediator to coerce parties to settle.

Although it is desirable that all parties accept the mediator, when the mediator is designated by order of the court under Rule III, the mediator shall conduct the mediation, unless she or he has a conflict of interest, or is relieved by the court.

D. Competence: A Mediator shall Mediate Only When the Mediator has the Necessary Qualifications to Satisfy the Reasonable Expectations of the Parties.

Any person may be selected as a mediator, provided that the parties are satisfied with the mediator's qualifications. Training and experience in mediation, however, are often necessary for effective mediation. A person who offers herself or himself as available to serve as a mediator gives parties and the public the expectation that she or he has the competency to mediate effectively. In court-connected or other forms of mandated mediation, it is essential that mediators assigned to the parties have the requisite training and experience.

Comment

Mediators should have information available for the parties regarding their relevant training, education and experience.

The requirements for appearing on the list of mediators must be made public and available to interested persons.

When mediators are appointed by a court, the appointing court shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that each mediator is qualified for the particular mediation.

E. Confidentiality: A Mediator shall Maintain the Reasonable Expectations of the Parties with Regard to Confidentiality.

The mediator shall follow the requirements of Rule VII regarding confidentiality. The reasonable expectations of the parties with regard to confidentiality shall be met by the mediator. The parties' expectations of confidentiality depend on the provisions of Rule VII, the circumstances of the mediation and any agreements they may make. The mediator shall not disclose any matter that a party expects to be confidential unless given permission by all parties or unless required by rule, law or other public policy.

Comment

Within the limitations of Rule VII, the parties may make their own rules with respect to confidentiality, or other accepted practice of an individual mediator, or the appointing court may dictate a particular set of expectations. Since the parties' expectations regarding confidentiality are important, the mediator should discuss these expectations with the parties.

If the mediator holds private sessions with a party, the nature of these sessions with regard to confidentiality should be discussed prior to undertaking such sessions.

In order to protect the integrity of the mediation, a mediator should avoid communicating information about how the parties acted in the mediation process, the merits of the case, or settlement offers. The mediator may report, if required, whether parties appeared at a scheduled mediation.

Where the parties have agreed that all or a portion of the information disclosed during a mediation is confidential, the parties' agreement should be respected by the mediator.

Confidentiality should not be construed to limit or prohibit the effective monitoring, research, or evaluation of mediation programs by responsible persons. Under appropriate circumstances, researchers may be permitted to obtain access to the statistical data and, with the permission of the parties, to individual case files, observations of live mediation, and interviews with participants.

F. Quality of the Process: A Mediator shall Conduct the Mediation Fairly, Diligently, and in a Manner Consistent with the Principle of Self-Determination by the Parties.

A mediator shall work to ensure a quality process and to encourage mutual respect among the parties. A quality process requires a commitment by the mediator to diligence and procedural fairness. There should be adequate opportunity for each party in the mediation to participate in the discussions. The parties decide when they will reach an agreement or terminate a mediation.

Comment

A mediator may agree to mediate only when he or she is prepared to commit the attention essential to an effective mediation.

Mediators should only accept cases when they can satisfy the reasonable expectations of the parties concerning the timing of the process. A mediator should not allow a mediation to be unduly delayed by the parties or their representatives.

The presence or absence of persons at a mediation depends on the agreement of the parties and the mediator. The parties and mediator may agree that others may be excluded from particular sessions or from the entire mediation process.

The primary purpose of a mediator is to facilitate the parties' voluntary agreement. This role differs substantially from other professional-client relationships. Mixing the role of a mediator and the role of a professional advising a client is problematic, and mediators must strive to distinguish between the roles. A mediator should, therefore, refrain from providing professional advice. Where appropriate, a mediator should recommend that parties seek outside professional advice, or consider resolving their dispute through arbitration, counseling, neutral evaluation, or other processes. A mediator who undertakes, at the request of the parties, an additional dispute resolution role in the same matter assumes increased responsibilities and obligations that may be governed by the standards of other processes.

A mediator shall withdraw from a mediation when incapable of serving or when unable to remain impartial. If a mediator withdraws, the parties shall immediately report her or his with drawl to the appointing court.

A mediator shall withdraw from a mediation or postpone a session if the mediation is being used to further illegal conduct, or if a party is unable to participate due to drug, alcohol, or other physical or mental incapacity.

Mediators should not permit their behavior in the mediation process to be guided by a desire for a high settlement rate.

A mediator should not accept a fee for referral of a matter to another mediator or to any other person.

G. Advertising and Solicitation: A Mediator shall be Truthful in Advertising and Solicitation for Mediation

Advertising or any other communication with the public concerning services offered or regarding the education, training, and expertise of the mediator shall be truthful. Mediators shall refrain from promises and guarantees of results. Further, advertising or other communications with the public by attorneys who offer themselves as mediators are governed by the Rules of Professional Conduct.

Comment

It is imperative that communication with the public educate and instill confidence in the process.

In an advertisement or other communication to the public, a mediator may make reference to meeting state, national, or private organization qualifications only if the entity referred to has a procedure for qualifying mediators and the mediator has been duly granted the requisite status.

H. Fees: A Mediator shall fully Disclose and Explain the Basis of Compensation, Fees, and Charges to the Parties.

The parties should be provided sufficient information about fees at the outset of a mediation to determine if they wish to retain the services of a mediator. If a mediator charges fees, the fees shall be reasonable, considering among other things, the mediation service, the type and complexity of the matter, the expertise of the mediator, the time required, and the rates customary in the community. The better practice in reaching an understanding about fees is to set down the arrangements in a written agreement.

Comment

A mediator who withdraws from a mediation should return any unearned fee to the parties.

A mediator should not enter into a fee agreement which is contingent upon the result of the mediation or amount of the settlement.

Co-mediators who share a fee should hold to standards of reasonableness in determining the allocation of fees.

A mediator should not accept a fee for referral of a matter to another mediator or to any other person.

I. Obligations to the Mediation Process: Mediators have a Duty to Improve the Practice of Mediation.

Comment

Mediators are regarded as knowledgeable in the process of mediation. They have an obligation to use their knowledge to help educate the public about mediation; to make mediation accessible to those who would like to use it; to correct abuses; and to improve their professional skills and abilities.

RULES AND REGULATIONS FOR CERTIFICATION AND CONTINUING EDUCATION FOR MISSISSIPPI COURT ADMINISTRATORS

Adopted Effective December 12, 2000

Rule
1. Scope and exemptions.
2. Continuing education requirement.
3. Certification.
4. Noncompliance sanctions.

Cross References — Court administrators, see Mississippi Code of 1972 §§ 9-17-1 et seq.

Rule 1. Scope and exemptions.

The Rules concerning Continuing Education (CE) shall apply to every Administrator of any designation of the Circuit, Chancery, County, and Youth Courts of the State of Mississippi. The Rules concerning Court Administrator Certification, pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 9-1-36(4), shall apply to Circuit and Chancery Court Administrators appointed on or after October 1, 1996. All Court Administrators in the Circuit, Chancery, County and Youth Courts, irrespective of date of hire, are strongly encouraged to be certified through the program described, as developed by the Mississippi Administrative Office of Courts ("AOC").

Rule 2. Continuing education requirement.

Each Court Administrator, Deputy Court Administrator, or Assistant Court Administrator of a Circuit, Chancery, County or Youth Court in the State of Mississippi shall attend a minimum of twelve (12) actual hours of AOC-approved Continuing Education at the Spring and Fall Court Administrators Conference (or AOC-approved substitute), each calendar year beginning January 1, 2001, provided the funding for the named Conferences is available through the Mississippi Judicial College or other source and the courses are offered.

Regulations

(2.1) The number of hours required means that the Administrator must actually attend twelve (12) instructional hours of AOC-approved CE per year with no credit given for introductory remarks, meal breaks, or business meetings.

(2.2) An instructional hour will in all events be an hour containing at least fifty (50) minutes of instruction time.

(2.3) Administrators who have a physical disability which makes attendance at CE programs inordinately difficult may file a request with the AOC for a permanent substitute program in lieu of attendance and shall therein set out Continuing Education plans tailored to their specific interests and physical ability. The AOC shall review and approve or disapprove such plans on an individual basis and without delay, after submitting the request to the Mississippi Court Administrators Association's Education Committee for its input.

(2.4) Other requests for substituted compliance, partial waivers, or other exemptions for hardship or extenuating circumstances may be granted by the AOC upon written application of the Administrator and may likewise be reviewed by the AOC, after submission to the Mississippi Court Administrators Association's Education Committee for its recommendation.

(2.5) A Court Administrator may receive credit for a maximum of six (6) hours per year of attendance at an AOC-approved program other than the Spring and Fall Court Administrators Conferences, as defined by and with prior approval of the AOC.

(2.6) Credit will be given only for Continuing Education activities approved by the AOC. Such approval for substitute seminars should be sought and granted prior to the occurrence of the activity but may be given retroactively. Should a Court Administrator be required to miss a mandatory seminar, the Court Administrator shall, in writing, inform the AOC of the reasons for non-attendance within ten (10) working days after the conclusion of the seminar, unless excused by the AOC.

Rule 3. Certification.

All Circuit and Chancery Court Administrators hired in their present position from and after October 1, 1996 are required to be certified according to the Rules set forth in this section. The program for certification shall be incorporated into the Spring and Fall Court Administrator Conferences, or any other AOC-approved seminars, with all topics and topical content on the program agenda to be developed by the Mississippi Court Administrators Association's Education Committee, with the approval of the AOC.

Regulations

(3.1) All AOC Court Administrators, Circuit and Chancery, hired on or after October 1, 1996, shall be required to be certified, within four (4) years of the institution of this program, or, if hired at a later date, within four (4) years after the date of hire. County and Youth Court Administrators, and Circuit and Chancery Court Administrators hired before October 1, 1996, will be eligible to be certified and are strongly encouraged to do so.

(3.2) The Certification Program will span four (4) consecutive Spring and Fall Conference programs, over a span of two (2) years, with the certification issued upon the successful completion of the twenty-four (24) hours required by the AOC. Participants in the Certification Program will be tested at the conclusion of the seminar, with a passing score necessary in order to receive certification credit for the hours provided at the meeting.

(3.3) Topics and participants eligible for credit for certification must be approved by the AOC. Upon completion of the initial certification, Administrators will receive renewal on an annual basis, subject to completing the annual Continuing Education requirements set out in Rule 2.

(3.4) Specifics of the Certification Program may be set by the AOC, insomuch as the policies do not conflict with these rules.

Rule 4. Noncompliance sanctions.

(4.1) As soon as practicable after January 1 of each year, commencing January 1, 2001, the Mississippi Judicial College shall forward to the AOC the name of each Administrator who is required to comply and has not complied with Rules 1 and 2 of the Mississippi Rules for Certification and Continuing Education of Mississippi Court Administrators. Compliance with Rule 3 will be tracked by the AOC. Within a reasonable time after the receipt by the AOC of the names, the AOC shall send a Notice of Noncompliance to the Administrator, asking the Administrator to respond within thirty (30) days, informing the AOC why the Administrator should not be reported to the Supreme Court for sanction. A copy of said notice shall be mailed to the Administrator's supervising judge(s). In response to the Notice of Noncompliance, such Administrator shall furnish the AOC with an affidavit that contains the following information, and any other information which may be considered relevant:

(a) An indication that the administrator has complied with the requirement prior to expiration of the thirty (30) day period, or

(b) A recitation of an excuse for failure to comply with the requirements because of hardship or other good cause.

(4.2) Within a reasonable time after the expiration of the time allowed to respond to the Notice of Noncompliance, the AOC shall notify the Supreme Court of Mississippi of each Administrator who fails to file an affidavit or files an affidavit which does not set forth a valid reason for noncompliance, and the AOC may recommend appropriate sanctions to the Mississippi Supreme Court, with said recommendations possibly including a reprimand, or other such actions deemed appropriate by the Supreme Court, including, but not limited to, dismissal and/or financial withholding in the case of Circuit and Chancery Court Administrators. The Supreme Court shall then issue a Notice to Show Cause for the Court Administrator to file a response, under oath, outlining any reasons that the recommended sanction should not be imposed. The Supreme Court shall then consider the recommendation of the AOC and any filed response by the Court Administrator, and shall forthwith adjudicate the issue and, if applicable, impose sanctions.

(4.3) At any time after the Notice of Noncompliance to the Supreme Court is filed and prior to the Notice to Show Cause being issued by the Supreme Court, an Administrator may file with the AOC an affidavit indicating compliance with the Rules for Certification and Continuing Court Education for Mississippi Court Administrators, and if satisfactory to the AOC, it shall forthwith notify the Supreme Court that the Court Administrator has fulfilled the requirements of these Rules and Regulations.

RULES FOR ELECTRONIC AND PHOTOGRAPHIC COVERAGE OF JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS

The Mississippi Rules for Electronic and Photographic Coverage of Judicial Proceedings are adopted effective April 17, 2003 for proceedings conducted from and after July 1, 2003.

Rule
1. General.
2. Definition.
3. Electronic Media Coverage Allowed.
4. Restrictions.
5. Notice.
6. Decorum.
7. Objections.
8. Impermissible use of material.
9. Enforcement and sanctions.
10. Expiration (Repealed).

Rule 1. General.

Electronic media coverage of judicial proceedings in Mississippi Courts shall be governed by the following rules. These rules apply to the Supreme Court, Court of Appeals, chancery courts, circuit courts, and county courts and may be cited as MREPC. (Adopted effective April 17, 2003.)

Rule 2. Definition.

(a) "Media" shall mean all persons and organizations engaging in news gathering or reporting and includes any newspaper, radio or television station or network, news service, magazine, trade paper, professional journal, and other news reporting or news gathering agencies.

(b) "Electronic media coverage" and "electronic coverage" shall mean any reporting, recording, broadcasting, narrowcasting, cablecasting, and webcasting of court proceedings by the media using television, radio, photographic, recording, or other electronic device.

(c) "Judicial proceedings" shall mean any trial, pre-trial hearings, post-trial hearings and appellate arguments. (Adopted effective April 17, 2003.)

Rule 3. Electronic Media Coverage Allowed.

Electronic media coverage of public judicial proceedings shall be allowed in the appellate and trial courts of record in this state subject to the conditions below. The presiding justice or judge has the discretion to limit or terminate electronic coverage at any time during the proceedings if the court deems such necessary and in the interest of justice to protect the rights of the parties or witnesses, or the dignity of the court, or to assure orderly conduct of the proceedings.

(a) Authority of presiding justice or judge. All electronic coverage is subject at all time to the authority of the presiding justice or judge to (i) control the conduct of the proceedings, (ii) ensure decorum and prevent distraction, and (iii) ensure fair administration of justice in the pending case. The rights of the parties to a fair adjudication are recognized as paramount. It is the responsibility of the media to so arrange and operate equipment in order to comply with these rules.

(b) Persons other than media representatives. These rules do not allow the use of electronic devices by attorneys and persons other than media representatives except as may be allowed by the court.

(c) Coverage of certain matters prohibited. Electronic coverage of the following matters is expressly prohibited unless the presiding justice or judge shall allow the coverage by order: divorce; child custody; support; guardianship; conservatorship; commitment; waiver of parental consent to abortion; adoption; delinquency and neglect of minors; determination of paternity; termination of parental rights; domestic abuse; motions to suppress evidence; proceedings involving trade secrets; and in camera proceedings.

(d) Coverage of certain persons prohibited. Electronic coverage of the following categories of witnesses is expressly prohibited: police informants, minors, undercover agents, relocated witnesses, victims and families of victims of sex crimes, and victims of domestic abuse. (Adopted effective April 17, 2003.)

Rule 4. Restrictions.

(a) The location of equipment and personnel necessary for electronic media coverage of judicial proceedings shall be at a place either inside or outside the courtroom so as to be minimally intrusive to the proceedings. Only equipment which does not produce distracting sound or light shall be employed to cover judicial proceedings. No flash or strobe lighting shall be used. All running wires shall be securely taped to the floor. No other artificial lighting device of any kind shall be employed in connection with electronic coverage unless otherwise authorized by the court. Matters covered by this sub-part are subject to the discretion of the presiding judge and may be relaxed so long as the coverage does not result in distraction of the proceedings.

(b) No members or potential members of the jury may be recorded or shown at any time prior to their dismissal, nor shall the jury selection process be subject to electronic coverage. The presiding judge shall inform all potential jurors at the beginning of the jury selection process of the restrictions of this particular provision.

(c) No audio recording is permitted of off-the-record conferences in the courtroom between the court and counsel, or between counsel and co-counsel, or between counsel and clients or witnesses.

(d) Judicial proceedings held in chambers and proceedings generally closed to the public shall not be subject to electronic coverage.

(e) Electronic media equipment shall not be taken into the courtroom, relocated, or removed from the designated media area except prior to convening of the judicial proceedings, during recesses, and after adjournment for the day. This prohibition shall not apply to small, handheld electronic devices.

(f) Unless otherwise allowed by the presiding judge, no more than one television camera or video recorder, one audio system for radio broadcasting, and one still photographer shall be allowed in any judicial proceeding. If pooling arrangements are employed, such data or information is to be available equally to all pool participants, and the pool representative shall charge no fees or expenses to the other pool participants. The pool representative is not to be given any economic or coverage advantage over the other pool participants. Any pooling arrangements among the media required by these limitations on equipment and personnel shall be the sole responsibility of the media without calling upon the presiding justice or judge to mediate any dispute as to the appropriate media representative or equipment authorized to cover a particular proceeding. In the absence of advance media agreement on disputed equipment or personnel issues, the presiding justice or judge shall exclude all contesting media personnel from a proceeding.

(g) The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, and the Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals may waive these restrictions with respect to judicial proceedings in the Supreme Court and in the Court of Appeals, respectively. (Amended effective December 9, to give the presiding judge discretion as to application of technical limitations of coverage; amended effective September 29, 2005.)

Rule 5. Notice.

Media representatives who propose to engage in electronic coverage of a judicial proceeding shall notify the clerk and the court administrator of the court of such intention at least forty-eight (48) hours prior to the commencement of the proceeding. The presiding justice or judge may shorten or waive the time for advance notice. (Adopted effective April 17, 2003.)

Rule 6. Decorum.

The decorum and dignity of the court, the courtroom, and the judicial proceedings must be maintained at all times. Court customs shall be followed including appropriate attire. Movement in the courtroom during the proceedings shall be limited and may be completely prohibited except during breaks or recesses. Disruption of proceedings will not be permitted. (Adopted effective April 17, 2003.)

Rule 7. Objections.

Any party may object to electronic coverage by written motion, which may be supported by affidavits. Such motions shall be filed no later than fifteen (15) days prior to commencement of the judicial proceedings, unless good cause exists to shorten the time for filing. (Adopted effective April 17, 2003.)

Rule 8. Impermissible use of material.

No material gathered by electronic media shall be part of the official court record of the judicial proceedings covered unless admitted into evidence. The official court record of any judicial proceeding is the transcript of the original notes and all exhibits introduced into evidence in the proceeding. (Adopted effective April 17, 2003.)

Rule 9. Enforcement and sanctions.

A violation of these rules may be sanctioned by measures deemed appropriate by the court. (Adopted effective April 17, 2003.)

Rule 10. Expiration (Repealed).

Rule 10, providing for expiration of the Rules for Electronic and Photographic Coverage of Judicial Proceedings on December 31, 2004 was repealed effective December 9, 2004. (Adopted effective April 17, 2003 for proceedings occurring from July 1, 2003; amended to remove expiration date, December 9, 2004.)

COMMENT

Section 3B(12) of the Code of Judicial Conduct prohibits broadcasting, televising, recording, or taking photographs in the courtroom and areas immediately adjacent thereto except as authorized by rule or order of the Supreme Court. Also, Rule 1.04 of the Uniform Rules of Circuit and County Court allows cameras only "in accordance with the Code of Judicial Conduct." Thus, electronic coverage is allowed only for special purposes authorized in Section 3B(12), or under these Rules for Electronic and Photographic Coverage of Judicial Proceedings (MREPC.)

The MREPC recognize that the use of cameras, television, broadcast, and other electronic media to cover court proceedings presents special considerations unique to their use. In addressing these considerations, the rule recognizes both that in certain public proceedings such coverage can be intimidating and unnecessarily intrusive into the lives of citizens, even where there is no expectation of privacy, and that these special logistical problems are attendant to the use of new technologies.

In MREPC 2(b), "electronic media coverage" and "electronic coverage" are defined to include the use of still cameras.

The MREPC neither limit nor expand the authority of law for general closing of proceedings, the general exclusion of the public and the media from the courtroom, or the sealing of documents. These broader limitations on public access areas are addressed in the Constitution and statutes of the state as well as the decisions of the courts. Article 3, Section 26 of the Mississippi Constitution provides that the court may in certain specified cases, in its discretion, exclude from the courtroom all persons except such as are necessary in the conduct of the trial. Examples of proceedings for which statutes either mandate or permit closed hearings include certain divorce proceedings (Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-21), those for waiver of parental consent to an abortion for a minor (Miss. Code Ann. § 41-41-55), proceedings raising the sexual conduct of a complaining witness in a rape case (Miss. Code. Ann. § 97-3-68), and Youth Court Proceedings (Miss. Code Ann. § 43-21-203). The closing of proceedings generally and procedures for notice and hearing prior to closing are addressed in Gannett River States Pub. Co. v. Hand, 571 So. 2d 941 (Miss. 1990) and In re Memphis Publish- ing Company, 823 So. 2d 1150 (Miss. 2001).

Adopted effective April 17, 2003.

Editor's Note — There are no 5th Cir. R. 1-2, 4, 6-7, 13-14, 16, 18-20, 23-24, 33, 36-38, 43-44, and 48. The Fifth Circuit Rules are numbered to correspond to the appropriate Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure that they supplement.

Analysis of key amendments to the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure and the Fifth Circuit Rules that became effective December 1, 2002.

Fed. R. App. P. 4 Appeal as of Right

4(a)(5) Extension of Time to File Notice of Appeal

Presently in this circuit (and several others), a party filing a motion for extension of time to file notice of appeal during the first 30 days (60 days if the United States is a party in a civil case) after judgment is entered has to show good cause. If the motion is filed during the next 30 days, the party has to show excusable neglect. The new Rule 4(a)(5) will allow a showing of either good cause or excusable neglect regardless of when the motion for extension of time is filed.

4(a)(7) Entry Defined

The Rules Advisory Committee recognized several conflicts among the circuits in dealing with the interplay of Rule 4(a)(7) of the Fed. R. App. P. and Rule 58 of the Fed. R. Civ. P. Both rules have been changed to eliminate some of the conflicts.

Fed. R. Civ. P. 58 is being amended to provide that orders on motions for judgment (Rule 50(b)), to amend or make additional findings of fact (Rule 52(b)), for attorney fees (Rule 54), for new trial or to alter or amend judgment (Rule 59), or for relief from judgment (Rule 60) do not need to be set out in a separate document. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(7) will provide that if the Civil Rules do not require a separate document, the Appellate Rules do not either. In these cases, judgment is entered for purposes of appeal when the judgment or order is entered on the civil docket pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 79(a).

Next, the rule addresses the situation where a separate document is necessary but the district court does not prepare one. The amendment provides that judgment will be deemed entered 150 days after the judgment or order was entered on the civil docket. The time for filing post-judgment motions and notice of appeal will begin running from that date.

The amendment also gives the appellant an absolute right to proceed on appeal without awaiting the formal entry of judgment on a separate document. The appellee cannot prevent the appeal from going forward by objecting that the district court did not enter a separate document. In sum, an a who waives the separate document requirement may file notice of appeal anytime within 150 days after entry of the judgment on the docket and the validity of the appeal will not be affected.

4(b)(5) Appeal in Criminal Cases

The filing of a motion to correct a sentence under Fed. R. Crim. P. 35(a) suspends the time to file a notice of appeal from a criminal conviction. Fed. R. App. P. 4 is changed so the time for a notice of appeal in a criminal case continues to run despite the filing of a motion to correct sentence under Fed. R. App. P. 35(a).

Fed. R. App. P. 5 Appeal by Permission; 21 Extraordinary Writs; 5th Cir. R. 5; 215(c); 21(d) Form of Papers

Papers filed for permission to appeal or for an extraordinary writ are considered "other papers" for purposes of Fed. R. App. P. 32(c)(2). That is, no cover is required if the caption and signature page together contain the information required by Rule 32(a)(2), and the length limits of Rule 32(a)(7) do not apply. The rule puts a 20-page limit on any papers filed in proceedings under Rule 5 and a 30-page limit on pleadings under Rule 21. 5th Cir. R. 5 and 21 are changed to be consistent with the Federal rules.

5TH Cir. R. 9.5 Release Pending Appeal

The way of computing time under Fed. R. App. P. 26 is being changed, see below. To accommodate the change, 5th Cir. R. 9.5 is changed to reflect that a written response to a motion for release pending appeal is due 7 working days, rather than 7 calendar days, after service of the memorandum or application.

5th Cir. R. 15.1 Agency Review Procedures

The party petitioning for review or enforcement of an agency order must attach to the petition a copy of the order or orders to be reviewed.

Fed. R. App. P. 24 Proceedings in Forma Pauperis

24(a)(2), (3) Leave to Proceed in Forma Pauperis

Rule 24 is being amended to remove conflicts with the Prison Litigation Reform Act of 1995 (PLRA). The rule applies only to inmates proceeding in forma pauperis in civil actions and appeals. Under the PLRA, prisoners granted IFP status must pay a portion of the filing fees initially and have the remainder deducted from their prison trust accounts as funds become available. The rule is amended to allow a person proceeding IFP to do so without prepaying or giving security for fees and costs "unless a statute [such as the PLRA] provides otherwise."

Similarly, when the district court grants IFP status, the person normally retains that status on appeal without having to reapply. However, the PLRA requires that IFP status be granted for each proceeding. The amended rule allows persons to proceed on appeal IFP if they did so in the district court "unless a statute provides otherwise."

Fed. R. App. P. 25 Filing and Service

25(c) Manner of Service

"Personal service" may be accomplished by delivery to a responsible person at counsel's office, or by using electronic service if the person being served consents in writing. Electronic service will be complete on transmission of the document, unless the sending party receives notification that the document was not received.

The rule also allows courts to permit parties to use the court's transmission equipment to complete electronic service. This court has no plans at this time to provide this service.

25(b) Proof of Service

The certificate of service will be considered deficient if service was by electronic or facsimile means but the certificate does not contain the electronic or facsimile address.

5th Cir. R. 25

25.2 Electronic Filing

The courts are in the process of developing and testing software to allow documents to be filed electronically. Rules and procedures will be developed by the clerk to govern electronic filing. The required standard for documents will be Adobe Portable Document Format (PDF). Electronic filing will not be implemented in the immediate future, so there is no need to go into detail about it now.

25.3 Electronic Noticing

In certain cases or classes of cases, the clerk will be authorized to serve all papers, including opinions, electronically on any party who consents. Parties must agree that electronic notice is the only notice the clerk will provide.

Fed. R. App. P. 26 Computing and Extending Time

26(a) Computing Time

The Appellate Rules will be brought into line with the Civil and Criminal Rules by providing that intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays will not be counted if the time permitted for acting is less than 11 days, unless the time is stated in calendar days. Some adjustments are made to time limits, either by changing the amount of time allowed or by removing the "calendar days" restriction.

26(c) Additional Time after Service

Ordinarily, if a paper is delivered on other than the date contained in the certificate of service, the receiving party gets 3 extra days to respond; if delivery is on the date of the certificate of service, no additional time is allowed. When service is by electronic means, the receiving party always will be entitled to 3 extra days to respond.

Fed. R. App. P. 26.1 Corporate Disclosure Statement

This circuit uses a Statement of Interested Persons, which is broader in scope than the Corporate Disclosure Statement. Therefore, although the contents of Fed. R. App. P. 26.1 are amended significantly, they have no relevance to Fifth Circuit practice. Instead, you should refer to the changes to 5th Cir. R. 28.2.1, discussed below.

Fed. R. App. P. 27 Motions

27(a)(3)(A) Response

A response to a motion must be filed within 8, rather than 10, days after service, as calculated under Fed. R. App. P. 26(a).

27(a)(4) Reply

A reply to a response to a motion must be filed 5 days after service of the response, as calculated under Fed. R. App. P. 26(a).

27(d)(1)(B) Covers

Motions do not require covers, but if you use one it must be white.

5th Cir. R. 27.1, 27.4

The current placement of the 5th Cir. R. implies that a certificate of conference is required only on motions for extension of time. The certificate requirement is moved to 5th Cir. R. 27.4 to make it clear that all motions must contain a certificate of conference.

Fed. R. App. P.28 Briefs

28(j) Citation of Supplemental Authority

The amended rule permits parties to bring supplemental authorities to the court's attention after briefs have been filed and permits argument on how the authority is relevant. Such supplements are limited to 350 words. The word count applies to the body of the letter-from the first word after the salutation to the last word before the complimentary closing-and includes footnotes. A response is subject to the same limitations.

5th Cir. R. 28

28.2.1 Certificate of Interested Persons

Parties must update the certificate whenever the required information changes.

The form for reporting on interested persons has changed slightly to insure that all entities covered by the rule are included.

28.6 Signing the Brief

The 5th Cir. R. currently requires that all briefs be signed by an attorney or a party appearing pro se. This requirement now will appear in Fed. R. App. P. 32(d), SO it is removed from the local rule.

5th Cir. R. 30 Record Excerpts

30.1.2 Filing

The appellant must serve 4 paper copies of the Record Excerpts. If the clerk permits filing of the Record Excerpts in electronic form, they may be filed on a diskette like those used for computer-generated briefs. The parties will be able to consent in writing to accept service of the Record Excerpts by any electronic means that the parties agree upon. If the clerk permits additional Record Excerpts to be filed, the same provisions apply.

Fed. R. App. P.31 Serving and Filing Briefs

31(b) Number of Copies

The amendment clarifies that all parties, including any unrepresented parties, must be served with two copies of a party's briefs.

5th Cir. R. 31 Briefs

31.1 Number of Copies; Computer Generated Briefs

All computer-generated briefs must be accompanied by a computer-readable diskette copy. The brief must be prepared in Adobe Portable Document Format (PDF).

31.3 Time for Mailing

The rule adds the provision that, if electronic filing of briefs is permitted, appellee has 33 days from the date on the certificate of service on appellant's brief to complete electronic filing of its brief with the clerk.

Fed. R. App. P.32 Form of Briefs, Appendices, and Other Papers

32(a)(2) Form of Brief

If a party files a supplemental brief, the cover must be tan. This does not apply to the additional briefs that must be filed if this court grants rehearing briefs will have the same color covers, red or blue, as the initial briefs.

32(a)(7)(C)(ii) Certificate of Compliance (see 5th Cir. R. 32.3)

The rule provides for a Form 6 for use as a certificate of compliance with the type volume limits for briefs. Accordingly, reference to the form previously used by the clerk's office is removed from the 5th Cir. R. Filers should use Form 6.

32(c)(2)(A) Other Papers

If a cover is used on a petition for panel rehearing or for hearing or rehearing en banc, it must be white.

32(d) Signature; 5th Cir. R. 32.5

For some years, the Fifth Circuit has required that counsel or unrepresented parties sign briefs. This year the Federal Rules add the same requirement, so the provision is removed from the 5th Cir. R.

Fed. R. App. P. 41 Mandate

41(b) When Issued

Because of the change in the manner of computing time periods less than 11 days, the rule is amended to provide that mandates will issue on the later of 7 calendar days after 1) expiration of the time to file a petition for rehearing; 2) entry of an order denying panel rehearing or rehearing en banc; or 3) entry of an order denying a motion to stay mandate. This court will continue to issue mandates on the 8th calendar day after the time for filing a petition for rehearing expires, or after entry of an order denying the petition.

Fed. R. App. P. 44 Constitutional Questions

44(b) State Statute

Rule 44(a) describes the procedure to be followed when a party challenges the constitutionality of an act of Congress when the United States is not a party. Section (b) is added to prescribe the same procedure when a party challenges the constitutionality of a state statute when the state or its representative is not a party.

5th Cir. R. 47 Other Fifth Circuit Rules

47.8.2(a) Attorney's Fees and Expenses Under the Equal Access to Justice Act

The Administrative Office of the United States Courts has abolished Form A.O. 291. Consequently, the requirement that the form be submitted with applications for an award of fees and expenses under 28 U.S.C. § 2412(d)(1)(B) is removed.

Federal Circuit and District Court Rules — 5th Circuit (CD Rom) (Matthew Bender).

TITLE I. APPLICABILITY OF RULES

FRAP 1. Scope of rules; title.

(a) Scope of rules.

(1) These rules govern procedure in the United States courts of appeals.

(2) When these rules provide for filing a motion or other document in the district court, the procedure must comply with the practice of the district court.

(b) Definition. In these rules, 'state' includes the District of Columbia and any United States commonwealth or territory.

(c) Title. These rules are to be known as the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure. (Amended effective December 1, 2010.)

FRAP 2. Suspension of rules.

On its own or a party's motion, a court of appeals may — to expedite its decision or for other good cause — suspend any provision of these rules in a particular case and order proceedings as it directs, except as otherwise provided in Rule 26(b).

TITLE II. APPEAL FROM A JUDGMENT OR ORDER OF A DISTRICT COURT

FRAP 3. Appeal as of right — How taken.

(a) Filing the notice of appeal.

(1) An appeal permitted by law as of right from a district court to a court of appeals may be taken only by filing a notice of appeal with the district clerk within the time allowed by Rule 4. At the time of filing, the appellant must furnish the clerk with enough copies of the notice to enable the clerk to comply with Rule 3(d).

(2) An appellant's failure to take any step other than the timely filing of a notice of appeal does not affect the validity of the appeal, but is ground only for the court of appeals to act as it considers appropriate, including dismissing the appeal.

(3) An appeal from a judgment by a magistrate judge in a civil case is taken in the same way as an appeal from any other district court judgment.

(4) An appeal by permission under 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b) or an appeal in a bankruptcy case may be taken only in the manner prescribed by Rules 5 and 6, respectively.

(b) Joint or consolidated appeals.

(1) When two or more parties are entitled to appeal from a district-court judgment or order, and their interests make joinder practicable, they may file a joint notice of appeal. They may then proceed on appeal as a single appellant.

(2) When the parties have filed separate timely notices of appeal, the appeals may be joined or consolidated by the court of appeals.

(c) Contents of the notice of appeal.

(1) The notice of appeal must:

(A) specify the party or parties taking the appeal by naming each one in the caption or body of the notice, but an attorney representing more than one party may describe those parties with such terms as "all plaintiffs," "the defendants," "the plaintiffs A, B, et al.," or "all defendants except X";

(B) designate the judgment, order, or part thereof being appealed; and

(C) name the court to which the appeal is taken.

(2) A pro se notice of appeal is considered filed on behalf of the signer and the signer's spouse and minor children (if they are parties), unless the notice clearly indicates otherwise.

(3) In a class action, whether or not the class has been certified, the notice of appeal is sufficient if it names one person qualified to bring the appeal as representative of the class.

(4) An appeal must not be dismissed for informality of form or title of the notice of appeal, or for failure to name a party whose intent to appeal is otherwise clear from the notice.

(5) Form 1 in the Appendix of Forms is a suggested form of a notice of appeal.

(d) Serving the notice of appeal.

(1) The district clerk must serve notice of the filing of a notice of appeal by mailing a copy to each party's counsel of record — excluding the appellant's — or, if a party is proceeding pro se, to the party's last known address. When a defendant in a criminal case appeals, the clerk must also serve a copy of the notice of appeal on the defendant, either by personal service or by mail addressed to the defendant. The clerk must promptly send a copy of the notice of appeal and of the docket entries — and any later docket entries — to the clerk of the court of appeals named in the notice. The district clerk must note, on each copy, the date when the notice of appeal was filed.

(2) If an inmate confined in an institution files a notice of appeal in the manner provided by Rule 4(c), the district clerk must also note the date when the clerk docketed the notice.

(3) The district clerk's failure to serve notice does not affect the validity of the appeal. The clerk must note on the docket the names of the parties to whom the clerk mails copies, with the date of mailing. Service is sufficient despite the death of a party or the party's counsel.

(e) Payment of fees. Upon filing a notice of appeal, the appellant must pay the district clerk all required fees. The district clerk receives the appellate docket fee on behalf of the court of appeals.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Named parties.
Timeliness.

Named parties.

Specificity requirement regarding designation of appealing parties in notice of appeal is inapplicable to notice of appeal from bankruptcy court judgment or order. In re Case, 937 F.2d 1014 (5th Cir. 1991).

Supreme Court's ruling in class action that use of phrase "et al." fails to provide required notice under Rule 3(c) to opposing parties or court was distinguishable in case where there were only two plaintiff-appellants, their notice of appeal named one appellant followed by "et al.," and it also stated that "Plaintiffs do hereby appeal," since "Plaintiffs" could include only two plaintiff appellants, and "et al." could mean only appellant not specifically named. Pope v. Mississippi Real Estate Comm'n, 872 F.2d 127 (5th Cir. 1989).

Father who had sued in his individual capacity and as representative of his children did not fail to comply with Rule 3(c) when he failed to name children in notice of appeal; father had sued on children's behalf as their representative and next friend, so that there was no omission of "party" from notice but only failure to designate all capacities in which father brought suit, and it was clear to appellee that father desired to appeal. King v. Otasco, Inc., 861 F.2d 438 (5th Cir. 1988).

Timeliness.

Criminal defendant's motion for appointment of counsel on appeal, which was filed before entry of judgment, when taken together with district court's orders, was sufficient and timely notice of appeal, even though defendant filed actual notice of appeal eleven days after order denying his motion for new trial. United States v. Sacerio, 952 F.2d 860 (5th Cir. 1992).

Notice of appeal that was filed after announcement of defendant's conviction but before announcement of his sentence did not preclude appeal of his sentence per se, since no prejudice was asserted or shown by government. United States v. Winn, 948 F.2d 145 (5th Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 503 U.S. 976, 112 S. Ct. 1599, 118 L. Ed. 2d 313 (1992).

Circuit Rule 3. Filing fee.

Filing Fee. When the notice of appeal is filed, the $455 fees established by 28 U.S.C. §§ 1913 and 1917 must be paid to the district court clerk. After the Fifth Circuit receives a duplicate copy of a notice of appeal, the clerk will send counsel or a party notice advising of other requirements of the rule. No additional fees are required. Failure to pay the fees does not prevent the appeal from being docketed, but is grounds for dismissal under 5th Cir. R. 42.

FRAP 3.1. Appeal from a judgment of a magistrate judge in a civil case.

[Abrogated].

FRAP 4. Appeal as of right — When taken.

(a) Appeal in a civil case.

(1) Time for filing a notice of appeal.

(A) In a civil case, except as provided in Rules 4(a)(1)(B), 4(a)(4), and 4(c), the notice of appeal required by Rule 3 must be filed with the district clerk within 30 days after the judgment or order appealed from is entered.

(B) The notice of appeal may be filed by any party within 60 days after entry of the judgment or order appealed from if one of the parties is:

(i) the United States;

(ii) a United States agency;

(iii) a United States officer or employee sued in an official capacity; or

(iv) a current or former United States officer or employee sued in an individual capacity for an act or omission occurring in connection with duties performed on the United States' behalf -- including all instances in which the United States represents that person when the judgment or order is entered or files the appeal for that person.

(C) An appeal from an order granting or denying an application for a writ of error coram nobis is an appeal in a civil case for purposes of Rule 4(a).

(2) Filing before entry of judgment. A notice of appeal filed after the court announces a decision or order — but before the entry of the judgment or order — is treated as filed on the date of and after the entry.

(3) Multiple appeals. If one party timely files a notice of appeal, any other party may file a notice of appeal within 14 days after the date when the first notice was filed, or within the time otherwise prescribed by this Rule 4(a), whichever period ends later.

(4) Effect of a motion on a notice of appeal.

(A) If a party timely files in the district court any of the following motions under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the time to file an appeal runs for all parties from the entry of the order disposing of the last such remaining motion:

(i) for judgment under Rule 50(b);

(ii) to amend or make additional factual findings under Rule 52(b), whether or not granting the motion would alter the judgment;

(iii) for attorney's fees under Rule 54 if the district court extends the time to appeal under Rule 58;

(iv) to alter or amend the judgment under Rule 59;

(v) for a new trial under Rule 59; or

(vi) for relief under Rule 60 if the motion is filed no later than 28 days after the judgment is entered.

(B)(i) If a party files a notice of appeal after the court announces or enters a judgment — but before it disposes of any motion listed in Rule 4(a)(4)(A) — the notice becomes effective to appeal a judgment or order, in whole or in part, when the order disposing of the last such remaining motion is entered.

(ii) A party intending to challenge an order disposing of any motion listed in Rule 4(a)(4)(A), or a judgment altered or amended upon such a motion, must file a notice of appeal, or an amended notice of appeal — in compliance with Rule 3(c) — within the time prescribed by this Rule measured from the entry of the order disposing of the last such remaining motion.

(iii) No additional fee is required to file an amended notice.

(5) Motion for extension of time.

(A) The district court may extend the time to file a notice of appeal if:

(i) a party so moves no later than 30 days after the time prescribed by this Rule 4(a) expires; and

(ii) regardless of whether its motion is filed before or during the 30 days after the time prescribed by this Rule 4(a) expires, that party shows excusable neglect or good cause.

(B) A motion filed before the expiration of the time prescribed in Rule 4(a)(1) or (3) may be ex parte unless the court requires otherwise. If the motion is filed after the expiration of the prescribed time, notice must be given to the other parties in accordance with local rules.

(C) No extension under this Rule 4(a)(5) may exceed 30 days after the prescribed time or 14 days after the date when the order granting the motion is entered, whichever is later.

(6) Reopening the time to file an appeal. The district court may reopen the time to file an appeal for a period of 14 days after the date when its order to reopen is entered, but only if all the following conditions are satisfied:

(A) the court finds that the moving party did not receive notice under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 77(d) of the entry of the judgment or order sought to be appealed within 21 days after entry;

(B) the motion is filed within 180 days after the judgment or order is entered or within 14 days after the moving party receives notice under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 77(d) of the entry, whichever is earlier; and

(C) the court finds that no party would be prejudiced.

(7) Entry defined.

(A) A judgment or order is entered for purposes of this Rule 4(a);

(i) if Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 58(a) does not require a separate document, when the judgment or order is entered in the civil docket under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 79(a); or

(ii) if Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 58(a) requires a separate document, when the judgment or order is entered in the civil docket under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 79(a) and when the earlier of these events occurs:

- the judgment or order is set forth on a separate document, or
- 150 days have run from entry of the judgment or order in the civil docket under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 79(a).

(B) A failure to set forth a judgment or order on a separate document when required by Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 58(a)(1) does not affect the validity of an appeal from that judgment or order.

(b) Appeal in a criminal case.

(1) Time for filing a notice of appeal.

(A) In a criminal case, a defendant's notice of appeal must be filed in the district court within 14 days after the later of:

(i) the entry of either the judgment or the order being appealed; or

(ii) the filing of the government's notice of appeal.

(B) When the government is entitled to appeal, its notice of appeal must be filed in the district court within 30 days after the later of:

(i) the entry of the judgment or order being appealed; or

(ii) the filing of a notice of appeal by any defendant.

(2) Filing before entry of judgment. A notice of appeal filed after the court announces a decision, sentence, or order — but before the entry of the judgment or order — is treated as filed on the date of and after the entry.

(3) Effect of a motion on a notice of appeal.

(A) If a defendant timely makes any of the following motions under the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, the notice of appeal from a judgment of conviction must be filed within 14 days after the entry of the order disposing of the last such remaining motion, or within 14 days after the entry of the judgment of conviction, whichever period ends later. This provision applies to a timely motion:

(i) for judgment of acquittal under Rule 29;

(ii) for a new trial under Rule 33, but if based on newly discovered evidence, only if the motion is made no later than 14 days after the entry of the judgment; or

(iii) for arrest of judgment under Rule 34.

(B) A notice of appeal filed after the court announces a decision, sentence, or order — but before it disposes of any of the motions referred to in Rule 4(b)(3)(A) — becomes effective upon the later of the following:

(i) the entry of the order disposing of the last such remaining motion; or

(ii) the entry of the judgment of conviction.

(C) A valid notice of appeal is effective — without amendment — to appeal from an order disposing of any of the motions referred to in Rule 4(b)(3)(A).

(4) Motion for extension of time. Upon a finding of excusable neglect or good cause, the district court may — before or after the time has expired, with or without motion and notice — extend the time to file a notice of appeal for a period not to exceed 30 days from the expiration of the time otherwise prescribed by this Rule 4(b).

(5) Jurisdiction. The filing of a notice of appeal under this Rule 4(b) does not divest a district court of jurisdiction to correct a sentence under Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 35(a), nor does the filing of a motion under 35(a) affect the validity of a notice of appeal filed before entry of the order disposing of the motion. The filing of a motion under Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 35(a) does not suspend the time for filing a notice of appeal from a judgment of conviction.

(6) Entry defined. A judgment or order is entered for purposes of this Rule 4(b) when it is entered on the criminal docket.

(c) Appeal by an inmate confined in an institution.

(1) If an inmate confined in an institution files a notice of appeal in either a civil or a criminal case, the notice is timely if it is deposited in the institution's internal mail system on or before the last day for filing. If an institution has a system designed for legal mail, the inmate must use that system to receive the benefit of this rule. Timely filing may be shown by a declaration in compliance with 28 U.S.C. § 1746 or by a notarized statement, either of which must set forth the date of deposit and state that first-class postage has been prepaid.

(2) If an inmate files the first notice of appeal in a civil case under this Rule 4(c), the 14-day period provided in Rule 4(a)(3) for another party to file a notice of appeal runs from the date when the district court dockets the first notice.

(3) When a defendant in a criminal case files a notice of appeal under this Rule 4(c), the 30-day period for the government to file its notice of appeal runs from the entry of the judgment or order appealed from or from the district court's docketing of the defendant's notice of appeal, whichever is later.

(d) Mistaken filing in the court of appeals. If a notice of appeal in either a civil or a criminal case is mistakenly filed in the court of appeals, the clerk of that court must note on the notice the date when it was received and send it to the district clerk. The notice is then considered filed in the district court on the date so noted. (Amended effective December 1, 2005; amended effective December 1, 2009; amended effective December 1, 2010.)

Editor's Note — The amendment to Rule 4(a)(1)(B), as set out in the version of the subdivision effective December 1, 2011, was approved by the Supreme Court of the United States by order dated April 26, 2011, and transmitted to Congress in accordance with 28 USCS § 2072.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Government officers.
Habeas corpus.
Interlocutory orders.
Multiple appeals.
Service by mail.
Timeliness.
Tolling of time period.

Government officers.

Notwithstanding that plaintiff purports to sue defendant government officers only in their individual capacity, 60-day filing period of Rule 4(a) applies whenever alleged grievance arises out of governmental activity if (a) defendant officers were acting under color of office, (b) defendant officers were acting color of law or lawful authority, or (c) any party in case is represented by government attorney. Williams v. Collins, 728 F.2d 721 (5th Cir. 1984).

Habeas corpus.

In appeal from denial of habeas corpus petition, where no final judgment has been entered as separate document and thus there is no timely notice of appeal, jurisdictional prerequisites for appeal have not been met and appeal should be dismissed. Townsend v. Lucas, 745 F.2d 933 (5th Cir. 1984).

Interlocutory orders.

Settlement order constituting judgment on merits was final and time for appeal commenced on its entry despite fact that issue of liability for attorney's fees remained open; however, judgment holding party liable for attorney's fees but deferring decision on amount of award was interlocutory in nature and party was not required to file its notice of appeal of liability judgment until amount of award was determined and party's motion to reconsider that judgment was denied. Echols v. Parker, 909 F.2d 795 (5th Cir. 1990).

If absolute immunity claims of FBI agents were subject to interlocutory appeal, appeal should have been taken after district court's denial of that claim; accordingly, appeal is untimely when filed outside time limit of Rule 4, despite assertion that interlocutory appeals are permissive and not subject to that time limit. Kenyatta v. Moore, 744 F.2d 1179 (5th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1066, 105 S. Ct. 2141, 85 L. Ed. 2d 498 (1985).

Multiple appeals.

Purpose of Rule 4(a)(3) is to allow all parties opportunity to see and respond to actions of their adversaries. Lee v. Coahoma County, 937 F.2d 220 (5th Cir. 1991).

Service by mail.

Thirty-day period for filing notice of appeal under FRAP 4(a) may not be extended by FRCP 6(e), which provides additional time for service by mail. In re Arbuckle, 988 F.2d 29 (5th Cir. 1993).

Timeliness.

Criminal defendant's motion for appointment of counsel on appeal, which was filed before entry of judgment, when taken together with district court's orders, was sufficient and timely notice of appeal, even though defendant filed actual notice of appeal eleven days after order denying his motion for new trial. United States v. Sacerio, 952 F.2d 860 (5th Cir. 1992).

Notice of appeal that was filed after announcement of defendant's conviction but before announcement of his sentence did not preclude appeal of his sentence per se, since no prejudice was asserted or shown by government. United States v. Winn, 948 F.2d 145 (5th Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 503 U.S. 976, 112 S. Ct. 1599, 118 L. Ed. 2d 313 (1992).

District Court order granting plaintiff in civil rights action leave to proceed on appeal in forma pauperis entered well past both delay period for timely notice of appeal and also past additional 30 day period for extension of time does not affect untimeliness of appeal. Briggs v. Lucas, 678 F.2d 612 (5th Cir. 1982).

Tolling of time period.

Motion to reconsider judgment will be considered FRCP 59(e) motion (and thus, toll applicable time period for filing notice of appeal) even where request for reconsideration encompasses only that part of judgment regarding attorney's fees. Ramsey v. Colonial Life Ins. Co. of Am., 12 F.3d 472 (5th Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 870, 117 S. Ct. 185, 136 L. Ed. 2d 124 (1996).

FRAP 5. Appeal by permission.

(a) Petition for permission to appeal.

(1) To request permission to appeal when an appeal is within the court of appeals' discretion, a party must file a petition for permission to appeal. The petition must be filed with the circuit clerk with proof of service on all other parties to the district-court action.

(2) The petition must be filed within the time specified by the statute or rule authorizing the appeal or, if no such time is specified, within the time provided by Rule 4(a) for filing a notice of appeal.

(3) If a party cannot petition for appeal unless the district court first enters an order granting permission to do so or stating that the necessary conditions are met, the district court may amend its order, either on its own or in response to a party's motion, to include the required permission or statement. In that event, the time to petition runs from entry of the amended order.

(b) Contents of the petition; answer or cross-petition; oral argument.

(1) The petition must include the following:

(A) the facts necessary to understand the question presented;

(B) the question itself;

(C) the relief sought;

(D) the reasons why the appeal should be allowed and is authorized by a statute or rule; and

(E) an attached copy of:

(i) the order, decree, or judgment complained of and any related opinion or memorandum, and

(ii) any order stating the district court's permission to appeal or finding that the necessary conditions are met.

(2) A party may file an answer in opposition or a cross-petition within 10 days after the petition is served.

(3) The petition and answer will be submitted without oral argument unless the court of appeals orders otherwise.

(c) Form of papers; number of copies. All papers must conform to Rule 32(c)(2). Except by the court's permission, a paper must not exceed 20 pages, exclusive of the disclosure statement, the proof of service, and the accompanying documents required by Rule 5(b)(1)(E). An original and 3 copies must be filed unless the court requires a different number by local rule or by order in a particular case.

(d) Grant of permission; fees; cost bond; filing the record.

(1) Within 14 days after the entry of the order granting permission to appeal, the appellant must:

(A) pay the district clerk all required fees; and

(B) file a cost bond if required under Rule 7.

(2) A notice of appeal need not be filed. The date when the order granting permission to appeal is entered serves as the date of the notice of appeal for calculating time under these rules.

(3) The district clerk must notify the circuit clerk once the petitioner has paid the fees. Upon receiving this notice, the circuit clerk must enter the appeal on the docket. The record must be forwarded and filed in accordance with Rules 11 and 12(c).

Circuit Rule 5. Length of petition.

Length. The certificate of interested persons required by 5th Cir. R. 28.2.1 does not count toward the page limit.

FRAP 5.1. Appeal by leave under 28 U.S.C. § 636(c)(5).

[Abrogated].

FRAP 6. Appeal in a bankruptcy case from a final judgment, order, or decree of a District Court or Bankruptcy Appellate Panel.

(a) Appeal from a judgment, order, or decree of a district court exercising original jurisdiction in a bankruptcy case. An appeal to a court of appeals from a final judgment, order, or decree of a district court exercising jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1334 is taken as any other civil appeal under these rules.

(b) Appeal from a judgment, order, or decree of a district court or bankruptcy appellate panel exercising appellate jurisdiction in a bankruptcy case.

(1) Applicability of other rules. These rules apply to an appeal to a court of appeals under 28 U.S.C. § 158(d) from a final judgment, order, or decree of a district court or bankruptcy appellate panel exercising appellate jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 158(a) or (b). But there are 3 exceptions:

(A) Rules 4(a)(4), 4(b), 9, 10, 11, 12(b), 13-20, 22-23, and 24(b) do not apply;

(B) the reference in Rule 3(c) to "Form 1 in the Appendix of Forms" must be read as a reference to Form 5; and

(C) when the appeal is from a bankruptcy appellate panel, the term "district court," as used in any applicable rule, means "appellate panel."

(2) Additional rules. In addition to the rules made applicable by Rule 6(b)(1), the following rules apply:

(A) Motion for rehearing.

(i) If a timely motion for rehearing under Bankruptcy Rule 8015 is filed, the time to appeal for all parties runs from the entry of the order disposing of the motion. A notice of appeal filed after the district court or bankruptcy appellate panel announces or enters a judgment, order, or decree — but before disposition of the motion for rehearing — becomes effective when the order disposing of the motion for rehearing is entered.

(ii) Appellate review of the order disposing of the motion requires the party, in compliance with Rules 3(c) and 6(b)(1)(B), to amend a previously filed notice of appeal. A party intending to challenge an altered or amended judgment, order, or decree must file a notice of appeal or amended notice of appeal within the time prescribed by Rule 4 — excluding Rules 4(a)(4) and 4(b) — measured from the entry of the order disposing of the motion.

(iii) No additional fee is required to file an amended notice.

(B) The record on appeal.

(i) Within 14 days after filing the notice of appeal, the appellant must file with the clerk possessing the record assembled in accordance with Bankruptcy Rule 8006 — and serve on the appellee — a statement of the issues to be presented on appeal and a designation of the record to be certified and sent to the circuit clerk.

(ii) An appellee who believes that other parts of the record are necessary must, within 14 days after being served with the appellant's designation, file with the clerk and serve on the appellant a designation of additional parts to be included.

(iii) The record on appeal consists of:

- the redesignated record as provided above;
- the proceedings in the district court or bankruptcy appellate panel; and
- a certified copy of the docket entries prepared by the clerk under Rule 3(d).

(C) Forwarding the record.

(i) When the record is complete, the district clerk or bankruptcy appellate panel clerk must number the documents constituting the record and send them promptly to the circuit clerk together with a list of the documents correspondingly numbered and reasonably identified. Unless directed to do so by a party or the circuit clerk, the clerk will not send to the court of appeals documents of unusual bulk or weight, physical exhibits other than documents, or other parts of the record designated for omission by local rule of the court of appeals. If the exhibits are unusually bulky or heavy, a party must arrange with the clerks in advance for their transportation and receipt.

(ii) All parties must do whatever else is necessary to enable the clerk to assemble and forward the record. The court of appeals may provide by rule or order that a certified copy of the docket entries be sent in place of the redesignated record, but any party may request at any time during the pendency of the appeal that the redesignated record be sent.

(D) Filing the record. Upon receiving the record — or a certified copy of the docket entries sent in place of the redesignated record — the circuit clerk must file it and immediately notify all parties of the filing date.

FRAP 7. Bond for costs on appeal in a civil case.

In a civil case, the district court may require an appellant to file a bond or provide other security in any form and amount necessary to ensure payment of costs on appeal. Rule 8(b) applies to a surety on a bond given under this rule.

FRAP 8. Stay or injunction pending appeal.

(a) Motion for stay.

(1) Initial motion in the district court. A party must ordinarily move first in the district court for the following relief:

(A) a stay of the judgment or order of a district court pending appeal;

(B) approval of a supersedeas bond; or

(C) an order suspending, modifying, restoring, or granting an injunction while an appeal is pending.

(2) Motion in the court of appeals; conditions on relief. A motion for the relief mentioned in Rule 8(a)(1) may be made to the court of appeals or to one of its judges.

(A) The motion must:

(i) show that moving first in the district court would be impracticable; or

(ii) state that, a motion having been made, the district court denied the motion or failed to afford the relief requested and state any reasons given by the district court for its action.

(B) The motion must also include:

(i) the reasons for granting the relief requested and the facts relied on;

(ii) originals or copies of affidavits or other sworn statements supporting facts subject to dispute; and

(iii) relevant parts of the record.

(C) The moving party must give reasonable notice of the motion to all parties.

(D) A motion under this Rule 8(a)(2) must be filed with the circuit clerk and normally will be considered by a panel of the court. But in an exceptional case in which time requirements make that procedure impracticable, the motion may be made to and considered by a single judge.

(E) The court may condition relief on a party's filing a bond or other appropriate security in the district court.

(b) Proceeding against a surety. If a party gives security in the form of a bond or stipulation or other undertaking with one or more sureties, each surety submits to the jurisdiction of the district court and irrevocably appoints the district clerk as the surety's agent on whom any papers affecting the surety's liability on the bond or undertaking may be served. On motion, a surety's liability may be enforced in the district court without the necessity of an independent action. The motion and any notice that the district court prescribes may be served on the district clerk, who must promptly mail a copy to each surety whose address is known.

(c) Stay in a criminal case. Rule 38 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure governs a stay in a criminal case.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general.
Applicability.
Merits.

In general.

Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure, Rule 8(a), only authorizes stays or injunctions pending appeal, but does not provide for dissolution of prohibitory injunction which is, in effect, vacation of injunction entered by district court. Frith v. Blazon-Flexible Flyer, Inc., 512 F.2d 899 (5th Cir. 1982).

Applicability.

Rule 8(a) only authorizes stays pending appeals to Court of Appeals; it is inapplicable where there is no appeal pending from District Court to Court of Appeals, but only request for reversal of District Court's interlocutory order denying stay pending appeal to District Court of bankruptcy court's order confirming plan of reorganization. In re Barrier, 776 F.2d 1298 (5th Cir. 1985).

Merits.

Movant need not, in every instance, show that he will probably succeed on merits in order for court to grant stay or injunction pending appeal. Laurenzo v. Mississippi High Sch. Activities Ass'n, 708 F.2d 1038 (5th Cir. 1983).

Circuit Rule 8. Stay or injunction pending appeal.

Procedures in Death Penalty Cases Involving Applications for Immediate Stay of Execution and Appeals in Matters in Which the District Court Has Either Entered or Refused To Enter a Stay

8.1 Documents Required. Non-death penalty cases will be handled as described in Fed. R. App. P. 8. Death penalty cases arising from actions brought under 28 U.S.C. §§ 2254 and 2255 will be processed under the procedures found in this rule. The appellant must file 4 copies of the motion for stay and attach, to each, legible copies of the documents listed below. If the appellant asserts there is insufficient time to file a written motion, the appellant must deliver to the clerk 4 legible copies of each of the listed documents as soon as possible. If the appellant cannot attach or deliver any listed document, a statement why it cannot be provided must be substituted. The documents required are:

(a) The complaint or petition to the district court;

(b) Each brief or memorandum of authorities filed by both parties in the district court;

(c) The opinion giving the district court's reasons for denying relief;

(d) The district court judgment denying relief;

(e) The application to the district court for a stay;

(f) The district court order granting or denying a stay, and the statement of reasons for its action;

(g) The certificate of appealability or, if there is none, the order denying a certificate of appealability;

(h) A copy of each state or federal court opinion or judgment involving any issue presented to this court or, if the ruling was not made in a written opinion or judgment, a copy of the relevant portions of the transcript.

8.1.1 If the state indicates that it does not oppose the stay, and the applicant states this fact in the application, these documents do not need to be filed with the application but must be filed within 14 days after the application is filed.

8.1.2 If the appellant raises an issue that was not raised before the district court or has not been exhausted in state court, the applicant must give the reasons why prior action was not taken and why a stay should be granted.

8.2 Panels. Death penalty case matters are handled by special panels selected in rotation from the court's regular screening panels. See 5th Cir. R. 27.2.3 for handling applications for certificates of appealability.

8.3 Motions To Vacate Stays. If the district court enters an order staying execution of a judgment, the party seeking to vacate the stay will attach 4 copies of each of the documents required by 5th Cir. R. 8.1 to the motion.

8.4 Emergency Motions. Emergency motions or applications, whether addressed to the court or to an individual judge, must be filed with the clerk rather than with an individual judge. If there is insufficient time to file a motion or application in person, by mail, or by fax, counsel may communicate with the clerk by telephone and thereafter must file the motion in writing with the clerk as soon as possible. The motion, application, or oral communication must contain a brief account of the prior actions of this or any other court or judge to which the motion or application, or a substantially similar or related petition for relief, was submitted.

8.5 Merits. The parties must address the merits of each issue presented by an application. The panel may allow additional time to permit the parties adequate opportunity to do so.

8.6 Consideration of Merits. If a certificate of appealability has been granted, the panel assigned to decide a motion for a stay of a state court judgment must, before denying a stay, consider and expressly rule on the merits of the appeal, unless the panel finds that the appeal is frivolous and entirely without merit.

8.7 Vacating Stays. The panel assigned to an appeal must consider the merits before vacating a stay of execution, unless the panel rules the appeal is frivolous and entirely without merit.

8.8 Mandate. The panel may order the mandate issued instantly or after such time as it may fix.

8.9 Stays of Execution Following Decision. Stays to permit the filing and consideration of a petition for a writ of certiorari ordinarily will not be granted. The court must determine whether there is a reasonable probability that 4 members of the Supreme Court would consider the underlying issues sufficiently meritorious for the grant of certiorari and whether there is a substantial possibility of reversal of its decision, in addition to a likelihood that irreparable harm will result if its decision is not stayed.

8.10 Time Requirements for Challenges to Death Sentences and/or Execution Procedures. Inmates sentenced to death who wish to appeal an adverse judgment by the district court on a first petition for writ of habeas corpus, who seek permission to file a successive petition, or who seek to challenge their convictions, sentences, or the execution procedures (including but not limited to a suit filed pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983), must exercise reasonable diligence in moving for a certificate of appealability, for permission to file a second or successive habeas petition, or in filing a notice of appeal from an adverse judgment of the district court in any other type of proceeding, and a stay of execution with the clerk of this court at least 7 days before the scheduled execution. Counsel who seek a certificate of appealability, permission to file a successive petition, or an appeal from a district court judgment less than 7 days before the scheduled execution must attach to the proposed filing a detailed explanation stating under oath the reason for the delay. If the motions are filed less than 7 days before the scheduled execution, the court may direct counsel to show good cause for the late filing. If counsel cannot do so, counsel will be subject to sanctions.

If the state asks this court to vacate a district court order staying an execution, counsel for the state will file the state's appeal and application for relief from the stay as soon as practicable after the district court issues its order. Any unjustified delay by the state's counsel in seeking relief in this court will subject counsel to sanctions. (Amended Dec. 1, 2002; Dec. 1, 2006; As amended Dec. 1, 2009.)

FRAP 9. Release in a criminal case.

(a) Release before judgment of conviction.

(1) The district court must state in writing, or orally on the record, the reasons for an order regarding the release or detention of a defendant in a criminal case. A party appealing from the order must file with the court of appeals a copy of the district court's order and the court's statement of reasons as soon as practicable after filing the notice of appeal. An appellant who questions the factual basis for the district court's order must file a transcript of the release proceedings or an explanation of why a transcript was not obtained.

(2) After reasonable notice to the appellee, the court of appeals must promptly determine the appeal on the basis of the papers, affidavits, and parts of the record that the parties present or the court requires. Unless the court so orders, briefs need not be filed.

(3) The court of appeals or one of its judges may order the defendant's release pending the disposition of the appeal.

(b) Release after judgment of conviction. A party entitled to do so may obtain review of a district-court order regarding release after a judgment of conviction by filing a notice of appeal from that order in the district court, or by filing a motion in the court of appeals if the party has already filed a notice of appeal from the judgment of conviction. Both the order and the review are subject to Rule 9(a). The papers filed by the party seeking review must include a copy of the judgment of conviction.

(c) Criteria for release. The court must make its decision regarding release in accordance with the applicable provisions of 18 U.S.C. §§ 3142, 3143, and 3145(c).

Circuit Rule 9. Release in a criminal case.

9.1 Release Before Judgment of Conviction. The clerk's office will advise counsel of the requirements of this rule after receiving a copy of a notice of appeal from the district court from an order respecting release entered prior to a judgment of conviction (Fed. R. App. P. 9(a)), or on counsel's advice a notice of appeal has been or will be filed.

Four copies of a memorandum must be filed within 10 days of the filing of the notice of appeal, clearly setting out the nature and circumstances of the offense charged and why the order respecting release is unsupported by the district court proceedings.

9.2 Release After Judgment of Conviction. The original and 3 copies of an application regarding release pending appeal from a judgment of conviction (Fed. R. App. P. 9(b)) must be filed with the clerk of this court.

(a) The application for release must contain:

(1) The appellant's name;

(2) The district court docket number;

(3) The offense of which appellant was convicted; and

(4) The date and terms of sentence.

(b) The application must also contain:

(1) The legal basis for the contention that appellant is unlikely to flee or pose a danger to the safety of any other person or the community;

(2) An explanation why the district court's findings are clearly erroneous; and

(3) The issues to be raised on appeal that present substantial questions of law or fact likely to result in reversal or an order for a new trial on all counts of the indictment on which incarceration has been imposed, with pertinent legal argument establishing that the questions are substantial.

9.3 Required Documents. A copy of the district court's order respecting release pending trial or appeal, containing the written reasons for its ruling, must be appended to the memorandum or the application filed under 5th Cir. R. 9.1 or 9.2.

(a) If the appellant questions the factual basis of the order, a transcript of the district court proceedings on the motion for release must be filed with this court. If the transcript is not filed with the memorandum or application, the appellant must attach a court reporter's certificate verifying that the transcript has been ordered and that satisfactory financial arrangements have been made to pay for it, together with the transcript's estimated date of completion.

(b) If the appellant cannot obtain a transcript of the proceedings, the appellant must state in an affidavit the reasons why not.

9.4 Service. A copy of the memorandum or application filed under 5th Cir. R. 9.1 or 9.2 must be hand-delivered to government counsel or served by other expeditious method.

9.5 Response. The opposing party must file a written response to all requests for release within 10 days after service of the memorandum or application. (Amended Dec. 1, 2002; July 15, 2003; As amended Dec. 1, 2009.)

FRAP 10. The record on appeal.

(a) Composition of the record on appeal. The following items constitute the record on appeal:

(1) the original papers and exhibits filed in the district court;

(2) the transcript of proceedings, if any; and

(3) a certified copy of the docket entries prepared by the district clerk.

(b) The transcript of proceedings.

(1) Appellant's duty to order. Within 14 days after filing the notice of appeal or entry of an order disposing of the last timely remaining motion of a type specified in Rule 4(a)(4)(A), whichever is later, the appellant must do either of the following:

(A) order from the reporter a transcript of such parts of the proceedings not already on file as the appellant considers necessary, subject to a local rule of the court of appeals and with the following qualifications:

(i) the order must be in writing;

(ii) if the cost of the transcript is to be paid by the United States under the Criminal Justice Act, the order must so state; and

(iii) the appellant must, within the same period, file a copy of the order with the district clerk; or

(B) file a certificate stating that no transcript will be ordered.

(2) Unsupported finding or conclusion. If the appellant intends to urge on appeal that a finding or conclusion is unsupported by the evidence or is contrary to the evidence, the appellant must include in the record a transcript of all evidence relevant to that finding or conclusion.

(3) Partial transcript. Unless the entire transcript is ordered:

(A) the appellant must — within the 14 days provided in Rule 10(b)(1) — file a statement of the issues that the appellant intends to present on the appeal and must serve on the appellee a copy of both the order or certificate and the statement;

(B) if the appellee considers it necessary to have a transcript of other parts of the proceedings, the appellee must, within 14 days after the service of the order or certificate and the statement of the issues, file and serve on the appellant a designation of additional parts to be ordered; and

(C) unless within 14 days after service of that designation the appellant has ordered all such parts, and has so notified the appellee, the appellee may within the following 14 days either order the parts or move in the district court for an order requiring the appellant to do so.

(4) Payment. At the time of ordering, a party must make satisfactory arrangements with the reporter for paying the cost of the transcript.

(c) Statement of the evidence when the proceedings were not recorded or when a transcript is unavailable. If the transcript of a hearing or trial is unavailable, the appellant may prepare a statement of the evidence or proceedings from the best available means, including the appellant's recollection. The statement must be served on the appellee, who may serve objections or proposed amendments within 14 days after being served. The statement and any objections or proposed amendments must then be submitted to the district court for settlement and approval. As settled and approved, the statement must be included by the district clerk in the record on appeal.

(d) Agreed statement as the record on appeal. In place of the record on appeal as defined in Rule 10(a), the parties may prepare, sign, and submit to the district court a statement of the case showing how the issues presented by the appeal arose and were decided in the district court. The statement must set forth only those facts averred and proved or sought to be proved that are essential to the court's resolution of the issues. If the statement is truthful, it — together with any additions that the district court may consider necessary to a full presentation of the issues on appeal — must be approved by the district court and must then be certified to the court of appeals as the record on appeal. The district clerk must then send it to the circuit clerk within the time provided by Rule 11. A copy of the agreed statement may be filed in place of the appendix required by Rule 30.

(e) Correction or modification of the record.

(1) If any difference arises about whether the record truly discloses what occurred in the district court, the difference must be submitted to and settled by that court and the record conformed accordingly.

(2) If anything material to either party is omitted from or misstated in the record by error or accident, the omission or misstatement may be corrected and a supplemental record may be certified and forwarded:

(A) on stipulation of the parties;

(B) by the district court before or after the record has been forwarded; or

(C) by the court of appeals.

(3) All other questions as to the form and content of the record must be presented to the court of appeals.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Reconstruction of transcript.

Trial court did not err in reconstructing transcript of criminal trial, following the theft of court reporter's notes and tapes, to supply omission and correct record. United States v. Hedge, 462 F.2d 220 (5th Cir. 1972).

Circuit Rule 10. The record on appeal.

10.1 Appellant's Duty to Order the Transcript. The appellant's order of the transcript of proceedings, or parts thereof, contemplated by Fed. R. App. P. 10(b), must be on a form prescribed by the clerk. Counsel will furnish a copy of the order form to the clerk and to the other parties set out in Fed. R. App. P. 10(b). If no transcript needs to be ordered, appellant must file with the clerk a copy of a certificate to that effect that counsel served on the parties under Fed. R. App. P. 10(b).

10.2 Form of Record. The district court must furnish the record on appeal to this court in paper form, and in electronic form whenever available. The paper and electronic records on appeal must be consecutively numbered and paginated. The paper record must be bound in a manner that facilitates reading.

I.O.P.

The district court will furnish a transcript order form, required by this court, when the notice of appeal is filed. Once counsel completes the transcript order, forwards it to the reporter, and makes adequate financial arrangements, counsel's responsibility under Fed. R. App. P. 10 and 11 is fulfilled.

FRAP 11. Forwarding the record.

(a) Appellant's duty. An appellant filing a notice of appeal must comply with Rule 10(b) and must do whatever else is necessary to enable the clerk to assemble and forward the record. If there are multiple appeals from a judgment or order, the clerk must forward a single record.

(b) Duties of reporter and district clerk.

(1) Reporter's duty to prepare and file a transcript. The reporter must prepare and file a transcript as follows:

(A) Upon receiving an order for a transcript, the reporter must enter at the foot of the order the date of its receipt and the expected completion date and send a copy, so endorsed, to the circuit clerk.

(B) If the transcript cannot be completed within 30 days of the reporter's receipt of the order, the reporter may request the circuit clerk to grant additional time to complete it. The clerk must note on the docket the action taken and notify the parties.

(C) When a transcript is complete, the reporter must file it with the district clerk and notify the circuit clerk of the filing.

(D) If the reporter fails to file the transcript on time, the circuit clerk must notify the district judge and do whatever else the court of appeals directs.

(2) District clerk's duty to forward. When the record is complete, the district clerk must number the documents constituting the record and send them promptly to the circuit clerk together with a list of the documents correspondingly numbered and reasonably identified. Unless directed to do so by a party or the circuit clerk, the district clerk will not send to the court of appeals documents of unusual bulk or weight, physical exhibits other than documents, or other parts of the record designated for omission by local rule of the court of appeals. If the exhibits are unusually bulky or heavy, a party must arrange with the clerks in advance for their transportation and receipt.

(c) Retaining the record temporarily in the district court for use in preparing the appeal. The parties may stipulate, or the district court on motion may order, that the district clerk retain the record temporarily for the parties to use in preparing the papers on appeal. In that event the district clerk must certify to the circuit clerk that the record on appeal is complete. Upon receipt of the appellee's brief, or earlier if the court orders or the parties agree, the appellant must request the district clerk to forward the record.

(d) [Abrogated.]

(e) Retaining the record by court order.

(1) The court of appeals may, by order or local rule, provide that a certified copy of the docket entries be forwarded instead of the entire record. But a party may at any time during the appeal request that designated parts of the record be forwarded.

(2) The district court may order the record or some part of it retained if the court needs it while the appeal is pending, subject, however, to call by the court of appeals.

(3) If part or all of the record is ordered retained, the district clerk must send to the court of appeals a copy of the order and the docket entries together with the parts of the original record allowed by the district court and copies of any parts of the record designated by the parties.

(f) Retaining parts of the record in the district court by stipulation of the parties. The parties may agree by written stipulation filed in the district court that designated parts of the record be retained in the district court subject to call by the court of appeals or request by a party. The parts of the record so designated remain a part of the record on appeal.

(g) Record for a preliminary motion in the court of appeals. If, before the record is forwarded, a party makes any of the following motions in the court of appeals:

- for dismissal;
- or release;
- for a stay pending appeal;
- for additional security on the bond on appeal or on a supersedeas bond; or
- for any other intermediate order - the district clerk must send the court of appeals any parts of the record designated by any party.

Circuit Rule 11. Transmission of the record.

11.1 Duties of Court Reporters. In all cases where transcripts are ordered, the court reporter must use a form provided by the clerk of this court and:

(a) Acknowledge receiving the transcript order, and indicate the date of receipt;

(b) State whether adequate financial arrangements have been made under the CJA, or otherwise;

(c) Provide the number of trial or hearing days involved in the transcript, and estimate the total number of pages;

(d) Give an estimated date when the transcript will be finished; and

(e) Certify that he or she expects to file the transcript with the district court clerk within the time estimated.

11.2 Requests for Extensions of Time. Court reporters seeking extensions of the time for filing the transcript beyond the 30 day period fixed by Fed. R. App. P. 11(b) must file an extension request with the clerk of this court and must specify in detail:

(a) The amount of work accomplished on the transcript;

(b) A list of all outstanding transcripts due to this and other courts, including the due dates for filing; and

(c) A verification that the trial court judge who tried the case is aware of and approves the extension request.

If a court reporter's request for an extension of time is granted, he or she must promptly notify all counsel or unrepresented parties of the extended filing date and send a copy of the notification to this court.

11.3 Duty of the Clerk. The district court clerk is responsible for determining when the record on appeal is complete for purposes of the appeal. Unless the record on appeal is sent to this court within 15 days from the filing of the notice of appeal or 15 days after the filing of the transcript of any trial proceedings, whichever is later, the district court clerk must advise the clerk of this court of the reasons for delay and request an extension to file the record. The clerk of this court may grant an extension for no more than 45 days. Extensions beyond 45 days are referred to a single judge. When transmitting the record on appeal in a direct criminal appeal involving more than one defendant, the district court must separate and identify the pleadings and any transcripts of pre-trial, sentencing, and post-trial hearings that apply to fewer than all of the defendants. However, only one copy of the trial transcript is required. In an action involving more than one defendant at trial but where separate actions are filed under 28 U.S.C. § 2255, the district court must separate and identify the pleadings and transcripts of pre-trial, sentencing, and post-trial hearings that apply to less than all of the defendants. One copy of the trial transcript is required for each defendant filing a separate § 2255 action.

I.O.P.

The clerk will monitor all outstanding transcripts and delays.

On October 11, 1982, the Fifth Circuit Judicial Council adopted a resolution requiring each district court in the Fifth Circuit to develop a court reporter management plan providing for the day-to-day management and supervision of an efficient court reporting service within the district court. These plans must provide for the supervision of court reporters in their relations with litigants as specified in the Court Reporter Act, including fees charged for transcripts, adherence to transcript format prescriptions, and delivery schedules. The plans must also provide that a judge, the clerk, or some other person designated by the court supervises the court reporters.

FRAP 12. Docketing the appeal; filing a representation statement; filing the record.

(a) Docketing the appeal. Upon receiving the copy of the notice of appeal and the docket entries from the district clerk under Rule 3(d), the circuit clerk must docket the appeal under the title of the district-court action and must identify the appellant, adding the appellant's name if necessary.

(b) Filing a representation statement. Unless the court of appeals designates another time, the attorney who filed the notice of appeal must, within 14 days after filing the notice, file a statement with the circuit clerk naming the parties that the attorney represents on appeal.

(c) Filing the record, partial record, or certificate. Upon receiving the record, partial record, or district clerk's certificate as provided in Rule 11, the circuit clerk must file it and immediately notify all parties of the filing date.

FRAP 12.1. Remand After an Indicative Ruling by the District Court on a Motion for Relief That Is Barred by a Pending Appeal.

(a) Notice to the Court of Appeals. If a timely motion is made in the district court for relief that it lacks authority to grant because of an appeal that has been docketed and is pending, the movant must promptly notify the circuit clerk if the district court states either that it would grant the motion or that the motion raises a substantial issue.

(b) Remand After an Indicative Ruling. If the district court states that it would grant the motion or that the motion raises a substantial issue, the court of appeals may remand for further proceedings but retains jurisdiction unless it expressly dismisses the appeal. If the court of appeals remands but retains jurisdiction, the parties must promptly notify the circuit clerk when the district court has decided the motion on remand.

Circuit Rule 12. Representation statement.

Counsel can satisfy the "representation statement" required by Fed. R. App. P. 12(b) by completing this court's "Notice of Appearance Form" and returning it to the clerk within 30 days of filing the notice of appeal.

TITLE III. REVIEW OF A DECISION OF THE UNITED STATES TAX COURT

FRAP 13. Review of a decision of the tax court.

(a) How obtained; time for filing notice of appeal.

(1) Review of a decision of the United States Tax Court is commenced by filing a notice of appeal with the Tax Court clerk within 90 days after the entry of the Tax Court's decision. At the time of filing, the appellant must furnish the clerk with enough copies of the notice to enable the clerk to comply with Rule 3(d). If one party files a timely notice of appeal, any other party may file a notice of appeal within 120 days after the Tax Court's decision is entered.

(2) If, under Tax Court rules, a party makes a timely motion to vacate or revise the Tax Court's decision, the time to file a notice of appeal runs from the entry of the order disposing of the motion or from the entry of a new decision, whichever is later.

(b) Notice of appeal; how filed. The notice of appeal may be filed either at the Tax Court clerk's office in the District of Columbia or by mail addressed to the clerk. If sent by mail the notice is considered filed on the postmark date, subject to § 7502 of the Internal Revenue Code, as amended, and the applicable regulations.

(c) Contents of the notice of appeal; service; effect of filing and service. Rule 3 prescribes the contents of a notice of appeal, the manner of service, and the effect of its filing and service. Form 2 in the Appendix of Forms is a suggested form of a notice of appeal.

(d) The record on appeal; forwarding; filing.

(1) An appeal from the Tax Court is governed by the parts of Rules 10, 11, and 12 regarding the record on appeal from a district court, the time and manner of forwarding and filing, and the docketing in the court of appeals. References in those rules and in Rule 3 to the district court and district clerk are to be read as referring to the Tax Court and its clerk.

(2) If an appeal from a Tax Court decision is taken to more than one court of appeals, the original record must be sent to the court named in the first notice of appeal filed. In an appeal to any other court of appeals, the appellant must apply to that other court to make provision for the record.

FRAP 14. Applicability of other rules to the review of a tax court decision.

All provisions of these rules, except Rules 4-9, 15-20, and 22-23, apply to the review of a Tax Court decision.

TITLE IV. REVIEW OR ENFORCEMENT OF AN ORDER OF AN ADMINISTRATIVE AGENCY, BOARD, COMMISSION, OR OFFICER

FRAP 15. Review or enforcement of an agency order — How obtained; intervention.

(a) Petition for review; joint petition.

(1) Review of an agency order is commenced by filing, within the time prescribed by law, a petition for review with the clerk of a court of appeals authorized to review the agency order. If their interests make joinder practicable, two or more persons may join in a petition to the same court to review the same order.

(2) The petition must:

(A) name each party seeking review either in the caption or the body of the petition — using such terms as "et al.," "petitioners," or "respondents" does not effectively name the parties;

(B) name the agency as a respondent (even though not named in the petition, the United States is a respondent if required by statute); and

(C) specify the order or part thereof to be reviewed.

(3) Form 3 in the Appendix of Forms is a suggested form of a petition for review.

(4) In this rule "agency" includes an agency, board, commission, or officer; "petition for review" includes a petition to enjoin, suspend, modify, or otherwise review, or a notice of appeal, whichever form is indicated by the applicable statute.

(b) Application or cross-application to enforce an order; answer; default.

(1) An application to enforce an agency order must be filed with the clerk of a court of appeals authorized to enforce the order. If a petition is filed to review an agency order that the court may enforce, a party opposing the petition may file a cross-application for enforcement.

(2) Within 21 days after the application for enforcement is filed, the respondent must serve on the applicant an answer to the application and file it with the clerk. If the respondent fails to answer in time, the court will enter judgment for the relief requested.

(3) The application must contain a concise statement of the proceedings in which the order was entered, the facts upon which venue is based, and the relief requested.

(c) Service of the petition or application. The circuit clerk must serve a copy of the petition for review, or an application or cross-application to enforce an agency order, on each respondent as prescribed by Rule 3(d), unless a different manner of service is prescribed by statute. At the time of filing, the petitioner must:

(1) serve, or have served, a copy on each party admitted to participate in the agency proceedings, except for the respondents;

(2) file with the clerk a list of those so served; and

(3) give the clerk enough copies of the petition or application to serve each respondent.

(d) Intervention. Unless a statute provides another method, a person who wants to intervene in a proceeding under this rule must file a motion for leave to intervene with the circuit clerk and serve a copy on all parties. The motion — or other notice of intervention authorized by statute — must be filed within 30 days after the petition for review is filed and must contain a concise statement of the interest of the moving party and the grounds for intervention.

(e) Payment of fees. When filing any separate or joint petition for review in a court of appeals, the petitioner must pay the circuit clerk all required fees.

Circuit Rule 15. Review or enforcement of an agency order — How obtained; intervention.

15.1 Docketing Fee and Copy of Orders — Agency Review Proceedings. At the time a party files a petition for review under Fed. R. App. P. 15, the party must:

(a) Pay the filing fee to the clerk; and

(b) Attach a copy of the order or orders to be reviewed.

15.2 Proceedings for Enforcement of Orders of the National Labor Relations Board. In National Labor Relations Board enforcement proceedings under Fed. R. App. P. 15(b), the respondent is considered the petitioner, and the board the respondent, for briefing and oral argument purposes, unless otherwise ordered by the court.

15.3 Proceedings for Review of Orders of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

15.3.1 Petition for Review. Every petition for review must specify in its caption the number, date, and identification of the order reviewed and append the service list required by Fed. R. App. P. 15(c). Counsel filing the petition must attach a certificate that the commission has posted, filed or entered the order being reviewed.

15.3.2 Docketing. All petitions for review and other documents concerning commission orders in the same number series (i.e., 699, 699A, 699B) are assigned to the same docket.

15.3.3 Intervention.

(a) Party. A party to a commission proceeding may intervene in a review of the proceeding in this court by filing a notice of intervention. The notice must state whether the intervenor is a petitioner who objects to the order or a respondent who supports the order. A notice of intervention confers petitioner or respondent status on the intervening party as to all proceedings.

(b) Nonparty. A person who is not a party to a commission proceeding desiring to intervene in a review of that proceeding must file with the clerk, and serve upon all parties to the proceeding, a motion for leave to intervene. The motion must contain a concise statement of the moving party's interest, the grounds upon which intervention is sought, and why the interest asserted is not adequately protected by existing parties. Oppositions to such motions must be filed within 14 days of service.

15.3.4 Docketing Statement. All parties filing petitions for review must file a joint docketing statement within 30 days of the filing of the initial petition for review, but not later than 14 days after the expiration of the period permitted for filing a petition for review. The docketing statement must:

(a) List each issue to be raised in the review;

(b) List any other pending review proceeding of the same order in any other court; and

(c) Attach copies of the order to be reviewed.

Every petitioner filing for review after filing a docketing statement must specify in the petition for review any exceptions taken or additions to the issues listed in the docketing statement. Every party who intervenes after the filing of the docketing statement must specify in the notice of intervention any exceptions taken to the issues listed in the docketing statement.

15.3.5 Prehearing Conference. The clerk may give notice of a prehearing conference 10 days after filing of a docketing statement, or 14 days after entry of an order by the court deciding a venue issue, whichever is later. The prehearing conference will:

(a) Simplify and define issues;

(b) Agree on an appendix and record;

(c) Assign joint briefing responsibilities and schedule briefs; and

(d) Resolve any other matters aiding in the disposition of the proceeding.

Except for good cause, any party who petitions for review or intervenes after prehearing conference has been held is bound by the result of the prehearing conference.

15.3.6 Severance. Any petitioner or respondent may move to sever parties or issues by showing prejudice.

15.4 Proceedings for Review of Orders of the Benefits Review Board. In petitions filed by either the claimant or the employer under 33 U.S.C. § 921 to review orders of the Benefits Review Board, the Office of Workers Compensation of the United States Department of Labor, the nominal respondent, is aligned with the claimant for briefing and oral argument purposes, unless otherwise ordered by the court. Within 30 days of the filing of the petition for review of the board's decision, the petitioner must file a statement of the issues to be presented on appeal and serve them on the director and counsel for all parties so the appropriate alignment can be made.

15.5 Time for Filing Motion for Intervention. Time for Filing Motion for Intervention. A motion to intervene under Fed. R. App. P. 15(d) should be filed promptly after the petition for review of the agency proceeding is filed, but not later than 14 days prior to the due date of the brief of the party supported by the intervenor. (Amended Dec. 1, 2002; July 15, 2003; As amended Dec. 1, 2009.)

FRAP 15.1. Briefs and oral argument in a national labor relations board proceeding.

In either an enforcement or a review proceeding, a party adverse to the National Labor Relations Board proceeds first on briefing and at oral argument, unless the court orders otherwise.

FRAP 16. The record on review or enforcement.

(a) Composition of the record. The record on review or enforcement of an agency order consists of:

(1) the order involved;

(2) any findings or report on which it is based; and

(3) the pleadings, evidence, and other parts of the proceedings before the agency.

(b) Omissions from or misstatements in the record. The parties may at any time, by stipulation, supply any omission from the record or correct a misstatement, or the court may so direct. If necessary, the court may direct that a supplemental record be prepared and filed.

FRAP 17. Filing the record.

(a) Agency to file; time for filing; notice of filing. The agency must file the record with the circuit clerk within 40 days after being served with a petition for review, unless the statute authorizing review provides otherwise, or within 40 days after it files an application for enforcement unless the respondent fails to answer or the court orders otherwise. The court may shorten or extend the time to file the record. The clerk must notify all parties of the date when the record is filed.

(b) Filing — What constitutes.

(1) The agency must file:

(A) the original or a certified copy of the entire record or parts designated by the parties; or

(B) a certified list adequately describing all documents, transcripts of testimony, exhibits, and other material constituting the record, or describing those parts designated by the parties.

(2) The parties may stipulate in writing that no record or certified list be filed. The date when the stipulation is filed with the circuit clerk is treated as the date when the record is filed.

(3) The agency must retain any portion of the record not filed with the clerk. All parts of the record retained by the agency are a part of the record on review for all purposes and, if the court or a party so requests, must be sent to the court regardless of any prior stipulation.

Circuit Rule 17. Filing of the record.

Filing of the Record. Any agency failing to file the record within 40 days, must request an extension of time and provide specific reasons justifying the delay. The clerk may grant an extension for no more than 30 days. After such an extension expires, the court may order production of the record.

FRAP 18. Stay pending review.

(a) Motion for a stay.

(1) Initial motion before the agency. A petitioner must ordinarily move first before the agency for a stay pending review of its decision or order.

(2) Motion in the court of appeals. A motion for a stay may be made to the court of appeals or one of its judges.

(A) The motion must:

(i) show that moving first before the agency would be impracticable; or

(ii) state that, a motion having been made, the agency denied the motion or failed to afford the relief requested and state any reasons given by the agency for its action.

(B) The motion must also include:

(i) the reasons for granting the relief requested and the facts relied on;

(ii) originals or copies of affidavits or other sworn statements supporting facts subject to dispute; and

(iii) relevant parts of the record.

(C) The moving party must give reasonable notice of the motion to all parties.

(D) The motion must be filed with the circuit clerk and normally will be considered by a panel of the court. But in an exceptional case in which time requirements make that procedure impracticable, the motion may be made to and considered by a single judge.

(b) Bond. The court may condition relief on the filing of a bond or other appropriate security.

FRAP 19. Settlement of a judgment enforcing an agency order in part.

When the court files an opinion directing entry of judgment enforcing the agency's order in part, the agency must within 14 days file with the clerk and serve on each other party a proposed judgment conforming to the opinion. A party who disagrees with the agency's proposed judgment must within 10 days file with the clerk and serve the agency with a proposed judgment that the party believes conforms to the opinion. The court will settle the judgment and direct entry without further hearing or argument.

FRAP 20. Applicability of rules to the review or enforcement of an agency order.

All provisions of these rules, except Rules 3-14 and 22-23, apply to the review or enforcement of an agency order. In these rules, "appellant" includes a petitioner or applicant, and "appellee" includes a respondent.

TITLE V. EXTRAORDINARY WRITS

FRAP 21. Writs of mandamus and prohibition, and other extraordinary writs.

(a) Mandamus or prohibition to a court: petition, filing, service, and docketing.

(1) A party petitioning for a writ of mandamus or prohibition directed to a court must file a petition with the circuit clerk with proof of service on all parties to the proceeding in the trial court. The party must also provide a copy to the trial-court judge. All parties to the proceeding in the trial court other than the petitioner are respondents for all purposes.

(2)(A) The petition must be titled "In re [name of petitioner]."

(B) The petition must state:

(i) the relief sought;

(ii) the issues presented;

(iii) the facts necessary to understand the issue presented by the petition; and

(iv) the reasons why the writ should issue.

(C) The petition must include a copy of any order or opinion or parts of the record that may be essential to understand the matters set forth in the petition.

(3) Upon receiving the prescribed docket fee, the clerk must docket the petition and submit it to the court.

(b) Denial; order directing answer; briefs; precedence.

(1) The court may deny the petition without an answer. Otherwise, it must order the respondent, if any, to answer within a fixed time.

(2) The clerk must serve the order to respond on all persons directed to respond.

(3) Two or more respondents may answer jointly.

(4) The court of appeals may invite or order the trial-court judge to address the petition or may invite an amicus curiae to do so. The trial-court judge may request permission to address the petition but may not do so unless invited or ordered to do so by the court of appeals.

(5) If briefing or oral argument is required, the clerk must advise the parties, and when appropriate, the trial-court judge or amicus curiae.

(6) The proceeding must be given preference over ordinary civil cases.

(7) The circuit clerk must send a copy of the final disposition to the trial-court judge.

(c) Other extraordinary writs. An application for an extraordinary writ other than one provided for in Rule 21(a) must be made by filing a petition with the circuit clerk with proof of service on the respondents. Proceedings on the application must conform, so far as is practicable, to the procedures prescribed in Rule 21(a) and (b).

(d) Form of papers; number of copies. All papers must conform to Rule 32(c)(2). Except by the court's permission, a paper must not exceed 30 pages, exclusive of the disclosure statement, the proof of service, and the accompanying documents required by Rule 21(a)(2)(C). An original and 3 copies must be filed unless the court requires the filing of a different number by local rule or by order in a particular case.

Circuit Rule 21. Writs of mandamus and prohibition, and other extraordinary writs.

Petition for Writ. The petition must contain a certificate of interested persons as described in 5th Cir. R. 28.2.1. The certificate of interested persons and the items required by 5th Cir. R. 21 do not count toward the page limit.

In addition to the items required by Fed. R. App. P. 21, the application must contain a copy of any memoranda or briefs filed in the district court supporting the application to that court for relief and any memoranda or briefs filed in opposition, as well as a transcript of any reasons the district court gave for its action.

TITLE VI. HABEAS CORPUS; PROCEEDINGS IN FORMA PAUPERIS

FRAP 22. Habeas corpus and Section 2255 proceedings.

(a) Application for the original writ. An application for a writ of habeas corpus must be made to the appropriate district court. If made to a circuit judge, the application must be transferred to the appropriate district court. If a district court denies an application made or transferred to it, renewal of the application before a circuit judge is not permitted. The applicant may, under 28 U.S.C.S. § 2253, appeal to the court of appeals from the district court's order denying the application.

(b) Certificate of appealability.

(1) In a habeas corpus proceeding in which the detention complained of arises from process issued by a state court, or in a 28 U.S.C. § 2255 proceeding, the applicant cannot take an appeal unless a circuit justice or a circuit or district judge issues a certificate of appealability under 28 U.S.C. § 2253(c). If an applicant files a notice of appeal, the district clerk must send to the court of appeals the certificate (if any) and the statement described in Rule 11(a) of the Rules Governing Proceedings Under 28 U.S.C. § 2254 or § 2255 (if any), along with the notice of appeal and the file of the district-court proceedings. If the district judge has denied the certificate, the applicant may request a circuit judge to issue it.

(2) A request addressed to the court of appeals may be considered by a circuit judge or judges, as the court prescribes. If no express request for a certificate is filed, the notice of appeal constitutes a request addressed to the judges of the court of appeals.

(3) A certificate of appealability is not required when a state or its representative or the United States or its representative appeals.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Certificate of appealability.

Certificate of probable cause required under Rule 22(b) will not be issued where petitioner's claim is so clearly foreclosed by precedent that he cannot make substantial showing of denial of federal right. Fabian v. Reed, 714 F.2d 39 (5th Cir. 1983).

Circuit Rule 22. Applications for certificates of appealability and motions for permission to file second or successive habeas corpus applications.

Applications for certificates of appealability, motions for permission to file second or successive applications under 28 U.S.C.S. §§ 2254 and 2255, and any responses must conform to the format requirements and the length limitations of Fed. R. App. P. 32(a), and 5th Cir. R. 32 as applicable.

I.O.P. to Fed. R. App. P. 22.

See 5th Cir. R. 27.3 concerning emergency motions. Where the district court has granted a COA, the clerk shall include in the original briefing notice a deadline for any application for COA on additional issues, and where feasible, shall make the deadline coextensive with the briefing deadline. (Amended effective February 1, 2011.)

FRAP 23. Custody or release of a prisoner in a habeas corpus proceeding.

(a) Transfer of custody pending review. Pending review of a decision in a habeas corpus proceeding commenced before a court, justice, or judge of the United States for the release of a prisoner, the person having custody of the prisoner must not transfer custody to another unless a transfer is directed in accordance with this rule. When, upon application, a custodian shows the need for a transfer, the court, justice, or judge rendering the decision under review may authorize the transfer and substitute the successor custodian as a party.

(b) Detention or release pending review of decision not to release. While a decision not to release a prisoner is under review, the court or judge rendering the decision, or the court of appeals, or the Supreme Court, or a judge or justice of either court, may order that the prisoner be:

(1) detained in the custody from which release is sought;

(2) detained in other appropriate custody; or

(3) released on personal recognizance, with or without surety.

(c) Release pending review of decision ordering release. While a decision ordering the release of a prisoner is under review, the prisoner must — unless the court or judge rendering the decision, or the court of appeals, or the Supreme Court, or a judge or justice of either court orders otherwise — be released on personal recognizance, with or without surety.

(d) Modification of the initial order on custody. An initial order governing the prisoner's custody or release, including any recognizance or surety, continues in effect pending review unless for special reasons shown to the court of appeals or the Supreme Court, or to a judge or justice of either court, the order is modified or an independent order regarding custody, release, or surety is issued.

I.O.P. to Fed. R. App. P. 23.

See 5th Cir. R. 9.2 for procedures governing applications for release.

FRAP 24. Proceeding in forma pauperis.

(a) Leave to proceed in forma pauperis.

(1) Motion in the district court. Except as stated in Rule 24(a)(3), a party to a district-court action who desires to appeal in forma pauperis must file a motion in the district court. The party must attach an affidavit that:

(A) shows in the detail prescribed by Form 4 of the Appendix of Forms, the party's inability to pay or to give security for fees and costs;

(B) claims an entitlement to redress; and

(C) states the issues that the party intends to present on appeal.

(2) Action on the motion. If the district court grants the motion, the party may proceed on appeal without prepaying or giving security for fees and costs, unless a statute provides otherwise. If the district court denies the motion, it must state its reasons in writing.

(3) Prior approval. A party who was permitted to proceed in forma pauperis in the district-court action, or who was determined to be financially unable to obtain an adequate defense in a criminal case, may proceed on appeal in forma pauperis without further authorization, unless:

(A) the district court — before or after the notice of appeal is filed — certifies that the appeal is not taken in good faith or finds that the party is not otherwise entitled to proceed in forma pauperis and states in writing its reasons for the certification or finding; or

(B) a statute provides otherwise.

(4) Notice of district court's denial. The district clerk must immediately notify the parties and the court of appeals when the district court does any of the following:

(A) denies a motion to proceed on appeal in forma pauperis;

(B) certifies that the appeal is not taken in good faith; or

(C) finds that the party is not otherwise entitled to proceed in forma pauperis.

(5) Motion in the court of appeals. A party may file a motion to proceed on appeal in forma pauperis in the court of appeals within 30 days after service of the notice prescribed in Rule 24(a)(4). The motion must include a copy of the affidavit filed in the district court and the district court's statement of reasons for its action. If no affidavit was filed in the district court, the party must include the affidavit prescribed by Rule 24(a)(1).

(b) Leave to proceed in forma pauperis on appeal or review of an administrative-agency proceeding. When an appeal or review of a proceeding before an administrative agency, board, commission, or officer (including for the purpose of this rule the United States Tax Court) proceeds directly in a court of appeals, a party may file in the court of appeals a motion for leave to proceed on appeal in forma pauperis with an affidavit prescribed by Rule 24(a)(1).

(c) Leave to use original record. A party allowed to proceed on appeal in forma pauperis may request that the appeal be heard on the original record without reproducing any part. (Amended December 1, 2002.)

TITLE VII. GENERAL PROVISIONS

FRAP 25. Filing and service.

(a) Filing.

(1) Filing with the clerk. A paper required or permitted to be filed in a court of appeals must be filed with the clerk.

(2) Filing: method and timeliness.

(A) In general. Filing may be accomplished by mail addressed to the clerk, but filing is not timely unless the clerk receives the papers within the time fixed for filing.

(B) A brief or appendix. A brief or appendix is timely filed, however, if on or before the last day for filing, it is:

(i) mailed to the clerk by First-Class Mail, or other class of mail that is at least as expeditious, postage prepaid; or

(ii) dispatched to a third-party commercial carrier for delivery to the clerk within 3 days.

(C) Inmate filing. A paper filed by an inmate confined in an institution is timely if deposited in the institution's internal mailing system on or before the last day for filing. If an institution has a system designed for legal mail, the inmate must use that system to receive the benefit of this rule. Timely filing may be shown by a declaration in compliance with 28 U.S.C.S. § 1746 or by a notarized statement, either of which must set forth the date of deposit and state that first-class postage has been prepaid.

(D) Electronic filing. A court of appeals may by local rule permit papers to be filed, signed, or verified by electronic means that are consistent with technical standards, if any, that the Judicial Conference of the United States establishes. A paper filed by electronic means in compliance with a local rule constitutes a written paper for the purpose of applying these rules.

(3) Filing a motion with a judge. If a motion requests relief that may be granted by a single judge, the judge may permit the motion to be filed with the judge; the judge must note the filing date on the motion and give it to the clerk.

(4) Clerk's refusal of documents. The clerk must not refuse to accept for filing any paper presented for that purpose solely because it is not presented in proper form as required by these rules or by any local rule or practice.

(5) Privacy Protection. An appeal in a case whose privacy protection was governed by Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 9037, Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 5.2, or Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 49.1 is governed by the same rule on appeal. In all other proceedings, privacy protection is governed by Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 5.2, except that Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 49.1 governs when an extraordinary writ is sought in a criminal case.

(b) Service of all papers required. Unless a rule requires service by the clerk, a party must, at or before the time of filing a paper, serve a copy on the other parties to the appeal or review. Service on a party represented by counsel must be made on the party's counsel.

(c) Manner of service.

(1) Service may be any of the following:

(A) personal, including delivery to a responsible person at the office of counsel;

(B) by mail;

(C) by third-party commercial carrier for delivery within 3 days; or

(D) by electronic means, if the party being served consents in writing.

(2) If authorized by local rule, a party may use the court's transmission equipment to make electronic service under Rule 25(c)(1)(D).

(3) When reasonable considering such factors as the immediacy of the relief sought, distance, and cost, service on a party must be by a manner at least as expeditious as the manner used to file the paper with the court.

(4) Service by mail or by commercial carrier is complete on mailing or delivery to the carrier. Service by electronic means is complete on transmission, unless the party making service is notified that the paper was not received by the party served.

(d) Proof of service.

(1) A paper presented for filing must contain either of the following:

(A) an acknowledgment of service by the person served; or

(B) proof of service consisting of a statement by the person who made service certifying:

(i) the date and manner of service;

(ii) the names of the persons served; and

(iii) their mail or electronic addresses, facsimile numbers, or the addresses of the places of delivery, as appropriate for the manner of service.

(2) When a brief or appendix is filed by mailing or dispatch in accordance with Rule 25(a)(2)(B), the proof of service must also state the date and manner by which the document was mailed or dispatched to the clerk.

(3) Proof of service may appear on or be affixed to the papers filed.

(e) Number of copies. When these rules require the filing or furnishing of a number of copies, a court may require a different number by local rule or by order in a particular case. (Amended December 1, 2002; amended December 1, 2006; amended December 1, 2007.)

Circuit Rule 25. Filing and service.

25.1 Facsimile Filing. The clerk may accept, for filing, papers sent by facsimile in situations the clerk determines are emergencies or that present other compelling circumstances.

25.2 Electronic Case Filing Procedures.

25.2.1 Electronic Filing. At the court's direction, the clerk will set an implementation date for an initial period of voluntary, and a subsequent date for mandatory, use of the court's electronic filing system. Thereafter, all cases will be assigned to the court's electronic filing system. Counsel must register as Filing Users under Rule 25.2.3 and comply with the court's electronic filing standards, posted separately on the court's website, www.ca5.uscourts.gov, unless excused for good cause. Non-incarcerated pro se litigants may request the clerk's permission to register as a Filing User, in civil cases only, under such conditions as the clerk may authorize.

Except as authorized in the electronic filing rules and standards, Filing Users must submit all briefs, motions, petitions for rehearing in PDF text, (not scanned), format and in paper format as prescribed by the clerk, see 5th Cir. R. 30, 31, etc. Whenever possible, other documents, e.g., record excerpts, etc., should be in PDF text format, and in paper format as prescribed by the clerk. All paper filings must be identical to the electronic file(s). Upon the clerk's request, a Filing User must promptly provide an identical electronic version of any paper document previously filed in the same case.

25.2.2 Filing in Original Proceedings. Filing Users may be required to file case-initiating documents in original proceedings, e.g., mandamus, petitions for second and successive habeas corpus relief, petitions for review, etc., in paper format. Subsequent documents may be filed electronically and in paper format as prescribed by the clerk.

25.2.3 Filing Users: Eligibility, Registration, Passwords. All counsel not excused from filing electronically must register themselves, or any additional approved designee, as Filing Users of the court's electronic filing system. The clerk will define the registration requirements and continuing duty of counsel to keep their contact information current, see 5th Cir. R. 46.1, and will determine necessary training to receive Filing User registration.

Non-incarcerated pro se litigants granted Filing User status under Rule 25.2.1 will have Filing User status terminated as prescribed by the clerk, generally at the termination of the case. If a pro se party, permitted to register as a Filing User, retains an attorney, that counsel must advise the clerk.

A Filing User's registration constitutes consent to electronic service of all documents as provided in the Fed. R. App. P. and the 5th Cir. R.

Filing Users agree to protect the security of their passwords and immediately notify the PACER Service Center and the clerk if their password is compromised. Filing Users may be sanctioned for failure to comply with this provision.

Subject to a single judge's review, the clerk may terminate a Filing User's electronic filing privileges for abusing the system by an inordinate number of filings, filings of excessive size, or other failures to comply with the electronic filing rules and standards.

A Filing User may move to withdraw from participation in the electronic filing system for good cause shown.

25.2.4 Consequences of Electronic Filing. A Filing User's electronic transmission of a document to the electronic filing system consistent with these rules and the court's electronic filing standards, together with the court's transmission of a Notice of Docket Activity, constitutes filing of the document under the Fed. R. App. P. and 5th Cir. R., and constitutes entry of the document on the docket under Fed. R. App. P. 36 and 45(b). If a party must file a motion for leave to file, both the motion and document at issue must be submitted electronically and in identical paper form; the underlying document will be filed if the court so directs.

A Filing User must verify a document's legibility and completeness before filing it with the court. Except as authorized by the court's electronic filing rules and standards, documents the Filing User creates and files electronically must be in PDF text format. When a Filing User's document has been filed electronically, the official record is the electronic document stored by the court, and the filing party is bound by the document as filed. Except for documents first filed in paper form and subsequently submitted electronically under 5th Cir. R. 25.2.2, an electronically filed document is deemed filed at the date and time stated on the court's Notice of Docket Activity.

Filing must be completed by 11:59 p.m. Central Time to be considered timely filed that day.

25.2.5 Service of Documents by Electronic Means. The court's electronic Notice of Docket Activity constitutes service of the filed document on all Filing Users. Parties who are not Filing Users must be served with a copy of any document filed electronically in accordance with the Fed. R. App. P. 25 and 5th Cir. R. 25 If the document is not available electronically, the filer must use an alternative method of service.

The court's electronic Notice of Docket Activity does not replace the certificate of service required by Fed. R. App. P. 25 (d).

25.2.6 Entry of Court-Issued Documents. Except as otherwise provided by rule or order, all of the court's orders, opinions, judgments, and proceedings relating to cases electronically filed will be filed in accordance with these rules, and will constitute entry on the docket under Fed. R. App. P. 36 and 45(b).

Any order or other court-issued document filed electronically does not require a signature of a judge or other court employee. An electronic order has the same force and effect as a paper copy of the order. Orders also may be entered as 'text-only' entries on the docket, without an attached document. Such orders are official and binding.

25.2.7 Attachments and Exhibits to Motions and Original Proceedings. Filing Users must submit all documents referenced as exhibits or attachments, in electronic form within any file size limits the clerk may prescribe, as well as any paper copies the clerk specifies. A Filing User must submit as exhibits or attachments only those excerpts of the referenced documents that are directly germane to the matter under consideration by the court. Excerpted material must be clearly and prominently identified as such. The clerk may require parties to file additional excerpts or the complete document.

25.2.8 Sealed Documents. A Filing User may move to file documents under seal in electronic form if permitted by law, and as authorized in the court's electronic filing standards. The court's order authorizing or denying the electronic filing of documents under seal may be filed electronically. Documents ordered placed under seal may be filed traditionally in paper or electronically, as authorized by the court. If filed traditionally, a paper copy of the authorizing order must be attached to the documents under seal and delivered to the clerk.

25.2.9 Retention Requirements. The Filing User must maintain in paper form documents filed electronically and requiring original signatures, other than that of the Filing User, for 3 years after the mandate or order closing the case issues. On request of the court, the Filing User must provide original documents for review.

25.2.10 Signatures. The user log-in and password required to submit documents in electronic form serve as the Filing User's signature on all electronic documents filed with the court. They also serve as a signature for purposes of the Fed. R. App. P. 32(d) and 5th Cir. R. 28.5, and any other purpose for which a signature is required in connection with proceedings before the court.

The Filing User's name under whose log-in and password the document is submitted must be preceded by an 's" and be typed in the space where the signature otherwise would appear.

No Filing User or other person may knowingly permit or cause to permit a Filing User's log-in and password to be used by anyone other than an authorized agent of the Filing User.

Documents which require more than one party's signature must be filed electronically by:

submitting a scanned document containing all necessary signatures; showing the consent of the other parties on the document; or any other manner approved by the court.

Electronically represented signatures of all parties and Filing Users described above are presumed valid. If any party, counsel of record, or Filing User objects to the representation of his or her signature on an electronic document as described above, he or she must file a notice within 10 days setting forth the basis of the objection.

25.2.11 Notice of Court Orders and Judgment. The clerk will transmit electronically a Notice of Docket Activity to Filing Users in the case when entering an order or judgment. This electronic transmission constitutes the notice and service of the opinion required by Fed. R. App. P. 36(b) and 45(c). The clerk must give notice in paper form in accordance with those rules to a person who has not consented to electronic service.

25.2.12 Technical Failures. A Filing User whose filing is made untimely as the result of a technical failure may seek appropriate relief from the court.

25.2.13 Public Access/Redaction of Personal Identifiers. Parties must refrain from including, or must partially redact where inclusion is necessary, certain personal data identifiers whether filed electronically or in paper form as prescribed in Fed. R. App. P. 25, Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2(a), and Fed. R. Crim. P. 49.1. Responsibility for complying with the rules and redacting personal identifiers rests solely with counsel. The parties or their counsel may be required to certify compliance with these rules. The clerk will not review pleadings, and is not responsible for data redaction.

Parties wishing to file a document containing the personal data identifiers referenced above may:

file an un-redacted version of the document under seal, or file a reference list under seal. The list must contain the complete personal data identifier(s) and the redacted identifier(s) used in its (their) place in the filing. All references in the case to the redacted identifiers included in the reference list will be construed to refer to the corresponding complete personal data identifier. The reference list must be filed under seal, and may be amended as of right.

The court will retain the un-redacted version of the document or the reference list as part of the record. The court may require the party to file a redacted copy for the public file.

25.2.14 Hyperlinks. Electronically filed documents may contain the following types of hyperlinks:

Hyperlinks to other portions of the same document;

Hyperlinks to PACER that contains a source document for a citation;

Hyperlinks to documents already filed in any CM/ECF database;

Hyperlinks between documents that will be filed together at the same time;.

Hyperlinks that the clerk may approve in the future as technology advances.

Hyperlinks to cited authority may not replace standard citation format. Complete citations must be included in the text of the filed document.

A hyperlink, or any site to which it refers, will not be considered part of the record. Hyperlinks are simply convenient mechanisms for accessing material cited in a filed document. The court accepts no responsibility for, and does not endorse, any product, organization, or content at any hyperlinked site, or at any site to which that site might be linked. The court accepts no responsibility for the availability or functionality of any hyperlink.

25.2.15 Changes. The clerk may make changes to the standards for electronic filing to adapt to changes in technology or to facilitate electronic filing. Changes to the court's electronic filing standards will be posted on the court's internet website. (Amended Dec. 1, 2002; July 15, 2003; As amended Dec. 1, 2009.)

Editor's Note — The Fifth Circuit Court Sets March 15, 2010 as the date for mandatory electronic case filing . The Fifth Circuit Court website provided:

"Pursuant to Fifth Circuit Rule 25.2.1, the court established March 15, 2010, as the effective date for attorneys to use our ECF program to file in cases before the court. Unless excused for good cause, counsel must register as Filing Users under Rule 25.2.3 and comply with the court's electronic filing standards, posted separately on our website, www.ca5.uscourts.gov/cmecf. Attorneys must be admitted to practice in the Fifth Circuit and are required to file an appearance form in each case they are involved in before making any electronic filings.

"Even if you do not currently have a case before the court, we most strongly recommend that all members of the Fifth Circuit bar register now as Fifth Circuit filing users. Please go to the PACER Service Center website, www.pacer.gov., and select the "REGISTER" link. There is no cost to register as a Fifth Circuit Filer with PACER. Then please take the time to become familiar with the information we have on our ECF website. When you do have a case, we ask that you file an appearance form as soon as possible to avoid filing delays."

Limits on recovery of mailing or commercial carrier delivery costs. See 5th Cir. R. 39.2.

FRAP 26. Computing and extending time.

(a) Computing time. The following rules apply in computing any time period specified in these rules, in any local rule or court order, or in any statute that does not specify a method of computing time.

(1) Period Stated in Days or a Longer Unit. When the period is stated in days or a longer unit of time:

(A) exclude the day of the event that triggers the period;

(B) count every day, including intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays; and

(C) include the last day of the period, but if the last day is a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, the period continues to run until the end of the next day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday.

(2) Period Stated in Hours. When the period is stated in hours:

(A) begin counting immediately on the occurrence of the event that triggers the period;

(B) count every hour, including hours during intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays; and

(C) if the period would end on a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, the period continues to run until the same time on the next day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday.

(3) Inaccessibility of the Clerk's Office. Unless the court orders otherwise, if the clerk's office is inaccessible:

(A) on the last day for filing under Rule 26(a)(1), then the time for filing is extended to the first accessible day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday; or

(B) during the last hour for filing under Rule 26(a)(2), then the time for filing is extended to the same time on the first accessible day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday.

(4) "Last Day" Defined. Unless a different time is set by a statute, local rule, or court order, the last day ends:

(4) "Last Day" Defined. Unless a different time is set by a statute, local rule, or court order, the last day ends:

(A) for electronic filing in the district court, at midnight in the court's time zone;

(B) for electronic filing in the court of appeals, at midnight in the time zone of the circuit clerk's principal office;

(C) for filing under Rules 4(c)(1), 25(a)(2)(B), and 25(a)(2)(C) - and filing by mail under Rule 13(b) - at the latest time for the method chosen for delivery to the post office, third-party commercial carrier, or prison mailing system; and

(D) for filing by other means, when the clerk's office is scheduled to close.

(5) "Next Day" Defined. The "next day" is determined by continuing to count forward when the period is measured after an event and backward when measured before an event.

(6) "Legal Holiday" Defined. "Legal holiday" means:

(A) the day set aside by statute for observing New Year's Day, Martin Luther King Jr.'s Birthday, Washington's Birthday, Memorial Day, Independence Day, Labor Day, Columbus Day, Veterans' Day, Thanksgiving Day, or Christmas Day;

(B) any day declared a holiday by the President or Congress; and

(C) for periods that are measured after an event, any other day declared a holiday by the state where either of the following is located: the district court that rendered the challenged judgment or order, or the circuit clerk's principal office.

(b) Extending time. For good cause, the court may extend the time prescribed by these rules or by its order to perform any act, or may permit an act to be done after that time expires. But the court may not extend the time to file:

(1) a notice of appeal (except as authorized in Rule 4) or a petition for permission to appeal; or

(2) a notice of appeal from or a petition to enjoin, set aside, suspend, modify, enforce, or otherwise review an order of an administrative agency, board, commission, or officer of the United States, unless specifically authorized by law.

(c) Additional time after service. When a party is required or permitted to act within a prescribed period after a paper is served on that party, 3 days are added to the prescribed period unless the paper is delivered on the date of service stated in the proof of service. For purposes of this Rule 26(c), a paper that is served electronically is not treated as delivered on the date of service stated in the proof of service. (Amended effective December 1, 2005; amended effective December 1, 2009.)

Circuit Rule 26. Computation and extension of time.

26.1 Computing Time. Except for briefs and record excerpts, all other papers, including petitions for rehearing, are not timely unless the clerk actually receives them within the time fixed for filing. Briefs and record excerpts are deemed filed on the day sent to the clerk electronically where permitted by 5th Cir. R. 30 and 31, by a third-party commercial carrier for delivery within 3 days, or on the day of mailing if the most expeditious form of delivery by mail is used. The additional 3 days after service by mail, by electronic means, or after delivery to a commercial carrier for delivery within 3 days referred to in Fed. R. App. P. 26(c), applies only to matters served by a party and not to filings with the clerk of such matters as petitions for rehearing under Fed. R. App. P. 40, petitions for rehearing en banc under Fed. R. App. P. 35, and bills of costs under Fed. R. App. P. 39.

26.2 Extensions of Time. The court requires timely filing of all papers within the time period allowed by the rules, without extensions of time, except for good cause. Appeals which are not processed timely will be dismissed for want of prosecution without further notice under 5th Cir. R. 42. If the parties or counsel waive their right to file a reply brief, they must immediately notify the clerk to expedite submitting the case to the court. (Amended Dec. 1, 2002; July 15, 2003; As amended Dec. 1, 2009.)

FRAP 26.1. Corporate disclosure statement.

(a) Who must file. Any nongovernmental corporate party to a proceeding in a court of appeals must file a statement that identifies any parent corporation and any publicly held corporation that owns 10% or more of its stock or states that there is no such corporation.

(b) Time for filing; supplemental filing. A party must file the Rule 26.1(a) statement with the principal brief or upon filing a motion, response, petition, or answer in the court of appeals, whichever occurs first, unless a local rule requires earlier filing. Even if the statement has already been filed, the party's principal brief must include the statement before the table of contents. A party must supplement its statement whenever the information that must be disclosed under Rule 26.1(a) changes.

(c) Number of copies. If the Rule 26.1(a) statement is filed before the principal brief, or if a supplemental statement is filed, the party must file an original and 3 copies unless the court requires a different number by local rule or by order in a particular case. (Amended December 1, 2002.)

Circuit Rule 26.1. Certificate of interested persons.

26.1.1 Corporate Disclosure Statement. The court uses a "Certificate of Interested Persons" in lieu of a Corporate Disclosure Statement. See 5th Cir. R. 28.2.1.

FRAP 27. Motions.

(a) In general.

(1) Application for relief. An application for an order or other relief is made by motion unless these rules prescribe another form. A motion must be in writing unless the court permits otherwise.

(2) Contents of a motion.

(A) Grounds and relief sought. A motion must state with particularity the grounds for the motion, the relief sought, and the legal argument necessary to support it.

(B) Accompanying documents.

(i) Any affidavit or other paper necessary to support a motion must be served and filed with the motion.

(ii) An affidavit must contain only factual information, not legal argument.

(iii) A motion seeking substantive relief must include a copy of the trial court's opinion or agency's decision as a separate exhibit.

(C) Documents barred or not required.

(i) A separate brief supporting or responding to a motion must not be filed.

(ii) A notice of motion is not required.

(iii) A proposed order is not required.

(3) Response.

(A) Time to file. Any party may file a response to a motion; Rule 27(a)(2) governs its contents. The response must be filed within 10 days after service of the motion unless the court shortens or extends the time. A motion authorized by Rules 8, 9, 18, or 41 may be granted before the 10-day period runs only if the court gives reasonable notice to the parties that it intends to act sooner.

(B) Request for affirmative relief. A response may include a motion for affirmative relief. The time to respond to the new motion, and to reply to that response, are governed by Rule 27(a)(3)(A) and (a)(4). The title of the response must alert the court to the request for relief.

(4) Reply to response. Any reply to a response must be filed within 7days after service of the response. A reply must not present matters that do not relate to the response.

(b) Disposition of a motion for a procedural order. The court may act on a motion for a procedural order — including a motion under Rule 26(b) — at any time without awaiting a response, and may, by rule or by order in a particular case, authorize its clerk to act on specified types of procedural motions. A party adversely affected by the court's, or the clerk's, action may file a motion to reconsider, vacate, or modify that action. Timely opposition filed after the motion is granted in whole or in part does not constitute a request to reconsider, vacate, or modify the disposition; a motion requesting that relief must be filed.

(c) Power of a single judge to entertain a motion. A circuit judge may act alone on any motion, but may not dismiss or otherwise determine an appeal or other proceeding. A court of appeals may provide by rule or by order in a particular case that only the court may act on any motion or class of motions. The court may review the action of a single judge.

(d) Form of papers; page limits; and number of copies.

(1) Format.

(A) Reproduction. A motion, response, or reply may be reproduced by any process that yields a clear black image on light paper. The paper must be opaque and unglazed. Only one side of the paper may be used.

(B) Cover. A cover is not required but there must be a caption that includes the case number, the name of the court, the title of the case, and a brief descriptive title indicating the purpose of the motion and identifying the party or parties for whom it is filed. If a cover is used, it must be white.

(C) Binding. The document must be bound in any manner that is secure, does not obscure the text, and permits the document to lie reasonably flat when open.

(D) Paper size, line spacing, and margins. The document must be on 8 ½ by 11 inch paper. The text must be double-spaced, but quotations more than two lines long may be indented and single-spaced. Headings and footnotes may be single-spaced. Margins must be at least one inch on all four sides. Page numbers may be placed in the margins, but no text may appear there.

(E) Typeface and type styles. The document must comply with the typeface requirements of Rule 32(a)(5) and the type-style requirements of Rule 32(a)(6).

(2) Page limits. A motion or a response to a motion must not exceed 20 pages, exclusive of the corporate disclosure statement and accompanying documents authorized by Rule 27(a)(2)(B), unless the court permits or directs otherwise. A reply to a response must not exceed 10 pages.

(3) Number of copies. An original and 3 copies must be filed unless the court requires a different number by local rule or by order in a particular case.

(e) Oral argument. A motion will be decided without oral argument unless the court orders otherwise. (Amended effective December 1, 2005.)

Circuit Rule 27. Motions.

27.1 Clerk May Rule on Certain Motions. Under Fed. R. App. P. 27(b), the clerk has discretion to act on, in accordance with the standards set forth in the applicable rules, or to refer to the court, the procedural motions listed below. The clerk's action is subject to review by a single judge upon a motion for reconsideration made within the 14 or 45 day period set by Fed. R. App. P. 40.

27.1.1 To extend the time for: filing answers or replies to pending motions; paying filing fees; filing motions to proceed in forma pauperis; filing petitions for panel rehearing and rehearing en banc, and for reconsideration of single judge orders, for not longer than 14 days, 30 days if the applicant for extension is a prisoner proceeding pro se; filing briefs as permitted by 5th Cir. R. 31.4; filing bills of costs; and filing applications under the Equal Access to Justice Act.

27.1.2 To rule on motions to file briefs out of time.

27.1.3 To stay further proceedings in appeals.

27.1.4 To correct briefs or pleadings filed in this court at counsel's request.

27.1.5 To stay the issuance of mandates pending certiorari in civil cases only, for no more than 30 days, provided the court has not ordered the mandate issued earlier.

27.1.6 To reinstate appeals dismissed by the clerk.

27.1.7 To enter and issue consent decrees in labor board and other government agency review cases.

27.1.8 To enter CJA Form 20 orders continuing trial court appointment of counsel on appeal for purposes of compensation.

27.1.9 To consolidate appeals.

27.1.10 To withdraw appearances.

27.1.11 To supplement or correct records.

27.1.12 To incorporate records or briefs on former appeals.

27.1.13 To file reply or supplemental briefs in addition to the single reply brief permitted by Fed. R. App. P. 28(c) prior to submission to the court.

27.1.14 To file an amicus curiae brief under Fed. R. App. P. 29 (see 5th Cir. R. 29.4).

27.1.15 To enlarge the number of pages of optional contents in record excerpts.

27.1.16 To extend the length limits for: briefs under Fed. R. App. P. 32(a)(7) and 5th Cir. R. 32; petitions for rehearing en banc and panel rehearing under Fed. R. App. P. 35(b)(2), and 40(b); certificates of appealability and motions for permission to file second or successive habeas corpus applications under 28 U.S.C.S §§ 2254 and 2255, under 5th Cir. R. 22; petitions for permission to appeal under 5th Cir. R. 5; and petitions for mandamus and extraordinary writs under 5th Cir. R. 21.

27.1.17 To proceed in forma pauperis, see Fed. R. App. P. 24 and 28 U.S.C.S. § 1915;

27.1.18 To appoint counsel or to permit appointed counsel to withdraw;

27.1.19 To obtain transcripts at government expense.

27.2 Single Judge May Rule on Certain Motions. Pursuant to Fed. R. App. P. 27(c), any single judge of this court has discretion, subject to review by a panel upon a motion for reconsideration made within the 14 or 45 day period set forth in Fed. R. App. P. 40, to take appropriate action on the following procedural motions:

27.2.1 The motions listed in 5th Cir. R. 27.1 that have been referred to a single judge for initial action, or for single judge reconsideration of a ruling made by the clerk, but the judge is not limited to the time restrictions in 5th Cir. R. 27.1.1.

27.2.2 To permit interventions in agency proceedings pursuant to Fed. R. App. P. 15(d).

27.2.3 To act on applications for certificates of appealability under Fed. R. App. P. 22(b) and 28 U.S.C.S. § 2253 except for death penalty cases where a three judge panel must act.

27.2.4 To extend for good cause the times prescribed by the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure or by the rules of this court except for enlarging the time for initiating an appeal, see Fed. R. App. P. 26(b).

27.2.5 To substitute parties under Fed. R. App. P. 43.

27.2.6 To exercise the power granted in Fed. R. App. P. 8 and 9, respecting stays, or injunctions, or releases in criminal cases pending appeal, and subject to the restrictions set out in those rules; and to exercise the power granted in Fed. R. App. P. 18, respecting stays pending review of agency decisions or orders, subject to the restrictions on the power of a single judge contained in that rule.

27.2.7 To stay the issuance of mandates or to recall same pending certiorari.

27.2.8 To expedite appeals.

27.2.9 To strike a nonconforming brief or record excerpts as provided in 5th Cir. R. 32.5 and to strike other papers not conforming to the Fed. R. App. P. and 5th Cir. R.

27.3 Emergency Motions in Cases Other Than Capital Cases. Parties should not file motions seeking emergency relief unless there is an emergency sufficient to justify disruption of the normal appellate process. In cases not governed by 5th Cir. R. 8.10, motions seeking relief before the expiration of 14 days after filing must, subject to the penalties of Fed. R. App. P. 46(c), be supported by good cause and must:

Be preceded by a telephone call to the clerk's office and to the offices of opposing counsel advising of the intent to file the emergency motion. If time does not permit the filing of the motion by hand delivery or by mail, the clerk may permit filing by facsimile or by other electronic means. In an extraordinary case, the clerk may permit the submission of an oral motion by telephone. If the motion is filed by means other than hand delivery or mail, counsel should also later file the motion by hand delivery or by mail.

Be labeled "Emergency Motion."

State the nature of the emergency and the irreparable harm the movant will suffer if the motion is not granted.

Certify that the facts supporting emergency consideration of the motion are true and complete.

Provide the date by which action is believed to be necessary.

Attach any relevant order or other ruling of the district court as well as copies of all relevant pleadings, briefs, memoranda, or other papers filed by all parties in the district court. If this cannot be done, counsel must state the reason that it cannot be done.

Be served on opposing counsel at the same time and, absent agreement to the contrary with opposing counsel, in the same manner as the emergency motion is filed with the court.

Be filed in the clerk's office by 2:00 p.m. on the day of filing.

27.4 Form of Motions. Parties or counsel must comply with the requirements of Fed. R. App. P. 27 including the length limits of Fed. R. App. P. 27(d)(2). Except for purely procedural matters, motions must include a certificate of interested persons as described in 5th Cir. R. 28.2.1. Where a single judge or the clerk may act only an original and 1 copy need be filed. All motions requiring panel action require an original and 3 copies. All motions must state that the movant has contacted or attempted to contact all other parties and must indicate whether an opposition will be filed.

27.5 Motions To Expedite Appeal. Such motions are presented in the same manner as other motions. Only the court may expedite an appeal and only for good cause. If an appeal is expedited, the clerk will fix a briefing schedule unless a judge directs a specific date. (Amended Dec. 1, 2002; As amended Dec. 1, 2009.)

I.O.P.

General Standards for Ruling on Motions

5th Cir. R. 27 implements Fed. R. App. P. 27(b) and (c) and delegates to single Judges and the Clerk the authority to rule on specified motions, subject to review by the court. This I.O.P. provides the general sense of the court on the disposition of a variety of matters:

Briefs. — The court expects that all briefs will be filed timely. Motions for extension of time to file briefs are disfavored and should be made only in exceptional instances where "good cause" exists. No extension is automatic. If an extension is granted, it will be for the very least amount of time necessary, and except in the most unusually compelling circumstances, will not exceed 30 days in a criminal case, or 40 days in a civil case.

Litigants seeking to file briefs after the due date set in the briefing letter should understand that the court generally will not permit the brief's filing "out of time". However even in the unusual case where out of time filing is authorized, a brief generally will not be filed out of time more than 30 days beyond the original due date in a criminal case, or 40 days in a civil case.

Motions for Extension of Time to File Answers, Replies to Pending Motions or to Pay Filing Fees. — If such motions are granted, extensions generally will not exceed 30 days.

Reinstatement of Cases Dismissed by the Clerk. — The court normally will not reinstate a case dismissed by the clerk under 5th Cir. R. 27.1.6 unless:

The deficiency which caused the dismissal has been remedied; and

The motion for reinstatement is made as soon as reasonably possible and in any event within 45 days of dismissal.

Motions Panels. — Motions panels are drawn randomly from the active judges. These panels also operate as screening panels as discussed in the I.O.P. following 5th Cir. R. 34. The motions panels compositions are changed at the beginning of each court year to permit the judges to sit with other judges in screening and handling administrative motions.

Distribution

To Judges. — Motions requiring judges' consideration are assigned in rotation to all active judges on a routing log.

The clerk assembles a complete set of the motion papers, and any other necessary material and submits them with a routing form to the initiating judge. In single judge matters the initiating judge acts on the motion and returns it to the clerk with an appropriate order. For motions requiring panel action, a single set of papers is prepared, but the initiating judge transmits the file to the next judge with a recommendation. The second judge sends it on to the third judge, who returns the file and an appropriate order to the clerk.

Emergency Motions. — The clerk immediately assigns the matter to the next initiating judge in rotation on the administrative routing log and to the panel members. If the matter requires counsel to contact the initiating judge or panel members personally, the clerk will provide the names of the judges assigned the case, after getting approval from the initiating judge.

The motion papers are distributed as described above, except that a complete set, including any draft order, is forwarded to all members of the panel.

Motions After Assignment to Calendar. — After cases are assigned to the oral argument calendar, motions are circulated to the hearing panel rather than to the standard motions panels. The senior active judge on the panel is considered the initiating judge. The clerk enters orders responding to the motions on behalf of the panel until entry of the opinion.

Post-Decision Motions.

Extension of Time To File Petition for Rehearing or Leave To File Out of Time. — The clerk may act on or refer to the court a timely motion for an extension of time to file a petition for panel rehearing or for rehearing en banc for a period not longer than 14 days, 30 days if the applicant is a prisoner proceeding pro se. Motions for additional time beyond 14 or 30 days, or to file out of time, are submitted to the writing judge, unless he or she is a visiting judge. In that event the matter is referred to the senior active judge on the panel. If the senior active judge dissented, the matter is referred to the other active judge on the panel.

Stay or Recall of Mandate. — The clerk or a single judge, as appropriate, decides a motion for stay or recall of mandate pending action on a petition for writ of certiorari and routes and disposes of it in the same manner as in the preceding paragraph. (See 5th Cir. R. 27.1.5, 27.2.7, and 41).

Motions To Amend, Correct, or Settle the Judgment. — These motions are referred to the writing judge with copies to the panel members.

Remand from Supreme Court of the United States. — Remands from the Supreme Court of the United States are sent to the original panel for disposition when the Supreme Court's judgment is received. Counsel does not need to file a formal motion.

FRAP 28. Briefs.

(a) Appellant's brief. The appellant's brief must contain, under appropriate headings and in the order indicated:

(1) a corporate disclosure statement if required by Rule 26.1;

(2) a table of contents, with page references;

(3) a table of authorities — cases (alphabetically arranged), statutes, and other authorities — with references to the pages of the brief where they are cited;

(4) a jurisdictional statement, including:

(A) the basis for the district court's or agency's subject-matter jurisdiction, with citations to applicable statutory provisions and stating relevant facts establishing jurisdiction;

(B) the basis for the court of appeals' jurisdiction, with citations to applicable statutory provisions and stating relevant facts establishing jurisdiction;

(C) the filing dates establishing the timeliness of the appeal or petition for review; and

(D) an assertion that the appeal is from a final order or judgment that disposes of all parties' claims, or information establishing the court of appeals' jurisdiction on some other basis;

(5) a statement of the issues presented for review;

(6) a statement of the case briefly indicating the nature of the case, the course of proceedings, and the disposition below;

(7) a statement of facts relevant to the issues submitted for review with appropriate references to the record (see Rule 28(e));

(8) a summary of the argument, which must contain a succinct, clear, and accurate statement of the arguments made in the body of the brief, and which must not merely repeat the argument headings;

(9) the argument, which must contain:

(A) appellant's contentions and the reasons for them, with citations to the authorities and parts of the record on which the appellant relies; and

(B) for each issue, a concise statement of the applicable standard of review (which may appear in the discussion of the issue or under a separate heading placed before the discussion of the issues);

(10) a short conclusion stating the precise relief sought; and

(11) the certificate of compliance, if required by Rule 32(a)(7).

(b) Appellee's brief. The appellee's brief must conform to the requirements of Rule 28(a)(1)-(9) and (11), except that none of the following need appear unless the appellee is dissatisfied with the appellant's statement:

(1) the jurisdictional statement;

(2) the statement of the issues;

(3) the statement of the case;

(4) the statement of the facts; and

(5) the statement of the standard of review.

(c) Reply brief. The appellant may file a brief in reply to the appellee's brief. Unless the court permits, no further briefs may be filed. A reply brief must contain a table of contents, with page references, and a table of authorities — cases (alphabetically arranged), statutes, and other authorities — with references to the pages of the reply brief where they are cited.

(d) References to parties. In briefs and at oral argument, counsel should minimize use of the terms "appellant" and "appellee." To make briefs clear, counsel should use the parties' actual names or the designations used in the lower court or agency proceeding, or such descriptive terms as "the employee," "the injured person," "the taxpayer," "the ship," "the stevedore."

(e) References to the record. References to the parts of the record contained in the appendix filed with the appellant's brief must be to the pages of the appendix. If the appendix is prepared after the briefs are filed, a party referring to the record must follow one of the methods detailed in Rule 30(c). If the original record is used under Rule 30(f) and is not consecutively paginated, or if the brief refers to an unreproduced part of the record, any reference must be to the page of the original document. For example:

- Answer p. 7;
- Motion for Judgment p. 2;
- Transcript p. 231.

Only clear abbreviations may be used. A party referring to evidence whose admissibility is in controversy must cite the pages of the appendix or of the transcript at which the evidence was identified, offered, and received or rejected.

(f) Reproduction of statutes, rules, regulations, etc. If the court's determination of the issues presented requires the study of statutes, rules, regulations, etc., the relevant parts must be set out in the brief or in an addendum at the end, or may be supplied to the court in pamphlet form.

(g) [Reserved].

(h) [Reserved].

(i) Briefs in a case involving multiple appellants or appellees. In a case involving more than one appellant or appellee, including consolidated cases, any number of appellants or appellees may join in a brief, and any party may adopt by reference a part of another's brief. Parties may also join in reply briefs.

(j) Citation of supplemental authorities. If pertinent and significant authorities come to a party's attention after the party's brief has been filed — or after oral argument but before decision — a party may promptly advise the circuit clerk by letter, with a copy to all other parties, setting forth the citations. The letter must state the reasons for the supplemental citations, referring either to the page of the brief or to a point argued orally. The body of the letter must not exceed 350 words. Any response must be made promptly and must be similarly limited. (Amended effective December 1, 2005.)

Circuit Rule 28. Briefs.

28.1 Briefs — Technical Requirements. The technical requirements for permissible typefaces, paper size, line spacing, and length of briefs are found in Fed. R. App. P. and 5th Cir. R. 32.

28.2 Briefs — Contents.

28.2.1 Certificate of Interested Persons. The certificate of interested persons required by this rule is broader in scope than the corporate disclosure statement contemplated in Fed. R. App. P. 26.1. The certificate of interested persons provides the court with additional information concerning parties whose participation in a case may raise a recusal issue. A separate corporate disclosure statement is not required. Counsel and unrepresented parties will furnish a certificate for all private (non-governmental) parties, both appellants and appellees, which must be incorporated on the first page of each brief before the table of contents or index, and which must certify a complete list of all persons, associations of persons, firms, partnerships, corporations, guarantors, insurers, affiliates, parent corporations, or other legal entities who or which are financially interested in the outcome of the litigation. If a large group of persons or firms can be specified by a generic description, individual listing is not necessary. Each certificate must also list the names of opposing law firms and/or counsel in the case. The certificate must include all information called for by Fed. R. App. P. 26.1(a). Counsel and unrepresented parties must supplement their certificates of interested persons whenever the information that must be disclosed changes.

(a) Each certificate must list all persons known to counsel to be interested, on all sides of the case, whether or not represented by counsel furnishing the certificate. Counsel has the burden to ascertain and certify the true facts to the court.

(b) The certificate must be in the following form:

(1) Number and Style of Case;

(2) The undersigned counsel of record certifies that the following listed persons and entities as described in the fourth sentence of Rule 28.2.1 have an interest in the outcome of this case. These representations are made in order that the judges of this court may evaluate possible disqualification or recusal.

(Here list names of all such persons and entities and identify their connection and interest.)

Attorney of record for _____

28.2.2 Record References. Every assertion in briefs regarding matter in the record must be supported by a reference to the page number of the original record, whether in paper or electronic form, where the matter is found.

28.2.3 Request for Oral Argument. Counsel for appellant must include in a preamble to appellant's principal brief a short statement why oral argument would be helpful, or a statement that appellant waives oral argument. Appellee's counsel must likewise include in appellee's brief a statement why oral argument is or is not needed. The court will give these statements due, though not controlling, weight in determining whether to hold oral argument. See Fed. R. App. P. 34(a) and (f) and 5th Cir. R. 34.2.

28.3 Brief — Order of Contents. The order of contents of the brief is governed by Fed. R. App. P. 28 and this rule and shall be as follows:

(a) Certificate of interested persons required by 5th Cir. R. 28.2.1;

(b) Statement regarding oral argument required by 5th Cir. R. 28.2.3 (See Fed. R. App. P. 34(a)(1);

(c) A table of contents, with page references (see Fed. R. App. P. 28 (a)(2));

(e) A jurisdictional statement as required by Fed. R. App. P. 28(a)(4)(A) through (D);

(f) A statement of issues presented for review (see Fed. R. App. P. 28 (a)(5));

(g) A statement of the case (see Fed. R. App. P. 28(a)(6));

(h) A statement of facts relevant to the issues submitted for review (see Fed. R. App. P. 28(a)(7));

(i) A summary of the argument (see Fed. R. App. P. 28(a)(8));

(j) The argument (see Fed. R. App. P. 28(a)(9));

(k) A short conclusion stating the precise relief sought (see Fed. R. App. P. 28 (a)(10));

(l) A signature of counsel or a party as required by Fed. R. App. P. 32(d);

(m) A certificate of service in the form required by Fed. R. App. P. 25;

(n) A certificate of compliance if required by Fed. R. App. P. 32(a)(7) and 5th Cir. R. 32.3.

28.4 Supplemental Briefs. The rules do not permit the filing of supplemental briefs without leave of court, but there are some occasions, particularly after a case is orally argued or submitted on the summary calendar, where the court will call for supplemental briefs on particular issues. Also, where intervening decisions or new developments should be brought to the court's attention, counsel may direct a letter, not a supplemental brief, to the clerk with citations and succinct comment. See Fed. R. App. P. 28(j). If a new case is not reported, copies of the decision should be appended. The letter must be filed in 4 copies, and served on opposing counsel.

28.5 Signing the Brief. See Fed. R. App. P. 32(d). The signature requirement is interpreted broadly, and the attorney of record may designate another person to sign the brief for him or her. Where counsel for a particular party reside in different locations, it is not necessary to incur the expense of sending the brief from one person to another for multiple signatures.

28.6 Pro Se Briefs. Unless specifically directed by court order, pro se motions, briefs or correspondence will not be filed if the party is represented by counsel.

28.7 Citation to Unpublished Opinions, Orders, etc. Fed. R. App. P. 32.1(a) permits citation to unpublished judicial dispositions. Parties citing to such dispositions must comply with Fed. R. App. P. 32.1(b). If a party does not need to submit a copy of an unpublished disposition, the party must provide a citation to the disposition in a publicly accessible electronic database. (Amended Dec. 1, 2002; July 15, 2003; Dec. 1, 2005; Dec. 1, 2006; Dec. 1, 2007; As amended Dec. 1, 2009.)

I.O.P.

Miscellaneous Brief Information

(A) Acknowledgment of Briefs. — The clerk does not acknowledge the filing of briefs unless counsel or a party makes a special request.

(B) Sample Briefs and Record Excerpts. — Upon request, the clerk may loan sample briefs and record excerpts to counsel and non-incarcerated pro se litigants. Because pro se prisoner briefs are not held to the same rigid standards as other briefs, copies of briefs are generally not sent to prisoners. Instead other informational material may be sent. Postage fees may be required before the materials are sent.

(C) Checklist Available. — A copy of the checklist used by the clerk in examining briefs is available on request.

FRAP 28.1. Cross-Appeals.

(a) Applicability. This rule applies to a case in which a cross-appeal is filed. Rules 28(a)-(c), 31(a)(1), 32(a)(2), and 32(a)(7)(A)-(B) do not apply to such a case, except as otherwise provided in this rule.

(b) Designation of Appellant. The party who files a notice of appeal first is the appellant for the purposes of this rule and Rules 30 and 34. If notices are filed on the same day, the plaintiff in the proceeding below is the appellant. These designations may be modified by the parties' agreement or by court order.

(c) Briefs. In a case involving a cross-appeal:

(1) Appellant's Principal Brief. The appellant must file a principal brief in the appeal. That brief must comply with Rule 28(a).

(2) Appellee's Principal and Response Brief. The appellee must file a principal brief in the cross-appeal and must, in the same brief, respond to the principal brief in the appeal. That appellee's brief must comply with Rule 28(a), except that the brief need not include a statement of the case or a statement of the facts unless the appellee is dissatisfied with the appellant's statement.

(3) Appellant's Response and Reply Brief. The appellant must file a brief that responds to the principal brief in the cross-appeal and may, in the same brief, reply to the response in the appeal. That brief must comply with Rule 28(a)(2)-(9) and (11), except that none of the following need appear unless the appellant is dissatisfied with the appellee's statement in the cross-appeal:

(A) the jurisdictional statement;

(B) the statement of the issues;

(C) the statement of the case;

(D) the statement of the facts; and

(E) the statement of the standard of review.

(4) Appellee's Reply Brief. The appellee may file a brief in reply to the response in the cross-appeal. That brief must comply with Rule 28(a)(2)-(3) and (11) and must be limited to the issues presented by the cross-appeal.

(5) No Further Briefs. Unless the court permits, no further briefs may be filed in a case involving a cross-appeal.

(d) Cover. Except for filings by unrepresented parties, the cover of the appellant's principal brief must be blue; the appellee's principal and response brief, red; the appellant's response and reply brief, yellow; the appellee's reply brief, gray; an intervenor's or amicus curiae's brief, green; and any supplemental brief, tan. The front cover of a brief must contain the information required by Rule 32(a)(2).

(e) Length.

(1) Page Limitation. Unless it complies with Rule 28.1(e)(2) and (3), the appellant's principal brief must not exceed 30 pages; the appellee's principal and response brief, 35 pages; the appellant's response and reply brief, 30 pages; and the appellee's reply brief, 15 pages.

(2) Type-Volume Limitation.

(A) The appellant's principal brief or the appellant's response and reply brief is acceptable if:

(i) it contains no more than 14,000 words; or

(ii) it uses a monospaced face and contains no more than 1,300 lines of text.

(B) The appellee's principal and response brief is acceptable if:

(i) it contains no more than 16,500 words; or

(ii) it uses a monospaced face and contains no more than 1,500 lines of text.

(C) The appellee's reply brief is acceptable if it contains no more than half of the type volume specified in Rule 28.1(e)(2)(A).

(3) Certificate of Compliance. A brief submitted under Rule 28.1(e)(2) must comply with Rule 32(a)(7)(C).

(f) Time to Serve and File a Brief. Briefs must be served and filed as follows:

(1) the appellant's principal brief, within 40 days after the record is filed;

(2) the appellee's principal and response brief, within 30 days after the appellant's principal brief is served;

(3) the appellant's response and reply brief, within 30 days after the appellee's principal and response brief is served; and

(4) the appellee's reply brief, within 14 days after the appellant's response and reply brief is served, but at least 7 days before argument unless the court, for good cause, allows a later filing. (Adopted effective December 1, 2005; amended effective December 1, 2009.)

FRAP 29. Brief of an Amicus Curiae.

(a) When permitted. The United States or its officer or agency, or a state may file an amicus-curiae brief without the consent of the parties or leave of court. Any other amicus curiae may file a brief only by leave of court or if the brief states that all parties have consented to its filing.

(b) Motion for leave to file. The motion must be accompanied by the proposed brief and state:

(1) the movant's interest; and

(2) the reason why an amicus brief is desirable and why the matters asserted are relevant to the disposition of the case.

(c) Contents and form. An amicus brief must comply with Rule 32. In addition to the requirements of Rule 32, the cover must identify the party or parties supported and indicate whether the brief supports affirmance or reversal. An amicus brief need not comply with Rule 28, but must include the following:

(1) if the amicus curiae is a corporation, a disclosure statement like that required of parties by Rule 26.1;

(2) a table of contents, with page references;

(3) a table of authorities — cases (alphabetically arranged), statutes and other authorities — with references to the pages of the brief where they are cited;

(4) a concise statement of the identity of the amicus curiae, its interest in the case, and the source of its authority to file;

(5) unless the amicus curiae is one listed in the first sentence of Rule 29(a), a statement that indicates whether:

(A) a party's counsel authored the brief in whole or in part;

(B) a party or a party's counsel contributed money that was intended to fund preparing or submitting the brief;

(C) a person - other than the amicus curiae, its members, or its counsel - contributed money that was intended to fund preparing or submitting the brief and, if so identifies each such person;

(6) argument, which may be preceded by a summary and which need not include a statement of the applicable standard of review; and

(7) a certificate of compliance, if required by Rule 32(a)(7).

(d) Length. Except by the court's permission, an amicus brief may be no more than one-half the maximum length authorized by these rules for a party's principal brief. If the court grants a party permission to file a longer brief, that extension does not affect the length of an amicus brief.

(e) Time for filing. An amicus curiae must file its brief, accompanied by a motion for filing when necessary, no later than 7 days after the principal brief of the party being supported is filed. An amicus curiae that does not support either party must file its brief no later than 7 days after the appellant's or petitioner's principal brief is filed. A court may grant leave for later filing, specifying the time within which an opposing party may answer.

(f) Reply brief. Except by the court's permission, an amicus curiae may not file a reply brief.

(g) Oral argument. An amicus curiae may participate in oral argument only with the court's permission. (Amended effective December 1, 2010.)

Circuit Rule 29. Brief of an Amicus Curiae.

29.1 Time for Filing Motion. Those wishing to file an amicus curiae brief should file a motion within 7 days after the filing of the principal brief of the party whose position the amicus brief will support.

29.2 Contents and Form. Briefs filed under this rule must comply with the applicable Fed. R. App. P. provisions and with 5th Cir. R. 31 and 32. The brief must include a supplemental statement of interested parties, if necessary to fully disclose all those with an interest in the amicus brief. The brief should avoid the repetition of facts or legal arguments contained in the principal brief and should focus on points either not made or not adequately discussed in those briefs. Any non-conforming brief may be stricken, on motion or sua sponte.

29.3 Length of Briefs. See Fed. R. App. P. 29(d).

29.4 Denial of Amicus Curiae Status. After a panel opinion is issued, amicus curiae status will not be permitted if the allowance would result in the disqualification of any member of the panel or of the en banc court.

I.O.P.

FRAP 30. Appendix to the briefs.

(a) Appellant's responsibility.

(1) Contents of the appendix. The appellant must prepare and file an appendix to the briefs containing:

(A) the relevant docket entries in the proceeding below;

(B) the relevant portions of the pleadings, charge, findings, or opinion;

(C) the judgment, order, or decision in question; and

(D) other parts of the record to which the parties wish to direct the court's attention.

(2) Excluded material. Memoranda of law in the district court should not be included in the appendix unless they have independent relevance. Parts of the record may be relied on by the court or the parties even though not included in the appendix.

(3) Time to file; number of copies. Unless filing is deferred under Rule 30(c), the appellant must file 10 copies of the appendix with the brief and must serve one copy on counsel for each party separately represented. An unrepresented party proceeding in forma pauperis must file 4 legible copies with the clerk, and one copy must be served on counsel for each separately represented party. The court may by local rule or by order in a particular case require the filing or service of a different number.

(b) All parties' responsibilities.

(1) Determining the contents of the appendix . The parties are encouraged to agree on the contents of the appendix. In the absence of an agreement, the appellant must, within 14 days after the record is filed, serve on the appellee a designation of the parts of the record the appellant intends to include in the appendix and a statement of the issues the appellant intends to present for review. The appellee may, within 14 days after receiving the designation, serve on the appellant a designation of additional parts to which it wishes to direct the court's attention. The appellant must include the designated parts in the appendix. The parties must not engage in unnecessary designation of parts of the record, because the entire record is available to the court. This paragraph applies also to a cross-appellant and a cross-appellee.

(2) Costs of appendix. Unless the parties agree otherwise, the appellant must pay the cost of the appendix. If the appellant considers parts of the record designated by the appellee to be unnecessary, the appellant may advise the appellee, who must then advance the cost of including those parts. The cost of the appendix is a taxable cost. But if any party causes unnecessary parts of the record to be included in the appendix, the court may impose the cost of those parts on that party. Each circuit must, by local rule, provide for sanctions against attorneys who unreasonably and vexatiously increase litigation costs by including unnecessary material in the appendix.

(c) Deferred appendix.

(1) Deferral until after briefs are filed. The court may provide by rule for classes of cases or by order in a particular case that preparation of the appendix may be deferred until after the briefs have been filed and that the appendix may be filed 21 days after the appellee's brief is served. Even though the filing of the appendix may be deferred, Rule 30(b) applies; except that a party must designate the parts of the record it wants included in the appendix when it serves its brief, and need not include a statement of the issues presented.

(2) References to the record.

(A) If the deferred appendix is used, the parties may cite in their briefs the pertinent pages of the record. When the appendix is prepared, the record pages cited in the briefs must be indicated by inserting record page numbers, in brackets, at places in the appendix where those pages of the record appear.

(B) A party who wants to refer directly to pages of the appendix may serve and file copies of the brief within the time required by Rule 31(a), containing appropriate references to pertinent pages of the record. In that event, within 14 days after the appendix is filed, the party must serve and file copies of the brief, containing references to the pages of the appendix in place of or in addition to the references to the pertinent pages of the record. Except for the correction of typographical errors, no other changes may be made to the brief.

(e) Reproduction of exhibits. Exhibits designated for inclusion in the appendix may be reproduced in a separate volume, or volumes, suitably indexed. Four copies must be filed with the appendix, and one copy must be served on counsel for each separately represented party. If a transcript of a proceeding before an administrative agency, board, commission, or officer was used in a district-court action and has been designated for inclusion in the appendix, the transcript must be placed in the appendix as an exhibit.

(f) Appeal on the original record without an appendix. The court may, either by rule for all cases or classes of cases or by order in a particular case, dispense with the appendix and permit an appeal to proceed on the original record with any copies of the record, or relevant parts, that the court may order the parties to file.

Circuit Rule 30. Appendix to the briefs.

30.1 Records on Appeal/Record Excerpts/Appendix — Appeals from District Courts, the Tax Court, and Agencies. Appeals from district courts and the Tax Court are decided on the original record on appeal (ROA). The clerk is authorized to require the party receiving the ROA to pay reasonable shipping costs as a condition of receiving the record. Moreover, counsel and unrepresented parties must review the ROA within 20 days of dispatch from the clerk's office and advise electronically or in writing both the appropriate District Court (or the Tax Court, if appropriate) and Fifth Circuit clerk's offices of any errors in, or omissions from, the ROA. Failure to comply may result in a denial of any requested extension of time to file a brief due to an alleged error in, or incomplete ROA. Record excerpts are filed in lieu of the appendix prescribed by Fed. R. App. P. 30. Petitions for review or enforcement of agency orders are governed by 5th Cir. R. 30.2, but parties may be required to pay reasonable shipping costs, and are responsible for timely review of the record and the notification requirements set out above.

30.1.1 Purpose. The record excerpts are intended primarily to assist the judges in making the screening decision on the need for oral argument and in preparing for oral argument. Counsel need excerpt only those parts of the record that will assist in these functions.

30.1.2 Filing. Four paper copies of excerpts of the district court record must accompany the appellant's brief, see 5th Cir. R. 30.1.4 and 30.1.5. If exempt from electronic filing under 5th Cir. R. 25.2, all appellants represented by counsel must file an electronic copy of the record excerpts on a CD, computer diskette, or such other electronic medium as the clerk may authorize. The electronic copy must be in a single Portable Document Format (PDF) file; contain nothing other than the record excerpts; and have as the first page of the electronic copy an index to the contents. If submitted on a CD, diskette, or other authorized physical media, the electronic version must have a label containing the case name and docket number and state "Record Excerpts." The appellant must serve a paper and electronic copy of the excerpts on counsel for each of the parties separately represented; a paper copy on any party proceeding pro se, and an electronic copy, if the pro se party is not an inmate confined in an institution. The appellee may similarly submit and serve additional record excerpts with the appellee's principal brief, with the required copies furnished to the clerk accompanying the appellee's brief.

30.1.3 Prisoner Petitions Without Representation by Counsel. Prisoners without counsel are not required to prepare and file record excerpts.

30.1.4 Mandatory Contents. The record excerpts must contain copies of the following portions of the district court record:

(a) The docket sheet;

(b) The notice of appeal;

(c) The indictment in criminal cases;

(d) The jury's verdict in all cases;

(e) The judgment or interlocutory order appealed;

(f) Any other orders or rulings sought to be reviewed;

(g) Any relevant magistrate judge's report and recommendation;

(h) Any supporting opinion or findings of fact and conclusions of law filed, or transcript pages of any such delivered orally; and

(i) A certificate of service complying with Fed. R. App. P. 25.

30.1.5 Optional Contents. The record excerpts may include those parts of the record, referred to in the briefs including:

(a) Essential pleadings or relevant portions thereof;

(b) The parts of the Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e) pretrial order relevant to any issue on appeal;

(c) Any jury instruction given or refused that presents an issue on appeal, together with any objection and the court's ruling, and any other relevant part of the jury charge;

(d) Findings and conclusions of the administrative law judge, if the appeal is of a court order reviewing an administrative agency determination;

(e) A copy of the relevant pages of the transcript when the appeal challenges the admission or exclusion of evidence or any other interlocutory ruling or order; and

(f) The relevant parts of any written exhibit (including affidavits) that present an issue on appeal.

30.1.6 Length. The optional contents of the record excerpts must not exceed 40 pages unless authorized by the court.

30.1.7 Form. The record excerpts must:

(a) Have a numbered table of contents, with citation to the record, beginning with the lower court docket sheet;

(b) Be on letter-size, light paper, reproduced by any process that results in a clear black image. Care must be taken to reproduce fully the document filing date column on the docket sheet;

(c) Be tabbed to correspond to the numbers assigned in the table of contents;

(d) Be bound to expose fully the filing date columns and allow the document to lie reasonably flat when opened. The record excerpts must have a durable white cover conforming to Fed. R. App. P. 32(a)(2), except that it will be denominated "RECORD EXCERPTS."

The documents constituting the record excerpts do not need to be certified, but if the clerk's "filed" markings are either absent or not clearly legible, the accurate filing information must be typed or written thereon.

30.1.8. Nonconforming record excerpts. Record excerpts which do not conform to the requirements of this rule will be filed, but must be corrected within the time directed by the clerk. Failure to file corrected record excerpts may result in their being stricken and imposition of sanctions, under 5th Cir. R. 32.5.

30.2 Appendix — Agency Review Proceedings. Petitions for review or enforcement of orders of an administrative agency, board, commission or officer must proceed on the original record on review,without a Fed. R. App. P. 30 required appendix. If a party requests use of the original record, the clerk may require payment of reasonable shipping costs, and the party is responsible for timely review and notification to the agency and the Fifth Circuit clerk's office of any record deficiencies, see 5th Cir. R. 30.1.

(a) If a certified list of documents comprising the record is filed in lieu of the formal record, petitioner must prepare and file with the court and serve on the agency, board, or commission a copy of the portions of the record relied upon by the parties in their briefs. The list of documents must be suitably covered, numbered, and indexed and filed within 21 days of the filing of respondent's brief.

(b) Except in review proceedings covered by 5th Cir. R. 15.3, at the time of filing petitioner's brief, petitioner must file separately 4 copies of any order sought to be reviewed and any supporting opinion, findings of fact, or conclusions of law filed by the agency, board, commission, or officer. (Amended December 1, 2007; as amended December 1, 2009.)

FRAP 31. Serving and filing briefs.

(a) Time to serve and file a brief.

(1) The appellant must serve and file a brief within 40 days after the record is filed. The appellee must serve and file a brief within 30 days after the appellant's brief is served. The appellant may serve and file a reply brief within 14 days after service of the appellee's brief but a reply brief must be filed at least 7 days before argument, unless the court, for good cause, allows a later filing.

(2) A court of appeals that routinely considers cases on the merits promptly after the briefs are filed may shorten the time to serve and file briefs, either by local rule or by order in a particular case.

(b) Number of copies. Twenty-five copies of each brief must be filed with the clerk and 2 copies must be served on each unrepresented party and on counsel for each separately represented party. An unrepresented party proceeding in forma pauperis must file 4 legible copies with the clerk, and one copy must be served on each unrepresented party and on counsel for each separately represented party. The court may by local rule or by order in a particular case require the filing or service of a different number.

(c) Consequence of failure to file. If an appellant fails to file a brief within the time provided by this rule, or within an extended time, an appellee may move to dismiss the appeal. An appellee who fails to file a brief will not be heard at oral argument unless the court grants permission.

Circuit Rule 31. Filing and service of a brief.

31.1 Briefs — Number of Copies; Computer Generated Briefs. Only 7 paper copies of briefs need be filed. Where a party is represented by counsel who is exempt from electronic filing under 5th Cir. R. 25.2, and counsel generates his or her brief by computer, the party also must submit an electronic version of the brief to the court. The filing party must serve unrepresented parties and counsel for separately represented parties in accordance with Fed. R. App. P. 31(b), and also must serve an electronic version of the brief on each party separately represented. However, the parties may agree in writing to waive service of paper copies of the brief and to be served with an electronic copy only. The electronic copy of the brief must be filed on a CD, computer diskette, or such other electronic medium as the clerk may authorize.

The electronic version must:

be prepared in a single Portable Document Format (PDF) file. (Briefs scanned into PDF are not acceptable); contain nothing other than the brief; have as the first page of the electronic file a brief cover page as required by Fed. R. App. P. 32(a)(2).

If submitted on a CD, diskette, or other authorized physical media, the electronic version must have a label containing the case name and docket number, and identifying the brief as the appellant's, appellee's, etc.

The proof of service must comply with Fed. R. App. P. 25(d)(1)(B) & (2).

31.2 Briefs — Time for Filing Briefs of Intervenors or Amicus Curiae. The time for filing the brief of the intervenor or amicus is extended until 7 days after the filing of the principal brief of the party supported by the intervenor or amicus.

31.3 Briefs — Time for Mailing or Delivery to a Commercial Carrier. The appellant must send his or her brief to the clerk not later than 40 days after the date of the briefing notice. Pursuant to Fed. R. App. P. 26(c), the appellee has 33 days from the appellant's date of the certificate of service to place the appellee's brief in the mail, file it with the clerk electronically where permitted, or to give it to a third-party commercial carrier for delivery within 3 calendar days. This rule may not be combined with the additional time provisions of Fed. R. App. P. 26(c) to give the appellee 36 days to file a brief. The certificate of service required by Fed. R. App. P. 25(d) is placed in the brief as specified in 5th Cir. R. 28.3, and must be dated. See 5th Cir. R. 39.2 for limitations on recovery of certain mailing and commercial delivery costs.

31.4 Briefs — Time for Filing.

31.4.1 General Provisions. The court expects briefs to be filed timely and without extensions in the vast majority of cases. No extensions are automatic, even where the request is unopposed. Any requests for extensions should be made sparingly. No extension can be granted without good cause shown as required by Fed. R. App. P. 26(b), or without meeting the additional requirements contained in the 5th Cir. R.

(a) A request for extension should be made as soon as it is reasonably possible to foresee the need for the extension. The clerk must receive a request for extension at least 7 days before the due date, unless the movant demonstrates, in detail, that the facts that form the basis of the motion either did not exist earlier or were not and with due diligence could not have been known earlier.

(b) As specified in 5th Cir. R. 27.1, the movant must indicate that all other parties have been contacted and whether the motion is opposed. Movants should request only as much time as is absolutely needed. The pendency of a motion for extension does not toll the time for compliance.

31.4.2 Grounds for Extensions. As justification for extensions, generalities, such as that the purpose of the motion is not for delay or that counsel is too busy, are not sufficient. Grounds that may merit consideration for extensions are, without limitation, the following, which must be set forth if claimed as a reason in any motion for an extension beyond 30 days:

(a) Engagement of counsel in other litigation, provided such litigation is identified by caption, number, and court, and there is set forth:

(1) A description of any effort taken to defer the other litigation and of any ruling thereon;

(2) An explanation of why other litigation should receive priority over the case at hand; and

(3) Other relevant circumstances, including why other associated counsel cannot prepare the brief or relieve the movant's counsel of the other litigation.

(b) The matter is so complex that an adequate brief cannot reasonably be prepared when due.

(c) Extreme hardship will result unless an extension is granted, in which event the nature of the hardship must be set forth in detail.

31.4.3 Levels of Extensions. There are two levels of extensions: a Level 1 extension of 1-30 days from the original due date; and a Level 2 extension of more than 30 days from the original due date.

31.4.3.1 Level 1 Extensions. The clerk is authorized to act on or refer to the court Level 1 extensions. The court prefers that an unopposed request be made by telephone, but it may be by written motion or letter. When making the request, the movant must explain what good cause exists for the extension. If the extension is granted by telephone, the movant will immediately send a confirming letter to the clerk, with copies to all parties.

An opposed request for a Level 1 extension must be made by written motion setting forth why there is good cause. The motion must state the initial due date, whether any other extension has been granted, the length of the requested extension, and which parties have expressed opposition.

31.4.3.2 Level 2 Extensions. The clerk is authorized to act on or refer to the court Level 2 extensions. The request must be made by written motion, with copies to all parties, stating the initial due date, whether any other extension has been granted, the length of the requested extension, and whether the motion is opposed.

More than ordinary good cause is required for a Level 2 extension, and Level 2 extensions will be granted only under the most extraordinary of circumstances. The movant must demonstrate diligence and substantial need and must show in detail what special circumstances exist that make a Level 1 extension insufficient.

31.4.4. Extensions for Reply Briefs. The court greatly disfavors all extensions of time for filing reply briefs. The court assumes that the parties have had ample opportunity to present their arguments in their initial briefs and that extensions for reply briefs only delay submission of the case to the court. (Amended Dec. 1, 2002; July 15, 2003; Nov. 1, 2004; Dec. 1, 2007; As amended Dec. 1, 2009.)

I.O.P.

The court continues to receive a large number of motions requesting extensions of time to file briefs, or to file briefs out of time, which are considered extension requests. The majority of these motions were by counsel, and frequently were made in direct criminal appeals which have the longest average processing time from filing the notice of appeal to filing the last brief. To assure that this court decides cases more expeditiously, the court's goals are to: 1) Reduce the number of motions to extend time to file briefs; and 2) To shorten the amount of time granted. In general and absent the most compelling of reasons, no more than 30 days extension of time will be granted in criminal cases and no more than 40 days extension of time will be granted in civil cases.

FRAP 32. Form of briefs, appendices, and other papers.

(a) Form of a brief.

(1) Reproduction.

(A) A brief may be reproduced by any process that yields a clear black image on light paper. The paper must be opaque and unglazed. Only one side of the paper may be used.

(B) Text must be reproduced with a clarity that equals or exceeds the output of a laser printer.

(C) Photographs, illustrations, and tables may be reproduced by any method that results in a good copy of the original; a glossy finish is acceptable if the original is glossy.

(2) Cover. Except for filings by unrepresented parties, the cover of the appellant's brief must be blue; the appellee's, red; an intervenor's or amicus curiae's, green; any reply brief, gray; and any supplemental brief, tan. The front cover of a brief must contain:

(A) the number of the case centered at the top;

(B) the name of the court;

(C) the title of the case (see Rule 12(a));

(D) the nature of the proceeding (e.g., Appeal, Petition for Review) and the name of the court, agency, or board below;

(E) the title of the brief, identifying the party or parties for whom the brief is filed; and

(F) the name, office address, and telephone number of counsel representing the party for whom the brief is filed.

(3) Binding. The brief must be bound in any manner that is secure, does not obscure the text, and permits the brief to lie reasonably flat when open.

(4) Paper size, line spacing, and margins. The brief must be on 8½ by 11 inch paper. The text must be double-spaced, but quotations more than two lines long may be indented and single-spaced. Headings and footnotes may be single-spaced. Margins must be at least one inch on all four sides. Page numbers may be placed in the margins, but no text may appear there.

(5) Typeface. Either a proportionally spaced or a monospaced face may be used.

(A) A proportionally spaced face must include serifs, but sans-serif type may be used in headings and captions. A proportionally spaced face must be 14-point or larger.

(B) A monospaced face may not contain more than 10½ characters per inch.

(6) Type styles. A brief must be set in a plain, roman style, although italics or boldface may be used for emphasis. Case names must be italicized or underlined.

(7) Length.

(A) Page limitation. A principal brief may not exceed 30 pages, or a reply brief 15 pages, unless it complies with Rule 32(a)(7)(B) and (C).

(B) Type-volume limitation.

(i) A principal brief is acceptable if:

- it contains no more than 14,000 words; or
- it uses a monospaced face and contains no more than 1,300 lines of text.

(ii) A reply brief is acceptable if it contains no more than half of the type volume specified in Rule 32(a)(7)(B)(i).

(iii) Headings, footnotes, and quotations count toward the word and line limitations. The corporate disclosure statement, table of contents, table of citations, statement with respect to oral argument, any addendum containing statutes, rules or regulations, and any certificates of counsel do not count toward the limitation.

(C) Certificate of compliance.

(i) A brief submitted under Rules 28.1(e)(2) or 32(a)(7)(B) must include a certificate by the attorney, or an unrepresented party, that the brief complies with the type-volume limitation. The person preparing the certificate may rely on the word or line count of the word-processing system used to prepare the brief. The certificate must state either:

- the number of words in the brief; or
- the number of lines of monospaced type in the brief.

(ii) Form 6 in the Appendix of Forms is a suggested form of a certificate of compliance. Use of Form 6 must be regarded as sufficient to meet the requirements of Rules 28.1(e)(3) and 32(a)(7)(C)(i).

(b) Form of an appendix. An appendix must comply with Rule 32(a)(1),(2),(3), and (4), with the following exceptions:

(1) The cover of a separately bound appendix must be white.

(2) An appendix may include a legible photocopy of any document found in the record or of a printed judicial or agency decision.

(3) When necessary to facilitate inclusion of odd-sized documents such as technical drawings, an appendix may be a size other than 8½ by 11 inches, and need not lie reasonably flat when opened.

(c) Form of other papers.

(1) Motion. The form of a motion is governed by Rule 27(d).

(2) Other papers. Any other paper, including a petition for panel rehearing and a petition for hearing or rehearing en banc, and any response to such a petition, must be reproduced in the manner prescribed by Rule 32(a), with the following exceptions:

(A) a cover is not necessary if the caption and signature page of the paper together contain the information required by Rule 32(a)(2). If a cover is used, it must be white.

(B) Rule 32(a)(7) does not apply.

(d) Signature. Every brief, motion, or other paper filed with the court must be signed by the party filing the paper or, if the party is represented, by one of the party's attorneys.

(e) Local Variation. Every court of appeals must accept documents that comply with the form requirements of this rule. By local rule or order in a particular case a court of appeals may accept documents that do not meet all of the form requirements of this rule. (Amended effective December 1, 2005.)

Circuit Rule 32. Form of briefs, the appendix and other papers.

32.1 Typeface. Must comply with Fed. R. App. P. 32(a)(5), except that footnotes may be 12 point or larger in proportionally spaced typeface, or 12½ characters per inch or larger in monospaced typeface.

32.2 Type Volume Limitations. See Fed. R. App. P. 32(a)(7)(B)(iii), and for cross-appeals Fed. R. App. P. 28.1(e). The certificate of interested parties does not count toward the limitation.

32.3 Certificate of Compliance. See Form 6 in the Appendix of Forms to the Fed. R. App. P. A material misrepresentation in the certificate of compliance may result in striking the brief and in sanctions against the person signing the brief.

32.4 Motions for Extra-Length Briefs. A motion to file a brief in excess of the page length or word-volume limitations must be filed at least 10 days in advance of the brief's due date. The court looks upon such motions with great disfavor and will grant them only for extraordinary and compelling reasons. If a motion to file an extra-length brief is submitted, a draft copy of the brief must be submitted with the motion.

32.5 Rejection of Briefs and Record Excerpts. If all copies of briefs and record excerpts do not conform to 5th Cir. R. 28 and 30 and all provisions of Fed. R. App. P. 32, the clerk will file the briefs and record excerpts, but is authorized to return all nonconforming copies. An extension of 10 days is allowed for resubmission in a conforming format. The court may strike briefs and record excerpts if the party fails to submit conforming briefs or record excerpts within 14 days. If at any time the clerk believes the non-conformance is egregious or in bad faith, the clerk, in the alternative to filing the nonconforming matters, may submit them to a single judge, who can reject them and direct that they be returned unfiled. Failure to submit conforming briefs or record excerpts may result in imposition of sanctions. (Amended Dec. 1, 2002; July 15, 2003; Dec. 1, 2005; Dec. 1, 2006; As amended Dec. 1, 2009.)

I.O.P.

Form of Record Excerpts/Appendix — See 5th Cir. R. 30.

FRAP 32.1. Citing Judicial Dispositions.

(a) Citation Permitted. A court may not prohibit or restrict the citation of federal judicial opinions, orders, judgments, or other written dispositions that have been:

(1) designated as "unpublished," "not for publication," "non-precedential," "not precedent," or the like; and

(2) issued on or after January 1, 2007.

(b) Copies Required. If a party cites a federal judicial opinion, order, judgment, or other written disposition that is not available in a publicly accessible electronic database, the party must file and serve a copy of that opinion, order, judgment, or disposition with the brief or other paper in which it is cited. (Adopted effective December 1, 2006.)

FRAP 33. Appeal conferences.

The court may direct the attorneys — and, when appropriate, the parties — to participate in one or more conferences to address any matter that may aid in disposing of the proceedings, including simplifying the issues and discussing settlement. A judge or other person designated by the court may preside over the conference, which may be conducted in person or by telephone. Before a settlement conference, the attorneys must consult with their clients and obtain as much authority as feasible to settle the case. The court may, as a result of the conference, enter an order controlling the course of the proceedings or implementing any settlement agreement.

I.O.P.

Appeal Conferences — See 5th Cir. R. 15.3.5.

FRAP 34. Oral argument.

(a) In general.

(1) Party's statement. Any party may file, or a court may require by local rule, a statement explaining why oral argument should, or need not, be permitted.

(2) Standards. Oral argument must be allowed in every case unless a panel of three judges who have examined the briefs and record unanimously agrees that oral argument is unnecessary for any of the following reasons:

(A) the appeal is frivolous;

(B) the dispositive issue or issues have been authoritatively decided; or

(C) the facts and legal arguments are adequately presented in the briefs and record, and the decisional process would not be significantly aided by oral argument.

(b) Notice of argument; postponement. The clerk must advise all parties whether oral argument will be scheduled, and, if so, the date, time, and place for it, and the time allowed for each side. A motion to postpone the argument or to allow longer argument must be filed reasonably in advance of the hearing date.

(c) Order and contents of argument. The appellant opens and concludes the argument. Counsel must not read at length from briefs, records, or authorities.

(d) Cross-appeals and separate appeals. If there is a cross-appeal, Rule 28.1(b) determines which party is the appellant and which is the appellee for purposes of oral argument. Unless the court directs otherwise, a cross-appeal or separate appeal must be argued when the initial appeal is argued. Separate parties should avoid duplicative argument.

(e) Nonappearance of a party. If the appellee fails to appear for argument, the court must hear appellant's argument. If the appellant fails to appear for argument, the court may hear the appellee's argument. If neither party appears, the case will be decided on the briefs, unless the court orders otherwise.

(f) Submission on briefs. The parties may agree to submit a case for decision on the briefs, but the court may direct that the case be argued.

(g) Use of physical exhibits at argument; removal. Counsel intending to use physical exhibits other than documents at the argument must arrange to place them in the courtroom on the day of the argument before the court convenes. After the argument, counsel must remove the exhibits from the courtroom, unless the court directs otherwise. The clerk may destroy or dispose of the exhibits if counsel does not reclaim them within a reasonable time after the clerk gives notice to remove them. (Amended effective December 1, 2005.)

Circuit Rule 34. Oral argument.

34.1 Docket Control. In the interest of docket control, the chief judge may from time to time appoint a panel or panels to review pending cases for appropriate assignment or disposition under this rule or any other rule of this court.

34.2 Oral Arguments. Oral argument is governed by Fed. R. App. P. 34. Cases not set for oral argument are placed on the summary calendar for decision. The clerk will calendar the oral argument cases based upon the court's calendaring priorities. Counsel for each party must present oral argument unless excused by the court for good cause. The oral argument docket will show the time the court has allotted for each argument. If counsel for all parties indicate that oral argument is not necessary under paragraph .3 of this rule, the case will be governed by Fed. R. App. P. 34(f).

34.3 Submission Without Argument. A party desiring to waive oral argument in a case set for oral argument must file a motion to waive argument at least 7 days before the date set for hearing.

34.4 Number of Counsel To Be Heard. Not more than 2 counsel will be heard for each party on the argument of a case, and the time allowed may be apportioned between counsel in their discretion.

34.5 Expediting Appeals. The court may, on its own motion or for good cause on motion of either party, advance any case for hearing, and prescribe an abbreviated briefing schedule.

34.6 Continuance of Hearing. After a case has been set for hearing, the parties or counsel may not stipulate to delay the hearing. Only the court may delay argument for good cause shown. Engagement of counsel in other courts ordinarily is not considered good cause.

34.7 Recording of Oral Arguments. No cameras, tape recorders, or other equipment designed for the recording or transmission of visual images or sound may be present or used during oral argument. However, with the advance approval of the presiding judge, counsel may arrange, at their own expense, for a qualified court reporter to record and transcribe oral argument. If it is the court reporter's usual practice, the reporter may make and use a sound recording for the sole purpose of preparing an accurate transcript. The reporter may not make any recordings of the oral argument available to counsel, a party, or any other person until the court posts its recording of the oral argument on the court's Internet website. (Amended effective August 15, 2008.)

34.8 Criminal Justice Act Cases. The court expects court-appointed counsel to present oral argument. An associate attorney not appointed under the act may present argument only under the most pressing and unusual circumstances, and upon the court's advance authorization.

34.9 Checking In with Clerk's Office. On the day of hearing counsel must check in with the clerk 30 minutes before court convenes to confirm the name of the attorney or attorneys who will present argument for each party and how the argument time will be divided between opening and rebuttal. All counsel in the fourth and fifth cases on the docket heard in New Orleans may check in by telephone, but must report in person to the clerk's office within one hour after court convenes. On the last day of a New Orleans session, all attorneys must report in person to the clerk's office 30 minutes before court convenes.

34.10 Submission Without Argument. When a case is placed on the oral argument calendar, a judge of the court has determined that oral argument would be helpful. Therefore, requests of the parties to waive oral argument are not looked upon with favor, and counsel may be excused only by the court for good cause. See 5th Cir. R. 34.3.

If appellant fails to appear in a criminal appeal from conviction, the court will not hear argument from the United States.

34.11 Time for Oral Argument. The time allowed for oral argument is indicated on the printed calendar. Most cases are allowed 20 minutes to the side. The word "side" refers to parties in their position on appeal. Where in doubt, consult the clerk's office.

34.12 Additional Time for Oral Argument. Additional time for oral argument is sparingly permitted. Requests for additional time should be set forth in a motion or letter to the clerk filed well in advance of the oral argument.

34.13 Calling the Calendar. The court usually does not call the calendar unless there are special problems requiring attention. The court hears the cases in the order they appear on the calendar. (Amended December 1, 2009.)

I.O.P.

Screening — Screening is the name given to the method used by the court to determine whether cases should be argued orally or decided on briefs only. This is done under Fed. R. App. P. and 5th Cir. R. 34.

(A) The judges of the court screen cases with assistance from the Staff Attorney. When the last brief is filed, a case is generally sent to the Staff Attorney for prescreening classification. If the staff attorney concludes that the case does not warrant oral argument, a brief memorandum may be prepared and the case returned to the clerk. The clerk then routes the case to 1 of the court's judges, selected in rotation. If that judge agrees that the case does not warrant oral argument, the briefs, together with a proposed opinion, are forwarded to the 2 other judges on the screening panel. If any party requests oral argument, all panel judges must concur that the case does not warrant oral argument, and also in the panel opinion as a proper disposition without any special concurrence or dissent. If no party requests oral argument, all panel judges must concur that the case does not warrant oral argument. However, absent a party's request for oral argument, summary disposition may include a concurrence or a dissent by panel members.

(B) If the staff attorney concludes that oral argument is required, the case is sent to an active judge for screening. If the screening judge agrees, the case is placed on the next appropriate calendar, consistent with the court's calendaring priorities. If the screening judge disagrees with the recommendation for oral argument, that judge's screening panel disposes of the case under the summary calendar procedure.

Decision Without Oral Argument. — When all panel members agree that oral argument of a case is not needed, they advise the clerk the case has been placed on the summary calendar. The court's decision usually accompanies the notice to the clerk.

Court Year Schedule. — The clerk prepares a proposed court schedule for an entire year which is approved by the scheduling proctor and chief judge of the court. The court schedule does not consider what specific cases are to be heard, but only sets the weeks of court in relation to the probable volume of cases and judge power availability for the year.

Judge Assignments

Panel Selection Procedure. — Based on the number of weeks each active judge sits and the number of sittings available from the court's senior judges, and visiting circuit or district judges, the scheduling proctor and clerk create panels of judges for the sessions of the court for the entire court year. The judges are scheduled to avoid repetitive scheduling of panels composed of the same members.

Separation of Assignment of Judges and Calendaring of Cases. — The judge assignments are made available only to the judges for their advance planning of their workload for the forthcoming court year. To insure complete objectivity in the assignment of judges and the calendaring of cases, the two functions of (1) judge assignments to panels and (2) calendaring of cases are carefully separated.

Preparation and Publishing Calendars

General. — The clerk prepares calendars of cases under calendaring guidelines established by the court. Calendars are prepared for the number of sessions (usually between 3 and 5) scheduled for a month. Information about the names of the panel members is not disclosed within the clerk's office until the calendars of cases for the month are actually prepared so that briefs and other materials can be distributed.

Calendaring by Case Type. — The clerk balances the calendars by dividing the cases evenly among the panels by case type so that each panel for a particular month has more or less an equal number of different types of litigation for consideration.

Preference Cases. — The categories of cases listed in 5th Cir. R. 47.7 are given preference in processing and disposition. To assist the clerk in implementing this rule, any party to a civil appeal or review proceeding requiring priority status should notify the clerk and cite the statutory support for the preference.

Non-Preference Cases. — All other cases are calendared for hearing in accordance with the court's "first-in first-out" rule. Unless the court assigns special priority the oldest cases in point of time of availability of briefs are ordinarily calendared first for hearing.

Calendaring for Convenience of Counsel. — For the New Orleans sessions, cases with non-local lawyers are scheduled in the first positions on the calendar whenever possible for their convenience in making departure accommodations.

Number of Cases Assigned. — Unless special provision is made, a regular session of a panel of the court will hear 5 cases per day for 4 days, Monday through Thursday.

Advance Notice. — The court seeks to give counsel 60 days advance notice of cases set for oral argument.

Forwarding Briefs to Judges. — Immediately after formally issuing the calendar the clerk sends the panel members copies of the briefs for the cases set on the calendar.

Pre-Argument Preparation. — The judges invariably read all briefs prior to oral argument.

Identity of Panel. — The clerk may not disclose the names of the panel members for a particular session until 1 week in advance of the session.

Oral Argument

Presenting Argument. — Counsel should prepare their oral arguments knowing the judges have already studied the briefs. Reading from briefs, decisions, or the record is not permitted except in unusual circumstances. Counsel should be prepared to answer the court's questions. The court will consider a motion to extend the time allotted for argument if the court's questions prevent completion of counsel's argument.

Lighting Signal Procedure. — The courtroom deputy will keep track of the time using lighting signals:

(A) Appellant's Argument — A green light signals the beginning of the opening argument of appellant. Two minutes before expiration of the time allowed for opening argument, the green light goes off and a yellow light comes on. When the time reserved for opening argument expires, the yellow light goes off and a red light comes on. If counsel proceeds after the red light, time will be deducted from the rebuttal period.

(B) Appellee's Argument — The same procedure as outlined above is used.

(C) Appellant's Rebuttal — A green light signals commencement of time; a red light comes on when time expires. No yellow light is used.

Case Conferences and Designation of Writing Judge. — The panel hearing the arguments usually confers on the cases at the conclusion of each day's arguments. A tentative decision is reached and the presiding judge assigns responsibility for opinion writing. There is no pre-argument assignment of opinion writing. Judges do not specialize. Assignments are made to equalize the workload of the entire session.

FRAP 35. En banc determination.

(a) When hearing or rehearing en banc may be ordered. A majority of the circuit judges who are in regular active service and who are not disqualified may order that an appeal or other proceeding be heard or reheard by the court of appeals en banc. An en banc hearing or rehearing is not favored and ordinarily will not be ordered unless:

(1) en banc consideration is necessary to secure or maintain uniformity of the court's decisions; or

(2) the proceeding involves a question of exceptional importance.

(b) Petition for hearing or rehearing en banc. A party may petition for a hearing or rehearing en banc.

(1) The petition must begin with a statement that either:

(A) the panel decision conflicts with a decision of the United States Supreme Court or of the court to which the petition is addressed (with citation to the conflicting case or cases) and consideration by the full court is therefore necessary to secure and maintain uniformity of the court's decisions; or

(B) the proceeding involves one or more questions of exceptional importance, each of which must be concisely stated; for example, a petition may assert that a proceeding presents a question of exceptional importance if it involves an issue on which the panel decision conflicts with the authoritative decisions of other United States Courts of Appeals that have addressed the issue.

(2) Except by the court's permission, a petition for an en banc hearing or rehearing must not exceed 15 pages, excluding material not counted under Rule 32.

(3) For purposes of the page limit in Rule 35(b)(2), if a party files both a petition for panel rehearing and a petition for rehearing en banc, they are considered a single document even if they are filed separately, unless separate filing is required by local rule.

(c) Time for petition for hearing or rehearing en banc. A petition that an appeal be heard initially en banc must be filed by the date when the appellee's brief is due. A petition for a rehearing en banc must be filed within the time prescribed by Rule 40 for filing a petition for rehearing.

(d) Number of copies. The number of copies to be filed must be prescribed by local rule and may be altered by order in a particular case.

(e) Response. No response may be filed to a petition for an en banc consideration unless the court orders a response.

(f) Call for a vote. A vote need not be taken to determine whether the case will be heard or reheard en banc unless a judge calls for a vote. (Amended effective December 1, 2005.)

Circuit Rule 35. Determination of causes by the court en banc.

35.1 Caution. Counsel are reminded that in every case the duty of counsel is fully discharged without filing a petition for rehearing en banc unless the case meets the rigid standards of Fed. R. App. P. 35(a). As is noted in Fed. R. App. P. 35, en banc hearing or rehearing is not favored. Among the reasons is that each request for en banc consideration must be studied by every active judge of the court and is a serious call on limited judicial resources. Counsel have a duty to the court commensurate with that owed their clients to read with attention and observe with restraint the standards of Fed. R. App. P. 35(b)(1). The court takes the view that, given the extraordinary nature of petitions for en banc consideration, it is fully justified in imposing sanctions on its own initiative under, inter alia, Fed. R. App. P. 38 and 28 U.S.C. § 1927, upon the person who signed the petitions, the represented party, or both, for manifest abuse of the procedure.

35.2 Form of Petition. Twenty copies of every petition for en banc consideration, whether upon initial hearing or rehearing, must be filed. The petition must not be incorporated in the petition for rehearing before the panel, if one is filed, but must be complete in itself. In no case will a petition for en banc consideration adopt by reference any matter from the petition for panel rehearing or from any other briefs or motions in the case. A petition for en banc consideration must contain the following items, in order:

35.2.1 Certificate of interested persons required for briefs by 5th Cir. R. 28.2.1.

35.2.2 If the party petitioning for en banc consideration is represented by counsel, a statement as set forth in Fed. R. App. P. 35(b)(1).

35.2.3 Table of contents and authorities.

35.2.4 Statement of the issue or issues asserted to merit en banc consideration. It will rarely occur that these will be the same as those appropriate for panel rehearing. A petition for en banc consideration must be limited to the circumstances enumerated in Fed. R. App. P. 35(a).

35.2.5 Statement of the course of proceedings and disposition of the case.

35.2.6 Statement of any facts necessary to the argument of the issues.

35.2.7 Argument and authorities. These will concern only the issues required by paragraph (.2.4) hereof and shall address specifically, not only their merit, but why they are contended to be worthy of en banc consideration.

35.2.8 Conclusion.

35.2.9 Certificate of service.

35.2.10 A copy of the opinion or order sought to be reviewed. The opinion or order will be bound with the petition and shall not be marked or annotated.

35.3 Response to Petition. No response to a petition for en banc consideration will be received unless requested by the court.

35.4 Time and Form — Extensions. Any petition for rehearing en banc must be received in the clerk's office within the time specified in Fed. R. App. P. 40. Counsel should not request extensions of time except for the most compelling reasons.

35.5 Length. See Fed. R. App. P. 35(b)(2).

35.6 Determination of Causes En Banc and Composition of En Banc Court. A cause will be heard or reheard en banc when it meets the criteria for en banc set out in Fed. R. App. P. 35(a).

The en banc court will be composed of all active judges of the court plus any senior judge of the court who participated in the panel decision who elects to participate in the en banc consideration. This election is to be communicated timely to the chief judge and clerk. Any judge participating in an en banc poll, hearing, or rehearing while in regular active service who subsequently takes senior status may elect to continue participating in the final resolution of the case. (Amended July 15, 2003; Dec. 1, 2005; As amended Dec. 1, 2009.)

I.O.P.

Petition for Rehearing En Banc

Extraordinary Nature of Petitions for Rehearing En Banc. — A petition for rehearing en banc is an extraordinary procedure that is intended to bring to the attention of the entire court an error of exceptional public importance or an opinion that directly conflicts with prior Supreme Court, Fifth Circuit or state law precedent, subject to the following: Alleged errors in the facts of the case (including sufficiency of the evidence) or in the application of correct precedent to the facts of the case are generally matters for panel rehearing but not for rehearing en banc.

The Most Abused Prerogative. — Petitions for rehearing en banc are the most abused prerogative of appellate advocates in the Fifth Circuit. Fewer than 1% of the cases decided by the court on the merits are reheard en banc; and frequently those rehearings granted result from a request for en banc reconsideration by a judge of the court rather than a petition by the parties.

Handling of Petition by the Judges

Panel Has Control. — Although each panel judge and every active judge receives a copy of the petition for rehearing en banc, the filing of a petition for rehearing en banc does not take the case out of the control of the panel deciding the case. A petition for rehearing en banc is treated as a petition for rehearing by the panel if no petition is filed. The panel may grant rehearing without action by the full court.

Requesting a Poll. — Within 10 calendar days of the filing of the petition, any active judge of the court or any member of the panel rendering the decision, who desires that the case be reheard en banc, may notify the writing judge (the senior active Fifth Circuit judge if the writing judge is a non-active member) to this effect on or before the date shown on the clerk's form that transmits the suggestion. This notification is also notice that if the panel declines to grant rehearing, an en banc poll is desired.

If the panel decides not to grant the rehearing after such notice, it notifies the chief judge, who then polls the court by written ballot on whether en banc rehearing should be granted.

Requesting a Poll on Court's Own Motion. — Any active member of the court or any member of the panel rendering the decision may request a poll of the active members of the court whether rehearing en banc should be granted, whether or not a party filed a petition for rehearing en banc. A requesting judge ordinarily sends a letter to the chief judge with copies to the other active judges of the court and any other panel member.

Polling the Court. — When a request to poll the court is made, each active judge of the court casts a ballot and sends a copy to all other active judges of the court and any senior Fifth Circuit judge who is a panel member. The ballot indicates whether the judge voting desires oral argument if en banc is granted.

Negative Poll. — If the vote is unfavorable to the grant of en banc consideration, the chief judge advises the writing judge. The panel originally hearing the case then enters an appropriate order.

Affirmative Poll. — If a majority of the judges in active service who are not disqualified, vote for en banc hearing or rehearing, the chief judge instructs the clerk as to an appropriate order. The order indicates a rehearing en banc with or without oral argument has been granted, and specifies a briefing schedule for filing of en banc briefs. The appellant's en banc brief will have a blue cover; The appellee's en banc brief will have a red cover.

Every party must then furnish to the clerk 20 additional copies of every brief the party previously filed.

No Poll Request. — If the specified time for requesting a poll has expired and the writing judge of the panel has not received a request from any active member of the court, or other panel member, the judge may take such action deemed appropriate on the petition. However, in the order disposing of the case and the petition, the panel's order denying the petition for rehearing en banc must show no poll was requested.

Capital Cases. — Consistent with long established legal principle and uniformly followed practice, the filing of a petition for rehearing (or hearing) en banc does not constitute or operate as a stay of execution and does not preclude carrying out an execution.

Timely petitions for rehearing (or hearing) en banc which are filed in a capital case while a scheduled execution date is pending and less than 22 calendar days before the scheduled date will be processed and distributed in the manner prescribed by the chief judge or delegee. The Chief Judge or delegee may order expedited consideration thereof and set a time limit for each judge eligible to vote thereon to advise the chief judge or delegee whether to call for a poll and whether (if a poll is or were to be timely requested by any judge) the judge would vote for or against rehearing (or hearing) en banc, and the petition for rehearing (or hearing) en banc will be disposed of accordingly. If no poll is timely requested, or if a poll results in no rehearing (or hearing) en banc, the panel may enter an order denying rehearing (or hearing) en banc. If a poll results in a grant of rehearing (or hearing) en banc, the chief judge, or delegee, will enter an order staying the execution pending further order of the court.

FRAP 36. Entry of judgment; notice.

(a) Entry. A judgment is entered when it is noted on the docket. The clerk must prepare, sign, and enter the judgment:

(1) after receiving the court's opinion — but if settlement of the judgment's form is required, after final settlement; or

(2) if a judgment is rendered without an opinion, as the court instructs.

(b) Notice. On the date when judgment is entered, the clerk must serve on all parties a copy of the opinion — or the judgment, if no opinion was written — and a notice of the date when the judgment was entered. (Amended December 1, 2002.)

FRAP 37. Interest on judgment.

(a) When the court affirms. Unless the law provides otherwise, if a money judgment in a civil case is affirmed, whatever interest is allowed by law is payable from the date when the district court's judgment was entered.

(b) When the court reverses. If the court modifies or reverses a judgment with a direction that a money judgment be entered in the district court, the mandate must contain instructions about the allowance of interest.

FRAP 38. Frivolous appeal — Damages and costs.

If a court of appeals determines that an appeal is frivolous, it may, after a separately filed motion or notice from the court and reasonable opportunity to respond, award just damages and single or double costs to the appellee.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Repetitive litigation.
Illustrative cases.

Repetitive litigation.

Award of double costs and damages in form of attorney's fees was proper against appellant who had brought to Court of Appeals his third challenge to a 1978 condemnation of certain land by Army Corp of Engineers, since even a cursory examination of law by appellant or his counsel would have reflected that this repeat litigation had no valid legal basis. Uithoven v. United States Army Corps of Eng'rs, 884 F.2d 844 (5th Cir. 1989).

Illustrative cases.

An appeal was frivolous where appellants adopted a brief from companion litigation as their own, which did not address the main issue at hand; appellants' refusal to withdraw their appeal even after being warned that sanctions could be levied, properly resulted in double costs to the appellee. Atwood v. Union Carbide Corp., 847 F.2d 278 (5th Cir. 1988).

An appeal from forfeiture of real property filed under the name of the property itself was frivolous; prior case law states clearly that owners alone have standing to contest forfeiture actions, and legislative history made plain that owners must be people; thus an award of attorneys' fees and court costs was proper. United States v. One Parcel of Real Property with Bldgs., 831 F.2d 566 (5th Cir. 1987).

FRAP 39. Costs.

(a) Against whom assessed. The following rules apply unless the law provides or the court orders otherwise:

(1) if an appeal is dismissed, costs are taxed against the appellant, unless the parties agree otherwise;

(2) if a judgment is affirmed, costs are taxed against the appellant;

(3) if a judgment is reversed, costs are taxed against the appellee;

(4) if a judgment is affirmed in part, reversed in part, modified, or vacated, costs are taxed only as the court orders.

(b) Costs for and against the United States. Costs for or against the United States, its agency, or officer will be assessed under Rule 39(a) only if authorized by law.

(c) Costs of copies. Each court of appeals must, by local rule, fix the maximum rate for taxing the cost of producing necessary copies of a brief or appendix, or copies of records authorized by Rule 30(f). The rate must not exceed that generally charged for such work in the area where the clerk's office is located and should encourage economical methods of copying.

(d) Bill of costs: objections; insertion in mandate.

(1) A party who wants costs taxed must — within 14 days after entry of judgment — file with the circuit clerk, with proof of service, an itemized and verified bill of costs.

(2) Objections must be filed within 14 days after service of the bill of costs, unless the court extends the time.

(3) The clerk must prepare and certify an itemized statement of costs for insertion in the mandate, but issuance of the mandate must not be delayed for taxing costs. If the mandate issues before costs are finally determined, the district clerk must — upon the circuit clerk's request — add the statement of costs, or any amendment of it, to the mandate.

(e) Costs on appeal taxable in the district court. The following costs on appeal are taxable in the district court for the benefit of the party entitled to costs under this rule:

(1) the preparation and transmission of the record;

(2) the reporter's transcript, if needed to determine the appeal;

(3) premiums paid for a supersedeas bond or other bond to preserve rights pending appeal; and

(4) the fee for filing the notice of appeal.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Attorneys' fees.

Rule 39(d) encompasses only usual costs of appeal such as docketing fees and preparation and filing of briefs and records and does not include attorney's fees. Seyler v. Seyler, 678 F.2d 29 (5th Cir. 1982); Vasquez v. Fleming, 617 F.2d 334 (3rd Cir. 1980); Davis v. Murphy, 587 F.2d 362 (7th Cir. Wis. 1978); Travelers Indem. Co. v. Rosedale Passenger Lines, 55 F.R.D. 494 (D. Md. 1972).

Circuit Rule 39. Costs.

39.1 Taxable Rates. The cost of reproducing necessary copies of the briefs, appendices, or record excerpts shall be taxed at a rate of actual cost, or $ .15 per page, whichever is less, including cover, index, and internal pages, for any form of reproduction costs. The cost of the binding required by 5th Cir. R. 32.2.3 that mandates that briefs must lie reasonably flat when open shall be a taxable cost but not limited to the foregoing rate. This rate is intended to approximate the current cost of the most economical acceptable method of reproduction generally available; and the clerk will, at reasonable intervals, examine and review it to reflect current rates. Taxable costs will be authorized for up to 15 copies for a brief and 10 copies of an appendix or record excerpts, unless the clerk gives advance approval for additional copies.

39.2 Nonrecovery of Mailing and Commercial Delivery Service Costs. Mailing and commercial delivery fees incurred in transmitting briefs are not recoverable as taxable costs.

39.3 Time for Filing Bills of Costs. The clerk must receive bills of costs and any objections within the times set forth in Fed. R. App. P. 39(d). See 5th Cir. R. 26.1. (Amended July 15, 2003, Dec. 1, 2007; As amended Dec. 1, 2009.)

FRAP 40. Petition for panel rehearing.

(a) Time to file; contents; answer; action by the court if granted.

(1) Time. Unless the time is shortened or extended by order or local rule, a petition for panel rehearing may be filed within 14 days after entry of judgment. But in a civil case, unless an order shortens or extends the time, the petition may be filed by any party within 45 days after entry of judgment if one of the parties is:

(A) the United States;

(B) a United States agency;

(C) a United States officer or employee sued in an official capacity; or

(D)) a current or former United States officer or employee sued in an individual capacity for an act or omission occurring in connection with duties performed on the United States' behalf — including all instances in which the United States represents that person when the court of appeals' judgment is entered or files the petition for that person.

(2) Contents. The petition must state with particularity each point of law or fact that the petitioner believes the court has overlooked or misapprehended and must argue in support of the petition. Oral argument is not permitted.

(3) Answer. Unless the court requests, no answer to a petition for panel rehearing is permitted. But ordinarily rehearing will not be granted in the absence of such a request.

(4) Action by the court. If a petition for panel rehearing is granted, the court may do any of the following:

(A) make a final disposition of the case without reargument;

(B) restore the case to the calendar for reargument or resubmission; or

(C) issue any other appropriate order.

(b) Form of petition; length. The petition must comply in form with Rule 32. Copies must be served and filed as Rule 31 prescribes. Unless the court permits or a local rule provides otherwise, a petition for panel rehearing must not exceed 15 pages.

Editor's Note — The amendment to Rule 40(a)(1), effective December 1, 2011, was approved by the Supreme Court of the United States by order dated April 26, 2011, and transmitted to Congress in accordance with 28 USCS § 2072.

Circuit Rule 40. Petition for rehearing.

40.1 Copies. Four copies of all petitions for rehearing will be filed. A party seeking panel rehearing must attach to the petition an unmarked copy of the opinion or order sought to be reviewed. If the party contemporaneously files a petition for rehearing en banc and attaches a copy of the opinion or order required by 5th Cir. R. 35.2.10, the party does not have to attach a copy to the petition for panel rehearing.

40.2 Limited Nature of Petition for Panel Rehearing. A petition for rehearing is intended to bring to the attention of the panel claimed errors of fact or law in the opinion. It is not used for reargument of the issue previously presented or to attack the court's well-settled summary calendar procedures. Petitions for rehearing of panel decisions are reviewed by panel members only.

40.3 Length. See Fed. R. App. P. 40(b).

40.4 Time for Filing. The clerk must receive a petition for rehearing within the time prescribed in Fed. R. App. P. 40(a). (Amended July 15, 2003; As amended Dec. 1, 2009.)

I.O.P.

Necessity for Filing. — It is not necessary to file a petition for rehearing in the court of appeals as a prerequisite to filing a petition for certiorari in the Supreme Court of the United States.

Capital Cases. — Consistent with long established legal principle and uniformly followed practice, the filing of a petition for rehearing does not constitute or operate as a stay of execution and does not preclude carrying out an execution.

FRAP 41. Mandate: contents; issuance and effective date; stay.

(a) Contents. Unless the court directs that a formal mandate issue, the mandate consists of a certified copy of the judgment, a copy of the court's opinion, if any, and any direction about costs.

(b) When issued. The court's mandate must issue 7 days after the time to file a petition for rehearing expires, or 7 days after entry of an order denying a timely petition for panel rehearing, petition for rehearing en banc, or motion for stay of mandate, whichever is later. The court may shorten or extend the time.

(c) Effective date. The mandate is effective when issued.

(d) Staying the mandate.

(1) On petition for rehearing or motion. The timely filing of a petition for panel rehearing, petition for rehearing en banc, or motion for stay of mandate, stays the mandate until disposition of the petition or motion, unless the court orders otherwise.

(2) Pending petition for certiorari.

(A) A party may move to stay the mandate pending the filing of a petition for a writ of certiorari in the Supreme Court. The motion must be served on all parties and must show that the certiorari petition would present a substantial question and that there is good cause for a stay.

(B) The stay must not exceed 90 days, unless the period is extended for good cause or unless the party who obtained the stay files a petition for the writ and so notifies the circuit clerk in writing within the period of the stay. In that case, the stay continues until the Supreme Court's final disposition.

(C) The court may require a bond or other security as a condition to granting or continuing a stay of the mandate.

(D) The court of appeals must issue the mandate immediately when a copy of a Supreme Court order denying the petition for writ of certiorari is filed.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Stay of mandate.

Under former rule, when mandate had been issued it was too late to stay it; unless court of appeals recalled mandate, court's control over judgment below came to an end after mandate had been issued. Meredith v. Fair, 306 F.2d 374 (5th Cir. 1962), cert. denied, 371 U.S. 828, 83 S. Ct. 49, 9 L. Ed. 2d 668 (1962).

Because of alleged inadequacy of the representation given appellants, court recalled its former mandate affirming their conviction, and entered in its place fresh order and mandate affirming conviction, so as to enable appellants to file a petition for writ of certiorari within 30 days following the entry of judgment, as is required by Supreme Court Rule 22(2). Lacaze v. United States, 457 F.2d 1075 (5th Cir. 1972), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 921, 93 S. Ct. 251, 34 L. Ed. 2d 180 (1972).

Circuit Rule 41. Issuance of mandate; stay of mandate.

41.1 Stay of Mandate — Criminal Appeals. A motion for a stay of the issuance of a mandate in a direct criminal appeal filed under Fed. R. App. P. 41 will not be granted simply upon request. Unless the petition sets forth good cause for stay or clearly demonstrates that a substantial question is to be presented to the Supreme Court, the motion shall be denied and the mandate thereafter issued forthwith.

41.2 Recall of Mandate. Once issued a mandate shall not be recalled except to prevent injustice.

41.3 Effect of Granting Rehearing En Banc. Unless otherwise expressly provided, the granting of a rehearing en banc vacates the panel opinion and judgment of the court and stays the mandate. If, after voting a case en banc, the court lacks a quorum to act on the case for 30 consecutive days, the case is automatically returned to the panel, the panel opinion is reinstated as an unpublished (and hence nonprecedential) opinion, and the mandate is released. To act on a case, the en banc court must have a quorum consisting of a majority of the en banc court as defined in 28 U.S.C. § 46(c).

41.4 Issuance of Mandate in Expedited Appeals or Mandamus Actions. The clerk will issue the mandate forthwith in any expedited appeal of a criminal sentence and in actions denying mandamus relief, unless instructed otherwise by the court. (Amended July 15, 2003; As amended Dec. 1, 2009; as amended October 31, 2011.)

I.O.P.

Absent a motion for stay or a stay by operation of an order, rule, or procedure, mandates will issue promptly on the 8th calendar day after the time for filing a petition for rehearing expires; or after entry of an order denying the petition. As an exception, and by court direction, the clerk shall immediately issue the mandate when the court dismisses a case for failure to prosecute an appeal or for lack of jurisdiction, or in such other instances as the court may direct. The original record and any exhibits will be returned to the clerk of the district court with the mandate.

FRAP 42. Voluntary dismissal.

(a) Dismissal in the district court. Before an appeal has been docketed by the circuit clerk, the district court may dismiss the appeal on the filing of a stipulation signed by all parties or on the appellant's motion with notice to all parties.

(b) Dismissal in the court of appeals. The circuit clerk may dismiss a docketed appeal if the parties file a signed dismissal agreement specifying how costs are to be paid and pay any fees that are due. But no mandate or other process may issue without a court order. An appeal may be dismissed on the appellant's motion on terms agreed to by the parties or fixed by the court.

Circuit Rule 42. Voluntary dismissal.

42.1 Dismissal by Appellant. In all cases where the appellant or petitioner files an unopposed motion to withdraw the appeal or agency review proceeding, the clerk will enter an order of dismissal and issue a copy of the order as the mandate.

42.2 Frivolous and Unmeritorious Appeals. If upon the hearing of any interlocutory motion or as a result of a review under 5th Cir. R. 34, it appears to the court that the appeal is frivolous and entirely without merit, the appeal will be dismissed.

42.3 Dismissal for Failure To Prosecute.

42.3.1 In direct criminal appeals proceeding in forma pauperis, the provisions of 5th Cir. R. 42.3.1.1 and 42.3.1.2 apply. In habeas cases, actions filed under 28 U.S.C.S. § 2255, and other prisoner matters proceeding in forma pauperis, the provisions of 5th Cir. R. 42.3.1.1 apply if the appellant is represented by counsel; prisoners proceeding pro se will be given an initial written deadline for filing a certificate of appealability, filing any briefs, for paying fees, or for complying with other directives of the court. If pro se prisoners do not meet the deadline established, or timely request an extension of time, the clerk will dismiss the appeal without further notice, 15 days after the deadline date.

42.3.1.1 Appeals with Counsel. If appellant is represented by appointed or retained counsel, the clerk will issue a notice to counsel that, upon expiration of 15 days from the date of the notice, the appeal may be dismissed for want of prosecution unless prior to that date the default is remedied, and must enter an order directing counsel to show cause within 15 days from the date of the order why disciplinary action should not be taken against counsel. If the default is remedied within that time, the clerk must not dismiss the appeal and may refer to the court the matter of disciplinary action against the attorney. If the default is not remedied within that time, the clerk may enter an order dismissing the appeal for want of prosecution or may refer to the court the question of dismissal. The clerk must refer to the court the matter of disciplinary action against the attorney. The court may refer the matter of disciplinary action to a special master including but not limited to a district or magistrate judge.

42.3.1.2 Appeals without Counsel. The clerk must issue a notice to appellant that 15 days from the date of the notice the appeal will be dismissed for want of prosecution, unless the default is remedied before that date. If the default is remedied within that time, the clerk must not dismiss the appeal.

42.3.2 In all other appeals when appellant fails to order the transcript, fails to file a brief, or otherwise fails to comply with the rules of the court, the clerk must dismiss the appeal for want of prosecution.

42.3.3 In all instances of failure to prosecute an appeal to hearing as required, the court may take such other action as it deems appropriate.

42.3.4 An order dismissing an appeal for want of prosecution must be issued to the clerk of the district court as the mandate.

42.4 Dismissals Without Prejudice. In acting on a motion under 5th Cir. R. 27.1.3 to stay further proceedings, the clerk may enter such appeals or agency review proceedings as dismissed without prejudice to the right of reinstatement of the appeal within 180 days from the date of dismissal. Any party desiring reinstatement, or an extension of the time to seek reinstatement, must notify the clerk in writing within the time period allowed for reinstatement. This procedure does not apply where the stay is sought pending a decision of this court in another case, a decision of the Supreme Court, or a stay on the court's own motion. If the appeal is not reinstated within the period fixed, the appeal is deemed dismissed with prejudice. However, an additional period of 180 days from the date of dismissal will be allowed for applying for relief from a dismissal with prejudice which resulted from mistake, inadvertence, or excusable neglect of counsel or a pro se litigant. (Amended July 15, 2003; As amended Dec. 1, 2009.)

FRAP 43. Substitution of parties.

(a) Death of a party.

(1) After notice of appeal is filed. If a party dies after a notice of appeal has been filed or while a proceeding is pending in the court of appeals, the decedent's personal representative may be substituted as a party on motion filed with the circuit clerk by the representative or by any party. A party's motion must be served on the representative in accordance with Rule 25. If the decedent has no representative, any party may suggest the death on the record, and the court of appeals may then direct appropriate proceedings.

(2) Before notice of appeal is filed — Potential appellant. If a party entitled to appeal dies before filing a notice of appeal, the decedent's personal representative — or, if there is no personal representative, the decedent's attorney of record — may file a notice of appeal within the time prescribed by these rules. After the notice of appeal is filed, substitution must be in accordance with Rule 43(a)(1).

(3) Before notice of appeal is filed — Potential appellee. If a party against whom an appeal may be taken dies after entry of a judgment or order in the district court, but before a notice of appeal is filed, an appellant may proceed as if the death had not occurred. After the notice of appeal is filed, substitution must be in accordance with Rule 43(a)(1).

(b) Substitution for a reason other than death. If a party needs to be substituted for any reason other than death, the procedure prescribed in Rule 43(a) applies.

(c) Public officer: identification; substitution.

(1) Identification of party. A public officer who is a party to an appeal or other proceeding in an official capacity may be described as a party by the public officer's official title rather than by name. But the court may require the public officer's name to be added.

(2) Automatic substitution of officeholder. When a public officer who is a party to an appeal or other proceeding in an official capacity dies, resigns, or otherwise ceases to hold office, the action does not abate. The public officer's successor is automatically substituted as a party. Proceedings following the substitution are to be in the name of the substituted party, but any misnomer that does not affect the substantial rights of the parties may be disregarded. An order of substitution may be entered at any time, but failure to enter an order does not affect the substitution.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Public officers.

In civil rights action where change of state administration occurred, there was no logical reason why suit against government official could not be against him in his personal capacity within meaning of Ex parte Young, and yet still be "official" enough to require automatic substitution under Rule 43 and Civil Rule 25, to prevent abatement of action against public officers by Eleventh Amendment. American Civil Liberties Union, Inc. v. Finch, 638 F.2d 1336 (5th Cir. 1982).

FRAP 44. Case involving a constitutional question when the United States or the relevant state is not a party.

(a) Constitutional challenge to federal statute. If a party questions the constitutionality of an Act of Congress in a proceeding in which the United States or its agency, officer, or employee is not a party in an official capacity, the questioning party must give written notice to the circuit clerk immediately upon the filing of the record or as soon as the question is raised in the court of appeals. The clerk must then certify that fact to the Attorney General.

(b) Constitutional challenge to state statute. If a party questions the constitutionality of a statute of a State in a proceeding in which that State or its agency, officer, or employee is not a party in an official capacity, the questioning party must give written notice to the circuit clerk immediately upon the filing of the record or as soon as the question is raised in the court of appeals. The clerk must then certify that fact to the attorney general of the State.

FRAP 45. Clerk's duties.

(a) General provisions.

(1) Qualifications. The circuit clerk must take the oath and post any bond required by law. Neither the clerk nor any deputy clerk may practice as an attorney or counselor in any court while in office.

(2) When court is open. The court of appeals is always open for filing any paper, issuing and returning process, making a motion, and entering an order. The clerk's office with the clerk or a deputy in attendance must be open during business hours on all days except Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays. A court may provide by local rule or by order that the clerk's office be open for specified hours on Saturdays or on legal holidays other than New Year's Day, Martin Luther King, Jr.'s Birthday, Washington's Birthday, Memorial Day, Independence Day, Labor Day, Columbus Day, Veterans' Day, Thanksgiving Day, and Christmas Day.

(b) Records.

(1) The docket. The circuit clerk must maintain a docket and an index of all docketed cases in the manner prescribed by the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts. The clerk must record all papers filed with the clerk and all process, orders, and judgments.

(2) Calendar. Under the court's direction, the clerk must prepare a calendar of cases awaiting argument. In placing cases on the calendar for argument, the clerk must give preference to appeals in criminal cases and to other proceedings and appeals entitled to preference by law.

(3) Other records. The clerk must keep other books and records required by the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts, with the approval of the Judicial Conference of the United States, or by the court.

(c) Notice of an order or judgment. Upon the entry of an order or judgment, the circuit clerk must immediately serve a notice of entry on each party, with a copy of any opinion, and must note the date of service on the docket. Service on a party represented by counsel must be made on counsel.

(d) Custody of records and papers. The circuit clerk has custody of the court's records and papers. Unless the court orders or instructs otherwise, the clerk must not permit an original record or paper to be taken from the clerk's office. Upon disposition of the case, original papers constituting the record on appeal or review must be returned to the court or agency from which they were received. The clerk must preserve a copy of any brief, appendix, or other paper that has been filed. (Amended December 1, 2002; amended December 2, 2005.)

Circuit Rule 45. Duties of clerks.

45.1 Location. The clerk's office is maintained in the city of New Orleans, Louisiana.

45.2 Release of Original Papers. The clerk may release original records or papers without a court order for a limited time upon a party's or counsel's request, to facilitate preparation of a brief in a pending appeal.

45.3 Office To Be Open. The clerk's office is open for business on all days except Saturdays, Sundays, designated federal holidays, and Mardi Gras.

I.O.P.

Office hours are from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. central time Monday through Friday.

(A) The clerk's office welcomes telephone inquiries from counsel concerning rules and procedures. Telephone No. (504) 310-7700.

(B) In emergency situations after normal office hours, or on weekends, call the number shown above. An automated attendant provides an option connecting the caller to the emergency duty deputy.

FRAP 46. Attorneys.

(a) Admission to the bar.

(1) Eligibility. An attorney is eligible for admission to the bar of a court of appeals if that attorney is of good moral and professional character and is admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States, the highest court of a state, another United States court of appeals, or a United States district court (including the district courts for Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Virgin Islands).

(2) Application. An applicant must file an application for admission, on a form approved by the court that contains the applicant's personal statement showing eligibility for membership. The applicant must subscribe to the following oath or affirmation:

"I, _____, do solemnly swear [or affirm] that I will conduct myself as an attorney and counselor of this court, uprightly and according to law; and that I will support the Constitution of the United States."

(3) Admission procedures. On written or oral motion of a member of the court's bar, the court will act on the application. An applicant may be admitted by oral motion in open court. But, unless the court orders otherwise, an applicant need not appear before the court to be admitted. Upon admission, an applicant must pay the clerk the fee prescribed by local rule or court order.

(b) Suspension or disbarment.

(1) Standard. A member of the court's bar is subject to suspension or disbarment by the court if the member:

(A) has been suspended or disbarred from practice in any other court; or

(B) is guilty of conduct unbecoming a member of the court's bar.

(2) Procedure. The member must be given an opportunity to show good cause, within the time prescribed by the court, why the member should not be suspended or disbarred.

(3) Order. The court must enter an appropriate order after the member responds and a hearing is held, if requested, or after the time prescribed for a response expires, if no response is made.

(c) Discipline. A court of appeals may discipline an attorney who practices before it for conduct unbecoming a member of the bar or for failure to comply with any court rule. First, however, the court must afford the attorney reasonable notice, an opportunity to show cause to the contrary, and, if requested, a hearing.

Circuit Rule 46. Attorneys.

46.1 Admission and Fees. Attorneys must have and maintain a valid underlying license to practice law issued by a governmental licensing authority listed in Fed. R. App. P.46(a)(1) to be admitted and continue to practice before this court. Admission is governed by Fed. R. App. P. 46 and this rule. Attorneys admitted to this court must provide the clerk a valid e-mail and mailing address, as well as a working telephone number, and must provide updated information to the clerk when changes occur. Attorneys are admitted for a period of five years and must, after notice from the clerk, timely apply for readmission. To be admitted or readmitted, an attorney must pay the fee fixed by court order. No fee will be required of an attorney who otherwise has all qualifications for admission and is: appointed to represent an appellant in forma pauperis; appearing on behalf of the United States; or newly graduated from law school, licensed to practice in Louisiana, Mississippi, or Texas, and on orders for extended active duty in the Judge Advocate General's Corps.

46.2 Suspension or Disbarment. In addition to Fed. R. App. P. 46(b), attorneys may be suspended or removed from the roll of attorneys permitted to practice before this court if the appropriate law licensing authority withdraws or suspends the attorney's license to practice law, or the license to practice lapses.

46.3 Entry of Appearance. Attorneys admitted to the bar of this court must enter their appearance in each case in which they participate at the time the case is docketed or upon notice by the clerk. A form for entry of appearance is provided by the clerk. In addition to other pertinent information, the form requires counsel to cite all pending related cases and any cases on the docket of the Supreme Court, or this or any other United States Court of Appeals, which involve a similar issue or issues. Counsel must update such information at the time of briefing. Counsel must also indicate on the form whether the appeal is in a category of cases requiring preference in processing and disposition as set out in 5th Cir. R. 47.7. (Amended Dec. 1, 2002; July 15, 2003; Aug. 15, 2008; As amended Dec. 1, 2009.)

I.O.P.

Disciplinary Action. — Fed. R. App. P. 46(b) and (c) govern the procedures followed to invoke disciplinary action against any member of the bar of this court for failure to comply with the rules of this court, or for conduct unbecoming a member of the bar.

Duties of Court Appointed Counsel. — The Judicial Council of the Fifth Circuit has adopted a plan under the Criminal Justice Act detailing the duties and responsibilities of court appointed counsel. A copy of this plan is available from the clerk.

An appointed counsel may claim compensation for services furnished by a partner or associate within the maximum compensation allowed by the act. However, the court expects court-appointed counsel to take the lead in preparing the brief and presenting oral argument, if argument is allowed. Claims by associate counsel for in-court services and travel expenses incurred in connection therewith are not allowed unless the partner or associate is appointed under the Criminal Justice Act on advance motion and approval by the court.

FRAP 47. Local rules by courts of appeals.

(a) Local rules.

(1) Each court of appeals acting by a majority of its judges in regular active service may, after giving appropriate public notice and opportunity for comment, make and amend rules governing its practice. A generally applicable direction to parties or lawyers regarding practice before a court must be in a local rule rather than an internal operating procedure or standing order. A local rule must be consistent with — but not duplicative of — Acts of Congress and rules adopted under 28 U.S.C.S. § 2072 and must conform to any uniform numbering system prescribed by the Judicial Conference of the United States. Each circuit clerk must send the Administrative Office of the United States Courts a copy of each local rule and internal operating procedure when it is promulgated or amended.

(2) A local rule imposing a requirement of form must not be enforced in a manner that causes a party to lose rights because of a nonwillful failure to comply with the requirement.

(b) Procedure when there is no controlling law. A court of appeals may regulate practice in a particular case in any manner consistent with federal law, these rules, and local rules of the circuit. No sanction or other disadvantage may be imposed for noncompliance with any requirement not in federal law, federal rules, or the local circuit rules unless the alleged violator has been furnished in the particular case with actual notice of the requirement.

Circuit Rule 47. Other Fifth Circuit Rules.

47.1 Name, Seal and Process.

(a) Name. The name of this court is "United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit."

(b) Seal. The seal of this court contains the American eagle encircled with the words "United States Court of Appeals" on the upper part of the outer edge; and the words "Fifth Circuit" on the lower part of the outer edge, running from left to right.

(c) Writs and Process. Writs and process of this court are under the seal of the court and signed by the clerk.

47.2 Sessions. Court sessions are held in each of the states constituting the circuit at least once each year. Sessions may be scheduled at any location having adequate facilities. On motion of a party or on the court's own motion, the court may change the hearing of any appeal to another location or time.

47.3 Circuit Executive, Library, and Staff Attorneys.

(a) Circuit Executive. The circuit executive's office is maintained at New Orleans, Louisiana. The circuit executive acts as Secretary of the Judicial Council of the Fifth Circuit, provides administrative support to the court, and performs such other duties as the judicial council or the chief judge assigns.

(b) Library. A public library is maintained at New Orleans, Louisiana, which is open during hours fixed by the court. Books and materials may not be removed from the library without permission of the librarian. Other libraries may be maintained at such places in the circuit as the court designates.

(c) Staff Attorneys. A central staff of attorneys is maintained at New Orleans, Louisiana, to perform such research and record analysis as the court directs.

47.4 Bankruptcy Appeals.

47.4.1 The Fed. R. App. P. and 5th Cir. R. apply to all appeals from United States Bankruptcy Courts to this court.

47.4.2 Appeals docketed in the district court or with the clerk of any authorized appellate panels, may not be transferred to this court unless the district judge or appellate panel approves the transfer in writing.

47.5 Publication of Opinions.

47.5.1 Criteria for Publication. The publication of opinions that merely decide particular cases on the basis of well-settled principles of law imposes needless expense on the public and burdens on the legal profession. However, opinions that may in any way interest persons other than the parties to a case should be published. Therefore, an opinion is published if it:

(a) Establishes a new rule of law, alters, or modifies an existing rule of law, or calls attention to an existing rule of law that appears to have been generally overlooked;

(b) Applies an established rule of law to facts significantly different from those in previous published opinions applying the rule;

(c) Explains, criticizes, or reviews the history of existing decisional or enacted law;

(d) Creates or resolves a conflict of authority either within the circuit or between this circuit and another;

(e) Concerns or discusses a factual or legal issue of significant public interest; or

(f) Is rendered in a case that has been reviewed previously and its merits addressed by an opinion of the United States Supreme Court.

An opinion may also be published if it:

Is accompanied by a concurring or dissenting opinion; or reverses the decision below or affirms it upon different grounds.

47.5.2 Publication Decision. An opinion will be published unless each member of the panel deciding the case determines that its publication is neither required nor justified under the criteria for publication. If any judge of the court or any party so requests the panel will reconsider its decision not to publish an opinion. The opinion will be published if, upon reconsideration, each member of the panel determines that it meets one or more of the criteria for publication or should be published for any other good reason, and the panel issues an order to publish the opinion.

47.5.3 Unpublished Opinions Issued Before January 1, 1996. Unpublished opinions issued before January 1, 1996, [Effective date of amended Rule] are precedent. Although every opinion believed to have precedential value is published, an unpublished opinion may be cited pursuant to Fed. R. App. P. 32.1(a). The party citing to an unpublished judicial disposition must provide a citation to the disposition in a publicly accessible electronic database. If the disposition is not available in an electronic database, a copy of any unpublished opinion cited in any document being submitted to the court, must be attached to each copy of the document, as required by Fed. R. App. P. 32.1(b).

47.5.4 Unpublished Opinions Issued on or After January 1, 1996. Unpublished opinions issued on or after January 1, 1996, [Effective date of amended Rule] are not precedent, except under the doctrine of res judicata, collateral estoppel or law of the case (or similarly to show double jeopardy, abuse of the writ, notice, sanctionable conduct, entitlement to attorney's fees, or the like). An unpublished opinion may, however, be persuasive. An unpublished opinion may be cited, pursuant to Fed. R. App. P. 32.1(a). The party citing to an unpublished judicial disposition should provide a citation to the disposition in a publicly accessible electronic database. If the disposition is not available in an electronic database, a copy of any unpublished opinion cited in any document being submitted to the court must be attached to each copy of the document, as required by Fed. R. App. P. 32.1(b). The first page of each unpublished opinion bears the following legend:

Pursuant to 5th Circuit Rule 47.5, the court has determined that this opinion should not be published and is not precedent except under the limited circumstances set forth in 5th Circuit Rule 47.5.4.

47.5.5 Definition of "Published." An opinion is considered as "published" for purposes of this rule when the panel deciding the case determines, in accordance with 5th Cir. R. 47.5.2, that the opinion will be published and the opinion is issued.

47.6 Affirmance Without Opinion. The judgment or order may be affirmed or enforced without opinion when the court determines that an opinion would have no precedential value and that any one or more of the following circumstances exists and is dispositive of a matter submitted for decision: (1) that a judgment of the district court is based on findings of fact that are not clearly erroneous; (2) that the evidence in support of a jury verdict is not insufficient; (3) that the order of an administrative agency is supported by substantial evidence on the record as a whole; (4) in the case of a summary judgment, that no genuine issue of material fact has been properly raised by the appellant; and (5) no reversible error of law appears. In such case, the court may, in its discretion, enter either of the following orders: "AFFIRMED. See 5th Cir. R. 47.6." or "ENFORCED. See 5th Cir. R. 47.6."

47.7 Calendaring Priorities. The following categories of cases are given preference in processing and disposition: (1) appeals in criminal cases, (2) habeas corpus petitions and motions attacking a federal sentence, (3) proceedings involving recalcitrant witnesses before federal courts or grand juries under 28 U.S.C.S. § 1826, (4) actions for temporary or preliminary injunctive relief, and (5) any other action if good cause therefor is shown. (Fed. R. App. P. 45(b) and 28 U.S.C.S. § 1657).

47.8 Attorney's Fees.

47.8.1 Supporting Requirements. Petitions or motions for the award of attorney's fees should always be supported by contemporaneous time records recording all work for which a fee is claimed and reflecting the hours or fractional hours of work done and the specific professional level of services performed by each lawyer seeking compensation. In the absence of such records, time expended will not be considered in setting the fee beyond the minimum amount necessary in the court's judgment for any lawyer to produce the work seen in court. Exceptions may be made only to avoid an unconscionable result.

The clerk will make reasonable efforts to advise counsel about this rule, but whether or not counsel has been advised, ignorance of this rule is not, standing alone, grounds for an exception. If the reasonableness of the hours claimed on the basis of time records becomes an issue, the applicant must make time records available for inspection by opposing counsel and, if a dispute is not resolved between them, by the court.

47.8.2 Attorney's Fees and Expenses Under the Equal Access to Justice Act. This rule implements the provisions of the Equal Access to Justice Act, Public Law No. 96-481, 94 Stat. 2325 (1980).

(a) Applications to the Court of Appeals. An application for an award of fees and expenses pursuant to 28 U.S.C.S. § 2412(d)(1)(B) must identify the applicant and the proceeding for which an award is sought. The application must show the nature and extent of services provided in this court and that the applicant has prevailed, and must identify the position of the United States or an agency thereof that the applicant alleges was not substantially justified.

(b) Petitions by Permission. A petition for leave to appeal pursuant to 5 U.S.C.S. § 504(c)(2) must be filed with the clerk of the court of appeals within 30 days after the entry of the agency's order, with proof of service on all other parties to the agency's proceedings.

(c) The petition must contain a copy of the order to be reviewed and any findings of fact, conclusions of law, and opinion relating thereto, a statement of the facts necessary to an understanding of the petition, and a memorandum showing why the petition for permission to appeal should be granted. An answer may be filed within 30 days after service of the petition, unless otherwise directed by the court. The application and any answer will be submitted without further briefing and oral argument unless otherwise ordered.

(d) An original and 3 copies must be filed with the court.

(e) Within 10 days after the entry of an order granting permission to appeal, the applicant must pay the clerk of this court the docket fee prescribed by the Judicial Conference of the United States. Upon receipt of the payment, the clerk will enter the appeal upon the docket. The record shall be transmitted and filed in accordance with Fed. R. App. P. 17. A notice of appeal need not be filed.

(f) Appeals/Petitions to Review. Appeals and petitions to review matters otherwise contemplated by the Equal Access to Justice Act may be filed pursuant to the applicable statutes and rules of the court.

47.9 Rules for Judicial — Conduct and Judicial Disability Proceedings .

See separately published Judicial Council of the Fifth Circuit Rules for Judicial-Conduct or Judicial-Disability effective May 4, 2008.

47.10 Rule Governing Appeals Raising Sentencing Guidelines Issues — 18 U.S.C.S. § 3742.

47.10.1 Scope of Rules. These rules govern procedures in appeals raising sentencing issues pursuant to 18 U.S.C.S. § 3742(a) or (b). These cases will proceed in the same manner and under the general rules of court governing other appeals and will not be given special expedited treatment over other criminal cases, except as hereinafter specified.

47.10.2 Motion to Expedite. If the defendant is incarcerated for a period of 1 year or less pursuant to the sentence appealed, a party may file a motion to expedite the appeal upon a showing of irreparable harm. The motion must set out: (a) when the trial transcript can be prepared and made available; and, (b) how soon thereafter appellant can file a brief. The court disfavors bifurcation of issues concerning sentencing from those issues involving the conviction.

47.10.3 The Appellate Record.

(a) Oral Reasons for Imposition of Sentence. The oral statement of reasons of the district court for imposition of a sentence as required by 18 U.S.C.S. § 3553(c), as amended, must be reduced to writing, filed, and incorporated in the record on appeal.

(b) Transcript of Sentencing Proceedings. In addition to the requirements of Fed. R. App. P. 10(b) and 5th Cir. R. 10.1 for ordering the transcript of trial proceedings, appellant is required to order a transcript of the entire sentencing proceeding (excluding the oral statement of reasons for sentencing of the district court) if a sentencing issue under 18 U.S.C.S. § 3742 will be raised on appeal.

(c) Presentence Report. If a notice of appeal is filed as authorized by 18 U.S.C. § 3742(a) and (b) for review of a sentence, the clerk will transmit to this court the presentence report. The report is transmitted separately from other parts of the record on appeal and is labeled as a sealed record if sealed by the district court.

(d) Presentence reports filed in this court as part of a record on appeal are treated as matters of public record except where the report, or a portion thereof was sealed by order of the district court.

(e) Counsel wishing access to, or a copy of, sealed presentence reports, or portions of such reports, may request them from the clerk's office by such means as the clerk permits. Counsel must return the copy of the presentence report, without duplicating it. Counsel should avoid disclosure of confidential matters in their public filings. (Amended Dec. 1, 2002; July 15, 2003, Nov. 1, 2004; Dec. 1, 2006; As amended Dec. 1, 2009.)

FRAP 48. Masters.

(a) Appointment; powers. A court of appeals may appoint a special master to hold hearings, if necessary, and to recommend factual findings and disposition in matters ancillary to proceedings in the court. Unless the order referring a matter to a master specifies or limits the master's powers, those powers include, but are not limited to, the following:

(1) regulating all aspects of a hearing;

(2) taking all appropriate action for the efficient performance of the master's duties under the order;

(3) requiring the production of evidence on all matters embraced in the reference; and

(4) administering oaths and examining witnesses and parties.

(b) Compensation. If the master is not a judge or court employee, the court must determine the master's compensation and whether the cost is to be charged to any party.

I.O.P.

OTHER INTERNAL OPERATING PROCEDURES

Judicial Council. — The judicial council established by 28 U.S.C. § 332 is composed of 19 judges — the chief circuit judge, nine circuit judges, and nine district judges. The chief circuit judge and the active circuit judge next in seniority serve permanent terms. All other council members serve for staggered three-year terms. The council meets on call of the chief circuit judge pursuant to statute.

Judicial Conference. — Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 333, the chief circuit judge may summon biennially or annually the federal judges of the circuit to a conference, at a designated time and place, for the purpose of considering the state of business of the courts and advising means of improving the administration of justice within the circuit. A copy of the court's rule for representation and active participation of the members of the bar of the circuit is available from the clerk or circuit executive.

Lawyers Advisory Committee. — The court is assisted in its rule-making function and in the drafting of these Internal Operating Procedures by a committee composed of 2 lawyers from each state in the circuit. These lawyers are appointed for staggered terms by the chief judge upon recommendation of the circuit judges from that state. Their terms are for 2 years. They examine and comment upon suggested rule and procedure changes.

Recusal or Disqualification of Judges.

(A) Grounds — Judges may recuse themselves under any circumstances considered sufficient to require such action. Judges must disqualify themselves under circumstances set forth in 28 U.S.C. § 455, or in accordance with Canon 3C, Code of Conduct for United States Judges as adopted by the Judicial Conference of the United States.

(B) Procedure

(1) Administrative Motions — If an initiating judge recuses himself or herself from considering, or is disqualified to consider an administrative motion, he or she will notify the clerk, who will advise the recused judge of the next initiating judge and request that the file be sent to that judge.

(2) Summary Calendar Cases — The above procedure is followed, except that the substitute or backup judge is called because it is court practice that cases are not ordinarily disposed of on the merits by only 2 judges.

(3) Hearing Calendar Cases — Prior to the formal publication of the court calendar, each judge on the panel is furnished with a copy of the 5th Cir. R. 28.2.1 certificate of interested persons for the judge's study to determine whether recusal or disqualification is appropriate.

(C) If a judge recuses, or is disqualified, he or she immediately notifies the other members of the panel, and arrangements are made for a substitute judge.

SPECIAL PANELS AND CASES REQUIRING SPECIAL HANDLING

Corporate Reorganization — Chapter 11.

The first appeal is handled in the usual manner. Counsel must state in their briefs whether the proceeding is likely to be complex and protracted so that the panel can determine whether it should enter an order directing that it will be the permanent panel for subsequent appeals in the same matter. If there are likely to be successive appeals, a single panel may thus become fully familiar with the case thus making the handling of future appeals more expeditious and economical for litigants, counsel and the court. (For the rule regarding direct appeals in bankruptcy matters see 5th Cir. R. 47.4).

Criminal Justice Act Plan. The court has adopted a plan and guidelines under the Criminal Justice Act. Copies are available from the clerk.

Certified Records for Supreme Court of the United States. The clerk's office does not prepare a certified record unless counsel specifically requests it or the Clerk of the United States Supreme Court so directs. (See generally Sup. Ct. R. 12.7, 16.2, and 19.4).

Building Security.

(A) Reasons for Building Security — These rules are to minimize interference with and disruptions of the court's business, to preserve decorum in conducting the court's business and to provide effective security in the John Minor Wisdom United States Court of Appeals Building and garage located at 600 Camp Street, New Orleans, Louisiana. These entire premises are called The Building.

(B) Security Personnel — The term "Security Personnel" means the U.S. Marshal or Deputy Marshal, Court Security Officer, or a member of the Federal Protective Service Police.

(C) Carrying of Parcels, Bags, and Other Objects — Security Personnel shall inspect all objects carried by persons entering The Building. No one shall enter or remain in The Building without submitting to an inspection.

(D) Search of Persons — Security personnel may search any person entering The Building or any space in it. Anyone who refuses a search must be denied entry.

(E) Unseemly Conduct — No person shall:

(1) Loiter, sleep or conduct oneself in an unseemly or disorderly manner in The Building;

(2) Interfere with or disturb the conduct of the court's business in any manner;

(3) Eat or drink in the halls of The Building or in any courtrooms except at court approved social functions;

(4) Block any entrance to or exit from The Building or interfere in any person's entry into or exit from The Building.

(F) Entering and Leaving — All persons must enter and leave courtrooms only through such doorways and at such times as are designated by the Security Personnel.

(G) Spectators — The entrance and departure of spectators to or from courtrooms is subject to the presiding judge's directions. The U. S. Marshal may designate spectator seating in any courtroom. Spectators excluded because of lack of seating and spectators leaving the courtroom while court is in session or any recess shall not loiter or remain in the area adjacent to the courtroom.

(H) Cameras and Electronic Equipment — No person shall introduce or attempt to introduce any type of camera, recording equipment, or other type of electrical or electronic device into The Building without the court's permission.

(I) Weapons — Except for Security Personnel, no person shall be admitted to or allowed to remain in The Building with any object that might be employed as a weapon unless authorized in writing by the court to do so.

(J) Enforcement — Security Personnel shall enforce these security provisions and any other provisions the court might implement. Attorneys and parties who violate these provisions are subject to, inter alia, contempt proceedings and sanctions.

RULES FOR JUDICIAL-CONDUCT AND JUDICIAL-DISABILITY PROCEEDINGS

Effective April 10, 2008

Preface

These Rules were promulgated by the Judicial Conference of the United States, after public comment, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 331 and 358, to establish standards and procedures for addressing complaints filed by complainants or identified by chief judges, under the Judicial Conduct and Disability Act, 28 U.S.C. §§ 351-364.

Fifth Circuit Rule 19 is taken from preexisting local Rule 7; it is not inconsistent with the rules promulgated by the Judicial Conference of the United States and remains in force as a result of the reaffirmation by the Judicial Council on May 4, 2008, of the order delegating petitions for review to five-judge panels. See Rule 2(a).

The Fifth Circuit Comments and Procedures are adapted from the preexisting local rules not in conflict with the rules promulgated by the Judicial Conference of the United States. They are intended to provide additional information that may be useful to persons wishing to file complaints.

The former Fifth Circuit Rules Governing Complaints of Judicial Misconduct or Disability will hereinafter be cited as follows: 5th Cir. R. ____.

Delegations of authority approved by the Judicial Council are also appended to the respective rules to which they pertain.

ARTICLE I. GENERAL PROVISIONS

Rule 1. Scope.

These Rules govern proceedings under the Judicial Conduct and Disability Act, 28 U.S.C. §§ 351-364 (the Act), to determine whether a covered judge has engaged in conduct prejudicial to the effective and expeditious administration of the business of the courts or is unable to discharge the duties of office because of mental or physical disability.

Rule 2. Effect and construction.

(a) Generally. These Rules are mandatory; they supersede any conflicting judicial-council rules. Judicial councils may promulgate additional rules to implement the Act as long as those rules do not conflict with these Rules.

(b) Exception. A Rule will not apply if, when performing duties authorized by the Act, a chief judge, a special committee, a judicial council, the Judicial Conference Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability, or the Judicial Conference of the United States expressly finds that exceptional circumstances render application of that Rule in a particular proceeding manifestly unjust or contrary to the purposes of the Act or these Rules.

Rule 3. Definitions.

(a) Chief Judge. "Chief judge" means the chief judge of a United States Court of Appeals, of the United States Court of International Trade, or of the United States Court of Federal Claims.

(b) Circuit Clerk. "Circuit clerk" means a clerk of a United States court of appeals, the clerk of the United States Court of International Trade, the clerk of the United States Court of Federal Claims, or the circuit executive of the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.

(c) Complaint. A complaint is:

(1) a document that, in accordance with Rule 6, is filed by any person in his or her individual capacity or on behalf of a professional organization; or

(2) information from any source, other than a document described in (c)(1), that gives a chief judge probable cause to believe that a covered judge, as defined in Rule 4, has engaged in misconduct or may have a disability, whether or not the information is framed as or is intended to be an allegation of misconduct or disability.

(d) Court of Appeals, District Court, and District Judge. "Courts of appeals," "district court," and "district judge," where appropriate, include the United States Court of Federal Claims, the United States Court of International Trade, and the judges thereof.

(e) Disability. "Disability" is a temporary or permanent condition rendering a judge unable to discharge the duties of the particular judicial office. Examples of disability include substance abuse, the inability to stay awake during court proceedings, or a severe impairment of cognitive abilities.

(f) Judicial Council and Circuit. "Judicial council" and "circuit," where appropriate, include any courts designated in 28 U.S.C. § 363.

(g) Magistrate Judge. "Magistrate judge," where appropriate, includes a special master appointed by the Court of Federal Claims under 42 U.S.C. § 300aa-12(c).

(h) Misconduct. Cognizable misconduct:

(1) is conduct prejudicial to the effective and expeditious administration of the business of the courts. Misconduct includes, but is not limited to:

(A) using the judge's office to obtain special treatment for friends or relatives;

(B) accepting bribes, gifts, or other personal favors related to the judicial office;

(C) having improper discussions with parties or counsel for one side in a case;

(D) treating litigants or attorneys in a demonstrably egregious and hostile manner;

(E) engaging in partisan political activity or making inappropriately partisan statements;

(F) soliciting funds for organizations; or

(G) violating other specific, mandatory standards of judicial conduct, such as those pertaining to restrictions on outside income and requirements for financial disclosure.

(2) is conduct occurring outside the performance of official duties if the conduct might have a prejudicial effect on the administration of the business of the courts, including a substantial and widespread lowering of public confidence in the courts among reasonable people.

(3) does not include:

(A) an allegation that is directly related to the merits of a decision or procedural ruling. An allegation that calls into question the correctness of a judge's ruling, including a failure to recuse, without more, is meritsrelated. If the decision or ruling is alleged to be the result of an improper motive, e.g., a bribe, ex parte contact, racial or ethnic bias, or improper conduct in rendering a decision or ruling, such as personally derogatory remarks irrelevant to the issues, the complaint is not cognizable to the extent that it attacks the merits.

(B) an allegation about delay in rendering a decision or ruling, unless the allegation concerns an improper motive in delaying a particular decision or habitual delay in a significant number of unrelated cases.

(i) Subject judge. "Subject judge" means any judge described in Rule 4 who is the subject of a complaint.

Fifth Circuit Comments 3.1, 3.2

3.1 Basis for Complaints. The law authorizes complaints against United States circuit, district, bankruptcy, and magistrate judges who have "engaged in conduct prejudicial to the effective and expeditious administration of business of the courts" , or who are "unable to discharge all the duties of office by reason of mental or physical disability." The conduct to which the law is addressed does not include making wrong decisions-even very wrong decisions-for a complaint may be dismissed if it is "directly related to the merits of a decision or procedural ruling." Disagreements with a judge's rulings should be raised through the normal appellate review process because these judicial misconduct procedures are not a substitute for or supplement to a proper appeal under the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure. "Mental or physical disability" may include temporary conditions as well as permanent disability. (Former 5th Cir. R. 1(B))

3.2 Limitations on use of the judicial misconduct procedures. The complaint procedures are not intended to provide a means of reviewing a judge's decision or ruling in a case. The judicial council of the circuit, the body which takes action under the complaint procedure, does not have the power to change a decision or ruling. Only a court can do that. More specifically, the complaint procedures may not be ordinarily used to:

1. Have a judge disqualified or recused from a case;
2. Transfer a pending case from one judge or court to another;
3. Compel a judge to make a ruling on a particular motion in a case;
4. Have money damages awarded;
5. Obtain release from custody.

(Former 5th Cir. R. 1(E)).

Rule 4. Covered Judges.

A complaint under these Rules may concern the actions or capacity only of judges of United States courts of appeals, judges of United States district courts, judges of United States bankruptcy courts, United States magistrate judges, and judges of the courts specified in 28 U.S.C. § 363.

Fifth Circuit Procedure 4

Judges subject to the procedure.

(a) The judicial misconduct and disability complaint procedure applies to judges of the United States courts of appeals, district and bankruptcy courts, and magistrate judges of the Fifth Circuit. The rules therefore apply to judges of the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, bankruptcy, and magistrate judges of federal courts within the states of Texas, Louisiana, and Mississippi. (Former 5th Cir. R. 1(C)(1)).

(b) Complaints against other federal court officials within the Fifth Circuit should be made to their supervisors. If the complaints cannot be resolved satisfactorily at lower levels, they may be referred to the chief judge of the employing court whose decision will be final, subject to review only as the judicial council may prescribe. (Former 5th Cir. R. 1(C)(2)).

ARTICLE II. INITIATION OF A COMPLAINT

Rule 5. Identification of a complaint.

(a) Identification. When a chief judge has information constituting reasonable grounds for inquiry into whether a covered judge has engaged in misconduct or has a disability, the chief judge may conduct an inquiry, as he or she deems appropriate, into the accuracy of the information even if no related complaint has been filed. A chief judge who finds probable cause to believe that misconduct has occurred or that a disability exists may seek an informal resolution that he or she finds satisfactory. If no informal resolution is achieved or is feasible, the chief judge may identify a complaint and, by written order stating the reasons, begin the review provided in Rule 11. If the evidence of misconduct is clear and convincing and no informal resolution is achieved or is feasible, the chief judge must identify a complaint. A chief judge must not decline to identify a complaint merely because the person making the allegation has not filed a complaint under Rule 6. This Rule is subject to Rule 7.

(b) Noncompliance with Rule 6(d). Rule 6 complaints that do not comply with the requirements of Rule 6(d) must be considered under this Rule.

Rule 6. Filing a complaint.

(a) Form. A complainant may use the form reproduced in the appendix to these Rules or a form designated by the rules of the judicial council in the circuit in which the complaint is filed. A complaint form is also available on each court of appeals' website or may be obtained from the circuit clerk or any district court or bankruptcy court within the circuit. A form is not necessary to file a complaint, but the complaint must be written and must include the information described in (b).

(b) Brief statement of facts. A complaint must contain a concise statement that details the specific facts on which the claim of misconduct or disability is based. The statement of facts should include a description of:

(1) what happened;

(2) when and where the relevant events happened;

(3) any information that would help an investigator check the facts; and

(4) for an allegation of disability, any additional facts that form the basis of that allegation.

(c) Legibility. A complaint should be typewritten if possible. If not typewritten, it must be legible. An illegible complaint will be returned to the complainant with a request to resubmit it in legible form. If a resubmitted complaint is still illegible, it will not be accepted for filing.

(d) Complainant's Address and Signature; Verification. The complainant must provide a contact address and sign the complaint. The truth of the statements made in the complaint must be verified in writing under penalty of perjury. If any of these requirements are not met, the complaint will be accepted for filing, but it will be reviewed under only Rule 5(b).

(e) Number of Copies; Envelope Marking. The complainant shall provide the number of copies of the complaint required by local rule. Each copy should be in an envelope marked "Complaint of Misconduct" or "Complaint of Disability." The envelope must not show the name of any subject judge.

Fifth Circuit Procedure 6

6. Number of copies. Only an original of the complaint should be filed. (Former 5th Cir. R 2(E))

Rule 7. Where to initiate Complaints.

(a) Where to File. Except as provided in (b),

(1) a complaint against a judge of a United States court of appeals, a United States district court, a United States bankruptcy court, or a United States magistrate judge must be filed with the circuit clerk in the jurisdiction in which the subject judge holds office.

(2) a complaint against a judge of the United States Court of International Trade or the United States Court of Federal Claims must be filed with the respective clerk of that court.

(3) a complaint against a judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit must be filed with the circuit executive of that court.

(b) Misconduct in Another Circuit; Transfer. If a complaint alleges misconduct in the course of official business while the subject judge was sitting on a court by designation under 28 U.S.C. §§ 291-293 and 294(d), the complaint may be filed or identified with the circuit clerk of that circuit or of the subject judge's home circuit. The proceeding will continue in the circuit of the first-filed or first-identified complaint. The judicial council of the circuit where the complaint was first filed or first identified may transfer the complaint to the subject judge's home circuit or to the circuit where the alleged misconduct occurred, as the case may be.

Fifth Circuit Procedure 7

7. Where to file. Complaints should be sent to the Clerk, United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, 600 S. Maestri Place, New Orleans, LA 70130. The envelope should be marked "Complaint of Misconduct" or "Complaint of Disability." The name of the judge complained about should not appear on the envelope. (Former 5th Cir.R. 2(H)).

Rule 8. Action by Clerk.

(a) Receipt of Complaint. Upon receiving a complaint against a judge filed under Rule 5 or 6, the circuit clerk must open a file, assign a docket number according to a uniform numbering scheme promulgated by the Judicial Conference Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability, and acknowledge the complaint's receipt.

(b) Distribution of Copies. The clerk must promptly send copies of a complaint filed under Rule 6 to the chief judge or the judge authorized to act as chief judge under Rule 25(f), and copies of complaints filed under Rule 5 or 6 to each subject judge. The clerk must retain the original complaint. Any further distribution should be as provided by local rule.

(c) Complaints Against Noncovered Persons. If the clerk receives a complaint about a person not holding an office described in Rule 4, the clerk must not accept the complaint for filing under these Rules.

(d) Receipt of Complaint about a Judge and Another Noncovered Person. If a complaint is received about a judge described in Rule 4 and a person not holding an office described in Rule 4, the clerk must accept the complaint for filing under these Rules only with regard to the judge and must inform the complainant of the limitation.

Rule 9. Time for filing or identifying a complaint.

A complaint may be filed or identified at any time. If the passage of time has made an accurate and fair investigation of a complaint impractical, the complaint must be dismissed under Rule 11(c)(1)(E).

Rule 10. Abuse of the complaint procedure.

(a) Abuse Complaints. A complainant who has filed repetitive, harassing, or frivolous complaints, or has otherwise abused the complaint procedure, may be restricted from filing further complaints. After giving the complainant an opportunity to show cause in writing why his or her right to file further complaints should not be limited, a judicial council may prohibit, restrict, or impose conditions on the complainant's use of the complaint procedure. Upon written request of the complainant, the judicial council may revise or withdraw any prohibition, restriction, or condition previously imposed.

(b) Orchestrated Complaints. When many essentially identical complaints from different complainants are received and appear to be part of an orchestrated campaign, the chief judge may recommend that the judicial council issue a written order instructing the circuit clerk to accept only a certain number of such complaints for filing and to refuse to accept further ones. The clerk must send a copy of any such order to anyone whose complaint was not accepted.

THE JUDICIAL COUNCIL OF THE FIFTH CIRCUIT

In Re: Delegation to Chief Circuit Judge, or acting Judge Pursuant to rule 25(f) of the Rules For Judicial-Conduct and Judicial-Disability Proceedings

DELEGATION

In order to effectuate Rule 10(a) of the Rules for Judicial-Conduct and Judicial Disability Proceedings (made effective April 10, 2008), the Judicial Council hereby delegates the following authority to the chief circuit judge or judge acting for the chief judge pursuant to rule 25(f)

When a complainant has filed repetitive, harassing or frivolous complaints, or has otherwise abused the complaint procedure, the order dismissing the complaint under Rule 11 (c) may include a provision suspending the right of the complainant to file further complaints without written permission from the chief judge or judge acting for him or her

A complainant upon whom such a suspension is imposed may show cause, through a petition for review submitted pursuant to Rule 18, why his or her right to file further complaints should not be so limited. If, under Rule 19 (b) (1), the order of the chief judge is affirmed, the suspension shall become a permanent restriction prohibiting the filing of complaints, subject to its own terms and to the power of the Judicial Council under Rule 10(a) to revise or withdraw any prohibition, restriction or condition previously imposed.

FOR THE COUNCIL:

May 4, 2008 /s/Edith H. Jones

ARTICLE III. REVIEW OF A COMPLAINT BY THE CHIEF JUDGE

Rule 11. Review by the Chief Judge.

(a) Purpose of Chief Judge's Review. When a complaint is identified by the chief judge or is filed, the chief judge must review it unless the chief judge is disqualified under Rule 25. If the complaint contains information constituting evidence of misconduct or disability, but the complainant does not claim it as such, the chief judge must treat the complaint as if it did allege misconduct or disability and give notice to the subject judge. After reviewing the complaint, the chief judge must determine whether it should be:

(1) dismissed;

(2) concluded on the ground that voluntary corrective action has been taken;

(3) concluded because intervening events have made action on the complaint no longer necessary; or

(4) referred to a special committee.

(b) Inquiry by Chief Judge. In determining what action to take under Rule 11(a), the chief judge may conduct a limited inquiry. The chief judge, or a designee, may communicate orally or in writing with the complainant, the subject judge, and any others who may have knowledge of the matter, and may review transcripts or other relevant documents. In conducting the inquiry, the chief judge must not determine any reasonably disputed issue.

(c) Dismissal.

(1) Allowable grounds. A complaint must be dismissed in whole or in part to the extent that the chief judge concludes that the complaint:

(A) alleges conduct that, even if true, is not prejudicial to the effective and expeditious administration of the business of the courts and does not indicate a mental or physical disability resulting in inability to discharge the duties of judicial office;

(B) is directly related to the merits of a decision or procedural ruling;

(C) is frivilous;

(D) is based on allegations lacking sufficient evidence to raise an inference that misconduct has occurred or that a disability exists;

(E) is based on allegations which are incapable of being established through investigation;

(F) has been filed in the wrong circuit under Rule 7; or

(G) is otherwise not appropriate for consideration under the Act.

(2) Disallowed grounds. A complaint must not be dismissed solely because it repeats allegations of a previously dismissed complaint if it also contains material information not previously considered and does not constitute harassment of the subject judge.

(d) Corrective Action. The chief judge may conclude the complaint proceeding in whole or in part if:

(1) an informal resolution under Rule 5 satisfactory to the chief judge was reached before the complaint was filed under Rule 6, or

(2) the chief judge determines that the subject judge has taken appropriate voluntary corrective action that acknowledges and remedies the problems raised by the complaint.

(e) Intervening Events. The chief judge may conclude the complaint proceeding in whole or in part upon determining that intervening events render some or all of the allegations moot or make remedial action impossible.

(f) Appointment of Special Committee. If some or all of the complaint is not dismissed or concluded, the chief judge must promptly appoint a special committee to investigate the complaint or any relevant portion of it and to make recommendations to the judicial council. Before appointing a special committee, the chief judge must invite the subject judge to respond to the complaint either orally or in writing if the judge was not given an opportunity during the limited inquiry. In the chief judge's discretion, separate complaints may be joined and assigned to a single special committee. Similarly, a single complaint about more than one judge may be severed and more than one special committee appointed.

(g) Notice of Chief Judge's Action; Petitions for Review.

(1) When special committee is appointed. If a special committee is appointed, the chief judge must notify the complainant and the subject judge that the matter has been referred to a special committee and identify the members of the committee. A copy of the order appointing the special committee must be sent to the Judicial Conference Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability.

(2) When chief judge disposes of complaint without appointing special committee. If the chief judge disposes of the complaint under Rule 11(c), (d), or (e), the chief judge must prepare a supporting memorandum that sets forth the reasons for the disposition. Except as authorized by 28 U.S.C. § 360, the memorandum must not include the name of the complainant or of the subject judge. The order and the supporting memorandum, which may be one document, must be provided to the complainant, the subject judge, and the Judicial Conference Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability.

(3) Right of petition for review. If the chief judge disposes of a complaint under Rule 11(c), (d), or (e), the complainant and subject judge must be notified of the right to petition the judicial council for review of the disposition, as provided in Rule 18. If a petition for review is filed, the chief judge must promptly transmit all materials obtained in connection with the inquiry under Rule 11(b) to the circuit clerk for transmittal to the judicial council.

(h) Public Availability of Chief Judge's Decision. The chief judge's decision must be made public to the extent, at the time, and in the manner provided in Rule 24.

ARTICLE IV. INVESTIGATION AND REPORT BY SPECIAL COMMITTEE

Rule 12. Composition of Special Committee.

(a) Membership. Except as provided in (e), a special committee appointed under Rule 11(f) must consist of the chief judge and equal numbers of circuit and district judges. If the complaint is about a district judge, bankruptcy judge, or magistrate judge, then, when possible, the district-judge members of the committee must be from districts other than the district of the subject judge. For the courts named in 28 U.S.C. § 363, the committee must be selected from the judges serving on the subject judge's court.

(b) Presiding Officer. When appointing the committee, the chief judge may serve as the presiding officer or else must designate a committee member as the presiding officer.

(c) Bankruptcy Judge or Magistrate Judge as Adviser. If the subject judge is a bankruptcy judge or magistrate judge, he or she may, within 14 days after being notified of the committee's appointment, ask the chief judge to designate as a committee adviser another bankruptcy judge or magistrate judge, as the case may be. The chief judge must grant such a request but may otherwise use discretion in naming the adviser. Unless the adviser is a Court of Federal Claims special master appointed under 42 U.S.C. § 300aa-12(c), the adviser must be from a district other than the district of the subject bankruptcy judge or subject magistrate judge. The adviser cannot vote but has the other privileges of a committee member.

(d) Provision of Documents. The chief judge must certify to each other member of the committee and to any adviser copies of the complaint and statement of facts in whole or relevant part, and any other relevant documents on file.

(e) Continuing Qualification of Committee Members. A member of a special committee who was qualified to serve when appointed may continue to serve on the committee even though the member relinquishes the position of chief judge, active circuit judge, or active district judge, as the case may be, but only if the member continues to hold office under Article III, Section 1, of the Constitution of the United States, or under 28 U.S.C. § 171.

(f) Inability of Committee Member to Complete Service. If a member of a special committee can no longer serve because of death, disability, disqualification, resignation, retirement from office, or other reason, the chief judge must decide whether to appoint a replacement member, either a circuit or district judge as needed under (a). No special committee appointed under these Rules may function with only a single member, and the votes of a two-member committee must be unanimous.

(g) Voting. All actions by a committee must be by vote of a majority of all members of the committee.

Rule 13. Conduct of an Investigation.

(a) Extent and Methods of Special-Committee Investigation. Each special committee must determine the appropriate extent and methods of the investigation in light of the allegations of the complaint. If, in the course of the investigation, the committee has cause to believe that the subject judge may have engaged in misconduct or has a disability that is beyond the scope of the complaint, the committee must refer the new matter to the chief judge for action under Rule 5 or Rule 11.

(b) Criminal Conduct. If the committee's investigation concerns conduct that may be a crime, the committee must consult with the appropriate prosecutorial authorities to the extent permitted by the Act to avoid compromising any criminal investigation. The committee has final authority over the timing and extent of its investigation and the formulation of its recommendations.

(c) Staff. The committee may arrange for staff assistance to conduct the investigation. It may use existing staff of the judicial branch or may hire special staff through the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts.

(d) Delegation of Subpoena Power; Contempt. The chief judge may delegate the authority to exercise the committee's subpoena powers. The judicial council or special committee may institute a contempt proceeding under 28 U.S.C. § 332(d) against anyone who fails to comply with a subpoena.

Rule 14. Conduct of Hearings by Special Committee.

(a) Purpose of Hearings. The committee may hold hearings to take testimony and receive other evidence, to hear argument, or both. If the committee is investigating allegations against more than one judge, it may hold joint or separate hearings.

(b) Committee Evidence. Subject to Rule 15, the committee must obtain material, nonredundant evidence in the form it considers appropriate. In the committee's discretion, evidence may be obtained by committee members, staff, or both. Witnesses offering testimonial evidence may include the complainant and the subject judge.

(c) Counsel for Witnesses. The subject judge has the right to counsel. The special committee has discretion to decide whether other witnesses may have counsel present when they testify.

(d) Witness Fees. Witness fees must be paid as provided in 28 U.S.C. § 1821.

(e) Oath. All testimony taken at a hearing must be given under oath or affirmation.

(f) Rules of Evidence. The Federal Rules of Evidence do not apply to special-committee hearings.

(g) Record and Transcript. A record and transcript must be made of all hearings.

Rule 15. Rights of Subject Judge.

(a) Notice.

(1) Generally. The subject judge must receive written notice of:

(A) the appointment of a special committee under Rule 11(f);

(B) the expansion of the scope of an investigation under Rule 13(a);

(C) any hearing under Rule 14, including its purposes, the names of any witnesses the committee intends to call, and the text of any statements that have been taken from those witnesses.

(2) Suggestion of additional witnesses. The subject judge may suggest additional witnesses to the committee.

(b) Report of the Special Committee. The subject judge must be sent a copy of the special committee's report when it is filed with the judicial council.

(c) Presentation of Evidence. At any hearing held under Rule 14, the subject judge has the right to present evidence, to compel the attendance of witnesses, and to compel the production of documents. At the request of the subject judge, the chief judge or the judge's designee must direct the circuit clerk to issue a subpoena to a witness under 28 U.S.C. § 332(d)(1). The subject judge must be given the opportunity to cross-examine committee witnesses, in person or by counsel.

(d) Presentation of Argument. The subject judge may submit written argument to the special committee and must be given a reasonable opportunity to present oral argument at an appropriate stage of the investigation.

(e) Attendance at Hearings. The subject judge has the right to attend any hearing held under Rule 14 and to receive copies of the transcript, of any documents introduced, and of any written arguments submitted by the complainant to the committee.

(f) Representation by Counsel. The subject judge may choose to be represented by counsel in the exercise of any right enumerated in this Rule. As provided in Rule 20(e), the United States may bear the costs of the representation.

Rule 16. Rights of Complainant in Investigation.

(a) Notice. The complainant must receive written notice of the investigation as provided in Rule 11(g)(1). When the special committee's report to the judicial council is filed, the complainant must be notified of the filing. The judicial council may, in its discretion, provide a copy of the report of a special committee to the complainant.

(b) Opportunity to Provide Evidence. If the committee determines that the complainant may have evidence that does not already exist in writing, a representative of the committee must interview the complainant.

(c) Presentation of Argument. The complainant may submit written argument to the special committee. In its discretion, the special committee may permit the complainant to offer oral argument.

(d) Representation by Counsel. A complainant may submit written argument through counsel and, if permitted to offer oral argument, may do so through counsel.

(e) Cooperation. In exercising its discretion under this Rule, a special committee may take into account the degree of the complainant's cooperation in preserving the confidentiality of the proceedings, including the identity of the subject judge.

Rule 17. Special-Committee Report.

The committee must file with the judicial council a comprehensive report of its investigation, including findings and recommendations for council action. The report must be accompanied by a statement of the vote by which it was adopted, any separate or dissenting statements of committee members, and the record of any hearings held under Rule 14. A copy of the report and accompanying statement must be sent to the Judicial Conference Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability.

ARTICLE V. JUDICIAL-COUNCIL REVIEW

Rule 18. Petitions for Review of Chief Judge Dispositions Under Rule 11(c), (d), or (e).

(a) Petitions for Review. After the chief judge issues an order under Rule 11(c), (d), or (e), a complainant or subject judge may petition the judicial council of the circuit to review the order. By rules promulgated under 28 U.S.C. § 358, the judicial council may refer a petition for review filed under this Rule to a panel of no fewer than five members of the council, at least two of whom must be district judges.

(b) When to File; Form; Where to File. A petition for review must be filed in the office of the circuit clerk within 35 days of the date on the clerk's letter informing the parties of the chief judge's order. The petition should be in letter form, addressed to the circuit clerk, and in an envelope marked "Misconduct Petition" or "Disability Petition." The name of the subject judge must not be shown on the envelope. The letter should be typewritten or otherwise legible. It should begin with "I hereby petition the judicial council for review of ..." and state the reasons why the petition should be granted. It must be signed.

(c) Receipt and Distribution of Petition. A circuit clerk who receives a petition for review filed within the time allowed and in proper form must:

(1) acknowledge its receipt and send a copy to the complainant or subject judge, as the case may be;

(2) promptly distribute to each member of the judicial council, or its relevant panel, except for any member disqualified under Rule 25, or make available in the manner provided by local rule, the following materials:

(A) copies of the complaint;

(B) all materials obtained by the chief judge in connection with the inquiry;

(C) the chief judge's order disposing of the complaint;

(D) any memorandum in support of the chief judge's order;

(E) the petition for review; and

(F) an appropriate ballot;

(3) send the petition for review to the Judicial Conference Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability. Unless the Judicial Conference Committee requests them, the clerk will not send copies of the materials obtained by the chief judge.

(d) Untimely Petition. The clerk must refuse to accept a petition that is received after the deadline in (b).

(e) Timely Petition Not in Proper Form. When the clerk receives a petition filed within the time allowed but in a form that is improper to a degree that would substantially impair its consideration by the judicial council — such as a document that is ambiguous about whether it is intended to be a petition for review — the clerk must acknowledge its receipt, call the filer's attention to the deficiencies, and give the filer the opportunity to correct the deficiencies within 21 days of the date of the clerk's letter about the deficiencies or within the original deadline for filing the petition, whichever is later. If the deficiencies are corrected within the time allowed, the clerk will proceed according to paragraphs (a) and (c) of this Rule. If the deficiencies are not corrected, the clerk must reject the petition.

Fifth Circuit Procedure 18

18. Where to file. Petitions should be sent to the Clerk, United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, 600 S. Maestri Place, New Orleans, LA 70130. The envelope should be marked "Misconduct Petition" or " Disability Petition." The name of the judge complained about should not appear on the envelope. (Former 5th Cir. R. 5 (H)).

Rule 19. Judicial-Council Disposition of Petitions for Review.

(a) Rights of Subject Judge. At any time after a complainant files a petition for review, the subject judge may file a written response with the circuit clerk. The clerk must promptly distribute copies of the response to each member of the judicial council or of the relevant panel, unless that member is disqualified under Rule 25. Copies must also be distributed to the chief judge, to the complainant, and to the Judicial Conference Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability. The subject judge must not otherwise communicate with individual council members about the matter. The subject judge must be given copies of any communications to the judicial council from the complainant.

(b) Judicial-Council Action. After considering a petition for review and the materials before it, a judicial council may:

(1) affirm the chief judge's disposition by denying the petition;

(2) return the matter to the chief judge with directions to conduct a further inquiry under Rule 11(b) or to identify a complaint under Rule 5;

(3) return the matter to the chief judge with directions to appoint a special committee under Rule 11(f); or

(4) in exceptional circumstances, take other appropriate action.

(c) Notice of Council Decision. Copies of the judicial council's order, together with any accompanying memorandum in support of the order or separate concurring or dissenting statements, must be given to the complainant, the subject judge, and the Judicial Conference Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability.

(d) Memorandum of Council Decision. If the council's order affirms the chief judge's disposition, a supporting memorandum must be prepared only if the judicial council concludes that there is a need to supplement the chief judge's explanation. A memorandum supporting a council order must not include the name of the complainant or the subject judge.

(e) Review of Judicial-Council Decision. If the judicial council's decision is adverse to the petitioner, and if no member of the council dissented on the ground that a special committee should be appointed under Rule 11(f), the complainant must be notified that he or she has no right to seek review of the decision. If there was a dissent, the petitioner must be informed that he or she can file a petition for review under Rule 21(b) solely on the issue of whether a special committee should be appointed.

(f) Public Availability of Judicial-Council Decision. Materials related to the council's decision must be made public to the extent, at the time, and in the manner set forth in Rule 24.

Fifth Circuit Rule 19

Review by the judicial council. The judicial council may, consistent with 28 U. S. C. § 352 (d), delegate the review process to rotating panels drawn at random with power to act on behalf of the full council. (Former 5th Cir. R. 7)

Order of the Judicial Council effectuating rule 19:

JUDICIAL COUNCIL OF THE FIFTH CIRCUIT

Before: Chief Judge Henry A. Poliz; Circuit Judges Carolyn Dineen King, Will Garwood, E. Grady Jolly, W. Eugene Davis, Edith H. Jones, Jerry E. Smith, Jacques L. Wiener, Jr., Rhesa H Barksdale, and Emilio M. Garza; District Judges Morey L. Sear, John v. Parker, F.A. Little, Jr., L.T. Senter, Jr., William H. Barbour, Jr., Barefoot Sanders, George P. Kazen, Howell Cobb, and Edward C. Prado.

Resolution

BE IT RESOLVED that the Judicial Council review of orders of the chief judge of the circuit dismissing 28 U.S. C. 372 (c) complaints shall be processed as follows:

The members of the Judicial Council excluding the chief judge of the circuit and the circuit judge next senior in service, shall be assigned by random selection to three panels, each composed of five judges. The two remaining members will remain as backup in the event of absence or recusal of any panel member.

The panels shall be known as Appellate Review Panels and shall be separately identified. Panel assignments will be made annually, effective January 1 of each year, except for the inaugurative panel which is to serve for the period of September 1, 1994 through December 31, 994 [sic].

Each panel shall perform the review functions for four consecutive calendar months, and may do so by communicating in person, by telephone, and/or by electronic and postal mail.

Panels are empowered to act on behalf of and in the name of the Judicial Council to affirm an appealed order, provided at least four members agree to an affirmance and no panelist suggests full Council review. All other matters are to be referred to the full Council for disposition, together with any recommendation(s) the panel may deem appropriate.

For the Council
/s/ Henry A. Politz

August 29, 1994 Henry A. Politz, Chief Judge

Rule 20. Judicial-Council Consideration of Reports and Recommendations of Special Committees.

(a) Rights of Subject Judge. Within 21 days after the filing of the report of a special committee, the subject judge may send a written response to the members of the judicial council. The judge must also be given an opportunity to present argument through counsel, written or oral, as determined by the council. The judge must not otherwise communicate with council members about the matter.

(b) Judicial-Council Action.

(1) Discretionary actions. Subject to the judge's rights set forth in subsection (a), the judicial council may:

(A) dismiss the complaint because:

(i) even if the claim is true, the claimed conduct is not conduct prejudicial to the effective and expeditious administration of the business of the courts and does not indicate a mental or physical disability resulting in inability to discharge the duties of office;

(ii) the complaint is directly related to the merits of a decision or procedural ruling;

(iii) the facts on which the complaint is based have not been established; or

(iv) the complaint is otherwise not appropriate for consideration under 28 U.S.C. §§ 351—364.

(B) conclude the proceeding because appropriate corrective action has been taken or intervening events have made the proceeding unnecessary.

(C) refer the complaint to the Judicial Conference of the United States with the council's recommendations for action.

(D) take remedial action to ensure the effective and expeditious administration of the business of the courts, including:

(i) censuring or reprimanding the subject judge, either by private communication or by public announcement;

(ii) ordering that no new cases be assigned to the subject judge for a limited, fixed period;

(iii) in the case of a magistrate judge, ordering the chief judge of the district court to take action specified by the council, including the initiation of removal proceedings under 28 U.S.C. § 631(i) or 42 U.S.C. § 300aa—12(c)(2);

(iv) in the case of a bankruptcy judge, removing the judge from office under 28 U.S.C. § 152(e);

(v) in the case of a circuit or district judge, requesting the judge to retire voluntarily with the provision (if necessary) that ordinary length-of-service requirements will be waived; and

(vi) in the case of a circuit or district judge who is eligible to retire but does not do so, certifying the disability of the judge under 28 U.S.C. § 372(b) so that an additional judge may be appointed.

(E) take any combination of actions described in (b)(1)(A)-(D) of this Rule that is within its power.

(2) Mandatory actions. A judicial council must refer a complaint to the Judicial Conference if the council determines that a circuit judge or district judge may have engaged in conduct that:

(A) might constitute ground for impeachment; or

(B) in the interest of justice, is not amenable to resolution by the judicial council.

(c) Inadequate Basis for Decision. If the judicial council finds that a special committee's report, recommendations, and record provide an inadequate basis for decision, it may return the matter to the committee for further investigation and a new report, or it may conduct further investigation. If the judicial council decides to conduct further investigation, the subject judge must be given adequate prior notice in writing of that decision and of the general scope and purpose of the additional investigation. The judicial council's conduct of the additional investigation must generally accord with the procedures and powers set forth in Rules 13 through 16 for the conduct of an investigation by a special committee.

(d) Council Vote. Council action must be taken by a majority of those members of the council who are not disqualified. A decision to remove a bankruptcy judge from office requires a majority vote of all the members of the council.

(e) Recommendation for Fee Reimbursement. If the complaint has been finally dismissed or concluded under (b)(1)(A) or (B) of this Rule, and if the subject judge so requests, the judicial council may recommend that the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts use funds appropriated to the Judiciary to reimburse the judge for reasonable expenses incurred during the investigation, when those expenses would not have been incurred but for the requirements of the Act and these Rules. Reasonable expenses include attorneys' fees and expenses related to a successful defense or prosecution of a proceeding under Rule 21(a) or (b).

(f) Council Action. Council action must be by written order. Unless the council finds that extraordinary reasons would make it contrary to the interests of justice, the order must be accompanied by a memorandum setting forth the factual determinations on which it is based and the reasons for the council action. The order and the supporting memorandum must be provided to the complainant, the subject judge, and the Judicial Conference Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability. The complainant and the subject judge must be notified of any right to review of the judicial council's decision as provided in Rule 21(b).

ARTICLE VI. REVIEW BY JUDICIAL CONFERENCE COMMITTEE ON CONDUCT AND DISABILITY

Rule 21. Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability.

(a) Review by Committee. The Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability, consisting of seven members, considers and disposes of all petitions for review under (b) of this Rule, in conformity with the Committee's jurisdictional statement. Its disposition of petitions for review is ordinarily final. The Judicial Conference of the United States may, in its sole discretion, review any such Committee decision, but a complainant or subject judge does not have a right to this review.

(b) Reviewable Matters.

(1) Upon petition. A complainant or subject judge may petition the Committee for review of a judicial-council order entered in accordance with:

(A) Rule 20(b)(1)(A), (B), (D), or (E); or

(B) Rule 19(b)(1) or (4) if one or more members of the judicial council dissented from the order on the ground that a special committee should be appointed under Rule 11(f); in that event, the Committee's review will be limited to the issue of whether a special committee should be appointed.

(2) Upon Committee's initiative. At its initiative and in its sole discretion, the Committee may review any judicial-council order entered under Rule 19(b)(1) or (4), but only to determine whether a special committee should be appointed. Before undertaking the review, the Committee must invite that judicial council to explain why it believes the appointment of a special committee is unnecessary, unless the reasons are clearly stated in the judicial council's order denying the petition for review. If the Committee believes that it would benefit from a submission by the subject judge, it may issue an appropriate request. If the Committee determines that a special committee should be appointed, the Committee must issue a written decision giving its reasons.

(c) Committee Vote. Any member of the Committee from the same circuit as the subject judge is disqualified from considering or voting on a petition for review. Committee decisions under (b) of this Rule must be by majority vote of the qualified Committee members. If only six members are qualified to vote on a petition for review, the decision must be made by a majority of a panel of five members drawn from a randomly selected list that rotates after each decision by a panel drawn from the list. The members who will determine the petition must be selected based on committee membership as of the date on which the petition is received. Those members selected to hear the petition should serve in that capacity until final disposition of the petition, whether or not their term of committee membership has ended. If only four members are qualified to vote, the Chief Justice must appoint, if available, an ex-member of the Committee or, if not, another United States judge to consider the petition.

(d) Additional Investigation. Except in extraordinary circumstances, the Committee will not conduct an additional investigation. The Committee may return the matter to the judicial council with directions to undertake an additional investigation. If the Committee conducts an additional investigation, it will exercise the powers of the Judicial Conference under 28 U.S.C. § 331.

(e) Oral Argument; Personal Appearance. There is ordinarily no oral argument or personal appearance before the Committee. In its discretion, the Committee may permit written submissions from the complainant or subject judge.

(f) Committee Decisions. Committee decisions under this Rule must be transmitted promptly to the Judicial Conference of the United States. Other distribution will be by the Administrative Office at the direction of the Committee chair.

(g) Finality. All orders of the Judicial Conference or of the Committee (when the Conference does not exercise its power of review) are final.

Rule 22. Procedure for Review.

(a) Filing a Petition for Review. A petition for review of a judicial-council decision may be filed by sending a brief written statement to the Judicial Conference Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability, addressed to:

Judicial Conference Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability
Attn: Office of General Counsel
Administrative Office of the United States Courts
One Columbus Circle, NE
Washington, D.C. 20544

The Administrative Office will send a copy of the petition to the complainant or subject judge, as the case may be.

(b) Form and Contents of Petition for Review. No particular form is required. The petition must contain a short statement of the basic facts underlying the complaint, the history of its consideration before the appropriate judicial council, a copy of the judicial council's decision, and the grounds on which the petitioner seeks review. The petition for review must specify the date and docket number of the judicial-council order for which review is sought. The petitioner may attach any documents or correspondence arising in the course of the proceeding before the judicial council or its special committee. A petition should not normally exceed 20 pages plus necessary attachments.

(c) Time. A petition must be submitted within 63 days of the date of the order for which review is sought.

(d) Copies. Seven copies of the petition for review must be submitted, at least one of which must be signed by the petitioner or his or her attorney. If the petitioner submits a signed declaration of inability to pay the expense of duplicating the petition, the Administrative Office must accept the original petition and must reproduce copies at its expense.

(e) Action on Receipt of Petition for Review. The Administrative Office must acknowledge receipt of a petition for review submitted under this Rule, notify the chair of the Judicial Conference Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability, and distribute the petition to the members of the Committee for their deliberation.

ARTICLE VII. MISCELLANEOUS RULES

Rule 23. Confidentiality.

(a) General Rule. The consideration of a complaint by the chief judge, a special committee, the judicial council, or the Judicial Conference Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability is confidential. Information about this consideration must not be disclosed by any judge or employee of the judicial branch or by any person who records or transcribes testimony except as allowed by these Rules. In extraordinary circumstances, a chief judge may disclose the existence of a proceeding under these Rules when necessary to maintain public confidence in the federal judiciary's ability to redress misconduct or disability.

(b) Files. All files related to complaints must be separately maintained with appropriate security precautions to ensure confidentiality.

(c) Disclosure in Decisions. Except as otherwise provided in Rule 24, written decisions of the chief judge, the judicial council, or the Judicial Conference Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability, and dissenting opinions or separate statements of members of the council or Committee may contain information and exhibits that the authors consider appropriate for inclusion, and the information and exhibits may be made public.

(d) Availability to Judicial Conference. On request of the Judicial Conference or its Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability, the circuit clerk must furnish any requested records related to a complaint. For auditing purposes, the circuit clerk must provide access to the Committee to records of proceedings under the Act at the site where the records are kept.

(e) Availability to District Court. If the judicial council directs the initiation of proceedings for removal of a magistrate judge under Rule 20(b)(1)(D)(iii), the circuit clerk must provide to the chief judge of the district court copies of the report of the special committee and any other documents and records that were before the judicial council at the time of its decision. On request of the chief judge of the district court, the judicial council may authorize release to that chief judge of any other records relating to the investigation.

(f) Impeachment Proceedings. If the Judicial Conference determines that consideration of impeachment may be warranted, it must transmit the record of all relevant proceedings to the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

(g) Subject Judge's Consent. If both the subject judge and the chief judge consent in writing, any materials from the files may be disclosed to any person. In any such disclosure, the chief judge may require that the identity of the complainant, or of witnesses in an investigation conducted by a chief judge, a special committee, or the judicial council, not be revealed.

(h) Disclosure in Special Circumstances. The Judicial Conference, its Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability, or a judicial council may authorize disclosure of information about the consideration of a complaint, including the papers, documents, and transcripts relating to the investigation, to the extent that disclosure is justified by special circumstances and is not prohibited by the Act. Disclosure may be made to judicial researchers engaged in the study or evaluation of experience under the Act and related modes of judicial discipline, but only where the study or evaluation has been specifically approved by the Judicial Conference or by the Judicial Conference Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability. Appropriate steps must be taken to protect the identities of the subject judge, the complainant, and witnesses from public disclosure. Other appropriate safeguards to protect against the dissemination of confidential information may be imposed.

(i) Disclosure of Identity by Subject Judge. Nothing in this Rule precludes the subject judge from acknowledging that he or she is the judge referred to in documents made public under Rule 24.

(j) Assistance and Consultation. Nothing in this Rule precludes the chief judge or judicial council acting on a complaint filed under the Act from seeking the help of qualified staff or from consulting other judges who may be helpful in the disposition of the complaint.

Rule 24. Public Availability of Decisions.

(a) General Rule; Specific Cases. When final action has been taken on a complaint and it is no longer subject to review, all orders entered by the chief judge and judicial council, including any supporting memoranda and any dissenting opinions or separate statements by members of the judicial council, must be made public, with the following exceptions:

(1) if the complaint is finally dismissed under Rule 11(c) without the appointment of a special committee, or if it is concluded under Rule 11(d) because of voluntary corrective action, the publicly available materials must not disclose the name of the subject judge without his or her consent.

(2) if the complaint is concluded because of intervening events, or dismissed at any time after a special committee is appointed, the judicial council must determine whether the name of the subject judge should be disclosed.

(3) if the complaint is finally disposed of by a privately communicated censure or reprimand, the publicly available materials must not disclose either the name of the subject judge or the text of the reprimand.

(4) if the complaint is finally disposed of under Rule 20(b)(1)(D) by any action other than private censure or reprimand, the text of the dispositive order must be included in the materials made public, and the name of the subject judge must be disclosed.

(5) the name of the complainant must not be disclosed in materials made public under this Rule unless the chief judge orders disclosure.

(b) Manner of Making Public. The orders described in (a) must be made public by placing them in a publicly accessible file in the office of the circuit clerk or by placing the orders on the court's public website. If the orders appear to have precedential value, the chief judge may cause them to be published. In addition, the Judicial Conference Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability will make available on the Federal Judiciary's website, www.uscourts.gov, selected illustrative orders described in paragraph (a), appropriately redacted, to provide additional information to the public on how complaints are addressed under the Act.

(c) Orders of Judicial Conference Committee. Orders of this Committee constituting final action in a complaint proceeding arising from a particular circuit will be made available to the public in the office of the clerk of the relevant court of appeals. The Committee will also make such orders available on the Federal Judiciary's website, www.uscourts.gov. When authorized by the Committee, other orders related to complaint proceedings will similarly be made available.

(d) Complaints Referred to the Judicial Conference of the United States. If a complaint is referred to the Judicial Conference under Rule 20(b)(1)(C) or 20(b)(2), materials relating to the complaint will be made public only if ordered by the Judicial Conference.

Rule 25. Disqualification.

(a) General Rule. Any judge is disqualified from participating in any proceeding under these Rules if the judge, in his or her discretion, concludes that circumstances warrant disqualification. If the complaint is filed by a judge, that judge is disqualified from participating in any consideration of the complaint except to the extent that these Rules provide for a complainant's participation. A chief judge who has identified a complaint under Rule 5 is not automatically disqualified from considering the complaint.

(b) Subject Judge. A subject judge is disqualified from considering the complaint except to the extent that these Rules provide for participation by a subject judge.

(c) Chief Judge Not Disqualified from Considering a Petition for Review of a Chief Judge's Order. If a petition for review of a chief judge's order entered under Rule 11(c), (d), or (e) is filed with the judicial council in accordance with Rule 18, the chief judge is not disqualified from participating in the council's consideration of the petition.

(d) Member of Special Committee Not Disqualified. A member of the judicial council who serves on a special committee, including the chief judge, is not disqualified from participating in council consideration of the committee's report.

(e) Subject Judge's Disqualification After Appointment of a Special Committee. Upon appointment of a special committee, the subject judge is automatically disqualified from participating in any proceeding arising under the Act or these Rules as a member of any special committee, the judicial council of the circuit, the Judicial Conference of the United States, and the Judicial Conference Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability. The disqualification continues until all proceedings on the complaint against the subject judge are finally terminated with no further right of review.

(f) Substitute for Disqualified Chief Judge. If the chief judge is disqualified from participating in consideration of the complaint, the duties and responsibilities of the chief judge under these Rules must be assigned to the most-senior active circuit judge not disqualified. If all circuit judges in regular active service are disqualified, the judicial council may determine whether to request a transfer under Rule 26, or, in the interest of sound judicial administration, to permit the chief judge to dispose of the complaint on the merits. Members of the judicial council who are named in the complaint may participate in this determination if necessary to obtain a quorum of the judicial council.

(g) Judicial-Council Action When Multiple Judges Are Disqualified. Notwithstanding any other provision in these Rules to the contrary,

(1) a member of the judicial council who is a subject judge may participate in its disposition if:

(A) participation by one or more subject judges is necessary to obtain a quorum of the judicial council;

(B) the judicial council finds that the lack of a quorum is due to the naming of one or more judges in the complaint for the purpose of disqualifying that judge or judges, or to the naming of one or more judges based on their participation in a decision excluded from the definition of misconduct under Rule 3(h)(3); and

(C) the judicial council votes that it is necessary, appropriate, and in the interest of sound judicial administration that one or more subject judges be eligible to act.

(2) otherwise disqualified members may participate in votes taken under (g)(1)(B) and (g)(1)(C).

(h) Disqualification of Members of the Judicial Conference Committee. No member of the Judicial Conference Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability is disqualified from participating in any proceeding under the Act or these Rules because of consultations with a chief judge, a member of a special committee, or a member of a judicial council about the interpretation or application of the Act or these Rules, unless the member believes that the consultation would prevent fair-minded participation.

Rule 26. Transfer to Another Judicial Council.

In exceptional circumstances, a chief judge or a judicial council may ask the Chief Justice to transfer a proceeding based on a complaint identified under Rule 5 or filed under Rule 6 to the judicial council of another circuit. The request for a transfer may be made at any stage of the proceeding before a reference to the Judicial Conference under Rule 20(b)(1)(C) or 20(b)(2) or a petition for review is filed under Rule 22. Upon receiving sucha request, the Chief Justice may refuse the request or select the transferee judicial council, which may then exercise the powers of a judicial council under these Rules.

Rule 27. Withdrawal of Complaints and Petitions for Review.

(a) Complaint Pending Before Chief Judge. With the chief judge's consent, a complainant may withdraw a complaint that is before the chief judge for a decision under Rule 11. The withdrawal of a complaint will not prevent a chief judge from identifying or having to identify a complaint under Rule 5 based on the withdrawn complaint.

(b) Complaint Pending before Special Committee or Judicial Council. After a complaint has been referred to a special committee for investigation and before the committee files its report, the complainant may withdraw the complaint only with the consent of both the subject judge and either the special committee or the judicial council.

(c) Petition for Review. A petition for review addressed to a judicial council under Rule 18, or the Judicial Conference Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability under Rule 22 may be withdrawn if no action on the petition has been taken.

Rule 28. Availability of Rules and Forms.

These Rules and copies of the complaint form as provided in Rule 6(a) must be available without charge in the office of the clerk of each court of appeals, district court, bankruptcy court, or other federal court whose judges are subject to the Act. Each court must also make these Rules and the complaint form available on the court's website, or provide an Internet link to the Rules and complaint form that are available on the appropriate court of appeals' website.

Rule 29. Effective Date.

These Rules will become effective 30 days after promulgation by the Judicial Conference of the United States.

APPENDIX

COMPLAINT FORM

Judicial Council of the Fifth Judicial Circuit

COMPLAINT OF JUDICIAL MISCONDUCT OR DISABILITY

To begin the complaint process, complete this form and prepare the brief statement of facts described in item 4 (below). The RULES FOR JUDICIAL-CONDUCT AND JUDICIAL-DISABILITY PROCEEDINGS, adopted by the Judicial Conference of the United States, contain information on what to include in a complaint (Rule 6), where to file a complaint (Rule 7), and other important matters. Requests for copies of the rules should be directed to: Clerk, United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, 600 S. Maestri Place, New Orleans, LA 70130. The rules are also available at www.ca5.uscourts.gov.

Your complaint (this form and the statement of facts) should be typewritten and must be legible. Only an original of the complaint must be filed. Enclose the copy of the complaint in an envelope marked "COMPLAINT OF MISCONDUCT" or "COMPLAINT OF DISABILITY" and submit it to: Clerk, United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, 600 S. Maestri Place, New Orleans, LA 70130. Do not put the name of any judge on the envelope.

Preamble

The LOCAL UNIFORM CIVIL RULES OF THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURTS FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT AND THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF MISSISSIPPI [the LOCAL RULES] were first made effective on January 1, 1986. The Rules were amended July 1, 1992, July 1, 1996, September 1, 1998, December 1, 2000, November 1, 2004, and December 1, 2010; they apply to pending civil actions except where injustice would result. They govern all proceedings in the United States District Courts serving the State of Mississippi, and should be cited as L.U.Civ.R.

Attorneys practicing before the district courts of Mississippi are charged with the responsibility of knowing the LOCAL RULES, the Administrative Procedures for Electronic Case Filing for both the Northern and Southern Districts of Mississippi, the Internal Operating Procedures and Standing Orders of the court and may be sanctioned for failing to comply with them. Posting of the LOCAL RULES on the Internet Websites maintained by the clerks of the district courts is sufficient delivery of the LOCAL RULES to all attorneys and the public.

All prior Local Rules of the United States District Courts for the Northern District and the Southern District of Mississippi relating to civil proceedings are hereby repealed.

All amendments to these LOCAL RULES will be by order of the court and require the approval of a majority of the district judges in each federal judicial district in Mississippi. (Amended effective September 1, 1998; amended December 1, 2000; amended November 1, 2004; amended December 1, 2009; amended December 1, 2010.)

Rule 1. Scope and purposes of rules.

(a) The rules of procedure in any proceeding in this court are those prescribed by the laws of the United States and the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, along with these local rules and orders entered by the court.

(b) These rules may be known and cited as Local Uniform Civil Rule [L.U.Civ.R.].

(c) The underlying principle of the Rules is to make access to a fair and efficient court system available and affordable to all citizens. (Amended effective December 1, 2010.)

Rule 4. Civil process.

(a) Preparation. It is the responsibility of the plaintiff in each original case filed to prepare the summons to be served on each defendant and to present the process to the clerk of court at the time of the filing of the original complaint. The signed process with seal affixed will then be returned to the attorney for service.

(b) Service. The United States Marshal does not serve process in civil actions except on behalf of the federal government, in actions proceeding in forma pauperis, on writs of seizure and executions of judgments, and when otherwise ordered by a federal court.

Rule 5. Original filings and removals.

(a) Original filings. In all civil actions, the plaintiff must file with the clerk of court the original complaint.

(1) Civil cover sheet. A civil cover sheet (Form JS 44) must be filed with each original complaint or petition filed. A link to all national forms can be found on the courts' Websites.

(2) Filing fees. Filing fees must be paid to the clerk of court upon filing of each original complaint or petition in accordance with the fee schedule maintained by the clerk of court.

(b) Removals: Required Filing of Entire State Court Record. In addition to the requirements for removal set forth in 28 U.S.C. § 1446, a defendant or defendants desiring to remove any civil action or criminal prosecution from a state court must file as an exhibit to its Notice of Removal a copy of the entire state court record in the format required by the Administrative Procedures for Electronic Case Filing for the district to which it is removed. If the removing defendant or defendants cannot practicably obtain a copy of the entire state court record by the date of removal, then - and only then - the removing defendant or 2 defendants must obtain and electronically file the complete copy in the format required by the Administrative Procedures for Electronic Case Filing for that district no later than fourteen days from the date of removal.

(c) Electronic Filings; Signatures and Verification; Administrative Procedures. Rules 5(d)(3) and 83 of the FEDERAL RULES OF CIVIL PROCEDURE and Rule 57 of the FEDERAL RULES OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE authorize courts to establish practices and procedures for electronically filing, signing and verifying documents. Accordingly, the district courts for the Northern District and the Southern District of Mississippi have implemented Administrative Procedures for Electronic Case Filing prescribing the procedures and standards governing electronically filing, signing and verifying documents.

(d) Non-Filing of Pre-Discovery Disclosures and Discovery Materials.

(1) Pre-Discovery disclosures. Pre-discovery disclosures of core information under L.U.CIV.R. 26.1(A) should not be filed with the clerk of court until the disclosures are used in a proceeding or the court orders that they be filed. The party serving disclosures must file a notice of service of pre-discovery disclosure of core information [Official Form No. 2(c)].

(2) Depositions. As depositions in civil actions are not filed, the court reporter will forward the original of a deposition to the party responsible for its taking; the party must retain the original and is its custodian. Immediately upon receipt of the original deposition, the party serving as custodian must file a copy of the cover sheet of the deposition and a notice that all parties of record have been notified of its receipt by the custodian [Official Form No. 2(a)].

(3) Discovery. Interrogatories under FED. R. CIV. P. 33, Requests for Production or Inspection under FED. R. CIV. P. 34, and Requests for Admission under FED. R. CIV. P. 36, must be served upon other counsel or parties, but not filed with the court. The party who served the discovery request or the response must retain the original and become the custodian and file a notice of service with the court [Official Form No. 2(b)].

(4) Filing for use in relation to motions. If disclosures under FED. R. CIV. P. 26(a)(1) or (2), interrogatories, requests, answers, responses or depositions are necessary to a pretrial motion that might result in an order on any issue, unless already of record and referenced by citation to the docket entry(ies), the moving party must file the portions to be used as an exhibit to the motion.

(5) Filing for use on Appeal. When documentation of discovery or disclosures not in the record is needed for appeal purposes, a party may apply for a court order directing or the parties may stipulate to the filing of the necessary discovery or disclosure papers. (Amended effective December 1, 2010.)

Rule 5.2. Protection of personal and sensitive information; public access to court files; redacted information; sealed information.

Responsibilities of Counsel and Parties. Counsel should advise clients of the provisions of this rule and Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.2 so that an informed decision may be made about the inclusion of protected information.

(a) Counsel and parties must consider that the E-Government Act of 2002 (as amended) and the policies of the Judicial Conference of the United States require federal courts eventually to make all pleadings, orders, judgments, and other filed documents available in electronic formats accessible over the Internet and the courts' PACER [Public Access to Court Electronic Records] systems. Consequently, personal and sensitive information and data that formerly were available only by a review of the court's physical case files will be available to the world, openly, publicly, and near-instantaneously.

(b) If a redacted document is filed, it is the sole responsibility of counsel and the parties to ensure that all pleadings conform to the redaction-related standards of this rule.

(c) Neither the court nor the clerk will review pleadings or other documents for compliance with this rule.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Construction.
Failure to file documents.

Construction.

Inasmuch as this rule refers only to depositions not being filed with the clerk of court, it follows that all other documents listed in Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 5(d) must be filed. McLaurin v. Werner, 909 F. Supp. 447 (S.D. Miss. 1995).

As this rule refers only to depositions not being filed, all other documents listed in Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 5(d) must be filed. Saulsberry v. Atlantic Richfield Co., 673 F. Supp. 811 (N.D. Miss. 1987).

Failure to file documents.

Where plaintiff's attorney failed to file with the court her response to defendants' request for admissions, response was ineffective and therefore statements in question were deemed admitted. Saulsberry v. Atlantic Richfield Co., 673 F. Supp. 811 (N.D. Miss. 1987).

Rule 7. Motions and other papers.

(a) Trial briefs. Whether to submit a trial brief is within the discretion of the parties, but any brief must be filed in CM/ECF and simultaneously served on all other parties.

(b) Motion practice. Any written communication with the court that is intended to be an application for relief or other action by the court must be presented by a motion in the form prescribed by this Rule.

(1) Applicability. The provisions of this rule apply to all written motions filed in civil actions.

(2) Filing, Deadlines, Proposed Orders. Any motion, response, rebuttal and supporting exhibits, including memorandum briefs in support, must be filed. All affidavits and other supporting documents and exhibits, excluding the memorandum brief, must be filed as exhibits to the motion, response or rebuttal to which they relate. The memorandum brief must be filed as a separate docket item from the motion or response and their exhibits. All supporting exhibits must be denominated in the court's electronic filing system by both an exhibit letter or number and a meaningful description. Further, all supporting exhibits not already of record and cited in the motion, response or rebuttal by docket entry, must normally be filed under the same docket entry and denominated separately in the court's electronic filing system as exhibits to the motion, response or rebuttal to which they relate, unless doing so is not practicable, in which case supporting exhibits may be filed as separate docket item attachments, associated by the docket number of the motion, response or rebuttal to which they relate. Counsel must file a memorandum brief as a separate docket item from the motion or response to which it relates and must not make the memorandum brief an exhibit to a motion or response, except in the case of a motion for leave to submit the referenced memorandum brief.

(A) Affirmative defenses must be raised by motion. Although the affirmative defenses may be enumerated in the answer, the court will not recognize a motion included within the body of the answer, but only those raised by a separate filing.

(B) A party must file a discovery motion sufficiently in advance of the discovery deadline to allow response to the motion, ruling by the court and time to effectuate the court's order before the discovery deadline.

(C) Unless otherwise ordered by the Case Management Order, all case-dispositive motions and motions challenging an opposing party's expert must be filed no later than fourteen calendar days after the discovery deadline.

(D) Motions in limine other than motions challenging another party's expert must be filed no later than fourteen calendar days before the pretrial conference, and all responses must be filed no later than seven calendar days before the pretrial conference.

(E) A proposed order must be submitted to the judge for any motion that may be heard ex parte or is to be granted by consent. If the motion is referred to a magistrate judge, the proposed order must be submitted to the magistrate judge. The addresses for the district judges' and for the magistrate judges' chambers appear in the courts' Administrative Procedures for Electronic Case Filings.

(3) Responses.

(A) A response to a motion, all affidavits, 28 U.S.C. § 1746 declarations, the response memorandum and other supporting materials, including any objections, must be filed of record. Within the time allowed for response, the opposing party must either respond to the motion or notify the court of its intent not to respond.

(B) A separate response must be filed as to each separately docketed motion.

(C) A response to a motion may not include a counter-motion in the same document. Any motion must be an item docketed separately from a response.

(D) A response to a motion may not be included in the body of a pleading, but rather should be a separately docketed item denominated in the record as a response and should be associated by docket number with the motion to which it responds.

(E) If a party fails to respond to any motion, other than a dispositive motion, within the time allotted, the court may grant the motion as unopposed.

(4) Memorandum briefs; Documents required with motions; Time limits; Failure to submit required documents; Motions not reurged. At the time the motion is served, other than motions or applications that may be heard ex parte or those involving necessitous or urgent matters, counsel for movant must file a memorandum brief in support of the motion. Counsel for respondent must, within fourteen days after service of movant's memorandum brief, file a memorandum brief in response. Counsel for movant desiring to file a rebuttal may do so within seven days after the service of the respondent's memorandum brief. A party must make any request for an extension of time in writing to the judge who will decide the motion. Failure to timely submit the required motion documents may result in the denial of the motion. A pending nondispositive motion not reurged after discovery has been concluded and before the motion deadline, may be deemed moot and denied by operation of this rule.

(5) Length of memorandum briefs. Movant's original and rebuttal memorandum briefs together may not exceed a total of thirty-five pages, and respondent's memorandum brief may not exceed thirty-five pages.

(6) Notice and hearings.

(A) The court will decide motions without a hearing or oral argument unless otherwise ordered by the court on its own motion or, in its discretion, upon written request made by counsel in an easily discernible manner on the face of the motion or response.

(B) An evidentiary hearing or oral argument, where allowed, will be set at a time and place convenient to the judge. The court may, in its discretion, hear oral argument by electronic means.

(7) Priority. The court will give priority to discovery motions, discovery appeals, immunity defense motions, motions to remand, and other jurisdictional motions.

(8) Urgent or Necessitous Matters. When the motion relates to an urgent or necessitous matter, counsel for the movant must contact the courtroom deputy, or other staff member designated by the judge, and arrange a definite time and place for the motion to be heard. In such cases, counsel for movant must file a written notice to all other parties of the time and place fixed by the court for the hearing and must serve all documents upon other parties. Upon receipt of the motion, the court in its discretion may direct counsel to submit memorandum briefs for the court's consideration.

Unless a party files a motion for a protective order to limit the scope or quash the taking of a deposition within seven days of the date of the notice of deposition, the motion will not be considered urgent or necessitous.

(9) Court reporters. If the hearing of a motion requires the presence of a court reporter, the party requesting a court reporter must obtain prior approval from the office of the district or magistrate judge before whom the motion is noticed.

(10) Non-Dispositive Motions. All non-dispositive motions must advise the court whether there is opposition to the motion.

(11) Untimely Motions. Any nondispositive motion served beyond the motion deadline imposed in the Case Management Order may be denied solely because the motion is not timely served.

(c) Corporate Disclosure Statement. A non-governmental corporate party must file a statement identifying all of its parent corporations and listing any publicly-held company that owns ten percent or more of the party's stock. The Corporate Disclosure Statement must be filed as a separate pleading with the party's initial pleading. Each party must supplement the statement within a reasonable time of any change in the disclosure information.

Failure to respond.

In declaratory judgment action filed by a rental equipment company alleging breach of contract and indemnification claims against a general contractor and a subcontractor, a motion to intervene as of right under Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a)(2) by the subcontractor's insurer was granted on the merits and as unopposed under L.U. Civ. R. 7.2 (C)(2). NES Equip. Rentals, L.P. v. Harvey C. Green Constr. Co., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 101178 (N.D. Miss. Dec. 15, 2008).

Pursuant to L.U. Civ. R. 7.2(C)(2), plaintiff's personal injury suit against two manufacturers was dismissed; in addition to the fact that plaintiff failed to effect service upon the manufacturers within the mandatory 120-day period, plaintiff failed to respond to the manufacturers' motion to dismiss. Riley v. Ga. Pac. Corp., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1440 (N.D. Miss. Jan. 5, 2006), dismissed by 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1623 (N.D. Miss. Jan. 5, 2006).

Although an inmate failed to respond to a summary judgment motion filed by a county and a development district president in the inmate's civil rights suit, pursuant to L.U. Civ. R. 7.2(C)(2), the court was required to consider the motion on the merits. Rogers v. Peterson, — F. Supp. 2d —, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 49808 (S.D. Miss. June 27, 2006).

Appellate court found that the district court had not explored whether less severe sanctions would have sufficed, nor was there a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct; therefore, its reliance on L.U. Civ. R. 7.2(C)(2) to dismiss the petition with prejudice was misplaced, and the appellate court vacated the decision. Johnson v. Pettiford, 442 F.3d 917 (5th Cir. 2006).

Form.

In a motorist's suit to recover damages for personal injuries sustained in a car accident, the motorist's request for summary judgment, which was made in his opposition to the motions for summary judgment that were submitted by a construction company and a construction worker, was denied because such a request, under L.U. Civ. R. 7.2, had to be made in a motion. Moran v. Callahan, — F. Supp. 2d —, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 94573 (S.D. Miss. Dec. 11, 2007).

Although the complainant, who sought reconsideration of the district court's interlocutory order adopting the magistrate's report and recommendation to deny the complainant's motion to proceed in forma pauperis under 28 U.S.C.S. § 1915, contacted the district court requesting an evidentiary hearing, upon review of the complainant's motion and L.U. Civ. R. 7.2(F), the district court was not of the opinion that an evidentiary hearing was appropriate. Tyres Frai' Aunt Autrey v. Thames, — F. Supp. 2d —, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 99279 (S.D. Miss. Dec. 8, 2008).

Memorandum of authorities.

Even if plaintiffs had been correct that "straightforward text " of federal rules allowed amendment after dismissal, plaintiffs would have been required to supply court with memorandum supporting their proposition. Hey v. Irving, 176 F.R.D. 235 (N.D. Miss. 1997), aff'd, 161 F.3d 7 (5th Cir. 1998).

Time limits.

In a nursing home negligence case, the nursing home and related party defendants did not file their motion in limine to exclude some of the opinions of the nursing expert proffered by the administrator of the estate of a deceased nursing home resident at least 10 days prior to the scheduled pretrial conference; therefore, the motion to exclude was denied as untimely under L.U. Civ. R. 7.2(K). Webster v. Nat'l Heritage Realty, Inc., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19584 (S.D. Miss. Feb. 26, 2009).

In a case in which a former inmate's motion for reconsideration was without merit, L.U. Civ. R. 7.2(C)(2) did not require that the grant the motion as unopposed. Rule 7.2(C)(2) provides that a court may grant a motion as unopposed where a response is not timely filed. Walker v. McCullum, — F. Supp. 2d —, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 68090 (S.D. Miss. Sept. 9, 2008).

In a motorist's suit to recover damages for personal injuries sustained in a car accident, the motorist's request for summary judgment, which was made in his opposition to the motions for summary judgment that were submitted by a construction company and a construction worker, was denied under L.U. Civ. R. 7.2(k) because the request was untimely. Moran v. Callahan, — F. Supp. 2d —, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 94573 (S.D. Miss. Dec. 11, 2007).

Appellants' 2006 Fed. R. Civ. P. 24 motion to intervene in a 1966 school desegregation case was properly denied as untimely where it was filed three months after the entry of a 2006 consent decree between the United States and a school district, appellants could have sought intervention while the widely-publicized negotiations were proceeding over a six-month period, appellants failed to allege any unusual circumstances that would explain the delay and instead stated that they simply needed time to familiarize themselves with the case, appellants failed to seek an extension of time under L.U. Civ. R. 7.2(D), and the U.S. and the school district would be prejudiced by such a late intervention because negotiations would have to begin anew. United States v. Covington County Sch. Dist., 499 F.3d 464 (5th Cir. 2007).

Where the certificate of service attached to defendant's motion indicated that the motion was served on March 8 and, despite the passage of over two months, the plaintiff had yet to file any opposition to the motion or request an extension of time in which to file a response, the motion could properly be granted as unopposed. Baggett v. City of Tupelo, — F. Supp. 2d —, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6947 (N.D. Miss. May 12, 2000).

Although defendant's motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction was filed approximately six months after court-ordered motion deadline, it was within court's discretion to consider the motion, where case was not yet set for trial and no pretrial or settlement conferences had been held. Classic Motel, Inc. v. Coral Group, Ltd., 149 F.R.D. 528 (S.D. Miss. 1993).

Plaintiffs' response to defendants' bill of costs was controlled by five day time limit of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 54(d), rather than ten day limit provided in this rule. Alexandria Assocs. v. Mitchell Co., 800 F. Supp. 1424 (S.D. Miss. 1992).

Plaintiff's cross-motion for summary judgment, filed 5 days after motion deadline, was untimely and was not considered. United States ex rel. T.L. Wallace Constr., Inc. v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 790 F. Supp. 680 (S.D. Miss. 1992).

Defendant's motion was not properly characterized as a motion in limine, as it was not addressed to any particular piece of evidence or type of evidence, and therefore motion was denied as untimely. Wing v. J.C. Bradford & Co., 678 F. Supp. 622 (N.D. Miss. 1987).

Plaintiffs' alleged failure to produce documents on which defendant's motion was based did not excuse defendant's untimely service of motion, where defendant made no attempt to compel production of documents he sought. Wing v. J.C. Bradford & Co., 678 F. Supp. 622 (N.D. Miss. 1987).

Rule 11. Signatures required on pleadings, motions, and other papers.

(a) Consistent with FED. R. CIV. P. 11, the filing of a signed pleading, motion, or other document by any counsel is deemed to signify approval by all co-counsel. All filed, signed documents must contain counsel's name, address, telephone number, fax number, e-mail address, and counsel's bar membership identification number. All documents filed and signed by a party not represented by an attorney must contain the party's name, address, telephone number, fax number, and email address. Every attorney and every litigant proceeding without legal counsel has a continuing obligation to notify the clerk of court of address changes.

(b) Sanctions — Unreasonable delays. Any delay or continuance occasioned by a party's failure to abide by these rules may result in the imposition of appropriate sanctions, including assessment of costs and attorneys' fees. In this regard, counsel must immediately notify the appropriate judge if a pending motion is resolved by the parties or if the civil action is settled.

Rule 16. Pretrial conferences.

(a) Court order. The court will issue an Initial Order setting the deadline for the attorney conference required by FED. R. CIV. P. 26(f) and a date for a case management conference [CMC] with the magistrate judge. The court will strive to set the case management conference within sixty days of the filing of the first responsive pleading.

(b) Exceptions:

(1) Removed Civil Actions.

(A) In removed civil actions in which no motion to remand or motion to refer the action to the bankruptcy court is filed, the attorneys and unrepresented parties must confer as outlined in L.U.CIV.R. 26(e) within forty days, and all other deadlines will be determined accordingly.

(B) A motion to remand or a motion to refer an action to the bankruptcy court will stay the attorney conference and disclosure requirements and all discovery not relevant to the remand or referral issue and will stay the parties' obligation to make disclosures pending the court's ruling on the motions. At the time the remand motion or referral motion is filed, the movant must submit to the magistrate judge an order granting the stay but permitting discovery concerning only the remand or referral issue. The parties must promptly notify the magistrate judge of any order denying a motion to remand or motion to refer and must promptly submit an order lifting the stay.

(C) Within fifteen days of the order lifting the stay, the parties must confer as outlined in L.U.CIV.R. 26(c) and all other deadlines will be determined accordingly. A scheduling conference will be held within sixty days after the stay is lifted.

(2) Transferred civil actions. If the attorneys and unrepresented parties have not already conducted the conference required by FED. R. CIV. P. 26(f) in an action transferred to the district, the parties must do so within fourteen days of the action's transfer and all other deadlines will be determined accordingly.

(3) Immunity Defense or jurisdictional defense.

(A) A motion to compel arbitration, an immunity defense or a jurisdictional defense must be raised by a separate motion as expeditiously as practicable after service of process. A motion asserting lack of jurisdiction must be filed at least seven days before the Case Management Conference or the movant will be deemed to have waived the stay provision of subsection (B).

(B) Filing a motion to compel arbitration, an immunity defense or jurisdictional defense motion stays the attorney conference and disclosure requirements and all discovery not related to the issue pending the court's ruling on the motion, including any appeal. Whether to permit discovery on issues related to a motion asserting an immunity defense or jurisdictional defense is a decision committed to the discretion of the court.

(C) At the time the motion to compel arbitration, immunity defense or jurisdictional defense motion is filed, the moving party must submit to the magistrate judge a proposed order granting the stay.

(D) In any case that has been removed from state court, the moving party shall, within fourteen days after the Case Management Conference, file as separate docket items any motions that were filed in state court. The motions will be filed in accordance with L.U.CIV.R.7(b).

(E) The plaintiff must promptly notify the magistrate judge of a decision on the motion and must submit a proposed order lifting the stay. Within fourteen days of the order lifting the stay, the parties must confer in accordance with L.U.CIV.R. 26(c), and all other deadlines will be determined accordingly.

(F) A case management conference will be scheduled within sixty days of the order lifting the stay.

(4) Civil asset forfeiture actions.

(A) In civil asset forfeiture actions in which the United States files a motion challenging the claimant's standing, all discovery not relevant to the standing issue will be stayed pending the court's ruling on the standing issue.

(B) At the time the motion challenging the claimant's standing is filed, the United States must submit to the magistrate judge a proposed order granting the stay but permitting discovery on the standing issue.

(C) The parties must promptly notify the magistrate judge of a decision on the standing issue and must submit a proposed order lifting the stay if it is determined that the claimant has standing.

(D) A case management conference will be scheduled within sixty days of the order lifting the stay.

(c) Submission of written proposed case management plan and scheduling order. The magistrate judge may require the parties to submit a proposed case management order no later than fourteen days after the attorney conference. [See Official Form No. 1]. Disagreements with the content of the proposed case management order must be noted on the submitted written plan. Each party must submit to the magistrate judge a confidential memorandum, no longer than three pages, setting forth a brief explanation of the case and a candid appraisal of the respective positions of the parties, including a candid evaluation of the possibilities for settlement.

(d) Time of disclosures. Unless a different time is set by court order or unless a party objects during the attorney conference and states the objection in the proposed case management order, the parties must make the disclosures required by FED. R. CIV. P. 26(a) [L.U.CIV.R. 26.1(a)(1)], no later than fourteen days after the attorney conference, but in no event may they be made later than seven days before the Case Management Conference.

(e) Case management conference. On the date set by court order, the magistrate judge will hold a case management conference in accordance with FED. R. CIV. P. 16(b) and 26(f).

(f) Case management order.

(1) The judicial officer will enter the case management order no more than fourteen calendar days after the case management conference. [Official Form No. 1].

(2) The court will not require the parties to reserve a period in excess of three weeks for trial following the trial date.

(g) Settlement Conference.

(1) The court may schedule an initial settlement conference in the case management plan and scheduling order or by other order as the interests of justice may dictate.

(A) Counsel for any party may request at any time that the judicial officer assigned to the case schedule a settlement conference.

(B) The court may order mediation in addition to, or in lieu of, a settlement conference.

(C) The parties are required to undertake discovery necessary for meaningful settlement discussions before a settlement conference or mediation.

(2) Lead counsel for each party, individual parties not represented by legal counsel, and representatives of each corporate party, organization, or similar entity must appear at the conference. If lead counsel has been admitted pro hac vice, local counsel must also appear at the conference.

(A) The party representative attending the conference must have full settlement authority to bind the party for settlement purposes.

(B) If approved in advance by the court, a party or party representative may, in lieu of attending the conference in person, be immediately available by telephone during the entire settlement conference. The court may also order that a representative of any intervening party with full settlement authority also attend the conference in person or be available by telephone.

(C) At the request of any party, the court will issue a notification of the settlement conference which the party may then forward to any entity having any type of subrogation lien that would need to be considered during settlement negotiations. The failure of a party to attend a settlement conference, or to have present at the conference a representative with reasonable settlement authority, may result in the assessment of sanctions against the offending party.

(3) The notice of a settlement conference will set forth the format of the conference and will include any requirement for information or documents that must be submitted to the court before or at the conference.

(4) No statement, oral or written, made by any party to the court or counsel(s) opposite during settlement negotiations under this rule will be admissible or used in any fashion in the trial of the case or any related case.

(5) At least seven days before the settlement conference, each party must submit to the court a confidential memorandum, no longer than three pages, setting forth a brief explanation of the case and a candid appraisal of the respective positions of the parties, including settlement negotiations to date and possible settlement figures. Plaintiff(s) must provide an estimate of damages itemized by category. Counsel must also furnish a good faith estimate of the total expense of carrying the litigation through trial and the appellate processes, if not settled, and must have discussed and must represent to the court that they so discussed these expenses with their clients. The settlement memoranda are not to be exchanged or filed in the record, are to be viewed only by the court, and will be destroyed upon exhaustion of settlement negotiations.

(h) Cases excluded from scheduling and disclosure requirements. Those categories of proceedings appearing in FED. R. CIV. P. 26(a)(1)(B) are exempt from the scheduling and disclosure requirements of these rules.

(i) Alternative dispute resolution program. The courts have adopted a uniform Alternative Dispute Resolution Plan. That plan is appended to these Local Rules.

(j) Final pretrial conferences and pretrial orders.

(1) Cases in which conference to be held; scheduling; rule of magistrate judge. A final pretrial conference is to be held in all civil actions, subject only to the exceptions hereinafter noted.

(A) The judicial officer assigned to try the case will attempt to conduct the pretrial conference. If the judicial officer is unable to schedule the pretrial conference in a timely manner, however, then he or she may direct that the conference be held before another judicial officer. This conference will be scheduled not more than fortyfive days prior to trial.

(B) Whenever possible, a final pretrial conference will be separately scheduled at a date, place, and hour and for such period of time as the subject matter of the particular civil action may require, but in all events a final pretrial conference will be scheduled in such manner as not to cause undue or inordinate inconvenience to counsel scheduled for final pretrial conferences in other cases.

(2) When conference may be dispensed with; Pretrial order still required; contents. The court recognizes that a formal final pretrial conference may not be needed in all cases. The court, either on its own motion or by request of the parties made not later than fourteen days before the scheduled conference, may determine that a final pretrial conference is unnecessary and excuse the parties from attendance, but in that event the jointly agreed pretrial order must be submitted to the judge before whom the conference was to have been held and all requirements of this rule must be complied with at or before the time and date set for the final pretrial conference, unless the judge fixes another date for submission of the pretrial order. If no formal final pretrial conference is held, counsel must submit to the appropriate judge a jointly agreed final pretrial order [Official Form No. 3] which must set forth:

(A) Any jurisdictional question.

(B) Any questions raised by pending motions, including motions in limine.

(C) A concise summary of the ultimate facts claimed by plaintiff(s), by defendant(s), and by all other parties.

(D) Facts established by pleadings or by stipulations or admissions of counsel.

(E) Contested issues of fact.

(F) Contested issues of law.

(G) Exhibits (except documents for impeachment only) to be offered in evidence by the parties respectively. If counsel cannot in good faith stipulate the authenticity or admissibility of a proposed exhibit, the order must identify the same and state the precise ground of objection.

(H) The names of witnesses for all parties, stating who Will Be Called in the absence of reasonable notice to opposing counsel to the contrary and who May Be Called as a possibility only. Neither rebuttal nor impeachment witnesses need be listed. The witness list must state whether the witness will give fact or expert testimony, or both, whether the witness will testify as to liability or damages, or both, and whether the witness will testify in person or by deposition.

(I) Any requested amendments to the pleadings.

(J) Any additional matters to aid in the disposition of the action.

(K) The probable length of the trial.

(L) Full name, address, and phone number of all counsel of record for each party.

(3) Submission by magistrate judge to trial judge. If the pretrial conference is held before a magistrate judge who will not try the case, the magistrate judge will submit the agreed, approved pretrial order to the trial judge, with copies to counsel and to the clerk of court.

(4) Duty of counsel to confer; exhibits; matters to be considered at conference; sanctions. The following provisions of this rule apply, regardless of whether the pretrial order is entered by stipulation of the parties or following a formal final pretrial conference:

(A) Counsel must resolve by stipulation all relevant facts that are not in good faith controverted and must exchange with counsel for all other parties true copies of all exhibits proposed to be offered in evidence, other than those to be used for impeachment purposes only, and must stipulate the authenticity of each exhibit proposed to be offered in evidence by any party unless the authenticity of any such exhibit is in good faith controverted.

(B) All exhibits are to be pre-marked, and lists briefly describing each are to be exchanged among counsel and presented to the court at the beginning of the trial, in quadruplicate, unless otherwise directed by the court.

(C) At any formal final pretrial conference, the judge will confer with counsel regarding proposed stipulations of facts and contested issues of fact and law, and will inquire as to the reasonableness of any party's failure to stipulate or agree as to the authenticity or admissibility of exhibits. If the court determines that any party or his attorney has failed to comply with this rule, such party or his attorney will be subject to appropriate sanctions.

(5) Depositions. Depositions to be introduced in evidence other than for rebuttal or impeachment purposes must be abridged before the pretrial conference or submission of the order, as follows:

(A) The offering party must designate by line and page the portions of the deposition it plans to offer.

(B) The opposing party or parties must designate by line and page any additional portions of the deposition to be offered and must identify distinctly any portions of the deposition previously designated by any other party to which objection is made.

(C) The offering party must thereafter identify distinctly any portions of the deposition previously designated by any other party to which objection is made.

(D) Videotaped depositions must be edited before trial as required by the pretrial order.

(6) Procedure at final pretrial conference. In addition to the preceding provisions, the following provisions apply to the formulation of a pretrial order by formal conference before the magistrate judge, or in any appropriate case, the district judge.

(A) Counsel must attend: sanctions. All scheduled conferences must be attended by counsel of record who will participate in the trial and who have full authority to speak for the party and enter into stipulations and agreements. Counsel must have full authority from their clients with respect to settlement and must be prepared to inform the court regarding the prospects of settlement. The court may require the attendance or availability of the parties, as well as counsel. Should a party or his attorney fail to appear or fail to comply with the directions of this rule, an ex parte hearing may be held and a judgment of dismissal or default or other appropriate judgment entered or sanctions imposed.

(B) Preparation for the conference. Counsel must comply with the requirements of subdivisions (j)(4) and (j)(5) of this rule as soon as practicable before the pretrial conference and submit to the court and counsel opposite a proposed pretrial order setting forth his proposals for inclusion in the pretrial order in accordance with subdivision (j)(2) of this rule and any instructions which the court may in its discretion issue.

(C) Preparation of the pretrial order. After the final pretrial conference has concluded, a pretrial order must be prepared by counsel in conformity with Official Form No. 3 and submitted to the court for entry. Responsibility for preparation of the pretrial order and the deadline for its submission will be fixed by the judicial officer before whom the conference was held. If a magistrate judge has conducted the conference on behalf of a district judge, he or she will require counsel to make such corrections as the magistrate judge deems necessary before transmitting the order to the district judge.

(D) Additional conferences. After the final pretrial conference has been conducted, the court will not hold an additional pretrial conference except in those exceptional situations in which the judicial officer determines that an additional conference would materially benefit disposition of the action.

(7) Effect of pretrial order. The pretrial order controls the subsequent course of the action unless modified by the trial judge at or before the trial, upon oral or written motion, to prevent manifest injustice.

(8) Conference scheduling; conflicting settings. In scheduling all pretrial conferences of any nature, the judge will give due consideration to conflicting settings but not to the mere convenience of counsel. If a scheduling order has been entered in an action, no final pretrial conference will be held until after the discovery deadline has expired. Failure to complete discovery within such deadline is not an excuse for delaying the final pretrial conference nor for securing continuance of a case which has been calendared for trial.

(9) Discretion of district judge. Notwithstanding any of the provisions of this rule to the contrary, a district judge may, in his or her discretion, in any assigned case, conduct any or all pretrial conferences and may enter or modify a scheduling order.

(k) Conflicting settings and requests for continuances. When the court has set a case for trial, other hearing, or pretrial conference that conflicts with a court appearance of counsel in other courts, the first case having a firm setting will control, whether set by this or some other court, and other courts are expected to yield to the prior firm setting, as this court will do when other cases have prior settings in other courts, consistent with the policy adopted by the State-Federal Judicial Council. When a case has not been reached as scheduled, the court, in resetting the case, will take into account the obligations of counsel on the basis of the first-setting rule. If a conflict develops, it is the absolute duty of counsel to inform the court of the later setting in order that the conflict might be resolved and calendars cleared for other settings. It is essential for counsel and the court or courts involved to resolve potential conflicts at the earliest practical date.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Modification of scheduling order.
Remand-related discovery.
Time to complete discovery.

Modification of scheduling order.

Where case had not yet been set for trial and no pretrial or settlement conferences had been held, it was within court's discretion to consider defendant's motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction prior to consideration of his motion for summary judgment. Classic Motel, Inc. v. Coral Group, Ltd., 149 F.R.D. 528 (S.D. Miss. 1993).

Remand-related discovery.

In a negligence suit, neither plaintiffs' ignorance of S.D. Miss. R. 16.1(B)(2)(b) nor their failure to utilize it to pursue remand-related discovery could be deemed diligent enough to satisfy Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(2); therefore, their motion for reconsideration of a federal district court's denial of their motion to remand to state court based on newly-discovered evidence was denied. Jordan v. Am. Suzuki Motor Corp., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 80335 (S.D. Miss. Oct. 29, 2007).

Time to complete discovery.

This rule gives attorneys in case, who should be in best position to evaluate case and its discovery needs, wide discretion in obtaining an adequate time for discovery; but rule also requires them to make a realistic estimate of such time. New Hampshire Ins. Co. v. Johnson, 130 F.R.D. 623 (S.D. Miss. 1990).

Rule 23. Class actions.

In all civil actions filed as class actions, the class plaintiff must, at a time directed by the case management order, move for a FED. R. CIV. P. 23 class determination. The plaintiff has the burden of establishing by way of pleadings and evidentiary materials that a class action is appropriate and of defining all relevant classes and subclasses.

Although the court may deem it necessary to schedule an evidentiary hearing on the class aspects of a civil action, usually pleadings, affidavits, other evidentiary materials, and legal memoranda submitted by both sides should be adequate bases upon which the court may make a class action determination. Interlocutory procedures, when appropriate, will be tailored to fit each action.

Counsel for all parties must be aware of the general time schedule set forth above and must promptly prepare all materials that may be relevant to class action maintainability and class definitions. Until the issue of class certification has been decided, counsel must give priority to discovery directed to the class issue.

If additional time is desired for preparation on the L.U.CIV.R. 23 issue(s), a motion stating grounds for the requested delay must be served within the above time period. Delays will be granted only for good cause.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Time limits.

Plaintiff's motion for extension of time to move for class certification was denied, where time set forth in this rule had expired and plaintiff failed to show good cause for extending time. Nicolas v. Deposit Guar. Nat'l Bank, 182 F.R.D. 226 (S.D. Miss. 1998).

Rule 26. Discovery control.

(a) Pre-Discovery disclosure of core information/other cooperative discovery devices.

(1) Initial Disclosure.

(A) Within the time designated in the court's initial order setting the FED.R.CIV.P. 16 conference, the parties must make the disclosure required by FED.R.CIV.P. 26(a)(1). Disclosures must be made no later than seven days before the Case Management Conference unless a different time is set by court order or unless a party objects during the attorney conference and states the objection in the proposed case management order. At the time of the submission of the proposed case management order, the parties must certify that the conference required by FED.R.CIV.P. 26(f) has taken place and that the initial disclosures have been made.

(B) If the documents, electronically stored information, data compilations, and tangible things [collectively "items"] required for production are voluminous, or if other circumstances make their production unduly burdensome or expensive, the party may describe by category and location all such items in its possession, custody or control and must provide the opposing party a reasonable opportunity to review all the items at the site they are located or maintained.

(C) A party withholding information claimed privileged or otherwise protected must submit a privilege log that contains at least the following information: name of the document, electronically stored information, or tangible thing; description of the document, electronically stored information, or tangible thing, which description must included each requisite element of the privilege or protection asserted; date; author(s); recipient(s); and nature of the privilege. To withhold materials without such notices subjects the withholding party to sanctions under FED. R. CIV. P. 37 and may be viewed as a waiver of the privilege or protection.

(2) Expert Witnesses. A party must make full and complete disclosure as required by FED. R. CIV .P. 26(a)(2) and L. U. CIV. R. 26(a)(2)(D) no later than the time specified in the case management order. Absent a finding of just cause, failure to make full expert disclosures by the expert designation deadline is grounds for prohibiting introduction of that evidence at trial.

(A) For purposes of this section, a written report is "prepared and signed" by the expert witness when the witness executes the report after review.

(B) An attempt to designate an expert without providing full disclosure information as required by this rule will not be considered a timely expert designation and may be stricken upon proper motion or sua sponte by the court.

(C) Discovery regarding experts must be completed within the discovery period. The court will allow the subsequent designation or discovery of expert witnesses only upon a showing of good cause.

(D) A party must designate physicians and other witnesses who are not retained or specially employed to provide expert testimony but are expected to be called to offer expert opinions at trial. No written report is required from such witnesses, but the party must disclose the subject matter on which the witness is expected to present evidence under FED.R.EVID. 702, 703 or 705, and a summary of the facts and opinions to which the witness is expected to testify. The party must also supplement initial disclosures.

(3) Failure to Disclose. If a party fails to make a disclosure required by this section, any other party must move to compel disclosure and for appropriate sanctions under FED.R.CIV.P. 37(a). The failure to take immediate action and seek court intervention when a known fact disclosure violation other than as to expert witnesses occurs will be considered by the court in determining the appropriate sanctions to be imposed regarding a subsequent motion filed under FED.R.CIV.P.37(c). Challenges as to inadequate disclosure of expert witness(es) must be made no later than thirty days before the discovery deadline or will be deemed waived. Daubert motions challenging a designated expert must be filed no later than the deadline for dispositive motions or other deadline for such motions established by the case management order or other order, whichever is later.

(4) Discovery before the case management conference. Discovery before the case management conference is governed by FED.R.CIV.P. 26(f). In removed actions in which written discovery was served prior to removal and has not already been responded to, the responding party(ies) will have the shorter of 30-days from the date of the Case Management Conference, or such other period set by federal court order, to serve responses and objections and to make any requested production or inspection.

(5) Supplementation of discovery. A party is under a duty to supplement disclosures at appropriate intervals under FED.R.CIV.P. 26(e) and in no event later than the discovery deadline established by the case management order.

(b) Setting discovery deadlines. The Case Management Order will establish a firm discovery deadline.

(1) The discovery deadline is that date by which all responses to written discovery, including supplementation of responses, required by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure must be made and by which all depositions must be concluded. Supplementation of disclosures must be concluded by the discovery deadline.

(2) Counsel must initiate discovery requests and notice or subpoena depositions sufficiently in advance of the discovery deadline date to comply with this rule, and discovery requests that seek responses or schedule depositions that would otherwise be answerable after the discovery deadline date are not enforceable except by order of the court for good cause shown.

(3) The parties may not extend the discovery deadline by stipulation or without the consent of the court.

(c) Attorney/party signatures for requests to extend discovery deadlines. The court in its discretion may require the requesting attorney and party to sign requests to extend discovery deadlines.

(d) Limits on use of discovery. The court should limit the number of depositions, interrogatories, requests for production and requests for admission to the needs of each particular case. A specific interrogatory/request and its reasonably related subpart will be counted as one interrogatory/request.

(e) FED. R. CIV. P. 26(f) Conference of the Parties. Early Meeting of Counsel/Attorney Conference. Except in categories of proceedings exempted from initial disclosures by Fed.R.Civ.P. 26(a)(1)(E), the attorneys and any unrepresented parties must confer by telephone or in person as soon as is practicable and no later than the deadline established by the court and discuss, at a minimum, the following:

(1) Principal issues.

(A) Identify the principal factual and legal issues in dispute;

(B) Discuss the principal evidentiary basis for claims and defenses;

(C) Determine the number of days required for trial, and whether the case should be considered for ADR procedures.

(2) Disclosure.

(A) Discuss the arrangements for exchanging the disclosures required by FED.R.CIV.P. 26(a)(1) and whether any changes should be made in the timing, form, or requirement for such disclosures.

(B) Confer on the following topics relating to electronically stored information [ESI]:

(i) The native format, media, and repositories of discoverable ESI;

(ii) Steps the parties will take to identify and preserve discoverable ESI to avoid a claim of spoliation;

(iii) The scope of e-mail discovery and any e-mail protocol;

(iv) Whether discoverable deleted ESI still exists, the extent to which restoration of deleted ESI is necessary, and who will bear the burden and cost of restoration;

(v) With respect to discoverable ESI, whether embedded data and metadata exist, whether they will be requested or should be produced, and how to address determinations regarding privilege and FED. R. CIV. P. 26(b)(3)-protected ESI;

(vi) Whether responsive back-up and archival ESI exists, the extent to which back-up and archival ESI is needed and who will bear the burden and costs of obtaining such ESI;

(vii) The format and media to be used in the production of ESI;

(viii) The identity of sources and types of potentially discoverable ESI that a party does not intend to subject to discovery;

(ix) Whether any discoverable ESI is not reasonably accessible and the basis for that contention;

(x) If a party intends to seek discovery of ESI from sources or of types identified as not reasonably accessible, the parties should discuss: (i) the burden and cost of accessing and retrieving such ESI; (ii) any putative good cause for requiring production of all or part of such ESI; and (iii) any mitigating conditions such as scope, time, and cost shifting that might reduce the burden or cost of producing ESI that is not reasonably accessible;

(xi) How to handle inadvertent disclosure of privileged or FED. R. CIV. P. 26(b)(3)-protected ESI considering FED.R.EVID. 502.

(3) Motions. Identify any motions whose early resolution would have a significant impact on the scope of discovery or other aspects of litigation.

(4) Discovery. Determine what discovery is required, when discovery should be completed, whether discovery should be conducted in phases or be limited to or focused upon particular issues, and what limitations should be placed on discovery.

(5) Jurisdiction by a magistrate judge. Discuss whether all parties consent to jurisdiction by a magistrate judge under 28 U.S.C. § 636.

(6) Settlement. Discuss the possibilities for prompt settlement or resolution of the action and whether it would be helpful to schedule an early settlement conference.

(7) Preparation of a proposed case management plan and scheduling order. The proposed order must set forth ADR recommendations, whether all parties consent to trial by a magistrate judge, the date and manner in which disclosures required under FED.R.CIV.P. 26(a) have been made, whether any party objects to the disclosures made and, if so, on what grounds, discovery limitations, deadlines for amendments to pleadings and joinder of additional parties, completion of discovery, designation of experts; filing of motions, including motions for summary judgment, Daubert motions, and other motions in limine. The attorneys of record and all unrepresented parties who have appeared in the action are jointly responsible for arranging the conference and attempting in good faith to agree on the proposed case management plan and scheduling order.

(8) Other orders. Discuss whether any other orders should be entered by the court under FED. R. CIV. P. 16 (b) or (c).

Although the claimant's expert designation of certain treating physicians was inadequate and did not adhere to the requirements of N.D. & S.D. Miss. R. 26(a)(2)(D) since, in lieu of summarizing any of the physicians' opinions, the designation instead referenced attached medical records, there was no serious dispute that the opposing party was in receipt of the medical records for the claimant's treating physicians. Accordingly, the physicians were allowed to testify as to the facts and opinions contained within their records, but each physician's testimony was limited to only those medical records reflecting that particular physician's treatment of the claimant. Previto v. Ryobi N. Am., Inc., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 133344 (S.D. Miss. Dec. 16, 2010).

In an employment discrimination suit, although an employer's expert witness facially complied with Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2)(B) and L.U. Civ. R. 26.1(A)(2) by revealing the medical documents upon which she based her expert opinion, any portions of the expert's deposition that related to additional medical records not named in her report were barred from introduction at trial. EEOC v. Mazzanti, — F. Supp. 2d —, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 35340 (N.D. Miss. Apr. 1, 2009).

Because supplemental expert reports of plaintiffs in an action for injuries against a manufacturer were arguably timely under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e), (a), and S.D. Miss. R. 26.1, even though they were submitted on the even of the discovery cutoff, the manufacturer was permitted to re-depose the experts at the expense of plaintiffs to eliminate prejudice to the manufacturer. Walker v. George Koch Sons, Inc., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 81919 (S.D. Miss. Sept. 18, 2008).

Regardless of whether affidavits of coworkers were appropriate withheld as attorney work product under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5)(A), plaintiffs in an action against a manufacturer failed to provide the required privilege log under S.D. Miss. R. 26.1. Therefore, instead of striking the affidavits under Fed. R. Civ. P. 37, the appropriate sanction was to extend the discovery deadline and to permit the manufacturer to depose the affiants and to conduct limited discovery. Walker v. George Koch Sons, Inc., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 81919 (S.D. Miss. Sept. 18, 2008).

Under "related questions" standard, an interrogatory is to be counted as but a single question for purposes of total allowed under local rule, even though it may call for an answer containing several separate bits of information, if there is a direct relationship between the various bits of information called for. Clark v. Burlington N.R.R., 112 F.R.D. 117 (N.D. Miss. 1986).

Supplementing expert reports.

In a case in which an insurance company filed a motion in limine to exclude an expert witness's testimony regarding the reconstruction costs of the insureds' dwelling, the cost opinion was untimely because the expert's supplemental report, which was served on the last day of discovery, was not supplied until after he had been deposed. The insurance company had not had a full and fair opportunity to meet the expert's proposed reconstruction cost testimony, and, under L.U. Civ. R. 26.1(A)(2)(e), his report had to be supplemented in accordance with Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e). Ross v. Metro. Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co.,

— F. Supp. 2d —, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 89474 (S.D. Miss. Nov. 3, 2008).

Plaintiff's request that defendant be directed to provide discovery was denied, where plaintiff failed to raise issue of defendant's noncompliance until pretrial conference, nearly six weeks after expiration of discovery deadline. Jarvis v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 161 F.R.D. 337 (N.D. Miss. 1995).

Rule 30. Depositions.

(a) Audiovisual recording of depositions. A deposition may be recorded audiovisually as a matter of course in accordance with Fed.R.Civ.P. 30(b)(2).

(1) Written transcript required. The recorded deposition must also be taken in the usual manner by a qualified shorthand or machine reporter and a written transcript prepared for use in subsequent court proceedings.

(2) Scope of scene viewed. During the deposition the witness must be recorded in as near to courtroom atmosphere and standards as possible. There will not be any zoom-in procedures to unduly emphasize any portion of the testimony, but zoom-in will be allowed for exhibits and charts to make them visible to a jury. The camera must focus as much as possible on the witness. The attorneys may be shown on introduction, the beginning of examination and during objections.

(3) Witness' approval not required. A witness need not view or approve the recording of a deposition.

(4) Availability to parties. Any party may purchase a duplicate original or edited tape from the video operator technician at any time.

(5) Editing. Audiovisually recorded depositions must be edited before the trial as required by the pretrial order.

(6) Expenses recoverable as cost. A prevailing party may claim in its bill of costs the court reporter's expenses for audiovisually recorded depositions necessarily obtained for use in the case.

(b) Depositions of experts. The court encourages audiovisualrecording of the testimony of expert witnesses.

Rule 35. Physical and/or mental examinations.

Every motion for the physical or mental examination of persons in civil actions which is not accompanied by a consent order setting forth the time, place and scope of the examination and the person selected to perform the examination must be accompanied by a statement executed by counsel for the moving party.

Counsel's statement must recite specifically the efforts initiated by counsel to agree upon the details, time, place, and scope of the mental or physical examination and the person proposed to perform the examination, and that the efforts were not successful.

Rule 37. Discovery violations.

(a) Good faith certificate. Before service of a discovery motion, counsel must confer in good faith to determine to what extent the issue in question can be resolved without court intervention. A Good Faith Certificate [Official Form No. 5] must be filed with all discovery motions. This certificate must specify whether the motion is unopposed, and if opposed, by which party(ies) and the method by which the matter has been submitted to the magistrate judge for resolution. The certificate must bear the signatures/endorsements of all counsel. If a party fails to cooperate in the attempt to resolve a discovery dispute or prepare the Good Faith Certificate, the filed motion must be accompanied by an affidavit or a 28 U.S.C. § 1746 declaration by the moving party detailing the lack of cooperation and requesting appropriate sanctions.

(b) Motions must quote disputed language. Motions raising issues concerning discovery propounded under FED.R.CIV.P. 33, 34, 36, and 37, must quote verbatim each interrogatory, request for production, or request for admission to which the motion is addressed, and must state:

(1) the specific objection;

(2) the grounds assigned for the objection (if not apparent from the objection itself), and

(3) the reasons assigned as supporting the motion.

The objections, grounds and reasons must be written in immediate succession to the quoted discovery request. The objections and grounds must be addressed to the specific interrogatory, request for production, or request for admission and may not be general in nature.

(c) Failure to comply with subsections (a) or (b) of this rule will result in a denial of the motion without prejudice to the party, who may refile the motion upon conformity with this rule.

(d) L.U.CIV.R. 37 motion to limit or quash a deposition. The filing of a motion for a protective order to limit or quash a deposition does not operate as a stay of the deposition. It is incumbent upon the party seeking the protection of the court to obtain a ruling on the motion before the scheduled deposition.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Failure to attach certificate of good faith.
Failure to comply with rule.

Failure to attach certificate of good faith.

Good faith certificate, as required under L.U. Civ. R. 37.1, was not required before a court could impose sanctions, particularly where plaintiffs were on notice that the issue of sanctions would be revisited if they missed another discovery deadline; plaintiffs did not have a clear intention to resolve this matter without the court's intervention; and the court was free to rule on motions not served in precise compliance with the Local Rules. Anderson v. Wayne Farms, L.L.C., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 105993 (S.D. Miss. Oct. 31, 2008).

Good faith certificate, as required under L.U. Civ. R. 37.1, was not required before a court could impose sanctions, particularly where plaintiffs were on notice that the issue of sanctions would be revisited if they missed another discovery deadline; plaintiffs did not have a clear intention to resolve this matter without the court's intervention; and the court was free to rule on motions not served in precise compliance with the Local Rules. Bolden v. Wayne Farms, L.L.C., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 105991 (S.D. Miss. Oct. 31, 2008).

Good faith certificate, as required under L.U. Civ. R. 37.1, was not required before a court could impose sanctions, particularly where plaintiffs were on notice that the issue of sanctions would be revisited if they missed another discovery deadline; plaintiffs did not have a clear intention to resolve this matter without the court's intervention; and the court was free to rule on motions not served in precise compliance with the Local Rules. Norman v. Wayne Farms, L.L.C., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 105785 (S.D. Miss. Oct. 31, 2008).

Good faith certificate, as required under L.U. Civ. R. 37.1, was not required before a court could impose sanctions, particularly where plaintiffs were on notice that the issue of sanctions would be revisited if they missed another discovery deadline; plaintiffs did not have a clear intention to resolve this matter without the court's intervention; and the court was free to rule on motions not served in precise compliance with the Local Rules. Belue v. Wayne Farms, L.L.C., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 105335 (S.D. Miss. Oct. 31, 2008).

Defendant was not required to attach a good faith certificate pursuant to S.D. Miss. R. 37.1 to its motion for sanctions because the requirement was not jurisdictional and plaintiffs were on notice that defendant would seek sanctions for their failure to comply with standard discovery; it was clear that plaintiffs had neither the intention to cooperate with defendant nor the desire to conserve the resources of the court. Tate v. Wayne Farms, LLC, — F. Supp. 2d —, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 106310 (S.D. Miss. Oct. 31, 2008).

In a case in which an arrestee was bitten by a canine employed by a city and released by a city police officer and the district court granted in part the arrestee's motion to compel responses to two requests for production, Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5)(A) sanctions would not be imposed. The arrestee had not filed a good faith certificate as required by L.U. Civ. R. 37.1(A), and the objections by the city and the police officer were not unreasonable. Harmon v. City of Southaven, — F. Supp. 2d —, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 35500 (N.D. Miss. Apr. 22, 2008).

Although a corporation was five to eight weeks late in responding to plaintiff's discovery requests, the severe sanction of a default judgment was not warranted because plaintiff's prosecution of his case was not prejudiced by the delay, and further, plaintiff failed to attach a certificate to his motions, as was required by L.U. Civ. R. 37.1(A), to certify that he had conferred in good faith with the corporation to resolve the issue before seeking the court's intervention. Merritt v. UPS, — F. Supp. 2d —, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10000 (S.D. Miss. Jan. 15, 2008).

Although the EEOC motion to quash a subpoena duces tecum and ad testificandum that was served on the EEOC by an employer in a race discrimination suit was not accompanied by a certificate of good faith, as required by L.U. Civ. R. 37.1(A), because the attachment of the parties' correspondence to the motion did not satisfy the requirements of Rule 37.1(A), the court considered the merits of the motion because the failure to attach the certificate was not discovered until briefing was completed. Scott v. Lockheed Martin Corp. Aero. Cos., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 46769 (S.D. Miss. July 10, 2006).

Failure to comply with rule.

In a case in which a limited liability company (LLC) moved for sanctions based on the individuals' failure to respond to standard discovery, the individuals argued unsuccessfully that the motion should be denied because the LLC failed to submit a Good Faith Certificate as required by L.U. Civ. R. 37.1. The parties had been conferring on the issue of discovery for several months, both with and without the court's involvement and there was no need for the LLC to file a Good Faith Certificate, as the individuals were on notice that LLC would be seeking the relief sought herein, and it was clear that the individuals had neither the intention to cooperate with the LLC nor the desire to conserve the resources of the court. Adams v. Wayne Farms, L.L.C., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 106083 (S.D. Miss. Oct. 31, 2008).

In a case in which the insureds did not deny that they failed to comply with the method and requirements set out in L.U. Civ. R. 37.1(B) for making a proper showing for relief and the insureds offered only general assertions related to the insurance companies' discovery responses, a magistrate judge acted well within his discretion in denying the insureds' motion to compel discovery. Marion v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27082 (S.D. Miss. Mar. 17, 2008).

Rule 38. Demand for jury.

(a) When due; how presented. A party must make a demand for jury trial, including a removed or transferred action, in accordance with FED. R. CIV. P. Rule 38(b). A designation of jury trial on the civil cover sheet is not sufficient for purposes of this rule.

(b) Within discretion of court. A request for a jury otherwise presented will be addressed to the sound judicial discretion of the court.

(c) Removed actions; law and equity actions. A civil action removed to federal district court from a chancery court of the State of Mississippi shall be designated for non-jury trial.

Rule 42. Consolidation of actions.

In civil actions consolidated under FED.R.CIV. P. 42(a), the action bearing the lower or lowest docket number will control the designation of the district or magistrate judge before whom the motion to consolidate is noticed; the docket number will also determine the judge before whom the case or cases will be tried. Consolidation of actions from different divisions of a district court will be controlled by the earliest filing date. A dismissal of the action bearing the lower or lowest number before the hearing on a motion to consolidate will not affect the operation of this rule. The judge initially assigned the lower or lowest numbered action, even if that action has been dismissed, will be the judge before whom the action(s) will be tried.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Factors.

Consolidation was justified, where two cases involved common questions of law and fact, and interests of judicial efficiency and consistency of opinions would be served by consolidation. Morrison v. National Benefit Life Ins. Co., 889 F. Supp. 945 (S.D. Miss. 1995).

Rule 45. Subpoena.

(a) Witnesses. Witnesses for trial in paupers' cases must be compelled by subpoena or their voluntary attendance procured.

(b) Witnesses' attendance and mileage fees. Tender of the witness fee and mileage is required even if the party requesting the subpoena (except in habeas corpus cases and proceedings under 28 U.S.C. § 2255) has been granted leave to proceed in forma pauperis under 28 U.S.C. § 1915, because, with those exceptions, no public funds are available for that purpose.

(c) Privileged information. Information which is claimed to be privileged may be filed under seal under the provisions of L.U.CIV.R. 79.

(d) Non-Party ESI. Parties issuing a subpoena duces tecum for electronically stored information from non-parties must attempt to meet and confer with the non-party (or counsel, if represented) and discuss the same issues with regard to requests for ESI as set out in L.U.CIV.R. 26.

(e) Motions regarding subpoenas will be considered discovery motions and are governed by the procedural requirements that govern discovery motions.

Rule 48. Communication with Jurors.

Upon the return of a verdict by the jury in any civil or criminal action, neither the attorneys in the action nor the parties may, in the courtroom or elsewhere, express to the members of the jury their pleasure or displeasure with the verdict. After the jury has been discharged, neither the attorneys in the action nor the parties may at any time or in any manner communicate with any member of the jury regarding the verdict. Provided, however, that if an attorney believes in good faith that the verdict may be subject to legal challenge, the attorney may apply ex parte to the trial judge for permission to interview one or more members of the jury regarding the fact or circumstance claimed to support the legal challenge. If satisfied that good cause exists, the judge may grant permission for the attorney to make the requested communication and will prescribe the terms and conditions under which it may be conducted.

Rule 51. Requests for jury instructions.

(a) When due. Requests for instructions must be submitted not later than fourteen days before the date for which trial is set; additional and revised instructions may be admitted thereafter as the evidence may justify.

(b) How presented. Each requested instruction must be on a separate document, shall be numbered (as P-1, et seq. and D-1, et seq.), and must be supported by citation of authority on papers separate from the requested instruction. Copies must be furnished to opposing counsel when the special requests are submitted to the court. Where good cause is shown to exist, counsel may, with the permission of the court, submit additional written requests during the progress of the trial.

(c) Automated formats. Parties registered on the court's electronic filing system must submit instructions via electronic mail to the chambers of the trial judge. Proposed instructions should not be docketed or filed with the court's CM/ECF system. The addresses for the district judges' and for the magistrate judges' chambers appear on the courts' Internet Websites and in the courts' Administrative Procedures for Electronic Case Filing.

(d) Standard instructions not required. Counsel should not submit pattern or "boilerplate" instructions which are routinely given by the court. This rule is intended to give the court an opportunity to study requests for instructions tailored specifically for a particular trial. (Amended effective December 1, 2010; amended December 1, 2011.)

Rule 52. Orders and Judgments.

(a) Manner of presentation. All proposed orders and judgments must be submitted directly to the district or magistrate judge assigned to the case via electronic mail, in software format as may be designated by the court. The addresses for the district judges' and for the magistrate judges' chambers appear on the courts' Internet Websites and in the courts' Administrative Procedures for Electronic Case Filings.

(b) Service. The attorney providing the order or judgment must also provide a copy to each party. The clerk of court will provide a copy of the executed order or judgment to each party not in default via the court's electronic filing system.

Rule 54. Jury costs.

(a) Postponement in advance of trial. Whenever a civil action scheduled for jury trial is required to be postponed, or is settled, or otherwise is disposed of in advance of trial, then jury costs, including mileage and per diem, may, in the court's discretion, be assessed equally against the parties and their counsel or otherwise assessed as directed by the court, unless the court is notified at least one full business day before the day on which the action is scheduled for trial so that the jurors can be notified that it will not be necessary for them to attend.

(b) Postponement after the case is called. Whenever a civil action is postponed, settled, or otherwise disposed of after the case is called and before the verdict of the jury, the court may assess jury costs, as described in subparagraph (a), equally against the parties and their counsel, or against the party responsible for the postponement or late settlement.

(c) Bill of costs. In all civil actions in which costs are allowed under 28 U.S.C. ' 1920 in the final judgment as defined in FED. R. CIV. P. 54(a), the prevailing party to whom costs are awarded must file the bill of costs not later than thirty days after entry of judgment. Unless the court directs otherwise, a motion for review of or objecting to the taxation of costs is subject to the requirements of L.U.CIV.R. 7(b). Except as provided by statute or rule, an appeal of the final judgment does not affect the taxation of costs.

Factors.

Factors set forth in subdivision (b)(3) of this rule are primarily intended to aid district court in deciding proper amount of attorney's fees to award, not whether to make award in the first place. Creations Unlimited, Inc. v. McCain, 889 F. Supp. 952 (S.D. Miss. 1995).

District court did not abuse its discretion in denying appellants reimbursement for certain expenses, where appellants failed to submit bill of costs to clerk of court as required by rule. Riley v. City of Jackson, 99 F.3d 757 (5th Cir. 1996).

Award of costs to nonprevailing party was vacated, due to failure to file bill of costs with district court within thirty days of entry of judgment. Quarles v. Oxford Mun. Separate Sch. Dist., 868 F.2d 750 (5th Cir. 1989).

Time limits.

Plaintiffs' attorney fee claims were not time-barred, since neither memorandum opinion and order nor order permitting interlocutory appeal constituted an entry of judgment for purposes of triggering time limit contained in this rule. Cooper v. Hopkins, 945 F. Supp. 940 (S.D. Miss. 1995).

Post-trial request for attorney's fees was untimely, where it was not filed within thirty days of favorable ruling in question. Quarles v. Oxford Mun. Separate Sch. Dist., 868 F.2d 750 (5th Cir. 1989).

Rule 72. Magistrate Judges.

(a) Procedures before a Magistrate Judge

(1) Appeal of magistrate judge's decision.

(A) A party aggrieved by a magistrate judge's ruling may appeal the ruling to the assigned district judge. The appeal is perfected by serving and filing objections to the ruling within fourteen days after being served with a copy of the ruling, specifying the grounds of error. Objections must be filed and served upon the other party or parties and will be promptly transmitted to the assigned district judge and to the magistrate judge. The opposing party or parties must either file a response to the objection or notify the district judge that they do not intend to respond within fourteen days of service of the objections.

(B) No ruling of a magistrate judge in any matter which he or she is empowered to hear and determine will be reversed, vacated, or modified on appeal unless the district judge determines that the magistrate judge's findings of fact are clearly erroneous, or that the magistrate judge's ruling is clearly erroneous or contrary to law.

(2) Effect of ruling by a magistrate judge. A magistrate judge's ruling or order is the court's ruling and will remain in effect unless and until reversed, vacated, modified, or stayed. The filing of a motion for reconsideration does not stay the magistrate judge's ruling or order, and no such stay occurs unless ordered by the magistrate judge or a district judge. A stay application must first be presented to the magistrate judge who issued the ruling or order. If the magistrate judge denies the stay, the applicant may request in writing a stay from the district judge to whom the case is assigned. Counsel for the applicant must append to the application to the district judge for a stay a certification by counsel that an application for the stay was made to and denied by the magistrate judge.

(3) Matters upon which a magistrate judge is required to submit a report and recommendations. In all matters requiring a full-time magistrate judge to make a report and recommendation to the district court, the magistrate judge must submit the report and recommendation to the district judge and to the clerk of court. After service of a copy of the magistrate judge's report and recommendations, each party has fourteen days to serve and file written objections to the report and recommendations. A party must file objections with the clerk of court and serve them upon the other parties and submit them to the assigned district judge. Within seven days of service of the objection, the opposing party or parties must either serve and file a response or notify the district judge that they do not intend to respond to the objection.

(4) Rule not applicable to consent cases. Nothing contained in this rule applies to any civil action referred to a magistrate judge by consent of the parties under L.U.CIV.R. 73, for trial and entry of judgment after the date of reference.

(b) Assignments to a magistrate judge. All United States Magistrate Judges serving within the territorial jurisdiction of the Northern District of Mississippi and the Southern District of Mississippi are referred all the powers and duties granted them by the provisions of 28 U.S.C. § 636 within their territorial jurisdictions. In an action referred to a magistrate judge, the magistrate judge will perform the duties assigned by the court under court rule, plan, order, or other document. A magistrate judge will perform other duties when those duties are assigned by the court or a district judge under court rule, plan, order, or other document.

(c) Notifying parties of non-automatic assignment. If not effected directly by the clerk of court under court rule, plan, order, or other document, reference of a case or duty to a magistrate judge will be by order signed by a district judge. The clerk of court will notify all parties to the action of each reference by a district judge.

(d) Referral to magistrate judge. Pretrial motions in civil actions are hereby referred to a magistrate judge for hearing and determination, subject to the following exceptions: motions for injunctive relief; motions to remand; motions for judgment on the pleadings; motions for summary judgment; motions to dismiss or to permit maintenance of a class action; motions to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted; motions to involuntarily dismiss an action; motions in limine regarding evidentiary matters; and motions affecting the rulings on dispositive motions (e.g., motions to amend) pending before a district judge. Upon entry of a pretrial order, all motions thereafter served must be submitted to the assigned trial judge.

(e) Hearing of non-dispositive motions when assigned magistrate judge is unavailable. When the magistrate judge assigned to an action is unavailable because of absence from the district, illness, or other cause, or in a bona fide emergency as the result of which any party would be prejudicially delayed by presenting the matter to that magistrate judge, any other full-time magistrate judge may hear and determine any motion presented by a party, other than a motion enumerated as an exception in 28 U.S.C. § 636 (b)(1)(A) and L.U.CIV.R. 72(d). (Amended effective December 1, 2010.)

Rule 73. Procedures before a magistrate judge — civil consent cases.

(a) Notice of consent option. Parties may consent at any time before trial to have a magistrate judge:

(1) conduct all further proceedings in the action and order the entry of final judgment; or

(2) hear and determine one or more case dispositive motions designated by the parties.

Either the assigned district judge or the assigned magistrate judge may discuss the consent option with the parties. The parties are free to withhold consent without adverse substantive consequences, and any notice or other communication from the court under authority of this rule will so advise them.

(b) Execution of consent. If all parties in a civil action consent to a magistrate judge's exercise of authority described in L.U.CIV.R. 73(a), plaintiff or plaintiff's counsel must file with the clerk of court a Notice, Consent and Reference of a Civil Action to a Magistrate Judge (Form AO 0085), signed by all parties or their attorneys. A link to this and other national forms is available on the court's website. The notice will not be docketed without all such signatures; neither the notice nor its contents may be made known or available to a judge if the notice lacks any signatures required under this rule. A party's decision regarding consent must not be communicated to a judge before a fully executed consent notice is filed.

(c) Time for consent. Consent in a civil action under L. U. CIV. R. 73(a) may be entered at any time before trial of the case.

(d) Reference of civil consent action. An executed notice of consent must be provided to the assigned district judge. The district judge may then refer the case to the magistrate judge for all further proceedings.

(e) Party added after consent occurs. A party added to a civil action after reference to a magistrate judge on consent will be given an opportunity to consent to the continued exercise of case-dispositive authority by the magistrate judge. A later-added party electing to consent must, within twenty-one days of its appearance, file a consent, signed by the party or its attorney, with the clerk of court. If a later-added party fails or declines to consent to the magistrate judge's exercise of authority, the action will be returned to the assigned district judge for all further proceedings.

Rule 77. Court Always Open.

There are no terms of court in the United States District Courts of Mississippi.

Rule 79. Sealing of Court Records.

(a) Court records presumptively in public domain. Except as otherwise provided by statute, rule, including FED. R. CIV. P. 5.2, or order, all pleadings and other materials filed with the court ("court records") become a part of the public record of the court.

(b) Documents filed with the court. Every document used by parties moving for or opposing an adjudication by the court, other than trial or hearing exhibits, must be filed with the court. No document may be filed under seal, except upon entry of an order of the court either acting sua sponte or specifically granting a request to seal that document. Any order sealing a document must include particularized findings demonstrating that sealing is supported by clear and compelling reasons and is narrowly tailored to serve those reasons. A statute mandating or permitting the non-disclosure of a class of documents provides sufficient authority to support an order sealing documents.

(c) Sealed orders. A judicial officer may seal a court order, including an order to seal documents and related findings, when sealing a court order meets the standard for sealing a document.

(d) Stipulations, confidentiality and protective orders insufficient. No document may be sealed merely by stipulation of the parties. A confidentiality order or protective order entered by the court to govern discovery will not qualify as an order to seal documents for purposes of this rule. Any document filed under seal in the absence of a court order to seal may be unsealed without prior notice to the parties.

(e) Procedure for filing documents under seal.

(1) Parties must comply with the Administrative Procedures of the court governing the physical requirements related to filing documents under seal (i.e., format of electronic media, physical versus electronic filing, etc.).

(2) A party submitting a document or portion of a document for filing under seal under a governing statute, rule, or order must note on the face of the document that it or a portion of it is filed under seal under that statute, rule, or order (specifying the statute(s), rule(s) or order(s) relied upon). The clerk will provide public notice by stating on the docket that the document contains sealed material.

(3) Any document not covered by section (e)(2) and filed with the intention of being sealed must be accompanied by a motion to seal. The clerk will provide public notice by docketing the motion in a way that discloses its nature as a motion to seal. The document and any confidential memoranda will be treated as sealed pending the outcome of the ruling on the motion. Any filing unaccompanied by a motion to seal will be treated as a public record.

(4) Any motion to seal must be accompanied by a non-confidential supporting memorandum, a notice that identifies the motion as a sealing motion, and a proposed order. A party may also submit a confidential memorandum for in camera review. The non-confidential memorandum and the proposed order must include:

(A) A non-confidential description of what is to be sealed;

(B) A statement of why sealing is necessary, and why another procedure will not suffice;

(C) References to governing case law; and

(D) Unless permanent sealing is sought, a statement of the period of time the party seeks to have the matter maintained under seal and how the matter is to be handled upon unsealing.

(E) The proposed order must recite the findings required by governing case law to support the proposed sealing. Any confidential memoranda will be treated as sealed pending the outcome of the ruling on the motion.

(f) Duration of sealing. Court records filed under seal in civil actions will be maintained under seal until otherwise ordered by the court.

(g) Non-Filed documents. Nothing in this Local Rule limits the ability of the parties, by agreement, to restrict access to documents which are not filed with the court.

Rule 81. Case exempted from these rules.

These Local Rules do not apply to petitions or actions brought by a person:

(a) who seeks a writ of habeas corpus or otherwise challenges a criminal conviction or sentence;

(b) who is proceeding without an attorney and who is in the custody of the United States, a state or a state subdivision and whose claims relate to conditions of confinement; or

(c) who is appealing a decision by the Social Security Administration.

Such actions are governed by orders entered in the particular case itself.

Rule 83.1. Attorneys: admission and conduct.

(a) General admission of attorneys.

(1) Any attorney who is a member of the Mississippi Bar shall satisfy the following requirements for admission to this court:

(A) The attorney must produce a photocopy of the certification of admission to practice before the Mississippi Supreme Court;

(B) the attorney must be sponsored by a member of the bar of this court who must certify that the applicant is a member in good standing in the Mississippi Bar and is familiar with the LOCAL RULES and the MISSISSIPPI RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT; and

(C) the attorney must be presented to the court only after filing his or her documentation with the clerk of court, paying the admission fee, and signing the oath. An applicant may then be presented to a district or magistrate judge of this court for formal admission, which may be accomplished in open court or in chambers at any time convenient to the judge. An applicant for admission may be presented for formal admission to any district or magistrate judge in either the Northern or Southern District of Mississippi.

(b) Appearances.

(1) Requirement of local counsel. When a party appears by attorney, every complaint, answer, motion, application, notice of deposition, or other paper on behalf of the represented party must be signed, and every deposition, mediation, conference or hearing must be attended by at least one attorney of record admitted to the general practice of law in the district court in which the action is pending.

(2) Designation of lead counsel. In any civil action in which a single party is represented by multiple counsel, the initial pleadings filed on behalf of the party must designate at least one attorney as lead counsel.

(3) Withdrawal by attorneys. When an attorney enters an appearance in a civil action, he or she must remain as counsel of record until released by formal order of the court. An attorney may be released only on motion signed by the client(s) or upon a duly noticed motion to all parties, including the client and presented to the judicial officer to whom the case is assigned, together with a proposed order authorizing counsel's withdrawal.

(c) Discipline and reinstatement.

(1) Original discipline. The court may, after notice and an opportunity to show cause to the contrary, if requested, censure or reprimand any attorney who practices before it for conduct unbecoming a member of the bar or for failure to comply with these rules, the MISSISSIPPI RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT, or any other rule of the court. If the conduct or failure to comply is found to be flagrant, the court may, after notice and opportunity to show cause, revoke or suspend the attorney's admission to practice before the court. Such action by the court will be reported by the clerk of the court to the executive director of the Mississippi Bar, or the appropriate official of the bar of any non-resident attorney admitted to practice before this court. If the court finds that the conduct complained of affords reasonable grounds for more stringent disciplinary action, including suspension or disbarment, the matter will, in the case of a member of the Mississippi Bar, be referred to the Mississippi Bar for appropriate action under Miss. Code Ann. § 73-3-301, et seq. (1972) or subsequent amendments. If the attorney is not a member of the Mississippi Bar, the matter will be referred to the appropriate disciplinary authority of the bar of which he or she is a member.

Nothing herein may be construed to limit the inherent disciplinary power of the judicial officers of this court, including the power of a district judge to immediately suspend a member of the bar convicted of a felony in a case heard before him or her.

(2) Reciprocal discipline. When it is shown to the court that any member of its bar has been suspended or disbarred from practice by any other court of record, the member will be subject to suspension or disbarment by the district court. The disciplinary action is initiated by a show-cause order issued by the court, notifying the attorney that disciplinary proceedings have been commenced, describing the disciplinary proceedings conducted in the other jurisdiction, and requesting that the member appear and show cause why he or she should not be suspended or disbarred from practice before the district court. The member will be afforded thirty days to show cause why he or she should not be suspended or disbarred; the time for response may be extended by the court for proper reason. The member's response to the show-cause order is limited to claims of (A) lack of procedural due process in the original proceedings or (B) lack of substantial evidence to support the factual findings. Lack of procedural due process in the original proceedings, however, does not preclude original disciplinary action by the court as provided in subparagraph 1. Upon response to the show-cause order, and after hearing, if one is requested, or upon expiration of the period allowed for response, if no response is made, the court may enter an appropriate order in which it may impose discipline, including, but not limited to, the same discipline administered by the other jurisdiction.

(3) Reinstatement. No application for relief from suspension or reinstatement after disbarment will be considered by this court unless the applicant can show that he or she is an attorney in good standing with the Mississippi Bar or with the jurisdiction in which he or she may have been suspended or disbarred. Any attack upon the denial of readmission or relief from suspension/reinstatement after disbarment is limited to claims of (A) lack of procedural due process in the reinstatement proceeding of the other jurisdiction or (B) lack of substantial evidence to support the factual findings. Upon the applicant's showing of good standing, the court may vacate or continue the disbarment or suspension, or diminish the suspension, as may be appropriate.

(d) Pro hac vice admission of attorneys:

(1) Definitions.

(A) A "non-resident attorney" is a person not admitted to practice law in this state but who is admitted in another state or territory of the United States or of the District of Columbia and is not disbarred or suspended from practice in any jurisdiction.

A non-resident attorney is eligible for admission pro hac vice if that lawyer:

i. lawfully practices solely on behalf of the lawyer's client and its commonly owned organizational affiliates, regardless of where the lawyer resides or works; or

ii. neither resides nor is regularly employed at an office in this state; or

iii. resides in this state but (a) lawfully practices from offices in one or more other states and (b) practices no more than temporarily in this state, whether by admission pro hac vice or in other lawful ways; or

iv. is a government attorney employed on a full time basis and is lawfully admitted to practice in another jurisdiction.

(B) A "resident attorney" is an attorney admitted to practice in either the Northern or Southern District of Mississippi after complying with L.U.CIV.R. 83.1(a).

(C) A "client" is a person for whom or entity for which the nonresident attorney has rendered services or by whom the attorney has been retained before the lawyer performs services in this state.

(D) "This state" refers to Mississippi. This rule governs proceedings before any federal court located in this state.

(2) Authority of the Court to Permit Pro Hac Vice Admissions. A federal court of this state may, in its discretion, admit an eligible non-resident attorney retained to appear in a particular civil proceeding pending before that court to appear pro hac vice as counsel in that proceeding. No admission will be effective until all required fees are received by the clerk of the court. This rule provides the only authority under which a nonresident attorney who is not a member of the Mississippi Bar and not admitted to practice before the Mississippi Supreme Court may practice in a United States District Court serving Mississippi. These rules contain no "grandfathering" provision allowing a non-resident attorney not a member of the Mississippi Bar to practice in a district court other than on a caseby- case pro hac vice admission.

(3) Association and duties of a resident attorney. No eligible nonresident attorney may appear pro hac vice unless and until a resident attorney has been associated. The resident attorney remains responsible to the client and responsible for the conduct of the proceeding before the court. It is the duty of the resident attorney to advise the client of the resident attorney's independent judgment on contemplated actions in the proceedings if that judgment differs from that of the non-resident attorney. At least one resident attorney must sign every pleading filed with the court and must personlly appear and participate in all trials, in all pretrial conferences, case management conferences and settlement conferences, hearings and other proceedings conducted in open court, and all depositions or other proceedings in which testimony is given.

(4) Pro hac vice application. A non-resident attorney seeking to appear pro hac vice in a proceeding pending in a federal court of this state must submit a verified application, as set out in Form 6, to associated counsel. Local counsel will retain the original application and file it, in the format required by the Administrative Procedures for Electronic Case Filing, in the court where the litigation is filed, accompanied by a certificate of good standing issued within ninety days of the date of the application by the licensing authority for all states, as well as the District of Columbia, where the applicant has been admitted to practice law. The application must be served on all parties who have appeared in the case and must include proof of service. The verified application must contain the following information:

(A) the applicant's residence and business address;

(B) the name, address, and phone number of each client sought to be represented;

(C) the courts before which applicant has been admitted to practice and the respective period(s) of admission;

(D) whether the applicant (i) has been denied admission pro hac vice in this state, (ii) has had admission pro hac vice revoked in this state, or (iii) has otherwise formally been disciplined or sanctioned by any court in this state in the last five years. If so, specify the nature of the allegations; the name of the authority bringing such proceedings, the caption of the proceedings, the date filed, what findings were made, and what action was taken in connection with those proceedings;

(E) whether any formal, written disciplinary proceeding has ever been brought against the applicant by a disciplinary authority in any other jurisdiction within the last five (5) years and, as to each such proceeding: the nature of the allegations; the name of the person or authority bringing such proceedings; the date the proceedings were initiated and finally concluded; the style of the proceedings; and the findings made and actions taken in connection with those proceedings;

(F) whether the applicant has been formally held in contempt or otherwise sanctioned by any court in a written order in the last five (5) years for disobedience to its rules or orders, and, if so, the nature of the allegations; the name of the court before which such proceedings were conducted; the date of the contempt order or sanction, the caption of the proceedings, and the substances of the court's rulings (a copy of the written order or transcript of the oral rulings must be attached to the application);

(G) the name and address of each court and a full identification of each proceeding in which the applicant has filed an application to appear pro hac vice in this state within the preceding two years; the date of each application; and the outcome of the application;

(H) the style and number of each case, including the name of the court, in which the applicant has appeared as counsel pro hac vice within the immediately preceding 12 months, is presently appearing as counsel pro hac vice, or has pending applications for admission to appear pro hac vice;

(I) an affirmative statement that the applicant has read and is familiar with the LOCAL RULES OF THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURTS FOR

THE NORTHERN AND SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF MISSISSIPPI and the ethics, principles, practices, customs and usages of the legal profession in the State of Mississippi, including but not limited to the MISSISSIPPI RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT required of the members of the Mississippi Bar as well as the procedures of this court;

(J) the name, address, telephone number, e-mail address and bar number of the resident attorney whom the applicant has associated in the particular case; and

(K) the signature of the resident attorney associated by the applicant certifying the resident attorney's agreement to the association and his/her appearance of record with the non-resident attorney.

The non-resident attorney's application may provide the following optional information:

i. the applicant's prior or continuing representation in other matters of one or more of the clients the applicant proposes to represent and any relationship between those other matter(s) and the proceeding for which the applicant seeks admission;

ii. any special experience, expertise, or other factor the applicant believes to make it particularly desirable that the applicant be permitted to represent the client(s) the applicant proposes to represent in the particular case.

(5) Application fee. Simultaneously with the filing of the verified application, the applicant must pay a non-refundable fee in an amount set by the court by general order. An applicant will not be required to pay the fee established by L.U.CIV.R. 83.1(b)(5) if the applicant will not charge an attorney fee to the client(s) and is:

(A) employed or associated with a pro bono project or nonprofit legal services organization in a civil case involving the client(s) of such programs; or

(B) applying to appear in a habeas corpus proceeding for an indigent defendant.

(6) Objection to application: A party to the proceedings may file an objection to the application or seek the court's imposition of conditions to its being granted. The objecting party must file its written objection by way of a verified affidavit containing or describing information establishing a factual basis for the objection and may seek denial or modification of the application. If the application has already been granted, the objecting party may move that the pro hac vice admission be revoked. The court may grant or deny the application or modification of the application without the necessity of any hearing, at the court's discretion.

(7) Standards for admission. The court has discretion whether to grant applications for admission pro hac vice and to set the terms and conditions of admission. An application ordinarily should be granted unless the court finds reasons to believe that:

(A) admission may be detrimental to the prompt, fair and efficient administration of justice;

(B) admission may be detrimental to legitimate interests of parties to the proceedings other than the client(s) the applicant proposes to represent;

(C) one or more of the clients the applicant proposes to represent may be at risk of receiving inadequate representation and cannot adequately appreciate the risk;

(D) the applicant has engaged in more than five (5) separate unrelated cases or other matters before the Northern and Southern Districts of the federal courts of this state within the last twelve (12) months immediately preceding the appearance in question;

(E) admission should be denied because the applicant had, before the application, filed or appeared in the federal court without having secured approval under these rules.

(8) Revocation of admission. Admission to appear as counsel pro hac vice in a proceeding will be revoked if the attorney is suspended or disbarred by any other court of record during the pendency of the action in which he or she has been granted leave to appear, and lack of due process or lack of substantial evidence to support the factual findings in the original proceeding will not preclude revocation. Admission to appear as counsel pro hac vice in a proceeding may also be revoked for any of the reasons listed in Section 7(a-c) above or just cause determined by the court.

(9) Suspension or disbarment of resident attorney. In the event the resident attorney associated by the non-resident attorney in a particular case is suspended, disbarred, or incapacitated by virtue of health or otherwise from the practice of law in the State of Mississippi, the nonresident attorney before further proceeding in the pending case, must associate a new resident attorney who is in good standing to practice law in Mississippi and admitted to practice in the Northern or Southern District federal courts for the State of Mississippi and must file an amendment to the verified application required by L.U.CIV.R. 83.1(4).

(10) Attorneys representing the United States. Attorneys representing the United States or any of its departments, agencies or employees are permitted to appear on behalf of the United States government and to represent its interests in any matter in which the United States government is interested upon proper introduction to the court by the United States Attorney for the district or one of the United States Attorney's assistants.

(e) Authorization to practice law in the Northern and Southern Districts of Mississippi Federal Court. A law student who is enrolled in a legal internship program or a clinical legal education course in an American Bar Association accredited law school of this state and who has been granted limited admission under the Mississippi Limited Practice Act, Miss. Code Ann. §§ 73-3-201 to -211 (1972), may also be authorized to engage in limited practice in this court with the following additional conditions and limitations:

(1) The law student who applies for admission to limited practice must certify that the student is familiar with federal procedural and evidentiary rules as well as these Local Rules. The law student must take the oath and be admitted to limited practice by order of a judicial officer of this court.

(2) Upon filing the oath and order in the office of the clerk of court, the law student will be authorized to engage in limited practice in any federal court in the state subject to any controls and limitations ordered by the court.

(3) The authority for limited practice by a law student will continue during any regular school term during which the law student is enrolled in a legal internship or clinical legal education course, including interim sessions between terms. The court may revoke the authority granted at any time.

(4) A law student may not directly represent clients but may only assist the supervising attorney or clinical teacher, who must be admitted to practice in this court and otherwise meet the requirements of Miss. Code Ann. §73- 3-205, in representing their clients. All pleadings and entries of record in courts must be signed by the supervising attorney or clinical teacher.

(5) Law students may appear and participate in trials and hearings in court if the supervising attorney or clinical teacher is present and supervising the student.

(6) Law students assigned to prosecuting attorneys may assist the supervising attorney before grand juries subject to the same prohibitions and penalties as to disclosure and secrecy as are members of the grand jury.

(7) Law students will be subject to the same standards and rules of professional conduct and ethics and the same rules of discipline as members of the bar of this court, and each must certify in writing that the student has read and is familiar with the Mississippi Rules of Professional Conduct.

(8) A law student may not receive compensation for the student's services from the client or from any other source, directly or indirectly, for participation, other than the award of academic credit by the student's law school. This rule does not prevent the court from awarding costs and expenses which may otherwise be authorized by law to any governmental agency, legal assistance program, or law school clinical instruction program for the services provided by the student. As in all other cases, the court will determine the propriety and amount of an award of costs, including reasonable attorney's fees.

The judicial officer before whom a student is participating may, at any time and with or without cause and for any reason, revoke the authorization established by this Rule.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Discretion of court.
Pro hac vice appearance.

Discretion of court.

This rule contains no specific requirement as to whether pleading must be signed by attorney admitted to practice before court in which action is pending before filing will be deemed effective, and therefore admission of attorneys to practice before court rests within court's discretion. American Express Travel Related Servs. Co. v. Chandler, 139 B.R. 817 (Bankr. S.D. Miss. 1992).

Pro hac vice appearance.

Where only one attorney signed an 11 U.S.C.S. § 523(a)(2)(A) complaint in compliance with Bankr. N.D. & S.D. Miss. R. 5005-1(a)(2)(A) by having an "s" mark appear before his name, and where the signing attorney did not satisfy the requirements for pro hac vice admission in Bankr. N.D. & S.D. Miss. R. 9010-1(b)(1), or the admission rules for the district court in N.D. & S.D. Miss. R. 83.1, then he was not authorized to practice law in the bankruptcy court, and his signature on the complaint did not satisfy the requirements of Fed. R. Bankr. P. 9010 and 9011. However, the debtor's motion to strike pleadings and dismiss the adversary was denied because under the remedial clause of Rule 9011, the attorney was entitled to remedy those errors, as the problem with the signature was not sufficiently called to the attention of the creditor or the attorney until the hearing on the debtor's motion, when the court clarified the law regarding admission to practice, as the absence of an explicit statement in the Local Rules regarding the requirements for general admission to practice before the bankruptcy court warranted a finding that the law regarding admission to practice was ambiguous and vague. Knesel v. Davis (In re Davis), — Bankr. —, 2011 Bankr. LEXIS 1751 (Bankr. S.D. Miss. May 10, 2011).

Even if complaint was considered defective as a result of being filed prior to entry of order granting permission to appear pro hac vice, any such defect was deemed a technical defect not affecting timeliness of complaint. American Express Travel Related Servs. Co. v. Chandler, 139 B.R. 817 (Bankr. S.D. Miss. 1992).

Rule 83.2. Assignment of Judges.

The assignment of judges in civil cases shall be in accordance with the internal procedures adopted by each court.

Rule 83.3. Exhibits.

(A) Custody and Disposition of Exhibits. All exhibits, including models, diagrams, or other material items, filed in a proceeding must be physically removed by the parties who filed them, in the event no appeal is perfected, within sixty days from the date of final disposition of the case by this court, or, in the event an appeal is perfected and thereafter disposed of, within thirty days after receipt of the judgment, other process, or certificate disclosing disposition of the case by that court. In the event the exhibits are not removed from the custody of the clerk within the required time, the clerk may destroy or otherwise dispose of the exhibits.

(B) Custody of Sensitive Exhibits. Sensitive exhibits include, but are not necessarily limited to, drugs, weapons, currency, pornography, and items of high monetary value. Sensitive exhibits offered or received in evidence will be maintained in the custody of the clerk of court during the hours in which the court is in session. At the conclusion of each daily proceeding and at the noon recess, the clerk will return all sensitive exhibits to the offering counsel or party, who must then be responsible for maintaining custody and the integrity of such exhibits until the next session of court, at which time they must be returned to the clerk, unless otherwise ordered by the court. Following the return of a verdict in a jury case, or the entry of a final order in a non-jury case, sensitive exhibits will be handled or disposed of in the same manner as other exhibits under this rule.

Rule 83.4. Photographs and broadcasting.

(A) Photography and Broadcasting Prohibited. Taking photographs, video or audio recordings or broadcasting by radio, television or other means in or from the courtroom or its environs is prohibited, regardless of whether the court is actually in session. The environs of the courtroom extend to all portions of the building in which a courtroom is located, including hallways, stairs, and elevators.

(B) Electronic devices prohibited. Electronic devices capable of transmitting images or messages are prohibited in the courtroom except when such equipment is being utilized by parties, attorneys and support personnel directly involved in the litigation before the Court. Cellular telephones must be turned off or in the vibrate§ilent mode in the courtroom.

(C) These provisions may be relaxed or modified in the discretion of the presiding judge, unless otherwise prohibited by statute, rule or Judicial Conference policy.

Rule 83.5. Mississippi Rules of Professional Conduct.

An attorney who makes an appearance in any case in the district court is bound by the provisions of the MISSISSIPPI RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT and is subject to discipline for violating them.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Conflict found under Mississippi Rules of Professional Conduct. Where a paralegal worked for defendant lenders' prior counsel, and then worked for different plaintiff consumers' counsel, and all the consumer fraud cases involved the same lenders, claims and documents, and nearly identical facts, a substantial relationship existed requiring disqualification of plaintiff consumers' counsel under Miss. R. Prof. Conduct 1.6, 1.9(a), and 1.10(b). Owens v. First Family Fin. Servs., 379 F. Supp. 2d 840 (S.D. Miss. 2005).

Rule 83.7. Alternative dispute resolution.

(a) Introduction and purpose. The United States District Courts for the Northern and Southern Districts of Mississippi developed this alternative dispute resolution ("ADR") Local Rule to implement the Alternative Dispute Resolution Plan (the "Plan") mandated by the Alternative Dispute Resolution Act of 1998, 28 U.S.C. § 651, et seq. The Plan is designed to provide access to effective ADR techniques and to encourage mutually satisfactory resolutions of disputes in all stages of civil litigation.

(b) Administration of ADR plan. The chief judge of each district will designate a judicial officer, knowledgeable in ADR practices, to implement, administer, oversee, and evaluate the ADR Plan. In addition, the court may from time to time solicit recommendations from state and federal bar associations, committees and organizations interested in ADR regarding ADR programs and efficient methods of coordinating ADR resources in the state and federal courts.

(c) Voluntary Use of Other Methods. Nothing in this Local Rule prohibits parties from voluntarily engaging in any form of ADR, such as arbitration, mediation, early neutral evaluation, mini-trial or other appropriate ADR processes at any time.

(d) Definitions.

(1) An "ADR Action" is any activity in which the parties mutually engage by consent or directive of the court using ADR methods such as mediation or a settlement conference in an effort to resolve issues short of a trial.

(2) Mediation is a process in which impartial persons assist parties in reaching settlements. Mediators facilitate communications between the parties and assist them in their negotiations. When appropriate, mediators may also offer objective evaluations of cases and may make settlement recommendations.

(3) A settlement conference is a mediation conducted by the court.

(1) Discretion of court. The determination of whether a matter should be referred for ADR is addressed to the sound discretion of the judicial officer assigned to the case. One of the ADR methods set forth in this Local Rule must be used in all cases, unless exempted by this Local Rule or, at the discretion of the court, waived in a particular case for just cause.

(2) Actions Exempted from Consideration for ADR. The following categories of proceedings are exempt from consideration for ADR: an action for review on an administrative record; a petition for habeas corpus or other proceeding to challenge a criminal conviction or sentence; and an action brought without counsel by a person in custody of the United States, a state, or a state subdivision.

(f) Procedures for ADR.

(1) Early Conferral Regarding ADR. In the FED. R. CIV. P. 26(f) Conference, counsel must confer regarding any discovery or other conditions precedent which they believe are needed for a meaningful and effective mediation or settlement conference, as well as the time necessary to complete them. Counsel must inform the magistrate judge in their respective Confidential Settlement Memoranda of any discovery and other conditions precedent which they believe are necessary for meaningful ADR, as well as an estimate of the time necessary to complete them. Any party who believes there is just cause to forego ADR in a case must detail the basis for that belief in the Confidential Settlement Memorandum.

(2) Case Management Order Provision Regarding ADR. After considering the parties' positions on ADR, the magistrate judge will incorporate an ADR deadline in the Case Management Order. The ADR deadline will be a date no later than the close of the discovery period and preferably sooner, subject to the particularities of the case. The ADR deadline should permit sufficient time for such discovery necessary to enable the parties to have an effective mediation or settlement conference, but be sufficiently in advance of the discovery deadline to encourage early discovery and the avoidance of unnecessary expense. No later than the ADR deadline, the parties must report to the magistrate judge all ADR efforts the parties have undertaken.

(3) Report Regarding ADR Required before Final Pre-Trial Conference. Before the Final Pre-Trial Conference, the parties must report to the magistrate judge all efforts the parties have made to comply with this Local Rule or provide sufficient facts to support a finding of just cause for failure to comply.

(4) Pre-ADR Procedures. If the parties elect to mediate a case, the premediation procedures, including those relating to any position statements, will be determined by the mediator selected by the parties. Alternatively, should the parties utilize a settlement conference, the judicial officer conducting the conference will direct the pre-settlement conference procedures at the time the settlement conference is scheduled. At a minimum, the parties must submit new Confidential Settlement Memoranda by a deadline set by the judicial officer.

(g) Authority to Settle.

(1) Disclosure. Fourteen days before any mediation or settlement conference, the parties will disclose to all other parties and the mediator or the judge conducting the settlement conference the identities of all entities and persons required to be present for meaningful mediation to take place, including those persons or entities having authority to settle the case, as well as non-party persons or entities whose presence would be required in order to fully resolve all issues in the case (such as persons or entities who may hold a subrogated interest in one or more claims).

(2) Appearance at Mediation or Settlement Conference. Counsel, including lead trial counsel for all parties, must appear at the mediation or settlement conference unless otherwise ordered by the court. If the case involves attorneys admitted pro hac vice, local counsel must also attend. If there is the potential for insurance coverage for one or more claims, and if the judicial officer has excused their presence, a representative of each insurance company involved, with full authority to settle the case, nevertheless, must be on standby and available by phone for the duration of the entire mediation or settlement conference.

(3) Attendance of Parties. All parties, including representatives of corporate parties, organizations or other entities, as well as individual parties, must appear in person at the mediation or settlement conference throughout the entire mediation or settlement conference unless excused in advance by the court. If a judicial officer permits any party or representative of a party to participate in the mediation or settlement conference by remote electronic means, that party or representative must be available throughout the entire mediation or settlement conference. Office closings and time zone differences do not excuse a company representative from continued participation under this Local Rule. Each Party representative must have full authority to settle the case.

(4) Post-Mediation report to court. Within seven days of the completion of a mediation conducted under this Local Rule, counsel must inform the magistrate judge in writing, using Form No. 7, whether or not the case was resolved, and, if settled, any remaining conditions precedent to entry of an agreed order of dismissal.

(h) Sanctions. If a party, party representative or attorney fails to appear or be available at a scheduled mediation or settlement conference as required by this Local Rule, or if a party, party representative or attorney is substantially unprepared to participate in the mediation or settlement conference, or if a party, party representative or attorney fails to participate in good faith during a mediation or settlement conference, a judicial officer upon motion or upon the judicial officer's own initiative, may impose appropriate sanctions including reasonable expenses and attorneys' fees incurred.

(i) Mediators.

(1) Court-Appointed Panels. In lieu of a unique federal panel of mediators, the court refers parties to the persons offering their services as mediators who meet the qualifications for inclusion on the List of Mediators provided for in Section X of the Court-Annexed Mediation Rules for Civil Litigation issued by the Mississippi Supreme Court on October 8, 1998 in In Re: Authorization of Court-Annexed Mediation in Chancery, Circuit and County Courts, No. 89-R-99026 S. Ct., and the Order of March 22, 1999 establishing minimum qualifications for inclusion on the list.

(2) Use of Non-Panel Mediators. Parties may use any person as a mediator, whether or not that person is on the List of Mediators referenced in this Local Rule, unless the mediator is disqualified by this Local Rule, ethical rules or by law.

(3) Immunity. Any mediator serving under this Local Rule is performing quasi-judicial functions and is entitled to the immunities and protections that the law accords to persons serving in such capacity.

(4) Codes of Ethics and Standards of Conduct. Any mediator serving under this Local Rule is subject to all ethical rules and standards of conduct set by statute, by the Judicial Conference of the United States, and by other professional organizations to which the mediator may belong or that may be approved or adopted by the court. If a mediator discovers a circumstance requiring disqualification, then the mediator must promptly inform the parties and the court of those circumstances in writing.

(5) Disqualification. No person may serve as a mediator:

(A) in violation of the standards set forth in 28 U.S.C. § 455;

(B) in violation of any applicable standard of professional responsibility or rule of professional conduct;

(C) in violation of any additional standards adopted by the court; or

(D) if the mediator discovers a circumstance requiring disqualification.

(j) Confidentiality of proceedings.

(1) General Rule of confidentiality. Except as otherwise provided in L.U.Civ.R. 83.7(j)(4) or required by law, all communications made in mediation or settlement conference are confidential. Mediation- and settlement conference-related communications are not subject to disclosure and may not be used as evidence against any party or participant in any judicial or administrative proceeding.

(2) No compelled disclosure. Except as provided in L.U.Civ.R. 83.7(j)(4) or required by law, no party, party's attorney, party's representative, mediator or judicial officer is subject to process requiring disclosure of confidential information or data related to a mediation or settlement conference conducted under this Local Rule, nor may such persons be compelled to testify in any proceeding related to matters occurring during a mediation or settlement conference.

(3) Limitations on communications with court. Except as provided in L.U.Civ.R. 83.7(j)(4) or required by law, a person participating in mediation or settlement conference under this Local Rule may not be compelled to disclose to the court any communication made, position taken, or opinion formed by any party or mediator in connection with mediation or settlement conference.

(4) Exceptions to the general rule of confidentiality. The only circumstances which may make it appropriate for a party, a party's attorney, a party's representative, a mediator or a judicial officer to disclose a confidential communication arising from proceedings governed by this Local Rule is a finding by the court that such testimony or other disclosure is necessary to:

(A) prevent a manifest injustice;

(B) enforce a settlement;

(C) help establish a violation of criminal law; or

(D) prevent harm to the public health or safety. (Amended December 1, 2010.)

Rule 83.8. RICO Cases.

(a) In all cases in this court in which claims are asserted under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organization Act ("RICO"), 18 U.S.C. § 1961, a RICO Statement, conforming to the requirements of this order, must accompany the filing of the RICO complaint.

(b) This Statement must include the facts the Plaintiff is relying upon to initiate this RICO complaint as a result of the "reasonable inquiry" required by FED. R. CIV. P. 11. This Statement must be in a form which uses both the numbers and letters as set forth below and must, in detail and with specificity:

(1) State whether the alleged unlawful conduct is in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 1962(a), (b), (c), and/or (d).

(2) List each Defendant and state the alleged misconduct and basis of liability of each Defendant.

(3) List the alleged wrongdoers, other than the Defendant(s) listed above, and state the alleged misconduct of each wrongdoer.

(4) List the alleged victims and state how each victim was allegedly injured.

(5) Describe in detail the pattern of racketeering activity or collection of unlawful debts alleged for each RICO claim. A description of the pattern of racketeering must include the following information:

(A) List the alleged predicate acts and the specific statutes which were allegedly violated;

(B) Provide the dates of the predicate acts, the participants in the predicate acts, and a description of the facts surrounding the predicate acts;

(C) If the RICO claim is based on the predicate offenses of wire fraud, mail fraud, or fraud in the sale of securities, the "circumstances constituting fraud or mistake shall be stated with particularity." FED. R. CIV. P. 9(b). Identify the time, place, and contents of the alleged misrepresentations, and the identity of persons to whom and by whom the alleged misrepresentations were made;

(D) State whether there has been a criminal conviction for violation of the predicate acts;

(E) State whether civil litigation has resulted in a judgment in regard to the predicate acts;

(F) Describe how the predicate acts form a "pattern of racketeering activity"; and,

(G) State whether the alleged predicate acts relate to each other as part of a common plan. If so, describe in detail.

(6) Describe in detail the alleged enterprise for each RICO claim. A description of each enterprise must include the following information:

(A) State the names of the individuals, partnerships, corporations, associations, or other legal entities which allegedly constitute the enterprise;

(B) Describe the structure, purpose, function, and course of conduct of the enterprise;

(C) State whether any Defendants are employees, officers, or directors of the alleged enterprise;

(D) State whether any Defendants are associated with the alleged enterprise;

(E) State whether the Plaintiff is alleging that the Defendants are individuals or entities separate from the alleged enterprise, or that the Defendants are the enterprise itself, or are members of the enterprise; and,

(F) If any Defendants are alleged to be either the enterprise itself or members of the enterprise, explain whether such Defendants are perpetrators, passive instruments, or victims of the alleged racketeering activity.

(7) State whether the Plaintiff is alleging that the pattern of racketeering activity and the enterprise are separate or have merged into one entity. In either event, describe in detail.

(8) Describe the alleged relationship between the activities of the enterprise and the pattern of racketeering activity. Discuss how the racketeering activity differs from the usual and daily activities of the enterprise, if at all.

(9) Describe what benefits, if any, the alleged enterprise receives from the alleged pattern of racketeering.

(10) Describe the effect of the activities of the enterprise on interstate or foreign commerce.

(11) If the complaint alleges a violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1962(a), provide the following information:

(A) State who received the income derived from the pattern of racketeering activity or through the collection of an unlawful debt; and,

(B) Describe the use, investment, or locus of such income.

(12) If the Complaint alleges a violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1962(b), describe in detail the acquisition or maintenance of any interest in or control of the alleged enterprise.

(13) If the Complaint alleges a violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1962(c), provide the following information:

(A) State who is employed by or associated with the enterprise; and,

(B) State whether the same entity is both the liable "person" and the "enterprise" under § 1962(c).

(14) If the Complaint alleges a violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1962(d), describe in detail the alleged conspiracy.

(15) Describe the direct causal relationship between the alleged injury and the violation of the RICO statute.

(16) List the actual damages for which Defendant is allegedly liable.

(17) List all other federal causes of action, if any, and provide citations to the relevant statute(s).

(18) List all pendent state claims, if any.

(19) Provide any additional information that you feel would be helpful to the Court in considering your RICO claim.

4. Good Faith Certificate
6. Application for Admission Pro Hac Vice
7. Report of Mediation

Rule A. Scope and general provisions.

(1) Applicability. These rules apply to the procedures in admiralty and maritime claims within the meaning of Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(h), which in turn are governed by the Supplemental Rules for Certain Admiralty and Maritime Claims of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure [Admiralty Supplemental Rules] in the United States District Courts in the State of Mississippi. As used in these Local Admiralty Rules, the term "judicial officer" or "court" means either a United States District Judge or a United States Magistrate Judge.

(2) Citation format.

(a) The Supplemental Rules for Certain Admiralty and Maritime Claims of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure should be cited as "Supplemental Rule [____]."

(b) The Local Admiralty and Maritime Rules must be cited as "Local Admiralty Rule (L.A.R. [____])."

(3) Application of local admiralty and maritime rules. The Local Admiralty Rules apply to all actions governed by L.A.R. A(1), and to the extent possible should be construed to be consistent with the other local rules of this court. To the extent that a Local Admiralty Rule conflicts with another local rule of this court, the Local Admiralty Rule controls.

(4) Designation of "In Admiralty" Proceedings. All pleadings filed in a Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(h) action should set forth the words, "IN ADMIRALTY" following the designation of the court.

(5) In Rem Admiralty and Maritime Jurisdiction. In any action brought in rem under the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction of this court, a plaintiff may present a motion and order for the arrest of property to any judicial officer within the district, in the event that the judicial officer assigned to the matter is not readily available to review the pleadings. If a plaintiff has procured a person, firm, or corporation to serve as a substitute custodian of seized property, any judicial officer in the district may sign an order, supported by a motion, permitting the United States Marshal to deliver the property seized to the substitute custodian, assuming the motion is joined by all parties or is being submitted before the appearance of any opposing party. In addition to any other supporting reasons, a plaintiff petitioning to transfer seized property to a substitute custodian must show, by means of a Certificate of Insurance or other sufficient proof of insurance, that there is sufficient insurance coverage for the vessel/property while in the possession of the substitute custodian, and must maintain the coverage in place during the pendency of the case. The insurance must comply with the mandates of the United States Marshal and specifically name the substitute custodian as a named insured.

(6) Verification of pleadings. Every complaint or claim made under the Admiralty Supplemental Rules must be verified on oath or affirmation by a party, or an officer of a corporate party. If no party or corporate officer is within the district, verification of a complaint or claim may be made by an agent, attorney-in-fact, or attorney of record, who declares the sources of the signer's knowledge or the contents of the verified document, that the document verified is true to the best of the signer's knowledge, the reason why verification is not made by the party or corporate officer, and that the signer has signatory authority. The verification will be deemed to be that of the party, as if verified personally. Any interested party may move, with or without a request for stay, for a personal oath of a party or all parties, or that of a corporate officer. If required by the court, verification must be procured by commission or as otherwise ordered.

(7) Amendment of Pleadings to Add or Delete Rule 9(h) Designations. In any case in which a plaintiff makes a maritime claim within the meaning of Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(h), but the plaintiff could also bring all or a portion of the claims under a different source of jurisdiction and thereby request a trial by jury, the plaintiff's motion to amend the pleadings to either add or delete the Rule 9(h) designation must be made by the general deadline set for amendments to all pleadings. Likewise, in any case in which a plaintiff makes a maritime claim within the meaning of Rule 9(h) and also demands a jury trial, the plaintiff must designate the division of those claims by the deadline set for amendment to pleadings, in the absence of a designation, the entire case will proceed under Rule 9(h) and be set for trial without jury. If a plaintiff elects to drop a Rule 9(h) designation entirely, any vessel or other property previously seized under the Admiralty Supplemental Rules must be immediately released from the custody of the U.S. Marshal or the substitute custodian, upon the motion of any party.

(8) Issuance of process. Except as limited by Supplemental Rules (B)(1) or (C)(3) and L.A.R. B(3) or C(2), or in suits prosecuted in forma pauperis and sought to be filed without pre-payment of fees or costs, or without security, all process will be issued by the court without further notice of the court.

(9) Publication of notices. Unless otherwise required by the court or applicable Local Admiralty or Supplemental Rule, whenever a notice is required to be published by any statute of the United States or by any Supplemental Rule or Local Admiralty Rule, the notice must be published in a newspaper of general circulation in the district where the lawsuit is pending, once a week for three consecutive weeks. If the action involves a marine casualty and is pending in a district other than where the marine casualty occurred, then the plaintiff must also publish the required notice in a newspaper of general circulation where the casualty occurred. All plaintiffs must use due diligence to provide direct notice to all known or reasonably anticipated claimants.

(10) Form and return of process in personam actions. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(h) process must be by civil summons, and must be returnable twenty-one (21) days after service of process; except that process issued in accordance with Supplemental Rule (B) must conform to the requirements of that rule.

(11) Taxation of costs. If costs are awarded to any party, the following may be taxed as costs in the case, in the manner provided for a civil action:

(a) The reasonable premium or expenses paid on all bonds or stipulations or other security by the party to whom costs are awarded.

(b) Reasonable wharfage or storage charges while in custody of the court.

(c) Costs of publication of notices under applicable rules of court.

(d) Any other reasonable expenses determined by the court, on motion and after hearing, to have been necessarily incurred and proper as costs.

(12) Forms - Admiralty and Maritime Rules. Examples of forms which may be used in admiralty and maritime actions are located on the courts' Websites under "Admiralty Forms." These forms provide illustrations of format and content, but they are neither mandatory nor exhaustive. (Effective December 1, 2010.)

Rule B. Attachment and garnishment: Special provision.

(1) Definition of "Not Found Within the District." In an action in personam filed under Supplemental Rule (B), a defendant will be considered "not found within the district" if the defendant does not have a physical address locatable within the district where the action is filed by means of typical reference sources such as a telephone directory or listing with the Secretary of State or if there is evidence that despite the listing of a physical address within the district, no individual is present at any reasonable time to receive a summons and complaint as contemplated by Fed.R.Civ.P. 4(d). The plaintiff or the plaintiff's attorney must sign and file with the complaint an affidavit setting forth the basis for classifying the defendant as "not found within the district." See Admiralty Form 28 on the courts' Websites.

(2) Pre-seizure Requirements. In accordance with Supplemental Rule (B)(1), the process of attachment and garnishment shall issue only after one of the following conditions has been met:

(a) Judicial Review Before Issuance. Except as provided in L.A.R. B(3)(b), a judicial officer must review the verified complaint and any other relevant case papers before the clerk issues the requested process of attachment and garnishment. No notice of this pre-arrest judicial review is required to be given to any person or prospective party.

If the judicial officer finds that probable cause exists to issue the process of attachment and garnishment, plaintiff must prepare an order that substantially conforms to Admiralty Form 1 on the courts' Websites for the judicial officer's signature directing the clerk to issue the process.

Upon receipt of the signed order, the clerk will enter the order and issue the summons and process of attachment and garnishment as contemplated by L.A.R. B(3)(c). Thereafter the clerk may issue supplemental process without further order of court.

(b) Certification of Exigent Circumstances. If the plaintiff files a written certification that exigent circumstances make review by the court impracticable, the clerk will issue a summons and the process of attachment and garnishment in accordance with L.A.R. B(2)(c).

(c) Preparation and Issuance of the Process of Attachment and Garnishment. Plaintiff must prepare the summons and the process of attachment and garnishment and deliver the documents to the clerk for filing and issuance.

The process of attachment and garnishment must substantially conform to Admiralty Form 2 on the courts' Websites and must give adequate notice of the post-seizure provisions of L.A.R. B(4).

(d) United States Marshal's Return of Service. The United States Marshal must file a return of service indicating the date and manner in which service was perfected and, if service was perfected upon a garnishee, the United States Marshal shall indicate on the return the name, address, and telephone number of the garnishee.

(e) Use of substitute custodian. If a substitute custodian is used in an attachment or garnishment proceeding, the plaintiff must follow the same requirements of L.A.R A(5).

(3) Notification of Seizure to Defendant. In an in personam action under Supplemental Rule (B), plaintiff or garnishor must initially attempt to perfect service of the notice in accordance with Supplemental Rule (B)(2)(a) or (b).

However, when service of the notice cannot be perfected in accordance with Supplemental Rule(B)(2)(a) or (b), plaintiff or garnishor must by affidavit offer proof required by Supplemental Rule (B)(2)(c) that the plaintiff or the garnishor has tried diligently to give notice of the action to the defendant, but has been unable to do so.

(4) Post-attachment Review Proceedings.

(a) Filing a required answer.

(i) By defendant. In accordance with Supplemental Rule (E)(4)(f), any person who claims an interest in property seized under Supplemental Rule (B) must file an answer and claim against the property within thirty (30) days after service of process has been executed, whether by attachment or service on the garnishee. The answer and claim must describe the nature of the claimant's interest in the property and articulate reasons why the seizure should be vacated. The claimant must serve a copy of the answer and claim upon plaintiff's counsel, the United States Marshal, and any other party to the litigation, along with a Certificate of Service indicating the date and manner in which service of the answer and claim was made.

(ii) By garnishee. The garnishee must file an answer to the Complaint and respond to any discovery served with the Complaint within twenty-one days after service.

(b) Hearing on the answer and claim. The claimant may be heard before a judicial officer not less than three days after the answer and claim has been filed and served on the plaintiff.

If the court orders that the seizure be vacated, the judicial officer may also award reasonable attorney's fees, costs and other expenses incurred by any party as a result of the seizure.

If the seizure was predicated upon a showing of 'exigent circumstances' under L.A.R. B(3)(b), and the court finds that exigent circumstances did not exist, the court may award reasonable attorney's fees, costs, and other expenses incurred by any party as a result of the seizure.

(5) Procedural Requirement for the Entry of Default. In accordance with Fed.R.Civ.P. Rule 55, a party seeking the entry of default in a Supplemental Rule (B) action must file a motion and supporting legal memorandum and offer other proof sufficient to demonstrate that due notice of the action and seizure have been given in accordance with L.A.R. B(4)

Upon review of the motion, memorandum, and other proof, the clerk should, where appropriate, enter the default of a party in accordance with Fed.R.Civ.P. Rule 55(a), and will serve notice of the entry of default upon all parties who have appeared in the action.

(6) Procedural requirements for the entry of default judgment. Not later than thirty days after notice of the entry of default, the party seeking the entry of default judgment must file a motion with appropriate exhibits and supporting legal memorandum sufficient to support the entry of default judgment. The moving party must serve these papers upon every other party to the action and file a Certificate of Service indicating the date and manner in which service was made.

A party opposing the entry of default judgment must file written opposition to the motion within seven days of receipt of the motion. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, the motion for the entry of default judgment will be heard without oral argument.

Unless a motion to be continued is granted, a default judgment establishes a right on the part of the party or parties in whose favor it is entered and will be considered prior to any claims of the owner of the defendant property against which it is entered and to the remnants and surpluses thereof but does not establish plaintiff's priority of entitlement to possession of defendant property over non-possessory lien claimants. Obtaining a judgment by default shall not preclude the party in whose favor it is entered from contending and proving that all, or any portion, of the claim or claims encompassed within the judgment are entitled to priority over any non-possessory lien claims. (Effective December 1, 2010.)

Rule C. Actions in rem.

(1) Verification requirements. Every complaint and claim filed in an in rem proceeding under Supplemental Rule (C) must be verified in accordance with L.A.R. A(6) and B(2).

(2) Pre-seizure Requirements. In accordance with Supplemental Rule (C)(3), the process of arrest in rem may issue only after one of the following conditions has been met:

(a) Judicial Review Before Issuance. Except as provided in L.A.R. C(2)(b), no seizure warrant may be issued until a judicial officer has reviewed the verified complaint and any other relevant case papers and entered an order directing the clerk to issue the warrant for arrest or summons in rem. No notice of this pre-seizure judicial review is required to be given to any person or prospective party.

The plaintiff must submit a proposed order to the judicial officer directing the clerk to issue a warrant of arrest or summons to be entered in the event that the court finds that probable cause exists for an action in rem. The order must substantially conform to Admiralty Form 3 on the courts' Websites.

After entry of the signed order, the clerk will issue the warrant for arrest or summons in accordance with L.A.R. C(2)(c). The warrant must conform to Admiralty Form 4 on the courts' Websites. Thereafter, the clerk may issue supplemental process without further order of the court.

(b) Certification of exigent circumstances. If the plaintiff files a written certification that exigent circumstances make review by the court impracticable, the Clerk will issue a warrant of arrest or summons.

At any post-arrest proceedings under Supplemental Rule (E)(4)(f) and L.A.R. C(7), plaintiff has the burden of showing that probable cause existed for the issuance of process and that exigent circumstances existed which precluded judicial review in accordance with L.A.R. C(2)(a).

(c) Preparation and Issuance of the Warrant for Arrest or Summons. Plaintiff must prepare the warrant for arrest or summons, and deliver them to the clerk for filing and issuance.

The warrant for arrest must substantially conform to Admiralty Form 4 on the courts' Websites and must give adequate notice of the post-arrest provisions of L.A.R. C(7) to all parties including, but not limited to, any person or entity known to plaintiff to have a claim or interest in the vessel or property seized.

(3) Special Requirements for Actions Involving Freight, Proceeds or Intangible Property.

(a) Instructions to Be Contained in the Summons. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, the summons must order the person having control of the freight, proceeds or intangible property to either:

(i) File a claim within fourteen days after service of the summons in accordance with L.A.R. C(6)(a); or

(ii) Deliver or pay over to the United States Marshal the freight, proceeds or intangible property, in the form that the property is typically represented, or a part of the property which is sufficient to satisfy plaintiff's claim.

The summons must also inform the person having control of the freight, proceeds or intangible property that service of the summons has the effect of arresting the property and prohibiting the release, disposal or other distribution of the property without prior order of the court.

(b) Requirements for Claims to Prevent the Delivery of Freight, Proceeds or Intangible Property to the United States Marshal. Any claim filed in accordance with Supplemental Rule (E)(4) and L.A.R. C(6)(a) must describe the nature of claimant's interest in the property and articulate reasons why the seizure should be vacated.

The claim, accompanied by a certificate of service, must be served upon the plaintiff, the United States Marshal, and all other parties to the litigation.

(c) Delivery or Payment of the Freight, Proceeds or Intangible Property to the United States Marshal. Unless a claim is filed in accordance with Supplemental Rule (E)(4)(f), and L.A.R. C(6)(a), any person served with a summons issued under L.A.R. C(2)(a) or (b) must, within fourteen days after execution of service, deliver or pay over to the United States Marshal all, or part of, the freight, proceeds or intangible property sufficient to satisfy plaintiff's claim. Between the time that the summons is served and the property delivered or the court rules on a motion to prevent the delivery of the property, the person served with the summons may not remove the property from the district or otherwise transfer or dispose of it.

Unless otherwise ordered by the court, the person tendering control of the freight, proceeds or intangible property shall be excused from any further duty with respect to the property in question.

(4) Publishing Notice of the Arrest as Required by Supplemental Rule (C)(4).

(a) Time for publication. If the property is not released within fourteen days after the execution of process, the notice required by Supplemental Rule (C)(4) must be published by the plaintiff in accordance with L.A.R. A(9), and must begin not later than twenty-one days after execution of process. The notice must substantially conform to Admiralty Form 5 on the courts' Websites. See also Admiralty Forms 6, 7 and 8.

(b) Proof of publication. Not later than fourteen days after the last day of publication plaintiff must file a copy of the actual notice and proof of publication in the form of a sworn statement by or on behalf of the publisher or editor indicating the dates of publication.

(5) Undertaking in lieu of arrest. If, before or after the commencement of an action, a party accepts any written undertaking to respond on behalf of the vessel or other property in consideration of plaintiff's refraining from seeking arrest of the vessel or other property, the undertaking will only respond to orders or judgments in favor of the party accepting the undertaking and any parties expressly named in it, and only to the extent of the benefit conferred in the undertaking. See Admiralty Form No. 9 on the courts' Websites.

(6) Time for Filing Claim or Answer. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, any claimant of property subject to an action in rem must:

(a) File the claim within fourteen days after process has been executed. See Admiralty Form Nos. 10 and 11 on the courts' Websites; and

(b) Serve an answer within twenty-one days after filing the claim.

(7) Post-arrest proceedings. Upon filing a claim, the claimant may also file a motion and proposed order directing plaintiff to show cause why the arrest should not be vacated, and if after a hearing on the motion the court vacates the arrest because the plaintiff did not have a reasonable basis to seize the claimant's property, the court may award attorney's fees, costs, and other expenses incurred by any party as a result of the arrest.

Additionally, if the seizure was predicated upon a claim of 'exigent circumstances' under L.A.R. C(2)(b), and the court finds that exigent circumstances did not exist, the court may award attorneys' fees, costs and other expenses incurred by any party as a result of the seizure.

(8) Procedural Requirements for Entry of Default. In accordance with Fed.R.Civ.P. 55(a), a party seeking the entry of default judgment in rem must first move for entry of default and then file its motion and supporting legal memorandum.

The party seeking the entry of default must also file proof sufficient to demonstrate that due notice of the action and arrest have been given by:

(a) Service upon the master or upon the person having custody of the property; and

(b) Delivery, personally or by certified mail, return receipt requested (or international effective equivalent), to every other person, entity, including any known owner, who has not appeared or intervened in the action, and who is known to have, or claims to have, a possessory interest in the property.

The party seeking entry of default judgment under Local Rule C(8) may be excused for failing to give notice to such 'other person' upon a satisfactory showing that diligent effort was made to give notice without success; and

(c) Publication as required by Supplemental Rule (C)(4) and L.A.R. C(4). The clerk may, where appropriate, enter default in accordance with Fed.R.Civ.P. 55(a). The clerk will serve notice of the entry of default upon all parties represented in the action.

(9) Procedural Requirements for Entry of Default Judgment. Not later than thirty days after notice of the entry of default, the moving party must file a motion, and supporting legal documents, for the entry of default judgment under Fed.R.Civ.P. 55(b). The moving party may also file as exhibits to the motion such other documentation as may be required to support the entry of default judgment.

(a) When No Person Has Filed a Claim or Answer. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, the motion for default judgment will be considered by the court without oral argument.

(b) When Any Person Has Filed an Appearance, But No Claim or Answer, or Has Filed a Claim or Intervention But Has Not Answered. If any person has filed an appearance, claim or intervention in accordance with L.A.R. C(6), but does not join in the motion for entry of default judgment, the party seeking the entry of default judgment must serve notice of the motion upon the party not joining in the motion, and any opposing party will have seven days from receipt of the notice to file written opposition with the court.

A default judgment establishes a right on the part of the party or parties in whose favor it is entered and will be considered prior to any claims of the owner of the defendant property against which it is entered, as to the remnants and surpluses thereof, but does not establish the priority over, or ranking among, non-possessory lien claimants. Ranking in priority may subsequently be established on the motion of any party. (Effective December 1, 2010.)

Rule D. Possessory, petitiory and partition actions.

In possessory actions filed under Supplemental Rule (D), process should issue as provided by L.A.R. A(8), B(3)(c), and C(2)(c). Notice requirements must follow L.A.R. A(9), B(4) and C(4). Likewise, a plaintiff may demonstrate exigent circumstances under L.A.R. B(3)(b) by an affidavit setting out that the vessel or other property is in danger of being lost, taken from the jurisdiction of the court, or that other good cause exists for granting expedited proceedings.

A plaintiff who obtains a summons on the basis of exigent circumstances will also be subject to the provisions of L.A.R. C(2)(b) and C(7). (Effective December 1, 2010.)

Editor's Note — The word "petitiory" in the rule's catchline should probably be "petitory." The rule is set out above as it appears on the court's website.

Rule E. Actions in rem and quasi in rem; general provisions.

(1) Statement of Damages and Expenses Required. Every complaint filed in a Supplemental Rule (B) and (C) action must state the known amount of the debt, damages, or salvage for which the action is brought, or in the case of a Rule (D) action, the precise nature of the plaintiff's interest and the percentage of the interest claimed. In addition, the complaint should also specify the amount of any unliquidated claims, including attorney's fees and expenses, as well as the legal basis upon which the plaintiff seeks the unliquidated damages, including the right to recover attorney's fees and expenses.

(2) Advance Arrangements for Substitute Custodian. Plaintiffs are admonished to make every reasonable advance effort to secure a substitute custodian and to coordinate issues concerning the appointment of a substitute custodian with the United States Marshal, and to arrange for advance compliance with L.A.R. A(5), whenever practical, before filing any complaint which seeks the issuance of warrant for arrest or execution by the United States Marshal.

(3) Requirements and Procedures for Effecting Intervention. Whenever a vessel or other property is arrested or attached under a Supplemental Rule, and the vessel or property is in the custody of the United States Marshal or duly authorized substitute custodian, any person with a claim against the vessel or property must present the claim as provided in this rule:

(a) Intervention of Right When No Sale of the Vessel or Property is Pending, and Where Security Has Not Been Posted but the Vessel is Released. Except as limited by L.A.R. E(3)(b), any person with a claim against a vessel or property which has been arrested or attached may, as a matter of right, file an intervening complaint at any time before entry of an order scheduling the vessel or property for sale. The intervening party must also prepare and submit to the clerk a supplemental warrant for arrest or a supplemental process of attachment and garnishment.

The clerk will file the intervening complaint and issue the supplemental process. The intervening party must deliver a copy of the intervening complaint and the original of the supplemental process to the United States Marshal, who will re-arrest or re-attach the vessel or property in the name of the intervening plaintiff. If the United States Marshal has on deposit sufficient funds to maintain the previous seizure, the intervening plaintiff need not post additional funds. However, any party may subsequently move to pro-rate the costs of maintaining the seizure among all of the intervening plaintiffs, as provided in Subsection 5 of this rule.

(b) Permissive Intervention When the Vessel or Property Has Been Scheduled for Sale by the Court. Except as indicated below and subject to any other rule or order of this court, no person has an automatic right to intervene in an action once the court has ordered the sale of the vessel or property, and the sale is scheduled to occur within fifteen (15) days from the date the party moves for permission to intervene under this subsection. In such cases, the person seeking permission to intervene must:

(i) File a motion to intervene and indicate in the caption of the motion a request for expedited hearing when appropriate;

(ii) Include a copy of the proposed intervening complaint as an exhibit to the motion to intervene;

(iii) Submit a supplemental warrant for arrest or a supplemental process of attachment and garnishment;

(iv) Serve copies of the motion to intervene, with exhibits and proposed supplemental process, upon every other party to the litigation;

(v) Indicate in the motion to intervene whether the intervening party is seeking to delay the sale of the vessel and, if so, the justification for doing so; and

(vi) File a certificate of service indicating the date and manner of service of the motion and accompanying documents.

The court may permit intervention under terms which it deems equitable to the interests of all parties. If the court permits intervention it will direct the clerk to issue the supplemental process.

The clerk will enter the order, file the original intervening complaint and issue the supplemental process with a copy of the intervening complaint.

The intervening party must deliver a copy of the intervening complaint and the original of the supplemental process to the United States Marshal, who will re-arrest or re-attach the vessel or property in the name of the intervening plaintiff.

Counsel for the intervening party must also serve a copy of the intervening complaint, exhibits, and supplemental process upon every other party of record and file a Certificate of Service indicating the manner and date of service.

(4) Special Requirements for Salvage Actions. In cases of salvage, the complaint must also state to the extent known the value of the hull, cargo, freight, and other property salvaged, the amount claimed, the names of the principal salvors, and whether the suit is instituted on their behalf and on behalf of all other persons associated with them.

Plaintiff must also attach as exhibits to the complaint a list of all known salvors and persons believed entitled to share in the salvage, including any crewmembers who are not parties to the complaint, and a copy of any salvage agreement or other contract previously entered into by the plaintiff in connection with the actions that are being shown as the basis for entitlement to a salvage award.

(5) Deposit of United States Marshal's Fees and Expenses Required Before Effecting Arrest, Attachment or Garnishment.

(a) Deposit Required Before Seizure. Any party seeking the arrest of a vessel or attachment of property under Supplemental Rule (E) must deposit a sum with the United States Marshal sufficient to cover the United States Marshal's or substituted custodian's estimated fees and expenses of arresting and keeping the property for at least ten (10) days. The United States Marshal is not required to execute process until the deposit is made.

(b) Proration of United States Marshal's or Substitute Custodian's Fees and Expenses upon Intervention. When one or more parties intervene under L.A.R. E(3)(a) or (b), the burden of advancing sums to the United States Marshal or substituted custodian sufficient to cover the United States Marshal's or substituted custodian's fees and expenses will be allocated equitably between the original plaintiff and the intervening party or parties as indicated below:

(i) Stipulation for the Allocation and Payment of the United States Marshal's or Substituted Custodian's Fees and Expenses. Immediately upon the filing of an intervening complaint, counsel for the intervening plaintiff must arrange for a conference between all other parties to the action, at which time the parties must make a good faith effort to allocate fees and expenses among the parties. Any resulting stipulation must be filed with the court and a copy served upon the United States Marshal.

(ii) Allocation of Costs and Expenses in the Event that Parties Cannot Stipulate. The court expects counsel to resolve the allocation of costs and expenses in accordance with the preceding paragraph, but if an arrangement cannot be made, the parties will share in the fees and expenses of the United States Marshal or substitute custodian in proportion to their claims as stated in the original and intervening complaints.

To determine each party's proportionate share, counsel for the last intervening plaintiff must determine the total amount claimed by each party from the original or amended complaint and all other intervening complaints filed in accordance with L.A.R. E(3)(a) or (b), then deliver to the United States Marshal a list which summarizes each party's claim and the proportion which each party's claim bears to the aggregate claims asserted in the litigation, determined to the nearest one-tenth of one percent. The United States Marshal will then determine the total expenses incurred to date and estimate the expenses to be incurred during the next fourteen days. For the purpose of making this calculation, the total fees and expenses must be calculated from the date when continuous and uninterrupted arrest or attachment of the property began and not from the date a particular party's intervening complaint was filed.

The United States Marshal will then apply the percentage determined in the listing compute the amount of each intervening party's initial deposit requirements. The United States Marshal will use this percentage to compute any additional deposit requirements which may be necessary under L.A.R. E(5)(c).

After the United States Marshal determines of each party's percentage share of the deposit requirements, the intervening party must either post his deposit with the United States Marshal or substitute custodian or move to set aside that requirement. If the intervenor fails to comply with this requirement within two days, the intervenor's attachment will be vacated.

(c) Additional deposit requirements. Until the property arrested or attached and garnished has been released or otherwise disposed of in accordance with Supplemental Rule (E), the United States Marshal may require from any party who has caused the arrest or attachment and garnishment to post additional deposits which the United States Marshal determines necessary to cover any additional estimated fees or expenses.

(d) Judicial Relief from Deposit Requirements. Any party who contends that the deposit requirements of this rule impose a burden disproportionate to the aggrieved party's potential recovery in light of the relative priorities of the claims asserted against the vessel or other property may apply to the court for relief.

Although the judicial officer may adjust the deposit requirements upon motion, the proportion required of an aggrieved party may not be reduced to a percentage less than that imposed upon the claimant whose claim is the smallest among that of claims which the movant stipulates have priority over its claim or, in the absence of a stipulation, the greatest percentage imposed upon any claimant participating in the deposit requirements.

(e) Failure to Comply with Additional Deposit Requirements. Any party who fails to make the additional deposit requested by the United States Marshal may not participate further in the proceeding, except to seek relief from this rule. The United States Marshal will notify the court in writing whenever any party fails to make additional deposits as required by L.A.R. E(5)(c).

If a party questions its obligations to advance monies required by this rule, the United States Marshal may apply to the court for instructions concerning that party's obligation.

(6) Property in Possession of a United States Officer. Whenever the property to be arrested or attached is in custody of a United States officer, the United States Marshal must serve the appropriate process either upon the officer or employee or, if the officer or employee is not found within the district, then, the custodian of the property within the district.

The United States Marshal must direct the officer, employee or custodian not to relinquish custody of the property until further order of the court.

(7) Process held in abeyance.

(a) When permitted. If a plaintiff asks the clerk to hold issuance of process in abeyance under Supplemental Rule (E)(4)(b), the clerk will docket the request and will not be responsible for ensuring that process is issued at a later date.

(b) When intervention is subsequently required. It is the intention of these rules that a vessel or other property should be arrested or attached by process issued and effected in only one civil action. Therefore, if while process is held in abeyance on one action, the vessel or property is arrested or attached in another action, the plaintiff who originally requested process be held in abeyance in the first action should voluntarily dismiss, without prejudice, the first action, (insofar as that action seeks to proceed against the property arrested or attached in the second action) and promptly intervene in the second action under L.A.R. E(3)(a) or (b).

Motions to consolidate in rem actions against the same vessel or property will be granted only in exceptional circumstances to prevent undue hardship or manifest injustice.

(8) Release of Property Under Supplemental Rule (E)(6).

(a) Release by Consent or Stipulation. Release under Supplemental Rule (E)(6) must be secured by cash, cashier's check, or money order, a surety bond issued by an underwriter licensed to issue such bonds in the State of Mississippi, or a Letter of Undertaking submitted on behalf of the parties' underwriter which is approved by order of the court. The authorizing instrument must be signed by the party on whose behalf the property is detained or the party's attorney and the attorney-in-fact for a licensed surety. See Admiralty Form Nos. 9, 12, 13 and 14 forth on the courts' Websites.

The party seeking release must also submit a proposed order substantially conforming to Admiralty Form No. 16 on the courts' Websites.

Unless otherwise agreed by all parties and approved by court order, the stipulation, bond, or other security must be posted in an amount equal to, or greater than, the amount required for the following types of action:

(i) Actions Entirely for a Sum Certain. Actions for a sum certain may be secured by cash, a cashier's check or money order in the amount claimed in the complaint, with interest at six percent (6%) per annum from the date claimed to be due to a date twenty-four (24) months after the date the claim was filed, or by filing an approved stipulation or bond for the amount alleged plus interest as computed in this subsection.

The stipulation or bond must be conditioned to abide by all orders of the court, and to pay the amount of any final judgment, with interest.

(ii) Actions Other Than Possessory, Petitory or Partition. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, these actions must be secured by the amount of the appraised or agreed value of the property seized, with interest. If the parties cannot agree upon an appraised value, the court will order an appraisal.

The stipulation or bond must be conditioned to abide by all orders of the court, and to pay the amount of any final judgment, with interest.

The person who consents or stipulates to the release must also file a claim in accordance with L.A.R. E(3)(a) or (b).

(iii) Possessory, Petitory or Partition Actions. The United States Marshal may release property in these actions only upon court order and upon the subsequent deposit of security and compliance with the terms or conditions that the court deems appropriate.

(b) Upon the Dismissal or Discontinuance of an Action. If the complaint is dismissed or discontinued by court order, a plaintiff must coordinate with the United States Marshal to ensure that all costs and charges of the court and its officers have first been paid.

(c) Release After the Posting of a General Bond.

(i) Requirements of a General Bond. General Bonds under Supplemental Rule (E) (5) (b) must identify the vessel by name, nationality, dimensions, official number or registration number, hailing port and port of documentation.

(ii) Responsibility for Maintaining a Current Listing of General Bonds. The clerk will maintain a current listing of all general bonds in alphabetical order by name of the vessel. The listing will be available for inspection during normal business hours.

(iii) Execution of process. Although the subsequent arrest of a vessel for which a general bond already has been posted will be stayed under Supplemental Rule (E)(5)(b), the United States Marshal must still serve a copy of the complaint upon the master or other person in whose charge or custody the vessel is found. If neither the master nor another person in charge of custody is found aboard the vessel, the United States Marshal should make the return accordingly.

Plaintiff must promptly advise the owner or designated agent, at the address furnished in the general bond, of (1) the case number, (2) nature of the action and amount claimed; (3) the plaintiff and name and address of plaintiff's attorney; and (4) the return date for the filing of a claim of owner.

(9) Application to Modify Security for Value and Interest. At any time, any party who claims an interest in the subject matter of the action may file an application to increase or decrease the security, and any order granting the application may be enforced by attachment or as otherwise provided by law. Supplemental Rule F(7) establishes the procedure to increase the security.

(10) Custody and safekeeping.

(a) Initial Responsibility. The United States Marshal will initially take custody of any vessel, cargo or other property arrested or attached in accordance with these rules. Thereafter, and until a substitute custodian is authorized in accordance with L.A.R. E(10)(c), the United States Marshal is responsible for providing adequate and necessary security for the safekeeping of the vessel or property. In the discretion of the United States Marshal, adequate and necessary security may include the placing of keepers on or near the vessel or the appointment of a facility or person to serve as a custodian of the vessel or property. Absent exceptional circumstances, the plaintiff should have a substitute custodian appointed by the court at the time of filing the complaint as set forth in L.A.R. E(2).

(b) Limitations on the Handling, Repairing and Subsequent Movement of Vessels or Property. After the arrest or attachment of a vessel or property on a vessel, and except as provided in L.A.R. E(10)(a), no person may handle cargo, conduct repairs, or move a vessel without prior order of court. The custodian or substitute custodian must, however, comply with any orders issued by the Captain of the Port, United States Coast Guard, including an order to move the vessel, and must comply with any applicable federal, state, or local laws or regulations pertaining to vessel and port safety, but must not remove the vessel from the District and must report the vessel's movement to the court within twenty-four (24) hours of the movement.

(c) Procedures for Changing Custody Arrangements. Any party may apply to the court to dispense with keepers, remove or place the vessel, or other property seized on or about the vessel at a specified facility, designate a substitute custodian for the property, or for other similar relief. The application must substantially conform to Admiralty Form No. 17 on the courts' Websites.

(i) Notification of the United States Marshal Required. When an application for change in custody arrangements is filed, either before or after the United States Marshal has taken custody of the vessel or property, the filing party must serve notice of the application on the United States Marshal in sufficient time to permit the United States Marshal to review the indemnification and insurance arrangements proposed by the applicant and substitute custodian. The application must also be served upon all other parties to the litigation.

(ii) Indemnification requirements. An application for the appointment of a substitute custodian or facility must include as an exhibit to the motion, a consent and indemnification agreement signed by both the applicant or the applicant's attorney and the proposed substitute custodian. The application must substantially conform to Admiralty Form No. 17 on the courts' Websites.

The consent and indemnification agreement must expressly release the United States Marshal from any and all liability and responsibility for the care and custody of the property while in the hands of the substitute custodian and must expressly hold the United States Marshal harmless from all claims arising from the substitute custodianship. See Admiralty Form No. 18 on the courts' Websites.

(iii) Court Approval Required. The application to change custody arrangements and indemnification and consent agreement must be submitted to a judicial officer who will determine whether the facility or substitute custodian is capable of safely keeping the seized property. The proposed order granting the application should substantially conform to Admiralty Form No. 19 on the courts' Websites.

(d) Insurance requirements. At the time of the arrest or attachment of a vessel or property, the United States Marshal will obtain insurance to protect itself and its custodians from liability arising from the arrest, attachment or custody. The cost of the insurance will be paid by the plaintiff from the funds posted with the Marshal before the seizure, until otherwise taxed as cost. The insurance may be discontinued upon court approval of a consent custodian under L.A.R. A(5).

(11) Preservation, Humanitarian and Repatriation Expenses.

(a) Limitations on Reimbursement for Services or Supplies Provided to a Vessel or Property in Custody. Except in cases of emergency or undue hardship, no person may claim as an expense of administration the costs of services or supplies furnished to a vessel, seized property unless the services or supplies have been furnished to the United States Marshal or substitute custodian upon order of this court or of the United States Marshal

Any order issued under this subsection should require the person furnishing the services or supplies to file a weekly invoice.

(b) Preservation Expenses for the Vessel or Property under Seizure. The United States Marshal or substitute custodian is authorized to incur expenses reasonably deemed necessary to prevent loss or undue deterioration of the vessel, or other property while in custody.

(c) Expenses for Care and Maintenance of a Crew. Except in an emergency or upon the authorization of a judicial officer, neither the United States Marshal nor substitute custodian may incur expenses for feeding or otherwise maintaining the crew.

Emergency applications for providing food, water and necessary medical services for the maintenance of the crew may be submitted and decided ex parte. Thereafter, any party may bring a motion to challenge or modify the court's order, and, unless otherwise provided, the expenses will be taxed as a cost of administration and not as an expense of custody

(d) Repatriation Expenses. Absent an order of court expressly ordering the repatriation of the crew or passengers and directing that the expenses be taxed as a cost of administration, no person will be entitled to claim these expenses as expenses of administration.

(e) Claim by a Supplier for Payment of Charges. Any person who claims payment for furnishing services or supplies in compliance with L.A.R. E(11) must submit an invoice to the United States Marshal's office for review and approval before the vessel is released.

The United States Marshal will review the claim, make adjustments or recommendations to the claim as are appropriate and forward the claim to the court for approval. The court may postpone the hearing on an individual claim until a hearing can be set to consolidate other claims against the property.

(12) Property in Incidental Custody and Otherwise not Subject to the Arrest or Attachment.

(a) Authority to Preserve Cargo in Incidental Custody. The United States Marshal or an authorized substitute custodian is responsible for securing, maintaining and preserving all property incidentally taken into custody as a result of the arrest or attachment of a vessel or property. Incidental property may include but is not limited to laden cargo not itself the subject of the arrest or attachment.

The United States Marshal or substitute custodian must maintain a separate account of all costs and expenses associated with the care and maintenance of property incidentally taken into custody.

Any person claiming entitlement to possession of property incidentally taken into custody must, as a precondition of receiving possession, reimburse the United States Marshal or substitute custodian for such separately accounted expenses, reserving a right to seek payment of said expenses from any other party.

(b) Separation, Storage and United States Preservation of Property in Incidental Custody. Any party, the United States Marshal, or substitute custodian may petition the court to permit the separation and storage of property in incidental custody from the property actually arrested or attached.

If the court orders separation of the incidentally seized property to protect it from undue deterioration, to provide for safer storage, to meet an emergency, to reduce the expenses of custody or to facilitate a sale of the vessel or other property under L.A.R. E(17), the costs of that separation will be treated as an expense of preservation and taxed as a cost of custody.

(c) Disposal of Unclaimed Property. Property incidentally in custody and not subsequently claimed by any person entitled to possession will be disposed of in accordance with the laws governing the disposition of property abandoned to the United States of America.

Except when prohibited by federal statute, the resulting net proceeds associated with the disposition of abandoned property will be applied to offset the expense of administration with the remainder escheating to the United States of America as provided by law.

(13) Dismissal.

(a) By consent. An action may not be dismissed under Fed.R.Civ.P. 41(a) unless all costs and expenses of the court and its officials have been paid. In the case of multiple plaintiffs or an intervening plaintiff(s), the plaintiff or intervening plaintiff may not dismiss its claims unless it has paid its proportionate share of costs and expenses in accordance with L.A.R. E(8).

(b) Involuntary dismissal. An order of dismissal under Fed.R.Civ.P.41(b) should also designate the costs and expenses to be paid by the party or parties so dismissed.

(14) Judgments.

(a) Expenses of Sureties as Costs. If costs are awarded to any party, then all reasonable insurance premiums or expenses previously paid by the prevailing party on bonds, stipulations or other security may be taxed as costs in the case.

(b) Costs of arrest or attachment. If costs are awarded to any party, then all reasonable expenses paid by the prevailing party incidental to or arising from the arrest or attachment of any vessel, property or cargo may be taxed as costs in the case.

(15) Stay of final order.

(a) Automatic stay for fourteen days. In accordance with Fed.R.Civ.P. 62(a), a party may not execute upon a judgment, and seized property may not be released until fourteen days after the entry of the judgment or order of dismissal.

(b) Stays beyond the 14-day period. If within the 14-day period established by Fed.R.Civ.P. 62(a) a party files either a motion contemplated in Fed.R.Civ.P. 62(b) or a notice of appeal, then unless otherwise ordered by the court, the stay will be extended for a period not to exceed thirty days from the date of the filing of the motion or notice of appeal to permit the court to consider an application for the establishment of a supersedeas bond, and when this bond must be filed with the court.

(16) Notice of sale.

(a) Publication of notice. In an action in rem or quasi in rem, and except in suits filed on behalf of the United States of America where notice is prescribed by statute, the United States Marshal must publish notice in any of the newspapers approved under L.A.R. Rule A(9).

(b) Duration of publication. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, applicable Supplemental Rule, or Local Admiralty Rule, publication of the notice of sale must be made at least twice; the first publication must be at least one (1) calendar week before the date of the sale, and the second at least three calendar days before the date of the sale.

(17) Sale of a vessel or property.

(a) Payment of the purchase price. Unless otherwise provided in the order of sale, the person whose bid is accepted must pay the United States Marshal the purchase price in the manner provided below:

(i) If the Bid is Not More Than $500.00. The successful bidder must immediately pay the full purchase price.

(ii) If the Bid is More than $500.00. The bidder must immediately deposit with the United States Marshal $500.00, or 10% of the bid, whichever sum is greater, and must pay the remaining purchase price within three days.

If an objection to the sale is filed within the time permitted by L.A.R. Rule E(17)(g), the successful bidder need not pay the remaining purchase price until three days after the court confirms the sale.

(b) Method of payment. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, payments to the United States Marshal must be made in cash, certified check or cashier's check.

(c) Custodial Costs Pending Payment. When a successful bidder fails to pay the balance of the bid within the time allowed by L.A.R. E(17)(a)(2) or within the time permitted by court order, the United States Marshal will charge the successful bidder for the cost of keeping the property from the date payment of the balance was due to the date the bidder takes delivery of the property.

The United States Marshal may refuse to release the property until these additional charges have been paid.

(d) Default for Failure to Pay the Balance. A person who fails to pay the balance of the bid within the time allowed will be deemed to be in default, and a judicial officer may then either order that the sale be awarded to the second highest bidder or may order a new sale, as appropriate.

Any sum deposited by the bidder in default will be forfeited and applied by the United States Marshal to any additional costs incurred because of the forfeiture and default, including costs incident to resale. The balance of the deposit, if any, will be retained in the registry and subject to further order of the court.

(e) United States Marshal's Report of Sale. At the conclusion of the sale, the United States Marshal must file a written report of the sale to include the date of the sale, the price obtained, and the name and address of the buyer.

(f) Confirmation of sale. Unless an objection is timely filed in accordance with this rule, or the bidder is in default for failing to pay the balance of the purchase price, plaintiff must have the sale confirmed on the day following the last day for filing objections.

To confirm the sale, plaintiff's counsel must file a "Request for Confirmation of Sale" on the day following the last day for filing an objection. The "Request for Confirmation of Sale" must substantially conform to Admiralty Form No. 20 on the courts' Websites. Plaintiff's counsel must also prepare and offer for filing a "Confirmation of the Sale." The "Confirmation of the Sale" must substantially conform to Admiralty Form No. 21 on the courts' Websites. The clerk will file and docket the confirmation and promptly transmit a certified copy of the "Confirmation of Sale" to the United States Marshal's office.

Unless otherwise ordered by the court, if the plaintiff fails timely to file the "Request for Confirmation of Sale" and proposed "Confirmation of Sale," the United States Marshal will assess any continuing costs or expenses for custody of the vessel or property against the plaintiff.

(g) Objections to confirmation.

(i) Time for filing objections. Unless otherwise permitted by the court, an objection must be filed within seven days following the sale. The person who objects must serve a copy of the objection upon the United States Marshal and all other parties to the action, along with a Certificate of Service indicating the date and manner of service. Opposition to the objection must be filed within seven days after receipt of the objection to the sale.

The court will consider the objection and any opposition to the objection and confirm the sale, order a new sale, or grant other relief as appropriate.

(ii) Deposition of Preservation or Maintenance Costs. Any person who objects to the sale must also deposit with the United States Marshal the cost of keeping the property for at least seven days. Proof of the deposit with the United States Marshal's office must be delivered to the clerk's office for filing. The court will not consider the objection without proof of this deposit.

If the objection is sustained, the objector will be reimbursed for the expense of keeping the property from the proceeds of any subsequent sale, and any remaining deposit will be returned to the objector upon court order.

If the objection is denied, the sum deposited by the objector will be applied to pay the fees and expenses incurred by the United States Marshal in keeping the property from the date the objection was filed until the sale is confirmed. Any remaining deposit will be returned to the objector upon court order.

(h) Confirmation of Title. Any claim of failure of a party to give the required notice of an action to arrest of a vessel, or other property or, or failure to give required notice of a sale may afford grounds for objecting to the sale, but does not affect the title of a good faith purchaser.

(18) Post-sale Claim. Except for seamen's wages, unless otherwise ordered by the court, any claims filed after the date of the sale will be limited to the remnants and surplus, if any, arising from the sale, will not be admitted on behalf of lienors who file their claims after the sale. (Effective December 1, 2010.)

Rule F. Actions to Limit Liability.

(1) Security. Upon filing a complaint, the plaintiff must deposit with the court a sum equal to the amount or value of the plaintiff's interest in the vessel and pending freight, if any (see Admiralty Form No. 22 on the court's website), or approved security for that amount such as a Letter of Undertaking or an Ad Interim Stipulation for Value which substantially conforms to Admiralty Form No. 23 on the courts' Websites.

(2) Submission of proposed order and enjoining of suits. After the plaintiff complies with Supplemental Rule F(1), plaintiff may move for an injunction against further prosecution of all claims against the plaintiff or the plaintiff's property. The plaintiff must submit with the motion a proposed order that substantially conforms to Admiralty Form No. 24 on the courts' Websites.

(3) Publication of the Notice. After entry of an Order Approving Ad Interim Stipulation for and Enjoining Suits, plaintiff must ask the clerk to issue the notice contemplated by Supplemental Rule (F)(4), to be published as required by that Rule. Plaintiff must use diligence to make publication in a manner reasonably calculated to give notice to all known or reasonably anticipated claimants. (See Admiralty Form No. 25 on the courts' Websites.)

(4) Proof of publication. Plaintiff may make proof of publication by filing a sworn statement by or on behalf of the publisher or editor indicating the dates of publication, along with a copy of the actual publication. (Effective December 1, 2010.)

Rule G. Forfeiture actions in rem.

(1) Scope. This rule applies to all civil forfeiture in rem actions arising from a federal statute. To the extent that this rule does not address an issue, Local Admiralty Rules C and E apply. If neither this rule nor L.A.R. C or E address an issue, then Supplemental Rule G applies.

(2) Verification of the complaint. A complaint filed in any civil forfeiture action in rem action arising from a federal statute must be verified by affirmation of a person having knowledge, firsthand or otherwise, of the facts alleged in the complaint.

(3) Forfeiture of real property.

(a) If the defendant in an in rem civil forfeiture action is real property, the government must proceed in accordance with 18 U.S.C. § 985.

(b) After a complaint is filed, and on the request of the government, a judicial officer will issue a writ of entry to allow inspection and inventory of the property.

(c) If the court issues a seizure warrant for real property before the entry of an order of forfeiture under 18 U.S.C. § 985(d)(1)(B)(ii), it will conduct a prompt post-seizure hearing during which the property owner may contest the basis for the seizure.

(4) Forfeiture of other property. Arrest warrant in rem.

(a) If property other than real property is already in the possession, custody, or control of the government when the complaint for forfeiture is filed, the clerk of the court will issue a warrant to arrest the property.

(b) If property other than real property is not already in the possession, custody, or control of the government, upon a finding of probable cause by a judicial officer, the court will issue a warrant to arrest the property.

(c) A warrant is not necessary if the property is already subject to a judicial restraining order.

(5) Notice.

(a) Generally. The plaintiff must provide notice of any civil forfeiture action in rem in accordance with Supplemental Rule G(4). The government may publish notice on an official government forfeiture website for at least thirty consecutive days.

(b) Known potential claimants. The government must send notice of the action and a copy of the complaint to any person who reasonably appears to be a potential claimant.

(c) Property valued at less than $1,000.00. Publication is not required as long as direct notice is sent to all known potential claimants under Supplemental Rule G(4)(b).

(6) Responsive pleadings.

(a) Strict compliance required. All claims and answers must be filed within the filing deadlines established by Supplemental Rule G(5), unless the court, for good cause, grants an extension of time to file a claim or answer before the expiration of those deadlines.

(b) Excuse. Failure to file a timely claim or answer will not prevent a claimant from petitioning the court to excuse the failure to strictly comply with Supplemental Rule G(5).

(c) Claim form. A claim form should substantially conform to Admiralty Form 27 on the courts' Websites.

(7) Special interrogatories. The number of Special Interrogatories propounded under Rule G(6) will not count toward the limits imposed on interrogatories under Fed.R.Civ.P. 33 or L.U.Civ.R. 26.

(8) Default; Default judgment.

(a) Entry of default. The government may, under Fed. R. Civ. P. 55(a), seek the entry of a default against any person or entity that has failed to plead or otherwise defend against any civil forfeiture action in rem commenced by the government. Any request for entry of a default must be accompanied by proof of publication of notice and proof of all direct notices sent to known potential claimants.

(b) Default judgment; complete or partial. Not later than thirty days after entry of default, the government must file a motion for entry of a default judgment. The government may request entry of either a complete default judgment or a default judgment against all persons or entities that have failed to file a timely claim and answer within the time stated in any direct or published notice.

(9) Taxation of costs. Costs awarded to a claimant are limited to those costs authorized by 28 U.S.C. § 2465. (Effective December 1, 2010.)

COMMENT

This rule is amended to take account of the enactment of the National Guard and Reservists Debt Relief Act of 2008, which amended § 707(b)(2)(D) of the Code to provide a temporary exclusion from the application of the means test for certain members of the National Guard and reserve components of the Armed Forces. This exclusion applies to qualifying debtors while they remain on active duty or are performing a homeland defense activity, and for a period of 540 days thereafter. For some debtors initially covered by the exclusion, the protection from means testing will expire while their chapter 7 cases are pending, and at a point when a timely motion to dismiss under § 707(b)(2) can still be filed. Under the amended rule, these debtors are required to file the statement and calculations required by subdivision (b)(4) no later than 14 days after the expiration of their exclusion.

Subdivisions (b)(4) and (c) are amended to relieve debtors qualifying for an exclusion under § 707(b)(2)(D)(ii) from the obligation to file a statement of current monthly income and required calculations within the time period specified in subdivision (c).

Subdivision (n)(1) is added to specify the time for filing of the information required by subdivision (b)(4) by a debtor who initially qualifies for the means test exclusion under § 707(b)(2)(D)(ii), but whose exclusion expires during the time that a motion to dismiss under §707(b)(2) may still be made under Rule 1017(e). If, upon the expiration of the temporary exclusion, a debtor has not already filed the required statement and calculations, subdivision (n)(2) directs the clerk to provide prompt notice to the debtor of the time for filing as set forth in subdivision (n)(1).

PART I COMMENCEMENT OF CASE: PROCEEDINGS RELATING TO PETITION AND ORDER FOR RELIEF

Rule 1001-1. Scope of Rules and Forms; Short Title.

(a) These rules ("Local Rules") shall be known as the "Uniform Local Rules of the United States Bankruptcy Courts for the Northern and Southern Districts of Mississippi." The Local Rules may be cited as "Miss. Bankr. L.R. ——."

(b) These Local Rules govern proceedings in the United States Bankruptcy Courts for the Northern and Southern Districts of Mississippi in accordance with section 105(a) of the Bankruptcy Code [1] and Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 9029. The application of these Local Rules may be modified by the court in any given case or proceeding in the interest of justice.

(c) These Local Rules, as originally adopted with an Effective Date of February 1, 2010, along with amendments approved by Order entered December 15, 2011, shall be effective as of January 1, 2012.

(d) All prior local rules and all standing orders or general orders issued prior to the Effective Date by the United States Bankruptcy Courts for the Northern and Southern Districts of Mississippi shall be repealed. The repeal of any prior rule or order shall not affect any act done pursuant to or obviate any act required by any prior local rule or order. These Local Rules govern all cases filed on and after the Effective Date. They shall also apply to cases and proceedings pending on the Effective Date, except to the extent that the court finds they would not be feasible or would work an injustice.

(e) Nothing in these Local Rules precludes the bankruptcy courts from entering general standing orders or guidelines to supplement these Rules.

(f) The bankruptcy courts, by Standing Orders, may adopt Mississippi Local Rules Forms for stated purposes. Ordinarily, these Local Forms shall be used in their given format with only such minor alterations as necessary to accommodate other word processing and printing equipment.

(g) All attorneys practicing before the bankruptcy courts for the Northern and Southern Districts of Mississippi shall acquaint themselves with these Local Rules. Attorneys shall be subject to appropriate sanctions for failure to comply with these Local Rules, and nothing contained herein shall limit the authority of the bankruptcy courts to impose appropriate sanctions for failure to comply with these Local Rules, Bankruptcy Code, the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure or other applicable law. (Amended effective January 1, 2012.)

Rule 1002-1. Commencement of Case.

(a) Petition.

(1) All petitions shall be filed in accordance with Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 5005 and Miss. Bankr. L.R. 5005-1.

(2) Any Petitioner other than an unrepresented individual shall be represented by counsel.

Rule 1009-1. Amendments of Voluntary Petitions, Lists, Schedules and Statements.

(a) General right to amend.

(1) If at any time after the clerk [2] issues notice of the meeting of creditors under section 341 in a case under any chapter under title 11, the debtor amends Schedule D, E or F and/or the creditor matrix to add any creditors, the following procedures shall apply:

---

1 Unless otherwise noted, all references to the "Bankruptcy Code" or to "section ____" shall be references to Title 11 of the United States Code.

2 "Clerk" means the United States Bankruptcy Clerk for the appropriate district.

(A) The debtor shall pay the prescribed filing fee;

(B) The debtor shall serve upon such additional creditors by first class mail:

(i) A copy of the first notice of meeting of creditors under section 341 with the debtor's full social security account number shown thereon;

(ii) A notice informing the creditors that they have 60 days within which to file a complaint objecting to discharge under section 727 or section 1141 or to the dischargeability of any debt under section 523(c); to file a motion objecting to discharge under section 727 or section 1328; or to file a motion to seek an extension of time for filing a complaint or motion objecting to discharge, unless a longer period of time is provided by Fed. R. Bankr. P. 4004, 4007 or 9006;

(iii) A notice informing the creditors that they have 21 days to request the United States Trustee [3] to schedule an adjourned section 341 meeting of creditors; and

(iv) Notice of Additional Time to File Proof of Claim.

(a) In a case filed under Chapter 7, 12 or 13, the debtor shall serve upon such additional creditors by first class mail a notice informing the creditors of the creditor's right to file a proof of claim within 90 days from the date of the notice.

(b) In a case filed under Chapter 11, if the debtor or trustee in a chapter 11 case amends the debtor's schedules to change the amount, nature, classification, or characterization of a debt owing to a creditor after a bar date for the filing of proofs of claim has been set, the debtor or trustee shall serve notice of the amendment to the creditor within 14 days of its filing and shall serve notice of the creditor's right to file a proof of claim by the bar date or 30 days from the date of the notice, whichever is later. The debtor or trustee shall file a certificate of service of the notice with the clerk.

(C) The debtor shall file a certificate of service with the clerk and provide an amended creditor matrix to the clerk in such format as the clerk's office may direct. (Amended effective January 1, 2012.)

Rule 1015-1. Consolidation or Joint Administration of Cases Pending in the Same Court.

(b) Cases involving two or more related debtors. A party in interest may file a motion seeking an order of joint administration after notice and opportunity for hearing, upon the filing of a motion for joint administration pursuant to Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 1015, supported by an affidavit, declaration or verification, which establishes that the joint administration of two or more cases pending in the court under title 11 is warranted and will ease the administrative burden for the court and the parties. An order of joint administration entered in accordance with this local rule may be reconsidered upon motion of any party in interest at any time. An order of joint administration under this local rule is for procedural purposes only and shall not cause a substantive consolidation of the respective debtors' estates.

3 "United States Trustee" means the appropriate person within the Office of the United States Trustee.

PART II OFFICERS AND ADMINSTRATION; NOTICES; MEETINGS; EXAMINATIONS; ELECTIONS; ATTORNEYS AND ACCOUNTANTS

Rule 2002-1. Notices to Creditors, Equity Security Holders, United States, and United States Trustee.

(j) Notices to the United States. In the event that the United States of America or any agency thereof is listed as a creditor, the debtor or debtor in possession, shall include on the master mailing list or matrix the name of the agency in care of the United States Attorney for the district in which the case is filed and also the name of the agency at its local field office address. This rule supplements, and in no way modifies, the notice requirements of Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 2002(j).

(m) Orders designating matter of notices. Whenever a party requests the court to limit the number of persons or entities to whom notice is given for any particular matter, the following categories of persons or entities (without prohibiting noticing to other persons or entities) must be included in any such limited notice:

(1) All persons or entities constituting the creditors' committee or the equity security holders' committee, if any, in a chapter 11 case, or if there is no creditors' committee, all entities constituting the 20 largest unsecured creditors;

(2) All persons or entities noted on the docket (or otherwise reasonably ascertainable) as having entered their respective appearances by filing documents declaring their respective entries of appearance and/or requesting further noticing; provided however, the elimination of any such entities on account of their having been terminated as interested parties or otherwise having concluded their interest shall be left to the noticing entity, subject to due process considerations;

(3) All necessary or appropriate taxing authorities;

(4) The United States Trustee;.

(5) The United States Attorney for the district in which the case is pending, if applicable;

(6) All attorneys identified on the docket (or otherwise reasonably ascertainable) as having participated in the case except any attorney or attorneys who shall have been permitted by the court to withdraw from representation or who, in the discretion of the noticing entity, shall no longer be a necessary notice subject to due process considerations; and

(7) The case trustee, if a trustee has been appointed.

Rule 2003-1. Meeting of Creditors or Equity Security Holders.

(a) Date and place.

(1) Appearance. The appearance of the debtor and the debtor's attorney at the section 341(a) meeting is mandatory, unless waived as set forth in subsection (3) below. Failure of the debtor and the debtor's attorney to attend this meeting may result in the dismissal of the bankruptcy case sua sponte without further notice to any party and without a hearing, upon receipt by the court of a certification from the case trustee or the Office of the United States Trustee stating that the debtor did not appear or that the debtor did not make written request for the meeting to be rescheduled as provided by subsection (2) below. Failure to appear may also result in the imposition of sanctions (including the assessment of the expenses and attorney's fees of creditors attending the meeting as noticed), but such sanctions shall be granted by the court only after notice and a hearing.

(2) Rescheduling section 341 meeting. Rescheduling of the section 341 meeting shall be for good cause shown. Any request made prior to the scheduled section 341(a) meeting to reschedule the section 341(a) meeting shall be submitted to the United States Trustee (or, to the case trustee if such authority has been delegated by the United States Trustee) in Chapter 7, 12, or 13 cases and to the United States Trustee in all other cases, and such request shall be made at least seven (7) days prior to the scheduled section 341 meeting, except in emergency or extraordinary circumstances. If this request is denied by the case trustee or United States Trustee (as appropriate), a motion to reschedule the section 341 meeting may be made to the court. In the event the section 341 meeting is rescheduled, the requesting party shall be responsible for notifying all creditors of the date of the rescheduled section 341(a) meeting, and failure to so notify creditors may result in the imposition of appropriate sanctions.

(3) Waiver of appearance. Upon written motion, the court, after notice and hearing, for cause shown, may waive the appearance of the debtor at the section 341(a) meeting of creditors. Waivers may be granted where a debtor is physically unable to appear at the original or rescheduled section 341(a) meeting of creditors or is unable to appear because of a mental incapacity. A motion to waive appearance shall be filed at least seven (7) days prior to the initial meeting of creditors or any rescheduled meeting of creditors and served on the interim trustee or the case trustee, as appropriate, the United States Trustee and all creditors.

(4) Notice of possible dismissal for failure of debtor to appear. The clerk, or another party designated by the court, shall issue a notice of possible dismissal as part of the notice scheduling the initial meeting of creditors for each case. (Amended effective January 1, 2012.)

Rule 2004-1. Examination.

(a) Examination on motion.

(1) Good faith duty to confer. Counsel for the parties and any unrepresented individuals shall have a duty to make a good faith effort to resolve by agreement, among themselves, any disputes with regard to an examination and production of documents under Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 2004, including its scheduling, its scope, its length and the production of documents. Any objection to an order for a Rule 2004 examination, a motion to enforce compliance with such an order or with a subpoena under Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 9016 or a motion seeking to modify, limit or quash such an order shall be accompanied by a statement certifying that counsel for the moving or objecting party or the unrepresented individual have conferred or made a good faith effort to confer in an attempt to resolve the controversy by agreement, but that such efforts were not successful.

(2) Examination by notice. Examination and production of documents pursuant to Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 2004 may be initiated by notice, if the entity to be examined consents. The notice shall specify the scope of the examination and the date, time and place of the examination; describe any documents to be produced; and shall be served upon the debtor, the debtor's attorney, the chapter 7, 11, 12 or 13 trustee as appropriate, the United States Trustee, and the entity to be examined. The notice must be filed and served no later than 14 days before the date set for the examination.

Rule 2015-1. Duty to Keep Records, Make Reports, and Give Notice of Case.

(b) Chapter 12 trustee and debtor in possession. In a Chapter 12 case, the debtor in possession or the trustee shall file a Monthly Operating Report in the form prescribed by the United States Trustee. The Monthly Operating Report shall be filed on or before the 20th day of each month following the month the subject of the report until a plan is confirmed, or the case is converted or dismissed. A signed copy of the Monthly Operating Report shall be furnished to the United States Trustee.

Rule 2016-1. Compensation for Services Rendered and Reimbursement of Expenses.

(b) Disclosure of compensation paid or promised to attorney for debtor. If the statement required under Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 2016(b) is not timely filed, the case shall be subject to dismissal. At the meeting of creditors required by section 341, the officer conducting the meeting shall review the statement of disclosure of compensation to verify that it complies with Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 2016(b). If the statement fails to comply with the rule, the presiding officer may promptly file a motion to show cause why the case should not be dismissed.

(d) Compensation of Chapter 13 debtor's attorneys.

(1) In chapter 13 cases filed after the Effective Date of these rules, the court, by separate standing order, which may be amended from time to time, may set a cap on the amount of fees that generally will be approved ex parte without the need for notice and a hearing.

(2) The fee approved by the court will be on the basis that the scope of representation by the attorney includes both pre-confirmation and post-confirmation representation of the debtor, except for representation in any adversary proceeding. Once an attorney sets a fee and files a petition for the debtor, the attorney is expected to represent the debtor conscientiously on all matters within the scope of the representation until the debtor is granted or denied a discharge or the case is dismissed. No additional fee shall be sought from the debtor or accepted by the attorney without prior court approval.

(3) In larger business cases or in cases involving an inordinate amount of time or representation in an adversary proceeding, the court will consider a request for attorney's fees in excess of the previously approved amount.

PART III CLAIMS AND DISTRIBUTION TO CREDITORS AND EQUITY INTEREST HOLDERS; PLANS

Rule 3001-1. Proof of Claim.

(a) Form and content. A creditor asserting a secured claim shall submit, as an attachment, proof that the asserted security interest has been perfected in accordance with applicable law.

(e) Transferred claim.

(2) Transfer of claim other than for security after proof filed. Any assignment or other evidence of a transfer of claim filed after the proof of claim has been filed shall include the claim number of the claim to be transferred. In chapter 11 cases, any assignment or other evidence of a transfer of a claim filed where no proof of claim has been filed shall include reference to the scheduled claim, including the classification and amount.

(6) Note not required. Where evidence of full or partial transfer of a claim is filed which contains the signatures of both the transferor and transferee and such evidence of transfer is filed pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 3001(e)(4) and in accordance with the Local Rules, the clerk shall not provide notice of the filing of evidence of the transfer and no objection deadline for the transfer of the claim shall be established. The transferor shall be deemed to have waived any objection to the transfer, and the claim shall be noted as having been transferred in the records of the court.

(7) Order not required. Where notice is required, absent any timely filed objection to the notice of transfer served by the clerk, the claim, without any further order of the court, shall be noted as having been transferred in the records of the court.

Rule 3002-1. Filing Proof of Claim or Interest.

(c) Time for filing. As provided in Miss. Bankr. L.R. 1009-1(a)(1)(B)(iv)(a), in a case filed under Chapter 7, 12 or 13, where the debtor amends Schedule D, E or F and/or the creditor matrix to add any creditors, the debtor shall serve upon such additional creditors by first class mail a notice informing the creditors of the creditor's right to file a proof of claim within 90 days from the date of the notice.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Motion to close granted.

Where the chapter 11 debtor sought an early discharge and entry of a final decree pursuant to 11 U.S.C.S. § 1141(d)(5)(A) and (B), he was denied that relief where his payments under the plan did not match at least liquidation value, but he was entitled to closure without a discharge under 11 U.S.C.S. § 350(a), Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3022, and Bankr. N.D. & S.D. Miss. R. 3022-1, subject to a later reopening to grant a discharge. In re Necaise, 443 B.R. 483 (Bankr. S.D. Miss. 2010).

Rule 3003-1. Filing of Claim or Equity Security Interest in Chapter 9 Municipality or Chapter 11 Reorganization Cases.

(c) Filing proof of claim.

(3) Time for filing.

(i) Unless otherwise ordered by the court, all persons and entities that assert a claim, as defined in section 101(5) against the debtor which arose on or prior to the filing of the Chapter 11 petition shall file a proof of such claim on or before the date that is 120 days after the date of the order for relief, except that proofs of claim filed by governmental units must be filed on or before the date that is 180 days after the date of the order for relief.

(ii) As provided in Rule 1009-1(a)(1)(B)(iv)(b), in a case filed under Chapter 11, if the debtor or trustee in a chapter 11 case amends the debtor's schedules to change the amount, nature, classification, or characterization of a debt owing to a creditor after a bar date has been set, the debtor or trustee shall serve notice of the amendment to the creditor within 14 days of its filing and shall serve notice of the creditor's right to file a proof of claim by the bar date or 30 days from the date of the notice, whichever is later.

Rule 3007-1. Objections to Claims.

(a) Objections to Claims.

(1) Minimum information for objection to claims; requirements. An objection to a claim shall include, at a minimum, the following information:

(A) the name of claimant;

(B) the claim number as indicated on the claims docket maintained by the clerk;

(C) the claim amount;

(D) the basis for the objection; and

(E) the amount of the claim, if any, to which there is no objection.

(2) Notice; hearing.

Objections to claims are contested matters and may be considered after notice and a hearing as provided by Miss. Bankr. L.R. 9013-1 (d). A copy of the objection with notice of the hearing thereon shall be mailed or otherwise delivered to the claimant, the debtor or debtor in possession and the trustee at least 30 days prior to the hearing as required by Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 3007. If a timely response to a claims objection is filed, a hearing on the claims objection will be conducted in accordance with Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 3007.

Rule 3015-1. Filing, Objection to Confirmation, and Modification of a Plan in a Chapter 12 Family Farmer's Debt Adjustment or a Chapter 13 Individual's Debt Adjustment Case.

(g) Modification of plan after confirmation. If a debtor in a chapter 12 or a chapter 13 case files a request to modify a confirmed plan pursuant to sections 1229 or 1329 based in whole or in part upon a change in the amount of the debtor's income or expenses, the debtor shall file amended Schedules I and J evidencing such change in financial circumstances contemporaneously with the Notice of Modification.

Rule 3022-1. Final Decree in Chapter 11 Reorganization Case.

(a) Closing of chapter 11 cases.

(1) Motion. Upon written motion, a party in interest may seek the entry of a final decree to close a chapter 11 case at any time after the confirmed plan has been entered provided that all required fees due under 28 U.S.C. §1930 have been paid. Such motion shall include a proposed final order closing the lead case and any jointly administered cases and shall identify the case name and the case number of all cases to be closed under the order.

(2) Service. A motion for the entry of a final order closing the Chapter 11 case shall be served upon the debtor, the trustee, if any, the United States Trustee, all official committees and all creditors who have filed a request for notice under Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rules 2002 and 9010.

(4) Final Report. The debtor (or trustee, if any) shall file a final report and account in the form prescribed by the United States Trustee on or before fourteen (14) days prior to the hearing on any motion to close the case.

PART IV THE DEBTOR: DUTIES AND BENEFITS

Rule 4001-1. Relief from Automatic Stay; Prohibiting or Conditioning the Use, Sale, or Lease of Property; Use of Cash Collateral; Obtaining Credit; Agreements.

(a) Relief from stay; prohibiting or conditioning the use, sale, or lease of property.

(1) Motion.

(A) Service. A motion pursuant to section 362(d) and Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 4001(1) seeking relief from the automatic stay shall be served in the manner provided for by Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rules 9014 and 7004. Additionally, unless otherwise ordered by the court, such motion shall be served on any entity having a known lien on the subject property (excluding ad valorem taxing authorities) or that will be affected by the relief requested in the motion; on the United States Trustee; on the case trustee; on any chapter 11 creditors' committee (or its agent); on the creditors listed pursuant to Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 1007 (only in the absence of duly appointed creditors' committees); and on any person or entity who has filed a request for the receipt of all notices in the case or proceeding and who has served such requests on the trustee or debtor in possession.

(B) Supporting documentation. When a motion seeking relief from the automatic stay is filed, the moving party shall include in the motion and/or attach to the motion the following:

(i) A description of the subject property;

(ii) A complete and legible copy of movant's security agreements and security instruments which establish a valid lien encumbering the subject property;

(iii) The value of the subject property and the basis of the valuation; and,

(iv) The amount of the outstanding indebtedness secured by each lien encumbering the subject property as reflected by the schedules of the debtor(s) or such other amount as may be known by the movant.

(C) Initial 4001-1 conference. The attorneys for movant or any objecting parties shall confer with respect to the issues raised by the motion in advance of the hearing for the purpose of determining whether a consensual order may be entered and/or for the purpose of stipulating to relevant facts, such as the value of the property and the extent and validity of any security instrument.

(D) Agreed order.

(i) If the moving creditor, the debtor(s) and the trustee agree as to the relief to be granted and if relief from the automatic stay as well as abandonment is not contested, an agreed order signed by the debtor(s) or the attorney for the debtor(s), the trustee and the moving creditor shall be submitted to the court for consideration no later than 14 days after the date scheduled for hearing on the subject motion. Parties to whom the order or judgment has been submitted shall promptly sign it or promptly contact the party who drafted it to express any objection to the form of the proposed order or judgment. The parties shall attempt to resolve any differences in the form of the order or judgment before submitting competing orders or judgments to the court.

(ii) As provided by Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 4001(d)(4), the court may direct that the procedures prescribed by Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 4001(d)(1)-(3) shall not apply and the agreement may be approved without further notice if the court determines that a motion made pursuant to Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 4001(a)-(c) was sufficient to afford reasonable notice of the material provisions of the agreement and an opportunity for a hearing; otherwise, notice of the proposed agreed order shall be given to the appropriate creditors and parties in interest.

(E) Order Affecting Real Property. Any Order affecting real property shall either incorporate the legal description of the real property in the body of the order itself, or attach a legal description of the real property as an exhibit to the order.

(e) Procedure Regarding Motion to Extend the Automatic Stay Pursuant to Section 362(c)(3)(B).

(1) Any party in interest seeking a continuation of the automatic stay pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §362(c)(3)(B), shall file, in accordance with Fed. R. Bank. Pro. Rule 9013, a motion and proposed order. The movant shall state whether continuation of the automatic stay is sought with respect to all creditors or, if less than all creditors, shall specify the creditor(s) with respect to whom the continuation of the automatic stay is sought. The movant also shall set forth facts to establish that the filing of the present bankruptcy case was in good faith.

(2) For a motion to continue the automatic stay filed on or within 14 days of the date of filing the petition, the court shall set a hearing date no later than 30 days after the filing of the petition. For a motion to continue the automatic stay filed more than 14 days after the date of the filing of the petition, the court shall set a hearing date with not less than 14 days notice. The mere filing of the motion will not extend the automatic stay beyond the 30th day after the filing of the petition. If the hearing date is more than 30 days after the date of the filing of the petition, it is incumbent on the debtor or other party in interest to seek an injunction (through the filing of a complaint and motion for a Temporary Restraining Order) to stop any creditor/lienholder collection efforts which may be scheduled to occur after the 30th day following the filing of the petition, but before the hearing on the motion to continue the automatic stay.

(3) A party in interest opposing a motion for continuation of the automatic stay must file a response to the motion. The opponent shall state specifically why the motion should not be granted or state any conditions or limitations that should be imposed upon granting a continuance of the stay.

(4) In the absence of a timely filed response, the Court may allow the motion seeking a continuance of the automatic stay without a hearing.

Rule 4002-1. Duties of Debtor.

(a) Duties prior to filing petition and schedules. Prior to filing the petition, schedules and statement of financial affairs, the attorney for the debtor shall review the petition, schedules and statement of financial affairs to determine that:

(1) The current official form has been used;

(2) The petition, schedules and statement of financial affairs have been completed and all information provided by the debtor has been accurately listed;

(3) A statutory citation is stated for all state and federal exemptions claimed;

(4) The debtor and the debtor's attorney have signed the petition at all appropriate places and the debtor has signed the schedules and the statement of financial affairs at all appropriate places; and

(5) A notice of alternative chapters under which an individual debtor(s) may proceed has been properly executed by the debtor(s) and filed with the bankruptcy petition in all individual cases.

(b) Duties after filing petition and schedules.

(1) After filing the petition, the attorney shall fully cooperate with the trustee in the performance of the trustee's duties and shall keep the trustee advised of all matters pertinent to the Debtor and the administration of the estate.

(2) If the debtor operates a business, the attorney shall assist the trustee in obtaining all business records, ledgers, journals and cancelled checks of the debtor, all keys to the debtor's business, insurance policies, leases and contracts of the debtor. At the request of the trustee, such items shall be delivered by the debtor to the trustee.

(3) The attorney shall determine whether the debtor wishes to retain any assets subject to a security interest or lien, and, if so, shall contact each such creditor to determine the fair value of the collateral and whether the creditor desires for the debtor to redeem the collateral or to reaffirm the indebtedness secured by the collateral. The attorney shall determine whether such collateral is exempt property; whether there is any equity in the property for the debtor's estate; whether the property is redeemable under section 722 and whether a reaffirmation is in the best interest of the debtor.

(4) The attorney shall appear at all meetings of creditors, prepared to inform the trustee and/or the presiding officer of any agreements to redeem personal property between the creditors and the debtor.

(5) At the time of the filing of the petition, the attorney shall notify the United States Trustee if the estate of the debtor contains assets that need to be preserved or protected.

(c) Debtor's duty to provide personal identification upon excused absence from section 341 meeting. When a debtor seeks to obtain an excused absence from attending the first meeting of creditors, the debtor shall file a motion to be excused from attending the section 341 meeting. In addition, the debtor shall provide to the case trustee the personal identification required by Fed.R. Bankr. P. Rule 4002(b)(1)(A) and (B), but to avoid that personal identification becoming a public record in connection with the seeking of an excused absence of the debtor from attending a section 341 meeting, in lieu of bringing the specified personal identification to the meeting of creditors, the debtor or the attorney for the debtor shall provide to the case trustee under sealed cover: (i) a picture identification issued by a governmental unit or some other personal identifying information that establishes the debtor's identity; (ii) evidence of social security number(s) or a written statement that such documentation does not exist; or (iii) such other personal identification as may be required by the United States Trustee or the case trustee. The debtor's motion shall affirmatively state that this personal identification has been served on the case trustee.

Rule 4003-1. Exemptions.

(a) Claim of exemptions - Amendment to claim of exemptions. Any amendment to a claim of exemptions pursuant to Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rules 1009 and 4003 shall be filed and served by the debtor on the trustee, the United States Trustee, and all creditors, together with a notice of amendment which states a party in interest may file an objection to the list of property claimed as exempt within the later of (i) 30 days after the meeting of creditors held under section 341(a) is concluded or (ii) 30 days after any amendment to the list or supplemental schedules is filed. The debtor also shall file a certificate of service reflecting that the amendment and notice of amendment were duly served.

(b) Objecting to a claim of exemptions - Automatic extension of time to file objections to claim of exemptions in event of amendment to schedules to add a creditor. Unless the court orders otherwise, if the schedules are amended to add a creditor, and the amendment is filed and served either (i) fewer than 30 days prior to the expiration of the time set forth in Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 4003(b) for the filing of objections to the list of property claimed as exempt, or (ii) at any time after such filing deadline, the added creditor shall have 30 days from the date of service of the amendment to file an objection to the list of property claimed as exempt. The debtor shall give notice to any added creditor of the objection period provided herein and shall file with the clerk a certificate of service reflecting that such notice was duly given.

Rule 4004-1. Grant or Denial of Discharge.

(b) Extension of time. Unless the court orders otherwise, if the schedules are amended to add a creditor, and the amendment is filed and served either (i) less than 60 days prior to the expiration of the time set forth in Fed. R. Bankr. P. 4004(a) for the filing of a complaint or motion objecting to discharge, or (ii) at any time after such filing deadline, the added creditor shall have 60 days from the date of service of the amendment to file the complaint or motion objecting to discharge. Such circumstances shall be deemed to be "cause" for an extension and no motion to extend shall be necessary. (Amended effective January 1, 2012.)

Rule 4007-1. Determination of Dischargeability of a Debt.

(b) Time for commencing proceeding other than under § 523(c) of the Code - Automatic extension of time to file complaint to determine dischargeability of a debt in event of amendment. Unless the court orders otherwise, if the schedules are amended to add a creditor, and the amendment is filed and served either (i) less than 60 days prior to the expiration of the time set forth in Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 4007 for the filing of a complaint to obtain a determination of the dischargeability of any debt, or (ii) at any time after such filing deadline, the deadline for the filing of a complaint with respect to a claim of such creditor shall be 60 days from the date of service of the amendment upon such creditor. Such circumstances shall be deemed to be "cause" for an extension and no motion to extend shall be necessary.

PART V COURTS AND CLERKS

Rule 5001-1. Clerk's Office Location and Hours.

(d) General information. General information regarding the bankruptcy courts and the clerks' offices may be found:

(1) for the Northern District of Mississippi at www.msnb.uscourts.gov

(2) for the Southern District of Mississippi at www.mssb.uscourts.gov

(e) Communications with clerk's office personnel. The clerk and the employees of the clerk's office are not permitted to interpret the rules of procedure or to give legal advice. The clerk and the clerk's employees are not responsible for information respecting the rules or law. Though not required to do so, the clerk and the clerk's employees may make an inquiry to a party or counsel with respect to the content, completeness, accuracy or other attribute of an electronic filing. A clerk's response to an inquiry, a clerk's inquiry, or the absence of a clerk's inquiry shall have no legal effect on any party and cannot be cited for any purpose.

(f) Form of payment. Documents filed electronically require payment on-line by credit card at the time of filing or as otherwise directed by the Administrative Procedures For Electronic Case Filing established and maintained by the respective clerks. Fees due otherwise are payable by check, money order, cash or pre-approved credit card. Checks or credit cards of the debtor will not be accepted. Checks and money orders shall be made payable to "Clerk, United States Bankruptcy Court" and shall be in the exact amount of said fee or charge. A separate check shall be submitted for each item being filed. Any person or entity presenting a check or credit/debit card which is subsequently dishonored or has payment stopped thereon may be denied, at the discretion of the clerk, the privilege of presenting checks and/or debit/credit cards in the future.

Rule 5003-1. Records kept by the Clerk.

(f) Other books and records of the clerk. The clerk is authorized to change the form of the mailing list to meet requirements of any automated case management system hereafter employed by the clerk. The clerk shall give appropriate notice to the bar of any such change in form.

Rule 5005-1. Filing and Transmittal of Papers.

(2) Filing by electronic means.

(A) Mandatory electronic filing. The courts for the Northern and Southern Districts have designated all cases to be assigned to the Case Management/ Electronic Case Files ("CM/ECF") system. Attorneys who practice in these courts shall register as CM/ECF users. This includes attorneys admitted to the bar of the courts through regular admission or through pro hac vice motion, as well as those attorneys authorized to represent the United States without being admitted to the bar of these courts. United States Trustees, private trustees and others as the courts deem appropriate should also register as CM/ECF users. Registration forms and requirements for CM/ECF are available on the respective courts' websites at the following addresses:

Northern District: http://www.msnb.uscourts.gov

Southern District: http://www.mssb.uscourts.gov

All documents submitted in all cases and proceedings shall be filed electronically, and signed or verified by electronic means, in compliance with the Administrative Procedures For Electronic Case Filing established and maintained by the respective courts. The clerk's offices for the Northern and Southern Districts shall make available the most current version of their Administrative Procedures for Electronic Case Filing on the respective court's website.

Registration as an attorney, private trustee, or United States Trustee CM/ECF user constitutes consent to receive electronic service or notice of documents filed in the CM/ECF system, except with regard to service of a summons and complaint under Fed. R. Bankr. P. 7004 for adversary proceedings. The Notice of Electronic Filing that is automatically generated by the CM/ECF system will constitute service or notice on registered attorney, private trustee, or United States Trustee CM/ECF users. All other parties must be provided service or notice of any pleading or other document electronically filed in accordance with Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure and these Uniform Local Rules.

(B) Exceptions from mandatory electronic filing. An unrepresented individual may file pleadings and documents on paper. In addition, a limited or temporary exception may be allowed on an emergency basis when a registered CM/ECF user is unable to access the system via the internet due to technical failures. The courts may establish other exceptions as deemed appropriate. The Administrative Procedures for Electronic Case Filing for each court should be consulted to determine if and when an exception may be available and the procedure for invoking it.

(C) Electronic files and duty to confirm. Any document submitted to the clerk in a paper format shall be converted into an electronic format prior to docketing. It is the duty of the filing party to confirm that such document has been accurately submitted into the court's electronic file. The filing party may confirm such submission by viewing the docket for the case on the monitors provided in the office of the clerk during normal business hours. If no challenge regarding the presentation of the document in the court's electronic file is communicated to the clerk within 14 days of the date of docketing, then the document as docketed is conclusively confirmed as the document submitted, unless otherwise ordered by the court.

(i) Motion. Every motion filed shall have as an attachment a proposed order granting the motion.

(ii) Responsive pleadings. Responsive pleadings shall sufficiently identify the underlying motion as well as the docket number of the underlying pleading as shown on the court's official docket entry, i.e., Motion of [name of party] to Lift Stay (Dkt. #23).

(iii) Proposed orders. Proposed orders shall sufficiently identify the underlying motion as provided by Miss. L. B. Rule 9004-1 (b).

(E) Form of judgements/orders. Judgments and orders submitted must (1) be on a separate electronic page or sheet of paper; (2) have the caption of the case, and where applicable, the style of the adversary proceeding; (3) include in the title of the judgment or order the name and description of the motion; and

(4) the docket number of the underlying pleading as shown on the court's official docket entry, i.e., Order Granting Motion of [name of party] to Lift Stay (Dkt. #23).

(F) Facsimile Documents. Documents may not be transmitted by facsimile directly to the clerk's office for filing unless specifically authorized by a judge, the clerk, or the judge's or clerk's designee.

(G) Filing papers - size of papers. All papers filed with the clerk must be electronically sized to 8 ½ by 11 inches. To the extent possible, all attachments to papers shall be electronically sized to 8 ½ by 11 inches. All papers shall be clearly legible in a font size no smaller than 12 point, without defacing erasures or interlineations, and must be double-spaced, except that quotations, footnotes and legal descriptions may be single-spaced. Additionally, lengthy disclosure statements and plans in Chapter 11 cases may be single-spaced.

(H) Identification.

(i) Counsel identification. On every pleading and other paper filed with the clerk and on every proposed order or judgment submitted to the court, the attorney shall include the following information: the attorney's name, complete address (including street address and, if applicable, post office box number), telephone number, e-mail address, and Mississippi Bar number (if the attorney is a member of the Mississippi Bar), and, if not, the state and bar number, if any, of the bar in which the attorney is a member and regularly practices.

(ii) Unrepresented individual identification. Every pleading and other paper filed with the clerk by an unrepresented individual, and every proposed order or judgment submitted to the court by an unrepresented individual shall include the following information: the individual's complete name, complete address (including street address and, if applicable, post office box number), telephone number and email address, if applicable.

(I) Titles on papers. All pleadings, motions, and other papers presented to the clerk for filing must bear clear designations of their content. When a document contains multiple contents (e.g., an answer to a complaint and a counterclaim or crossclaim or a motion and a supporting brief or memorandum), all matters contained in the document must be included in the caption on the first page of the document, except that, if the document contains a Certificate of Service with regard to the document, the Certificate of Service shall not be included in the caption.

(J) Emergency matters. A party filing a pleading or motion that requires immediate judicial attention shall contact the courtroom deputy of the bankruptcy judge to whom the matter is assigned for direction. (Amended effective January 1, 2012.)

Rule 5010-1. Reopening Cases.

(a) Contents of motion. A motion to reopen a case pursuant to Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 5010 shall be in writing. In a chapter 7, 12, or 13 case, the motion to reopen also must state whether the movant believes that a trustee is necessary to protect the interests of creditors and the debtor or to insure efficient administration of the estate.

(b) Service. A motion to reopen a case pursuant to Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 5010 shall be served upon the debtor, if applicable, the case trustee, any affected party and the United States Trustee.

(c) Hearing. Whether the court conducts a hearing or provides notice and a hearing to any creditors or parties in interest other than those parties specified in Miss. Bankr. L.R. 5010-1 (b) prior to acting on a motion to reopen a case is within its discretion.

(d) Upon the filing of a motion to reopen a case pursuant to Fed. R. Bankr. P. 5010 for the purpose of filing the debtor's post-petition financial management certification and for the entry of discharge, the movant shall provide notice regarding the 21 day objection period to all parties listed on the most recent CM/ECF creditor mailing matrix. (Amended effective January 1, 2012.)

Rule 5011-1. Withdrawal of Reference and Abstention from Hearing or Proceeding.

(a) Withdrawal of reference.

(1) By party. A motion to withdraw the reference and any responses thereto shall be filed under the style and number of the bankruptcy case or adversary proceeding in which reference is sought to be withdrawn and shall be filed with the clerk of the bankruptcy court and be accompanied by the prescribed filing fee.

(2) By bankruptcy judge. A request by a bankruptcy judge for withdrawal of the reference of a case or a proceeding automatically referred to the bankruptcy court may be made sua sponte at any time.

(3) Contents of motion. A motion to withdraw the reference shall conspicuously state on the face of the motion, "RELIEF IS SOUGHT FROM A UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE," and shall refer to and comply with 28 U.S.C. §157(d) and Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 5011(a). The motion shall list all pleadings which may be relevant to the disposition of the motion, including docket entry numbers.

(4) Response. Any response or objection to a motion for withdrawal of the reference shall be filed within 14 days of the date of service of such motion.

(5) Transmittal to the district court. After the expiration of the 14-day response period established by Local Rule 5011-1(a)(4), the clerk shall promptly transmit the motion, any responses and attached exhibits to the clerk of the district court.

PART VI COLLECTION AND LIQUIDATION OF THE ESTATE

Rule 6007-1. Abandonment or Disposition of Property.

(a) Notice of proposed abandonment or disposition; objections; hearing.

(1) No asset notice. In a chapter 7 case in which a Notice of Chapter 7 Bankruptcy Case, Meeting of Creditors, & Deadlines (i.e., the 341 notice) containing language advising parties not to file a proof of claim is issued, and is not superseded by a Notice to File Proof of Claim, the trustee or debtor is relieved of the requirement of giving notice of abandonment or disposition of property under Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 6007(a).

(2) Property value. The trustee or debtor is relieved of the notice requirement imposed by Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 6007(a), when the proposed abandonment relates to scheduled property which the trustee determines is burdensome to the estate or is of inconsequential value to the estate.

(b) Motion by party in interest. An abandonment of property, by itself, does not affect the automatic stay. Therefore, when a motion which includes a request to have the trustee abandon the property from the estate pursuant to section 554(b) is filed, the moving party ordinarily should also seek relief from the automatic stay pursuant to section 362(d). If relief from the automatic stay is sought, the moving party shall comply with the requirements of Miss. Bankr. L.R. 4001-1(a)(1)(B).

(c) Agreed orders. If the creditor, the debtor(s) and the trustee agree as to relief from the automatic stay as well as abandonment, then the submission of an agreed order shall be governed by Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 4001(d) and Miss. Bankr. L.R. 4001-1(a)(1)(D).

PART VII ADVERSARY PROCEEDINGS

Rule 7012-1. Defenses and Objections - When and How Presented - By Pleadings or Motion - Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings.

The procedures set forth in Miss. Bankr. L.R. 7056-1 for filing or responding to a motion for summary judgment shall also be applicable to a motion to dismiss.

Rule 7016-1. Pre-trial Procedure; Formulating Issues.

(a) Case management, status and scheduling conferences in chapter 11 cases. The court on its own motion or on the motion or request of a party in interest may conduct case management, status and scheduling conferences at such times during a case as will further the expeditious and economical resolution of the case. At the conclusion of each such conference, the court may enter case management, scheduling or pre-trial orders as may be required. Such orders may establish notice requirements, set dates on which motions and proceedings will be heard, establish procedures (including briefing schedules) and address such other matters as may be appropriate. This rule shall be applicable in matters contemplated under Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 9014.

(b) Pre-trial conference. A pre-trial conference may be held if ordered by the court.

(1) Request for a pre-trial conference. Any party may request that a pre-trial conference be held following the completion of discovery, as provided in the scheduling order, by filing a motion with the clerk.

(2) Failure to appear at pre-trial conference or to cooperate. Unless otherwise permitted by the court under Miss. Bankr. L.R 7016-1(c), all counsel who will conduct the trial are required to appear before the court for the pre-trial conference. Should an attorney for a party fail to appear or to cooperate in the preparation of the pre-trial order, the court, in its discretion, may impose sanctions, such as costs and fines. The court, nevertheless, may hold a pre-trial hearing and enter an appropriate judgment or order.

(3) Attorney conference prior to pre-trial conference. Before the pre-trial conference, attorneys for all of the parties and any unrepresented individual shall confer and cooperate to permit each party to pre-mark all exhibits and to prepare a proposed pre-trial order for the court, unless a pretrial order is waived by the court.

(4) Pre-trial order. The parties shall comply with the requirements and procedures established by each judge with respect to the preparation, execution, submission and service of any pretrial order.

(c) Telephonic Fed. R. Civ. P. 16 scheduling conference or pre-trial conference. For cause shown, and at least 2 days before the time scheduled for a scheduling conference or pre-trial conference, any party to the conference may request that the conference be conducted by telephone or that the party be permitted to participate by telephone. Such request may be made by telephone to the courtroom deputy and shall be communicated contemporaneously to other counsel known to be involved in the hearing or conference. Any party objecting to the request shall promptly advise the court and other counsel.

Rule 7026-1. General Provisions Governing Discovery.

(a) Responses to discovery requests. When answering interrogatories, requests for production, and requests for admission, the replying party shall, as part of the answer, set forth immediately preceding the answer the question or request to which such answer is given. Failure to comply with this subdivision may result in the imposition of sanctions upon motion by the party propounding the discovery.

(b) Service and non-filing of discovery. Except as provided in subdivision (c) of this rule, unless the court orders otherwise, transcripts of depositions, exhibits to depositions, interrogatories, answers to interrogatories, document requests, responses to document requests, requests for admissions, and responses to requests for admissions shall not be filed with the clerk.

(c) Filing of discovery needed for trial or dispositive motion on appeal. When discovery or disclosure material not on file with the clerk is needed for a trial, a dispositive motion, or an appeal, the necessary portion of that material may be filed with the clerk.

Rule 7030-1. Depositions Upon Oral Examination.

(a) Who may attend deposition. A deposition may be attended only by (i) the deponent, (ii) counsel for any party to the adversary proceeding and members and employees of their firms, (iii) a party who is a natural person, (iv) an officer or employee of a party who is not a natural person designated as its representative by its counsel, (v) counsel for the deponent, (vi) any consultant or expert designated by counsel for any party, (vii) the United States Trustee, (viii) counsel for any trustee, (ix) counsel for the debtor, (x) counsel for any official committee and (xi) counsel for any party providing postpetition financing to the debtor under sections 363 or 364.

(b) Order of confidentiality. If a confidentiality order has been entered, any person who is not authorized under the order to have access to documents or information designated confidential shall be excluded from a deposition upon request by the party who is seeking to maintain confidentiality while a deponent is being examined about any confidential document or information.

(c) Confidentiality of documents. If any documents are deemed confidential by the producing party and the parties have not been able to agree on an appropriate protective order, until a protective order is in effect, disclosure should be limited to members and employees of the firm of trial counsel who have entered an appearance, and, where appropriate, have been admitted pro hac vice. Such persons are under an obligation to keep such documents confidential and to use them only for purposes of litigating the case.

(d) Reasonable notice of deposition. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, "reasonable notice" for the taking of depositions under Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 30(b)(1) shall not be less than 14 days. This rule does not abrogate any requirement contained within Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 9016 or Fed. R. Civ Proc. Rule 45(c)(2)(B).

Rule 7033-1. Interrogatories to Parties.

(a) Number of interrogatories. Interrogatories propounded by any party to another party shall be limited to 1 set of questions, not to exceed 30 in number, except by order of the court for good cause shown. In computation of the number of questions propounded, each subpart of a question shall be counted as a question.

(b) Inspection of documents. If a party elects to produce business records pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. Rule 33(d) and Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 7033 in lieu of answering the interrogatory, unless the court orders otherwise, the documents may be produced or made available for inspection and copying within 14 days after service of the answers to interrogatories or on a date agreed upon by the parties.

Rule 7037-1. Failure to Make Disclosure or Cooperate in Discovery; Sanctions.

(a) Duty to confer; certificate of good faith. Prior to service of a motion to compel discovery for whatever reason, all counsel shall be under a duty to confer in good faith to determine to what extent discovery disputes can be resolved before presenting the issue to the bankruptcy judge. No such motion shall be heard by the bankruptcy judge unless counsel for the moving party shall incorporate in the motion a certificate that counsel has conferred in good faith with opposing counsel in an effort to resolve the dispute and has been unable to do so.

(b) Motions raising issues concerning discovery - requirements. Motions raising issues concerning discovery, in accordance with Fed. R. Civ. P. Rules 33, 34, 36 and 37, as adopted by Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rules 7033, 7034, 7036 and 7037, shall quote verbatim each interrogatory, request for production or request for admission to which the motion is addressed, and shall state (i) the specific objection, (ii) the grounds assigned for the objection (if not apparent from the objection itself), and (iii) the reasons assigned as supporting the motion, and shall be written in immediate succession to one another. Such objections and grounds shall be addressed to the specific interrogatory, request for production or request for admission and may not be general in nature.

Rule 7055-1. Default - Procedure.

Pursuant to Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 7055 and Fed. R. Civ. P. Rule 55, if a party is entitled to a default judgment, the party must file with the clerk the following: an Application to Clerk for Entry of Default and Supporting Affidavit (including proof of service of process), an Entry of Default, a Request for Court's Entry of Default Judgment, and a proposed Default Judgment to be entered by the court.

Rule 7056-1. Summary Judgment — Form and substance of the motion.

Any motion for summary judgment must comply with the following requirements. Any motion that does not comply may be denied immediately without requiring a response from the non-moving party.

(1) If movant has the burden of proof on the issue upon which summary judgment is sought.

(A) Movant shall:

(i) List and separately number each material fact in the prima facie claim or affirmative defense upon which summary judgment is sought, with the understanding that if the court finds a genuine issue as to any one of the facts listed, summary judgment will be denied.

(ii) For each material fact listed, cite the factual authority. (E.g., "Paragraph 3 of Complaint, admitted in Defendant's Answer," "page 12 of John Doe's Deposition," "Defendant's Request for Admission No.4, admitted," "Paragraph 5 of Affidavit of John Doe.")

(iii) Attach as exhibits to the motion the factual authorities relied upon for establishment of the material facts. (E.g., Supporting Affidavit, extracts of depositions or Requests for Admission, etc. Do not attach entire depositions or pleadings, just the pertinent portions relied upon.)

(B) Respondent shall:

(i) List any material facts recited by the movant about which the respondent contends there is a genuine issue of fact and cite and attach the factual authorities that create the issue of fact.

(ii) Cite any additional material facts (a) that the respondent contends are part of movant's prima facie case, but were not included in movant's list of the facts constituting the prima facie case, and (b) which the respondent contends established. For each such fact either (a) cite and attach any factual authorities which the respondent contends creates a genuine issue as to that fact or (b) assert that the movant has the burden of persuasion on that fact and has no evidence to support the fact.

(iii) To the extent a respondent relies on any affirmative matter upon which it has the burden of persuasion to counter the motion for summary judgment, then the respondent must follow the procedures set forth in Paragraphs (1)(A)(i)-(iii) above.

(2) If movant does not have the burden of persuasion on the issue upon which summary judgment is sought.

(A) Movant shall:

(i) List the material facts that the movant contends constitute the non-moving party's prima facie case.

(ii) Designate which facts in the non-moving party's prima facie case the movant contends do not exist and (a) cite and attach the factual authorities the movant contends establish the non-existence of each designated fact and/or (b) assert that there is no evidence to support the existence of the designated fact.

(B) Respondent shall. For each material fact designated by the movant as being part of the respondent's prima facie case and claimed by the movant that there is evidence of its non-existence and/or no evidence of its existence, the respondent shall either (a) cite and attach any factual authorities supporting the existence of the fact or (b) deny that the respondent has the burden of persuasion to establish this fact as part of the respondent's prima facie case.

(3) Briefs.

(A) Each motion for summary judgment must be accompanied by a memorandum brief.

(B) The respondent shall file its response and memorandum brief within 21 days of service of the motion for summary judgment and supporting memorandum.

(C) The movant may file a reply within 14 days after the response is served. (Amended effective January 1, 2012.)

PART VIII APPEALS TO DISTRICT COURT

Rule 8001-1. Manner of Taking Appeal; Voluntary Dismissal; Certification to Court of Appeals.

(a) Appeal as of right; how taken.

(1) Simultaneously with the filing of any notice of appeal or notice of cross-appeal, with respect to an appeal in which any official committee in the bankruptcy case from which such appeal originated is not a named party to the appeal, the party filing such notice of appeal or notice of cross-appeal shall serve a copy of such notice on counsel to any such official committee and shall file with the notice of appeal or notice of cross-appeal a certificate of service.

(2) Any official committee wishing to be placed on the service list for any appeal for the purpose of receiving notices and copies of papers served shall, within 21 days of service of the notice of appeal or the notice of cross-appeal, file with the bankruptcy clerk a request for notice. Such notice shall become part of the record for the appeal to be transmitted to the clerk of the district court by the clerk of the bankruptcy court.

(3) Nothing contained herein shall affect or in any way determine any official committee's right to intervene in any appeal or cross-appeal or its obligation to seek leave to intervene in any appeal or cross-appeal if such official committee is not a named party to such appeal or cross-appeal.

PART IX GENERAL PROVISIONS

Rule 9004-1. General Requirements of Form.

(b) Caption. All documents filed with the clerk that relate to a document previously filed and docketed shall sufficiently identify the related document and state its docket number, if available. The form of the reference to the docket number of the related document shall be "Dkt. # ____ ."

Rule 9010-1. Representations and Appearances; Powers of Attorney.

(b) Notice of appearance.

(1) Pro hac vice. A non-resident attorney who is not a member of the Mississippi Bar and is not authorized to practice before the Mississippi Supreme Court and is not admitted to practice in the United States District Courts for the Northern or Southern Districts of Mississippi may apply to be admitted pro hac vice by comity to practice in a particular civil action in the court upon compliance with the following conditions:

(A) File certificate. The applicant must submit with the motion for pro hac vice admission a certificate from the United States District Court or the highest state court of the applicant's jurisdiction, showing that the applicant is duly authorized to practice in and is in good standing with that court.

(B) Associate local counsel. The applicant must associate a member of the bar of the court in the particular bankruptcy case for which the applicant seeks admission. The initial motion shall be filed by an attorney admitted to practice before the court.

(C) Certification of familiarity with local rules. The applicant must certify that the applicant has read and is familiar with the Uniform Local Rules of the United States Bankruptcy Courts for the Northern and Southern Districts of Mississippi.

(2) Exceptions to requirement of pro hac vice admission.

(A) For attorneys. An attorney is not required to be admitted pro hac vice in order to:

(i) File an entry or notice of appearance

An attorney may file an entry of appearance or notice of appearance and request for service without being admitted pro hac vice and such an attorney will be added to the mailing list to receive such notices and must receive copies of all documents required to be served on all creditors and parties in interest pursuant to Fed. R. Bankr. Pro. Rule 2002, unless otherwise ordered by the court. Any entry of appearance or notice of appearance filed with the clerk must be served upon the debtor, the trustee, the United States Trustee, and any entity having previously filed a notice or entry of appearance.

(ii) File a proof of claim

(iii) Attend the section 341 meeting of creditors; and

(iv) File a ballot in a chapter 11 case.

(B) Pro se Individuals. An individual may represent himself or herself in any bankruptcy case.

(C) Corporations or other business entities. A corporation, partnership, trust, or other business entity, other than a sole proprietorship, may appear and act without counsel in a case or proceeding before this court only for the following purposes:

(i) File a proof of claim;

(ii) Attend the section 341 meeting of creditors;

(iii) File a ballot in a chapter 11 case; or

(iv) File a reaffirmation agreement.

For all other purposes, such entity may appear and act only through an attorney.

(D) Government attorneys. Any attorney not admitted in the bankruptcy court or district court but who is admitted and is in good standing in another United States District Court may appear representing the United States (or any department, agency, or employee thereof) or any state, county or municipality (or any department, agency, political subdivision or employee thereof) may appear and participate in particular cases, actions or proceedings before the court on behalf of such entity in the attorney's official capacity, and any attorney so appearing is subject to all of the rules of the court.

(E) Child support creditors or their representatives. Child support creditors or their representatives shall be permitted to appear and intervene without charge, and without meeting any special local court rule requirement for attorney appearances, in any bankruptcy case or proceeding in any bankruptcy court or district court of the United States if such creditors or representatives file a form in such court that contains information detailing the child support debt, its status, and other characteristics.

(3) Filing of pleadings. When a party appears by attorney, every pleading or paper filed on behalf of the represented party shall be signed by at least one attorney of record in the case, which may include any attorney admitted pro hac vice.

(4) Access to Case Management — Electronic Case Filing System. The clerk may establish procedures for cross-certifying attorneys from other jurisdictions for the use of and access to the Case Management — Electronic Case Filing (CM-ECF) system for any case in which such attorneys are appearing.

(5) Substitution; withdrawal.

(A) Substitution. If a party in an adversary proceeding or a debtor in any case wishes to substitute attorneys, a substitution of counsel document signed by the original attorney, if available, and the substituted attorney shall be filed. If a trustee, debtor or official committee wishes to substitute attorneys or any other professional whose employment was subject to approval by the court, a motion for retention of the new professional must also be filed.

(B) Withdrawal. When an attorney enters an appearance in a bankruptcy case or an adversary proceeding, the attorney shall remain as counsel of record until released by order of the court. An attorney may be released only on motion duly noticed to all parties, including the client, together with a proposed order authorizing counsel's withdrawal. The Notice to one's client shall be by first class mail addressed to the client's last known address.

(C) Service. Substitutions and motions for withdrawal under this local rule shall be served as follows:

(i) in an adversary proceeding, on all parties to the proceeding; and

(ii) in a bankruptcy case, on the debtor, the United States Trustee, the case trustee and all affected parties, unless otherwise ordered by the court.

(D) Effect of failure to comply. Until an Order is entered allowing the substitution or withdrawal under sections (a) or (b) above, the original attorney remains the client's attorney of record.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Pro hac vice admission.

Where only one attorney signed an 11 U.S.C.S. § 523(a)(2)(A) complaint in compliance with Bankr. N.D. & S.D. Miss. R. 5005-1(a)(2)(A) by having an "s" mark appear before his name, and where the signing attorney did not satisfy the requirements for pro hac vice admission in Bankr. N.D. & S.D. Miss. R. 9010-1(b)(1), or the admission rules for the district court in N.D. & S.D. Miss. R. 83.1, then he was not authorized to practice law in the bankruptcy court, and his signature on the complaint did not satisfy the requirements of Fed. R. Bankr. P. 9010 and 9011. However, the debtor's motion to strike pleadings and dismiss the adversary was denied because under the remedial clause of Rule 9011, the attorney was entitled to remedy those errors, as the problem with the signature was not sufficiently called to the attention of the creditor or the attorney until the hearing on the debtor's motion, when the court clarified the law regarding admission to practice, as the absence of an explicit statement in the Local Rules regarding the requirements for general admission to practice before the bankruptcy court warranted a finding that the law regarding admission to practice was ambiguous and vague. Knesel v. Davis (In re Davis), — Bankr. —, 2011 Bankr. LEXIS 1751 (Bankr. S.D. Miss. May 10, 2011).

Requirements that had to be satisfied for an attorney to be generally admitted to practice in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Southern District of Mississippi were not explicitly addressed in the Local Rules. Instead, the rules appeared to presume that every attorney had an innate knowledge and understanding of the following principles: (1) each bankruptcy court was a unit of a United States District Court under 28 U.S.C.S. § 151, and thus, in order to qualify to practice in the bankruptcy court, an attorney had to satisfy the requirements for admission to practice in the district court; and (2) an additional, permissible method to gain authorization to practice in the court was by complying with the requirements for pro hac vice admission in Bankr. N.D. & S.D. Miss. R. 9010-1(b)(1). Knesel v. Davis (In re Davis), — Bankr. —, 2011 Bankr. LEXIS 1751 (Bankr. S.D. Miss. May 10, 2011).

Rule 9011-1. Signing of Papers; Representations to the Court; Sanctions; Verifications and Copies of Pages.

(1) All filed pleadings signed by an attorney shall contain the attorney information required by Miss. Bankr. L.R. 5005-1 (a)(2)(H). All documents filed and signed by an unrepresented individual shall contain the party's name, complete address (including street address and, if applicable, post office box number), telephone number, and, if available, e-mail address. Furthermore, every attorney, as well as every litigant proceeding without legal counsel, has a continuing obligation to notify the clerk of any changes of address and contact information.

(2) The filing of any document by using a login and password issued by the clerk shall constitute the attorney's signature for purposes of signing the document under Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 9011(a) and any other applicable authority relating to signatures. The attorney's name under whose login and password the document is submitted must be displayed as an image of a signature or by an "/s/" and typed in the space where the signature would otherwise appear (e.g., /s/ Jane Doe). No person shall knowingly use or cause another person to use the password of an attorney unless such a person is duly authorized to do so by the attorney.

Rule 9013-1. Motions; Form and Service.

(a) Rule or statutory basis. Each motion shall specify the rules and statutory provisions upon which it is predicated.

(b) Service of motions and responses; limited notice.

(1) When a motion or response is filed, at a minimum, the following persons or entities listed in section (2)(b) below shall be served unless otherwise specifically provided by the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, these Local Rules, or by order of the court.

(2) When limited notice is allowed by the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure or these Local Rules, it shall be in accordance with Miss. Bankr. L.R. 2002-1(m).

(A) In a chapter 7 case, notice shall be given to the debtor, the trustee, the United States Trustee, any court-approved committees, the counsel for each of the foregoing entities, and any other entities affected by the relief requested.

(B) In a chapter 11 case, to the extent limited notice is permitted under the Bankruptcy Rules, notice shall be given to the debtor, any court-approved committee, the twenty largest unsecured creditors if no official committee of unsecured creditors has been appointed, any chapter 11 trustee, the counsel for each of the foregoing entities, all parties who have filed a notice of entry of appearance, the United States Trustee, and any other entities affected by the relief requested.

(C) In a chapter 12 or 13 case, notice shall be given to the debtor, debtor's counsel, the chapter 12 or 13 trustee, the United States Trustee and any other entities affected by the relief requested.

(D) Whenever a pleading governed by Miss. Bankr. L.R. 9013-1 is to be served on the United States, or an officer or agency thereof, the service provisions of Fed.R. Bankr. P. Rule 7004(b)(4)-(b)(5) apply.

(c) Objections. Except for motions made in open court, any objection to a motion shall be made in writing and conform to Miss. Bankr. L. R. 9004-1(b), be filed pursuant to Miss. Bankr. L. R. 5005-1(a)(2)(D) and be served as provided in Miss. Bankr. L. R. 9013-1(b)(1).

(d) Failure to file responsive pleading. If a response is not timely filed, the court may enter an order granting the relief requested prior to hearing and may remove the motion or application from the court calendar unless leave to file a late response is granted.

(e) Submitting of order or judgment. After hearings held in the court, the prevailing party shall submit an order or judgment, consistent with the court's ruling, within 14 days of the hearing or such other time as the court may direct, for the court's approval and entry. For settlement announcements prior to a scheduled hearing date, the related order or judgment shall be submitted within 14 days after the scheduled hearing date or such other time as the court may direct. Except as otherwise directed by the court, prior to submitting the order or judgment to the court, the prevailing party shall submit to all parties appearing at the hearing who filed responsive pleadings related to the subject of the motion or hearing the order for their signature indicating approval as to form. Parties to whom the order or judgment has been submitted shall promptly sign it or promptly contact the party who drafted it to express any objection to the form of the proposed order or judgment. The parties shall attempt to resolve any differences in the form of the order or judgment before submitting competing orders or judgments to the court.

(f) Expedited or emergency matters.

(1) Motion for expedited or emergency hearing. A request for hearing on an expedited or emergency basis shall be made by contacting the courtroom deputy, stating the reason the matter should be considered on an expedited or emergency basis. Counsel for the movant shall immediately thereafter notify counsel for the respondent of the emergency hearing setting. "Expedited basis" or "emergency basis" is defined as any hearing within 14 days of the filing of the motion on which the emergency hearing is requested.

(2) Response to expedited or emergency matters. A response to a motion or application set on an expedited or emergency basis and/or seeking expedited or emergency hearing may be filed until and including the date of the hearing, unless otherwise ordered by the court. The respondent must serve the response on the opposing counsel as soon as possible by facsimile and/or email and must file the original response with the court in accordance with Miss. Bankr. L. R. 9013-1(c). (Amended effective January 1, 2012.)

Rule 9014-1. Contested Matters.

(a) Motion. If a matter requires a hearing, notice of the setting shall be accomplished by the clerk, unless otherwise directed by the court.

(c) Application of Part VII rules. The court may order Miss. Bankr. L. R. 7016-1 to apply to contested matters. Unless ordered otherwise, to the extent that Part VII of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure are applicable to contested matters pursuant to the Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 9014(c), the corresponding Mississippi Bankruptcy Local Rules for Part VII shall apply to contested matters.

Rule 9015-1. Jury Trials.

(c) Withdrawal of the reference in the event of non-consent. To the extent a bankruptcy court has been authorized by the district court to conduct jury trials, if the bankruptcy court grants the jury demand under Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 9015(a) and a party has refused consent to the bankruptcy court's conduct of the jury trial, then any party may file a motion to withdraw the reference with the district court within 14 days of the entry of an order granting the jury demand in accordance with Miss. Bankr. L.R. 5011-1, attaching a copy of the bankruptcy court's order and a copy of the party's refusal to consent. If no party timely files such a motion to withdraw the reference, the bankruptcy court will strike the jury demand.

(d) Application of the district court local rules relating to jury trials. To the extent the right for a bankruptcy court to conduct jury trials has been authorized by the district court, all rules relating to the conduct of a jury trial in the district court shall apply to the conduct of such trials in bankruptcy court.

Rule 9018-1. Secret, Confidential, Scandalous, or Defamatory Matters.

(a) Documents or proceedings may be sealed only by order of the court.

(b) Documents shall be maintained under seal according to such procedures as may be directed by the clerk.

(c) The order sealing the document or proceedings shall identify who shall have access to sealed documents and terms and conditions of the maintenance and the ultimate disposition of same.

(d) The order sealing the documents shall provide for the duration the documents are to be sealed. If no duration is stated, or if no ultimate disposition is provided in the sealing order, any court records and documents filed under seal shall be returned to the party who placed the records or documents under seal, or if no such party is available, such documents and records shall be maintained under seal for ten years after closing of the bankruptcy case, after which time such records, unless released by an order of the court prior to that time, may be destroyed.

Rule 9019-1. Compromise and Arbitration.

Introduction and Purpose. Alternate dispute resolution ("ADR") has the potential to provide a variety of benefits, including greater satisfaction of the parties, innovative methods of resolving disputes, and greater efficiency in achieving settlements.

These rules, modeled largely after the ADR provisions in the Local Rules of the United States District Courts for the Northern and Southern Districts of Mississippi, are designed to provide access to modern ADR settlement techniques and to encourage mutually satisfactory resolutions of disputes in all stages of litigation.

The bankruptcy courts have determined that mediation is the alternative dispute resolution process that best serves the needs of litigants and their attorneys in the timely and efficient resolution of cases. However, nothing in these rules shall prevent the parties from voluntarily engaging in other forms of ADR, such as arbitration, early neutral evaluation, mini-trial, or other appropriate ADR processes.

(a) Definition. Mediation is a process in which impartial and neutral persons assist parties in reaching agreed settlements. Mediators facilitate communications between the parties and assist them in their negotiations. When appropriate, mediators may also offer objective evaluations of cases and may make settlement recommendations.

(b) Cases appropriate for referral to mediation. The determination of whether a matter should be referred for mediation is addressed to the sound discretion of the judicial officer assigned to the case.

(c) Referral procedure.

(1) A bankruptcy judge may refer a case to mediation on the judge's own motion. If the court determines that a case is appropriate for referral to mediation, the court shall enter an order directing the parties to schedule and complete a mediation conference as set forth in these rules within such time frame as the court may specify. Within 14 days of the entry of the order of referral, a party may file a written objection to the referral order, stating concisely the reasons the case should not be referred for mediation. The objection shall be served on all parties. The court may rule on any objection without a hearing or, in its discretion, may conduct a hearing either in person or by telephone.

(2) A party may request that a case be referred to mediation. The request shall be made by motion addressed to the bankruptcy judge assigned to the case.

(3) The order of referral shall state a time period within which the mediation shall be completed.

(4) A court may not order a case to mediation more than one time except upon a showing of exceptional circumstances or upon the request of all parties.

(5) Upon the court's entry of an order referring the case to mediation, and upon all objections having been disposed of by the court, the parties shall have a period of 21 days from the date of entry of the court's final order to schedule the mediation. If the parties are unable to schedule the mediation within the twenty-day period or to agree on a date and/or a mediator, the court shall assign a mediator and shall order the date, time, and place for the mediation, which shall be binding on the parties.

(d) Pre-mediation documents.

(1) The mediator may submit to the parties a list of required pre-mediation documents and agreements at least 14 days prior to the scheduled date for mediation. All objections to pre-mediation documents shall be addressed to the mediator not less than 7 days prior to the scheduled date and a mediation agreement shall be entered prior to commencement of mediation.

(2) If pre-mediation documents are not furnished within 7 days of the scheduled mediation, any party and/or the mediator may apply to the court, which shall determine the disputed terms and conditions of the mediation.

(3) Failure to reasonably agree to the pre-mediation agreements and/or to timely raise objections to pre-mediation agreement which delays or encumbers the mediation process will be considered a failure to comply with the order of referral and the mediator and/or parties shall report such failure to the court. The court may enter such orders as it deems appropriate.

(e) Authority to settle.

(1) Appearance at mediation. Counsel, including lead trial counsel, for all parties must appear at the mediation unless otherwise ordered by the court.

(2) Attendance of parties. All unrepresented individual parties must appear in person at the mediation unless excused in advance by the court. Representatives of corporate parties, organizations, insurance carriers (if applicable) or other entities must also appear at the mediation or be available by telephone, as the mediator or the court may direct, throughout the entire mediation. Office closings and time zone differences do not excuse a company representative from continued participation in mediation under this rule. Each party representative participating in the mediation must have full authority to settle the case.

(f) Sanctions. If a party, or party representative, or attorney fails to appear or be available as provided by these rules at a scheduled mediation, or if a party, or party representative, or attorney is substantially unprepared to participate in the mediation, or if a party, party representative, or attorney fails to participate in good faith during a mediation session, a judge, upon motion or upon the judge's own initiative, may impose appropriate sanctions, including attorneys' fees and reasonable expenses incurred.

(g) Standards for Neutrals.

(1) Qualifications and training. Neutrals shall have such experience and training as the parties may agree or the court may determine are appropriate to help the parties resolve the dispute over which the neutral will mediate.

(2) Oath of neutrals. Every neutral serving under these rules shall execute and file with the clerk the oath or affirmation prescribed by 28 U.S.C. § 453 upon qualification and confirmation of appointment.

(3) Immunity. Neutrals or others authorized to serve in a specific case are performing quasi-judicial functions and are entitled to the immunities and protections that the law accords to persons serving in such capacity.

(4) Codes of ethics and standards of conduct. Any neutral serving under these rules shall be subject to all codes of ethics and standards of conduct set by statute, by the Judicial Conference of the United States, and by other professional organizations to which the neutral may belong and or that may be approved or adopted by the court.

(h) Selection of neutrals.

(1) Parties to confer. Unless otherwise ordered, the parties must confer in good faith and attempt to agree on a neutral. Before nominating a neutral, the parties must have confirmed the neutral's availability and willingness to serve within the time frame proposed.

(2) Appointment of the neutral when parties agree. If the parties agree on a neutral and confirm the neutral's availability, the parties must identify the nominee in the proposed order submitted to the court and provide the court with the following information:

(A) the name, address and telephone number and, if applicable, the e-mail address of the mediator;

(B) briefly describe the training, experience or other qualifications of the mediator;

(C) state the rate of compensation of the mediator;

(D) state that the mediator and the parties have agreed upon the selection and rate of compensation;

(E) state whether any portion of the mediator's fees will be paid from property of the bankruptcy estate, and, if so, the extent of the payment; and

(F) state the estimated time period within which the mediation will be held.

(3) Ruling on appointment of mediator.

(A) No hearing required. The bankruptcy judge shall rule on the selection of the mediator without a hearing, and absent substantial countervailing considerations, the bankruptcy judge will appoint the neutral whom the parties have jointly nominated and who is willing to serve.

(B) Findings required if any compensation is paid by bankruptcy estate. In the event any of the compensation of the mediator is to be paid by the estate, the court also shall consider and approve the rate of compensation of the mediator and the allocation of costs between or among the parties in the order appointing the mediator.

(4) Appointment of a neutral when parties disagree. If the parties cannot agree on a neutral, they shall so advise the court. Upon being so advised, the bankruptcy judge, at his or her discretion, may select a neutral and enter an order of referral to mediation and establish such parameters and guidelines for the mediation as are appropriate under the circumstances of the case.

(5) Documents provided by the court to the neutral. Promptly after the neutral is designated, the court shall provide the neutral with a copy of the order of referral.

(6) Disqualification of neutrals. No person may serve as a neutral in a mediation in violation of:

(A) the standards set forth in 28 U.S.C. § 455;

(B) any applicable standard of professional responsibility or rule of professional conduct;

(C) any additional standards adopted by the court; or

(D) the neutral discovers a circumstance requiring disqualification and immediately submits to the parties and to the court a written notice of recusal.

(E) The parties may not waive a basis for disqualification described in 28 U.S.C. § 455(b).

(7) Proposed order of referral.

(A) Submission to court. If the parties recommend mediation, counsel must prepare a proposed order of referral for submission to the court.

(B) Contents of proposed order. The proposed order of referral must:

(i) state that mediation is appropriate for the case;

(ii) identify by name the available neutral whom the parties nominate to mediate the case;

(iii) specify the time frame within which the parties propose that the mediation will be completed and the date by which the neutral must file written confirmation of that completion; and

(iv) suggest and explain any modifications or additions to the case management and scheduling order that would be advisable because of the reference to mediation.

(8) Neutral's post-mediation report to court. Within 14 days of the completion of a mediation conducted pursuant to this rule, the neutral shall advise the bankruptcy judge in writing whether the case was resolved by mediation.

(i) Confidentiality of proceedings.

(1) General rule of confidentiality. Except as otherwise provided in these rules or required by law, all communications made in connection with mediation proceedings under these rules shall be confidential. Mediation-related communications shall not be subject to disclosure and may not be used as evidence against any participant in any judicial or administrative proceeding.

(2) No compelled disclosure. A party, a party's attorney, a party's representative, and the neutral may not be compelled to testify in any proceedings related to matters occurring during a mediation under these rules. A party, a party's attorney, a party's representative, and the neutral may not be subject to process requiring disclosure of confidential information or data related to a mediation conducted under these rules.

(3) Limitations on communications with court. A person participating in a mediation under these rules may not be compelled to disclose to the court any communication made, position taken, or opinion formed by any party or neutral in connection with mediation proceedings.

(4) Exception to the general rule of confidentiality. The only event that may make it appropriate for either the neutral or either of the parties to disclose a confidential communication arising from proceedings governed by these rules is a finding by the court that such testimony or other disclosure is necessary to:

(A) prevent a manifest injustice;

(B) help establish a violation of law; or,

(C) prevent harm to the public health or safety.

(5) Compensation of neutrals.

(A) In general. Unless otherwise established by statute, directed by the court, or unless proceeding pro bono, neutrals may charge reasonable fees and charges for services and expenses.

(B) Allocation of costs. Unless otherwise agreed to by the parties in writing or ordered by the court, the costs of the neutral's services shall be paid in equal shares by the parties.

(C) Payment of costs. The parties shall pay the neutral within 30 days from the receipt of the statement from the neutral. Except when excused by these rules or by order of the court, the failure of a party to pay that party's share of a neutral's fee within the required time may result in the imposition of sanctions.

UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY COURTS
NORTHERN DISTRICT

STANDING PROCEDURAL ORDER RE PAYMENTS OF COMPLAINT FILING FEES BY TRUSTEES

WHEREAS, Item 6 of the Schedule of Fees adopted by the Judicial Conference of the United States pursuant to authority granted by 28 U.S.C. §1930(b), in pertinent parts, provides for the payment of a fee for filing a complaint in a U.S. Bankruptcy Court in the same amount as the filing fee prescribed in 28 U.S.C. §1914(a) for instituting in a U.S. District Court any civil action other than a writ of habeas corpus; and that if a trustee in a case under the U.S. Bankruptcy Code is the plaintiff, the fee should be payable only from the estate and to the extent there is any estate realized; and

WHEREAS, for orderliness of record-keeping, appropriate procedural mechanisms should be provided to effectuate such pertinent language from said Schedule of Fees; it is

ORDERED that:

1. If, at the time of filing, sufficient funds in a bankruptcy estate are on hand, the trustee shall pay the filing fee in full coincident with the filing of the adversary proceeding;

2. If insufficient liquid funds are available to the trustee upon filing, the trustee shall file a motion alleging such fact and praying for deferment of payment of the filng fee; and

3. Promptly upon the liquidating or obtaining of sufficient estate assets to pay such complaint filing fee, the trustee shall pay to the Clerk of this Court the adversary proceeding filing fee in full.

STANDING ORDER CONCERNING CHAPTER 13 PRE-CONFIRMATION PAYMENTS

Payments required by 11 U.S.C. §1326(a)(1) shall be subject to the following provisions:

1. Pursuant to §1326(a)(1)(B), the debtor shall pay to the Chapter 13 trustee all payments scheduled in a lease of personal property, said payments to commence not later than 30 days after the date of the order for relief. The Chapter 13 trustee shall thereafter make payments to the lessor creditor as set forth in paragraph 3 hereinbelow.

2. Pursuant to §1326(a)(1)(C), the debtor shall pay to the Chapter 13 trustee preconfirmation adequate protection payments, applicable to a creditor holding an allowed claim secured by personal property to the extent that the claim is attributable to the purchase of such property by the debtor, said payments to commence not later than 30 days after the date of the order for relief. The adequate protection payments, which are to protect against depreciation of the collateral and which are to be based on the value of the collateral, are to be proposed by the debtor and filed with the court. If a creditor believes that the proposal is insufficient, an objection to the amount of the adequate protection payments shall be filed by the creditor which will be considered by the court as contemplated by §1326(a)(3). The Chapter 13 trustee shall continue to make the payments as proposed by the debtor unless and until the court orders otherwise.

3. The Chapter 13 trustee shall make payments on a monthly basis pursuant to this order as soon as practicable after the filing of a proof of claim by the creditor to whom a payment is due. In the case of a secured claim, the said creditor shall provide evidence of the perfection of the relevant security interest to the Chapter 13 trustee prior to the commencement of payments.

4. In addition to the amount of the payments which are to be made to the creditors, the Chapter 13 trustee may assess an administrative fee for effectuating the payments required by this standing order and shall collect that additional fee from the debtor at the time of making the said lease or adequate protection payments. The administrative fee shall be equal to the percentage fee established by the United States Attorney General pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §586(e).

5. All payments made by the Chapter 13 trustee pursuant to this standing order shall be made in the ordinary course of the trustee's business from funds as they become available for distribution to the affected creditors. The practice of confirming Chapter 13 plans expeditiously in this district will be continued. Generally, confirmation will occur prior to the bar date for filing proofs of claim by non-governmental creditors.

6. The principal amount of the adequate protection recipient's claim shall be reduced by the amount of the adequate protection payments remitted to the claimant unless the court orders otherwise. Such adequate protection payments shall continue until the commencement of "equal monthly payments" under the confirmed Chapter 13 plan.

7. Upon the dismissal of a case, or conversion to another chapter, prior to the confirmation of the proposed Chapter 13 plan, the Chapter 13 trustee shall make the pre-confirmation adequate protection payments, or a portion thereof, from any funds available for that purpose, received on or before the date of the entry of the order of dismissal or conversion, to creditors, contemplated by §1326(a)(1)(B) and (C), that have filed proofs of claim prior to the date of the dismissal or conversion.

This standing order shall remain in effect until further order of the court. This the 2nd day of May, 2006.

REVISED STANDING ORDER DELINEATING CERTAIN POST CONFIRMATION PRACTICES IN CHAPTER 13 BANKRUPTCY CASES

In order to enable Chapter 13 debtors and secured creditors and/or mortgage servieers to better ascertain an accurate amount owed on the indebtedness prior to the entry of the Chapter 13 discharge, the secured creditors/mortgage servicers shall undertake the following practices and procedures subsequent to the confirmation of the debtors' Chapter 13 plan, to-wit:

1. Secured creditors/mortgage servicers should carefully monitor post-petition payments made in a Chapter 13 case. If the underlying indebtedness is paid current post-petition, then the secured creditors/mortgage servicers should not seek to recover late fees. No late fees should be recovered or demanded for systemic delay, but should be limited only to actual defaults, for example, when the debtor fails to remit the payment due to the Chapter 13 trustee. See, In re Lee, 167 B.R. 417 (Bankr, S.D. Miss. 1992), affd. 168 B.R. 319 (S.D. Miss. 1993), aff'd. 22 F.3d 1094 (5th Cir. 1994).

2. Payments made on the pre-petition/pre-confirmation arrearage claim should be exclusively applied to the arrearage claim. Regular monthly mortgage payments that are paid post-confirmation are to be applied to the monthly installment due in the month that the payment was made to the Chapter 13 trustee.

3. Secured creditors/mortgage scrviccrs should file a notice and reason for any payment change with the court and provide a copy to the Chapter 13 trustee, the Chapter 13 debtors, and the debtors' attorney of record. This specifically applies to payment changes resulting from an adjustable interest rate, as well as, any changes resulting from a loss or reduction in an interest credit.

4. Secured creditors/mortgage servicers are required to file a notice with the court, the Chapter 13 trustee, the Chapter 13 debtors, and the debtors' attorney of record, as to any protective advances made in reference to a secured claim, such as, "force placed" insurance premiums or property taxes. Should the secured creditors/mortgage servicers elect, this notice may be filed and disseminated in the form of an amended proof of claim.

5. Secured creditors/mortgage servicers should not collect or attempt to collect from the Chapter 13 debtors any post-confirmation/pre-discharge fees, including attorney fees, unless approved by the Bankruptcy Court. An application to approve such fees may be made pursuant to Rule 2016, Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedures, or pursuant to an amended proof of claim which must be filed with the court and the Chapter 13 trustee, as well as, noticed to the Chapter 13 debtors and the debtors' attorney of record. This provision does not prohibit creditors or servicers from assessing fees or charges to the debtors' accounts for record keeping purposes only. See, In re Thompson, 351 B.R. 402 (Bankr. N.D. Miss, 2006). However, in keeping with the intent of this order which is to assist in determining an accurate amount of the indebtedness owed by Chapter 13 debtors, the better practice would be for the creditors or servicers to have all such assessments approved, even if for record keeping purposes only, as set forth in this provision.

6. Secured creditors/mortgage servicers should be mindful of the provisions of §524 (i) of the Bankruptcy Code which became effective October 17,2005, as result ofthe enactment of the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention Consumer Protection Act of 2005 (BAPCPA).

Failure to comply with the provisions of this Standing Order may subject the offending party to sanctions, including, but not limited to, the disallowance of all or any part of the secured claim, actual and exemplary damages, costs, and attorney fees.

This Revised Standing Order replaces that certain Standing Order entered by the court on the 15th day of July, 2008.

So Ordered, this the 6th day November, 2008.

STANDING ORDER ADOPTING INTERIM BANKRUPTCY RULE 1007-I

Whereas, the National Guard and Reservists Debt Relief Extension Act of 2011, Pub. L. No. 112-64 ("the Act"), excludes certain members of the National Guard and Reserves from means testing in Chapter 7 bankruptcy cases commenced within the four-year period beginning December 19, 2011, and

Whereas, the Advisory Committee on Bankruptcy Rules requested approval of an amendment to Bankruptcy Rule 1007 to implement the Act, and

Whereas, the Executive Committee of the Judicial Conference of the United States has approved the transmission of Interim Rule 1007-I to the courts with a recommendation that it be adopted through a local rule or standing order:

IT IS, THEREFORE, ORDERED that the attached Interim Bankruptcy Rule 1007-I be, and is hereby, adopted in the Northern District of Mississippi and is applicable to Chapter 7 cases filed on or after December 19, 2011, through December 18, 2015.

SO ORDERED, this the 28th day of December 2011.

DAVID W. HOUSTON, III
JUDGE, UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY JUDGE

Interim Rule 1007-I. [1] Lists, Schedules, Statements, and Other Documents; Time Limits; Expiration of Temporary Means Testing Exclusion [2]:

(b) SCHEDULES, STATEMENTS, AND OTHER DOCUMENTS REQUIRED.

1 Interim Rule 1007-I was adopted by the bankruptcy courts to implement the National Guard and Reservists Debt Relief Act of 2008, Public Law No: 110-438. The Act, which provides a temporary exclusion from the application of the means test for certain members of the National Guard and reserve components of the Armed Forces, applies to bankruptcy cases commenced in the seven-year period beginning December 19, 2008.

2 Incorporates (1) time amendments to Rule 1007 which took effect on December 1, 2009, and (2) an amendment, effective December 1, 2010, which extended the time to file the statement of completion of a course in personal financial management in a chapter 7 case filed by an individual debtor.

(4) Unless either: (A) § 707(b)(2)(D)(i) applies, or (B) § 707(b)(2)(D)(ii) applies and the exclusion from means testing granted therein extends beyond the period specified by Rule 1017(e), an individual debtor in a chapter 7 case shall file a statement of current monthly income prepared as prescribed by the appropriate Official Form, and, if the current monthly income exceeds the median family income for the applicable state and household size, the information, including calculations, required by § 707(b), prepared as prescribed by the appropriate Official Form.

(c) TIME LIMITS. In a voluntary case, the schedules, statements, and other documents required by subdivision (b)(1), (4), (5), and (6) shall be filed with the petition or within 15 days thereafter, except as otherwise provided in subdivisions (d), (e), (f), (h) and (n) of this rule. In an involuntary case, the list in subdivision (a)(2), and the schedules, statements, and other documents required by subdivision (b)(1) shall be filed by the debtor within 15 days of the entry of the order for relief. In a voluntary case, the documents required by paragraphs (A), (C), and (D) of subdivision (b)(3) shall be filed with the petition. Unless the court orders otherwise, a debtor who has filed a statement under subdivision (b)(3)(B), shall file the documents required by subdivision (b)(3)(A) within 15 days of the order for relief. In a chapter 7 case, the debtor shall file the statement required by subdivision (b)(7) within 45 days after the first date set for the meeting of creditors under § 341 of the Code, and in a chapter 11 or 13 case no later than the date when the last payment was made by the debtor as required by the plan or the filing of a motion for a discharge under § 1141(d)(5)(B) or § 1328(b) of the Code. The court may, at any time and in its discretion, enlarge the time to file the statement required by subdivision (b)(7). The debtor shall file the statement required by subdivision (b)(8) no earlier than the date of the last payment made under the plan or the date of the filing of a motion for a discharge under §§ 1141(d)(5)(B), 1228(b), or 1328(b) of the Code. Lists, schedules, statements, and other documents filed prior to the conversion of a case to another chapter shall be deemed filed in the converted case unless the court directs otherwise. Except as provided in § 1116(3), any extension of time to file schedules, statements, and other documents required under this rule may be granted only on motion for cause shown and on notice to the United States trustee, any committee elected under § 705 or appointed under § 1102 of the Code, trustee, examiner, or other party as the court may direct. Notice of an extension shall be given to the United States trustee and to any committee, trustee, or other party as the court may direct.

(n) TIME LIMITS FOR, AND NOTICE TO, DEBTORS TEMPORARILY EXCLUDED FROM MEANS TESTING.

(1) An individual debtor who is temporarily excluded from means testing pursuant to § 707(b)(2)(D)(ii) of the Code shall file any statement and calculations required by subdivision (b)(4) no later than 14 days after the expiration of the temporary exclusion if the expiration occurs within the time specified by Rule 1017(e) for filing a motion pursuant to § 707(b)(2).

(2) If the temporary exclusion from means testing under § 707(b)(2)(D)(ii) terminates due to the circumstances specified in subdivision (n)(1), and if the debtor has not previously filed a statement and calculations required by subdivision (b)(4), the clerk shall promptly notify the debtor that the required statement and calculations must be filed within the time specified in subdivision (n)(1).

(Amended effective December 1, 2009; brought forward without change effective February 1, 2010; amended December 28, 2011, and applicable to Chapter 7 cases filed on or after December 19, 2011, through December 18, 2015.)

COMMENT

This rule is amended to take account of the enactment of the National Guard and Reservists Debt Relief Act of 2008, which amended § 707(b)(2)(D) of the Code to provide a temporary exclusion from the application of the means test for certain members of the National Guard and reserve components of the Armed Forces. This exclusion applies to qualifying debtors while they remain on active duty or are performing a homeland defense activity, and for a period of 540 days thereafter. For some debtors initially covered by the exclusion, the protection from means testing will expire while their chapter 7 cases are pending, and at a point when a timely motion to dismiss under § 707(b)(2) can still be filed. Under the amended rule, these debtors are required to file the statement and calculations required by subdivision (b)(4) no later than14 days after the expiration of their exclusion.

Subdivisions (b)(4) and (c) are amended to relieve debtors qualifying for an exclusion under § 707(b)(2)(D)(ii) from the obligation to file a statement of current monthly income and required calculations within the time period specified in subdivision (c).

Subdivision (n)(1) is added to specify the time for filing of the information required by subdivision (b)(4) by a debtor who initially qualifies for the means test exclusion under § 707(b)(2)(D)(ii), but whose exclusion expires during the time that a motion to dismiss under § 707(b)(2) may still be made under Rule 1017(e). If, upon the expiration of the temporary exclusion, a debtor has not already filed the required statement and calculations, subdivision (n)(2) directs the clerk to provide prompt notice to the debtor of the time for filing as set forth in subdivision (n)(1).

STANDING ORDER DELEGATING CERTAIN NOTICING RESPONSIBILITIES TO CHAPTER 7 TRUSTEES

WHEREAS, the United States Trustee Form 101-7-NFR, entitled Chapter 7 Notice of Trustee's Final Report and Applications/or Compensation (hereinafter "UST Form 101-7- NFR") is one of the U.S. Trustee Program's uniform forms which became effective April 1, 2009, and

WHEREAS, notice of a trustee's final report and application for compensation is a type of notice which may be delegated by the court pursuant to Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2002 (a)(6) and 2002 (f)(8), and

WHEREAS, the Bankruptcy Noticing Working Group has recommended that bankruptcy courts consider delegating noticing responsibility for the UST Form 101-7-NFR to the Chapter 7 trustees, and

WHEREAS, the instructions accompanying UST Form 101-7-NFR state that it is the notice that must be sent "by the chapter 7 trustee" to all creditors when the net proceeds realized in an estate exceed the amounts specified in Fed. R.

Bankr. P. 2002(f)(8) for asset cases ready for distribution to claimants on or after April 1,2009,

IT IS, THEREFORE, ORDERED that noticing responsibility for UST Form 101-7-NFR should be, and is hereby, delegated to the Chapter 7 trustee filing the form notice.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the trustee shall file a certificate of service with the court stating that the UST Form 101-7-NFR has been noticed and that the certificate of service shall include a copy of the form noticed and a list of the individuals, entities, and parties receiving said notice.

SO ORDERED, this the 8th day of May, 2009.

AMENDED STANDING ORDER REGARDING VIDEO CONFERENCING IN PROCEEDINGS BEFORE JUDGE NEIL P. OLACK

Video conferencing capabilities are available for (a) the U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Mississippi at the U.S. Courthouse in Greenville. Mississippi, and (b) the U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the Southern District of Mississippi at the U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Jackson, Mississippi. and the Dan M. Russell, Jr. U.S. Courthouse in Gulfport, Mississippi. The Court finds that counsel and others who utilize such video conferencing shall abide by the procedures and directives set forth below in proceedings before Judge Neil P. Olack:

SCHEDULING.

(1) The Court may set for hearing by video conference any matter in a bankruptcy case, including contested matters or adversary proceedings. Generally, such hearings will be scheduled to avoid significant time and expense of travel for the Court and the participants. Video conferencing maybe utilized for status conferences and pretrial conferences, and for other hearings and trials requiring the introduction of evidence and taking of testimony when the Court deems appropriate.

(2) Parties in interest may request that the Court set for hearing by video conference any matter in a bankruptcy case. The moving party must:

(a) obtain consent from other interested parties prior to contacting the Court; and,

(b) request permission for hearing by video conference from Judge Olack's courtroom deputy seven days prior to the proceeding.

(3) The Court, in its discretion, shall determine whether said request should be granted. Requests received by the Court outside the time parameters described above will not be considered except in emergency situations. The Court may grant any request for hearing by video conference with or without a written order.

(4) The Court shall provide notice of the place and time for all proceedings set for hearing by video conference.

(5) The Court may at any time vacate a previously granted request for hearing by video conference, and may order any party to appear personally in court for any proceeding.

DOCUMENTS:

(1) In any proceeding set for hearing by video conference, the parties shall exchange all witness and exhibit lists and copies of exhibits, if applicable, at least seven days before the proceeding. The parties also shall provide copies of same to the Court's Jackson chambers at least seven days before the proceeding in either paper or electronic form. If parties choose to email exhibits to chambers, they should email them to olack]chambers@mssb.uscourts.gov. In marking the exhibits, the parties shall determine an identification sequence that eliminates any duplication. At the hearing, the original exhibits should be in the courtroom where the witness will testify.

(2) If any other written documents are to be considered or reviewed at any proceeding, the parties shall exchange and provide copies of such documents to the Court at least seven days prior to the proceeding.

(3) Failure to comply with this provision may result in sanctions, including the Court denying any undisclosed witness testimony and denying the admission of any unexchanged exhibits.

PROCEDURES:

(1) Decorum. The formalities of a courtroom shall be observed. When called, parties are to approach the video conference table and situate themselves so that they are able to view the video screen and be seen by the Court.

(2) Identification. All parties in attendance must identify themselves and state their interest in the proceeding.

(3) Witnesses. Any witness called will be sworn in for the video conference by the courtroom deputy or other authorized court personnel.

(4) Recording. The video conference constitutes a court proceeding, and any recording other than the official court version is prohibited. No party may record images or sounds from any location.

(5) Equipment Operation. The Court shall be responsible for operation of the video conferencing equipment.

(6) Contact Information. Questions concerning video conferencing should be directed to Judge Olack's courtroom deputy.

(7) Computation of Time. The computation of time as promulgated by Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 9006 shall apply to this Standing Order.

SO ORDERED. Effective: December 1, 2009.

AMENDED STANDING ORDER REGARDING ATTORNEY FEES IN CHAPTER 13 CASES

If there is no objection raised by a party in interest, in Chapter 13 cases filed on or after February 1, 2012, the Court will generally approve a fee for the attorney for the debtor of up to $3,000.00.

The fee approved by the Court is on the basis that the scope of representation by the attorney includes both pre-confirmation and post-confirmation representation of the debtor, except for representation in any adversary proceeding. Basically, once an attorney sets a fee and files a petition for the debtor, the Court expects the attorney to represent the debtor conscientiously until the debtor is granted or denied a discharge or the case is dismissed. This fee shall include, but shall not be limited to, services related to motions to modify the Chapter 13 plan; motions to avoid liens; defending motions seeking relief from the automatic stay and objections to confirmation; objections to claims; as well as, other routine contested proceedings.

No additional fee is to be sought from the debtor or accepted by the attorney without prior Court approval.

In large business cases, in cases involving an extraordinary amount of time, or for representation in any adversary proceeding, the Court will consider a request for a fee in excess of the aforesaid amount upon the filing of an appropriate itemized application.

This order amends all previous standing orders regarding the setting of attorney fees in Chapter 13 cases.

SO ORDERED, this the 6th day of January, 2012.

STANDING ORDER DELEGATING CERTAIN NOTICING RESPONSIBILITIES

WHEREAS, Rule 2002, Rules 9013 and 9014, Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, and certain other provisions of law and language included in the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure authorize this Court to delegate certain noticing responsibilities as the Court may direct; it is

ORDERED as follows:

(1) The plan proponent in a Chapter II case shall give the debtor, the trustee, the U.S. Trustee, all creditors and indenture trustees no less than 28 days notice of (a) the time fixed for filing objections and the hearing date to consider approval of a disclosure statement; and (b) the time fixed for filing objections and hearing date regarding confirmation of a plan;

(2) In all cases, the moving party shall give the debtor, the trustee, the U.S. Trustee, all creditors and indenture trustees not less than 21 days notice of (a) a proposed use, sale or lease of property of the estate other than in the ordinary course of business, unless the court for cause shown shortens the time or directs another method of giving notice; (b) the hearing on approval of a compromise or settlement of a controversy, unless the court for cause shown directs that notice not be sent; (c) the hearing on dismissal or conversion of a case to another chapter; (d) the time fixed to accept or reject a proposed modification of a plan; and (e) hearings on all applications for compensation or reimbursement of expense totaling in excess of $1000;

(3) In all cases, the moving party shall give the debtor, the trustee, the U.S. Trustee, all creditors and indenture trustees (except as otherwise expressly provided by law, Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, Local Bankruptcy Rules, or another order of this court), not less than 21 days notice of the date when objections must be filed in all contested matters (i.e., all matters other than adversary proceedings) except as to motions for relief from the automatic stay under 11 U.S.C. Sec. 362 and motions to avoid liens under 11 U.S.C. Sec 522(f); and

(4) Within seven (7) business days from the issuance of the appropriate Notice of Motion for Relief from Stay or for Adequate Protection in a Chapter 11 case, the moving party shall serve a copy of the Chapter 11 Motion, along with said Notice, upon the debtor, the attorney of record for the debtor, the trustee, if any, the U.S. Trustee, all holders of liens on any property as to which relief is sought, all members of the unsecured creditors' committee, if any, and the attorney for said committee, if any. A copy of said motion and said notice of hearing shall be served on the twenty (20) largest unsecured creditors if there is no unsecured creditors' committee.

The moving party in paragraphs (I), (2), (3) and (4) shall file in the office of the Clerk of this court, within seven (7) business days from the date of the issuance of said notice, a certificate of service, with a copy of the materials served, that states upon whom the materials were served and the date of service. It is the responsibility of the moving party, not the Clerk of this court, to ascertain the names and addresses of the parties to be served.

STANDING ORDER DELEGATING NOTICING OF MEETINGS OF CREDITORS IN CHAPTER 12 AND CHAPTER 13 CASES TO THE CASE TRUSTEE

The United States Bankruptcy Code and the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure afford bankruptcy judges considerable discretion in the allocation of responsibility for providing notice of events in the course of bankruptcy cases and proceedings. The responsibility for noticing all meetings of creditors in Chapter 12 and Chapter 13 cases was delegated to the case trustee by this court in 1989 for Chapter 12 cases and 1987 for Chapter 13 cases. The court has reconsidered this policy and finds that it has worked well and should continue from and after February 1, 2010.

IT IS, THEREFORE, ORDERED that the trustee in all Chapter 12 and Chapter 13 cases filed in the Northern District of Mississippi is hereby delegated the responsibility of noticing all meetings of creditors. The form of the notice of meetings of creditors so generated shall be at the at the discretion of the trustee but, in any event, the notice shall specify the time and date of the meeting of creditors, advise of the stay provisions of 11 U.S.C. §§ 362, 1201 and 1301, specify the time within which proofs of claim may be filed and provide the address ofthe court where proofs of claim may be filed.

SO ORDERED, this the 1st day of February, 2010.

STANDING ORDER AS TO OFFICIAL CHARACTER OF LOCAL FORMS UTILIZED IN THIS COURT

WHEREAS, this Court utilizes certain locally created forms denominated and Judge's Local Form ("JLF") and Clerk's Local Forms ("CLF") as well as certain forms which exist within the Court's Case Management/Electronic Case Files ("CM/ECF") system, and

WHEREAS, great care has been exercised and continues to be exercised in the drafting of such forms so as to optimize conformity thereof to federal statutes, Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, Federal Rules of Procedure, Local Rules of this Court, policies of the Judicial Conference of the United States and of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts, other pertinent rules and regulations, applicable case law and judicially noticed circumstances prevalent in the Northern District of Mississippi; and,

WHEREAS, the process whereby such forms are drafted, developed and incorporated into master copies or into the CM/ECF system are either expressly, impliedly or tacitly approved by this Court, and

WHEREAS, the utilization of such local forms is accomplished with the approval and sanction ofthis Court; it is hereby ORDERED, that the current and future Judge's Local Forms, Clerk's Local Forms and the forms incorporated into the Court's CM/ECF system, as promulgated and utilized by this Court or by the office of the Clerk of this Court, be and the same are hereby deemed to be Official Local Forms of this Court and the same are hereby clothed with the authority of this Court whenever utilized in cases and matters under the jurisdiction of this Court.

SO ORDERED, this the 1st day of February, 2010.

STANDING ORDER RE MAILING OF MOTIONS/APPLICATIONS/ATTACHMENTS BY UNITED STATES TRUSTEE

WHEREAS, this Court is of the opinion that the office of the clerk of this Court should be relieved of the responsibility for replicating and mailing copies of motions/applications/attachments filed by the office of the U. S. Trustee as movant/applicant to noticees in contested matters; and

WHEREAS, pending the further order of this Court, the Court, nevertheless, is of the opinion that the Court should continue to direct that the Clerk of this Court perform noticing (as distinguished from replicating and mailing copies of the U.S. Trustee's motions/applications/attachments) in all contested matters in which the U.S. Trustee is the moving party or applicant; and

WHEREAS, this Court is of the opinion that the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure confer on this Court discretion to make these determinations; it is ORDERED that the office the U.S. Trustee for this district, in compliance with Rules 9013 and 9014 F.R.Bk.P., shall replicate and mail to all necessary noticees copies of all motions, applications or attachments thereto in which the U.S. Trustee is the moving party or applicant; and it is further ORDERED that the office of the U.S. Trustee shall, within seven (7) days from the mailing of such copies to noticees, file in the office of the Clerk of this Court a copy of all such paperwork served on noticees, along with a certificate of service thereof; and it is further ORDERED that, pending the further order of this Court, the Clerk of this Court shall perform noticing (as distinguished from replicating and mailing copies of the U.S. Trustee's motions/applications/attachments) to all necessary noticees consistent with the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure as to all such motions, applications and other contested matters filed by the U.S. Trustee in this Court; and it is further ORDERED that this order shall be effective as to motions, applications and other contested matters filed on and after the 1st day of February, 2010.

ORDER FOR SEGREGATION OF TAX DEPOSITS

THIS COURT ORDERS AND DIRECTS the debtor(s)-in-possession or trustee, pursuant to 26 U.S.C.§ 7512, 11 U.S.C.§ 346 and Rule 2015, Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, to segregate and to hold separate and apart from all other funds and to deposit in a separate federally insured checking account all monies withheld from employees or collected from others for taxes under any law of the United States, the State of Mississippi and/or any other lawfully established taxing agencies during the pendency of this proceeding. The debtor-in-possession shall open a separate checking account, which shall include the indication "Tax Account" in the account name, comply with the pertinent U.S. Trustee operating guidelines and reporting requirements, and such account shall be opened within seven (7) days from the date of this order. The debtor-in-possession shall file a notice with the office of the U.S. Trustee within fourteen (14) days from the date of this order and within fourteen (14) days from the date any subsequent tax account is opened, disclosing the name and address of the financial institution where the tax account is located, the account number, the date the account was opened, and the opening balance. Further, the debtor-in-possession or trustee is directed to and shall pay over to the Internal Revenue Service, Mississippi State Tax Commission and/or any other lawfully established taxing agencies, respectively, withheld or collected post-petition taxes in the forms and within the time limits required by law or lawful regulations of said taxing agencies. The debtor-in-possession or trustee shall pay all post-petition federal, state and local taxes incurred as the taxes accrue and become payable and within the time limits prescribed by law or lawful regulations. The debtor-in-possession or trustee shall file all tax reports, tax returns and all other documents required by law or lawful regulations.

STANDING ORDER AUTHORIZING DISMISSAL OF CASE PROCEEDING OR MATTER WHEN INTERNET FEES DUE REMAIN UNPAID

Filing fees are due upon the filing ofthe petition in bankruptcy unless the debtor files with the petition an application for informa pauperis status or to pay the filing fee in installments. (28 U.S.C. §1930, Fed. R. Bankr. Pro. 1006). Likewise, additional filing fees prescribed by the Judicial Conference Schedule of Additional Fees for Bankruptcy Courts, as authorized by 28 U.S.C. § 1930(b), are due upon the filing of the relevant pleading. Before the advent of electronic filing, petitions or pleadings received without the required filing fee would be designated as "received", "accepted" or "lodged for filing", but not "filed", by the Clerk's office. Since electronic filing has made this procedure obsolete, the court is of the opinion that a policy and procedure is required to insure timely receipt of fees associated with the electronic filing of petitions and pleadings.

It shall be the policy of this court that all fees are due at the time of filing on the court's electronic filing system. Filers must settle their on-line accounts for any outstanding fees by midnight (Central Standard Time) on the day of the filing. If any fees are not received in a timely manner, the Clerk shall issue, and transmit in electronic format, a Notice of Intemet Fees Due with an attached schedule of the amount(s) due, the date(s) incurred and a description of the filing event use or the document filed. If the fees due as reflected on the attached schedule are not paid within forty-eight (48) hours of the date and time incurred, the relevant pleading(s) and/or case(s) will be dismissed sua sponte without further notice to the filing party.

IT THEREFORE ORDERED that users of the court's electronic filing system must settle their on-line accounts for any outstanding fees by midnight (CST) on the day of filing. If any fees are not received in a timely manner, the Clerk shall issue, and transmit in electronic format, a Notice of Intemet Fees Due with an attached schedule of the amount(s) due, the date(s) incurred and a description of the filing event used or the document filed. If fees due as reflected on the attached schedule are not paid within forty-eight of the date and time incurred, the relevant pleading(s) and/or case(s) will be dismissed sua sponte will out further notice to the filing party.

SO ORDERED, this the 1st day of February, 2010.

STANDING ORDER AUTHORIZING DISMISSAL WHEN DEBTOR FAILS TO ATTEND THE MEETING OF CREDITORS

The appearance of the debtor and debtor's attorney at the meeting of creditors is mandatory, unless waived as set forth in Miss. Bankr. 1. R. 2003-1(a)(l). The cited local rule further provides that the failure of the debtor and the debtor's attorney to attend the meeting of creditors may result in dismissal of the case or the imposition of sanctions. The purpose of this Standing Order is to supplement the dismissal procedure prescribe in Local Rule 2003-1.

It is the opinion of the court that the dismissal procedure prescribed in Local Rule 2003-1 should be modified so as to provide for notice of potential dismissal in the document which schedules the initial meeting of creditors for each case. If a debtor thereafter fails to appear at a meeting of creditors, the case, or the non-appearing debtor in a joint case, will be dismissed without further notice to any party and without a hearing being scheduled, upon receipt by the court of a certification from the case trustee or the Office of the United States Trustee stating that the debtor did not appear and that the debtor did not make written request for the meeting to be rescheduled as provided by Local Rule 2003-1 (a)(2).

IT IS, THEREFORE, ORDERED that notice of potential dismissal for failure to attend the meeting of creditors will be provided in the document which schedules the initial first meeting of creditors in each case. If a debtor thereafter fails to appear at a meeting of creditors, the case, or the non-appearing debtor in a joint case, will be dismissed sua sponte without further notice to any party and without a hearing being scheduled, upon receipt by the court of a certification from the case trustee or the Office of the United States Trustee stating that the debtor did not appear and that the debtor did not make written request for the meeting to be rescheduled as provided by Local Rule 2003-1 (a)(2).

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the order of dismissal will be prepared, if necessary, by the case trustee or the Office of the United States Trustee and submitted to the Clerk for dissemination to all parties in interest after execution by the presiding Judge.

SO ORDERED, this the 1st day of February, 2010.

STANDING ORDER REINFORCING TIMELY FILING REQUIREMENTS

WHEREAS, although most attorneys practicing in this court scrupulously observe and comply with the timeliness requirements of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure when filing petitions and associated documents in this court, some attorneys fail to meet the filing timeliness requirements of such rules; and

WHEREAS, dilatory practices in meeting such filing timeliness requirements seriously impede the management of bankruptcy cases; and

WHEREAS, this court has concluded that appropriate sanctions should be introduced in order to encourage timely filings of documents such as schedules, financial disclosure statements, certification of credit counseling, and all other documents that are required by Rule 1007(c) of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure to be filed with fourteen (14) days from the date of filing of a bankruptcy petition; and

WHEREAS, this court has determined that routine extensions of time to file the aforementioned paperwork will not be granted and that any motion for an extension of time to file such paperwork must be supported by sworn affidavit reciting facts that constitute good cause for an extension of time; it is ORDERED that if a petition is not accompanied by schedules and other documents that are required for the administration of the case, the clerk of this court shall cause the debtor's attorney (or the debtor), to be notified of the rule requiring such documents to be filed within fourteen (14) days of the filing of the petition and this court's policy of enforcing the rule through the sua sponte dismissal of the case.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that unless (a) the requested documents are timely filed, (b) a motion for an extension of time to file the documents, with a supporting affidavit, has been filed, or (c) an objection and request for hearing regarding the potential dismissal has been filed, a case will be dismissed sua sponte if the documents requested by the clerk are not filed within fourteen days of the filing of the petition

SO ORDERED this the 1st day of February, 2010.

STANDING ORDER IMPLEMENTING PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS AS A RESULT OF IN RE: HOWARD. 972 F.2D 639 (FIFTH CIRCUIT - 1992)

WHEREAS, this Court deems it appropriate to establish certain procedures in order to object to secured claims in Chapter 13 cases as a result of the September 8, 1992 decision in the aforementioned Howard case; it is ORDERED, that to gain the approval of this Court for the alteration of a secured Chapter 13 claim at the behest of a Chapter 13 debtor, the said debtor shall file an objection to the pertinent secured claim substantially in the approved form of objection attached to this standing order. At the same time, the debtor shall serve the 21 day written response notice to each affected secured creditor in substantially the same form of notice of objection to secured claim likewise attached to this standing order.

AMENDED STANDING ORDER REGARDING FILING OF PAYMENT ADVICES PURSUANT TO 11 U.S.C. §521(a)(I)(B)(iv) AND FEDERAL RULE OF BANKRUPTCY PROCEDURE 1007(b)

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED, effective as to cases filed on or after January 1, 2009, that copies of all payment advices or other evidence of payment, addressed in §521 (a)(I)(B)(iv) of the Bankruptcy Code and F.R.B.P. 1007(b), received sixty (60) days before the date of the filing of the petition by the debtor from any employer of the debtor (1) shall not be filed with the Court, and (2) shall instead be provided to the case trustee at least seven (7) days prior to the first date set for the meeting of creditors pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §341(a), but not later than forty-five (45) days after the date of the filing of the petition. At the time the payment advices or other evidence of payment are provided to the aforesaid trustee, the debtor shall file a certificate with the Clerk of this Court evidencing compliance with this Standing Order.

If the case trustee certifies to the Court that the payment advices or other evidence of payment were not provided within the aforesaid forty-five (45) day period, or any additional period allowed pursuant to § 521(i)(3), the case may be dismissed by the Court without further notice by separate order.

Copies of the aforesaid payment advices or other evidence of payment shall be provided by the debtor to the U.S. Trustee during the pendency of a case within fourteen (14) days of a written request being filed by the U.S. Trustee with the Clerk of the Court. At the time the payment advices or other evidence of payment are provided to the U.S. Trustee, the debtor shall file a certificate with the Clerk of this Court evidencing compliance with this Standing Order.

If the U.S. Trustee certifies to the Court that the requested payment advices or other evidence of payment were not provided within the aforesaid fourteen (14) day period, the case shall be set for hearing to show cause why sanctions or other relief should not be granted by the Court

Copies of the aforesaid payment advices or other evidence of payment shall also be provided by the debtor to any creditor who timely requests said copies. For the creditor's request to be considered timely, it must be received by the debtor's counsel or the pro se debtor at least seven (7) days before the first date set for the meeting of creditors. The said documents shall be timely furnished in the same manner as they would be provided to the case trustee within the limits set forth above.

A debtor with unavailable payment advices may in the alternative provide to the case trustee, the U.S. Trustee, or a party in interest a certification setting forth the reasons that the required information is unavailable, stating the debtor's estimate of income, and providing other evidence, if any, of payments received within the sixty (60) day time period.

To facilitate the provisions of this Standing Order, the debtor and/or attorney for the debtor shall retain possession of the payment advices or other evidence of payment during the time that the case is pending.

This order amends the standing order regarding the filing of payment advices entered on January 31, 2006.

SO ORDERED this the 1st day of February, 2010.

DAVID W. HOUSTON, III
JUDGE, CHIEF UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY JUDGE

Brought forward and amended effective February 1, 2010.

STANDING ORDER ADOPTING PROCEDURES FOR OBTAINING DISCHARGE IN COMPLETED CHAPTER 13 CASES

The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 ("BAPCPA") requires certain disclosures and certifications to be made by the debtor before a discharge may be entered. This Amended Standing Order establishes the standards and procedure whereby the debtor may comply with the disclosure requirements and obtain a discharge in chapter 13 cases. The requirements of this Standing Order must be met in order to receive a discharge, including a hardship discharge pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §1328(b), from and after January 1, 2009. This Standing Order does not apply to cases commenced prior to October 17, 2005, nor does it apply in those cases where a discharge has been waived or denied.

1. Unless the debtor is not entitled to a discharge, the filing of the Notice of Completion of Plan Payments by the Chapter 13 Trustee will constitute notice that each debtor must file a Debtor's Certification and Motion for Entry of Chapter 13 Discharge Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §1328(a) and (h), hereinafter referred to as the "Motion" (form attached hereto). The Motion must be signed by the debtor(s), filed with the court, and a copy served by the debtor(s) on all creditors and parties in interest included on the court's mailing matrix within 30 days of the filing date of the Chapter 13 Trustee's Notice of Completion of Plan Payments.

2. The Motion will include verifications by the debtor regarding satisfaction of plan requirements, entitlement to a discharge, and the status of Domestic Support Obligations. The Motion will also verify that the debtor is not disqualified by the provisions of 11 U.S.C. §1328(h) from receiving a discharge.

3. If a response or objection to the Motion is not filed within twenty-one days of the date of service as reflected on the Certificate of Service, and provided the debtor is otherwise entitled, the court will enter a discharge order. Entry of the discharge order constitutes a finding that 11 U.S.C. §1328(h) has been satisfied and that there is no reasonable cause to believe that the entry of discharge should be delayed. If a response or objection is filed to the Motion, the matter will be set for hearing.

4. If the Motion is not timely filed by the debtor(s), the case may be closed without the entry of discharge.

5. If the debtor(s) is/are unable to certify as to the truth and correctness of the assertions on the form Motion but believe(s) that a discharge is warranted nevertheless, debtor(s) should draft and file a Motion for Discharge explaining why the assertions in the form Motion can not be certified and further explaining why a discharge should be granted.

6. This order supercedes and replaces the Amended Standing Order Adopting Procedures for Obtaining Discharge in Completed Chapter 13 Cases entered on February 4, 2009 and the Second Amended Standing Order Adopting Procedures for Obtaining Discharge in Completed Chapter 13 cases entered on September 14, 2009.

SO ORDERED, this the 1st day of February, 2010.

DEBTOR'S CERTIFICATION AND MOTION FOR ENTRY OF CHAPTER 13 DISCHARGE

IN: RE CASE NO.
Chapter 13

THIS MOTION SEEKS AN ORDER DISCHARGING THE DEBTOR(S) PURSUANT TO §1328(a) OF THE BANKRUPTCY CODE. IF YOU OPPOSE THIS MOTION, YOU MUST FILE A RESPONSE WITH THE COURT WITHIN 21 DAYS FROM THE DATE LISTED BELOW IN THE CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE. YOUR RESPONSE MUST SET FORTH THE SPECIFIC

FACTUAL ALLEGATION WITH WHICH YOU DISAGREE AND A COPY OF YOUR RESPONSE MUST BE SERVED ON THE DEBTOR(S) AND DEBTOR'S(S') ATTORNEY. IF NO TIMELY RESPONSE IS FILED, THE COURT MAY GRANT THIS MOTION WITHOUT HOLDING A HEARING. A TIMELY RESPONSE IS NECESSARY FOR A HEARING TO BE HELD.

1. By signing below, the Debtor(s) certify under penalty of perjury that the following statements are true and correct:

A. I/we have completed a personal financial management instructional course provided through an agency approved by the United States Trustee and have filed a statement, prepared as prescribed by Official Form 23, regarding completion of said course. (In a joint case, both husband and wife must each complete the course and file an Official Form 23). 11 U.S.C. §1328(g)

B. All pre-petition amounts owed by me on a domestic support obligation, if any, have been paid to the extent provided by the plan. All post-petition amounts owed by me on a domestic support obligation, if any, have been paid. ("Domestic support obligation" is defined at 11 U.S.C. §101(l4A)). 11 U.S.C. §1328(a)

C. I/we have not received a discharge under chapter 7, 11 or 12 of the Bankruptcy Code in a prior case filed during the four-year period preceding the date that the petition was filed in this case. 11 U.S.C. §1328(f)(1)

D. I/we have not received a discharge under chapter 13 of the Bankruptcy Code in a prior case filed during the two-year period before the date that the petition was filed in this case. 11 U.S.C. §1328(f)(2)

E. I/we have not been convicted of a felony, the circumstances of which would demonstrate that the filing of this bankruptcy case constituted an abuse of the provisions of the Bankruptcy Code. 11 U.S.C. §1328(h)(I) and §522(q)(I)(A)

F. If I/we owe a debt arising from: (i) any violation of any State of Federal securities laws, regulations or orders, (ii) fraud, deceit or manipulation in a fiduciary capacity or in connection with the purchase or sale of any security, (iii) a civil remedy under §1964 of Title 18 of the United States Code, or (iv) that caused serious injury or death to another individual in the preceding five years, then I/we have not claimed an exemption for my/our residence in an amount in excess of the statutory cap as prohibited by §522(q)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code. 11 U.S.C. §1328(h)(1) and §522(q)(1)(B)

G. No proceeding is pending in which I/we may be found guilty of a felony of the kind described in §522(q)(I)(A) or in which I/we may be found liable for a debt of the kind described in §522 (q)(I)(B). 11 U.S.C. §1328(h)(2)

H. I/we have made all payments required by my confirmed Chapter 13 plan or have, by separate motion, moved for the entry of a hardship discharge pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §1328(b).

2. Debtor(s) hereby move the Court for the entry of a discharge order in this case.

Within seven (7) days after filing the plan in all Chapter 13 cases, the attorney for the debtor (or the debtor) shall serve a copy of the plan on all creditors, the trustee, the United States Trustee, and all other parties in interest. The attorney for the debtor (or the debtor) shall file a certificate of service with the court which includes a copy of the plan and a record of to whom it was sent.

This Standing Order shall apply to all cases pending on, and filed after, February 1, 2010.

SO ORDERED, this the 1st day of February, 2010.

DAVID W. HOUSTON, III
JUDGE, CHIEF UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY JUDGE

Effective February 1, 2010.

Editor's Note.— This Standing Order replaces former Local Rule No. S13-1 and requires the debtor's attorney to provide a copy of the proposed Chapter 13 plan to all creditors, the trustee and the United States Trustee.

STANDING ORDER REGARDING SUBMISSION OF ORDER OR JUDGEMENT AFTER HEARING

After hearings held in the bankruptcy court, the prevailing party shall submit an order or judgement, consistent with the court's ruling, within fourteen (14) days of the hearing, or such other time as the court may direct, for the bankruptcy court's approval and entry.

Except as otherwise directed by the court, prior to submitting the order or judgement to the court, the prevailing party shall submit the order to all parties appearing at the hearing for signature indicating approval as to form.

Parties to whom the order or judgement has been submitted shall promptly sign it or promptly contact the party who drafted it to express any criticism.

The court may impose disciplinary sanctions against any attorney failing to abide by this rule.

SO ORDERED, this the 1st day of February, 2010.

DAVID W. HOUSTON, III
JUDGE, CHIEF UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY JUDGE

Effective February 1, 2010.

Editor's Note.— This Standing Order replaces and amends former Local Rule No. 17 by extending the deadline to submit an order or judgment after a hearing from 10 days to 14 days.

STANDING ORDER REGARDING PROCEDURE FOR MODIFICATION OF CHAPTER 13 PLAN

THIS Standing Order establishes the procedure for modifying a Chapter 13 plan and supplements Miss. Bankr. L. R. 3015-1.

Modification Prior to Confirmation: The debtor may file a modification of the Chapter 13 Plan with the clerk of court at any time before the plan is confirmed in accordance with 11 U.S.C. §1323(a). The attorney for the debtor (or the debtor) shall send a self-generated notice of such modification to the trustee, the United States Trustee and to all creditors affected by the modification. This notice must also inform the recipient that they have 21 days to object to the proposed modification by filing an objection with the court at: United States Bankruptcy Court, Northern District of Mississippi, 703 Highway 145 North, Aberdeen, MS 39730. The attorney for the debtor (or the debtor) shall file a certificate of service, with a copy of the modification and the self-generated notice attached, indicating that the trustee, United States Trustee and affected creditors were served with a copy of same. If an objection is timely filed, a hearing will be scheduled.

Modification After Confirmation: The attorney for the debtor (or the debtor) shall file a Motion to Modify Confirmed Plan. The clerk's office will then issue a notice, with a response date indicated, to the movant. Movant shall serve the court-generated notice, accompanied by a copy of the motion, to the trustee, the United States Trustee and to all creditors affected by the modification. Movant shall file a certificate of service, with a copy of the motion and a copy of the court issued notice attached, indicating that the trustee, United States Trustee and affected creditors were served with a copy of same. If no objection is timely filed, the motion will be granted.

This Standing Order shall apply to all cases pending on, and filed after, February 1, 2010

SO ORDERED, this the 1st day of February, 2010.

DAVID W. HOUSTON, III
JUDGE, CHIEF UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY JUDGE

Effective February 1, 2010.

Editor's Note.— This Standing Order replaces and amends former Local Rule S13-2 by requiring that a debtor send to all creditors, the trustee and the United States Trustee a notice of modification of a Chapter 13 Plan that includes a notice of a 21-day opportunity to object to the proposed modification.

STANDING ORDER REGARDING ATTORNEY FEES IN CHAPTER 13 CASES

If there is no objection raised by a party in interest, in Chapter 13 cases filed on or after January 1, 2005, and prior to October 17, 2005, the Court will normally approve a fee for the attorney for the debtor of up to $1,700; in cases filed on or after October 17, 2005, and prior to August 1, 2007, the Court will normally approve a fee of up to $2,200; in cases filed on or after August 1, 2007, and prior to January 1, 2010, the Court will normally approve a fee of up to $2,500; in cases filed on or after January 1, 2010, and prior to February 1, 2012, the Court will normally approve a fee of up to $2,800; and, in cases filed on or after February 1, 2012, the Court will normally approve a fee of up to $3,000.

The fee approved by the Court is on the basis that the scope of representation by the attorney includes both pre-confirmation and post-confirmation representation of the debtor, except for representation in any adversary proceeding. Basically, once an attorney sets a fee and files a petition for the debtor, the Court expects the attorney to represent conscientiously the debtor until the debtor is granted or denied a discharge or the case is dismissed.

No additional fee is to be sought from the debtor or accepted by the attorney without prior Court approval.

In large business cases or in cases involving an inordinate amount of time or for representation in any adversary proceeding, the Court will consider a request for a fee in excess of the aforesaid amounts.

SO ORDERED. Effective: February 1, 2012.

STANDING ORDER ADOPTING PROCEDURES FOR OBTAINING DISCHARGE IN COMPLETED CHAPTER 13 CASES

The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 ("BAPCPA") requires certain disclosures and certifications to be made by the debtor before a discharge may be entered in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005. This Standing Order establishes the standards and procedure whereby the debtor may comply with the disclosure requirements and obtain a discharge in chapter 13 cases. The requirements of this Standing Order must be met in order to receive a discharge from and after May 1, 2009. This Standing Order does not apply to cases commenced prior to October 17, 2005, nor does it apply in those cases where a discharge has been waived or denied.

1. Unless the debtor is not entitled to a discharge, the filing of the Notice of Completion of Plan Payments by the Chapter 13 Trustee will constitute notice that each debtor must file a Debtor's Certification and Motion for Entry of Chapter 13 Discharge Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §1328(a) and (h), (the "Motion") (form attached hereto). The Motion must be signed by the debtor(s) and the attorney of record and filed with the Court. A copy of the Motion must be served by the debtor(s) on all creditors and parties in interest included on the Court's mailing matrix within thirty (30) days of the filing date of the Chapter 13 Trustee's Notice of Completion of Plan Payments.

2. The Motion will include verifications by the debtor(s) regarding satisfaction of plan requirements, entitlement to a discharge, and the status of domestic support obligations ("Domestic Support Obligation" as defined at 11 U.S.C. § 101(l4A)). The Motion also will include verification that the debtor is not disqualified by the provisions of 11 U.S.C. §1328(h) from receiving a discharge.

3. If a response or objection to the Motion is not filed within twenty-one (21) days of the date of service as reflected on the Certificate of Service, and provided the debtor is otherwise entitled, the Court will enter a discharge order. Entry of the discharge order constitutes a finding that 11 U.S.C. § 1328(h) has been satisfied and that there is no reasonable cause to believe that the entry of discharge should be delayed. If a response or objection is filed to the Motion, the matter will be set for hearing.

4. If the Motion is not timely filed by the debtor(s), the case may be closed without the entry of discharge.

5. If the debtor(s) is/are unable to certify as to the truth and correctness of the assertions on the form Motion but believe(s) that a discharge is warranted nevertheless, the debtor(s) should draft and file a motion for discharge explaining why the assertions in the form Motion cannot be certified and further explaining why a discharge should be granted.

6. In the event the debtor(s) seek(s) a hardship discharge pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §1328(b), the debtor's motion for hardship discharge shall include certification regarding the status of domestic support obligations (as defined at 11 U.S.C. § 101(l4A)) and that the debtor(s) is/are not disqualified by the provisions of 11 U.S.C. §1328(h) from receiving a discharge.

DEBTOR'S CERTIFICATION AND MOTION FOR ENTRY OF CHAPTER 13 DISCHARGE PURSUANT TO 11 U.S.C. §1328 (a) and (h)

THIS MOTION SEEKS AN ORDER DISCHARGING THE DEBTOR(S) PURSUANT TO §1328(a) OF THE BANKRUPTCY CODE. IF YOU OPPOSE THIS MOTION, YOU MUST FILE A RESPONSE WITH THE COURT WITHIN TWENTY-ONE (21) DAYS FROM THE DATE LISTED BELOW IN THE CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE. YOUR RESPONSE MUST SET FORTH THE SPECIFIC FACTUAL ALLEGATIONS WITH WHICH YOU DISAGREE, AND A COPY OF YOUR RESPONSE MUST BE SERVED ON THE DEBTOR(S) AND DEBTOR'S(S') ATTORNEY. IF NO TIMELY RESPONSE IS FILED, THE COURT MAY GRANT THIS MOTION WITHOUT HOLDING A HEARING. A TIMELY RESPONSE IS NECESSARY FOR A HEARING TO BE HELD.

1. By signing below, the debtor(s) certify under penalty of perjury that the following statements are true and correct:

A. For cases filed on or after March 10, 2008, I/we have completed a personal financial management instructional course provided through an agency approved by the United States Trustee and have filed a statement, prepared as prescribed by Official Form 23, regarding completion of said course. (In a joint case, both husband and wife must each complete the course and file an Official Form 23.). 11 U.S.C. §1328(g)

B. All pre-petition amounts owed by me on a domestic support obligation ("Domestic Support Obligation" as defined at 11 U.S.C. § 101(14A), if any, have been paid to the extent provided by the plan. All post-petition amounts owed by me on a domestic support obligation, if any, have been paid. 11 U.S.C. §1328(a)

C. I/We have not received a discharge under chapter 7, 11 or 12 of the Bankruptcy Code in a prior case filed during the four-year period preceding the date that the petition was filed in this case. 11 U.S.C. §1328(f)(1)

D. I/We have not received a discharge under chapter 13 of the Bankruptcy Code in a prior case filed during the two-year period before the date that the petition was filed in this case. 11 U.S.C. §1328(f)(2)

E. I/we have not been convicted of a felony, the circumstances of which would demonstrate that the filing of this bankruptcy case constituted an abuse of the provisions of the Bankruptcy Code. 11 U.S.C. §1328(h)(1) and §522(q)(1)(A)

F. If/we owe a debt arising from: (i) any violation of any State or Federal securities laws, regulations or orders, (ii) fraud, deceit or manipulation in a fiduciary capacity or in connection with the purchase or sale of any security, (iii) a civil remedy under §1964 of Title 18 of the United States Code, or (iv) that caused serious injury or death to another individual in the preceding five (5) years, then I/we have not claimed an exemption for my/our residence in an amount in excess of the statutory cap as prohibited by §522(q)(l) of the Bankruptcy Code. 11 U.S.C. §1328(h)(1) and §522(q)(1)(B)

G. No proceeding is pending in which I/we may be found guilty of a felony of the kind described in §522(q)(l)(A) or in which I/we may be found liable for a debt of the kind described in §522 (q)(l)(B). 11 U.S.C. §1328(h)(2)

H. I/We have made all payments required by my confirmed Chapter 13 plan.

STANDING ORDER REGARDING VIDEO CONFERENCING IN PROCEEDINGS BEFORE JUDGE NEIL P. OLACK

Video conferencing capabilities are available for (a) the U. S. Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Mississippi at the U. S. Courthouse in Greenville, Mississippi, and (b) the U. S. Bankruptcy Court for the Southern District of Mississippi at the U. S. Bankruptcy Court in Jackson, Mississippi, and the Dan M. Russell, Jr. U. S. Courthouse in Gulfport, Mississippi. The Court finds that counsel and others who utilize such video conferencing shall abide by the procedures and directives set forth below in proceedings before Judge Neil P. Olack:

SCHEDULING:

(1) The Court may set for hearing by video conference any matter in a bankruptcy case, including contested matters or adversary proceedings. Generally, such hearings will be scheduled to avoid significant time and expense of travel for the Court and the participants. Video conferencing may be utilized for status conferences and pretrial conferences, and for other hearings and trials regarding the introduction of evidence and taking of testimony when the Court deems appropriate.

(2) Parties in interest may request that the Court set for hearing by video conference any matter in a bankruptcy case. The moving party must:

(a) obtain consent from other interested parties prior to contacting the Court; and,

(b) request permission for hearing by video conference from Judge Olack's courtroom deputy seven days prior to the proceeding.

(3) The Court, in its discretion, shall determine whether said request should be granted. Requests received by the Court outside the time parameters described above will not be considered except in emergency situations. The Court may grant any request for hearing by video conference with or without a written order.

(4) The Court shall provide notice of the place and time for all proceedings set for hearing by video conference.

(5) The Court may at any time vacate a previously granted request for hearing by video conference, and may order any party to appear personally in court for any proceeding.

DOCUMENTS:

(1) In any proceeding set for hearing by video conference, the parties shall exchange all witness and exhibit lists and copies of exhibits, if applicable, at least seven days before the proceeding. The parties also shall provide copies of same to the Court's Jackson chambers at least seven days before the proceeding in either paper or electronic form. If parties choose to email exhibits to chambers, they should email them to olack]chambers@mssb.uscourts.gov. In marking the exhibits, the parties shall determine an identification sequence that eliminates any duplication. At the hearing, the original exhibits should be in the courtroom where the witness will testify.

(2) If any other written documents are to be considered or reviewed at any proceeding, the parties shall exchange and provide copies of such documents to the Court at least seven days prior to the proceeding.

(3) Failure to comply with this provision may result in sanctions, including the Court denying any undisclosed witness testimony and denying the admission of any unexchanged exhibits.

(3) Failure to comply with this provision may result in sanctions, including the Court denying any undisclosed witness testimony and denying the admission of any unexchanged exhibits.

PROCEDURES:

(1) Decorum. The formalities of a courtroom shall be observed. When called, parties are to approach the video conference table and situate themselves so that they are able to view the video screen and be seen by the Court.

(2) Identification. All parties in attendance must identify themselves and state their interest in the proceeding.

(3) Witnesses. Any witness called will be sworn in for the video conference by the courtroom deputy or other authorized court personnel.

(4) Recording. The video conference constitutes a court proceeding, and any recording other than the official court version is prohibited. No party may record images or sounds from any location.

(5) Equipment Operation. The Court shall be responsible for operation of the video conferencing equipment.

(6) Contact Information. Questions concerning video conferencing should be directed to Judge Olack's courtroom deputy.

(7) Computation of Time. The computation of time as promulgated by Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 9006 shall apply to this Standing Order.

SECOND AMENDED STANDING ORDER ADOPTING INTERIM BANKRUPTCY RULE 1007-1

Whereas, the National Guard and Reservists Debt Relief Act of 2008, Pub. L. No. 110-438, excludes certain members of the National Guard and Reserves from means testing in chapter 7 bankruptcy cases, which are commenced in the three-year period beginning December 19, 2008; and whereas the President signed the National Guard and Reservist Debt Relief Extension Act, Pub. L. No. 112-64, on December 13, 2011, extending the means test exclusion provisions until December 18, 2015; and

Whereas, the Advisory Committee on Bankruptcy Rules requested approval of Interim Bankruptcy Rule 1007-I; and

Whereas, the Executive Committee, acting on behalf of the Judicial Conference, has approved the transmission of Interim Bankruptcy Rule 1007-1 to the courts with a recommendation that it be adopted through a local rule or standing order; and

Whereas, Interim Bankruptcy Rule 1007-I was amended to implement changes in connection with the amendments to Rule 9006(a) effective December 1, 2009; and

Whereas, Interim Bankruptcy Rule 1007-I, was amended further to implement changes in connection with amendments to Rule 1007 effective December 1, 2010;

IT IS, THEREFORE, ORDERED that Interim Bankruptcy Rule 1007-I, as amended, is adopted by the judges of this Court and is applicable to chapter 7 cases filed on or after December 19, 2008. See Exhibit A.

Interim Rule 1007-I. [1] Lists, Schedules, Statements, and Other Documents; Time Limits; Expiration of Temporary Means Testing Exclusion [2]:

(b) SCHEDULES, STATEMENTS, AND OTHER DOCUMENTS REQUIRED.

(4) Unless either: (A) § 707(b)(2)(D)(i) applies, or (B) § 707(b)(2)(D)(ii) applies and the exclusion from means testing granted therein extends beyond the period specified by Rule 1017(e), an individual debtor in a chapter 7 case shall file a statement of current monthly income prepared as prescribed by the appropriate Official Form, and, if the current monthly income exceeds the median family income for the applicable state and household size, the information, including calculations, required by § 707(b), prepared as prescribed by the appropriate Official Form.

(c) TIME LIMITS. In a voluntary case, the schedules, statements, and other documents required by subdivision (b)(I), (4), (5), and (6) shall be filed with the petition or within 14 days thereafter, except as otherwise provided in subdivisions (d), (e), (f), (h), and (n) of this rule. In an involuntary case, the list in subdivision (a)(2), and the schedules, statements, and other documents required by subdivision (b)(1) shall be filed by the debtor within 14 days of the entry of the order for relief. In a voluntary case, the documents required by paragraphs (A), (C), and (D) of subdivision (b)(3) shall be filed with the petition. Unless the court orders otherwise, a debtor who has filed a statement under subdivision (b)(3)(B), shall file the documents required by subdivision (b)(3)(A) within 14 days of the order for relief. In a chapter 7 case, the debtor shall file the statement required by subdivision (b)(7) within 60 days after the first date set for the meeting of creditors under § 341 of the Code, and in a chapter 11 or 13 case no later than the date when the last payment was made by the debtor as required by the plan or the filing of a motion for a discharge under § 1141(d)(5)(B) or § 1328(b) of the Code. The court may, at any time and in its discretion, enlarge the time to file the statement required by subdivision (b)(7). The debtor shall file the statement required by subdivision (b)(8) no earlier than the date of the last payment made under the plan or the date of the filing of a motion for a discharge under §§ 1141(d)(5)(B), 1228(b), or 1328(b) of the Code. Lists, schedules, statements, and other documents filed prior to the

1 Interim Rule 1007-I was adopted by the bankruptcy courts to implement the National Guard and Reservists Debt Relief Act of 2008, Public Law No: 110-438. The amended Act, which provides a temporary exclusion from the application of the means test for certain members of the National Guard and reserve components of the Armed Forces, applies to bankruptcy cases commenced in the seven-year period beginning December 19, 2008.

2 Incorporates (1) time amendments to Rule 1007 which took effect on December 1, 2009, and (2) an amendment, effective December 1, 2010, which extended the time to file the statement of completion of a course in personal financial management in a chapter 7 case filed by an individual debtor.

conversion of a case to another chapter shall be deemed filed in the converted case unless the court directs otherwise. Except as provided in § 1116(3), any extension of time to file schedules, statements, and other documents required under this rule may be granted only on motion for cause shown and on notice to the United States trustee, any committee elected under § 705 or appointed under § 1102 of the Code, trustee, examiner, or other party as the court may direct. Notice of an extension shall be given to the United States trustee and to any committee, trustee, or other party as the court may direct.

(n) TIME LIMITS FOR, AND NOTICE TO, DEBTORS TEMPORARILY EXCLUDED FROM MEANS TESTING.

(1) An individual debtor who is temporarily excluded from means testing pursuant to § 707(b)(2)(D)(ii) of the Code shall file any statement and calculations required by subdivision (b)(4) no later than 14 days after the expiration of the temporary exclusion if the expiration occurs within the time specified by Rule 1017(e) for filing a motion pursuant to § 707(b)(2).

(2) If the temporary exclusion from means testing under § 707(b)(2)(D)(ii) terminates due to the circumstances specified in subdivision (n)(1), and if the debtor has not previously filed a statement and calculations required by subdivision (b)(4), the clerk shall promptly notify the debtor that the required statement and calculations must be filed within the time specified in subdivision (n)(1). (Amended effective December 1, 2009; brought forward without change effective February 1, 2010; amended effective December 1, 2010; amended January 4, 2012, and applicable to Chapter 7 cases filed on or after December 19, 2008.)

COMMENT

This rule is amended to take account of the enactment of the National Guard and Reservists Debt Relief Act of 2008, which amended § 707(b)(2)(D) of the Code to provide a temporary exclusion from the application of the means test for certain members of the National Guard and reserve components of the Armed Forces. This exclusion applies to qualifying debtors while they remain on active duty or are performing a homeland defense activity, and for a period of 540 days thereafter. For some debtors initially covered by the exclusion, the protection from means testing will expire while their chapter 7 cases are pending, and at a point when a timely motion to dismiss under § 707(b)(2) can still be filed. Under the amended rule, these debtors are required to file the statement and calculations required by subdivision (b)(4) no later than14 days after the expiration of their exclusion.

Subdivisions (b)(4) and (c) are amended to relieve debtors qualifying for an exclusion under § 707(b)(2)(D)(ii) from the obligation to file a statement of current monthly income and required calculations within the time period specified in subdivision (c).

Subdivision (n)(1) is added to specify the time for filing of the information required by subdivision (b)(4) by a debtor who initially qualifies for the means test exclusion under § 707(b)(2)(D)(ii), but whose exclusion expires during the time that a motion to dismiss under § 707(b)(2) may still be made under Rule 1017(e). If, upon the expiration of the temporary exclusion, a debtor has not already filed the required statement and calculations, subdivision (n)(2) directs the clerk to provide prompt notice to the debtor of the time for filing as set forth in subdivision (n)(1).

STANDING ORDER REGARDING FILING OF PAYMENT ADVICES PURSUANT TO 11 U.S.C. §521(a)(1)(B)(iv) AND FEDERAL RULE OF BANKRUPTCY PROCEDURE 1007(b)

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED effective as to cases filed on or after January 1, 2009, that copies of all payment advices or other evidence of payment, addressed in §521(a)(1)(B)(iv) of the Bankruptcy Code and F.R.B.P. 1007(b), received within sixty (60) days before the date of the filing of the petition by the debtor from any employer of the debtor (1) shall not be filed with the Court, and (2) shall instead by provided to the case trustee at least seven (7) days prior to the first date set for the meeting of creditors pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §341(a), but not later than forty-five (45) days after the date of the filing of the petition. At the time the payment advices or other evidence of payment are provided to the aforesaid trustee, the debtor shall file a certificate with the Clerk of this Court evidencing compliance with this Standing Order.

If the case trustee certifies to the Court that the payment advices or other evidence of payment were not provided within the aforesaid forty-five (45) day period, or any additional period allowed pursuant to §521(i)(3), the case may be dismissed by the Court without further notice by separate order.

Copies of the aforesaid payment advices or other evidence of payment shall be provided by the debtor to the U.S. Trustee during the pendency of a case within fourteen (14) days of a written request being filed by the U.S. Trustee with the Clerk of the Court. At the time the payment advices or other evidence of payment are provided to the U.S. Trustee, the debtor shall file a certificate with the Clerk of this Court evidencing compliance with this Standing Order.

If the U.S. Trustee certifies to the Court that the requested payment advices or other evidence of payment were not provided within the aforesaid fourteen (14) day period, the case shall be set for hearing to show cause why sanctions or other relief should not be granted by the Court.

Copies of the aforesaid payment advices or other evidence of payment shall also be provided by the debtor to any creditor who timely requests said copies. For the creditor's request to be considered timely, it must be received by the debtor's counsel or the pro se debtor at least seven (7) days before the first date set for the meeting of creditors. The said documents shall be timely furnished in the same manner as they would be provided to the case trustee within the limits set forth above.

A debtor with unavailable payment advices may in the alternative provide to the case trustee, the U.S. Trustee, or a party in interest a certification setting forth the reasons that the required information is unavailable, stating the debtor's estimate of income, and providing other evidence, if any, of payments received within the sixty (60) day time period.

To facilitate the provisions of this Standing Order, the debtor and/or attorney for the debtor shall retain possession of the payment advices or other evidence of payment during the time that the case is pending.

STANDING ORDER ADOPTING COURT REGISTRY INVESTMENT SYSTEM

1.0 RECEIPT OF FUNDS

1.1 No money shall be deposited into the court's registry without a court order by a Judge of this Court,

1.2 All money ordered to be paid into the court or received by its officers in any case pending or adjudicated shall be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States in the name and to the credit of this court pursuant to 28 U.S.C. 2041 through depositories designated by the Treasury to accept such deposit on its behalf.

1.3 The party making the deposit or transferring funds to the court's registry shall serve the order permitting the deposit or transfer on the clerk of court.

2.0 INVESTMENT OF REGISTRY FUNDS

2.1 Funds on deposit with the court are to be placed in an interest-bearing form. The Court Registry Investment System administered through the United States District Court for the Southern District of Texas shall be an acceptance investment mechanism.

2.2 Under Court Registry Investment System (C.R.I.S.) monies deposited in each case under 1.2 will be "pooled" together with those on deposit with the treasury to the credit of other courts in the Court Registry Investment System and used to purchase Treasury Securities which will be held at the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, in a safekeeping account in the name and to the credit of the Clerk, United States Court for the Southern District of Texas, hereby designated custodian for the Court Registry Investment System.

2.3 An account for each case will be established in the C.R.I.S. titled in the name of the case giving rise to the investment in the system. Income received from fund investments will be distributed to each case based on the ratio each account's principal and income has to the aggregate principal and income total in the fund each week. Weekly reports showing the income earned and the principal amounts contributed in each case will be prepared and distributed to each court participating in C.R.I.S. and made available to litigants and/or their counsels.

3.0 REGISTRY INVESTMENT FEE

3.1 The custodian is authorized and directed by this order to deduct from the income earned on the investment a fee not exceeding that authorized by the Judicial Conference of the United States as set by the Director of the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts.

Funds first deposited into the Registry of the Court on and after December 1, 1990, there will be charged a fee of ten percent of the income earned while the funds are held in the Registry of the Court. The fee will be deducted at the time the funds are disbursed from the Registry of the Court or as may be otherwise ordered.

3.2 No additional fee shall be assessed with respect to investments for which a fee has already been deducted prior to the establishment of C.R.I.S. in this district

IN RE:

CASE NO.
CHAPTER 11

ORDER AUTHORIZING DEBTOR-IN-POSSESSION TO EMPLOY COUNSEL

THIS CAUSE having come on for consideration of the Application of the Debtor-in-Possession to employ counsel, and the Court, having considered said application and otherwise being fully advised, is of the opinion that the application is well taken and should be approved.

IT IS, THEREFORE, ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that the employment of _____, as counsel for _____, Debtor-in-Possession, be and it is hereby approved.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that said counsel shall, within fourteen days of the entry hereof, file with the Court the statement of compensation required by 11 U.S.C. § 329 and Rule 2016(b), Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, if the said reports have not been filed.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that said counsel shall be entitled to receive reasonable compensation and to receive reimbursement of actual, necessary expenses only after notice and a hearing as contemplated by 11 U.S.C. § 330, Rule 2016, Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, and any other applicable or related statutes and rules.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that this order applies to any funds that might have been received by said counsel as a retainer or of a similar nature.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that any application for compensation and reimbursement for expenses shall set forth the date of entry of all previous orders allowing compensation and expenses and the amounts so allowed.

SO ORDERED.

STANDING ORDER REQUIRING CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

This order is applicable to all cases filed in the U. S. Bankruptcy Court for the Southern District of Mississippi:

WHEREAS, it is the policy of the Judicial Conference of the United States to require that, "an individual or entity providing notice should file a certificate of service that includes a record of what was sent and to whom."

It is hereby ordered that a Certificate of Service must include information indicating how service was accomplished on any party or counsel, and what method of service was utilized.

SO ORDERED. Effective: February 1, 2010

STANDING ORDER AUTHORIZING CHAPTER 7 TRUSTEE TO PAY BANK SERVICE CHARGES AND FEES INCURRED BY CHAPTER 7 ESTATE ACCOUNTS

It has come to the Court's attention that banks are no longer willing to waive fees for the maintenance of Chapter 7 estate accounts. As a result, Chapter 7 panel trustees will need authority to incur and pay bank. fees and charges directly related to the administration of estate accounts. Accordingly, in consideration of the foregoing, the Court orders that:

(1) Panel trustees administering cases under Chapter 7 of the Bankruptcy Code in the Southern District of Mississippi are authorized to incur and pay any actual, necessary expense as contemplated by 11 U.S.C. § 330, for bank fees and charges directly related to the administration of estate accounts; and

(2) The Court shall retain authority to review and approve such expenses during the administration of the case.

This Standing Order is effective for all Chapter 7 cases pending on or after October 1, 2011, and it shall remain in effect until further order of the Court.

SO ORDERED, this the 8th day September, 2011.
